Inhabitants of Paris. But the Prince of Conde not finding any Satisfaction, as to his own Perſon, in this Amneſty, call'd in the Duke of Lorrain's Army to his Aſſiſtance. Theſe reduc'd the King's Forces to ſo great a Streight and Extremity, that the Parliament being ſenſible of the Advantage, made uſe of it, and ſent Deputies to the King, beſeeching him to continue in the ſame good Reſolution he had taken before this Misfortune.

The Monarch ſuffer'd himſelf to be overcome, by a Violence mix'd with ſo much Submiſſion, and yielded to their Requeſts. Immediately, the Hearts of the Prince of Conde's Friends grew cold, and began to change their Sentiments. In a word, they were reſolv'd to deſert their New Maſter, and caſt themſelves at the Feet of their Lawful Sovereign. The Grandees, who had moſt affected Conde's Intereſt, laid down their Offices. The Foreign Armies of Spaniards and Lorrainers, retir'd out of the Kingdom. The Citizens of Paris ſent a Deputation conſiſting of Sixty Six Perſons of Honour, to invite the King to this City, and aſſure him of their Future Allegiance. All the Officers of the Militia, did the like. The King being ſatisfy'd with the timely Penitence of his Subjects, and having commanded ſome Preparatory Alterations in Places of Truſt, enter'd this City on the Twenty Firſt of the laſt Moon, with all the Joy and Acclamation which cou'd expreſs the Love of his his People, and the Regret they had labour'd under, during his Abſence.

Thou ſeeſt, Illuſtrious Miniſter, that tho' by the Artifices of a Faction, a King may be render'd odious to his Subjects, be baniſh'd from his Palace, and have the Gates of his Cities ſhut againſt him, as befel to this King: Yet the Inconveniences they feel in taking up Arms againſt him, ſooner or later bring 'em to Repentance; and they are glad to court his Return, whom but a while ago they forc'd away by their Undutifulneſs, to gratify the Ambition of a bold Young Prince of the Blood, who promis'd, and ventur'd all Things in Hopes of a Crown. For, it cannot be ſuppos'd, That the Prince of Conde had leſs Aims, when he firſt began this War; tho' his Pretences were ſpecious, only to remove Cardinal Mazarini, and other evil Miniſters from the King, and to protect the French, from the Machinations of Spaniſh and Italian Counſels: Whilſt it is evident, that all along he and his Party, have been ſupported by the King of Spain in their Rebellion. One wou'd wonder, how the French, a Senſible and Witty Nation, could be thus impos'd upon. But the Arabian Proverb ſays, There are none ſo blind, as thoſe that wilfully ſhut their Eyes.

Yet, whatever Stupidity reigns among the Franks, Methinks Nothing but Light and Reaſon ought to appear in the Actions of the Muſſulmans. I am confounded, to hear of the Rebellions in Syria and Ægypt. Will they never give Reſt to the Banner of the Prophet?

Prophet? Muſt the Supreme Miniſter, be ever employ'd in proclaiming the Neſiraum? What offence has been given to the Baſſa of Damaſcus, or to him of Caire?

Sage Preſident of the Imperial City, I am abaſh'd before the Infidels, when I hear theſe Tragical Reports out of the Eaſt.

But what can be expected, when the Manners of the Faithful are quite eſtrang'd from thoſe of their Fathers? The Muſſulmans almoſt out-do the Franks in Vice and Debauchery.

When thou readeſt this, draw thy Cymetar, and make a Scabbard of the next Man, who mutters a Word againſt our Lawful Sovereign.

Paris, 2d. of the 10th. Moon,
of the Year, 1652.

LETTER

LETTER IX.

To Dgnet Oglou.

I Tell thee, I am neither Melancholy nor Merry; but in a kind of a Mungrel Humour between both. I am half Democritus, and t'other half Heraclitus; being Equally disposed to Laugh and Weep, at the Vanity of All Things here below. That Thought touches me sensibly, yet not enough to carry me into Extreams. The Misery and Happiness of the Whole Life of Mortals, are Themes scarce worth a Passion. Whatever we endure as an Evil, or possess as a Good, are both so short, that as the one need not sink us to an Excess of Grief, so neither does the other deserve a Paroxysm of Joy. A Sigh or a Tear, are enough for the First; and a Smile is too much for the Last. My Mind at present is an Æquilibrium.

What signifies the Birth of the Greatest Monarch, or that he can boast of a Long Descent of Kings, his Progenitors? He is born to Labour and Trouble, as well as other Men; and all the Charming Pleasures that attend a Crown, are scarce sufficient to recompence his Cares and Fatigues, his Hazards and Toils, and the Perpetual Risques he runs both in Peace and War.

If

If from the Cradle he make an Early Step to a Throne, 'tis but a Mock-Honour, to be Crown'd with a Wreath of Briars, ſqueez'd and preſs'd into his tender Temples, by the deceitful Hands of his Guardians and Miniſters, who ſtrive only to lay the Foundation of their own Honour in his Ruine, by improving the Time of his Minority, and making Oppreſſion Chymical; that during their preſent Authority, they may exact the Life and Elixir of his Subjects Wealth, and hoard it in their own Coffers, leaving only the Lees to him when he comes of Age, and theſe generally compounded with the Ill-will of his People. I wiſh the Caſe prove not the ſame in our Preſent Sovereign Sultan Mahomet; who, thou know'it, was lifted to his Father's Throne before his Time, and by Methods which cannot be juſtify'd. It was the Mufti's Plot, who is the Oracle of the Law; and ſo the Muſſulmans acquieſc'd. But mark the End. Such Treaſons Seldom eſcape unpuniſh'd. Tho' Sultan Ibrahim was Depos'd and Impriſon'd, (not to mention that which grates the Ears of any Loyal Ottoman:) Tho' his Eldeſt Son be plac'd on his Throne, to ſerve the Ends of a Faction: Yet a Younger than he, may live to revenge the VVrongs that were done to his Father, and reſtore the Empire of the Faithful to its Priſtine Grandeur. There are now above Three Years elaps'd, ſince the change of Affairs at the Seraglio. In the mean time, doſt thou not obſerve the Diſcontents of the People? Is there not a General Coldneſs and Neutrality to be diſcern'd in the Converſation of thoſe, who at firſt were moſt forward to approve the Mufti's Proceedings? Men begin every where to reflect on the Preſent Revolution, and its Fatal Conſequences. The Venetian-War, they ſay, has quite impoveriſh'd the Empire. Decay of Trade, Want of Money, and a Thouſand other Things, are the daily Complaints in Conſtantinople: This I am told from very good Hands, Men of ſeveral Nations, Merchants who Trade in that City, Perſons altogether unbyaſs'd. They, as Strangers, have been inquiſitive, during their Reſidence there, into the Humours of People, to find how the Muſſulmans ſtand affected to the Preſent State of the Ottoman Affairs. I, who approve not the Preſumption of thoſe Infidels, yet make Uſe of it to inform my ſelf of ſeveral Material Paſſages, which I cou'd not otherwiſe learn, at this Diſtance from the Auguſt Port.

They tell me, the Soldiers murmur that ſo many Thouſands of Men have been ſacrific'd in Candia, and Dalmatia; Whilſt what they gain in the Iſland, they loſe on the Continent. For, it ſeems, the Venetians are ſtill too hard for us one Way or other. They grumble alſo for Want of their due Pay, and that they have not Bread enough to keep 'em from ſtarving. A certain Greek aſſur'd me, he had heard ſeveral of the Spahi's ſwear ſolemnly, That it was agreed amongſt them, not to go into Dalmatia, the next Campaign. But this I took as a Strain of the Græcian's Natural Faculty, Faculty, who, thou know'ſt, are much given to Romancing. However, I hear enough both from them and other Travellers, of Eaſt and Weſt, to convince me, That ſome of the Grandees at the Imperial City are in a tottering Condition.

All which ſerves but to confirm my firſt Diſcourſe, That hardly any Thing on Earth is worth a Thought, ſince all Things are of ſo ſhort Duration.

In a Word, the VVorld ſeems to be a Garden intermingled with Roſes and Weeds. The Firſt are ſo cloſe encompaſs'd with Thorns, that a Man cannot gather 'em without wounding himſelf: And if there be more Eaſe in cropping the Latter, yet they are unwholſome and ſtink; putting a Man to as frequent Purifications, as the Times he touches 'em.

Let thou and I, Dear Gnet, paſs along the Alleys of this Garden view her Beauties and Deformities with an Even Mind; not putting our ſelves to the Fatigue of gathering her Flowers, or ſuffering our ſelves to be tempted with her ſofter Pleaſures. But let every Thing we ſee and hear in this Enchanted Ground, ſerve the Ends of our Contemplation, being ſtedfaſtly mindful of this Truth, That all thoſe Things which appear ſo Gay and full of Charms, are Nothing but mere Empty Idea's and Fleeting Shadows, of that Subſtantial and Permanent Pleaſure, which has her Reſidence only in Paradiſe.

Thou may'ſt tell the Kaimacham, our Friend, that now the King of France begins to play the Monarch on the Bottom of his own VVit and Courage, without the Aſſiſtance or Counſel of Tutors. He has brought the Parliament to an Abſolute Compliance with his VVill, having purg'd that Senate of diſaffected Members, and baniſh'd from the Court the Duke of Orleans, who pretended a Right to Rule his Sovereign. In the mean Time, the Prince of Conde has taken Rethel and St. Menehoud, whilſt Barcelona is ſurrendred to the Spaniards. Thus what is gain'd in one Point, is loſt in another. Doubtleſs, there is nothing ſtable on Earth.

Paris, 8th. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year 1652.

LETTER

LETTER X.

To Melec Amet.

THY Adventure and Miraculous Eſcape over the Danube, puts me in Mind of a certain French Nobleman of the Prince of Conde's Party, who laſt Summer, being cloſely purſu'd by ſome of the King's Horſe, and himſelf excellently mounted, leap'd Hedges and Ditches to avoid Captivity. At length, they had chas'd him into a Corner of the Land; from whence it was Impoſſible for him to eſcape, but by ſwimming o'er a ſmall Arm of the Sea. VVhat Riſques will not a Man run, for the Love of Liberty? This Perſon, like an over-heated Stagg, perceiving his Hunters cloſe at his Heels, boldly leap'd on Horſe-back into the Sea; chuſing rather to periſh in the Waters, than fall into his Enemies Hands.

None were ſo hardy, as to follow him through the Uncertain Waves. However, his Horſe being of matchleſs Strength, carry'd him ſafe over to the Oppoſite Shore. As ſoon as he arriv'd at the next Town, where he had many Friends, he related this Wonderful Paſſage. But inſtead of cheriſhing his Horſe, for ſo Faithful and Invaluable a Service, he drew his Sword, and immediately kill'd the Beaſt that ſav'd his Life: Saying, he did it for the Sake of Fame, being reſolv'd, that his Horſe ſhou'd never perform the like Service to any other Mortal.

This was an Ungrateful Caprice, and far from the Morality of Sultan Selim, the Son of Bajazet, who when his Truſty Horſe, Carabuluc, had once ſav'd his Life by his extraordinary Swiftneſs; he in Token of his Thankfulneſs, built a Stable on Purpoſe for him in a Large Encloſure of Meadows, allowing a Penſion to a Groom to wait on the Meritorious Beaſt, and give him his free Delight in all Things, as long as he liv'd; Commanding, that he ſhou'd never more be forc'd to labour or travel. And to compleat the Happineſs of the Beaſt, he cull'd out ſome of the Beautifull'ſt Mares of Arabia to accompany him; charging alſo, that the Doors of the Stable ſhou'd be always open, for the Horſe to go in or out, and range when and where he pleas'd. This was a Generoſity worthy of an Eaſtern Monarch, whom, as thy Letter informs me, thou haſt in Part imitated.

But ſuch is ſome Men's Ambition, and vain Deſire to be talk'd of, that they care not by what barbarous Methods, they accompliſh their Aim: It was a Motive of this Nature, which tempted Eroſtratus, to ſet Fire to the Famous Temple of Epheſus; which had been Two Hundred Years in Building, and was numbred among the Seven Wonders of the World.

This happen'd on the very Night, that Alexander the Great was born. And the Villain being ask'd, Why he committed ſo deſtructive deſtructive a Sacrilege; anſwer'd, That it was to acquire an Immortal Fame by ſo ſtupendous a Wickedneſs, ſince he cou'd not hope to be Recorded for his Vertue.

Plutarch mentions a Jeſt, that was made on this Deſtruction of Diana's Temple. For it was common in every Bodies Mouth, That the Goddeſs being call'd that Night to the Labour of Olympias, the Mother of Alexander, cou'd not be preſent at Home to ſave her Houſe from Burning. For the Gentiles believed, that Diana, (whom they alſo call'd Lucina) was Inviſibly aſſiſtant at the Birth of Children.

However, the Prieſts made no Jeſt on't; but ran up and down howling and making Gaſhes in their Fleſh, preſaging that Fate was that Day buſied, in ſigning the Decree of Aſia's Ruin. This is certain, That that very Night, the Man was born, who was deſtin'd to ſubdue all Aſia, and on the Ruins of the Perſian Empire, raiſe the Monarchy of the Macedonians. However, the Villain who burnt the Temple, had not his Deſire. For it was Decreed throughout all Aſia, That his Name ſhou'd never be mention'd in Hiſtory, or any Publick Writings.

It is Recorded of a certain Governour of a City in Italy, That being on the Top of an high Tower with only the Pope, the German Emperour, and an Ambaſſador from Venice in his Company, he was tempted to throw the Two former over the Battlements, as they were taking a Survey of the City: Which he might have eaſily done, for they were both Aged, and Incapable of reſiſting his Strength. This Paſſage he confeſs'd to his Ghoſtly Father: And being ask'd, What induc'd him to think of ſuch a Horrid Treaſon? He anſwer'd That it might be be ſaid, He did a Thing, which never was done before, nor in all Probability wou'd ever be done again: Since no Prince having heard ſuch a Story wou'd ever venture himſelf into the ſame Danger, without a ſufficient Guard of his own. But however, he had not Reſolution enough to go through with his Project.

I hear thou art like to acquire Fame by other Methods than theſe, being in a fair Way, to riſe by thy Vertues, to ſome Conſiderable Employments in the Empire. For which, I equally rejoyce with thy ſelf.

In the mean Time, 'twill perhaps be obliging, to tell thee ſome News out of theſe Parts. Which will make thy Company welcome to the Grandees. They love to converſe with Men, who can furniſh 'em with Intelligence of Foreign Affairs.

The freſheſt Diſcourſe here is, of the Impriſonment of the Cardinal de Retz, who was arreſted by the King's Order on the Nineteenth of this Moon. What his Crime is, I cannot inform thee, unleſs it be, that he is an Enemy to Cardinal Mazarini. People generally give him the Character, of a very honeſt Man. But, thou know'ſt, Honeſty is counted a Vice in the Courts of theſe Weſtern Princes. The Crafty, are the only Men of Vertue, Vertue and Merit among the Infidels.

Thou may'ſt alſo report for a Certainty, That the Spaniards have taken Dunkirk in Flanders, and Cazal in the Dukedom of Mantua. This Town, is ſaid to be the Key of all Italy: I cannot tell thee, which is the Lock it belongs to; nor, I believe, they themſelves. But, this I obſerve, That when the King of France ſits down before any Place with his Army, whoever has the Key, neither Locks nor Bolts can keep him out long. And 'tis Ten to One, if he do not find an Entrance into this Place again very ſpeedily, when the Spaniſh King has pleas'd himſelf for a while with an Imaginary poſſeſſion of it.

I conclude my Letter, juſt at the Hour when the Old Year expires, acccording to the Account of the Chriſtians, wiſhing thee a Scene of New Felicities.

Paris, 31ſt. of the 12th. Moon,
of the Year 1652.

LETTER XI.

To the ſame.

HAving the Opportunity of a Day or two more, before the Poſt goes out of Town, I make uſe of it to ask thee, Whether there be any Notice taken in your Parts, of a Comet newly appearing above the Orb of the Sun? It has not been obſerv'd here till within theſe few Nights. And the Aſtronomers, notwithſtanding the Coldneſs of the Seaſon, (which I aſſure thee is ſharp enough) are very buſy with their Teleſcopes, to pry into the Figure of this Meteor, and obſerve its Motions. They take great Pains, and endure all the Rigour of the Froſt and Snow, in Hopes of making ſome new Diſcovery.

The Vulgar look on it, as a great Prodigy: There are a Thouſand Opinions among them about its Conſequences: Every Body ſets up for a Judicial Aſtrologer. Nay, the Learn'd themſelves, and ſuch as are eſteem'd Great Philoſophers, cannot agree in their Judgment concerning it. Some aſſert, That the Matter of the Heavens is ſubject to Corruption and Change, and that this Comet is generated after that Manner: Whilſt others hold a Contrary Opinion. They are all divided, and diſpute hotly in as Unintelligible Terms, as the Languages of America are to us of this Continent. They amuſe one another, and themſelves, ſelves, with far-fetch'd Words: And all this while, for ought I know, the Wiſeſt among 'em may be as much under a Miſtake, as thoſe who never ſtudy'd ſuch Things. All the Inſtruments of the Opticks, are ſought out to help their Sight; and yet they may be as much in the Dark, as the Men in Plato's Cave. It is an Article of my Faith, That we Mortals know very little of thoſe far diſtant Beings. But, theſe Franks are the moſt opinionated People in the World, no Man has the Modeſty, to allow another as much Right to Reaſon as himſelf. Every one ſets up for a Dogmatiſt, and requires the Intellects of all others to be reſign'd to his; tho' perhaps, that be only form'd by the Rules of his Parents, the Impreſſions of his Early Years, the Force of Education, the Faſhion of his Country, or by ſome Notable Accident in his Life: All which, are equally liable to Falſhood and Truth. How many Sects were there of the Ancient Philoſophers, ſtiffly defending their ſeveral Opinions? One ſays, The Heavens are made of Braſs; Another, of Iron; a Third, of Smoke. This will have 'em to be Solid, That Fluid: There is no End of their Controverſies.

In the mean Time, no Man knows What they are made of, or what is the Figure of the World, Whether Round or Square, or beyond all Dimenſions: Whether Matter be Diviſible, or Indiviſible in the laſt Atome. Who can aſſure me, If there be only One World, or Whether there may not as well be a Thouſand ſand Millions? Whether the Stars be Opake Bodies as this Earth, and Inhabited, or no? I tell thee again, there is no Certainty of theſe Things. Man's Senſes are too weak, his Imagination too frail, and all his Faculties far too ſhort, to comprehend the Works of the Omnipotent, who alone is Wiſe and Perfect in Science.

Wilt thou have my Opinion of this Comet? I am apt to think, 'Tis ſome ſuch Globe of Combuſtible Matter, as Our Earth appears to be, and perhaps burden'd with as many Sinners: That either by the Courſe of Nature, or Decree of Deſtiny, the Enclos'd Fire has broke its Bounds, and ſpread its Conſuming Flames o're the Surface: Which embodying themſelves in the Pyramid of Smoke, ariſing from ſo vaſt a Conflagration, cauſe that Appearance which we call the Tail of a Blazing-Star. And, for ought I know, after the ſame Manner ſhall our Globe appear to the Inhabitants of thoſe Remote Worlds, at our Day of Judgment.

I am not poſitive in theſe Matters, nor will I ſhut up my Soul from Future Lights: But leaving Things, as I find 'em, full of Myſtery, and double Faces, I will expect no better Fate than that of Socrates, That as I have liv'd, ſo ſhall I die in Doubt, only hoping for Plenary Satisfaction in the Next World.

Paris, 2d. of the 1ſt. Moon,
of the Year 1653.

LET-

LETTER XII.

To Pesteli-Hali, his Brother, Master of the Grand Signior's Customs.

NOW thou beginnest to reap the Fruit of thy Travels. May'st thou live to have a Full Harvest. I esteem my self infinitely oblig'd to the Illustrious Bassa, our Countryman, for his particular Friendship in this Business. 'Tis true, thy own Merits were a sufficient Recommendation: But what Light can a Candle give, that is shut up close in a Dark-Lanthorn? So thick was the Veil, which thy own Modesty had drawn o'er the Splendor of the most Accomplish'd Vertues.

Son of my Mother, let not what I have said, pass for the Words of a Flatterer. Thou know'st, I am as free from that Vice, as I am from Envy. 'Tis Affection only guides my Pen, when I tell thee, I heartily rejoice in my Brother's Prosperity; and that the Grand Signior has a Faithful Servant. I hope, that Sovereign of Sovereigns, will in Time find Reasons to acknowledge to the Noble Kerker Hassan, the Good Office he has done him, in presenting such a Slave. Let no Error of thine, baulk my Expectation.

'Twill be an Eternal Honour, to the House and Tribe from which we descend, if by acquitting quitting thy ſelf fairly in this Poſt, our Great Maſter ſhall think thee worthy of a more Sublime Station. Therefore eſteem this only as a Tryal of thy Fidelity, and how far thou art capable of ſerving the Sultan. Be Induſtrious, but not Affected, in diſcloſing thy Abilities. Obſerve a Gradation: For the ſloweſt Steps to Greatneſs, are the moſt ſecure. Aim not to be Rich and Mighty on a ſudden. Swift Riſes, are often attended with precipitate Falls. If, in other Caſes, 'tis commendable to be niggardly of Time, and ſqueeze every Minute to an Improvement in Vertue; yet thou wilt find it expedient to follow other Maxims, in the Way of growing Great: And that to be Liberal in Years of Patience, will be no Unprofitable Frugality in the Main; ſince what is ſooneſt got, is generally ſhort in the Poſſeſſion: And he that monopolizes Honours or Wealth, is moſt Times envy'd to his Ruin.

Nature it ſelf ſhall convince thee of this if thou wilt but contemplate her moſt Obvious Works. Caſt thy Eye on the Oak among the Plants; What Vegetable is more Permanent, or of greater Service to Men? Yet the Tree of ſo vaſt a Bulk, in whoſe Aged, Hollow Trunk, I have ſeen Sixteen Men ſitting round a table; under whoſe wide-ſpread Branches, the Houſe of Arom Eb'niel Eben Sherophaim, the Chief Emir of Arabia, is built, and ſtands at this Day; I ſay, this Tree in its Firſt Original, was not ſo big as the Thumb of thy Right Hand: And if Naturaliſts

Lifts ſpeak Truth, 'twas a Hundred Years a growing to theſe Dimenſions; as many in a Fix'd and Flouriſhing Condition; and that it will not take up a leſs Time in decaying to its laſt Rottenneſs.

They ſay alſo, That an Elephant, the Biggeſt and Strongeſt of all the Beaſts on the Earth, lives Two Hundred Years, and continues encreaſing in its Stature, the greateſt Part of that Term. The like they relate of Crocodiles and Dragons.

But not to tire thee with Examples of this Nature, let us conſider, that whatſoever is great and durable among Men, whatſoever is Illuſtrious and Excellent, is ſlow in the Production, and makes not haſty Leaps to Maturity. View all the Monarchies that have made ſo much Noiſe on Earth, and thou wilt find, that in Proportion to the Time of their Growing Greatneſs, was the Term of their Duration. How ſwift was the Riſe and Fall of the Perſian Empire? Equally precipitate was that of the Macedonians. None could ever boaſt of ſo Permanent and Univerſal a Sway as the City of Rome, of which it is commonly ſaid, Rome was not built in a Day.

To come nearer Home; How Laſting and perpetually Victorious, is the Sacred Empire of the Muſſulmans? Yet it took its Firſt Riſe from very ſmall Beginnings, met with frequent Repulſes, and has made a ſlow Progreſſion to the preſent Formidable Height of Sovereign Power it now poſſeſſes. For, thou know'ſt, know'ſt, This is the Thouſand'th, Sixtieth and Third Year, ſince the Holy Flight of the Meſſenger of God.

What I have ſaid, may be apply'd with Proportion, to Men's Perſonal Advances in the Honours and Fortunes of this World. Be content therefore with the Seaſons wherein Deſtiny ſhall think fit to raiſe thee, and ſtrive not to out-run thy Fate.

All the News I can tell thee is, That Cardinal Mazarini return'd the 13*th*. of the laſt Moon, from his Second Baniſhment: Which thou mayſt report for a Truth, to the Miniſters of State.

We are all Exiles here on Earth. God reſtore is to a Region more Agreeable, and admit us to the Careſſes of our Friends in Paradiſe.

Paris, the 25th. of the 3d. Moon,
of the Year, 1653.

LETTER

LETTER XIII.

To Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa.

THE Bleſſings of God and his Prophet, deſcend upon thee from a Thouſand Sources. Thou art a true Friend, and our whole Family are oblig'd to thee for Favors which have no Number: But none more than my Brother and I. Our Engagements to thee are Equal; ſince what Kindneſs thou haſt ſhew'd to him, in recommending him to the Sultan's Favour, and to a Place of Honor and Profit, I take as done to my ſelf; we being Naturally ſharers in each others Proſperity or Adverſe Fortune: For ſuch is the Method of ſtrict Relations and Friendſhips. And, I have a particular Reaſon to thank thee, becauſe it was at my Inſtance thou promoted'ſt him. Yet tho' he is my Brother, I ſhould not be ſo Partial as to ſay theſe Things in his Behalf, did I not know him to be a Man of Merit. For Places of Truſt, ought not to be beſtowed for Favour or Affection. We are bound to ſacrifice all Private Regards, to the Intereſt of the Grand Signior: And not act like the French, who get Offices of the Greateſt Importance, many Times, by being of a Faction or Party, oppoſite to their King.

Since

Since the Return of Cardinal Mazarini to this Court, which was in the foregoing Moon, the King has reform'd many Abuſes of this Kind. He begins to feel his own Strength and Authority, every Day more and more.

In the Moon of December, dy'd Cardinal Richlieu's Brother, who was Biſhop of Lyons, and Grand Almoner of France. The King has beſtow'd theſe Honours on Cardinal Antonio Barberini, who took Sanctuary in this Court, from the Perſecutions of the Preſent Roman Pontiff, almoſt Ten Years ago. He has always eſpouſed the King of France's Intereſts in Rome. And the grateful Monarch, receiv'd him with much Affection; and as an Additional Honour, has made him a Knight of the Holy Spirit. This is the Chiefeſt Order of Knighthood in France.

It is freſhly reported here, that the Duke of Newburgh, a Great Prince in Germany, is dead. They talk alſo of certain Prodigies that have been lately ſeen in England, Ireland, and other Parts of Europe; As Raining of warm Blood, Tin and Copper. And 'tis affirm'd for certain, That Three Suns were lately ſeen at Dublin, the Chief City of Ireland.

There has been a Sea-Combat between the Engliſh and Hollanders on the Coaſts of Italy. Wherein, they ſay, the Dutch had the Victory, having ſunk Two of their Enemies Ships, and taken One, without any Conſiderable Loſs on their own Side.

Here

There is no other News ſtirring at preſent worth the Knowledge of a Muſſalman Grandee. The Eyes of all the Weſtern Nazarenes are fix'd on that Refuge of the World, where thou reſideſt, and on the Actions of our Invincible Vizir in Candia.

They diſcourſe of ſome Overtures of Peace, which that Great General has made to the Venetians, if they will forthwith ſurrender the City of Candia to the Victorious Oſmans.

If this be true, one would think, ſo great Clemency muſt needs tempt the Proud Infidels to Submiſſion and Compliance. But, if Deſtiny has otherwiſe Decreed, I wiſh they may feel the Force of our Arms, which appear more keen, than even the Scythe of Time, that Devourer of all Things.

Paris, the 27th. of the 3d. Moon, of the Year 1653.

LETTER

LETTER XIV.

To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna.

THY laſt Letter ſpeaks thee at once willing to be Enlightned, yet Tenacious of thy Old Prepoſſeſſions. I wonder not at the Difficulty thou findeſt, in ſhaking off the Precepts of thy Rabbi's, thoſe Religious Triflers. The Influence of Education, is forcible as that of our Birth: And the Habits that are rooted in us in our Tender Years, are harder to be diſplanted, than the Inherent Affections of our Blood: This is ſignify'd by the Arabian Proverb, which ſays, The Tutors of Youth, have an Aſcendant over the Stars of their Nativity.

I know it has been eſteem'd the peculiar Glory of thy Nation, that you have been Rigid Obſervers of the Traditions of your Fathers: From which, rather than deviate a Tittle, there have not been wanting ſuch as freely expos'd themſelves, and have bravely endur'd Racks, Scourgings, Burnings, and all Sorts of Torments, even the moſt exquiſitely cruel Deaths, that the Malice of Tyrants cou'd invent. But do not I know alſo, that in ſome of the moſt Weighty Points of your Law, your Zeal has exceeded your Prudence? I ſpeak not of the private Bigotry of one Man, Man, or a few; but of the Repreſentative Body of your Whole Nation. How fooliſhly Superſtitious were your Armies in the Days of Mattathias, when being aſſaulted by their Enemies on the Sabbath Day, they refus'd to draw a Sword in their own Defence, and ſo were all cut off by the Army of Antiochus? This is no Invidious Remark of your Adverſaries in Religion, but the Obſervation of Joſephus, a Man of the ſame Faith, and ſprung from the Stock of Iſrael, as well as thy Self.

Now tell me thy Opinion, did your Fathers do well in thus Sacrificing themſelves, and the whole Intereſt of Iſrael to a Miſtaken Punctilio of that Obedience they ow'd the Law, or no? If thou alloweſt the Former, then Mattathias did wickedly in making a Decree, That from thenceforth, it ſhould be Lawful on the Sabbath-Day to reſiſt their Enemies; and all the Jews were guilty of many Notorious Breaches of the Law, in obeying this Decree, and fighting on the Sabbath-Day: But if thou ſay'ſt, They did Ill in not fighting, tho' at a prohibited Time, and prohibited under the ſevereſt Curſes; then it follows, That there is no Point of your Law, which may not, nay which ought not to be diſpens'd with, and give way to the Intereſts of State, and the Good of the Commonwealth. So that at this Rate, the Religion for which you are all ſo Zealous, will appear to be but a Form of Government, Divinely contriv'd for Human Regards. I do not call in Queſtion, ſtion, the Miraculous Delivery of your Law on Mount Sinai. Suffer me to plead without Suſpicion of Partiality: I do not go about to invalidate the Teſtimony of Moſes, and the Prophets. Doubtleſs, the Moſt High came down through the Heavens, attended with Myriads of Angels, and Thirty Two Thouſand Chariots of Fire; and when he ſtood on the Top of the Mountain, the Rear of his Train had not paſſed the Silver Gates of the Moon. The Sun appear'd in his Circuit, as one aſtoniſh'd; he bluſh'd, and fled away from the Eternal Brightneſs, not able to endure the Luſtre of a Glory ſo far ſurpaſſing his own. The Stars were dazl'd at the Immortal Splendor, and miſtook their Courſes; they run againſt one another in their affrighted Careers. And as a Laſting Memorial of that Glorious Deſcent, the Angels left the bright Impreſſion of their Footſteps in the Path; That Heavenly Road, is to this Day diſtinguiſh'd from all the Reſt of the Sky by its Whiteneſs, which makes the Aſtronomers call it THE MILKY WAY.

The Nations of the Earth were amaz'd at the Tremendous Viſion and Noiſe; for the Mountain was all on Fire, whoſe Flames reach'd up to the Clouds, and its Smoke to the Mid-Heaven. The Globe Trembled and Quak'd at the Dreadful Thundrings, and the Lightnings penetrated the Abyſs of Hell. The Infernal Spirits were ſtartled at the Uncouth Flaſhes; and ask'd one another, If the Day of Judgment were come? The Waters hid themſelves ſelves in their Fountains, and the Ocean utter'd a deep Murmur. Every Thing in Nature was ſurpriz'd with Wonder and Dread, and Moſes himſelf when he came down from the Mountain, was all Transform'd into Light.

Thou ſeeſt, Nathan, I am no Infidel, but believe, as thou doſt, That the Law of Moſes was brought down from Heaven. But does it therefore follow, That this Law is Univerſal and Eternal? Can none be ſav'd but the Sons of Iſrael, and ſuch as are Proſelyted to their Religion? Doubtleſs this is an Error, as thou thy ſelf wilt acknowledge, when thou haſt well examin'd the Matter. Remove thy Poſt a little, if it be only in Imagination: Riſe from the Feet of thy Doctors, who have inſtill'd into thee Prejudices againſt all the Sons of Adam, except thoſe of your Own Race. Stand aloof for a while, and look round about thee to the Four Winds: but fix thine Eyes on the Eaſt, for from thence Wiſdom takes her Origin. Did not the ſame God, who Created the Jews, alſo Create all the Nations of the Earth? And canſt thou be ſo blind and obdurate as to think, that Sovereignty Merciful made ſo many Millions of Souls on purpoſe to Damn them? Or that it ſhall be Imputed to them for Sin, that they were not born of the Seed of Jacob? Was it in their Power to chuſe the Father that ſhou'd beget them, or the Mother that ſhou'd conceive them? How Abſurd are the Conſequences of this Narrow Opinion? It is an unpardonable Pride and Malice, thus to concontemn and judge thoſe that are compounded of the ſame Ingredients as your ſelves.

Doubtleſs, God has ſent Prophets into all Nations, to guide them into the Right Way, and not into the Way of Infidels. Thoſe who believe the Prophets, and obey their Precepts, ſhall be Sav'd: For they preach the Unity of the Divine Eſſence, the Reſurrection of the Dead, the Day of Judgment, the Joys of Paradiſe, and the Torments of the Damn'd. They teach the Neceſſity of Juſtice, Purity, and Good Works; exhorting all to practiſe the Golden Rule, without entangling their Minds in endleſs Niceties, which are but the Superfetation of Piety, the Excrementitious Burdens of a Religious Life. Such are moſt of the Troubleſom and Ridiculous Ceremonies obſerv'd by the Zealots of your Law, at which I have known the Wiſer Sort of Jews to laugh. Theſe little Superſtitions, like Unprofitable Suckers, exhauſt the Vitals of Religion, and leave it only a Sapleſs Trunk, from which no Fruit can be expected. Were they commanded in the Law of Moſes, ſomething might be pleaded in their Defence; but as they are only the Dreams of your Rabbi's, a Wiſe Man would beware how he put on a Needleſs Yoke, the Stratagem of your Crafty Guides, to keep you in Subjection, and a ſervile Awe of their Authority, and a Religious Timorouſneſs of you know not what.

Thy

Thy Letter replies to this by Anticipation: For, ſuppoſing that I ſhould argue thus, and charge you with adding Traditions of your own, to the Poſitive Injunctions of the Law; Thou telleſt me, That thoſe are greatly miſtaken, who think that all which was deliver'd to Moſes in the Mount, was Written in the Two Tables, or compris'd even in the Pentateuch; as if the Prophet ſpent thoſe Forty Days and Nights only in keeping of Geeſe. For it is evident, ſay'ſt thou, That if God had Nothing elſe to give him but the Written Law, he might have diſpatch'd him in an Hour or a Day at Moſt. Therefore thou addeſt, That by Day he gave to him the Written Law, and by Night the Myſterious Explanation of it, call'd, The Oral Law: Which Explanation, Moſes taught by Word of Mouth to Joſhua his Succeſſor, Joſhua to the Seventy two Seniors; and that they tranſmitted this Oral Traditionary Comment down to their Poſterity, even to the Laſt of the Prophets, from whom the Great Sanhedrim receiv'd it. After this every one deliver'd it to his Son, as he had receiv'd it from his Anceſtors; and ſo it continues to this Day, to be the Rule of your Lives, in thoſe Caſes where the Written Law is Silent. I tell thee Nathan, there appears a great Shew of Reaſon in what thou ſayeſt: And indeed it cannot be ſuppos'd that Moſes ſpent all that time, only in receiving the Written Law. But on the other ſide, I cannot believe that the Eternal Mind was buſied ſo many Days, in preſcribing thoſe Ridiculom Rules and Ceremonies, which are found in the Talmud, and the Writings of your Rabbi's. If thou canſt convince me of that, I will ceaſe to Perſwade thee to a Change.

I have a great deal more to ſay, but the Hour of the Poſt calls on me to conclude my Letter. In my next, I will fully anſwer all thy Arguments. In the mean time, let not Cuſtom, and the Dictates of the Synagogue ſupplant thy Reaſon, but remember thou art a Man.

Paris, 27th. of the 3d. Moon,
of the Year 1653.

LETTER

LETTER XV.

To the Sublimely Wiſe, the Senior of Excellent Dignity, Abul-Recowawn', Grand Almoner to the Sultan.

THou art placed on a High Seat, Eminent among the Faithful; and the Eyes of the Diſtreſs'd, are fix'd on thee. Thou art the Patron of all the Miſerable. To thee, as to a Sanctuary, flies the Man, whoſe Misfortunes have bereav'd him of all other Hope: Whoſe drooping Spirits can find no Comfort from the Reſt of Mortals. His laſt and only Refuge is to thee, who art the Faithful Steward of the Grand Signior's Liberalities. Let not too much Prudence ſuperſede thy Charity. The VVicked and the Innocent, have Equal Acceſs to thee: And it ought to be ſo; for, no Man, at firſt, can diſtinguiſh between the One and the Other by their Outward Aſpect. Yet a little Examination and Converſe, will ſhew the Difference.

There are thoſe, who get large Poſſeſſions under the Maſque of Poverty. There are Impudent Beggars, who make a Trade of impoſing on Human Compaſſion, and ſport themſelves in this humble Method of Cheating People of their Money; whilſt, imagining they bestow it on Persons really Indigent, it is thrown away on Counterfeits, Villains and Infidels.

On the other side, I have seen true Objects of Pity, Men reduc'd to the last Extremities, who wou'd rather perish, than expose their Condition to any, save the Great and Noble. They esteem such to be Wise Men, Generous, and Considerate of the Accidents which commonly befall Mortals. They think, to these they may freely unbosom themselves, tell their VVants, and claim Relief, without the Hazard of a Reproach, which wounds more deeply than a short Denial.

Thou mayst know them by the Modesty which appears in their Faces, (says our Holy Prophet) and that they are soon repuls'd. To such as these, give plentiful Alms, and do not repine. For it is as a Profitable Merchandize, sent to Remote Countries; which though ventur'd on the Uncertain VVaters, ye in Time by the special Blessing of Heaven, shall return with Seven-fold Interest.

Nay give to all that ask: For, it is better to misplace our Charity on Nine Unworthy Persons, than to deny an Alms to One that is really in Need. Beside, it is not for the Honour of a Sovereign Monarch, that any Person in Distress shou'd depart from his Court, sad or discontented, for want of Relief.

I have in some of my Letters, glanc'd at the Vices of these Western Nations; and have not been altogether silent as to their Vertues. Among which, their Charity is very Conspicuous. The

The French relate a pretty Paſſage of a certain Cardinal, a very Good Man, and one that by the Multitude of his Generous Actions, gave Occaſion for the World to call him, the Patron of the Poor.

This Eccleſiaſtick Prince, had a conſtant Cuſtom, Once or Twice a Week, to give Publick Audience to all Indigent People in the Hall of his Palace, and to relieve every one according to their various Neceſſities, or the Motions of his own Bounty.

One day, a poor Widow encourag'd with the Fame of his Generoſity, came into the Hall of this Cardinal, with her only Daughter, a beautiful Maid, about Fifteen Years of Age. When her turn came to be heard, among the Crowd of Petitioners; the Cardinal diſcerning the Marks of an extraordinary Modeſty in her Face and Carriage, as alſo in her Daughter, he encourag'd her to tell her Wants freely. She bluſhing, and not without Tears, thus addreſs'd her ſelf to him: My Lord, I ow for the Rent of my Houſe Five Crowns, and ſuch is my Misfortune, that I have no other Means to pay it, ſave what wou'd break my Heart, ſince my Landlord threatens to force me to it, that is, to Proſtitute this my only Daughter, whom I have hitherto with great Care Educated in Vertue, and an Abhorrence of that Odious Crime. What I beg of your Eminence, is, That you wou'd pleaſe to interpoſe your Sacred Authority, and protect us from the Violence of this Cruel Man, till by our honeſt Induſtry we can procure the Money for him.

The Cardinal mov'd with Admiration of the Woman's Vertue and Innocent Modesty, bid her be of good Courage. Then he immediately wrote a Billet, and giving it into the Widows Hands, Go, said he, to my Steward with this Paper, and he shall deliver thee Five Crowns to pay thy Rent.

The poor Woman over-joy'd, and returning the Cardinal a Thousand Thanks, went directly to his Steward, and gave him the Note: Which when he had read; he told her out Fifty Crowns. She astonish'd at the Meaning of it, and fearing this was only the Steward's Trick to try her Honesty, refus'd to take above Five, saying She ask'd the Cardinal for no more, and she was sure 'twas some Mistake.

On the other side, the Steward insisted on his Master's Order, not daring to call it in Question. But all the Arguments he cou'd use, were insufficient to prevail on her to take any more than Five Crowns. Wherefore, to end the Controversy, he offer'd to go back with her to the Cardinal, and refer it to him. When they came before that Munificent Prince, and he was fully inform'd of the Business: 'Tis true, said he, I mistook in writing Fifty Crowns. Give me the Paper and I will rectify it. Thereupon he wrote again; Saying thus to the VVoman, So much Candor and Vertue, deserves a Recompence. Here I have order'd you Five Hundred Crowns: What you can spare of it, lay up as a Dowry to give with your Daughter in Marriage.

If

If I miſtake not, this Cardinal was call'd Farneſe. But, whatever his Name was, this was an Action truly Heroick, and which has but few Parallels.

It will be much for the Glory and Intereſt of the Shining Port, if thou ſometimes by an extraordinary Largeneſs, raiſeſt the Fortune of deſerving Men; and putteſt them in a Capacity to ſerve the Grand Signior. At leaſt, ſuch Bounty will oblige 'em not to dis-ſerve him.

Among the Reſt, permit me to recommend the Caſe of Ebnol Berwana Kayemas, Thy Countryman. He was once Poſſeſſor of a fair Timariot, but was turn'd out by Sultan Ibrahim, to gratify a Creature of Shechir Para. Thou know'ſt the Life of that Infamous Woman. I ſay no more.

Paris 2d. of the 5th. Moon,
of the Year 1653.

LETTER XVI.

To the Captain Baſſa.

THou that art a Man of War, delighteſt, no Doubt, to hear of Combats and Battles. And I tell thee, That ſince the Beginning of the World, there have never been known ſuch dreadful Sea-Fights, as during the preſent War between the Engliſh and Dutch. It ſeems there is an Emulation ſprung up in the Latter: They grudge the Inhabitants of Britain the Character, which has been given 'em from all Antiquity, Of being the moſt Victorious on that Element, of any Nation on the Earth.

'Tis poſſible there may be ſome more particular Grounds of their preſent Quarrel, to which I am a ſtranger, But aſſuredly, they have purſu'd their Animoſities very eagerly on both Sides. And, let the Occaſion be what it will, the Dutch are ſtill Loſers.

I ſent thee an Account of a Combat between their Fleets laſt Year, ſince which they have had many other Engagements. And 'tis ſaid here, that during this War, the Engliſh have taken from the Dutch, near Two Thouſand Merchant Veſſels, have Sunk and Burnt many of their Ships of War, ſlain ſome of their Chief Commanders, ſpoil'd their Trade, and reduc'd 'em almoſt to as great Streights, as when they firſt courted the Protection of the Engliſh Engliſh againſt their Sovereign, the King of Spain, from whom they had then newly Revolted.

But the moſt terrible Conflict was, on the Second of this Moon, wherein the Dutch had Seven and Twenty of their Greateſt Ships, either ſunk or burnt, Two Thouſand of their Seamen and Soldiers kill'd, and a Thouſand taken Priſoners, with many Captains. That Great General Trump, whom I mention'd in my Laſt, was ſlain in this Fight, after he had perform'd Prodigies of Valour.

The French ſay, that during the Heat of this Engagement, Trump being exceſſive Thirſty, call'd for a Bowl of Wine; which his Servant had no ſooner deliver'd to him, but a Cannon-Bullet took his Hand off, juſt as he was retiring from his Maſter. The brave General touch'd with a Noble Compaſſion, ſpilt the Wine on the Deck, ſaying, It is not fit that I ſhould quench my Thirſt, with the Blood of a Faithful Slave. And as ſoon as he had ſpoke theſe Words, another Bullet took from him, the Power of ever drinking again.

If ſuch an Accident ſhould happen to thee, when thou fighteſt againſt the Infidels, know for certain, that thou ſhalt be immediately tranſported to the Green and Shady Banks of the Rivers of Wine in Paradiſe, where thou may'ſt drink thy Fill in Eternal Security. For he that dies fighting for the Faith, is a Martyr.

Paris, the 12th. of the 8th. Moon,
of the Year 1653.

LETTER XVII.

To Sale Tircheni Emin, Superintendent of the Royal Arſenal at Conſtantinople.

I Remember, I promiſed in my laſt, to give thee a farther account of Pachicour, the famous Pyrate of the Black Sea. 'Twere eaſy to perform it, but a Temptation diverts my Pen another Way.

I remember when thou wert Chiaus, I have heard thee ſpeak of the Kingdom of Tunis, whither thou waſt ſent by Sultan Amurat, to compoſe the Differences that happen'd between the Dey and the Divan of that City. At the ſame Time, thou mad'ſt Mention of a certain Admirable Engine, contriv'd to draw up Ships or any Thing elſe from the Bottom of the Sea: And, that the Divan of Tunis, gave to the Artiſt who fram'd it, an Hundred Thouſand Piaſters, as a Reward of his Ingenuity.

I have read in a certain French Author, of ſuch another Device at Venice, made on purpoſe to draw up the Famous Carrack, which they call'd the Caſtle of the Sea. This Gallion was built of a Monſtrous Bulk, more for State than Service; and was overturn'd by her own Unweildineſs, as ſhe lay at Anchor and ſunk to the Bottom: From whence, neither ther that foremention'd Engine, nor all the Art of Man could raiſe her. Yet the Skill of the Enginier was highly commended, and the Senate honour'd him with the Title of Clariſſimo, and ſettled a Noble Penſion on him during Life.

It is queſtion'd, whether the States of Holland will be ſo Liberal to a certain French Enginier, who has made a Ship at Rotterdam, which they ſay, will out-do all the Miracles of Noah's Ark.

This Ship is at preſent all the talk at Paris. Our Merchants receive Letters full of Wonders from the Low Countries, concerning this Whirligig of a Veſſel, which is to move by Clockwork; without Sails, Oars, Rudder, or any Common Marine Tacle; Yet, ſhall cut her Way through the Sea, with a ſwifter Progreſs than the Moon glides along the Sky, or a Bullet out of a Cannon. This is the Diſcourſe of thoſe who love to advance all that they hear, to the Height of a Miracle or Romance. Yet 'tis certain, the Artiſt has promis'd, it ſhall equal the Motion of ſome Birds, and run Twelve Leagues an Hour. Neither Winds nor Tides ſhall forward or hinder its courſe; which depending on an Internal Principle of Perpetual Motion, is to be directed only at the Pleaſure of him who manages the Springs and Wheels. So that the Maſter of this Veſſel, ſhall be able with a ſingle Touch of Hand, to turn it to any Point of the Compaſs, in the moſt Boiſterous Weather that blows.

This

This Enginier farther engages, that his Veſſel ſhall make a Voyage to the Eaſt-Indies in the Revolution of a Moon, and to ſome Regions of America, in a fourth Part of that Time. If he be as good at Performance, as he is at Promiſing, he will Sail round the Globe, at this Rate, in Three Moons.

In farther Commendation of this wonderful Machine, 'tis ſaid, That by a New-Invented Art, it ſhall ſecretly under-Water diſable any Ship, provided ſhe be within Cannon-Shot; and this with ſo ſudden a force, that in the ſpace of Six Hours, it will ſucceſſively ſink a Fleet of a Hundred Ships of War.

Moreover, this Artiſt, to appear not leſs ſubtle againſt the Efforts of Heaven, than in ſurpaſſing all the Inventions on Earth, promiſes that his Miraculous Veſſel, ſhall at the Diſtance of a League, cut aſunder any Spouts or Cataracts of Waters, which uſually threaten Mariners in the Mediterranean and other Seas.

'Tis poſſible thou art very well acquainted with the Nature of theſe Spouts, and the Danger of Ships that Sail near them. Yet give me Leave to inform thee, what I have heard from a certain Corſair, who has often met with 'em in the Levant.

This Pyrate tells me, that a Spout is a kind of Aqueduct between the Clouds and the Sea, by which thoſe Pendulous Cyſterns Above, are repleniſh'd with Water from the Ocean, drawing it up, as through a Pipe; which ſeems to be let down for that End, at certain Seaſons, Seaſons, and in ſome Particular Places, where the Water boyls up firſt above the Surface of the Briny Plain, as a Signal to thoſe Thirſty Bladders, to make a Deſcent there and ſuck their fill.

If this be true, who knows but that all the Rain, to which the Earth is indebted for its Fertility, comes thus Originally from the Sea? For, it may be made freſh, either in its firſt Aſcent through the Roſcid Air, or after its Reception into the Clouds, by ſome hidden Energy of that Element, or the Natural Force of the Middle Region: Or at leaſt by ſome Unknown Vertue, perhaps not inferiour to that by which the Waters of a Bitter Lake in the Deſart, became Sweet at the Interceſſion of our Holy Prophet, when the whole Army of the Primitive Muſſulmans, was like to have periſh'd of Thirſt.

And then how will the Weſtern Philoſophers diſpoſe of all the Vapours which they ſay are Exhal'd from this Globe, and afterwards Condens'd into Clouds? I tell thee, that's but a Looſe Notion of ſuch Retentive Bodies, as the Clouds ſeem to be. And 'twou'd tempt one to ask, What the Veſſels are made of which hold thoſe Condens'd Exhalations, ſo that they do not fall at once upon our Heads and overwhelm us, but only diſtil in ſmall ſucceſſive Showers Drop by Drop, to refreſh the Barren Parts of the Earth, and ſerve the Neceſſities of Men? And why the Rains fall in the Indies, and other Regions of the Eaſt, whole Months together without Intermiſſion, the Reſt of the Year being dry: Whereas, in other Countries, the Periods of the Weather's Alteration are uncertain, and in ſome Parts it ſeldom or never rains at all?

the

Doubtleſs, the Works of the Omnipotent are Inſcrutable: And though it may be an Argument of a great Wit, to give Ingenious Reaſons for many Wonderful Appearances in Nature; yet 'tis an Evidence of ſmall Piety or Judgment, to be poſitive in any Thing, but the Acknowledgment of our own Ignorance.

Now I have made as Wide an Excurſion from my firſt Diſcourſe, as the Maulla did, who began an Oration in Praiſe of Noah's Ark, and ended with telling a Tale of an Armenian Wheel-Barrow.

But I will not forget, that I was ſpeaking of the Promiſe which the Rotterdam Enginier has made of his Machine, That it ſhou'd Effectually break all the Force of Spouts, which wou'd render him very Serviceable to Merchants, as a Convoy to defend them from thoſe Terrible Bug-bears to Sailers. For the Conſtir tells me, That theſe Spouts very often occaſion Ship-wracks; either by Entangling the Maſts of a Ship, and ſo overturning it; or, by breaking in the Encounter, overwhelm it with Water, and ſo ſink it.

He ſays likewiſe, that the Chriſtian Pyrates are accuſtom'd to uſe a certain Charm againſt theſe Spouts. They have a Knife, whoſe Haft is made of the Bone of a Man's Right Arm: And every Veſſel, is bound to provide One or

Two

Two of these Knives, when they loose from the Shore. They buy 'em of certain Persons, who have the Character of Magicians. And when they see a Spout at some Distance from 'em at Sea, the Master of the Vessel or any Body else, takes this Enchanted Knife in his Right Hand, and holding the Book of their Gospel in his Left, reads some Part of it; And when he comes to a certain Versicle, which mentions the Incarnation of their Messiah, he makes a Motion with his Knife towards the Spout, as if he would cut it in Two. Whereupon, immediately the Spout breaks in the Middle; and all the inclos'd Water falls into the Sea.

But I tell thee, he who gives Credit to the Stories of Charms, or the Projects of Men pretending to excel all the Rest of their Race; has more Faith, than is requisite to him who reads Æsop's Fables, since in perusing that Ingenious Figment, we are only desired to believe the MORAL.

'Tis thought by some, that this Enginier will, by the Natural Clockwork of his Heels, be much more nimble than his Vessel, in flying the Disgrace which will attend him, if his Phantastick Project prove unsuccessful. In my next thou shalt hear of Pachicour.

Paris, 12th. of the 8th Moon,
of the Year 1653.

LET-

LETTER XVIII.

To Murat Baſſa.

THE Engliſh, at preſent, make the greateſt Figure and Noiſe, of all the Nations in the Weſt. Spain, Portugal, and even France it ſelf courts the Friendſhip of that Iſland, ſince the Inhabitants have form'd themſelves into a Commonwealth. It appears, as if the Engliſh were but newly awaken'd to a Senſe of their own Strength, and by thus rouzing themſelves had alarm'd all their Neighbours.

However it be, This King has ſent an Embaſſador to the Engliſh Court, to break the Negotiation of the Spaniards there, and to eſtabliſh a Peace between England and France, if poſſible.

One cannot tell what to make of the Maxims of theſe Infidels. For, at the ſame Time, the Baniſh'd Heir of the Engliſh Crown, takes his Sanctuary in this Court. Where he is careſs'd, and made to believe, Great Things they will do toward his Reſtauration. But Intereſt ſuperſedes all Arguments of Affection and Conſanguinity. They are more ſolicitous here for the Succeſs of their Embaſſy, than for the Right of the poor Exil'd Prince. He is call'd the King of Scotland, having been ſolemnly Crown'd in that Kingdom, ſince the Death

Death of his Father; and entring into England with an Army of Scots, was routed; and having narrowly escaped the Trains that were laid for his Liberty and Life, at length landed in this Kingdom; where he has been entertain'd with much seeming Affection. But the Dread they are under, of the Victorious New English Commonwealth, makes 'em begin to talk of his Departure from hence.

The Prince of Conde has taken Rocroy; Which was the first Place where he signaliz'd his Arms, and the Infant-Reign of this King about Ten Years ago. Which the Superstitious interpret, as an Omen of Ill Luck to the King. This sort of People are led by Maxims void of Reason: And so there is no regard to be given to their Observations. Yet, some of the Wiser Sort, think this will prove a long War.

That which amuses People most, is the small Concern the Prince of Conti and the Dutchess of Longueville shew for their Brother's Cause. For while the King was on his March against the Prince of Conde, they came and submitted themselves to him, and were received to Favour. Those who are apt to suspect an Intrigue in every thing, say, That this Reconciliation is only feigned on their Part, it being a Means to serve their persecuted Brother with greater Security and Success. Others are of Opinion, that it is Real, especially on the Prince of Conti's Part: Since he and his Brother, had never any good Understanding.

There

There has been a Battle lately Fought between the French and Spaniſh Forces in Italy, Wherein, the Spaniards loſt Twelve Hundred Men, and the French above Half that Number, of their Beſt Soldiers. So that the King of France may ſay with a Famous General, "Victories attended with ſo little Advantage, "will ruin, rather than enlarge, an Em-"pire.

Baſſa, in the midſt of thy Grandeur, I wiſh thee Health, which ſweetens the Worſt Events. As for me, I'm like one hovering between Two Worlds.

Paris the 15th. of the 9th Moon,
of the Year 1653.

LETTER XIX.

To Aſis, Baſſa.

THE Gods of the Nazarenes, one wou'd think, were ſtudying how to perplex their Adorers. Theſe Weſtern Parts, abound with Prodigies, and Surprizing Events. More eſpecially, the Low-Countries, feel the Strokes of a Hand, which by making 'em ſmart, ſeems to put 'em in Mind, They're too high in their own Conceit.

For ſeveral Weeks we have been alarm'd from thence, with the Tragical Stories of Ship-wracks, Ship-wracks, Inundations, Tempeſts of Thunder and Lightning, not uſual at this time of Year; Monſtrous Spectres ſeen riſing out of the Seas, Lakes and Rivers; Armies in the Air, with Comets and other Wonderful Apparitions.

The States of the United Provinces, have loſt by Wreck Sixteen Ships of War, and Thirty Seven Merchant Veſſels. It looks, as if Æolus and Neptune, the Chief Gods of the Hollanders, had enter'd into a League, to puniſh 'em for ſtruggling againſt their Fate; whilſt they maintain a Fleet to brave and plunder the Engliſh, under whoſe Shadow they firſt roſe to the Power they ſo Ungratefully now poſſeſs.

For, beſides theſe Loſſes at Sea, the Winds and Waves have conſpir'd to break down their very Banks, the only Guards they have againſt that Encroaching Element. All the Low-Countries, are overwhelm'd with Water: Inſomuch, as Five Miles within Land from Oſtend, there has been found a Whale newly caſt up, Seven times as long as a Man.

This the Infidels look on as a Great Prodigy, and the Fore-runner of ſome Strange Revolution; though it is but a Natural Event, and frequently happens in thoſe Seas, where Whales are more plentiful. The Naturaliſts ſay, That this King of the Scaly Nations, never makes his Progreſs through the Seas without his Guide; which is a certain ſmall Fiſh, that always ſwims before him, and gives him Warning of Flats and Shallows, upon which he often ſtrikes, and ſometimes on the main Shores, Shores, if his little Guide chance to be devour'd by any other Fiſh, or come to other Miſhap. And this may be the Reaſon, why ſo many Whales are found on the Sands when the Tide Ebbs. They ſay alſo, That when this little Fiſh is inclin'd to Reſt, it retires into the Whale's Belly, repoſing it ſelf there for ſome Time; during which the Whale reſts alſo, not daring to venture forward, till his Guide comes forth and leads the Way. If this be true, it ſeems as if there were a League or Friendſhip contracted between theſe Two, they Mutually performing all the neceſſary Offices of Love and Gratitude. And how this can be done without ſome Species of Reaſon, I cannot comprehend.

Let them at the Port call me Myneſih, or what they pleaſe, I cannot forbear doing this Juſtice to the Fiſh of the Sea, as well as to the Animals on Earth, to acknowledge, That either they are indu'd with a Kind of Reaſon; or, that Faculty which we call ſo in Men, is no other than Senſe. If the Brutes perform many Things without any Deliberation or Counſel, ſo do moſt Men: And no Man can demonſtrate, That even thoſe Dumb Beings, do not adviſe and project, before they attempt any Thing of Moment towards their own Preſervation, or the Service of others. And if they ſeem to do many Things raſhly, it may be attributed to the Quickneſs and Vivacity of their Senſe, which needs not the Slow and Flegmatick Methods of Human Counſel.

Suffer

Suffer theſe Digreſſions, Courteous Baſſa; and ſince I have led thee ſo far out of the Road, take but another Step, and I'll ſhew thee a Great Monarch, who commands Millions of Men, carry'd away Captive by a Silly Beaſt.

The King of France, t'cther Day as he was a-hunting, diſcharg'd a Fowling-Piece at a Partridge on the Wing. The Bird dropt, and the Monarch eager to take up his Game, gave the Reins to his Horſe, who ran away with him over a great Plain, for the ſpace of half a League: And had not the King fallen off, within Six Paces of a great Chaſme or Hole in the Earth, he wou'd have been Carry'd, for ought I know, to keep Company with Horatius Curtius, the Venturous Roman, of whoſe Exploit thou haſt heard; For, the furious Steed not being aware of the Danger before him, as ſoon as he had caſt the King, gallop'd full ſpeed into the gaping Precipice, and was never more heard of.

This, the Prieſts cry up for a Miraculous Eſcape, and preſage, That the King is reſerv'd by Providence for Great Things.

The King of Portugal has an Embaſſador here, who in his Maſter's Name propoſes a Match between this King and the Infanta of Portugal, proffering Four Millions of Crowns as her Dowry. But the Court entertains this Motion coldly; the Cardinal being averſe, for what Reaſon is not known: For the Infanta has an Illuſtrious Character, and known to be a Princeſs of Incomparable Vertue.

This Miniſter is managing a Match of nearer

er Concern to himſelf, deſigning to marry One of his Nieces to the Prince of Conti, Brother to the Prince of Conde. And 'tis ſaid, this Prince receives the Cardinal's Propoſals with leſs Scorn, than did the Count of Soiſſons thoſe of Cardinal Richlieu, on the like Occaſion.

Here is a Rumour, as if the Prince of Conde, wou'd be condemned by a Proceſs of Parliament, and that he will be put to Death in Effigie.

This Indignity is common among the Infidels, who eſteem whatſoever Honour or Diſgrace is ſhewn to Images, as done to the Perſons whom they repreſent. They have no other Excuſe for their Worſhip of Things made by the Hands of Men like themſelves, but that it is purely Relative, and centers in the Prototype.

In the mean time, the Prince of Conde's Friends and Well-wiſhers, ſmile at his Imaginary Death; knowing, that if no Effectual Stroke of Fate carry him out of the World, he will be at the Head of a Potent Army in the Spring, to put many to Death in Reality, and by the Edge of the Sword, who fight for his Enemies.

A while ago, a Man was Impriſon'd here by his own Folly; having voluntarily declar'd, That he was hir'd by this Prince to aſſaſſinate Cardinal Mazarini.

I have ſpoken formerly of the Count d' Harcourt, and the Diſgrace he was in at this Court, for not continuing the Siege of Londa, a Strong Hold of the Spaniards in Catalonia. This General is a brave Man, and has done Eminent minent Services to the Crown of France. It is no Wonder therefore, that he laid to Heart the Coldneſs and Contempt, with which he was receiv'd at his Return from that Unfortunate Campaign. Great Souls, are to be Careſs'd with more than ordinary Affection in their Adverſe Fortunes; and Faithful Servants, ought not to be reproach'd with every falſe Step, or ill Succeſs in their Affairs. The Count reſenting ill the King's Carriage toward him, remov'd himſelf from the Court, and then out of the Kingdom; deſigning, as is ſuppos'd, to ſerve the Emperor of Germany.

Laſt Week, his Two Sons that were detain'd as Hoſtages in this City, made their Eſcape, the Duke of Lorrain having promiſed, to give the Eldeſt his Daugter in Marriage.

That Duke roves up and down like a Free-Booter, with an Army of Banditti at his Heels.

Renown'd Aſis, I make an Humble and Affectionate Obeiſance; wiſhing thee as many Years of Life, as thou can'ſt paſs without languiſhing for Death.

Paris, 17th. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year, 1653.

LETTER

LETTER XX.

To Dgebe Nafir, Baſſa.

THOU ſucceedeſt a Righteous Miniſter Chiurgi Muhammet. I wiſh thee a Surpluſage of Happineſs: Which thou wilt not fail to poſſeſs, if thou inheriteſt the Vertues of that Baſſa, as well as his Office. May his Soul now taſte the Reward of his Juſt Life. And I doubt not but he has made an happy Experience of my Wiſhes. He ſits down in Quiet, under the Trees of Eden. His Head encompaſs'd with a Garland of Flowers, which never fade. Veſted with the Immarceſcible Crimſon and Purple of Paradiſe. He repoſes on his Bed of Delights, whilſt Beautiful Pages ſerve him in Veſſels of Gold, ſet round with Saphires and Emeralds: He drinks the delectable Wine which never Inebriates; and eats of the Fruits, every Morſel of which, prolongs his Life for a Thouſand Ages. He hears Nothing but the Voices of ſuch, as are full of Benediction and Joy. The Virgins of Paradiſe, ſalute him with a Grace which cannot be expreſs'd. They chaunt to the Newcome Gueſt, Songs of Immortal Love. To the Stranger from Earth, they tell their Paſſion in Strains, which raviſh his Heart. He is diſſolv'd in a thouſand Ecſtaſies. This is the Reward of a Pious Muſſulman, a Wiſe Miniſter, a Juſt Judge of the Faithful. Follow his Example, Example, and thou ſhalt be tranſlated into his Company: For he is in a Goodly Place, near the Spring-Head of Perfect Bliſs.

Thou wilt expect ſome News from me, as a Teſtimony of my Reſpect. And I cannot pretend there is none ſtirring, at a Juncture when all this Part of the World is ſo full of Action, or at leaſt of Counſels.

Here has been great Rejoicings lately for the taking of S. Menehoud, a Strong Town in the Hands of the Prince of Conde. All the Officers of the French King's Army, endeavour'd to diſſuade him from the Siege of this Place; but Cardinal Mazarini over-rul'd their Arguments, and having reprov'd their groundleſs Fears, caus'd it to be inveſted and attacqu'd the 22d. of the 10th. Moon. Some ſay, he had a Party there. Yet it held out till the 27th. of the laſt Moon, at which Time it was ſurrender'd upon Articles to the King, who was there in Perſon with his Brother, the young Duke of Anjou, the Queen, the Cardinal and they whole Court. They returned to this City, the Ninth of this preſent Moon.

They were receiv'd with great Acclamations and ſeeming Joy, by thoſe who wou'd have triumph'd more heartily, had they been defeated, or forc'd to raiſe the Siege. For the Citizens of Paris, wiſh well to the Prince of Conde's Arms: Not ſo much out of Love to him, as in Hatred of his Enemy, the Cardinal-Miniſter. And they are ſenſible, that this Succeſsful Siege, will redound wholly to the Cardinal's Honour, by whoſe ſole Orders the Place was inveſted.

It is diſcours'd, as if this Miniſter has ſome new Deſign on Foot, to conquer the Kingdom of Naples. This is certain, a Mighty Fleet is fitting out to Sea: Whither bound no Man knows, but thoſe of the Cabinet, among whom the Cardinal is Chief.

In the mean while, the Common People liſten after certain Prodigies, that have been ſeen in the Air. They ſay, a Flaming Sword appear'd lately to riſe in the North, and take its Courſe South-Eaſtward: From whence People make various Prognoſticks, as their Paſſions or Intereſts inſpire 'em. Some are of Opinion, it preſages the Conqueſt of Naples by this King's Arms. Others apply it to the New Common-wealth of England, and to the Victorious Sword of Oliver; who from General of the Engliſh Army, is now in this very Moon exalted to the Height of Sovereign Power, Governing the Nations of England, Scotland and Ireland, under the Title of their Protector.

Here are divers of his Subjects in this City; and other Engliſh, Scots, and Iriſh, who embrace the Intereſt of Charles, the Son of their late Murder'd King, who has been ſince Crown'd King of the Scots. They give a different Character of Oliver; yet all agree, that he is a Wiſe Stateſman, and a Great General.

The Scotch King's Party, ſpeak contemptibly of Oliver's Birth and Education: Yet thou

thou know'ſt this hinders not, but he may be a Man of Courage and Vertue. They relate many odd Paſſages of his Youth, which ſeem to me ſo many Evidences of an extraordinary Genius, and that he is a Perſon of a deep Reach.

He tamper'd with ſeveral Religious Factions in England, counterfeiting an Exquiſite Piety; whereby he firſt rais'd himſelf a Name among the Zealots of that Nation, who look'd upon him there, as a very Holy Perſon, and one mark'd out by Deſtiny for great Undertakings.

He ſoon got a Conſiderable Command, in the Army of the Revolters: where he ſignaliz'd himſelf by many brave Actions, which ſpoke him a Man of an Invincible Courage, and Admirable Conduct. So that at Length, none was thought more fit than he to be General. In fine, he acquitted himſelf ſo gallantly in that High Office, and has ſo wrought himſelf into the Affections of the People, that they now look upon him as a Prophet, or Saviour; and the Divan or Parliament of that Nation, have conferr'd on him the Sovereign Authority.

Thoſe of the Engliſh which are Affected to his Intereſt, ſpeak great Things in his Praiſe: They call him another Moſes or Joſhua: They prefer him to Hannibal, Scipio, and even to the Great Alexander. It is difficult for them, to ſpeak of him without Hyperbole's. 'Tis ſaid, the King of France will court his Friendſhip. Indeed, all the Neighbouring Countries, ſtand in Awe of this ſucceſsful Hero. And the Hollanders, who are the only People that durſt engage in a War with the Engliſh Common-wealth, now ſeek for Peace, ſince he is inveſted with the Supream Authority.

In the mean Time, the Poor Exil'd King of the Scots, takes Sanctuary in this Court, with his Mother the Late Queen of England, and his Brother, whom they call the Duke of York. The French King allows them all very Conſiderable Penſions. And the Latter has ſome Command in the Army in Flanders. There is another Brother alſo; but, little talk'd of as yet, being the Youngeſt of the Three.

They are Generouſly entertain'd here, it being the peculiar Honour of this Court, to be a Hoſpitable Refuge to Princes in Diſtreſs. Yet Obſerving Men ſay, The King will in Time grow Weary of his Royal Gueſt: It being very Chargeable to maintain them, and their Burdenſome Retinue. Beſides, he will have ſome Reaſon of State to diſcard them, if he enters into a League with Oliver, the New Engliſh Sovereign, who is courted on all Hands.

Eliachim the Jew (of whom thou wilt hear in the Divan) is juſt come into my Chamber, and brings me Word, that there is an Expreſs newly arriv'd, who informs the Queen of a Defeat given to the Spaniards near a City call'd Rozes, which they had beſieg'd in Catalonia. The French were going to the Relief of this Place, and the Spaniards ſet upon them in their March, but were beaten beaten into their Trenches; from whence they fled by Night, leaving Three Hundred Spaniards on the Spot, almoſt Two Thouſand Priſoners, and all their Cannon and Baggage.

This has put the Court into a Jolly Humour. Nothing but revelling and dancing, employs their Time: The Young King taking great Delight in Balls, Maſques and ſuch Recreations; having left off Hunting, ever ſince his Horſe ran away with him in the Tenth Moon of this Year, after he had ſhot a Partridge. Whereof I have ſpoken already in one of my Lettters.

The Great God preſerve thee from Precipices, Poyſon, the Glances of a Witch, and from being Canoniz'd a Martyr in a String: And, for other Deaths, thou haſt Vertues enough to encounter 'em bravely.

Paris, 30th. of the 12th Moon,
of the Year 1653.

The End of the Third Book.

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. IV.

BOOK IV.

LETTER I.

To Bedredin, Superiour of the Convent of Derviches at Cogni in Natolia.

WHEN I firſt open'd thy Venerable Letter, my Heart on a ſudden became freſh as a Garden of Roſes, or a Field of Cinnamon and Myrrh, whoſe Odours are Exhal'd by the Weſt-Wind. In my Breaſt there ſprung up a Fountain of Joy, ſerene as Cryſtal, and refreſhing as the Waters of Euphrates.

I contemplate thee as a Cedar among the Trees of the Foreſt, or as the Durable Oak of the Deſart. May Heaven prolong thy Life, till the Sound of the Trumpet.

The Commands with which thou haſt honour'd me, came in an Acceptable Hour. I have receiv'd them with a Complacency which I cannot expreſs. My Eyes were ſo fix'd on the Lines of Great Purity, that I could not for a long Time take them off. Thou haſt hit the Mark of my Affection, in employing me to write what the moſt Impartial Hiſtorians ſay of Jeſus, the Son of Mary, the Chriſtians Meſſias.

That Holy Prophet, was Honour'd by his very Enemies. Joſephus a Learned Jew, who liv'd in his Time, and wrote the Hiſtory of that Nation, makes worthy Mention of him.

So did many of the Gentile Philoſophers, though they oppos'd his Diſciples and Followers. Porphyry, whom the Chriſtians commonly repute as a bitter Enemy to their Profeſſion, yet calls Jeſus, Wiſe, Bleſſed and Divine. That Sage was exaſperated againſt a certain Sect of Nazarenes in his Time, whom they call'd Gneſticks. Theſe corrupted the Doctrines of Plato, and the Theology of the Ancients; wantonly mixing Human Fables with Divine Truths. Againſt theſe, Porphyry ſharpen'd his Pen, and not making a Difference between them and other Chriſtians, drew drew upon himſelf the Ill-will of them all. Yet he retain'd a Profound Attach for the Meſſias.

Wouldſt thou know the Circumſtances of this Holy Prophet's Birth? They were Glorious, even in Obſcurity. For, though his Father and Mother were then upon the Road to Jeruſalem, Strangers at Bethlehem, and forc'd for want of Room in the Carvanſera, to lodge in a Stable with an Ox and an Aſs, where the Meſſias was born, and laid in a Manger; Yet in this Contemptible State, there came ſome of the Magi out of Perſia and Chaldea, who brought Preſents to the Holy Infant; And having laid at his Feet Gold, Myrrh and Incenſe, they proſtrated themſelves on the Ground, and praiſed God, the Moſt High King of All, in that he had honour'd them with a Sight of the Meſſias.

This was in the 43d Year of the Reign of Auguſtus Cæſar, the Roman Emperour. At which Time, one Herod was Preſident of Judæa. This Man being inform'd That certain Noble Strangers were come out of the Eaſt to Jeruſalem, he ſent for them, and enquiring the Occaſion of ſo tedious a Journey, they gave him this Anſwer.

"Peace be to thee, O Sultan; There was "of Old Time, a Prophet of Great Fame in "our Nation, who, among other Predictions "that have ſince come to paſs, left alſo this in "Writing.

"That in Paleſtine ſhould be born a Child "of Heavenly Race, who ſhould Rule over " the Greateſt Part of the World. And by " this Sign, ye ſhall know the Time and " Place of his Birth: A ſtrange Star ſhall ap- " pear in the Firmament, which ſhall direct " you to the very Houſe where you may find " him. When therefore Ye ſhall behold this " Star, take Gold, Myrrh and Incenſe; and " following the Conduct of the Star, go and " offer theſe Gifts to the Young Child; then " return immediately to your Own Country, " leſt ſome Grievous Calamity befal you.

" Now this Star has appeared to Us, We " are come to perform what was commanded " Us.

Herod ſaid to them, Ye have done well. Go therefore and ſeek diligently for the Infant; and when Ye have found him, come and tell me, that I may go and pay him Homage alſo.

But they never return'd to him again. Wherefore, Herod in his Anger and Jealouſy, commanded all the Infants in Bethlehem to be ſtrangl'd, that had not been Born above Four and Twenty Moons. But the Father and the Mother of the Holy Infant, fled away with him into the Land where it never Rains, the ſame Night that the Magi came.

What I here relate to thee, Sage Bedredin, is taken out of approv'd Hiſtorians: For, many among the Gentiles, wrote of theſe Things beſides the Chriſtians.

There was a Roman Philoſopher, much about the ſame time; a Man in great Eſteem with Caſar. To whom he wrote a Letter, wherein he mentions the coming of the Magi after after this manner. "Certain Oriental Per- "ſians, ſays he, have ſet Foot within the Li"mits of thy Empire, bringing Preſents fit

"only for Kings, to a certain Child, newly "born in the Country of the Jews. But who
"this Infant is, or whoſe Son, We are yet
"Ignorant.

Thou ſeeſt, O Pious Dervich, that the Meſſias appear'd with no ſmall Luſtre, even in his Cradle. And in his Early Years, he enter'd into the Temple, and diſputed with the Hebrew Rabbi's, convincing them of an Univerſal Defection from the Primitive Law of Moſes: declaring himſelf the Meſſias, and yet in Profound Humility acknowledging, That a Prophet ſhould come after him, who ſhould be preferred before him, the Duſt of whoſe Feet he was not worthy to kiſs. This Paſſage the Chriſtians have perverted to another Senſe; but the True Faithful, know it was ſpoken only of Mahomet, the SEAL of the PROPHETS.

The Time would fail me, to recount all the Stupendous Actions of this Man's Life: And in calling him MAN, I imitate his own Example; Since throughout the Goſpel, he never call'd himſelf God, or the Son of God, as the Chriſtians do, but moſt frequently gave himſelf the Title, of the Son of Man. He turn'd Water into Wine, fed Five Thouſand People with Five Cakes and Two ſmall Tenches: Heal'd all Diſeaſes, reſtor'd Sight to them that were born Blind, Rais'd the Dead, went Inviſibly through Crowds of his Enemies,

mies, and Finally, was taken up into Paradiſe.

If thou wouldſt know more of this Holy Prophet; There are Hiſtorians who ſay, he was Initiated in the Myſteries of the Eſſenes, a certain Sect among the Jews.

That Nation, it ſeems, was then divided into Seven Claſſes. Among which, this of the Eſſenes was none of the leaſt conſiderable, as being the moſt Religious Obſervers of the Law. Their Converſation was full of Humanity, both among themſelves, and toward Strangers: Avoiding Pleaſures, as Enemies to the Mind, and eſteeming Chaſtity the very Cement of all Vertues. Therefore they deſpis'd Marriage, as an Entanglement to Men devoted to Contemplation. They had alſo an Equal Contempt for Riches. No Man of this Sect call'd any Thing his Own, though 'twere his Lawful Inheritance: But their Poſſeſſions were in Common, and Equally diſtributed.

It was among their Myſteries, to Anoint their Bodies frequently with Oyl, and as often to waſh 'em with Running Water. They neither bought, nor ſold; nor frequented the Publick Places: But every one communicated freely ſuch Things as he poſſeſs'd, to him that ſtood in Need. Thus there was a Reciprocal Exchange of Kindneſſes and Aſſiſtance, according to every ones Faculty and Power. They were very Aſſiduous in Watching, Faſting and Prayer: Curious in obſerving the Various Names of the Angels, which they frequently frequently repeated, Invocating thoſe Happy Beings, as the Miniſters of the King Eternal. And thoſe who were exercis'd in this Kind of Religious Life, arriv'd to ſo great a Conſtancy of Mind, that neither Racks, Fire, Sword, or any other Tortures could ever move 'em to Renounce their Law, or ſpeak the leaſt Word in Contempt of their Inſtitution. Nay, they would rather ſuffer Martyrdom, than be prevail'd on to taſte of any Thing that had Life in it. For they were ſtrict Obſervers of the Law, which commands Perpetual Abſtinence from the Fleſh of Animals.

It was an Eſtabliſh'd Article of their Faith, That as ſoon as the Union of Soul and Body was diſſolv'd by Death, the Former by a Natural Inclination aſcends to the Skies; even as Sparks fly upward, when freed from the Groſs Earthly Matter in which they lay Impriſon'd.

I have here given thee a ſhort and true Character of the Eſſenes. Of which Sect, all Chriſtians own the Meſſias to be a Favourer, if not a Member; in regard he no where is Recorded to have upbraided them, as he often did the Phariſees, Sadducees, Herodians and the Reſt.

Time will not permit me to ſay more at Preſent, concerning that Venerable Prophet. But if thou would'ſt have a Perfect Idea of all his Vertues and Sanctity of Life, turn thy Eyes Inward, and fix 'em on thy ſelf. For thou art a Lively Tranſcript of the Holy Jeſus.

Paris, 1ſt. of the 1ſt. Moon, of the Year 1654. LET-

LETTER II.

To the Venerable Mufti.

THOU haſt heard of the Jeſuits, an Order of Nazarene Derviſes. All Europe abounds with them; and they have attempted to ſettle themſelves at the Sublime Port, and ſeveral Places of Aſia: Beſides their Actual Poſſeſſions in the Indies, where they are very Numerous and Powerful. They are eſteem'd the Richeſt Order of the Roman Church, tho' the Conſtitutions of their Founder, oblige them to Perpetual Poverty. But what will not the Sacred Hunger of Gold tempt Men to? For the ſake of this Charming Metal, they can diſpenſe with Antiquated Laws, and Dull Melancholy Vows.

Theſe Religious Perſons, have lately ſpread about a Letter in Print, which they pretend comes from one of their Order in Armenia.

This Diſpatch relates a Strange Accident, that has happen'd at the Sepulchre of our Holy Prophet (upon whom reſt the Favours of the Eternal.) For it affirms, that in the Eighth Moon of the laſt Year, the Shrine which contains the Body of the Heavenly Miſſioner, fell from the Roof of the Sacred Moſque (to which, they ſay, it adher'd by Vertue of a Magnet, faſten'd in the Cantrel of the Arch;) And that at the ſame Time, the Pavement of the Temple open'd, and ſwallow'd up that Venerable Ark, wherein were Repoſited the moſt Holy Reliques in the World. And that from the Chaſm, there iſſu'd out a Flame, like that of Sulphur, accompany'd with ſuch a Smoak and Intolerable Stench, as caus'd all the Pilgrims that were preſent to ſwoon away. Whereupon, many of them are ſince turn'd Chriſtians.

that

This Forgery is believ'd here by thoſe, who never examine any Thing their Prieſts tell 'em, but take all on Truſt. The Common People bleſs themſelves, in that they were born of Chriſtian Parents, and not of the Diſciples of that Wicked Impoſtor: So they blaſpheme the Man, in whom the Promiſes of their Meſſias are verified, when he ſaid, He wou'd Intercede with God to ſend a Prophet, who ſhou'd lead 'em into all Truth.

They wou'd never be at the Pains or Coſt to examine, whether the Foundation of this Story be true or falſe. All the Muſſulmans who have been at that Holy of Holies, know, That the Body of our Divine Lawgiver repoſes in a Sepulchre, built after the ſame Manner as the Tombs of our Auguſt Emperours, and other Dormitories of the Great: Only with this Difference, That it ſurpaſſes all the Monuments of the World, in the Invaluable Richneſs of its Ornaments, the Gifts of devout Muſſulman Princes. There appears always, ſuch an Inſupportable Luſtre of Gold and Precious Stones, in every Angle of that Myſterious Receſs, as may well dazle the Eyes of Mortal Spectators; ſince the Angels themſelves, ſelves, are forc'd to be Veil'd within thoſe Majeſtick Walls.

Hence it is not hard to ſuppoſe, That the Circular Refractions of ſuch a Glittering Orb of Jewels, might create the Reſemblance of a Tomb ſuſpended in the Air, or cleaving to the Roof of that Glorious Edifice, deceiving the Eyes of ſome Ignorant, but Devout Muſſulmans, from whom this Magnetick Fable firſt took its Origin. However it be, no Man of Common Faith, or but Ordinary Senſe will believe, That God, who has for ſo many Ages protected the Sepulchre of his Apoſtle and Favourite, verifying therein the Prophecy of Mahomet himſelf, who foretold, as did other Prophets before him, That the Place of his Reſt ſhould be Glorious, and that the Greateſt Monarchs of the Earth, ſhou'd viſit it: I ſay no Man will believe, that God would at Length ſuffer ſo vile a Diſgrace, to happen to the Tomb of his Meſſenger, the Refuge of Sinners.

But the Nazarenes will believe any Thing, ſave the Truth. They are given up to a Spirit of Deluſion and Error, Incapable of Light and Inſtruction.

Thus I leave 'em till the Day of Alarm, and the Hour of Scrutiny: When the Angels of the Teſt, ſhall enter the Graves, and having made Experiment of every Man's Works and Faith, ſhall give the Juſt a Regiſter of their Vertues in their Right Hand, but to the Wicked in their Left Hand, a Black Record of their Sins.

In

In the mean Time, I proſtrate my ſelf before thee; begging, That when thou turneſt thy Face to the Houſe of Ibrahim, and the Tomb of the Prophet, thou wilt ſend up One Ejaculation for Mahmut, that he may perſevere in ſhunning the Errors of the Infidels.

Paris, 19th. of the 1ſt. Moon,
of the Year 1654.

LETTER III.

To Cara Hali, Phyſician to the Grand Signior.

SINCE what I wrote laſt in behalf of the Brute Animals is ſo Acceptable to thee, I will comply with thy Requeſt, in continuing that Diſcourſe.

'Tis certain the Ancients had another Opinion of the Beaſts, than theſe French Philoſophers, who deny 'em the Uſe of Reaſon. Socrates, us'd to ſwear by the Animal Generations, and ſo did Rhadamanthus before him. The Ægyptians Form'd the Images of their Gods, in the Similitude of Beaſts, or Birds, or Fiſhes. So the Grecians fix'd the Horns of a Ram on the Head of Jupiter's Statue, and thoſe of a Bull on the Image of Bacchus. They compounded the Image of Pan of a Man and

and a Goat, and painted the Muſes and Graces with Wings: And the Poet Pindar makes all the Gods Winged, and diſguiſes them in the Shapes of ſeveral Beaſts, when in his Hymns he introduces them chas'd by Tryphon. Thou knoweſt alſo, That our Holy Doctors affirm the Angel Gabriel to have Wings, with One of which he once gave a Mark to the Moon.

When the Poets bring in Jupiter courting Paſiphae, he appears in the Form of a Bull. And in his other Amours, if we may believe them, he chang'd himſelf ſometimes into a Swan, then into an Eagle. They report alſo, That he was ſuckl'd by a Goat.

For theſe and other Reaſons, the Ancients not only forbore to injure their Fellow-Animals, but entertain'd them with ſingular Affection and Friendſhip. A Dove was the Darling of Semiramis. A Dog was the Joy of Cyrus. Philip, King of Macedon, made a Swan his Companion. And our Holy Lawgiver, was often wont to ſport himſelf with a Cat. He lov'd this Creature, for its Cleanlineſs and Activity; and therefore we Muſſulmans, generally have a Cat in great Eſteem and Veneration.

That Favourite of God, underſtood the Languages of Beaſts, and convers'd as familiarly with them as with Men. So it is fam'd of Melampus and Tyreſius of Old, as alſo of Apollonius Tyanæus, who affirm'd to his Friend ſitting by him, that a Sparrow which he heard chirping to his Fellows, told them of an Aſs which he had ſeen fall down with with his Load, a little Way off from that Place. It is alſo recorded of a Boy, who underſtood all the Voices of Birds, and by that Means could foretel things to come: That his Mother, by pouring Urine into his Ears when he was aſleep, deprived him of this Incomparable Gift, for Fear he ſhould be taken from her, and preſented to the King. There is no Queſtion, but ſeveral Nations have a certain Knowledge of the Speech of ſome Animals. My Countrymen, by a peculiar Gift beſtow'd on our Fathers and their Poſterity for ever, underſtand the Language of Crows and Eagles. And the Ancients were ſo well vers'd in this Knowledge, that when they convers'd with the Birds, or at leaſt when they heard them in their Language utter Preſages of what ſhou'd ſhortly happen on Earth, they perſwaded themſelves, that thoſe Birds were the Meſſengers of the Gods. Therefore the Eagle was ſuppos'd to be the Meſſenger of Jupiter, the Crow and Hawk of Apollo, the Stork of Juno, the Owl of Minerva, and ſo of others.

It is evident, that our Common Huntſmen underſtand the different Voices of their Dogs, when at a Diſtance they ſignifie by One Kind of Cry, that they are queſting after the Hare; by Another, that they have found her; by a Third, that they have taken her, or that ſhe is turn'd to the Right Hand or to the Left. So thoſe who look after Cattel, know by the Voice of the Bull, when he is Hungry, Thirſty or Weary, or when he is ſtung with Luſt. So by the Roaring of the Lyon, the Howling of Wolves, Wolves, the Baaing of Sheep, Men are made ſenſible of the various Wants, Inclinations and Paſſions of thoſe Creatures.

Nor are theſe Animals Ignorant of our Language, but by our Voice and Words they know when we are angry or pleas'd, when we call them to us, or drive them from us: And our Domeſtick Animals obey accordingly, with as much Promptneſs and Alacrity, as a Man or Maid-Servant. All which cou'd not be, if they were not endu'd with Faculties conformable to ours. They alſo teach their Young ones to ſing Artificially. In a Litter of Dogs, Huntſmen chuſe the Beſt by this Experiment. They take all the Whelps from the Bitch, and carry them to ſome Place a little diſtant; Then they obſerve, which ſhe firſt carries back again, and thoſe always prove the Beſt Dogs. What is this Diſtinguiſhing Faculty in the Bitch, but Reaſon, or ſomething like it?

We ſee apparently, that every Living Creature knows its own Weakneſs or Strength, and knows how to uſe moſt dextrouſly thoſe Weapons with which Nature has furniſh'd it for its Own Defence. They are alſo ſenſible, what Places are moſt Convenient for them to dwell in, and which not. Thus the Weakeſt Creatures, as Dogs and Cats, live altogether in Houſes and Cities with Men: Whilſt the Lyons, Tygers and ſuch Fierce Animals, dwell in the Deſert. Thus Sparrows and Swallows make themſelves almoſt Domeſtick with Men, whilſt Eagles, Hawks, Vultures Vultures and other Birds of Prey, build their Nests in Woods or Rocks, remote from Humane Society. Some Birds change their Habitations at certain Seasons of the Year, as best suits with their Convenience: Others always remain in the same Place. The same is obsery'd in Fishes. And in all Living Creatures, it is easie to trace the Footsteps of Prudence and Forecast, in order to their Own Preservation. Let Men call this what they please, Instinct or Nature, or Sense; it is evident, that there is an Exact Conformity and Resemblance between these Faculties in Brutes, and what we call Reason, Wisdom or Prudence in Men. And we have no more Ground to conclude them void of Reason, because they do not enjoy it in that Perfection as our selves; than we have to conclude our selves blind or deaf, because we see not so clearly, and hear not so readily as the Brutes: And, that we have no Legs, because we run not so swiftly as some of them do.

Doubtless, the Brutes are endu'd with a Faculty of Reason as well as we; but this Faculty in them, is Weak and Imperfect for want of Discipline and Art, which polish all things. This is manifest, from those Creatures which are Taught to dance, and play a Thousand Tricks; to tell Mony, to shoot off Guns, to find out hidden Things, and bring them some Miles to their Masters, as well Educated Spaniels will do. What can be a greater Argument, of the Proficiency they make in Reason and Knowledge? Are not Elephants

the Ill-Will of his own Brother, (whom they call Duke Francis) and the Curſes of all People where-ever his Army has been quarter'd; He is at Length Seiz'd and Impriſon'd by Arch-Duke Leopold, in the Caſtle of Antwerp. For which Joyful News, the Inhabitants of the Spaniſh Netherlands, every where made Bone-fires for Joy. He was Confin'd on the 25th of the laſt Moon. And ſoon after, his Second Wife was taken into Cuſtody, that by her Means, they may diſcover his Papers and Mony; This latter being the Chief Thing they aim at; he being reputed prodigiouſly Rich; and the Spaniſh Coffers want a Supply. They conniv'd at his Robberies, whilſt there was any Thing left for him to plunder, and that they ſaw he hoarded up. But now he has done his Work, they puniſh him for the Crimes, which they themſelves encourag'd; that ſo they may become Maſters of his Wealth. 'Tis ſaid, he brook'd his Reſtraint very well at firſt: But a while ago, being deny'd the Liberty of the Caſtle-Walls, he grew Raving Mad; flung a Candleſtick (which was all the Weapons they allow'd him) at the Governour's Head, and broke the Windows of his Lodgings. So that they have been forc'd to Confine him to a Hole without any Light, ſave a little that finds Admittance through an Iron Grate at the Top of the Room.

His Brother Francis of Lorrain, is to command the Army in his Stead; who pretends great Fidelity to the Houſe of Auſtria, yet may in the Iſſue prove as wavering as his Brother.

ther. For, the King of France has Baits wou'd tempt the Vertue of an Angel: Yet nothing ſhall ever corrupt the Integrity of Mahmut, the Muſſulman, on whoſe Forehead Fate has Engraven this Motto, Prepar'd to Suffer.

I bluſh, Serene Aga, when I think I am ſo barren of Vertues, that I have Nothing elſe to boaſt of, but my Loyalty. Whilſt Thouſands of Illuſtrious Souls, Crown'd with a Circle of Merits, daily aſcend to Paradiſe: And tho' they made but an Obſcure Figure on Earth, even as Contemptible as the Exil'd Arabian in his Hutch at Paris; yet now take their Seats, among the Hundred and Twenty Four Thouſand Prophets, Favourites of the Eternal.

Mayſt thou encreaſe that Happy Number, but not till thou haſt had thy Fill of Bliſs on Earth; and that all thy Enjoyments here, ſeem like the Perfume of Oyntments, which tho' they pleaſe for a Time, yet at Length cloy the Senſe.

Paris, 22d. of the 3d. Moon,
of the Year 1654.

lephants taught all the Arts of War, and plac'd in the very Front of the Battel? Do not the Indian Princes repoſe as much Truſt in their Carriage and Conduct, as in the Service of their Stouteſt and Wiſeſt Commanders? This Creature is as tractable and prompt to learn any Thing when Young, as a Boy at School; which cannot be done, without the Uſe of Reaſon.

To conclude, I have omitted Five Hundred Arguments, which might be brought to prove the Brute Animals to have Souls as well as We, to have Faculties and Affections conform to Ours. And therefore, it is little leſs Injuſtice to Kill and Eat them, becauſe they cannot ſpeak and converſe with us, than it would be for a Canibal to murder and devour thee or me, becauſe we underſtood not his Language nor he ours.

God who Locketh up the Winds during the Time the Halcyon hatcheth her Young, thereby ſhewing, that this Bird is his Favourite; will aſſuredly grant us a perpetual Tranquility, if we abſtain from injuring our Fellow-Animals.

Paris 2d. of the 1ſt. Moon, of the Year 1654.

LETTER

LETTER IV.

To Muſtapha, Berber Aga, at the Seraglio.

THOU haſt formerly heard me ſpeak of the Duke of Lorrain, and his ſeveral Loſſes: Which moſt People thought, wou'd have ended with the Excommunication pronounc'd againſt him by the Roman Mufti; whereof I gave thee Intelligence. But Experience teaches us, That Misfortunes ſeldom ſet upon any Man ſingly; but aſſault him in Troops, whom Fate has mark'd out for Ruin.

Yet this Prince owes his Sufferings chiefly to his own Inconſtancy, whilſt he has all along play'd faſt and looſe with the Kings of France and Spain; taking up Arms by ſucceſſive Turns for One, and at the ſame Time underhand practiſing with the Other; always Unfaithful to Both; and only driving on an Independent Intereſt of his Own.

This is his true Character. To which we may add, an Ungovernable Diſpoſition, and an Inſatiable Thirſt of Mony; which has prompted him, by all the Methods of Rapine and Violence, to heap up an Incredible Treaſure of Gold and Jewels. So that having procur'd the Enmity of ſeveral Monarchs, the Jealouſie of his laſt Maſter the King of Spain, the

the Ill-Will of his own Brother, (whom they call Duke Francis) and the Curſes of all People where-ever his Army has been quarter'd; He is at Length Seiz'd and Impriſon'd by Arch-Duke Leopold, in the Caſtle of Antwerp. For which Joyful News, the Inhabitants of the Spaniſh Netherlands, every where made Bone-fires for Joy. He was Confin'd on the 25th of the laſt Moon. And ſoon after, his Second Wife was taken into Cuſtody, that by her Means, they may diſcover his Papers and Mony; This latter being the Chief Thing they aim at; he being reputed prodigiouſly Rich; and the Spaniſh Coffers want a Supply. They conniv'd at his Robberies, whilſt there was any Thing left for him to plunder, and that they ſaw he hoarded up. But now he has done his Work, they puniſh him for the Crimes, which they themſelves encourag'd; that ſo they may become Maſters of his Wealth. 'Tis ſaid, he brook'd his Reſtraint very well at firſt: But a while ago, being deny'd the Liberty of the Caſtle-Walls, he grew Raving Mad; flung a Candleſtick (which was all the Weapons they allow'd him) at the Governour's Head, and broke the Windows of his Lodgings. So that they have been forc'd to Confine him to a Hole without any Light, ſave a little that finds Admittance through an Iron Grate at the Top of the Room.

His Brother Francis of Lorrain, is to command the Army in his Stead; who pretends great Fidelity to the Houſe of Auſtria, yet may in the Iſſue prove as wavering as his Brother.

ther. For, the King of France has Baits wou'd tempt the Vertue of an Angel: Yet nothing ſhall ever corrupt the Integrity of Mahmut, the Muſſulman, on whoſe Forehead Fate has Engraven this Motto, Prepar'd to Suffer.

I bluſh, Serene Aga, when I think I am ſo barren of Vertues, that I have Nothing elſe to boaſt of, but my Loyalty. Whilſt Thouſands of Illuſtrious Souls, Crown'd with a Circle of Merits, daily aſcend to Paradiſe: And tho' they made but an Obſcure Figure on Earth, even as Contemptible as the Exil'd Arabian in his Hutch at Paris; yet now take their Seats, among the Hundred and Twenty Four Thouſand Prophets, Favourites of the Eternal.

Mayſt thou encreaſe that Happy Number, but not till thou haſt had thy Fill of Bliſs on Earth; and that all thy Enjoyments here, ſeem like the Perfume of Oyntments, which tho' they pleaſe for a Time, yet at Length cloy the Senſe.

Paris, 22d. of the 3d. Moon,
of the Year 1654.

LETTER V.

To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna.

DO not ſuſpect me of Partiality, or that I am fond of making Proſelytes, becauſe I take ſuch Pains to reſtore thee to Reaſon, and make thee ſenſible thou art a Man. I have no Deſign or Self-Intereſt, in doing thee this Good Office: And 'tis remote from my Humour, to buſy my ſelf in gaining Converts. Only the Love of Truth, ſets my Pen at Work in this manner; being ever of the Mind, That a free Diſquiſition in Matters either of Religion or Philoſophy, is the only way to get quit of Errors. Perhaps my Caſe may be the ſame as thine; and, for ought thou knoweſt, I ſeek not more to undeceive thee, than to ſatisfie my ſelf, by thus frankly venting my Thoughts: Since Nothing is more commonly obſerv'd, than that whilſt a Man is teaching another, he improves himſelf. Our Memories are frail and treacherous; and we Think many Excellent Things, which for Want of making a deep Impreſſion, we can never recover afterwards. In vain we hunt for the ſtragling Idea, and rummage all the Solitudes and Retirements of our Soul for a loſt Thought, which has left no Track or Footſteps behind it. The ſwift Off-ſpring of the Mind is gone; 'tis

'tis dead as ſoon as born; nay, often proves Abortive, in the Moment it was Conceiv'd. The only Way therefore to retain our Thoughts, is to faſten them in Words, and chain them in Writing. This is one Cauſe that I trouble thee with Letters of this Nature, that whilſt I am inſtructing thee, I may eſtabliſh my own Reaſon, and confirm my ſelf in the Method I have taken, To live according to my Nature; that is, by not ſuffering my Rational Faculties to fall aſleep, whilſt my Paſſions are Active and Vigorous in working my Ruin. For I reckon no greater Shame or Misfortune can befal a Man, than to be depriv'd of his Humanity, that is, his Reaſon.

What I have ſaid concerning the Perfidiouſneſs of our Memories, may ſerve as a proper Introduction to the Objections I ſhall make againſt your Traditionary Laws.

If one ask you, Why theſe Laws were not Written, as well as the other; You anſwer, That God took Care in this, leſt the Gentiles getting Copies of them, ſhould corrupt and pervert their Senſe, even as they have done the Written Laws. But how then came he to ſuffer any to be Written? Had he not equal Care of one Part, as of the Other? Or, could the Gentiles do more harm, by altering and corrupting the leſs Subſtantial Traditions, than the very Fundamental Statutes? For, that theſe Unwritten Laws contain'd only Circumſtantials, your Doctors themſelves confeſs. What Man of Common Senſe then, can ſit down contented with ſo trivial an Anſwer? Or, will you ſay, That God took more Care to preſerve theſe Traditions Incorrupt from the Gentiles, than to retain them in their Purity among the Jews? For, that committing them to Writing, had been the ſureſt Way to retain them in their Original Purity, is evident by the Preſervation of the Written Law; of which there was ſo great Care taken in Tranſcribing it, that if but a Letter or a Point were added, diminiſh'd or miſplac'd, they took it for a Fatal Omen of ſome Calamity, and the Faulty Scribes were ſeverely puniſh'd; Nay, the whole Congregation, were bound to expiate the Offence by Faſting, Prayers, and Alms. So that it was in a Manner Impoſſible, that with all this Circumſpection, the leaſt Corruption or Alteration ſhou'd creep into the Written Law.

I appeal now to thy own Reaſon, Whether this was not a much ſecurer Way of preſerving the Laws Uncorrupt, than by truſting them to the fickle Memories of Men?

Beſides, I wou'd fain know, What became of theſe Traditions during the Various Captivities of the Jews, and Depopulations of the Holy Land? Wo took Care to deliver theſe Traditions Unalter'd to Poſterity, when they were without Prieſts, Prophets or Synagogues? When they were diſpers'd over the Remote Provinces of Media, Perſia, Egypt and Babylon? In thoſe Days, your Fathers were Slaves to the Gentile Kings of Aſia; There were then no Seniors ſitting in Sanhedrim, who might might take Care of theſe Things. Neither do I find, that Eſdras the Scribe was any Ways concern'd for theſe Traditions, when he with his Brethren the Jews, return'd from their Long Captivity in Perſia and Babylon. All his moſt ſtrenuous Endeavours, were employ'd in recovering the Loſt Books of the Written Law, without ſo much as regarding or mentioning the Other. From whence I gather, That either theſe Traditions were of no great Importance; or, if they were, yet they were wholly, or for the moſt Part chang'd or loſt, many Hundreds of Years before the Talmud was firſt compos'd; which thou ſay'ſt; is the Grand Repoſitory of theſe Sacred Inſtructions. And in ſaying ſo, thou contradicteſt thy own Arguments: For, if theſe Traditions were appointed to be tranſmitted by Word of Mouth from Father to Son to all Generations, as you ſuppoſe, then what need was there of writing them in the Talmud, or any other Book? And yet the Writings of your Rabbi's are full of them. Thus thou confoundeſt thy ſelf, and runneſt blindfold round in a Circle of Abſurdities.

Rowze up therefore thy Reaſon, and ſuffer not thy ſelf to be hood-wink'd by the Fables of your Rabbi's, thoſe Induſtrious Midwives of Old Womens Tales. Doubtleſs theſe Traditions, about which you make ſuch a Buſtle, are no other than the Whimſies of your Cabbaliſts, who pretend to ſpie more Myſteries in the Order of Two or Three Hebrew Letters or Points, than they are able to unfold in whole Volumes. They crack their Brains, in Conjuring up far-fetch'd Interpretations, from the particular Faſhion and Placing of one ſingle Daſh of a Pen. They puzzle and amuſe their Diſciples, with teaching them more knotty and Romantick Divinity out of the Four and Twenty Letters, than ever Pythagoras did with all his Myſtick Numbers. The Alphabet to them, is the Oracle of Theology. They have turn'd the Law into a perfect Riddle.

Believe not therefore, theſe Religious Mountebanks, theſe Holy Jugglers, who with their ſanctify'd Legerdemain, wou'd turn you into Apes, that they may laugh in Secret at your Folly; while they behold, how preciſely devout you are in cringing, jumping, dancing, howling, braying, and all your other Antick Poſtures and Actions in the Synagogue; in the Practice of which, you have beſtow'd ſo much Care, and are ſo exact, that you quite neglect the Weighty Points of the Law.

I hope what I have ſaid, is ſufficient to convince thee, that thoſe Traditions, which you are taught to believe were deliver'd to Moſes in the Mount of God, are no other, than the Impoſitions of your Blind Guides; who are ſtudious of Nothing more, than to entangle you in a perpetual Labyrinth of Superſtition and Error.

It will not be a greater Difficulty to demonſtrate, That the Written Law it ſelf, though Divine in its Original, is not of Univerſal verſal Obligation to all People; but only calculated for your Particular Nation, and ſuch as were willing to enter into your Intereſts, among the Nations adjacent to the Holy Land.

And becauſe my Time haſtens me, I will only ſuggeſt one Argument for all, and leave it to thy Deliberation; Whether it was poſſible for all Mankind to repair once a Year to Jeruſalem, to ſacrifice in Solomon's Temple, as is requir'd in your Law? For, that it was not lawful to ſacrifice any where elſe, is evident, both from the Law it ſelf, which expreſsly forbids it; and from the Examples of your Fathers in their ſeveral Captivities; and from your own Practice at this Day, who have made no Sacrifice ſince the Days of Titus Veſpaſian, the Roman Emperour, who laid waſte your City, and burnt your Temple to Aſhes.

And this alſo may ſerve to convince thee, that the Law of Moſes was not of Perpetual Obligation even to the Jews themſelves; ſince 'tis evident from Matters of Fact, that for theſe Sixteen Hundred Years, you have not been in a Capacity to keep it: And doubtleſs, God wou'd never require any Thing of Men, which he foreſaw, they wou'd not be able to perform.

Ceaſe then to think ſo highly of thy Nation, as if none but they were the Elect of God, or Capable of his Favours: Ceaſe to inſult over the Reſt of Mankind, and to curſe thy Brethren, the Sons of One Father, even Noah

the Juſt Man, and Prophet of God. Behold the Sun and Moon, with all the Conſtellations in Heaven: Their Influences are equally diſpers'd to all of Human Race. Behold the Elements, they ſerve all the Sons of Adam alike; they are not Partial to Mortals, neither does any Faction byaſs the Winds and Rain. Theſe happen all at their Appointed Time and Place. And the Four Seaſons of the Year, return with even Courſes to the Inhabitants of the Four Quarters of the World. The Plants know no Difference between the Circumcis'd and the Uncircumcis'd; but yield their Encreaſe with Equal Indifferency, to the One and the Other: And the Brute Animals, equally acknowledge both for their Lords. The Birds of the Air, are as ſoon caught by a Heathen, Chriſtian, or Mahometan Fowler, as by one that is a Jew. And the Fiſh of the Sea when they ſwallow the Hook, or plung themſelves into the Net, regard not the Difference of Religion in thoſe that catch them. All Things happen to every Man according to their Nature, and the Pleaſure of Deſtiny: Only Man himſelf tranſgreſſes the Condition of his Being. But thoſe that obey the Internal Lawgiver, let them be of what Nation or Religion ſoever, doubtleſs they live Happily, and die in Peace.

However, leſt Men ſhou'd err for Want of Knowledge, a Light is ſprung forth in the Eaſt, even the Book of Glory, which confirms the Written Law, and inſtructs Men in the Truth. Doubtleſs, this Book was brought down from Heaven.

Heaven. It carries its own Evidence, and a Teſtimony of its Divine Original, in the Majeſty of the Style: There is a Spirit and Energy in every Word, ſublimating the Intellect of the devout Reader, and purifying his Affections: It is written in Arabick, in a Dialect ſo pure and perfect, that the moſt Accurate Criticks can find no Blemiſh from the Beginning to the End. One Part coheres exactly with the other; 'tis void of Contradiction. All the Chapters in this Glorious Volume, are of a Piece. Which Excellencies cou'd not have thus met together without a Miracle, in a Book divulg'd by a Man, who cou'd neither Write nor Read.

The Succeſs it has had in the World, ſpeaks it of Celeſtial Deſcent. The Greateſt Part of Aſia and Africk, with many Kingdoms in Europe, have obey'd the Alcoran for above theſe Thouſand Years: Cou'd ſuch a Thing come to paſs, without the Decree of Heaven? When the Prophet and Favourite of God firſt receiv'd his Divine Commiſſion, he was like a Pelican in the Wilderneſs, Solitary, and without Companion. Nevertheleſs he was not diſcouraged, but obey'd the Orders of Heaven. He ſaw himſelf in the midſt of Rocks and Sands, encompaſs'd on all Sides with Terrible Beaſts. Yet he deſpair'd not of Aſſiſtance from Above, but comforted himſelf in the Promiſe of the Eternal. He firſt preach'd to the Savage Lyons and Tygers; who, as if they had heard another Orpheus, grew tame and ſociable at his Powerful Words. Thoſe

the Juſt Man, and Prophet of God. Behold the Sun and Moon, with all the Conſtellations in Heaven: Their Influences are equally diſpers'd to all of Human Race. Behold the Elements, they ſerve all the Sons of Adam alike; they are not Partial to Mortals, neither does any Faction byaſs the Winds and Rain. Theſe happen all at their Appointed Time and Place. And the Four Seaſons of the Year, return with even Courſes to the Inhabitants of the Four Quarters of the World. The Plants know no Difference between the Circumcis'd and the Uncircumcis'd; but yield their Encreaſe with Equal Indifferency, to the One and the Other: And the Brute Animals, equally acknowledge both for their Lords. The Birds of the Air, are as ſoon caught by a Heathen, Chriſtian, or Mahometan Fowler, as by one that is a Jew. And the Fiſh of the Sea when they ſwallow the Hook, or plung themſelves into the Net, regard not the Difference of Religion in thoſe that catch them. All Things happen to every Man according to their Nature, and the Pleaſure of Deſtiny: Only Man himſelf tranſgreſſes the Condition of his Being. But thoſe that obey the Internal Lawgiver, let them be of what Nation or Religion ſoever, doubtleſs they live Happily, and die in Peace.

However, leſt Men ſhou'd err for Want of Knowledge, a Light is ſprung forth in the Eaſt, even the Book of Glory, which confirms the VVritten Law, and inſtructs Men in the Truth. Doubtleſs, this Book was brought down from Heaven.

Heaven. It carries its own Evidence, and a Teſtimony of its Divine Original, in the Majeſty of the Style: There is a Spirit and Energy in every Word, ſublimating the Intellect of the devout Reader, and purifying his Affections: It is written in Arabick, in a Dialect ſo pure and perfect, that the moſt Accurate Criticks can find no Blemiſh from the Beginning to the End. One Part coheres exactly with the other; 'tis void of Contradiction. All the Chapters in this Glorious Volume, are of a Piece. Which Excellencies cou'd not have thus met together without a Miracle, in a Book divulg'd by a Man, who cou'd neither Write nor Read.

The Succeſs it has had in the World, ſpeaks it of Celeſtial Deſcent. The Greateſt Part of Aſia and Africk, with many Kingdoms in Europe, have obey'd the Alcoran for above theſe Thouſand Years: Cou'd ſuch a Thing come to paſs, without the Decree of Heaven? When the Prophet and Favourite of God firſt receiv'd his Divine Commiſſion, he was like a Pelican in the Wilderneſs, Solitary, and without Companion. Nevertheleſs he was not diſcouraged, but obey'd the Orders of Heaven. He ſaw himſelf in the midſt of Rocks and Sands, encompaſs'd on all Sides with Terrible Beaſts. Yet he deſpair'd not of Aſſiſtance from Above, but comforted himſelf in the Promiſe of the Eternal. He firſt preach'd to the Savage Lyons and Tygers; who, as if they had heard another Orpheus, grew tame and ſociable at his Powerful Words. Thoſe fierce Inhabitants of the Woods, came and proſtrated themſelves before the Sent of God; they lick'd his Feet in Token of Submiſſion; they environ'd the Place of his Repoſe, as his Guards, and brought him Food Morning and Evening. The Prophet wonder'd that ſo great Grace was given to the Beaſts of the Earth. He prais'd the Creator of All Things, and his Mouth was full of Benedictions. He bleſs'd the Day and the Night, and the Obſcurity that comes between them. He bleſs'd the Dews that fall at the Riſing of the Odoriferous Star, and the refreſhing Winds that ſtir the Leaves of the Trees at Midnight. And in the Morning he pray'd, That all Men might become True Believers. Doubtleſs, God had granted his Petition, had not the Angel who carry'd up his Prayers to Heaven, met with the Devil, a little on this Side the Orb of the Moon, who ſtole from him ſome of Mahomet's Words, ſo that the Prayer aſcended Imperfect to the Throne of the Merciful. Nevertheleſs, a Great Part of Men became Believers: And more ſhall be added to the Number.

In a little Time, the Solitary Prophet ſaw himſelf at the Head of a Numerous Army, all Voluntiers, who reſorted to him in the Wilderneſs, as they were Inſpir'd from Above. The Mighty Men of Arabia, oppos'd the Sacred Hero: They led the Flow'r of the Eaſt againſt him: But they accelerated their own Fate, and Incens'd their Angry Stars. The Elements took up Arms againſt them, and the

Meteors,

Meteors fought in Defence of the Meſſenger of God. Lightning and Hail, with Stones of Fire, blaſted the Troops of the Infidels: And terrible Storms of Wind, buried whole Armies in the Sands. Thus the Hoſt of the Muſſulmans, became Victorious, without drawing a Sword, and the Empires of the Wicked, fell to the Poſſeſſion of True Believers. Perſia, Babylon, and Egypt, were ſubdued, and embrac'd the Undefiled Truth. The Alcoran was receiv'd from India to the Mauritanian Shore: From the Riſing of the Sun, to the Going down thereof, this Holy Profeſſion is made with one Conſent, There is but One God, and Mahomet his Prophet.

Now Nathan, conſider, whether ever the Law of Moſes had ſuch Footing in the World, or the Children of Iſrael cou'd boaſt of ſuch Univerſal Conqueſts? Your Little Kingdom, has had its Period long agoe; and both that, and all the Empires of Aſia and Africk, are ſwallow'd up in the All-conquering Monarchy of the Oſmans. Your Tabernacle, Temple, City, and Sacrifices, are quite Extinct. Your Nation is Scatter'd over the whole World, without Lands or Poſſeſſions that they can call their own. Neither is there Prince, Prieſt, or Prophet, to whom you can have Recourſe for Delivery from your Misfortunes.

Come out therefore from the Synagogue, which lies under the Scourge of Heaven: Shake off the Malediction: And being Purified rified, join thy ſelf to the True Believers, who are Bleſs'd in this World, and ſhall be Happy in Paradiſe. Or at leaſt ſtand by thy ſelf, and follow thy Own Light. Adieu.

Paris, 22d. of the 3d. Moon,
of the Year 1654.

LETTER VI.

To Dicheu Huſſein, Baſſa.

THE Policies of Cardinal Mazarini are no Secrets at the Imperial City. Now he is about to play his Maſter-piece. He has all along maintain'd Penſioners in the Service of the French Grandees. No Man of Prime Quality, cou'd be ſure he entertain'd not at his Table, ſome Creature of this Miniſter. Diſguizes of all Sorts, both for Body and Mind, were never VVanting to Men dextrous at Treachery, and Officious to do Miſchief.

But now he is ſetting Spies of another Character on the Princes of the Blood, and the Chief Nobility of France. VVomen are to become his Private Agents; Females of his Own Blood; true Italians; and brought up, under his particular Care and Management. In a VVord, his Siſters and Nieces.

Five

Five of them are newly come to this City, having been Conducted hither by the Cardinal's Secretary, accompany'd with a Conſiderable Retinue of Courtiers, who went to meet them ſome Leagues from Paris. 'Tis ſaid, That one of thoſe Ladies is a great Beauty, and that the Young King, having ſeen her Picture, fell in Love with her.

This is certain, the Prince of Conti has Married one of them: With whom the Cardinal has given his Palace, and Two Hundred Thouſand Crowns in Dowry.

They talk, as if Another of them was to be Married to the Duke of Candale; and a Third, to the Son of General Harcourt. And, as if Mazarini were Emulous of Joſeph's Character and Authority in Pharaoh's Court, he has ſent for his Father alſo, with all his Family, to come and reſide in France. He is reſolv'd to ſtock this Kingdom with Sicilian Blood, a Race of Mazarin's: Who by Inſtinct, as well as by Rules, ſhall carry on the Deſign he has laid; and either raiſe this tottering State to the Height of his Model, or abſolutely ruine it. For, that Active Spirit, cannot take up with Mediums.

'Tis ſaid, That the Duke of Orleans reſents very Ill the Cardinal's Ambition, in Marrying his Nieces into the Blood-Royal. That Prince, will not be prevail'd on to come near the Court: But rather favours the Prince of Conde, and the other Malecontents. Whence ſome People are apt to preſage, another Turn of Affairs, Affairs, before long: For, the Generality of the French, are Inclin'd to the Prince's Party.

There is great Caballing all over the Kingdom: and the Cardinal ſtrives to puſh his Intereſt forward, by all the Methods of a Cunning Stateſman. He knows the Prince of Conde's Spirit too well, to dream of a Reconciliation. And he has a double Intereſt, in the Ruin of that Unfortunate General; his own Preſervation, and the Aggrandizing his Niece, the Princeſs of Conti: Who by the Fall of her Brother-in-Law, will be Miſtreſs of his Eſtate.

He is endeavouring alſo, to make an Alliance with the Cardinal de Retz, his profeſs'd Enemy, and one rais'd by the Pope to that Dignity, on purpoſe to counter-balance Mazarini's Power at this Court, where he is ſuſpected to animate the King againſt the Court of Rome.

That Cardinal de Retz, is now a Priſoner of State, and has been ſo a long Time; being firſt Confin'd by Mazarini's Orders. But the Wiſe Miniſter, now thinks it ſafer to compound with a Man, whom he cannot longer perſecute, without drawing on himſelf the Revenge of all the Eccleſiaſticks, and eſpecially the Thunder of the Roman Court.

Therefore, to reconcile Matters and fortifie himſelf, he has propos'd a Match between his Nephew, and de Retz his Niece. The Court is wholly taken up, with making Friendſhips of this Nature: Which is an evident Sign, Sign, they feel their Power at an Ebb, and fear it will be much Lower, if the Prince of Conde, ſhou'd once take the Field in France.

'Tis nothing to the Muſſulman-Intereſt, which Side gets the Advantage. For, they are all equally Enemies to the Sent of God.

If I can by any ſucceſsful Artifice promote the Diviſions of theſe Infidels, I ſhall not diſſerve the Shining Port. However, I will ſtill pray, That thoſe Swords may be turn'd againſt each Other; which United, wou'd hazard the State of the True Faithful.

Illuſtrious Friend, let thy Preſence in the Divan, be as a ſtrong Baſtion, under the Covert of which, Mahmut may be ſhelter'd from the Artillery of Evil Tongues, and Sycophants.

Paris 14th. of the 4th. Moon,
of the Year 1654.

LETTER

LETTER VII.

To Dgnet Oglou.

THOU art not Ignorant, that when I firſt heard of the Cruel Sentence executed on our late Friend Egri Boinou (on whom be the Mercies of the Creator) I wrote to his Succeſſor, Iſmael Mouta Faraca, a Letter of Condoleance: Wherein, to keep a Medium between the Tenderneſs I ow'd to the Loſs which my Friend had ſuſtained of his Eyes, and the diſtruſt I had of a Stranger; I filled up my Letter to Iſmael, with Conſolatory Expreſſions; ſuch as I wou'd have uſed to Egri himſelf, had I been in his Company. Believing, that Iſmael would read my Letter, to his Blind Predeceſſor.

I plaid the Stoick, and encouraged the Doctrin of Apathy: Or, at leaſt, I abounded in Philoſophical Counſels, almoſt as Impracticable as the other. Nothing but ſevere Morality dropt from my Pen. And, all this, to cover my real Concern and Paſſion for Egri's Sufferings; who, thou knoweſt, was beloved by more than thee and me. I told thee in a former Letter, That I did not dare to truſt my Sentiments, though diſguized, to a Man, who on the ſcore of his new Preferment might become more quick-ſighted than before, and would ſoon penetrate the thin Veil of Words, and Spy ſomething in that Diſpatch to my Diſad-Diſadvantage, ſhould I have ventured to deſcant on the Sultan's Severity, or Egri's Merits.

Therefore, I thought it beſt to pretend an Indifferency, to which I am as much a Stranger as any Man, in Caſes that too nearly touch our Senſe. 'Tis eaſie to give Counſel to another, which in the ſame Circumſtances, we are far from practiſing our ſelves. Then we can be full of Wiſdom and grave Morals; but, when it once comes Home, all our Philoſophy vaniſhes: There remains Nothing to be ſeen, but a meer Senſitive Animal, without Vertue or Patience.

My own Experience, but two Days ago, forces this Confeſſion from me, when by an unlucky Blow, I loſt the Sight of both my Eyes, for the Space of Eight and Forty Hours. 'Tis true, I ſhould not have uſed them much during a Third Part of that Time, had they not been hurt: Unleſs thou wilt ſay, they are ſerviceable in our Dreams, and help our Souls to ſpy the Dark Chimæra's of the Night. However, I remember 'twas no ſmall Grief, even in that Abſence of the Sun, to be only Senſible of the Privation by my Ears: For whilſt the Windows of my Soul were ſhut, 'twas in vain for thoſe of my Chamber to be open; which before this Misfortune, would by letting in the Light of the Moon or Stars, have convinc'd me, that it was Night, without being beholden to the Clocks and Bells of the Convents for my Intelligence, as I was under this Affliction.

Then

Then it was, that in my Heart I unſaid all that I had written to the Eunuch on the Subject of Blindneſs, and curſed the Philoſopher for a Fool or a Madman, who put out his own Eyes, for the Sake of his Thoughts. I envyed thoſe more happy Fools, who are without Thoughts, but enjoy their Sight, which helps to form and regulate the Conceits of the moſt Wiſe and Thinking Men.

Nay, ſuch was my Paſſion and Melancholy, during this ſhort Eclipſe of my Eyes, that I preferr'd to mine, even the Life of thoſe Dumb Animals, whom Men have learned to call Irrational, becauſe they expreſs their Sentiments by Inarticulate Sounds, a Dialect which we don't Underſtand. And, I could have almoſt wiſhed my ſelf Metamorphos'd, though it were into a Dog, provided I might but have that Senſe, the want of which renders our Humanity Imperfect and a Burden to it ſelf. Or, if thou wilt blame me for ſuch a Wiſh, I cannot forbear thinking that Dog happier than his Maſter, whom I have ſeen leading a Blind Man in a String along the Streets of Paris. How prudently did that Faithful Creature act the Guide, in croſſing the Way, if any Danger threatned his Charge, as a Cart, Coach, or Throng of People? And, all this Conduct was owing to his Eyes, which made him Wiſer than his Maſter; who, had he enjoy'd this Senſe, might not, for ought I know, have Surpaſſed his Kind Brute in the Exerciſe of Reaſon.

And now I am fallen on this Subject, of the the Wiſdom of Brutes, I muſt not forget a Story which I have read in Plutarch, as alſo in a certain French Author, of a Dog in the Court of the Roman Emperour, Veſpaſian, which would act to the Life, all the Agonies and Symptoms of Death at the Command of a Mountebank, who had taught him many ſuch Comical Tricks, to divert the Grandees of Rome.

The ſame Frenchman mentions certain Oxen, which it ſeems had Learned Arithmetick: For, being employ'd in turning the Wheel of a Well an Hundred Times every Day, when they had finiſhed that Task, would not ſtir a ſtep more; but having revolved that Number in their Minds, deſiſted of their own Accord; nor could any Violence compel 'em to farther Labour. Who will deny now, that theſe Oxen were Mathematicians; Or, That that Ship-Dog had any need to ſtudy Euclid's Elements, who having a great deſire to taſte of ſome Oil, that he ſaw in a deep Earthen Veſſel, and not being able to put his Head in far enough, by Reaſon of the long ſtreight Neck of the Pot, after ſome Study ran to the Hold of the Ship, which was Baladed with Gravel-ſtones. From thence he brought in his Mouth, at ſeveral Times, as many of thoſe little Stones, as half filling the Pot, forced the Oil up to the Mouth, ſo that he could Lap his Belly full. Of this, Plutarch ſays he was an Eye-witneſs. Was not this, thinkeſt thou, an Archimedes among the Dogs? Are not the Goats of Candy abſolute

Phy-

Phyſicians, when being wounded, they never ceaſe ranging the Plains of that Fertile Iſland, till they have found the Herb Dittany, with which they reſtore themſelves to Health.

Should the French read theſe Lines, and thoſe others I have writ on this Subject to Cara Hali, and the Great Mahummed of the Deſart, they would cenſure me as a Heretick, a Fool, or a Madman: Or, at leaſt, they would conclude, I am too Importunate an Advocate for the Beaſts. They would call me Brute my ſelf, and fix my Pedigree among ſome of the Dumb Generations.

But thou, who haſt been Educated in the ſerener Principles of the Eaſt, and haſt had the Honour to pour Water on the Hands of the Abſtemious Eremit, wilt have another Opinion of what I ſay, in Defence of our Kindred Animals.

He that has given Wiſdom and Language to the Piſmires, and Inſtructed them to converſe together by Mute Signs, ſo that when the Signal was given, the Alarm was taken throughout their humble Territories, and they all fled away with their Bag and Baggage, when the Army of Solomon approached: Inſpire us with Grace, to underſtand the Language of the Beaſts, or at leaſt, not to think our Selves Wiſer than them who underſtand Ours.

Paris the 14th of the 4th Moon,
of the Year 1654.

LET-

LETTER VIII.

To Aſis, Baſſa.

THIS Court is wholly taken up at preſent, with the Preparations that are making to Crown the Young King. The Place deſign'd for that Ceremony, is a City call'd Rhemes. 'Tis ſaid, the Duke of Orleans will not be there, though the King has Summon'd all the Princes and Nobility to attend at his Inauguration, according to the Ancient Cuſtom. But that Prince, ſtomacks the great Sway Cardinal Mazarini bears at Court. Beſides, his Daughter, who has no ſmall Power over him, is affected to the Party of Malecontents. 'Tis through her Perſwaſions, the Duke her Father, abſents himſelf from the King, his Nephew. Yet there are that ſay, his Mind will change, before the Time appointed for the Coronation: And, that he will rather diſſemble his Grudge, that ſo he may more advantageouſly ruine the Cardinal: Who keeps the King lull'd in a Circle of Pleaſures, agreeable to his Youth; that ſo he may not have Time or Inclination, to pry into his Management of Affairs.

The Court is at preſent at Fontainbleau, a Houſe of Pleaſure belonging to the King. They paſs their Time away in Delights, drown'd in Security. Whilſt the Wakeful Princes of the Blood, are plotting new Methods thods to rowze 'em from their Lethargy, and teach the Young Monarch, That the Sound of the Trumpet and Beat of the Drum, will, in a ſhort time, be a more Neceſſary Muſick, than the ſoft Airs of the Lute, and ſuch Chamber-Melody,

In the mean Time, the Prince of Conde being Condemn'd, the Princeſs, his Wife, has petition'd the Parliament, that her Dowry may be ſecur'd to her: But they have referr'd the Matter to the King. Her Husband ſeems to be loſt in all Reſpects, ſave thoſe of the People's Affections, who favour any that are Enemies to Cardinal Mazarini.

Monſieur Brouſſel, one of the Councellors of Parliament, whoſe Impriſonment I formerly mention'd to be the Cauſe of the Firſt Sedition at Paris, is newly dead: Yet the Cauſe whereof he was a Patriot, dies not with him; but rather takes freſh Vigour, from daily Grounds of Diſcontent.

It was more particularly reviv'd, upon the Death of the late Arch-biſhop of Paris: The Clergy chuſing for his Succeſſor, the Cardinal de Retz, a Priſoner of State, and under the ſevere Diſpleaſure of the King. This Election was countermanded, by a Declaration from the Council-Royal. Nevertheleſs, the Eccleſiaſticks perſiſt in their Firſt Choice; Whilſt Cardinal Mazarini threatens 'em, with the Puniſhments due to thoſe who contemn the King's Authority. But they ſlight his Menaces, truſting to the Arms of the Prince of Conde; which, they hope, will deliver 'em, in

Time,

Time, from the Oppreſſions of that Great Miniſter.

The Men of Ability Cabal, whilſt the Vulgar are eaſily drawn into Parties, as their Affections byaſs 'em. Here is Nothing but Murmuring and Whiſpering againſt the Government. Every Man endeavours to purchaſe Arms, and lay 'em up privately as againſt ſome Publick Invaſion. Nay, the Citizens walk not abroad without Daggers hid under their Garments: As if they either intended a Maſſacre, or were afraid of one. All things ſeem to portend ſome ſudden Eruption of Popular Fury. And the Wiſeſt know not, what will be the Iſſue of ſo many Threatning Occurrences.

Only Mahmut (ſurrounded with Infidels) is reſign'd to Deſtiny. Knowing, that no Human Counſel can haſten or retard the Decrees Sign'd Above.

Paris, the 17th. of the 5th. Moon,
of the Year 1654.

LETTER

LETTER IX.

To Murat, Baſſa.

IT ſeems the Devils have been lately let looſe in theſe Weſtern Parts, if we may give Credit to the Depoſition of ſuch, as have accus'd certain ſuppos'd Witches.

In Bretagne a Province of this Kingdom, above Forty Old Women have been ſeiz'd and Impriſon'd, for holding Correſpondence with Infernal Powers: And above half of them, condemn'd to Death; God knows with what Juſtice.

Some of them are accus'd, of Enchanting the Perſons of their Neighbours; Others for Bewitching their Cattle; And a Third Sort, for diſſolving the Miſchievous Charms of the Firſt and Second: All of them for aſſembling in the Night-Time, and uſing certain Diabolical Ceremonies; which they ſay, begin and end in kiſſing the Poſteriours of a Goat, or the Devil in that Form.

I know not how far theſe poor ſuperannuated Figures of Mortality may be wrong'd. 'Tis a Queſtion, whether their Judges are always in the Right. A ſhrivell'd meager Face, a hollow Eye, join'd with irrecoverable Poverty, are many Times the Chief Grounds of Suſpicion: Which improv'd by Superſtition, Miſtakes and Malice, have often prevail'd on thoſe who ought to adminiſter Juſtice, to condemn poor Wretches more Innocent than themſelves, as Guilty of Witchcraft.

poor

Yet it cannot be deny'd, but that there have been both Men and Women vers'd in Magical Arts, as they are commonly call'd, which I take to be only the more Myſterious Science of Nature. Such was Zoroaſter, the Great Grand-Child of Noah, and King of that Part of Aſia which was then call'd Bactria. Such was Apollonius Tyaneus, Philiſtides Syracuſanus, with many others of Ancient Date: Theſe underſtood the Hidden Force of the Elements, the Influence of the Stars, the Specifick Operation of Metals, Minerals, and other Subterranean Bodies, with the Virtues of all Vegetables. They knew exactly how to frame Aſtral Images and Taliſmans, by the Help of which they were able to effect Wonders. And all this perhaps, without once dreaming of Infernal Spirits, or having the leaſt Society with Devils.

Yet I believe, Lucian, an Ancient Writer, who never ſpoke ſeriouſly of any Thing, ſcarce believ'd himſelf, when he related the Story of Pancrates, a Famous Magician of Egypt, who by theſe Taliſmans, was able to tranſform Inanimate things into the Appearance at leaſt of Living Creatures. Thus he wou'd turn a Stick or Piece of Wood into a ſeeming Man, who ſhou'd walk, diſcourſe, and perform all the Actions of a Rational Being.

A certain Stranger travelling with him once to Memphis, and lying with him in the ſame Carvanſera, as ſoon as they were alighted from their Camels Pancrates took a Plank of Oak, and having touch'd it with his Taliſman, and pronounc'd Two or Three Syllables, incontinently the Stock mov'd, ſtood upright, walk'd, and taking the Camels by the Bridle, led them to the Stables: After which, this Wooden Man came in and prepar'd their Pillaw; went of whatſoever Errands Pancrates ſent him. And when they departed, the Magician uſing a certain Private Ceremony, this Officious Servant return'd to a Plank again. This was his Practice all along the Road.

One Day his Fellow-Traveller being reſolv'd to try the Experiment, took Advantage of the Magician's Abſence, who was gone to the Temple, and had left his Taliſman behind him. The Curious Traveller, having been often an Eye Witneſs of this Trick, takes a Piece of Wood, and touches it with Pancrates's Taliſman, repeating the Syllables he had heard him utter. Immediately the Inanimate Timber became a Man, asking his Pleaſure. The Traveller aſtoniſh'd at the Event, commanded his new Servant to bring him a Bucket of Water. The Enchanted Spark obeys. The Traveller told him it was enough, and bid him return to a Piece of Wood again; but inſtead of that, he continu'd drawing of Water, and bringing it in till the Houſe was full. The Traveller fearing the Anger of Pancrates, thought to diſſolve the Enchantment, by cleaving the Wooden Animal in Two. But this augmented his Trouble: For, each Piece taking a Bucket, fell to drawing of Water;

ſo

ſo that of One Servant he had made Two. This continued till the Magician came to his Reſcue, who having ſternly rebuk'd the Traveller's Raſhneſs, at a Word turn'd the Two buſie Drudges, to their Primitive Loggiſhneſs and Inactivity again.

I do not tell this Story, as if I would have thee believe it, or that I give Credit to it my ſelf. Let us imitate the Author of it, who laughs at all that delight in ſuch Fables. But the Chriſtians, who believe a Piece of Bread is Transform'd to Fleſh and Blood, and becomes an Immortal God, at the pronouncing of Four Words by the Prieſt, may be excus'd, if they put Confidence in the Figments of Poets and Orators.

I have in my Cuſtody the Journal of Carcoa, who formerly reſided at Vienna, a Private Agent for the Ever Happy Port. Some of his Letters ſpeak of the Superſtition and Credulity of the Germans, in this Kind. Yet in a Letter to the Mufti, he acknowledges himſelf overcome by the Unqueſtionable Teſtimonies, of ſuch as had been Eye-Witneſſes of the Life and Death of one Fauſtus, a German Magician, who play'd a Thouſand Infernal Pranks (as he calls them) even before the Emperour himſelf.

He tells alſo of another Magician call'd Zyto, who liv'd in the Days of the Emperour Charles IV. And when the Emperour's Son to whom Zyto belong'd, was to Marry the Duke of Bavaria's Daughter; the Duke to oblige his Son-in-Law, who was much taken with Magical Tricks, as were all the Germans, ſent for a great many Famous Sorcerers to the Wedding. Among the Reſt, while One was performing a rare Exploit, on a ſudden Zyto the Prince's Conjurer, came up to him with a Mouth ſeeming as VVide as that of an Old Crocodile, and ſwallows him up at a Morſel. VVhen he thus had done, he retires and voids him again in a Bath, and brings him thus drench'd, into the Company, challenging any of the other Magicians, to do a Feat like that; but they were all ſilent.

I hear of no ſuch Tricks done by thoſe French Witches, who cauſe ſo much Diſcourſe at preſent. The worſt they are accus'd of, is, Bewitching their Neigbours Hogs to Madneſs, which thou knoweſt may be only a Natural Malady.

I pray Heaven defend us from the Enchantments of a deluded Phanſy, that Domeſtick Incubus of every Mortal, and we need fear neither Witch nor VVizard.

Paris, 20th. of the 5th Moon,
of the Year 1654.

LETTER

LETTER X.

To Cornezan Muſtapha, Baſſa.

THE Fame of Chriſtina Queen of Sueden, has, no doubt, reach'd thy Ears: I have made Mention of her in ſeveral of my Letters. That Royal Virgin, is now about to ſurrender her Crown to her Couſin, whom they call Charles Prince Palatine. This is a Voluntary Reſignation: and her Motive is ſaid to be, a ſtrong Inclination to Solitude and a Private Life; being eſteem'd, the moſt Accompliſh'd and Learn'd Princeſs of this Age. But thoſe who pretend to know more than others, ſay, That the True Ground of her abandoning the Kingdom, is a Reſolution ſhe has taken to change her Religion, and embrace the Faith of the Roman Mufti, which is forbidden by the Laws of Sueden.

Thou wilt ſmile at the Propoſals, which this Queen ſent to her deſign'd Succeſſor; and his Anſwer to them.

In the firſt Place, She will keep the Greateſt Part of the Kingdom and Revenues in her own Hands.

Secondly, She will be no Subject; but altogether Independent and Free.

Thirdly, She will have Liberty to travel into Foreign Countries, or into any Part of that Dominion.

Laſtly, She will not have the Offices of Truſt, or any other Gifts that ſhe ſhall have diſpoſed of to her Favourites, revok'd by her Succeſſor.

To theſe Articles, Prince Charles Anſwer'd, Firſt, That he will not be a mere Titular King, without Dominions, nor without ſuch a Revenue as is Neceſſary to defray the Royal Expences, both in Peace and War.

Secondly, That he will ſuffer no Competitor, Equal, or Sovereign in his Kingdom.

Thirdly, That he will not run the Hazard of her Intrigues in Foreign Courts.

Laſtly, That if he be King, he will diſpoſe of Preferments as he thinks fit. And, in Fine, That he will not be the Shadow of a King, without the Subſtantial Prerogatives of Sovereignty.

'Tis added, That when the Queen heard his Reply, ſhe ſaid aloud, I propos'd thoſe Articles only to try his Spirit. Now I eſteem him Worthy to Reign, who ſo well underſtands the Incommunicable Rights of a Monarch.

This Intelligence comes by a Secretary to the Spaniſh Embaſſador who is newly come out of Sueden, to Negotiate at this Court a Ten Years Truce between France and Spain.

Here is likewiſe an Embaſſador from Portugal, who acquaints the Court, That the Portugueze have Expell'd the Hollanders out of the Places they held in the Eaſt Indies. But, if our Merchants bring true Intelligence, the Tartars will Exterminate all the Franks that are in China.

In

In the mean Time, the Young King of France, paſſes away his Hours in Dancing ſeeing of Plays, and other Recreations, provided with vaſt Expence by Cardinal Mazarini, to divert him from medling with Publick Affairs, and from thinking too ſeriouſly on the Sentence he has Pronounc'd in Parliament, againſt the Prince of Conde.

One knows not well, how to blame the Prince of Conde's Proceedings; nor yet, to accuſe the King of Injuſtice. Neither is it proper for a Muſſulman-Slave, to decide the Controverſy: Our Principles and Laws, are different from Theirs: And he that is eſteem'd a Patriot here in the Weſt, wou'd be Condemn'd for a Rebel, without Heſitation, in any Part of the Eaſt; where but One God in Heaven, and One Sovereign on Earth, is acknowledg'd by the Subjects of every Kingdom and Empire.

But in France, the Princes of the Royal Blood, are Inveſted with ſuch a Power as renders it difficult for thoſe under their Command, to diſtinguiſh 'em from Supream Monarchs. Yet, not One of them poſſeſſes a Government, Equal to that of the Baſſa of Egypt; or Superiour to his of Aleppo.

I have ſpoken of theſe Princes formerly, in ſome of my Letters to the Happy Miniſters of Him, who when he pleaſes can make the Greateſt Sovereigns, the Squires of his Stirrup.

And therefore, 'twill be needleſs to ſay any more on that Subject, but only to acquaint thee, That the French Court, tho' they cannot relentof the Rigour they have us'd toward the Prince of Conde, yet ſeem willing to compound the Buſineſs with his Son, the Young Duke of Enguien, and by a Subtle Artifice, to ſtrike Two ſtrokes for the State at once. A Great Duke of this Realm, has been lately diſpatch'd to the Duke of Orleans, to propoſe a Match between his Daughter and Conde's Heir. Whereby the Eſtate of the Prince of Conde, will fall to the Duke of Orleans's Poſſeſſion, during the Minority of the Young Couple. This is a VVheedle to reconcile the King's Uncle to the Court, who has been a long Time eſtrang'd. But 'tis thought his Diſpleaſure is of too deep a Dye, to be waſh'd off with Court-Holy-Water.

I have no more News to tell thee, ſave the Death of a certain Prince, whom they call the Duke of Elboeuf. And it is of no Import to the Divan, whether a Hundred of theſe Infidel Princes die every Day, or no, ſo long as the Grand Signior lives, and is ever ſupply'd with Faithful Miniſters.

For His Health I pray, before the Sun peeps o'er the Tops of the Eaſtern Mountains, and after he hides himſelf in the Valleys of the Weſt. Neither do I riſe from my Knees at the Five appointed Hours, without an Oraiſon for Chorneſan, and the other Baſſa's of the Port.

Paris, the 10th. of the 6th. Moon,
of the Year 1654.

LET-

LETTER XI.

To Sale Tircheni Emin, Superintendant of the Royal Arſenal at Conſtantinople.

THOU that haſt the Charge of the Ammunition deſign'd for the Conqueſt of the World, art fitteſt to receive the News of a Terrible Blow lately given to a City of the Infidels in Flanders.

This Place is called Gravelines, whereof I have made Mention in ſome of my former Letters. On the 29th of the laſt Moon, the Powder of the Magazine there took Fire, whether by Accident or Deſign, is not certainly known: But the Damage it has done, is very great. It is reported, That a Third Part of the City is blown up, and the Chief Fortifications about it, with the Outworks of the Cittadel. Three Thouſand Mortals, had their Breath exhauſted by the Violent Convulſion of the Air, and were ſent into Another World, well ſeaſon'd with Salt-Peter: Beſides a vaſt Multitude of all Sorts, that were bury'd in the Ruins of the Houſes.

Some ſay, a certain Perſon coming to buy ſome Powder of the Steward of the Magazine, as they were knocking out the Head of a Powder-Barrel, the Hammer ſtruck Fire. Others report, That this Perſon who pretended to buy Powder, was a Spy or Private Agent of Cardinal Mazarini in thoſe Parts: And that by his Maſter's Order, he had prepar'd a certain Artificial Fire, enclos'd in a Shell or Box; and that at a certain determin'd Period of Time, it would cauſe the Box to flie in Pieces, and ſcatter Flames almoſt as ſubtle and penetrating as thoſe of Lightning.

Having therefore this little Inſtrument of Miſchief ready, and being inſtructed in all Things, he with the Steward enter'd the Vaults where the Powder lay, under Pretence of buying ſome for the Governour of Bruſſels. And when they had open'd one of the Barrels, he thruſt his Hand among the Powder, as though he wou'd take up ſome to look upon; at the ſame Time dextrouſly conveying his little Shell or Box into the Barrel, knowing, that in an Hours Time it wou'd work its Effect. In the mean while, ſeeming to diſlike that Barrel, they open'd another; which he bought, and ſo departed. Within an Hour afterwards, all the Countries round about, were aſtoniſh'd at the Dreadful Blow which made the Earth to tremble. They ſay, it was heard beyond the Seas into England.

Thus the Contrivance of this Tragedy, is faſten'd on Mazarini; and ſuch is the Hatred the People bear to this Miniſter, That if an Earthquake ſhou'd happen in theſe Parts, I believe they would accuſe him as the Author of it.

But

But it ſeems, as if all the Elements were at War againſt the Netherland Provinces. I have already acquainted the Miniſters of the Ever Happy Port, what Diſaſters befell theſe People by Storms at Sea, and Inundations on Land. After which, the Element of Fire took its turn to Chaſtiſe them. For, in the Firſt Moon of this Year, a certain VVind-mill in the Low Countries, whirling round with extraordinary Violence, by Reaſon of a Furious Storm; the Stone at Length, by its Rapid Motion, became ſo Intenſely hot, as to fire the Mill; from whence the Flames being diſperſed by the High Winds to the Neighbouring Houſes, ſet a whole Town on Fire.

And now the VVrath of Heaven has been kindl'd again, to deſtroy theſe Infidels: Yet thoſe that ſurvive, will not be Converted. Perhaps they will be ruin'd Piece-Meal, even to a Final Extermination, like the People of Aad and Thamod, of whom at this Day there remain no Footſteps.

I pray God guard the Imperial City and Arſenal, from all Caſualties of Fire, from Inundations of VVater, and from Earthquakes: And thy own VVatchful Care and Prudence, will defend the Magazines in thy Cuſtody, from the Sly Attempts of Traytors and Villains.

Paris, 10th. of the 6th. Moon,
of the Year 1654.

LETTER

LETTER XII.

To Mehemet, an Eunuch in the Seraglio.

I Acquainted thee formerly with the firſt Neceſſity I had to drink Wine, that I might the better conceal my being a Muſſulman, when I was made a Priſoner by Cardinal Mazarini's Order. I tell thee now, this Liquor is grown Habitual to me; it being the Natural Beverage of the Country where I am. But the French temper it with Water, the better to allay their Thirſt, and prevent Fevers: Which Cuſtom agrees not with the Stomach of a Mahometan, who when he drinks either Water or Wine, loves to have them Pure without Mixture. I uſe it moderately for my Health, and to create an Appetite. But this Evening, I drank a Glaſs of Wine, which is like to make me abhorr it for Ever. In all Probability, I ſhall turn as ſtrict and preciſe as an Hodgia. For, in the Midſt of my Draught, I had almoſt ſwallowed a great Spider, which lay drowned in the Wine. The little Beaſt, had paſs'd my Lips; but I ſoon clear'd my Mouth, of ſo Ungrateful a Morſel. I wiſh I could as eaſily diſcharge my Imagination, of the hated Idea's it has imbibed with this Fatal Potion. Not that I think I am poiſoned, or have received any Real Damage mage from the Spider: The worſt Venom, lies in my own Phancy. It will be Impoſſible for all the Water in France, to waſh away the Prejudices I have Conceiv'd againſt this little Inſect. I have a perfect Antipathy againſt it. The Sight of a Spider, would always make me ſweat and tremble. Now, if ever I ſhould taſte the Wine again, I ſhould imagine every Mouthful I ſwallowed, had a Spider in it. My Reaſon tells me, there were no Danger, if I had one in my Stomach; having ſeen a Phyſician, without the Uſe of any Antidote, ſwallow Two or Three large Spiders in a Glaſs of Wine: And this was his ordinary Practice every Morning. And moſt of that Profeſſion maintain, That Spiders ſo drank, can do no harm. Yet my Antipathy overcomes my Reaſon in this Point. And if Galen or Hippocrates were alive, they would not be able with all their Learned Demonſtrations, to reconcile me to a Creature, for which I have an Invincible Averſion and Abhorrence. I had rather encounter with a Lyon or a Tyger, in the Deſerts of Arabia, provided I had but a Sword in my Hand, than to have a Spider crawling about me in the Dark. And therefore, I have often envied the Happineſs of the Iriſh-Men; for, in that Iſland, they ſay no Venomous Creature will live. The ſame is reported, of the Iſle of Malta. Which Wonderful Privilege, both theſe Iſlands aſcribe, to the Prayers of certain Saints.

There is no Reaſon to be given for theſe ſecret Antipathies, which are diſcovered in many many Men. Some will ſwear and faint away, if there be a Cat in the Room where they are, though they know Nothing of it, any otherwiſe than by the Secret Intimations of this Unaccountable Senſe, which Nature has added to their other Five. I have ſeen a Gentleman drop down in a Swoon, as ſoon as he entred a Chamber, where there was a Squirrel kept in a Cage. And thoſe that knew him, ſaid, it was his conſtant Infirmity.

If there be any Truth in the Doctrin of the Soul's Tranſmigration, I ſhould think the beſt Reaſons for theſe private Antipathies, might be drawn from ſome Former State of the Soul. And according to that Suppoſition, I ſhould conclude, That I had been a Flie, before I came into this Body; and having been frequently perſecuted by Spiders in that State, do ſtill retain the Dread of my Old Enemy, which all the Circumſtances of my preſent Metamorphoſis, are not able to efface. But if this be ſo, I wonder I ſhou'd have no diſtinct Remembrance of my former little Volatile Life; ſince Pythagoras, the Great Patron of the Metempſychoſis declares, That he could remember ſeveral Changes he had undergone. And particularly recounts, how he led a Merrier Life when he was a Frog, than ſince he became a Philoſopher.

It affords me Matter of Thought and is no ſmall Diverſion, to behold the Contrariety that is in Mens Diet. One Man never taſtes of Fiſh all his days, another abhors Fleſh; this faints if his Bread be cut with a Knife that has touched Cheeſe, that ſwoons at the Smell of Mutton. Men have as different Appetites, as they have Faces. Some are ſqueamiſh, and almoſt nauſeate every Thing that others eat freely of. Again, there are others to whom nothing comes amiſs. For my Part, I have many Averſions in Point of Diet: And, above all Things, I can never be reconciled to the eating of Inſects, Serpents and other Reptile Creatures. Yet here are Men in this Kingdom, who live upon Frogs, Vipers, Graſhoppers, and ſuch Kind of Loathſome Animals. And I have read of a People in the Southern Parts of Africa, who had no other Diet but ſalted Locuſts, which they catch in the Spring: When certain Winds, bring Innumerable ſwarms of them over the Land, ſo that all the Country is covered. Theſe People are very Lean, Active and Black. They run ſwift as Stags, and will climb Trees and jump from one Bough and Tree to another, as nimbly as Apes or Squirrils. But they are ſhort Liv'd, never exceeding Forty Years of Age. For, about that Time, they feel a Violent Itching all over their Bodies: Which tempting them to ſcratch themſelves, they never ceaſe till they make Holes in their Fleſh, where certain Winged Inſects breed; which multiply ſo faſt, that in a little Time they devour the poor Wretches. This is thought to be the Reſult of their Ill Diet.

that

Let not what I have ſaid, create any Squeamiſhneſs in thee, but eat thy Pillaw with a good good Stomach: For that Food, has the Benediction of God and his Prophet.

Paris, the 23d. of the 6th. Moon, of the Year, 1654.

LETTER XIII.

To the Kaimacham.

THE King of France, has been ſolemnly Crown'd at Rhemes: Where were preſent, his Mother and Brother, Cardinal Mazarini, with divers Princes and Nobles, and Foreign Miniſters. But Nothing cou'd perſwade the King's Uncle the Duke of Orleans, to grace this Ceremony with his Preſence. He has declar'd, He will never come to the Court ſo long as Cardinal Mazarini is there.

Marſhal Turenne has receiv'd private Orders, to repair ſpeedily to his Army in Flanders. What the Deſign is, we are not certain. Some ſay, he is gone to ſurprize Gravelines, a City in Flanders, which was lately ſo ruin'd by the Blowing up of the Magazine, that it is not in a Condition to reſiſt the French, ſhould they aſſault it.

Others ſay, the King has commanded his General to lay Siege to Stenay, a City belonging to the Prince of Conde, a Place of Great Strength, and exquiſitely Fortify'd.

'Tis

'Tis reported, That Cardinal Mazarini holds a Correſpondence with the Governour of this Strong Hold: And that on this Ground it was he promis'd the King, on the Honour of his Purple, That if he would ſuffer his Army to lie down before it, it ſhould by ſuch a Day be deliver'd into his Hands.

The Duke of Lorrain, of whoſe Impriſonment at Antwerp, I inform'd Muſtapha Berber Aga, is now remov'd from thence, and ſent to Spain, from whence 'tis believ'd he whill never come back.

From the North the Poſt brings News, of the Reſignation which Chriſtina, Queen of Sueden, has made of her Crown to her Couſin, Prince Charles. They add, That ſhe caus'd a Crown to be made, with this Inſcription, FROM GOD, AND CHRISTINA; And, that ſhe plac'd this Crown on the Prince's Head with her own Hands, having before Abſolv'd all her Subjects from their Oaths of Fidelity to her.

The ſame Poſt alſo tells us, of a Mighty Army of Moſcovites, which are enter'd into Poland, deſtroying and laying deſolate where-ever they come. The pretended Cauſe of this Invaſion, is ſaid to be, a Diſguſt the Czar has taken at a certain Hiſtorian and Poet of Poland; Who in reciting the Wars between thoſe Nations, had made a Miſtake in the Genealogy of the Moſcovite Emperours, naming the Father for the Son. The Czar being inform'd of this, demanded the Head of the Writer, as an Atonement: Which being deny'd deny'd, he ruſh'd into the Territories of Poland, to revenge himſelf by Fire and Sword.

Theſe are the Actions of ſuch, as pretend to follow the Example of Jeſus, the Meſſias; Who commanded Men, To forgive Injuries, even as did our Holy Prophet; Yet they ſcruple not to accuſe us of what they themſelves are only Guilty. Thus, whilſt they are Chriſtians in Name, we ſhew by our Practice, that we are True Diſciples of the Venerable Jeſus.

Doubtleſs, all Men are Juſt or Wicked, by Nature. Every Mans Fate is Engraven on his Forehead. And neither the Precepts or Examples of Jeſus or Mahomet, can alter the Inclinations of thoſe, whoſe Stars have Sign'd 'em in their Nativity, with the Indelible Characters of Vice.

Paris, 30th. of the 6th. Moon,
of the Year, 1654.

LETTER XIV.

To Ggnet Oglou.

HItherto I have been in a Wilderneſs, or at leaſt I'll ſuppoſe it, wandring up and down, loſt and confounded in the Dark, without Sun, Star, Land-mark, or any Faithful Guide to direct me. What I ſhall I do in this Caſe? I am tyr'd with perpetual Rambling; and and reſt I dare not, neither can I, ſuch is my Uneaſineſs, even in the only Circumſtance which gives to other Men Repoſe.

Thus I diſcourſe with my ſelf when I am alone, and conſider my Preſent State as a Mortal. The Miſeries of this Life, are the Themes of my Firſt Contemplation: And 'tis but Reaſon it ſhould be ſo, becauſe we feel 'em every Moment. They touch our Senſe nearly, and afflict us with ſharp Pains. Yet they are but like the Sting of a Waſp, Violent for a Time, but laſt not long.

This Thought carries me farther, and puts me upon an Endleſs Meditation, what will befal me after I'm Dead. When I have contemplated all that I can run over a Thouſand Paths of Phancy, and track'd all the Footſteps of the Wiſe, or of ſuch as were eſteem'd ſo; ſtill I find my ſelf in a Deſert, more entangl'd than a Traveller loſt in the Foreſt of Hercynia, which extends from the moſt Northerly Part of Moſcovy, to ſome Provinces in the German Empire, and is reputed Five Hundred Leagues in Length.

In this bewilder'd Condition, I meet with many pretended Guides, One telling me this is the Way, Another that. But becauſe they do not agree in their Advice, I know not which to truſt: And am inclin'd to ſuſpect ſome for Cheats, and the Reſt for Fools, as much at a Loſs, if not more than my ſelf.

Permit me to diſcourſe with Freedom, my Dear Gnet, and let us unmask like Friends. What ſignifies all that the Imaum's and Mollahs

Iahs can ſay of Paradiſe and Hell, ſince none of 'em have been there to make an Experiment? Why ſhould we ſuffer our ſelves to be amus'd with Notions of Things, which, for ought we know, have no other Exiſtence, but in the Harangues of the Preachers, and the Phanſies of the Credulous?

Think not that I am going to perſwade thee to the Hereſy of the Muſerin, who deny the Being of a God. I tell thee, I am no Atheiſt. From Every Thing I behold, my Thought ſoon flies up to a Firſt Cauſe: And there 'tis daſh'd into a Thouſand Queries. This I lay as a Solid Foundation, All Things were not Always in the ſame State as they are Now. (My Experience demonſtrates to the Contrary.) But how much longer they have been otherwiſe, than my own Remembrance, I cannot be aſſur'd, but by the Confidence which I repoſe in People that are Older than my ſelf, and the Faith I give to Books. Both which agree in this, That they are guilty of Contradictions without number.

Thoſe that were born before me, and Liv'd in the Days of Sultan Mahomet III. tell me many Paſſages of his Reign, quite different from the Relations of others, who alſo Liv'd in thoſe Times, and remark'd the Tranſactions of their Age.

A like Diſagreement I find among Authors, who have committed to Writing, the Hiſtories of Former Times. 'Tis difficult to encounter with Two Men of the ſame Opinion, even as to Matters of Fact. Some take a Pride

in

in diſguizing the Truth; Whilſt others have not Skill to take off the Mask. There are a Sort of Perſons in the World, Men of Supine and Eaſie Judgments, Credulous, and not daring to call in Queſtion what has been tranſmitted to them from the Authority of Such and Such a Writer. They Superſtitiouſly revere as an Oracle, the Manuſcripts of a mortal Man like themſelves, and Subject to as many Frailties and Miſtakes. And all this, only becauſe they have been taught to do ſo from their Infancy: So forcible is the Influence of Education. Thus the Hebrews believe the Records of their Nation to be of Divine Original, though they want not Verbal Contradictions, and abound with Logical and Philoſophical Inconſiſtencies. But, that which is of Greateſt moment is, that neither they, nor any other Nation, no not even the Aſſyrian or Egyptian Records, come near the Immenſe Chronologies of the Chineſe and Indians. So that amidſt ſuch a Variety of Accounts, a Man knows not where to fix his Belief. But, whether the World be only Five or Six Thouſand Years old, or of a more Indefinite Antiquity, this is a ſure Maxim, That Something is Eternal. Even the Jews and Chriſtians, who deny the Eternity of Matter, and aſſert the Creation of the World out of NOTHING, in a Determin'd Period of Time, muſt of Neceſſity own, There was an Eternal, and Infinite Emptyneſs or Vacuity, which is the ſame as Moſes calls by the Name of NOTHING. Which will ſound as harſh in Philoſophy, as the Eternity of Matter does in their Divinity. Nay, if I miſtake not, 'tis of a worſe Conſequence, even in the Doctrins of Religion, to aſſert an Infinite Privation, or Want of Exiſtence, to be Coeternal with the Subſtantial God, who is Omnipotent, Living and Strong; than to affirm Matter it ſelf to be Coeternal with Him; Since This is an Actual Subſtance, and may with Reaſon be ſuppos'd, as a Neceſſary Emanation of his Power and Goodneſs; Whereas the Other, is a mere Naked Potentiality, a Non-Entity, as the Weſtern Philoſophers call it, and therefore can not be conceived to flow from the Divine Nature, which is Eſſential Life and Being. Yet in theſe Nice and Remote Speculations, I am Timorous, and dare not be Poſitive; leſt I ſhould prophane the Honour of that Sovereignly Good, who is the Breath of our Noſtrils. To ſpeak the Truth, I am Wavering in all Things, but this, That there is an Eternal Mind, Every-where Preſent, the Root and Baſis of All Things Viſible and Inviſible, whom we call Alla, the Support of Infinite Ages, the Rock and Stay of the Univerſe.

in

Let thou and I, Dear Friend, perſevere in Adoring that Superlative Eſſence of Eſſences, with Internal and Profound Devotion. Let our Thoughts be Pure, our Words Few, and thoſe full of Innocent and Grateful Flames. For aſſuredly, God delights not in the Babling of the Tongue.

As for the Reſt, let us live according to our Nature and Reaſon, as we are Men. For we we may believe, that the Indulgent Father of All Things, will accept us, if we ſquare our Actions according to this Rule, without aiming at the Perfection of Angels.

In a Word, let us love all of Human Race, and ſhew Juſtice and Mercy to the Brutes. For in ſo doing, we ſhall not be Unkind to our ſelves.

Paris, 13th of the 7th Moon, of the Year 1654. according to the Chriſtian Style.

The End of the Fourth Volume.

Books Written by Sir Roger L'Eſtrange, and printed for Joſeph Hindmarſh and Richard Sare.

1. FAbles of Eſop and other Eminent Mythologiſts, with Morals and Reflections, Folio.

2. Seneca's Morals, by way of Abſtract, the Fifth Edition, Octavo.

3. Select Colloquies out of Eraſmus Roterodamus; pleaſantly repreſen ing ſeveral Superſtitious Levities that were crept into the Church of Rome in his Days; the Second Impreſſion corrected and amended, with the Addition of Two Colloquies to the former, Octavo.

4. Tully's Offices in Three Books, turned out of Latin into Engliſh; the Fourth Edition corrected, Twelves.

5. A Guide to Eternity, extracted out of the Writings of the Holy Fathers and Ancient Philoſophers; written originally in Latin, by John Bona, and now done into Engliſh; the Third Edition.

The Genuine Epiſtles of the Apoſtolical Fathers, St. Barnabas, St. Ignatius, St. Clement, St. Polycarp, the Shepherd of Hermas, and the Martyrdoms of St. Ignatius and St. Polycarp, written by thoſe who were preſent at their Sufferings, being together with the holy Scriptures of the New Teſtament, a Compleat Collection of the moſt Primitive Antiquity for 150 Years after Chriſt; Tranſlated and Publiſhed with a Large Preliminary Diſcourſe, relating to the ſeveral Treatiſes here put together. By William Wake, D. D. Chaplain in ordinary to their Majeſties, and Preacher to the Honourable Society of Grays-Inn, Octavo. Price 5 s.

Humane Prudence, or the Art by which a Man may raiſe himſelf and Fortune to Grandeur; the Sixth Edition corrected and enlarged by the Authour. Theſe Two Laſt printed for R. Sare at Grays-Inn. Price 1 s. 6 d.

Mahmut the Turkish Spy

Etatis suæ 72

THE

Fifth Volume

OF

LETTERS

Writ by a

Turkiſh Spy,

Who lived Five and Forty Years, Undiſcover'd, at

PARIS:

Giving an Impartial Account to the Divan at Conſtantinople, of the moſt Remarkable Tranſactions of Europe; And diſcovering ſeveral Intrigues and Secrets of the Chriſtian Courts (eſpecially of that of France) continued from the Year 1654 to the Year 1682.

Written Originally in Arabick, Tranſlated into Italian, and from thence into Engliſh, by the Tranſlator of the Firſt Volume.

LONDON,
Printed for Joſeph Pindmarſh, againſt the Royal Exchange in Cornhill; and Richard Sare at Grays-Inn-Gate in Holborn, 1694.

TO THE READER.

Prefaces methinks, are ſo much like the Printed Bills, paſted upon the Booths in Bartholomew-Fair to give an Account of the Entertainment you are to expect within; that, were it not in pure compliance with cuſtom, one would forſwear writing any. But the World is humorous, and muſt be ſerved according to its own Faſhion. Every Thing's damn'd, that is not à-la-mode. And he that publiſhes a Book, without Civilly accoſting the Reader at the Beginning, is thought to intrench upon Good Manners.

To prevent all theſe Inconveniences, 'tis thought fit once more to ſay a Word or Two, not in praiſe of this Volume of Letters, (e'en let it take its Fortune as the other Four have done) but by way of Apology for ſome Things which may ſeem liable to Cenſure.

Some perhaps will be offended at the Zeal which appears in this Arabian, when he writes in Honour of the Mahometan Faith. Others will as much wonder at his Looſneſs and Indifference, his Doubtfulneſs of all Things: For, in ſome of his Letters, he appears a Great Sceptick, and confeſſes himſelf ſo.

Theſe Gentlemen ought to conſider, that his Style and Sentiments, are ſuited to the Quality of the Perſon to whom he writes. To his Intimate Friends, he unboſoms himſelf with Abundance of Frankneſs: But when he addreſſes to the Muftis, or other Grandees of the Port, he is Cautious and Reſerved.

It may be ſuppos'd, that he underſtood himſelf very well, or elſe he was not fit for that Employment in Paris. And, without Doubt having had his Education in the Seraglio, as he profeſſes, he was no Stranger to the Punctilio's of Addreſs us'd in the Turkiſh Court. It was his Policy and Intereſt, to appear a very Devout Mahometan, when he wrote to the Miniſters of State: And 'tis poſſible, he was ſo in Reality, or at leaſt perſuaded himſelf ſo at certain Seaſons. And yet this hinders not, but he might at other Times take the Liberty to deſcant on ſome Abſurdities in their Doctrine and Practice, when when he wrote to his Familiars, and was minded to converſe with Freedom.

If in ſome Points, he ſeems to give Credit to the Arabian Writers, who have treated of Egypt and its Antiquities; in others, he ſhews himſelf a Man not over-fond of Fables and Romances.

However, let his Opinions be what they will, and his Sentiments never ſo Extravagant in Matters of Speculation and Controverſy; ſo long as his Morals are ſound and good, there's no Occaſion to be Captious. We need not fear that any Chriſtian, or any Man of Sence will be Proſelited by his Letters, to a Religion which he himſelf, tho' profeſſing it, yet ſo often doubts of, and ridicules.

He ſpeaks very Honourably of Chriſt, and Impartially of Chriſtians, accuſing their Vices rather than their Doctrines, and appearing all along a Moderate Man in his Sentiments of Religion, and a Friend to Virtue and Reaſon. If he diſcovers ſome Failings, in being too Melancholy; conſider, that he was a Mortal like other Men. Howevr, Reader, admire his Untainted Loyalty, and Imitate it.

You will find in this Volume, True Hiſtory, with Variety of Solid Remarks. And not a few Secrets of Cardinal Mazarini, rini and Oliver Cromwel, Uncabineted: particularly, that Famous Intrigue carried on by Colonel Spintelet and his Confederates, to ſave Oſtend from being ſurprized by the French in the Year 1658, and to bubble Two of the ableſt States-men in Europe.

After all, aſſure thy ſelf, that the next Volume will contain more Illuſtrious Relations than any that has gone before. Where you will hear of an end put to the War between France and Spain, after it had laſted Five and Twenty Years; and the Marriage of Lewis XIV. with the Spaniſh Infanta; as alſo of an Univerſal Peace in Chriſtendom: The Reſtauration of Charles II. to his Crown and Kingdoms, after Twelve Years Exile in Foreign Countries, and Twelve ſeveral Revolutions of Government, here at Home. With many other Memorable and Important Events and Tranſactions in the World: As the dreadful Earthquake which overturned part of the Pyrenæan Mountains; the more deſtructive Plague which ſwept away almoſt a Hundred Thouſand People in London; and the deplorable Fire which conſumed the Greateſt Part of that Famous City, in the ſpace of Three Days.

You will there alſo find an Account of the

the Death of that Great Minister of State, Cardinal Mazarini: Of the Duke of Orleance, Uncle to the French King: Of the Dutchess of Savoy: Of Carolus Josephus, the Emperor's Brother: Of the Duke of Vendome: Of the Queen-mother of France, and of Philip IV. of King of Spain, with other Persons of Princely Quality.

For this Arabian was Careful to transmit to the Ottoman Port, Intelligence of all Things which were most Remarkable in Europe. And that his Letters might not seem tedious, he intermix'd Moral Reflexions, with some Maxims of Policy; Essays of Reason, and now and then a Touch of Philosophy. And if we may guess at the cause of his more abounding in these kind of Miscellany Discourses after the Year 1659, than he did before: It seems probable, that a General Peace about that time being establish'd in Europe, he had little else to write, but his Observations on the several States and Courts of Christian Princes, the Different Manners, Customs, and Laws of People; the Counsels and Intrigues of States-men: With such other Matters as occurred worthy of Notice.

If either in this Volume, or in those that are to come, he seems in any of his

Letters to alter his Opinion, and contradict his Former Sentiments; remember, 'tis no more than what the Greateſt Writers have done, who have lived to Old Age, as this Agent did. No Body is Ignorant of St. Auguſtine's Retractations, and Cornelius Agrippa's Vanity of Scienees; wherein thoſe Two Great Authors run counter to all that they had writ before. And 'twere eaſie to produce a Hundred Inſtances beſides.

In a Word, Reader, take in good Part the Tranſlator's Pains, who renders Things as he found 'em, without Altering or Corrupting the Sence of his Copy. Farewel.

A

TABLE

OF THE

LETTERS and Matters contained in this Volume.

VOL. V.

BOOK I.

LETTER I.

MAhmut the Arabian, and Vileſt of the Grand Signior's Slaves, to the Myſterious Eſad, Arbitrator of doubtful Problems, Prince of the Mufti's. p. 1.

He complains for Want of Fuller Inſtructions in ſeveral Caſes; and particularly deſires his Counſel as to the Faſt of Ramezan.

II. To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna. 6.

Remarks on the Death of the Roman King: with ſome Curious Epitaphs.

III. To Mahummed Hodgia, Venerable Eremit of the Cave replete with Wonders. 12.

Of

Of Mahmut's Infirmities: A Remarkable Story of Clearchus, a devout Man in Aſia.

IV. To the Kaimacham. 20

Of the Sieges of Stenay and Arras. A Notable Inſtance of Gallantry in the Gariſon of Merdin.

V. To Dgnet Oglou. 23

Mahmut acquaints him how he ſpends his Birth-day. With Reflexions on the Uſual Vanity of Mortals at ſuch Times.

VI. To the Selictar Aga or Sword-bearer to the Grand Signior. 27

Of the Surrender of Stenay, and Relief of Arras. Remarks on the Signs which went before the King of the Roman's Death. Of Queen Chriſtina's coming to Antwerp.

VII. To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Grand Signior's Cuſtoms at Conſtantinople. 31

He adviſes him to be frugal of Time, and not to ſpend it in Gaming. The Miſfortune of a Chineſe Captain.

VIII. To the Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottomen Empire. 37

He expoſtulates with him, about Kienan Baſha's Old Grudge, &c.

IX. To the Venerable Muſti. 40

Of

Of the Pope's Sickneſs, and Laſt Will. A Character of his Siſter-in-law, Donna Olympia. Of the War between the Moſcovites and Polanders. Of the Grand Signior's Loſſes by Sea.

X. To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Grand Signior's Cuſtoms. 44

He informs him of the arrival of his Mother Oucomiche, and his Couſin Iſouf, at Paris.

XI. To Adonai, a Jew, Priſoner in the Tower of Nona at Rome. 50

He reprehends his Immorality, for medling with the Religion of the Romans. Teaches him a Receipt to procure his Eſcape.

XII. To Mehemet, once an Eunuch-Page in the Seraglio, but now an Exile in Egypt at Grand Caire. 55

Of the Lawfulneſs of Wine. A Diſpute between Noah and the Devil about it. Of Joſeph's Priſon; the Land of Alphion; the Story of Hagar the Mother of Iſmael, and other Matters.

XIII. To Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa. 62

Of the Pope's Death; and of the Ambition of the Roman Clergy.

XIV. To the Kaimacham. 65

He blames Kiſur Dramelec, Secretary of the Nazarene Affairs, for not ſending him timely and good Intelligence.

Of

Of a Violent Plague in Muſcovy. Of Egyptians or Gypſies.

XV. To the ſame. 70.

Divers Opinions concerning the Original of the Gypſies. Of the Conclave at Rome, and of Cardinal de Retz.

BOOK II.

LETTER I.

TO Cara Hali, Phyſician to the Grand Signior. 75.

A Story of Helal, a Phyſician of Arabia. Of Avicen, and of Thabet Eb'n Abrahim.

II. To Aſis Baſſa. 85.

Of the Strange Puniſhment inflicted on a Deer-Stealer of Wirtemberg by the Elector of Saxony. A Story of an Arabian Captain.

III. To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna. 87.

More on the ſame Subject. Remarks on the Indians, and on the Law of Moſes.

IV. To Dgebe Nafir, Baſſa. 91.

Of the Sects and Diviſions among the Chriſtians. Particularly, of the Wars between the Catholicks and Proteſtants in Piedmont.

V. To William Vospel, a Recluse of Austria. 94.

Of the Sepulchre of King Childeric. Mahmut presents him with a Cabinet of Curious Antiquities.

VI. To the most Illustrious and Invincible Vizir Azim at the Port. 99.

Of a Secret Order given him by the Vizir; and the Necessity of a Turkish Embassadour in the French Court to carry on the Design.

VII. To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna. 103.

He advises him not to be too Religious, but to follow his Business chearfully.

VIII. To Mustapha Lulu Beamrilla, a Man of the Law. 105.

He argues against the false Notions of the Resurrection Common among Mahometans and Christians. Of the Apparition of Bones in Egypt.

IX. To Solyman, Kuslir Aga, Prince of the Black Eunuchs. 110.

Of the Advance of the Bassa of Aleppo to the Prime Vizirate.

X. To the most Illustrious Vizir Azem, at the Port. 113.

He Congratulates his New Dignity; and claims a Reward for having formerly accus'd him to the Divan, when he held held Correſpondence with the Venetians.

XI. To Mehemet, an Exil'd Eunuch, at Cairé in Egypt. 117
He ridiculés ſome Stories of the Egyptians, and relates in ſhort the Voyage of Domingo Gonſales to the Moon.
XII. To Zorneſan Muſtapha, Baſſa of the Sea. 121
He wiſhes him good Succeſs againſt the Venetians; a ſhort Character of that People. Of the Conqueſt of Jamaica by the Engliſh. A Diſcourſe of Oliver the Engliſh Protector. Of Leopoldus Ignatius Joſephus's being Elected King of the Romans.
XIII. To Peſteli Hali his Brother, Maſter of the Grand Signior's Cuſtoms. 126
An Encomium of his Couſin Iſouf. Of his being in Moſcovy. He deſires him to recommend Iſouf to Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa. Iſouf's Remarks on Egypt.
XIV. To Iſmael Kaidar, Cheik, a Man of the Law. 130
Of Queen Chriſtina's Rambles through Europe. With an Italian Libel which was found in the hands of Paſquin.
XV. To the ſame. 133
Of a New Star appearing in Europe. The Jews Opinion of it, and of their Meſſias. Of the Rebellion of the late Vizir Azem's Son. Of a Peace between the French

French and the English.

XVI. To Solyman, his Couſin, at Scutari. 138.
He reprehends his Diſcontentedneſs, and encourages him to follow his Trade, by ſeveral Eminent Examples. A Story of Diogenes and Plato.

XVII. To Melec Amet. 144.
Of a Moor Baptiz'd in Paris. Of the Ottoman Friar in Malta. And of Don Philippo, Son of the Dey of Tunis. Of Cardinal Mazarini's Trick to hinder Suedeland and Brandenburgh from making a League againſt King Caſimir.

XVIII. To Sedrec Al' Girawn, Chief Treaſurer to the Grand Signior. 149.
He Congratulates his New Honour. Of Kienan Baſſa's being found by the Tartars on a Dunghill in Muſcovy, when a Child. He deſcants on the late Sedition at Conſtantinople.

XIX. To the ſame. 156.
How Mahmut's Chamber was ſearch'd, and the Method he took to ſecure his Box of Letters.

BOOK III.

LETTER I.

TO Dgnet Oglou. 165.
He diſcourſes concerning Chance, and the Origin of Evil. Of Deiſts in Europe. And of the Sincere Fraternity among the Ancient Arabians.

II. To the Nazin Eſchref, or Prince of the Emirs at the Port. 172.

Of

Of a Terrible Plague broke out in Rome, Naples, and the Adjacent Parts. Of the Loss of Valenciennes to the Spaniards. Of Adonai's Death at Rome.

III. To Melec Amet. 176.

Of a Great Chasme or Breach made in the Earth not far from Paris.

IV. To Zornesan Mustapha, Beglerbeg of Erz'ram. 177

He Congratulates his Retreat from the Toils and Perils of the Seraglio. Reflections on the Authors of the late Troubles at Constantinople.

V. To the most Renown'd and most Illustrious Vizir Azem at the Port. 181.

Mahmut Congratulates his Assumption to this Dignity. Presents him with the Pictures of the French King, Cardinal Mazirini, Queen of Sueden, and others: As also with Twelve Watches of his own Workmanship. Of Queen Christina's Entertainment at the French Court.

VI. To Abrahim Eli Zeid, Hogia, Preacher to the Seraglio. 186.

He descants on the Covenant of Mahomet with the Christians. Some Prophetick Passages of Mahomet. A Story of a Black Image in Spain.

VII. To Murat, Bassa. 191.

Of the Death of the King of Portugal, and the

the Coronation of his Son. Of Count Harcourt's playing Faſt and Looſe with the French King. And of the Mareſchal de la Ferte's Bravery.

VIII. To Hebatolla Mir Argun, Superior of the Convent of Derviſes at Cogni in Natolia. 194.

He condoles the Death of Bedredin his Predeceſſor: Sends him the True Effigies of the Meſſias; With a ſhort Hiſtory of John the Baptiſt.

IX. To Selim Al' Moſel, Venerable Imaum of the Moſch of Santa Sophia. 201.

Of Columbus the Firſt Diſcoverer of America. And of the Deſtruction of Lima and Calao, Two Cities in Peru, by an Earthquake and Fire from Heaven.

X. To Muſtapha, Baſſa. 206.

Of Iſmael Bir Couli Can, the Perſian Embaſſador at the Port.

XI. To Mehemet, an Exil'd Eunuch in Egypt. 210.

He acquaints him with the Death of Soliman the Kuſſir Aga. Of the Antiquity of the Pyramids. King Saurid's Viſion. Mother of Aclimon the High Prieſt. He aſſerts the Eternity of the World.

XII. To the moſt Venerable Mufti. 220.

He congratulates his Aſſumption to that Sacred Dignity: Propoſes the Advantage of Tranſlating Hiſtories into the Turkiſh Language. And diſcourſes of the Ancient Arabians and Scythians.

XIII. To the Kaimacham. 226.

Of the German Emperor's Death: The Ill State

State of the Empire: The Factions of the Electors; and Cardinal Mazarini's Aims.

XIV. To Raba Mahomet, General of the Ottoman Forces, at his Camp near Adrianople. 229

Of the Affairs of Babylon, and the Persians. Of the Troubles in Europe. Of a Terrible Eruption of Fire from Mount Ætna in Sicily.

XV. To Cara Hali, Physician to the Grand Signior. 234

He descants on the Succession of Abu-Becre, Omar and Othman, the First Caliphs. And seems to favour Hali, the Prophet of the Persians.

XVI. To Cara Mustapha, Bassa. 238

Of the Isle of Tenedos; and the Trojan Wars. Of Ajax's Folly in Killing himself. Of Seventeen Spanish Ships of War burnt and sunk by the English under the Command of Admiral Blake. With other Matters.

XVII. To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna. 243

Of the Quarrel between the Elector of Bavaria and Prince Palatine, about the Vicarship of the Empire.

XVIII. To Melech Amet. 247

Of Trances and Extasies. A Story of Saleh, an Indian Physician.

XIX. To the Kaimacham. 252

Of

Of the Surrender of Montmedi to the French, and the Speech of the Governor to the King. Of the Turks Ill Successes in Candia.

XX. To Nathan Ben Saddi a Jew at Vienna. 258

He relates in short the Life and Miracles of Mahomet.

XXI. To Dicheu Hussein, Bassa. 264

Of a Quarrel between the French and Spanish Ambassadors at the Hague. With other Intelligence from Denmark, Portugal, Munster, and the German Court.

XXII. To Dgnet Oglou. 267

He complains of his Friends Reservedness and Silence. Rebukes the Trivial Controversies of the Mussulmans. And denies that God has a Body or Passions like us.

XXIII. To the Aga of the Janizaries. 273

Of the Suedes taking Fredericks-Ode by Storm. An Interview of the King of Poland and Elector of Brandenburgh. Of the taking of Mardike by the French and English.

BOOK IV.

LETTER I.

TO Cara Hali, Physician to the Grand Signior. 277

He

He discourses of Free-Will and Predestination. A Digression, occasioned by a sudden Tempest of Thunder and Lightning.

II. To Mustapha, Bassa. 283.
Of Queen Christina's Sentencing one of her Domesticks to Death. And the Censure of the Civilians thereupon.

III. To Mustapha, Berber Aga. 286.
He acquaints him with the Birth of a Young Prince of Spain, and the Extraordinary Magnificences exhibited by the Spanish Embassadour at the Hague on this Occasion.

IV. To Pesteli Hali, his Brother, Master of the Grand Signior's Customs, at Constantinople. 289.
Of his Mother Oucomiche; and of Isouf his Cousin. Of the Pyramids and Mummies; With some Remarks on the Nile

V. To the Kaimacham. 297.
Of the Sentence pronounc'd by the Venetians against Girolamo Loredan, and Giovanni Contarini. Examples of Justice on Traytors. Of great Innundations in Germany and Flanders.

VI. To Solyman, his Cousin, at Constantinople. 301.
He expostulates with him about his being too Religious. Several Opinions of Philosophers concerning the Soul.

VII. T

VII. To Afis, Baſſa. 306.
Of an Interview between the Kings of Denmark and Suedeland: And the Peace that enſued.
VIII. To the Mufti. 309.
He acquaints him with the Project of a certain Jeſuite, to reform the State of Chriſtendom.
IX. To Abdel Melec Muli Omar. 315.
He relates in Short his Education, and the Method of his Studies in Sicily. A Word or Two of Porphyry.
X. To Murat, Baſſa. 320.
Of the taking Dunkirk by the French, and the putting it into the Hands of the Engliſh. Of the French King's Illneſs and Recovery.
XI. To Mohammed, the Eremite of Mount Uriel in Arabia. 323
He diſcourſes of his own Paſſions and Vices. With ſomething of his Virtues.
XII. To Achmet Padiſhami Culligiz, Baſſa. 330.
He contragulates his Succeſſion to Darniſh Mehemet, Baſſa. Of the Election of a New German Emperor. The Death of Oliver; and the French Deſign on Oſtend.
XIII. To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Grand Signior's Cuſtoms, at at Constantinople. 338.

Of the Artick Regions, and the Nature of Cold. Of the Works which the Northern People build upon the Ice. Of the Funeral Monuments of Ancient Hero's.
XIV. To Zeidi Alamanzi, a Merchant of Venice. 343.
He recommends to him Fidelity: And gives him a Short Account of his Life.
XV. To the Kaimacham. 345.
Of the Jealousie of the Venetians towards Strangers. A General Character of the Italians. A Comparison of them with the French.
XVI. To William Vospel, a Recluse of Austria. 350.
Of a Street in Paris, call'd the Street of Hell. Remarks on the Nature of Incorporeal Beings.
XVII. To the Venerable Ibrahim, Cadilesquer of Romeli. 353
Of the Interview between Cardinal Mazarini, and Dom Louis de Haro, the Spanish Minister, in Order to a Peace.
XVIII. To Musu Abul Yahyan, Alfaqui, Professor of Theology at Fez. 355.
Of the Zune, or Book of Doctrine. Of the Piety of Omar Eb'n Abdil Azis, the Ninth Caliph.

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. V.

BOOK I.

LETTER I.

Mahmut the Arabian, and Vileſt of the Grand Signior's Slaves, to the Myſterious Eſad, Arbitrator of Doubtful Problems, Prince of the Mufti's.

WHEN I firſt came to Paris, my Inſtructions were not ſo Full and Particular, as to direct me in all Emergencies. A great many Things were left to my own Conduct and Prudence, both in Civil and Religious Matters. So that if I have made any falſe Steps, I hope 'twill be Excuſable; in Regard, 'tis not ſo much my Fault, as that of the Miniſters who reſide at the Auguſt Port. I have often addreſs'd to them, deſiring Supplemental Rules and Cautions in ſome Peculiar Caſes which I propos'd: But they have been very ſparing of their Counſels. 'Tis true indeed, about Five Years ago, I receiv'd ſome Particular Orders from the then Vizir Azem, and the Kaimacham, as alſo from the Sanctity: Wherein I was commanded to write with all Freedom to the Grandees. This, with the other Directions, has been of great Uſe to me. It has arm'd me with freſh Courage, and remov'd the Melancholy Apprehenſions I had of ſome Mens Revenge, whoſe Vices I reprov'd. Praiſe be to God, King of the Day of Judgment, I have accus'd no Man wrongfully. Yet I was full of Fears, even in the Performance of my Duty: Knowing, that Mortals Generally love to have their Faults Conceal'd, and purſue thoſe with Malice, who diſcover or reprehend 'em. But now, all my Fears in that Kind are vaniſh'd. Yet, I have Scruples of another Nature, which none but the Infallible Guide of the Faithful can diſperſe.

Ever ſince I have reſided here, I have been preciſe in obſerving all the Precepts of our Holy Law, ſo far as conſiſted with the Security and Succeſs of my Commiſſion. For I have been forc'd to leap over many Lies and Falſe Oaths, to conceal my ſelf. I have likewiſe done Abundance of other Irregular Things, to promote more the Cauſe I am engag'd in, For all which, thou haſt vouchſafed me a Diſpenſation. There remains One Thing, in which thy Advice is Neceſſary.

I have been hitherto Punctual in keeping the Faſt of Ramezan, at the Time appointed to all Muſſulmans. Which, thou knoweſt, falls Earlier by Eleven Days every Year, than it did the Year before. So that in the Space of Four and Thirty Years, it paſſes through all the Four Seaſons. Now this Succeſſive Variation of the Great Faſt, cauſing it ſometimes to fall at the very Times of the moſt ſolemn Feſtivals among the Nazarenes, ſuch as that which they call their Chriſtmas, which is a Feaſt of Thirteen Days; I fear leſt I may be taken Notice of, ſhould I, by Celebrating the Ramezan at thoſe Times, contradict the Univerſal Practice of all the Franks, and ſtart Suſpicions in thoſe with whom I converſe, to my Diſadvantage and Ruine.

To thee therefore, who art the Wiſeſt of the Wiſe, I fly for Counſel in this Exigency: Beſeeching thee, to dictate plainly what I am to do

I know, that the Sick, or Wounded, or Travellers, are Diſpens'd with, if they Violate the Sacred Moon. At which Time, the Gates of Paradiſe are Open'd, and Inviſible Favours are done to the Devout Obſervers of this Precept: Whilſt the Avenues of Hell are barricado'd, and all the Devils Chain'd up from appearing abroad, or doing any Miſchief in the World. I ſay, I am not Ignorant of the Indulgence which is given to Men under ſuch

Circumſtances; provided they ſatisfie the Law, by keeping the Faſt at ſome other Seaſon, more agreeable to their Health, or other Neceſſities. And thus far I cou'd have ſilenc'd the Alarms of my own Conſcience, without moleſting thee: Knowing, that a Muſſulman is always allow'd this Liberty in a Foreign Country, much more in a Region of Infidels.

But that which I aim at, is to be inform'd, Whether, to put the better Diſguiſe upon my ſelf, and more efficaciouſly to proſecute the Intereſt of the Grand Signior, I may not always Celebrate this Faſt, at the preciſe Time that the Chriſtians keep their Lent? For then I ſhould paſs unſuſpected, and no Man wou'd take me for any other, than a Chriſtian and a Catholick. Nay, my Manner of Daily Faſting at that Time, wou'd raiſe me a Conſiderable Credit among the Chriſtians that know me. They would cry me up for a Saint, or a very Holy Man. For the Faſt of the Chriſtians is a Feaſt, in Compariſon with the Rigorous Abſtinence of the Muſſulmans. Thoſe indeed refrain all Sorts of Fleſh, but they load their Tables with Variety of Fiſh and other Dainties; neither have they Patience to tarry for their Repaſt beyond the Mid-Day. Whereas, the Muſſulmans taſte of Nothing during the Ramezan, till the Sun is gone down, and the Stars appear. No, not even in the parching Deſarts of Arabia, where Men are ready to periſh of Thirſt. Yet no Man will extend his Hand to the Water-Pot, to refreſh himſelf in thoſe Unſpeakable Agonies, till the Shadow of the Earth is advanc'd into the Higher Region of the Air, and has baniſh'd the leaſt Glimmerings of the Sun. When therefore the Franks ſhall ſee me Faſt after this Auſtere Faſhion in their Lent, they will ſay, I am a very Mortify'd Man, and a Devout Catholick: For, they judge altogether by the Out-ſide. So, if any Danger ſhould threaten me, I ſhould find Friends among the Zealots: And the Indifferent, wou'd not appear my Enemies: But the Wicked, whoſe Black Guilt has render'd 'em a Terror to themſelves, as well as an Abomination to others, wou'd ſtand in fear of me. Thus, on all Hands, a Way wou'd be open for me, to eſcape a Diſcovery of the Secrets committed to my Charge.

Earth

'Twould be much more to my Satisfaction, if I could with Safety Celebrate this Faſt, in the very Moon wherein the Alcoran was brought down from Heaven, as all Good Muſſulmans Generally do. But I am taught, not to betray, or ſo much as hazard the Affairs of my Great Maſter, for a mere Nicety or Punctilio of Religion. God is the Merciful of the Merciful, And it is his Will, that the Empire of the True Faithful, ſhould be extended where-ever the Moon or the Sun ſhine on Earth. f

Great Oracle of the Muſſulmans, Doctor o Faith and Verity, it is in thy Power to confirm or ſhake my Reſolution in this Point. For, from thy Sentence, there is no Appeal.

Paris, 5th of the 7th Moon,
of the Year 1654.

LETTER II.

To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna.

THou Informeſt me, that the King of the Romans is dead, and that divers Prodigies happen'd about the Time of his Expiring. Whilſt others report, That the German Emperour himſelf died the 9th of the laſt Moon. However, I ſhall tranſmit thy Advice to the Shining Port; not truſting to the Uncertain Intelligence of Fame.

Kings and Emperours muſt reſign up their Breath, as well as Other Mortals. 'Tis a Tribute we all owe to Nature, who will be paid, one Time or other. Neither has ſhe ever exempted any from the Common Lot, ſave Enoch, Elias, and Jeſus the Son of Mary. Theſe were Holy Prophets, Perfect Saints, and void of Original Sin; and therefore receiv'd an Indulgence. Thô thoſe of your Nation, and the Chriſtians believe, That the laſt of theſe Three died on a Croſs.

As for all others, they have either been diſſolv'd by Sickneſs, or ſnatch'd away by ſudden Death; Some by an Inviſible Dart from Heaven; Others by the Ruder Hand of Mortals like themſelves; Millions by the Sword and Spear, and Ten Millions by the ſwifter and more Unavoidable Stroke of the Arrow and and Bullet. Whilſt not a few have receiv'd their Death, from the very Elements which ſupported their Life. An Unruly Fire has crumbled ſome into their Firſt Atomes, and mingl'd their Aſhes with thoſe of their Houſes and Beds of repoſe: Whilſt Water, a Contrary Principle, has quench'd the Vital Flame in others. There is but One way to enter into this Life; but the Gates of Death, and the Inviſible State are without Number. And the Greateſt Monarch may as well fall by the prick of a Thorn, as by the Edge of a Sword. Every time I ſwallow my Meat, I remember the Fate of him who was choak'd by a Grain of Pepper; And that of Anacreon the Poet, who was ſtrangl'd by the Stone of a Raiſin.

Yet I am not ſolicitous in Chuſing or Avoiding Particular Deaths; knowing that no Human Counſel, can prevent the Decrees of Deſtiny. It rather pleaſes me to think (ſuch is my Ambition) that by whatſoever Method I am ſent to the Grave, there I ſhall be Equal to the Alexanders, Cæſars, Timurlengs, and the Greateſt Mortals. For there is no Diſtinction of Noble and Vulgar, in that Region of Anarchy, where all Ranks are levell'd in the Duſt: As Diogenes told Alexander the Great; when the Monarch, beholding that Philoſopher in a Charnel-Houſe, his Eyes attentively fix'd on the Bones of the Dead which lay in Heaps, ask'd him, What he was doing? To whom Diogenes reply'd, I am looking for thy Father Philip's Bones, but cannot diſtin- guiſh 'em from thoſe of his Slaves. Some ſuch Thought as this, might perhaps firſt occaſion the Cuſtom of writing Epitaphs on the Sepulchres of Eminent Perſons. Among which I have read ſome made by the Entomb'd themſelves, whilſt they were on this ſide the Grave; and for their ſingular Fancy, were thought worthy to be Recorded by Hiſtorians. Such as this.

I Sabbas of Milan, by Blood a Caſtilian, Friar and Knight of Jeruſalem, wiſh a happy Reſurrection to my Aſhes. While I was alive among Mortals, a little ſatisfy'd me. Now I am dead, and alone in my Grave, I am content with leſs. I neither knew my ſelf what I was; nor do thou enquire. Traveller, whoever thou art, if thou be Pious, pray for me, and paſs on. Farewel, and live mindful of Death. Living, I provided this Epitaph, knowing I muſt die:

The Birth and Life of Mortals, are nothing but Toil and Death.

Such

Such another was that of Heliodorus, a Moor: who caus'd himself to be Bury'd near to the Pillars of Hercules, with this Inscription on his Tomb.

I Heliodorus, a Mad Carthaginian, have commanded by my last Will and Testament, that I shou'd be Interr'd here in this fartheſt Angle of the World: To make Experiment, whether any Man more Mad than my self, wou'd Travel thus far to visit my Sepulchre.

But that which Semiramis caus'd to be Inscrib'd on her Tomb, was a perfect Satyr on the Living. It was this.

I Semiramis, whilst Living, never was in need of Money; yet was always Compaſſionate to the Poor. Now I'm Dead, my Grave is my Treaſury. If any of Royal Race be in Want, let him open this Dormitory, and he ſhall find a Supply.

When Darius Conquer'd Babylon, and was told of this Epitaph; ſtung with Avarice, he caus'd the Sepulchre to be open'd, in his own Preſence. But inſtead of Money, they only found a Tablet of Braſs, with theſe words Engraven on it.

My Epitaph is a Riddle. This is the Interpretation. I never was Covetous; onely ſuch are Poor, theſe I pity; and have therefore provided this Leſſon as a Treaſure, for the Man, who for Lucre ſhall preſume to violate my Tomb.

If thou wilt rob the Living, forbear to Plunder the Dead; leſt they bring thee to Shame, as I have done.

Thou telleſt me, that the Emperour ſeems not to be much griev'd for the Death of his Son, the Roman King. Perhaps his Sorrow is ſo great, that it cannot find a Vent. Violent and Uncommon Paſſions, are apt to ſmother within the Heart, whilſt only ſmaller Griefs break forth in Tears.

It was a Memorable Saying of a certain King of Egypt, who was overcome by Cambyſes byſes the Perſian Monarch, and taken Captive with all his Children; when the Cruel Conquerour, to ſport himſelf in the Miſery of his Royal Priſoners, and inſult o'er the Vanquiſh'd Egyptians, firſt caus'd the Daughter of the Captive King, to be employ'd in the meaneſt Offices with the common Slaves, before her Father's Face: Then his Son to be bridl'd and curb'd like a Horſe, with a vaſt Burden ty'd on his Back. At both which diſmal Spectacles, the Poor Egyptian Monarch ſhed not one Tear: But when he ſaw one that had formerly been his Servant, reduc'd to great Poverty, he wept bitterly. Cambyſes asking him the Reaſon, Why he ſeem'd ſo Inſenſible of his Childrens Calamity, and yet was touch'd with ſo tender a Grief for the Misfortune of a Stranger? He anſwerd, Son of Cyrus, the Deſolation of my Family afflicts me with ſo profound a Sorrow, That no Tears can expreſs it: But my Compaſſion to this diſtreſs'd Servant, being not ſo Violent, eaſily breaks forth in Tears.

Nathan, I wiſh thee neither Extreme Joy nor Grief; for they are both hurtful to the Heart.

Paris 1ſt. of the 8*th. Moon, of the Year*, 1654.

LETTER

LETTER III.

To Mahummed, Hodgia, Venerable Eremit of the Cave replete with Wonders.

WHen I contemplate thy Life so full of Innocence, and void of the very Shadow of Vice, I am like a Serpent rowz'd from his Sleep, by a Breeze of cooler Wind, or the Noise of a Traveller on the Road. My Soul starts; and unfolding all the drowzy Curls of Sensuality, stretches it self at full Length. Surpriz'd and asham'd of its own Lethargy, it swiftly retires into any dark Corner, to cover it self from the Light of its own Faculties, and from the brighter Reflections of thy Spirit, which penetrate like the Beams of the Sun.

I do not presently curse my self, the Hour of my Nativity, my Friends that have flatter'd me into an erronious Belief of my own Virtue, or my Enemies that have provok'd me, and by various Trains entangl'd me in the Paths of Vice. Such Malediction, onely becomes the Mouth of a Jew or a Libertine: For, we arrive at Perfection, not by Cursing the Evil, but by Imitating the Good.

I rather bless the Hour of Conjunction, the Influence of my better Stars, and the Constellations of a more propitious Horoscope; The Moment ment when I had the Honour to touch the Sand before thy Feet with my Lips, in that Sanctuary of Holiness. O thou Patron of Good Intentions, Sincere Reformer of Human Errors, Refulgent Pattern of the Pious, Glory of the Wise, most Excellent of the Excellent, Phœnix of the Age!

Praise be to God, the First and the Last: Peace to the Angels who stand round his Throne, and to the Prophets who rejoyce in his Presence. An Universal Jubilee to all the Inhabitants of Paradise: And Eternal Felicity to the Saint of the Desart on Earth, whose Soul is Expanded wide as the Firmament.

I am ravish'd and full of Ecstasies, because there is not found thy Equal on this Side the Clouds. When thou shalt be cropt from the Earth, the Mirror of Mortals, the Flower of Humane Nature is gone. The Trees of the Wilderness will lament thy Death, by whose Presence they flourish'd, and brought forth their Fruit in due season. At thy Departure, the Grass of the Field will fade and wither, conscious that thy Merits drew down the Rain and Dew of Heaven, to render Arabia fertile in Herbage.

The Beasts will languish for want of Pasture, and Men will bewail the Dearth of the Land; knowing that the Life of the Just causes the Ground to produce a Plenteous Harvest.

But no Mourning will be like that of Mahmut, who can boast of thy particular Friendship;

ſhip; and in loſing thee, will be as if he were depriv'd of the Light of the Sun, or the Morning Air, or the Benefit of Fire and Water. For, ſo thy Favours are refreſhing, as the Elements, without which we cannot live.

Therefore, as oft as I turn my Face to the City Sanctified by the Birth of our Holy Prophet, I ſend up Vows to Heaven for thy Long Life; beſeeching God, for the Univerſal Good of Nature, to continue the Man on Earth, the Veſtment of whoſe Soul, is compoſed of Rays darted from all the Fortunate Stars.

Tell me, O thou Holieſt of the Holy Ones in the Eaſt, Favourite of the Angels, ſecret Friend of the Eternal, Envoy Extraordinary from the Omnipotent, Agent Incognito for the Court of Heaven! Tell me by what Chart I ſhall ſteer my courſe through this Life, Uncertain as the Sea, and toſs'd with as many Tempeſts. I find in my ſelf, manifeſt Inclinations to Virtue, and whatſoever is Good: Yet I ſtill miſtake the Methods of attaining my End. I would fain be perfectly Pious, Juſt and Wiſe, but know not how to compaſs my Deſign. One Event or other, ſtill fruſtrates my Labour: Either a Friend or an Enemy, a Relation or a Stranger, Caſualties Without, or my Paſſions Within, ſtop me in the Beginning, or the Midſt of the Glorious Career, the Race which cannot be run without noble Agonies.

Then I take Breath, and rowzing my ſelf with freſh Vigours, I cheerfully addreſs to the the Combat, which crowns the Victor with Immortality. My Courage is Great, my Resolution fix'd, at the First setting out: I gain Ground on a sudden, the Wheels of my Chariot are for a Time like those of the Sun, whose Momentary Advances are not perceiv'd by Mortals. But before I get half way to the Meridian, some unskilful Phaeton, an Erroneous Thought, or a giddy Passion, overthrows me. Either Old Habits or New Temptations, hinder me from gaining the Prize, in the Olympicks of Virtue.

Thus, often foil'd, I retire with Shame and Weakness: And finding no Redress within, I fly to thee, who art Created a Director of the World.

'Twill be an Offence to make Repetitions, and ask thy Counsel again: I will henceforth endeavour to follow thy Example, which is certainly the most Correct Rule of a Religious Life. But then I cannot serve the Grand Signior in this Post. Resolve my Doubts. Is it Lawful for me to abandon my Duty, and retire into a Desart? If not, I will erect a Solitude in the midst of this populous City, and build an Hermitage in my own Heart. If I cannot arrive at the Perfection I aim at, I will at least endeavour to be as Good as I can. There is a Religious Dexterity, by which a Man may in the midst of Worldly Business, make to himself Parks of Innocence, and walk free from the General Contagion of Mortals. If I cannot perform any Eminent Good, I will take care to abstain from Enormous Evils:

Neither

Neither will I commit the Least, without a Good Intention; which I am assured by the Mufti, sometimes Sanctifies a Bad Action. If I lye or forswear my self, it shall be to serve my Great Master. If I dissemble my Religion, and Counterfeit a Christian; I will propose to my self the greater Advantage of the Mussulman Faith. Thus, some Higher End, shall always direct my Intention and Performances.

But if thou shalt tell me after all, That this is not the way to Paradise, I will forsake all Worldly Interest, wherein I find so many Intanglements, and take up my Residence in some humble Cave, or Cleft of a Rock, or Hollow of a Tree, where I will spend the rest of my Days, in Contemplating the First Essence, and all that flows from it: I will bid a Final Adieu to this Perfidious Age, to the Vain Generation of Mortals that live in it, to whose Converse I shall have Reason to prefer that of the Beasts, who are far more Innocent, and less debauch'd than Men. Even Lyons and Tygers in the utmost Fury of their Hunger, abstain from preying on those of their Own Kind. Man is the only Cannibal, who devours his Brother, and greedily swallows down the Blood of him, who bears the same Image as himself.

I speak not of the Ancient Scythians, Massagetes or Tartars, nor of the more Modern Salvages in America, who stuff'd their greedy Paunches with Human Flesh. Their Barbarism has crept by Transmigration, into the most moſt Civiliz'd Empires and States; and is not the Leſs Cruel, becauſe it has chang'd its Form.

Nor do I tax the more excuſable Epicuriſm of thoſe, who ranſack all the Elements for Dainties, whoſe Tables are loaded with the ſlaughter'd Carcaſſes of Birds, Beaſts, and Fiſhes; their Houſes polluted with an Extravagant Profuſion of the Blood of thoſe Creatures, which the Eternal Mind Form'd to Live, and Enjoy the Fruits of the Earth, as well as our ſelves.

But I accuſe the Oppreſſors of Men, thoſe Cannibals in Diſguiſe, whoſe very Bread is mingled with the Marrow of the Poor; and their greater Delicacies are Ragoo's, compounded of the Blood of Widows and Orphans: Whilſt they ſtarve and ruine whole Families, to ſupport a Needleſs Grandeur, a Momentary Pomp, which vaniſhes almoſt as ſoon as it appears.

Yet theſe Men think to pacifie Heaven, by building Magnificent Temples and Oratories; by entailing their Eſtates to Convents and Hoſpitals: As if the Omnipotent were to be brib'd; or took Pleaſure in Gifts, which are but the Fruits of Robbery and Injuſtice. Can the Sacrifices of Infidels be more Acceptable, becauſe they are made on Altars of Gold? Or even the Prayers of Muſſulmans, in that they are breath'd out in Moſques, built of the fineſt Marble, craſted over with Precious Stones, and adorned with Carpets and Hangings of the Richeſt Tiſſues and Brocades? The Ancient Pagans can inſtruct us better. Thou

Thou wilt not think me tedious, if I relate a Passage which just comes into my Mind; Of a Certain Great Man in Asia, who possess'd vast Herds of Cattle, and was accustomed to make Magnificent Oblations to the Gods. This Grandee once made a Pilgrimage to Delphos, Famous in those Days, for the Oracle of Apollo. He carried with him a Hundred Bulls, whose Horns were enchas'd in Gold, being spurr'd on with Extraordinary Devotion, and designing to do a singular Honour to the God. When he arrived at the Place, puff'd up with his Costly Presents, and the Flatteries of his Attendants; he boldly approach'd the Temple, thinking no Man on Earth more worthy of the God's Friendship than himself; demanding of the Pythoness (for so they call'd the Woman, who perform'd the Office of Priesthood there) Who among all Mortals made the most acceptable Sacrifices, and departed with the Greatest Blessing from the Oracle? (for he presumed, the Preheminence would be granted to himself:) When she answered, That one Clearchus of Methydrium, was the most devout, and dear to the Gods of all Men.

Astonish'd above Measure at this unexpected Reply, the vain Bigot resolv'd to find out this Man, and learn of him what Method he took to please the Divinity. He hastens therefore to Methydrium: And when he first came within View of it, he despis'd the Meanness of the Place, judging it impossible, That one Man, or all the Town, could be able to present the Gods with more Magnificent Oblations than than he. Having found out Clearchus, he ask'd him, What Sacrifices he us'd to make to Apollo? To whom Clearchus replyed, "I am a Poor Man, and when I go to Delphos, "I carry neither Silver nor Gold, but only a "Basket of Fruits, the Best that my Farm "affords, which I freely offer to the Powers "which Govern All Things, and from whom I "receive whatsoever I enjoy. Moreover, I "keep the Appointed Holy Days; and my "Poorer Neighbours go Chearful from my "Table. I never Kill'd any Thing: Nor have "I done to Another, that which I would not "have done to my self. I pray to Jupiter every "Morning before the Sun ariſes, and at Night "when he goes down. I keep my ſelf and my "Cottage clean. In all Things elſe, I live like "the Beaſts, that is, according to Nature.

Thou wilt perceive by this, O Pious Eremit, that Simplicity and Innocence, are the moſt Acceptable Sacrifices to the Supreamly Merciful: And, that the moſt High God, takes no Pleaſure in the Smoke of Burnt-Offerings, or the Pompous Addreſſes of the Great; but only in the Pure Flames of a Devout Heart; the Integrity of a Juſt Man, void of Deceit and Guile.

Thou, Illuſtrious Mahumed, art the Perſon in whom theſe Things are verify'd. May God ſhelter thee with his Mercies, to the Hour of Tranſmigration, and beyond the Laſt Flight of Time.

Paris, 1ſt. of the 8th Mon. of the Year 1654.

LET-

LETTER IV.

To the Kaimacham.

THere are Two Actions, which take up all the Discourse at Present. One is the Siege of Stenay, a Strong Town in Flanders, before which the French Army is newly laid down. The other, is the Investing of Arras by the Spaniards.

'Tis the Presence of many Illustrious Personages, that renders both these Sieges considerable. In the French Camp are present, the King, Cardinal Mazarini, and all the Grandees of the Court. In the Spanish are Arch-Duke Leopold, the Prince of Conde, Francis Duke of Lorrain, with others of Prime Quality.

They are very Vigorous on both Sides, in pressing and defending these Two Places; as if the Fate of both Kingdoms, were now at Stake. In my Opinion, France runs the Greatest Hazard: For, if the Spaniards should prove Successful in what 'tis said they have resolv'd upon, that is, the Relief of Stenay; If they should give Battel, and get the Victory, a Way would be open for them to penetrate into the Bowels of France. And 'tis thought, many Towns in this Kingdom would open their Gates to them, whilst the Prince of Conde is at the Head of their Army, who does all Things in the Name of the French King: Even ven his Rebellion it ſelf, is maſqu'd under the Specious Title, Of taking up Arms to reſcue the Captive King from the hands of Mazarini and his Adherents, A pretty way of Seducing the People from their Obedience. The Pariſians, and indeed all the French, are divided into Cabals and Parties; ſome eſpouſing the Prince of Conde's Intereſt, whilſt others manifeſt an incorruptible Loyalty to their Sovereign. I approve the Morals of the Latter, yet privately rejoyce at the Treaſons of the Former, wiſhing their Inteſtine Quarrels may continue till the Day of the Earthquake.

Eliachim the Jew follows the Court, which rather ought now to be call'd the Camp. His Private Affairs call him that way. From him I receive frequent Advice of the moſt Important Matters in that Theatre of War. He informs me, That the King of France's Preſence in the Siege of Stenay, inſpires his Soldiers with more than ordinary Vigor: And, That he ſhews daily Proofs of an extraordinary Courage. He was one whole night on Horſe-back, giving Orders, and directing his Enginiers. Next Morning he ſent a Summons to the Governor: Who made a ſtout Reply, being reſolv'd to hold out to the laſt Extremity; and therefore ſally'd out of the Town with a Party of Reſolute Men, who kill'd near Four Thouſand of the Beſiegers.

But alas, theſe Infidels are only ſtout, whilſt well fed: Not knowing what it is to endure the Rigours of Famine, and other Intolerable tolerable Hardſhips in all the Weſtern Hiſtories, they cannot match the Bravery of a Gariſon in the Impregnable Fortreſs of Merdin. Famous in our Annals for ſuſtaining a Seven Years Siege, when the mighty Timurleng lay before it with his Invincible Army. That Scourge of Heaven, to terrifie the Beſieged, and give 'em an earneſt of his Reſolution, caus'd all the Old Trees round about this Place to be cut down, and Young ones to be planted in far greater Numbers: Declaring at the ſame time, That he would not raiſe the Siege, till thoſe Trees ſhould be mature enough to bear Fruit. When that Time came, he ſent a Preſent of the Fruits to the Governor of the Gariſon, as likewiſe of Mutton, with this Meſſage, That he took pity on ſo brave a Man, fearing leſt he would ſtarve for want of Neceſſaries.

As ſoon as the Governour had receiv'd theſe Preſents, turning to the Meſſenger, he ſaid, Go tell thy Maſter, I thank him for his Preſent of Fruits: But, for the Fleſh, we ſhall have no Occaſion, ſo long as our Ews afford us Milk enough to ſuſtain the whole Gariſon. And that thy Maſter may be aſſur'd we are not in Want of that, I will ſend him a Preſent of Cheeſes made of the ſame. Accordingly, he commanded Four Cheeſes to be deliver'd to the Meſſenger. Which when Timurleng ſaw, and had heard the Words of the Governor, he deſpair'd of reducing that Place tho he had lain before it Seven Years, wanting only Two Moons. But, had he underſtood

what

what ſort of Cheeſes theſe were, he wou'd no doubt have chang'd his Reſolution. For, it ſeems, they were made of the Milk of Bitches, and were the very laſt Suſtenance the Gariſon had, except the Fleſh it ſelf of thoſe Unclean Animals.

Believe me, Sage Miniſter, ſuch Examples of Patience and Fortitude, are very Rare. And this was the more Remarkable, in that it was the Firſt Place, where that Invincible General had met with a Repulſe.

Paris, 1ſt. of the 8th Moon,
of the Year 1654.

LETTER V.

To Dgnet Oglou.

THis is the Anniverſary Day of my Nativity. Which I Celebrate not, as others do, on ſuch an Occaſion, with Mirth and Revelling, with Muſick and Songs. My Chamber is not perfum'd with the Incenſe of Arabia, nor with any Extraordinary Odours: Neither is it adorn'd with Flowers, Lawrel, or the Branches of Green Trees. I am not at the Expenſe of Coſtly Oyls, to burn in a Multitude of Lamps, and make Joyful Illuminations, as at a Feaſt. Such Pompous Vanity, I leave to thoſe who perhaps have more

Reaſon

Reaſon to be Merry in this Life, than the Thoughtful and Penſive Mahmut can find out.

On the other Side, I ſpend not this Day in Extreme and Fruitleſs Mourning: But retaining an Indifference of Mind, I Conſecrate it to the Service of my Reaſon and Contemplation: Which are the only Things conſiderable in Mortal Man.

From the Minute that I firſt awak'd this Morning, I have been pondering on my ſelf, and Humane Nature. I ſuffer'd my Anxious Thoughts to ſtart back beyond the Hour of my Birth, reflecting on the Impriſonment I ſuffer'd in my Mother's Womb: Which yet I cannot in the leaſt remember. And this is the Caſe of all Men. We know not how we came into this Open World of Light, from that Region of Darkneſs; nor that ever we were ſo ſhut up, but as we are told by our Parents; and Common Experience confirms us, that this is the Lot of all Mortals. How then ſhall we be able to diſcover, what State we were in before our Conception? Whether we were in the Rank of Things which have Exiſtence, or whether we were not hid in the Womb of Nothing? I tell thee, this Thought has fill'd me with great Inquietudes. I am reſtleſs to know my own Original. I would fain be inform'd, if that which they call the Soul, be a Subſtance diſtinct from the Body, or only the Finer Part of Matter, a Quinteſſence of the Elements. If it be diſtinct, as I have Reaſon to believe, 'twould be a Singular gular Happineſs, to be ſatisfied where it was, before united to this Machine of Fleſh and Bones: And whether that Union be Voluntary or Forc'd. For, I muſt profeſs my ſelf to be altogether in the Dark as to theſe Scrutinies. Sometimes I joyn with the Platoniſts, and conclude, all Human Souls to be Particles of the Divine Nature, Beams of the Eternal Sun: And that though our Light be now obſcur'd and veil'd under this Cloud of Earthly Matter, yet we have formerly ſhin'd with an undiminiſh'd Splendor, when only embody'd in the Clearer Air, or more Refined Subſtance of the Sky. Perhaps, think I, for ſome Errors committed in that Superiour State, we are ſent down into theſe Bodies as into Priſons for our Puniſhment. Then I am vex'd at the Fatal Dulneſs of my Memory, that retains no Idea of my paſt Condition.

At other Times (for like all Mortals I am ſubject to Change) I embrace the Doctrines of Pythagoras, which thou knoweſt are generally entertain'd all o'er the Eaſt: And believing the Tranſmigration of Souls from one Living Creature to another, I cannot be certain but that I have been an Elephant, a Camel, or a Horſe, or perhaps ſome more Contemptible Animal; and for ought I know, I have undergone all the Various Kinds of Metamorphoſis that ever Ovid mention'd.

However, be it how it will, I ſee no Grounds to make any Extravagant Solemnity on the account of my being born to what I am now, that is, a Man. For, I think we are the only Spectacles of Folly and Misery, among all the Creatures of God.

We boaſt of Arts and Sciences; yet the Wiſeſt of Mortals are always moſt ſenſible, That they know Nothing. One Man builds a Stately Houſe, a Place of Repoſe and Refuge for himſelf and his Family: Another comes and pulls it down, demoliſhing the only ſtanding Monument of his Brother's Prudence, or rather of his Folly, who perhaps conſum'd the greateſt Part of his Eſtate in that Coſtly Fabrick; Whereas, among all his Sciences, had he but learn'd to KNOW HIMSELF; an humble convenient Cottage would have ſerv'd his Neceſſities during this Short Life, and ſo he might have avoided the Stroke of Envy.

I tell thee, my Friend, I cannot build Altars to Fortune, nor adore the External Pageantry of the Rich and Great. I equally hate to be flatter'd my ſelf, as thoſe are, who invite their Friends to ſolemnize their Birth-Day.

Yet in thus contemning External Honour, I do the greateſt Reverence to my ſelf, whilſt I preſerve my Reaſon free from being violated or prophan'd by Fooliſh Cuſtoms.

Paris, the 1ſt. of the 8th Moon.
of the Year 1654.

LET-

LETTER VI.

To the Selictar Aga, or Sword-Bearer to the Grand-Signior.

SOmetimes we ſeem to be aſleep here in this City, for want of News. But of late, we have been rowz'd by Poſt upon Poſt: Some bringing Intelligence of the Surrender of Stenay to the French King, others of the Revolt of Barcelona from the Spaniards. But that which is of freſheſt Date, and for which all the Streets of Paris are this Night Illuminated with Bonefires, is the Relief of Arras, Where the French have obtained a Glorious Victory. The Number of the Dead is not yet known, but ſaid to be very great. And 'tis certain the Victors have taken above Seven Thouſand Priſoners, Sixty Cannon, Five Thouſand Waggons, an Equal Number of Horſes, with all the Plate and Rich Furniture of the Prince of Conde, Arch-Duke Leopold, Francis of Lorrain, and the other Grandees of the Spaniſh Army. In Fine, the French are Maſters of the Town, and of the Field, and all Flanders appears now too little to hold 'em.

Theſe continual Succeſſes redound much to the Eſtabliſhment of Cardinal Mazarini, who now ſeems above the Stroke of Misfortune or Malice. Yet no Man can call himſelf Happy till the Hour of his Death, which alone releaſes us from all Human Miſeries.

Some Days ago I received a Letter from Nathan Ben Saddi, which informs me of the Death of the Roman King, and of ſeveral Prodigies which were ſeen before, and about the Time of his Departure.

When he was firſt taken Sick, there aroſe a Violent Tempeſt of Wind, which blew down the Croſs from one of their Churches. After this, follow'd a terrible Earthquake, that ſhook the whole City, threatning to remove its Foundations. Moreover, an Old Eagle, a Domeſtick of the Imperial Palace, and that had liv'd there many Years, took Wing the Day before the King's Sickneſs, and flew quite away. Then the Bells of the Imperial Chappel rung Thrice of their own Accord in the Space of Twelve Hours. Thus far the Jew aſſures me is true. There are Additional Reports, of ſtrange Apparitions that were ſeen about Vienna during the Sickneſs of this Prince, as of a Funeral Proceſſion after Midnight, through the Courts of the Palace; and of a Show'r of Warm Blood that fell at Noon Day in the Streets of that City. But theſe I have only from the Mouth of Common Fame, which, thou knoweſt, does not always ſpeak Truth.

I deſire thee and all the Miniſters, to make a Diſtinction between thoſe Paſſages which I aſcertain, and the Doubtful Relations of the Multitude. In theſe Caſes, Men are prone to Superſtition, and love to be the Authors of Portentous Portentous News. But thou may'ſt believe what the Jew relates; for he never affects to be Fabulous.

'Twould tempt one to ask, What ſtrange hidden Power produces theſe Unuſual Signs? Whether we Mortals are under the Cuſtody of Inviſible Beings, who teach the Elements and other Creatures to utter the Future Events of Fate? Or, Whether all theſe Things which appear ſo ſtrange and ſurprizing, be not mere Caſualties; Accidents of Nature happening of Courſe, and only made Remarkable by their Timing? Who knows, but that the Voluntary Ringing of the Bells, might proceed from the Motion of the Tower where they hung, during the Earthquake? Or, Why, need we wonder, that a Croſs or a Creſcent ſhould be blown down from the Top of a high Minaret, by a Violent Tempeſt of Wind?

Theſe Things appear to me as Natural, as for the Rain to lodge all the Corn in the Fields, or for a Storm to tear up Trees by the Roots, overturn Houſes, and commit a Thouſand other Violences. Neither do I perceive any Thing worth Admiration in the Flight of the Eagle. 'Perhaps, ſome Royal Caprice ſprung in the Head of that King of Birds, which he ne'er felt before. There's Nothing of Prodigy in all this, but only becauſe it happen'd at ſuch a Critical Juncture. Had it been at another Time, no body perhaps would have taken Notice of it, any more than they do of Earthquakes at Naples, which are Common in that Country, where the Earth is very Hollow, being made ſo by Veins of continually burning Sulphur. They have felt ſeveral in that Kingdom within theſe Two Moons, as alſo at Rome. But no great Hurt has been done.

Nathan informs me alſo, That the Venetian Embaſſador at Vienna, has diſtributed great Sums of Money, in Token of his Joy, for the late Victory that Republick obtained againſt the Muſſulmans. This appears to me a Real Prodigy, That the Ottomans who are Invincible by Land, yet ſtill come off with Loſs at Sea.

Queen Chriſtina of Sueden is expected here e'er long. She came to Antwerp in the Habit of a Man, which occaſions Variety of Cenſures. The French call her, the Learned Amazon, She being well vers'd in many Languages and Sciences. They extol her Virtues and Perfections, ſtyling her, the Phœnix of this Age. All the Weſtern Nazarenes are devout Admirers of Women: And one of their Famous Sages, whom they call Henry Cornelius Agrippa, wrote a ſelect Treatiſe in Praiſe of that Sex, wherein he endeavours to prove, That they are more Excellent and Noble Creatures than Men. But he wou'd find few Proſelites in the Eaſt.

'Tis certain, there have been very Famous Women in all Ages, and it would be Envy in Men to deny them their due Praiſe. Such was Dido Queen of Carthage, the Roman Lucretia, the Sybills, Theana Pythagoras's Wife, with his Daughter Dama; Sappho the Poeteſs, with with Innumerable others both of East and West, Renowned for their Virtue, Learning, or Valour in the Wars. But it does not follow, that they therefore ſurpaſs Men.

Let us keep the Rank, in which God and Nature have plac'd us, without being Churliſh or Effeminate. And this is the beſt Way to get and retain the Eſteem of that Nice Sex, who hate a Clown, and deſpiſe a Dotard.

Paris, 30th. of the 8th Moon, of the Year 1654.

LETTER VII.

To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Cuſtoms at Conſtantinople.

THou art he, to whom I can unmask. With others I converſe (like our Women in Turkey) under a Veil. When I write to the Grandees of the Port, 'tis neceſſary for me to diſſemble many Things; and, to feign ſome, that I may be credited in Others, and not be ſuſpected in all. But with thee, I uſe no Artifice or Diſguiſe: Thou haſt a Kind of natural Right to my ſecret Thoughts, beyond the Claim of a Brother. I owe thee an Entire Confidence, on the Score of Friendſhip; and I ſeem to wrong my ſelf, when I conceal my Sentiments from thee. For, beſides the Tye of Blood, we were Partners together in the Adventures of Youth; and the mutual good Offices that pass'd between us, fasten'd our Affections with Stronger Bands, than those of our Birth. Nor were we so unhappy, as to suffer the little Youthful Emulations which are common between Sons of the same Mother, to stifle the more solid and generous Efforts of real Love. Our Friendship grew up with our Years, cemented by Interest as well as Affection; and I esteem Pesteli, but my self in another Figure. If thou hast the same Regard to me, I am happy. Let us continue to cherish this noble Passion: The least Coldness or Reserve now, would appear to me more hateful than a Divorce, more terrible than Death.

'Tis but Reasonable, That among the many Services our Great Master claims at our Hands, we should employ some of our Time and Care on our Selves. We owe the Sultan much; but both He and We owe Nature more, without whose Bounty and Providence, We had never had the Honour, nor He the Profit of our being in his Debt. He is more deeply engaged in Fortune's Tally than We; but in the Accompts of Nature, We are all Equal. She is the Universal Creditor of Mankind. We are indebted to Her, for all we have; yet methinks, nothing so much enhances our Score, as the ill Menage of Time. In that we still run in Arrears, whilst the hasty Minutes post forward, never to be revok'd; and yet we neither lay hold on 'em in their Flight, nor nor ſo much as imprint on any of them, the leaſt tranſient Mark of Virtue or Wiſdom. Thus our Lives ſlide away without Profit, till the Laſt Sand tells us, We are Bankrupts, Nature will not truſt us with a Moment longer.

'Tis Time therefore, Dear Brother, for thee and me to look about us; and ſince 'tis impoſſible for us to make a full Payment, let us at leaſt compound with Nature; and getting an Acquittance for what is paſt and Irrecoverable, let us be ſure to cancel the remaining Part of the Score, by a Wiſe Improvement of every Minute.

Think not, that Mahmut is perſuading thee to turn Derviſe, or to beſtow all thy Time in Prayers: Such Rigorous Devotion is not conſiſtent with the Life of a Man in thy Station. But permit me, Dear Peſteli, to counſel thee, not to build Altars to Fortune, and conſecrate all thy vacant Hours to her Service. I am told, thou art grown a great Gameſter, not only at the Polemick Traverſes of Cheſs, but alſo at Plays of Hazard. The Former of the Two, is the moſt Innocent: Yet, 'tis too Intricate and Puzling, deſerves the Name of Buſineſs rather than of Recreation: It commits a Rape on the Mind, whilſt it requires as much Attention and Abſtractedneſs of Thought, as would ſerve to trace out the Conduct of a Battel or a Siege. But, the Latter have a far worſe Influence on our Paſſions, by exciting us to immoderate Deſire; Hope, Joy, and Grief for mere Trifles, the uncertain Products of Chance. Therefore are they forbidden by our Holy Prophet. And, 'tis not to be number'd among the Commendations of a Muſſulman, to be dextrous at managing the Cards or Dice.

When thou art diſpos'd to unbend thy Mind, I would rather counſel thee, to uſe ſome healthful Exerciſe, ſuch as may ventilate thy melancholy Blood. Our Fathers were wont at ſuch Times to divert themſelves with Bows and Arrows, Hunting, Wraſtling, and the like manly Paſtimes; thus, making their Private Recreations ſubſervient to the Publick, whilſt they ſported themſelves into the Diſcipline of War, and inur'd their Bodies to Labour, even at thoſe Hours when their Minds ſought Reſt.

What! thô Claudius Cæſar devoted himſelf to Gaming with Dice, and wrote a Book in Praiſe of his Folly; What! thô Domitian the Emperour, and Theodorick, King of the Goths, ſpent whole Nights and Days in this Unprofitable Play? Thou haſt not read or heard of ſuch Examples, among the Renowned Sons of Ottoman. Our Glorious Sultans, were never Vacant to theſe Fooleries. And if they had, their Practice cannot juſtifie a Subject's Imitation. Neither wouldſt thou be ſo in Love with Gaming, didſt thou conſider what unhappy Deſtinies have commonly attended the Votaries of Fortune. Whole Eſtates have been ſquander'd away at Dice in a Night, Families ruin'd, and the Gameſter himſelf Impriſon'd in the Morning. He that Yeſterday was Maſter of great Poſſeſſions, and a Companion

panion for Princes; by the Effects of this accurſed Vanity, has bereav'd himſelf of All, and is to Day become the Scorn of Beggars.

The Chineſes are ſo bewitched with Love of Gaming, That when they have loſt all their Stakes, they'll pawn themſelves, their Wives and Children; which if the Fortune of the Dice run againſt them, become all Bond-Slaves to the Winner. Here is a Derviſe in this City, of the Order of the Jeſuites, who lately came from China. Among other Learned Men, I ſometimes converſe with Him. He relates many pretty Paſſages of that People, but one is Tragical, whereof he himſelf was an Eye-Witneſs.

He ſays, That in the Province of Queintong, a certain Nobleman who had ſerv'd in the Wars, and acquir'd great Fame and Honour, was envied by one of his Neighbors, who likewiſe had been a Captain and much in Favour at the Court. Their Emulations carried 'em to many Ill Offices, and at laſt to open Defiance. The Emperour being made ſenſible of the Hatred that was between theſe Two Officers, and being unwilling their Fury ſhould precipitate them to the Ruine of each other, became himſelf an Arbitrator of their Quarrel; laying his Commands on 'em, to embrace and eat together, which is an aſſured Token of Reconciliation and Friendſhip in that Country. They obey'd the Will of their Sovereign. But ſitting up late one Night at Dice, it was the Captain's ill Fortune, to loſe all he had to the Nobleman. Mad at his unluckly Chance, and in Hopes to retrieve his Loſs, he ſends for his Wife and Three Young Sons, whom with himſelf he pawn'd to the Nobleman for a conſiderable Sum of Money, and falls afreſh to play: But Fate was his Enemy; he loſt All. Whereupon in Deſpair, he ſtabs his Wife and Three Children, and laſtly falls on his own Sword; glorying, that he and his Family ſhould thus eſcape a hated Captivity to his Old Enemy.

Wife

Tell me, Dear Peſteli, hadſt thou ſeen this Tragedy, would it not have made thee reſolve againſt Gaming during thy Life? Aſſuredly, our Holy Prophet frowns from his Paradiſe, on thoſe who violate his Laws. He knew our Paſſions, and which were the moſt dangerous; therefore he prohibited ſuch Things, as are moſt likely to betray us to Violence, and an Incurable Diſorder. If thou wilt acquit thy ſelf a good Muſſulman, thou muſt not leap over theſe Prohibitions, accounting them ſmall and indifferent Trifles. Remember the Saying of the holy Doctor, and Leader of the Muſſulman Armies, the Chaſt Oſman, A little Spark will ſet a whole City on Fire. And the Roman Satyriſt has obſerv'd, That no Man becomes Wicked all at once. Think then with thy ſelf, 'tis for this Reaſon the Meſſenger of God has forbid Gaming to the True Faithful; not as a Thing in it ſelf Naturally Evil, but only Morally, ſo as it is a Step to the greateſt Vices. For whilſt we captivate our ſelves to Chance, we loſe our Authority over our Paſſions. We ſtand or fall at the Uncertain Caſt of the Dice. We are Slaves to the feebleſt Wiſhes; Wiſhes; which if they ſucceed not, we grow Furious, Profligate and Impious. Baniſhing all Prudence, Temperance, and Juſtice, we become Impudent, and fit for the blackeſt Crimes.

Take not in Ill Part the wholeſome Admonition of a Brother, who manifeſts his Love, in thus reproving thee without Flattery. Uſe the ſame Freedom, when thou heareſt I am guilty of any Unneceſſary Vice: For, the Publick Service, turns ſome Vices into Virtues.

Paris, 14th. of the 10th. Moon, of the Year 1654.

LETTER VIII.

To the Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

I Believe, thou haſt a Mind to try my Temper; to make an Experiment upon me, and ſee, Whether I'm Proof againſt thy Anger: Elſe, why ſhould Kenan Baſſa's Buſineſs be reviv'd again, after it had been bury'd above theſe Four Years? I examine not, what mighty Intereſt thou haſt in that Officer, that thou afreſh eſpouſeſt his Old Quarrel, as if 'twere thy own. Thy Affairs are beſt known to thy ſelf. But let me tell thee, 'twill not redound redound much to thy Credit, to be found Partial. I honour thee with all the Devoir that is due to a Miniſter in thy Station, and with ſomething more: For, the Eſteem a Man has for his Friend, is Singular and beyond Ceremonies; But ſtill he owes ſome Regard to himſelf. Self-Preſervation, is Rooted in the Center of our Nature; and few will be Knowingly Complaiſant to their Ruine. I am puzzl'd what to think, or how to write, thy laſt Letter has put my Mind into ſuch a Hurly-Burly. A Thouſand Imaginations like Whirl-winds, tear up my moſt ſolid Thoughts by the Roots. I'm in as Wild a Condition as a Man in an Earthquake, leaping this Way and that Way, yet knows not where to fix his Foot in Safety.

If I perſevere in calling thee Friend, perhaps thou wilt accuſe me of Preſumption. If I change my Style, and ſuppoſe thee under another Character, Ingratitude will be laid to my Charge. To vindicate my Actions, will be Interpreted Obſtinacy; and to own my ſelf in the Fault, will be counted Weakneſs. Nay, all the World will call me Fool, in condemning my ſelf for Things whereof I never was Guilty. What ſhall I do in this Caſe? I am Naturally Thoughtful and Melancholy. The Words that ſpring from Reſentment, cleave faſt to my Mind, and breed a Thouſand Inferences. My buſie Apprehenſion extracts Menaces out of the moſt Artificial Expreſſions. I look on my ſelf, as mark'd out for a Sacrifice, one Time or other. The

Will

Will of Deſtiny be done, Early or Late. I will not go out of my Road to avoid it; Since it is but an Ill Husbandry of Time, to borrow it from the Ineffable Joys of Paradiſe, to multiply a few Days or Years, of a Miſerable Life on Earth.

As for the Treaſurer and the Reſt of my Accuſers, let them know, that I will perſevere in doing my Duty to the Grand Signior, without warping to the Right Hand or to the Left, for Fear or Favour.

But if my Private Agency in theſe Parts meet with Rubs and Checks for want of Money, let the Blame reſt on thoſe whoſe Charge it is, to ſupply me with what is Neceſſary for a Man in my Station: For, henceforward, Mahmut will be reproach'd no more for demanding his Penſion.

Think not, 'tis an eaſie thing for a Man to be always a Counterfeit, and never to have his Mind unbent; to act Two contrary Parts at the ſame time; to be True and Falſe; a Muſſulman and Servant of the Grand Signior in Reality, a Chriſtian and Subject of France in Appearance. My Soul is perpetually ſtrecht upon the Rack of watchful Thoughts and buſie Invention, leſt by ſome Improvident Word or Deed, my Diſguiſe ſhould fall off, and I appear in my Naked Colours.

'Tis but Reaſon therefore, that whilſt this vaſt Solicitude takes up all my Faculties, the Care of my Subſiſtence ſhould reſt on thoſe who employ me, Let not the Miniſters of the Benign Port, be peeviſh at me without a Cauſe. For I imprecate, Serene Grandee, that God would ſplit my Soul into Ten thouſand immortal Splinters, if ever I betray my Truſt. But needleſs Suſpicion, wou'd tempt a Man to Treachery.

Mini-

Paris, 14th. of the 10th. Moon,
of the Year 1654.

LETTER IX.

To the Venerable Mufti.

THE Pope has been ſick for a conſiderable Time, and 'tis now ſtrongly reported, He is dead. They talk of an Expreſs that is come to the Chancellour of France, to certifie him of it, and to conſult about the Next Election. But this is not credited here; being only look'd upon as a Roman or Spaniſh Artifice, to ſound the Inclinations of this Court before-hand, that ſo they may be able to countermine the French Intereſt, when the Pope ſhall really dye. And 'tis not expected he ſhould live long, being of a great Age, and worn out with Cares and Sickneſs.

'Tis certain he has made his Will, wherein two Millions of Gold are given to the Treaſury founded by his Predeceſſors, to ſerve the Church in its extreme neceſſities. But 'tis a Thouſand to one, if ſome future Pontiff ſucceeding in that Chair, do not in his unerring Judgment, interpret his own Perſonal Occaſions, or thoſe of his Nephews, to be the Extreme Neceſſities of the Church; and then, all this huge Maſs of Wealth is infallibly gone.

to

He has likewiſe bequeath'd large Legacies to his Siſter-in-law, whom they call Donna Olympia; and to others of his Relations and Creatures. And 'tis thought, this Lady will more than doubly pay her ſelf, having the Management of all his Affairs. Indeed, during his Reign, it may be ſaid, the whole Roman Church was govern'd by a Woman. For this Prelate, wou'd never do any thing without her Advice.

She was born of an obſcure Family, but is of a high Spirit, Ambitious of Rule, and a Perſon of great Abilities: Extremely Covetous and Subtle; turning and winding all Events to her own Profit. All Preferments were at her Diſpoſal, She ſold Biſhopricks, Abbeys and other Eccleſiaſtical Dignities at her own Rates, and to whom ſhe pleas'd. In fine, whoſoever had any Buſineſs with the Pope, made their Addreſſes to her. By which means, ſhe has heap'd together a Prodigious Treaſure, and is eſteem'd the Richeſt Lady in Europe. 'Tis thought ſhe would have ſold even the Pope, and Rome it ſelf, the Capital Seat of the Chriſtian Empire, rather than refus'd a proportionate Offer of Gold, cou'd ſhe have met with a Chapman to her Mind. This wou'd have been a Merchandiſe fit for the Grand Signior Signior, were it not reſerv'd as a Prize for the Victorious Arms deſtin'd to conquer All Things.

The French ſeem mightily concern'd for the Tragedies Acted in Poland by the Moſcovites. 'Tis affirm'd that they have taken the Town of Vitebsko by Storm, (putting Men, Women, and Children to the Sword) with divers other Cities and Places of Strength: And that they have laid in Aſhes all the Towns and Villages round about Smolensko, ſo that there is Nothing to be ſeen but Ruin and Deſolation for above an Hundred Miles round that City; which alſo is now cloſely beſieg'd by the Forces of the Czar. If theſe Northern Infidels go on, and make ſuch bloody Work wherever they come, they will, in a ſhort time, over-run and diſpeople all Europe. But 'tis to be hop'd the Tartars, who are lately enter'd into a League with Poland, will put a ſtop to the cruel Victories of the Moſcovites, and chaſtiſe the Treaſon of the Coſſacks, who joyn with 'em contrary to their Faith given to the King of Poland.

They ſay, Four Grandees of Tartary are arriv'd as Hoſtages at Warſaw, and as many Lords of Poland are ſent on the ſame Errand to the Court of the Cham; who, as a farther Evidence of his Integrity, has releas'd all the Poliſh Captives in his Dominions, and ſent the Ambaſſadors of the Coſſacks home, without their Noſes and Ears, as a Mark of his irreconcileable Indignation at their Infidelity.

In

In the mean while, I am extremely afflicted to hear of our continual Losses by Sea. They say here, That above Six Thousand Mussulmans were killed in the late Fight in the Hellespont, and that we have lost Sixteen Gallies, besides Ships of War. That Element, one would conclude, is Fatal to the Ottoman Empire. Neither have we had much better Success by Land this Campagne. Yet Chusaein the Vizier Azem, and General in Candia, has perform'd very Heroick Things. To speak impartially, and give due Honour to our Enemies, the Maltese, Venetians and French, have not been wanting in any point of Bravery. Which also redounds to the greater Honour of the Mussulmans, in that they draw their Sword against the Flower of Christendom, and not against Owls and Pigmies. Such are the Persians, when we encounter 'em; for either they dare not endure the Lustre, and stand the Brunt of our Invincible Arms, or if they do, they sink under the First Shock.

When I name those Hereticks, I spit on the Ground in Detestation of their Errors: For they are worse than the Zindicks and Giafers. I have more Charity for a Christian or a Jew, than I have for these vermin of the Land. In fine, I wish they were extirpated from the Earth; and that they may after this Life, be either Metamorphos'd into Hogs, which Creature, thou know'st, is an Abomination to all Good Men and Angels (and they already resemble it in their Uncleanness) or else that they may become the Asses of the Jews in Hell,

Hell, to carry their Burdens for a Thousand Ages.

Paris, 17th of the 11th Moon of the Year, 1654.

LETTER X.

To Pesteli Hali, his Brother, Master of the Grand Signior's Customs.

THE God of our Fathers grant thee as much Joy every Minute of thy Life, as I feel at this Instant. Wilt thou know the Occasion of this Unusual Transport? I can hardly believe my self, when I tell thee of an Adventure, the most surprizing that ever happen'd to me since my arrival in this City. And perhaps thou wilt think I Romance in relating it: But assure thy self, that of a Truth Oncomiche our Mother, is at this Time in Paris, with our Cousin Isouf.

May a Thousand soft Passions thrill thy Heart, when thou readest this News, as they did mine, when at my Chamber Door I first saw and knew the Face of her that bare me, after I had given her over for Dead long ago; for I had heard no Tidings of her these Eleven Years. Good God! So strange and unexpected a Sight, had almost dismantl'd my Senses, those Out-Works of the Soul. For a while I stood ſtood ſtill, aſtoniſh'd and trembling with Extacy, I was not preſently ſatisfy'd, whether I beheld a Mortal, or the Ghoſt of one: For, they ſay, theſe appear in the ſame Forms as they bore when Alive. Neither Age nor Travel, with all the other Infirmities and Croſſes of Human Life, had ſo alter'd her Complexion; but that I eaſily diſcern'd the manifeſt Features, Lineaments and Air of my Mother. I concluded therefore, it muſt be She, or her Apparition, if there be any ſuch Things.

These were my Firſt Thoughts, in that Waking Trance: But her Voice and Addreſs, ſoon put me out of Doubt, when impatient to ſee me ſtand like one Thunder-ſtruck, ſhe ran to me with open Arms and Tears of Joy in her Eyes; crying out with a Tone and Affection peculiar to Women. Art thou alive, my Son Mahmut? Do theſe Eyes ſee thee, or am I in a Dream.

For my Part, I was as much upon the Rapture as ſhe, and hardly knew how to deport my ſelf, or what to ſay or do. Yet the Fear I was in, leſt ſome body in the Houſe ſhou'd over-hear us, and make ill Conſequences of this Paſſionate Interview, taught me a Leſſon of Moderation and Prudence. Wherefore I beckon'd to her to ſuppreſs her Paſſion, and converſe by Signs, as the Cuſtom is, at the Myſterious Port. Thoſe Silent Expreſſions of our mutual Love, Joy, and Admiration, were not leſs ſignificant, becauſe not cloath'd in Words. Thou know'ſt, there's Eloquence enough in this Mute Language.

And

And I was jealous of Words, leſt ſome Inquiſitive Soul might underſtand us, thô we convers'd in Arabick.

After our firſt Endearments and Tenderneſſes were over, in which my Couſin Iſouf alſo had his Share (for we were all reciprocally overjoy'd to ſee one another, in this Neſt of Infidels) I began to conſult the ſafety of us all Three, in providing convenient Lodgings for my Mother and Kinſwoman. In Order to this, we made a viſit to Eliachim the Jew, who entertained us at a Banquet, after the Faſhion of the Eaſt. We advis'd with that honeſt Hebrew about our Affairs; I having made frequent and ſufficient Proof of his Fidelity and Friendſhip. In fine, he took them both into his own Houſe, under the Notion of Greeks, his Acquaintance; judging this the ſecureſt way to prevent any Diſcovery, or even the leaſt Suſpicion of our Circumſtances. They have continu'd there theſe Five Days, and their Character has not been queſtion'd by any. I viſit 'em daily, and we paſs away many Hours in recounting the different Adventures of our Lives, in diſcourſing of our Friends in Arabia, Greece, and other Parts of the World, and in concerting the beſt Methods to ſerve one another, till Death ſhall divide us from our ſelves as well as from our Friends, and rank us in a Liſt of Inviſible Beings, whoſe State and Qualities we know not.

Well, but all this while I believe thou art Impatient to know what Motive of their own, or Turn of Fortune, drove them into

ſo

ſo remote a Region as France, a Country Inhabited by none but Infidels? Shall I tell thee in a Word? 'Twas Love, on her Part; and the Deſire of Novelty, on his.

Our Kinſman Iſouf, from his Childhood, felt powerful Inclinations to travel: Which encreas'd with his Years, and were much heighten'd by his Converſe with Greeks, Armenians, Franks, and ſome Muſſulmans at Conſtantinople, who had ſeen many Foreign Countries, both in the Eaſt and Weſt.

The Relations they made of the Curioſities they had ſeen, and of their own Adventures, fir'd his Youthful Blood, and he form'd a Reſolution to depart, with the Firſt Convenience, from Conſtantinople, and viſit all the Regions in the World, if his Life and Health would hold out. I formerly acquainted thee, that he had ſurvey'd the Greateſt Part of Aſia: Since which he ſet forth again, and having finiſhed his Travels in that Quarter of the World, he bent his Courſe for Africk; where he viſited Egypt, Barbary, the Empire of Morocco and Fez, with that of the Æthiopians, and many other Regions under the Torrid Zone, too tedious for me at this Time to mention particularly, becauſe I write in Haſte. Hereafter I ſhall give thee a more ample Account of his Obſervations, &c. Wherein thou wilt find, that Iſouf has not altogether loſt his Time.

At length, having ſatisfy'd himſelf with whatſoever he thought worthy to be ſeen and known in that Southern Tract, he parted from Fez with a Deſign to ſee Europe. Some Bills of Exchange cauſed him to take Grand Caire in his Way, where he encounter'd my Mother. She perceiving, that he would take Shipping directly for France, reſolv'd to lay hold on ſo favourable an Opportunity, of ſeeing me once more before ſhe dy'd. Wherefore, imparting her Deſign to him, Iſouf offer'd her his utmoſt Service. And having ſettled her Affairs at Caire, and pack'd up her Money, Jewels and other Neceſſaries, they took the Road of Scanderoon, where they ſoon arrived; and putting themſelves into the Habit of Greeks, Iſouf alſo ſpeaking pretty well that Language and the Lingua Franca, they bargain'd with the Maſter of a Veſſel then lying in the Harbour, and bound for Marſeilles: He took them on Board, and under the Protection and Favour of Heaven, they arrived ſafe at Marſeilles, and are now in this City.

of

Yet amidſt all the Pleaſure I conceive in the Preſence of ſo near a Relation as a Mother, I am not without ſome Qualms of Fear, leſt ſome Unfortunate Occurrence ſhould diſcover her to be no Chriſtian: For then, the Iſſue might prove dangerous both to her and me.

As for Iſouf, he deſigns to tarry no longer in Paris, than to inform himſelf of what is moſt Remarkable in this City, and to ſatisfie the other Ends of a Traveller. From hence, after he has viſited the Chiefeſt Cities in France, he talks of travelling into Flanders, Holland, Germany, Suedeland, and the other Kingdoms of Europe. But for Spain or Portugal, he has no no Thoughts; either out of Fear of the Inquiſition, which is very ſevere in thoſe Countries, or out of an Averſion for the People who expell'd the Moors, of which he relates very Tragical Stories, which they told him during his Reſidence at Morocco and Fez. In a Word, he gives this Character of a Spaniard, That he is a Mungrel, between a Man and a Devil. He likes the Company of the French in Regard they converſe with a Natural and Unreſerv'd Freedom, which becomes them very well. But he has ſpoke with none but Travellers yet, who have been otherwiſe employ'd, than in ſtudying the Artificial Diſguiſes of Courtiers. If he ſojourns the Space of Three Moons in this Kingdom, he will find ſome of the French as Affected in their Way, as other People: He will encounter with a New Sort of Frenchmen in every Province. For France is a mere Gallimaufry, made up of the Fragments and Remnants of other Nations. They differ alſo in their Language, as well as in their Manners, one from another. So that the Inhabitants of Gaſcoigne and Bretagne, can hardly be underſtood by thoſe of Paris and Blois, with the Adjacent Parts. Theſe Weſtern People, are not Curious in preſerving the Dialect of their Fathers, but every Age, introduces a Change in their Speech. Neither are they diligent in retaining their Genealogies. Whereas in the Eaſt, thou know'ſt, the Languages remain uncorrupted, the ſame now as they were Two Thouſand Years ago, or from the Confuſion of Babel

The ſame Care we Arabians have of our Tribes and Families.

Son of my Mother, when thou readeſt the Two enclos'd, and ſhalt ſee the very Hand-writing of the Dear Oucomiche, and of Iſouf our Kinſman; let thy Heart be like the Valley of Admoim, Fragrant as a Grove of Spices: For then thy Eyes will convince thee, that what I write is Truth.

Paris, 22d. of the 12th Moon,
of the Year 1654.

LETTER XI.

To Adonai, a Jew, Priſoner in the Tower of Nona at Rome.

THIS comes to thee by the Hand of a truſty Friend: Give entire Credence to his Inſtructions. To ſay I'm ſorry to hear of thy Misfortune, wou'd but faintly expreſs my Paſſion: 'Tis not eaſily deſcrib'd in Words. I am as Melancholy as an Antelope, when the Sun's in Conjunction with Saturn. This is a ſad ſort of a Beaſt, that will neither Eat, Drink, nor Sleep, during that Dull Aſpect.

In God's Name, how cam'ſt thou to be ſo free with thy Tongue among the Romans? Or, what tempted thee to meddle with their Religion and Laws? Was it not enough, that thou thou and all the Jews in that City, had Liberty to frequent your Synagogues, and there curſe the Chriſtians in Antiquated Hebrew; muſt you needs Rail at 'em in plain Italian too? And that, over your Cups, when Men ought to be good-Natur'd to all the World? Of what import is it to you, whether they be Idolaters or no, ſo long as they give you Leave to Adore One God, Creator of the Worlds? Or, what ſignifies it, if they are Guilty of Ten Thouſand Injuſtices and Follies among themſelves, whilſt you live quietly under their Protection and Government? Adonai, I'm aſham'd of the Immorality of thoſe of thy Nation. I bluſh for your Ingratitude, Pride and Malice. Surely, if the Nazarenes did really believe what they profeſs, they would Sacrifice you all to the Ghoſt of their Meſſias, whom they ſay you Crucify'd. They wou'd not leave a Jew living in Chriſtendom, but do their utmoſt to exterminate you from the Earth. I ſpeak not this as my Wiſh; but only to upbraid your Impertinence and Vanity, in thus fooliſhly provoking thoſe, with whoſe Permiſſion it is, that you live and enjoy the Elements.

The Prophet Moſes, your Law-Giver, left you another Rule, a Leſſon of Civility, when he ſaid, Ye ſhall not blaſpheme the Gods of the People. Had thou and thy Companions obey'd this Precept, ye might have been at Liberty: But 'tis bad falling into the Hands of the Inquiſition. However, I am glad to hear, that you are not tranſported to the Caſtle of St. Angelo. That would have been a Tragical Remove, at this Juncture. But now, as I'm informed, not one of you is in Danger: For, they ſay, that all the Priſoners in Rome, are by Cuſtom releas'd upon the Death of the Pope, except thoſe who are in that Fatal Fortreſs. And 'tis Generally ſuppos'd, the good Old Caliph is no long-liv'd Man. For, they never uſe to remove the Priſoners deſign'd for Death, till the Phyſicians are paſt all Hopes of the Holy Father's Life.

However, in Regard there is no Certainty in Human Affairs, but a perpetual Change and Circulation of Events; leſt ſome Unhappy Turn of Fortune ſhou'd either now continue thy Reſtraint, or hereafter bereave thee of thy Liberty, I ſend thee here enclos'd, a Receipt of a Chymical Liquor, which may be of ſome Service to thee, in the ſtrongeſt Priſon on Earth. 'Twas reveal'd to me by my Mother, who learn'd it of an Ægyptian Artiſt at Caire. Deſpiſe it not, becauſe it comes from a Woman's Hand: For I have made an Experiment of it, and find it effectual. 'Twill render Iron as brittle as Glaſs. 'Tis more powerful than the Water of the River Styx, which no Veſſel could hold, but the Hoof of a Mule. After an Hours Application, thou mayſt make the thickeſt Barrs, Chains and Bolts, flie in a Thouſand Pieces, as if they were made of Porcelain.

Thou wilt not wonder at this, when thou conſider'ſt the Innumerable ſtrange Inventions of Men prying into the Secrets of Nature, and and Fortunate in their Searches. Above all, Chymiſtry has brought to Light the greateſt Prodigies of Art and Knowledge. This Myſterious Science, was the peculiar Boaſt of the Primitive Egyptians, from whom all other Nations learn'd it. And had not Moſes himſelf been inſtructed from his Youth in all the Learning of Egypt, perhaps he would have been at a Loſs, when he Calcin'd the Golden Calf, and gave the Duſt to the Iſraelites to be mix'd in their Drink, as the only Expiation of their Idolatry. Doubtleſs, this Secret, among others, was tranſmitted down to thoſe Times from Philemon, the good Prieſt, who was in the Number of them who eſcap'd the Flood in Noah's Ark, and whoſe Grand-Son Maſar, was the Firſt King in Egypt after the Deluge.

Philemon, the better to eſtabliſh the State of his Off-ſpring, reveal'd to them many Hidden Things; taught them the Hieroglyphicks of the Dgebel Pharan, or the Pyramids, with all the Myſteries of the Taliſmans, and the Chymical Preparations of Moncatam; the forcible Waters and Eſſences, Powders and other Ingredients, by which they made Marble as pliable as Wax or Clay. Theſe Things he had learn'd of thoſe who periſh'd in the Flood: He retain'd the Wiſdom of the Ancients, his Coevals and Predeceſſors; leaving the Rudiments of ſo profound a Knowledge to his Poſterity, as an Invaluable Treaſure, of which they could never be robb'd. Thus, Science became Hereditary to the Coptites, who bear that Name from Coptim, the Son of Masar, the First King of Egypt, ſince the Rainbow appear'd in the Clouds. And, 'twas from one of that Race, my Mother learn'd that Admirable Secret.

Truſt not to Words, but try the Experiment. The Receipt will give thee all Neceſſary Directions, Yet I counſel thee not to be big with it, like him who having found out the Art of making Glaſs Malleable, or fit to be beat by the Hammer into any Shape or Figure, as the Silver-Smiths work their Metal; muſt needs go and diſcover his Secret to the Prince, expecting a great Reward. When, on the contrary, he loſt his Head on the Spot; the Prince thinking it great Injuſtice, that ſo many Thouſand People as got their Bread by making of Common Glaſſes, ſhould be all ruined, to promote one Man's Profit and Advantage.

In fine, uſe this Secret to ſerve thy ſelf, or the Cauſe thou art engag'd in: But truſt it not to another, unleſs on the ſame Equal Terms as I commit it to thee, wherein the greater Hazard is thine in divulging it.

Paris, 15th. of the 1ſt Moon,
of the Year 1655.

LETTER

LETTER XII.

To Mehemet, once an Eunuch Page in the Seraglio, but now an Exile in Egypt, at Grand Caire.

WHen I firſt heard of thy Baniſhment from the Imperial Palace and City, think not that I was ſad, or entertain'd the uſual Sentiments of a Friend, on ſuch Occaſions. No: I tell thee on the contrary, I rejoyc'd, (yet not with the Joy of an Enemy) at that Seeming Misfortune, as knowing it has deliver'd thee from a Real one, in which, according to my Preſages, all the Attendants of thy Miſtreſs, the Old Queen, were ſoon after involv'd.

Thou art oblig'd to Bacchus, for that Fortunate Calamity; which thô it for a while eclips'd thy Honour, yet was the only Means to ſave thy Life.

When I formerly ſent thee an Account of my Impriſonment here, and how I was regal'd by my Keeper at a Banquet of Wine; when in that Letter I play'd the Advocate for the Juice of the Grape, I little thought that thou wouldſt ever make an Experiment of that Bug-bear-Liquor. Thô I know 'tis common, even in the Seraglio, to drink Wine privately, and chaſe away Melancholy, the conſtant Familiar of Reſtraint and Servitude, with generous Compotations.

I am no ſtranger to the counterfeit Sickneſs of thoſe, who for the Sake of this ſtolen Mirth, put themſelves into the Infirmary, that they may there Carouſe with Freedom, and drink Healths to the Grand Signior without Suſpicion.

Were it not for the convenient Situation of that Apartment, and the Favour of the Boſtangi's, no Wine could find Admittance into the Seraglio, ſave what is for the Grand Signior's Uſe. But now his Slaves drink it as merrily as he: And I am not ſorry, that thou art one of the Number. 'Tis a groundleſs Superſtition, to refuſe the Gift of Divine Liberality, and deny our ſelves the Uſe of that Plant, which was made to chear the Hearts of Mortals. Nay, our Holy Traditions themſelves, and all our Doctors tacitely own, that the Vine is allowable, in that it was ſav'd, among the Reſt of the Vegetables, by Noah in the Ark: And that Holy Prophet curs'd the Devil for ſtealing it away. Perhaps the Story will not be Unpleaſant to thee.

When God commanded Noah, with his Companions, to deſcend out of the Ark in Peace, they built them Houſes, and began to exerciſe Husbandry; They ſowed Corn, and the Seeds of other Vegetables: They planted alſo all Sorts of Trees; but when they came to look for the Vine, it could not be found. Then it was told Noah by the Angel, that the Devil had ſtolen it away, as having ſome Right to it. Wherefore Noah cited the Devil to appear before the Angel, in the Name of

of God, to answer his Theft. The Angel gave Judgment, That the Vine should be divided between 'em into Three Parts, whereof the Devil should have Two, and Noah One: To which both Parties consented. Whereby it is evident, that Man has some Share in the Juice of the Grape. For, this was the Decision of Gabriel, That when Two Thirds of the Liquor of this Fruit, should be evaporated away in boyling over the Fire, the Remainder should be lawful for Noah and his Posterity to drink: And thou knowst, we Mussulmans generally obey this Law, in preparing our Wine.

Let the Devil therefore, in the Name of God, have his Share in this Tempting Fruit, and then there can be no Injustice in enjoying our own Part. For, when that which Inebriates, is separated by Fire from the Rest, this Liquor becomes pure, holy, and blessed. This is the Sentence of the Ancients, the Immediate Auditors of the Messenger of God, as is to be seen in the Manuscripts they left behind them; which though they are rare and difficult to be met with, yet such as diligently seek Wisdom, shall not lose their Labour. Abu Becre Eb'n Mahumet, has taken great Pains to collect the Memoirs of Antiquity. He was a Learned Doctor among my Countrymen, of the House of Sulpha, (may he rest under the Umbrella's of Paradise) From him I had this Relation.

But, tell me, my dear Mehemet, if thou know'st, how cam'st thou to be the only Man that had the good Fortune to be Sentenc'd to this Happy Diſgrace? Or, if thou art Ignorant, I will tell thee. For, it ſeems, the Reſt of thy Company in that Nights Revel were diſcover'd as well as thou, yet eſcap'd all Cenſure. It looks, as if they were deſignedly reſerv'd for Victims, to a more Inexorable Revenge. And, the Event juſtifies this Conjecture: Since within the Circuit of the Moon, not only they, but all the ſurviving Creatures of the Sultana Kioſem, were ſtrangled.

Therefore again I pronounce thee Happy, and doubly Bleſs'd in being an Exile, ſince thereby thou haſt eſcap'd the Hands of the Executioner, and art now living in Egypt, the moſt Fortunate Region on Earth. Aſcribe this to thy Propitious Deſtiny, and to the Favour of Solyman Kyzlir Aga: Who foreſeeing the Slaughter that would be made of that Old Queen's Servants, took this Opportunity to accuſe thee to the Grand Signior, that ſo he might ſave thy Life. For, 'twas at his Interceſſion, thou wert baniſh'd into this Happy Province, which is call'd the Nurſe of all Nations. Improve thy Exile to the beſt Advantage; and from this Nurſe, ſuck the Milk of Science with which ſhe has formerly Nouriſh'd the Whole Earth. Be grateful alſo to thy Deliverer; for, he is a Truſty Friend, and Unchangeable, where he once places his Affection. He had a particular Kindneſs for thee. From him I received the News of thy Eſcape; for that is the proper Name of thy Baniſhment. Pour forth de-your Oraisons for his Health and Happiness: Since thou art in a Land, where the Prayers of Mussulmans are as effectually heard at some Particular Places, as if they were utter'd at the Tomb of the Prophet.

vout

I counsel thee, to visit the Prison of Joseph; which is in the Dungeon of the Castle of Caire. This is a Place of great Devotion among the Faithful, and has been so in all Ages, since the Death of that Patriarch. Moses the Prophet, of whom it is said, that he died in the Embraces of God, made his Prayers in this Place; and so did Aaron his Brother, when they perform'd those Miracles in Egypt. Jesus the Son of Mary, visited this Place, both he and his Mother (on whom are center'd the Smiles of the Creator:) They there perform'd their Devotions, when they fled from the Persecution of Herod. So did the Prophets, and Apostles, as many as were in Egypt, with all True Believers. Nay, some of the Infidels themselves, having heard of the Renown of this Sanctuary, made their Addresses to Heaven there, in Time of great Distress. For, here Prayers are infallibly heard, especially if they be said after the Sun has travers'd the Meridian; when the Wicked Dæmons are asleep, who walk abroad till Noon, doing all the Mischief they can.

My Friend, when I think of the Region where thou art, I can hardly forbear envying thee. 'Tis a Land of Prodigies and Miracles. It is the Support of Men, and the Granary of the World. Those who Inhabit it, are full of of Complacency and Joy; and those who abandon it, burn with a perpetual Desire to return. Its Rivers are Clear, and the Waters Sweet and Rich as Wine. The Eye of God is upon it, who causes the Nile to flow at his accustom'd Season, whence the Land is made fertile beyond all the Provinces on Earth. This Nile is one of the Rivers which God caused to descend from the Springs of Paradise, on the Wings of Gabriel; and has hid the Place of its Descent, among the Inaccessible Heights of Mountains.

There are many strange Things related of the Land of Alphiom, and how it was First Manur'd by Joseph, being before his Time but a Fen or Marsh. The Story also of Hagar, the Mother of all the Ismaelites, is not Unpleasant; Thou wilt find it in the Chronicles of Egypt: For she was an Egyptian, of the Family of the Coptites; and was bestow'd on Sarah, the Wife of our Father Ibrahim, by Charoba, the King of Egypt's Daughter. After she was dismiss'd from her Lady, she travell'd to Mecca; from whence she sent a Dispatch to the King of Egypt, to acquaint him with her Affairs, and with the Birth of her Son Ismael, imploring his Assistance, in Regard she was in a Land barren of all Things. Then the King of Egypt caused a Canal to be cut from the Nile, at the Foot of the Eastern Mountains of Egypt, to the Red Sea; and sent Vessels laden with Corn, Fruits, and all manner of Necessary Provisions to Hagar.

If thou addreſſeſt to the feet of the Doctors, the Venerable Prelates of Caire, they will inform thee of more ſtrange Things than theſe. It is a Noble Exerciſe, to Contemplate the Kingdom of the Heavens and the Earth; to ſearch into their Wonders and Prodigies; to trace the Foot-ſteps of Ancient Nations, and the Traditions which know no Origine.

Mehemet, I am an Exile as well as thou; Let us continue our former Friendſhip in this State, and do one another all the good Offices we can. As for the Misfortunes of Human Life, let us bear them with an equal Mind. For, they will ſoon have an End, as well as we our ſelves.

May God, who in the Time of Gog and Magog, took up from the Earth the Great Alcoran, and the Sheets of Science; the Black Stone, and the Shrine of Moſes, with the Five Rivers; have thee in his Holy Protection and Cuſtody, at the Hour of Evil, and at all Times.

Paris, 26th of the 1ſt Moon of the Year 1655.

LETTER

LETTER XIII.

To Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa.

THou may'ſt report it to the Divan for a certain Truth, That the Chief Mufti of the Chriſtians is dead: Which puts all the Courts in Europe, upon new Strains of Policy.

He was call'd Innocent X. after his Aſſumption to the Papacy: For, his true Name, was Pamphylio. But ſome ſay, it has been a Cuſtom for the Popes to change their Names, ever ſince a certain Prieſt was lifted to that Dignity, who was call'd Bocca de Porco, or Hogs-Face. He, aſham'd of this Ignominious Name, as ſoon as he ſate in the Chair of Peter, aſſum'd the Name of Sergius. Yet, all his Succeſſors have not obſerv'd that Rule.

Theſe Popes have an Authority, greater than our Principal Mufti. For, they are obey'd by Kings and Emperors. And being eſteem'd little leſs than Gods on Earth, they are ſolemnly Ador'd on the Day of their Coronation, by all the Cardinals, Princes, Prelates, and Foreign Ambaſſadors at that Time in Rome. And, for that End, they are ſeated on the Altar, which the Nazarenes call, The Tabernacle and Habitation of their God.

If I miſtake not in my Obſervations, theſe Roman Caliphs aſpire at a Soveraignty over all Kings and Princes: They wou'd make that which they call the Hierarchy, a Superlative Indepen-Independent Monarchy, to which all the Governments in the World, ſhould pay Homage, and be Subject.

This puts me in Mind of a certain Preacher at Naples, who ſome Years ago, when Adonai the Jew was in that City, and happen'd to be preſent in the Church, having made a very Elaborate Speech to perſuade the People, That the Prieſts were Superiour to Kings; at length he broke out into this Paſſionate Exclamation: O ye Princes of Chriſtendom, ye are Pharaohs, and we Prieſts are your Gods; O ye Pharaohs, obey your Gods! Ye can only command the Creature, but we make the Creator himſelf come down on the Altars, at our Pleaſure. This Relation I had from the Jew, in his Travels through Italy. And it is aſſerted by ſome of their Doctors, That the Pope has not only Power to Excommunicate the Greateſt Prince on Earth, but alſo to pull a Saint out of Paradiſe, and ſend him to Hell.

If they cou'd perſuade the Nazarene Princes and People to believe they have ſuch an Exorbitant Power, perhaps in Time they might reduce 'em to as blind a Superſtition, as the Ancient Kings of Egypt were Guilty of, who were ſo beſotted to their Prieſts, that when he whom they call'd the Cater, or Maſter of the Celeſtial Influences commanded the King to Kill himſelf, for that it was the Will of Heaven, the poor bigotted Monarch, durſt not diſpute the Orders he had receiv'd, but in ſimple Obedience became his own Murderer.

Thoſe

Thoſe Egyptian Prieſts indeed, were Maſters of great Science, profound Aſtrologers, Excellent Mathematicians, and perfectly skill'd in the Secrets of Natural Magick. They perform'd Things tranſcending the more Common and Obvious Works of Nature: By which it was eaſie to ſtrike a Terror into the Hearts of ignorant Mortals. But, as for theſe Nazarene Prieſts, all that they can boaſt of is, that they have read the Hiſtories of former Times, and are able to diſcourſe in Philoſophy and other Sciences, without having the Power to work any Prodigies: Unleſs thou wilt count it one, to keep ſo many Warlike Nations in a ſervile Awe of their Authority; with the bare Pretence, of turning a piece of Bread into a God.

Yet for all this there are many poor Prelates, and other Eccleſiaſticks, who are inveſted with empty Titles, having little or no Revenues: Among which, the Poverty of ſome is ſo Remarkable, as to become a Proverb. Thus, 'tis Common in the Mouths of the Romans to ſay, The Pope's Mule fares better than the Biſhop of Orvietto.

Illuſtrious Baſſa, live thou in the Faith of a Muſſulman, and the Favour of the Grand Signior. For, in that State, thou may'ſt deſpiſe the Greateſt of theſe Eccleſiaſtick Infidels.

Paris, 13th. of the 2d. Moon;
of the Year 1655.

LET-

LETTER XIV.

To the Kaimacham.

I Believe, the Secretary of the Nazarene Affairs takes me to be a Conjurer, and thinks that I can divine of all the Changes and Alterations that happen at the Port, or that I have ſome Magical Glaſs, which repreſents to me the continued Series of remote Events, with all the Tranſactions of the Imperial Court, Camp and City: Or elſe he wou'd not be ſo late in his Diſpatches, and ſend me ſuch Imperfect News. I am forc'd many Times to addreſs my Letters by Gueſs; not knowing, whether the Perſon to whom I write be in the ſame Station he was awhile ago, or whether he be among the Living, or the Dead: Whether I ſhould direct my Diſpatches to Conſtantinople, or to the Elyzian Shades.

My Intelligence of the Muſſulman Affairs is many Times more owing to the French Merchants who Trade in the Levant or to the Expreſſes which come from Ambaſſadors reſiding at Conſtantinople; than to that Secretary, whoſe Care it ought to be, that I ſhou'd be timely inform'd of whatever happens in the Oſman Empire.

Surely, Kiſur Dramelec has ſome Deſign upon me, in being always thus tardy and negligent. I ſcarce hear from him once in half a Year,

Year; whereas he is commanded by his Superiours as well as mine, to write to me every Moon. And then, he ſends me ſuch a Lame Account of Things, ſuch Fragments and Scraps of News, that his Letters need a Comment, to make 'em Intelligible.

About Four Years ago, I modeſtly tax'd him with this Neglect, when I had Reaſon to do it in my own vindication, to Minezim Aluph, Baſſa. But Kiſur heard of it, and was very angry. He ſent me a Letter full of Invectives, which I anſwer'd with a kind of Indifference, mixing Raillery with my Juſter Reſentments. How that work'd on him, I know not; but his Reſervedneſs ever ſince, makes me conclude he ſtudies Revenge; and that he takes this method to accompliſh it, by keeping me as much in Ignorance, as he dares, of the Changes and other Important Occurrences at the Myſterious Port. He knows it wou'd be a Crime little leſs than Capital, not to write to me at all: Such a wilful Contumacy wou'd ſtreight proclaim him a Traitor; ſince, among the other Inſtructions which were given him with his Commiſſion, this Charge was none of the leaſt, That he ſhould ſend frequent Intelligence to all the Grand Signior's Agents, whether Publick or Private, in the Courts of Nazarene Princes. He is ſenſible that ſuch a manifeſt Contempt of Supreme Authority, wou'd Abſolutely ruine him. Therefore he goes more ſubtilly to work. For, he writes, indeed, but very ſeldom. And then, with cunning Artifice, Artifice, either quite conceals, or at leaſt diſguiſes the moſt conſiderable Tranſactions, only filling up his Letters with trifling Stories, and Impertinent Relations, nothing to my Purpoſe: Thinking by this Means, to bring upon me the Diſpleaſure of the Grandees, through the Miſtakes I may commit, for want of better Advertiſement.

Be it how it will, I am ſtrangely at a Loſs ſometimes, what to think, or how to write to my Superiours; or what ſort of Conduct I ſhou'd uſe in this Place, amidſt ſo many various Reports as are continually ſpread abroad in Europe, concerning the Affairs of the Seraglio, the Shining City, and other Parts of the Ottoman Empire: Whilſt this Kiſur ſtill delays to aſcertain me of any Thing.

I have been wholly a Stranger, till within theſe few Days, to the Fate of the Captain Baſſa, who was ſtrangled about a Year ago, for his Cowardiſe and Ill Conduct againſt the Venetians. Neither knew I any thing of the Adventure and Flight of his Sons. I was equally Ignorant of the Succeſſion of the Baſſa of Buda in this Important Command; and of many other changes both by Land, and Sea.

So at preſent, here are a Thouſand Rumours ſtirring about one Thing or other in the Eaſt. Some ſay, that Chuſaein Baſſa is ſtrangl'd, and that the Captain Baſſa, is made Vizier Azem in his ſtead. Others report, that this Firſt Miniſter was only depos'd from that Supream Dignity, the Seals being taken from from him; but that nevertheleſs, he ſtill continues to be General of the Sultan's Forces in Candia. A Third ſort affirm, that he intended to turn Chriſtian, holding a ſecret Correſpondence with the Patriarch of Jeruſalem, by whoſe Means and a General Revolt of the Greeks, Armenians, and other Chriſtians under the Grand Signior's Juriſdiction, he ſought to betray the Ottoman Blood, and exalt himſelf to the Empire.

I am not willing to believe, that ſuch Monſtrous Perfidy, cou'd enter into the Heart of that Illuſtrious Hero; yet know not how to contradict it, for want of true Advice.

It is reported alſo, That Signior apello, the Venetian Bailo or Reſident, at the Happy Port, has kill'd himſelf with a Ponyard: Being driven to deſpair, by his long Confinement, and the cruel Uſage he had receiv'd from the Muſſulmans. God knows whether it be true or no. It wou'd be much to my ſatisfaction, to have a particular Account of all theſe things, and of whatſoever elſe occurs worthy of Notice. For, how can I diſcharge my Truſt, whilſt I am thus kept in the Dark.

They talk here of a violent Plague that rages in Moſcovy, and that above 200000 People have died of it in the City of Moſco only, beſides Millions that have been ſwept away in the Provinces of that vaſt Empire. Thoſe that really know not themſelves, nor are acquainted with their own Nature, will yet pretend to penetrate into the Counſels of the Omnipotent, and pronounce this as a Judgment on on the Moſcovites, for the Cruelties they have committed in Poland. Doubtleſs, the Methods of Fate are Inſcrutable.

In the mean while we are plagu'd here with a crew of Vagabonds, whom they call Gypſies or Egyptians: For, they pretend to be deſcended from that Place. They ſwarm up and down the Country like Caterpillars, devouring the Fruits of the Earth. They boaſt of a Profound Skill in Palmeſtry, Viſiognomy and other Sciences, cheating People of their Money, under the Notion of telling them their Fortunes. No Body knows from whence they come, or whether they go. For, they are as uncertain as the Wind. A Nafty Generation, and the very Burden of the Land. If any Creatures be oblig'd to them, 'tis the Mice and Rats, with whom they ſeem to be in League. For they Kill and Eat all the Cats they ſeize on.

Illuſtrious Miniſter, I pray Heaven defend thee from all ſorts of Plagues and Vermin, but eſpecially from Monſters in Humane Shape.

Paris, the 26th. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year, 1655.

LET-

LETTER XV.

To the ſame.

AS I am alive, theſe Gypſies have encha
ted me: I cannot put 'em out of m Mind. And perhaps, it will neither be in pertinent nor troubleſome, to give thee a fa ther Information of them.

There are ſeveral Opinions concerning th Original of theſe Vagrants, and they have be thought worthy to be inſerted into Hiſtori
Some ſay, they came out of Tartary or Scythi and that they firſt appear'd in theſe Parts bout the Year 1417. of the Chriſtians Hegi
At which time they enter'd into Saxony i Troops, having the Paſsport of Sigiſmun
King of Hungary, and Son of Charles IV
They had alſo the Recommendations of dive other Princes, who look'd upon them as Ho Perſons or Prophets. For they pretended, tha they were commanded by God, to travel ov the whole Earth, and not to have either Hor ſes or Lands in their own Poſſeſſion: And that this was enjoyn'd 'em as a Penance to ex piate the Sin of their Anceſtors; who inhabi ting Egypt in the Days of Jeſus, the Son o Mary, the Chriſtians Meſſias, refus'd to enter tain that Holy Prophet and his Mother, whe they fled from the Perſecution of Herod.

Other

Others are of Opinion, that they came first out of Persia, and are of the Race of those who Adore the Fire. Being forc'd once in Seven Years, to make Decimations of their People, and send away many Caravans, to seek their Fortune in Foreign Countries; Persia not being able to sustain their numerous Progeny.

A Third Sort affirm, That they are the Posterity of the Ten Jewish Tribes, that were carried away Captives by Salamanassar, King of Assyria. No Body knows for certain, what they are, or of whence, They are of swarthy Complexions, wrapt up in Mantles of Cotton or Wool. They speak Seven Languages, profess Three Sciences; obey One King or General, who always travels with 'em. The Italians call 'em Cingari, from a Word in their Language, which signifies a kind of Water-Fowl, that hath no certain Nest, but is forc'd every Night to seek a New Lodging: For so these Egyptians rove from place to place. The Germans call them Zingener, from the Word Zindel, which is the constant Appellative of the King of these Ramblers; as Pharaoh was of Old among the Gypsies, and Cæsar among the Romans. In many things they resemble the Torlakins and Faquirs of the East: boasting of extraordinary Illuminations, and a constant Familiarity with God: Tho' some Learned Men among the Nazarenes, esteem 'em no better than a Crew of Cheats and Hypocrites: Even as they do those Oriental Santones; who, they say, under the Masque of an

an Uncommon Holineſs, commit a Thouſand Villanies.

God beſt knows what Judgment is to be made either of the One or the Other. But theſe Egyptians, as they call 'em, whether they are really ſuch, or no, have no great Marks of Sanctity, in that they are very Unclean. They ſeldom or never Waſh themſelves, but like the Swine, wallow in all manner of Filthineſs, eating prohibited Meats, and having their Women in Common, which are the two Sources of all Impurity.

As to the Faquirs of the Eaſt, they are ſtrict Obſervers of the Law of Abſtinence and Cleanneſs; whether they be Muſſulmans, or the Gentiles of India. And if in other Matters, they may be found faulty, 'tis very rare: And then they exceed not the Character of Humanity, which thou know'ſt, is by Nature prone to Error, and ſubject to a Thouſand Frailties and Overſights. We are all Men, and God does not expect our Conduct to be that of Angels. His Repoſe is in himſelf; and if he takes any Complacency in the Things of the World, 'tis in beholding every Thing act according to its Nature. The exquiſite Form and Symmetry of a Bee, a Spider, or a Piſmire, with the Inimitable Architecture of the Two Former, and the Admirable Providence of the Latter, may, for ought we know, afford him as much Delight, as the moſt celebrated Beauty, Strength, Science, and Performances of Men. For, his Power and Wiſdom, are equally manifeſt in All Things. Every Creature is Perfect in its Kind, only a Wicked Man is a Blot in the Univerſe.

Creature

Wouldſt thou know what the Weſtern Nazarenes are moſt buſie about at this Time? 'Tis the Election of a New Pope. He is to be choſen by the College of Cardinals, who are Princes of the Roman Church. They are all ſhut up in a Place, which they call the Conclave. This is a certain Gallery in the Palace of the Vatican at Rome; where every Cardinal has his Cell or Apartment by himſelf, having only Two Servants to attend him. The Conclave is ſurrounded by the Roman Militia, to prevent all Intercourſe by Letters, or other Ways, between thoſe without, and thoſe within. The very Diſhes which are ſerv'd up at the Tables of the Cardinals, are narrowly ſearch'd, leſt any Letters ſhould be convey'd in them. The laſt Poſts from Rome, aſſure us, That there were no leſs than 66 Cardinals thus ſhut up, when they left that City. And, there they muſt remain Night and Day, without taking the freſh Air, or ſeeing any Body, till they have agreed in their Election. There are two Phyſicians, a Surgeon, and an Apothecary, ſhut up with 'em, to ſerve 'em in Caſe of Sickneſs.

One of the Conclaviſts is the Cardinal de Retz, who eſcaped out of his Priſon in this Kingdom, and fled to Rome for Protection. From whence he ſent a Letter to the Arch-Biſhops, and other Prelates of France; which being pronounced a Seditious Libel againſt the King and the Government, was in the End of the laſt Moon burnt publickly by the King's

Order, and all Copies of it prohibited.

The King has alſo ſent private Inſtructions to the Cardinals of his Party at Rome, to keep a ſtrict Watch on the Conduct of de Retz, and to oppoſe him in all Things.

Here is nothing but Caballing and Intrigue among theſe Infidels: They are good at a Stratagem, and know better how to undermine one another, than to face their Enemies in the open Field: Which is a Character more ſuitable to Women than Men. Whereas thou know'ſt, our Hero's in the Eaſt, know no other Way to Honour, Victory, and Empire, than by downright Bravery and Reſolution, ſubduing all Things by the Force of their Arms. But God, when he divided the Nations of the Earth, and ſeparated the Sons of Noah, aſſign'd to every one a different Conſtellation, according to whoſe Influence, the Genius of each People is diſpoſed. They all obey the Dictates of their Particular Star, and the Orders of Eternal Deſtiny.

Therefore, Sage Miniſter, ſince Mars is the Planet of the Sons of Iſmael, and the Aſcendant of the Ottoman Empire, there is no Need, that we ſhould turn Apoſtates from the Star of our better Fortune, to court the Glances of Mercury, who is only the Guardian of Knaves and Cheats.

Paris, 26th. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1655.

The End of Firſt Book.

LETTERS

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. V.

BOOK II.

LETTER I.

To Cara Hali, Phyſician to the Grand Signior.

FOrmerly I could have writ to thee with as much Freedom, as I could to Egri Boinou, (on whom reſt the Favours of God) or as I can now to Gnet Ogion, to my Brother Peſteli Hali, or to any of my Familiar Friends. But when I conſider the Eminent Station thou poſſeſſeſt, in that the Health and Life of the Mighty Emperor is now committed to thy Skill and Care, I am many Times at a Stand how to addreſs my ſelf. Methinks, thou art tinctur'd with the Majeſty of that Perſonage, whoſe Hand thou ſo often haſt the Honour to touch, when re-quir'd to diſcover by the beating of his Pulſe the Interiour Maladies which afflict his Royal Soul. Yet I know thou ſtill retaineſt thy Humanity, and wilt not deſpiſe thoſe whom thou haſt once thought worthy of Friendſhip.

Suffer me then to converſe with a Philoſophick Freedom, that is in an Addreſs void of Formalities and Reſerves.

I know 'tis of no Import, whether Mahomet be ſick or well, provided the Grand Signior be ſerv'd. What ſignifie the Languiſhing Pains, or more Acute Agonies of a Slave, ſo long as he is able to carry on his Maſter's Intereſt? We are not born for our ſelves only, but by the very Condition of our Nature are oblig'd to conſecrate our Lives to the Service of others. 'Tis a Recipocral Debt, from which no Mortal is free. Every Man owes Something to his Relations, more to his Friends, but moſt of all to the Publick.

Therefore I make no Complaints of my Lot, nor murmur at the Will of Deſtiny. I accuſe not the Stars of my Nativity, nor tax 'em with Unkindly Aſpects: But am contented with my Fortune, be it Good or Bad, and reſign'd to the Pleaſure of Heaven.

As Nature has fram'd my Body Infirm and Weak, ſubject to a Thouſand Maladies; So is my my Mind alſo haraſs'd with Diſtempers which have no Number. But above all, I labour under a Kind of Intellectual Fever, a perpetual Thirſt of Knowledge, which all the Books and Converſe in the World cannot ſatisfie. There is no End of my Doubts and Scruples. Every Thing appears to me as Ambiguous, as the Anſwers of the Delphic Oracle. Nay, I am a perfect Riddle to my ſelf.

Tell me, dear Hali, how I ſhould cure this Dropſy of the Mind, and I will not trouble thee with the Inconſiderable Diſeaſes of my Body. I have a high Opinion of you Phyſicians: And ſhall put more Confidence in thy Advice, than in the Teſta of the Mufti. Conceal not thy Art from Mahmut, who admires thee with a Reſpect equal to that which he pays to the Memories of Avicen, Al Razi, Helal, and the Reſt of thoſe excellent Phyſicians, mentioned in our Arabian Hiſteries.

And now theſe Ornaments of our Nation are come into my Mind, permit them to divert me from ſaying or thinking any more of my ſelf at preſent: For it will be better to turn the Diſcourſe to ſuch Illuſtrious Themes. At worſt, it will be but an Innocent Digreſſion.

In peruſing the Lives of thoſe Famous Men, I meet with ſome Paſſages which are very Delightful. Perhaps thou haſt ſeen the ſame. Yet 'twill do thee no Hurt, to call 'em again to thy Remembrance.

I have read in a certain Manuſcript, penn'd by Ibrahim the Son of Helal, a Renown'd Physician at Badgat, this Memoir of his Father. "On a certain Day, says he, that my Father "had administred Physick to the Emperor Tu-"rnn, for which he was presented with a Roy-"al Vest, rewarded with Five Thousand Pie-"stres, and by the Emperor's Command was "carried through the Streets in State, I observ'd "that he was Pensive amidst all those Ho-"nours, and troubled in Mind, when I thought "he had greatest Reason to rejoice. There-"fore I said to him, My Father, How comes it "to pass, that you are thus dejected, at a Time "when all the World expects to see you dissolv'd "in Pleasure? He answered, Son, He that "has bestowed these Honours on me is a Fool, "and does things preposterously without Reason. "And therefore I cannot rejoyce at these Un-"timely Favours he has shewed me, being sen-"sible they are not the Effects of his Judgment, "but of his Ignorance. I gave him a Cathar-"tic Potion, which work'd so strongly with him, "that it excoriated his Bowels, and brought forth "Blood. So that I was forced to use a different "Method, both to remove his Distemper, and "stop the Violent Flux. "In the mean while, he "Ignorantly believing, That the Voiding of so "much Blood, procured him the present Ease "and Health he feels, therefore ordered these "Honours to be done me which thou seest. Now "that which saddens me, is my Fear, lest some "Time or other, he may through his Ignorance "commit as great an Error on the Contrary "Side and suspect that I have done him an "Injury, when there is no Ground for it, and "so put me to Death.

Tell

Tell me, my Friend, had not this Phyſician Reaſon for his Behaviour and Words? He was a Man of Great Abilities, accompliſh'd with divers Sciences, and in high Eſteem with the Princes and Nobles of Arabia.

It were worth thy Pains to peruſe frequently the Life of Avicen, written by himſelf, wherein thou wilt behold the Methods he us'd to acquire a Profound Skill in the Sciences: How he was at firſt puzzl'd in the Metaphyſicks, and was almoſt driven to Deſpair, till a Dream unfolded to him whatſoever was difficult. When he was at a Loſs in any Diſquiſition, he us'd to frequent the Moſques, and pour forth Devout and Fervent Oraiſons to the Source of Intellectual Lights, till the Thing was manifeſted to him. He ſate up late a-Nights, having a Lamp perpetually burning in his Chamber, applying himſelf attentively to Books and Contemplation. This was his Courſe, till he was Conſummate in all the Liberal Sciences, which was in the Eighteenth Year of his Age.

But of all the Phyſicians whoſe Names adorn our Hiſtory, none ſeems Comparable to Thabet Eb'n Abrahim, for his Skill in exactly Indicating the Cauſes of a Diſtemper by the Different Meaſures of the Pulſe. Abul Pharai, his Contemporary and Friend, writes thus of him. "On a certain Day, ſays he, when "I was with Thabet Eb'n Abrahim of Har-"rain, in the Houſe of Abu Mohammed the "Vizir, Abu Adalla Ebno'l Hejai the Poet being there alſo, reach'd forth his Hand to

" Thabet, desiring him to feel his Pulse. To " whom the Physician forthwith reply'd, Thou " hast us'd a Gross Diet, and been Intemperate
" in eating sowr Milk with Veal. The other " answering, That it was true, and all the " Company admiring; Abu'l Abbas the Astro- " loger, also reach'd forth his Hand. But when
" Thabet had felt his Pulse, Thou, said he, hast
" committed an Express in taking too much of " Cold Things; for, as I judge, thou hast eat
" about Eleven Pomegranates. Immediately
" Abu'l Abbas cry'd out, This is a Prophet
" certainly, and more than a Physician; for he " speaks the Truth to a Tittle. Every Body was " astonished at his Wondrous Knowledge, and " I more than all the Rest. Wherefore, when " I had him alone, I said, My dear Thabet,
" The Study of Physick is Common to us both;
" therefore hide nothing from me, but discover
" freely by what Art you were able to tell, That
" the Poet eat sowr Milk with Veal, and not " as well with Beef or Mutton; and that the " Astrologer eat no more nor less than Eleven " Pomegranates? He answered, My Mind
" suggested this to me, and prompted my Tongue
" to utter it. Then I desir'd him to shew me
" the Scheme of his Nativity: Which he did " at his own House. And considering it at" tentively, I observ'd, That the Planet Ju- " piter was Lord of the Horoscope. Then I " said to him, 'Tis this speaks, my Dear Friend,
" not you, so often as you make these Fortunate
" Conjectures. Thus far Abul Pharai.

God

God knows, whether the Stars have any ſuch Influence on Men in their Birth, or no. I am not very Credulous in this Point. Nor can the Authority of the Ancients, or the Character of the Perſian and Chaldean Magi captivate my Mind in an Implicit Faith of Things ſo liable to Doubt. Who knows what the Stars are made of, or for what Ends they are Created? Yet I muſt own, that ſome Men ſeem to be born with Inherent Faculties, which others can never acquire with all the Art and Induſtry in the World. One Man is of a Poetick Conſtitution: Another is Genially inclin'd to Phyſick; a Third excels in Mechanicks: Every Man has his Peculiar Gift. And yet perhaps all this while, the Stars have Nothing to do in the Matter. However, if there be any Truth in Aſtrology, the Perſians, Chaldeans, Arabians, and Indians, ſeem to be the only Men of all Nations, Conſtellated to underſtand this Science perfectly. One knows not what to think amidſt ſo many Appearances of Truth and Falſhood. Nor can our Thoughts be of any great Import, be it how it will, in theſe Speculative Matters. At the Day of Judgment we ſhall not be ask'd, What Proficiency we have made in Logick, Metaphyſicks, Aſtronomy, or any other Science; but, Whether we have lived according to our Nature, as Men, endu'd with Morality and Reaſon. In that Hour it will more avail us, That we have thrown a Handful of Flower-in Charity to a Neſt of contemptible Piſmires, than that we could muſter all all the Hoſts of Heaven, and call every Star by its proper Name. For, then the Conſtellations themſelves ſhall diſappear, the Sun and Moon ſhall give no more Light, and all the Frame of Nature ſhall vaniſh: But our Good and Bad Works ſhall remain for ever, Recorded in the Archives of Eternity.

If from this manner of Writing, thou ſhalt conjecture I am Melancholy, and will alſo reveal the Cauſes and Remedy of this Diſtemper, thou ſhalt be more to me, than a Thouſand Avicen's, Helal's, Thabet's, or all the Phyſicians and Aſtrologers of the Eaſt. For, theſe Kind of Thoughts are Mournful as the Shadow of Death.

Paris, 23d. of the 4th Moon,
of the Year 1655.

LETTER II.

To Aſis, Baſſa.

I Know not whether thou wilt praiſe or condemn the Sentence, which the Elector of Saxony pronounced not long ago on a Poor Fellow for killing a Deer. Yet becauſe there is ſomething very Singular in it, I will relate the whole Paſſage, as I receiv'd it from Nathan Ben Saddi, the Jew at Vienna.

In the Moon of Chetival, a certain Citizen of Wirtemberg was accuſed before the Elector for hunting in his Foreſt, and killing one of his Deer. The Duke in a Rage, commanded him to be ſet upon a Stag, his Hands chain'd to the Horns, and his Feet under the Belly of the Beaſt; ordering, that the Stag with this Burden, ſhould be let looſe to run whither he would. The poor frighten'd Stag not being accuſtomed to ſuch a Load, and terrified with the rattling of the Chains, ran away full ſpeed over Hills and Dales, through Thickets of Briars and Thorns, never ſtopping, till he had meaſur'd above Three and Thirty German Leagues; and then tyr'd with ſo vaſt a Race, he fell down. At which Inſtant, a Caravan was coming by that Place, out of Sileſia.

The poor Wretch on the Back of the Stag, almoſt dead with the Pains he had undergone, in ſo continued and violent a Motion, being alſo ſorely bruis'd, and his Fleſh torn and mangled by the Boughs of Trees, as the Stag ruſh'd through thick Woods; cry'd aloud to the Caravan, begging that ſome of them would in Mercy diſpatch him out of his Torments. But they, either for fear of the Duke's Diſpleaſure, or for other Reaſons, refuſed him this Kindneſs. So that after the Stag had reſted a while, and recovered new Spirits, he began a freſh Career; and never ceas'd running, till he arrived at a certain Monaſtery or Convent of Religious, where he beat againſt the Gate with his Horns, till ſome of the Derviſes open'd it;

it, and let him in. They aſtoniſhed to ſee a Man thus pinion'd to a Stag, his Face, Arms, Legs, and all his Body cover'd with Blood, and himſelf ready to expire, immediately brought him Cordials and other Refreſhments, whilſt ſome were employ'd in looſing his Chains. But being informed by his own Mouth, how he came into this Condition, they began to think of turning him looſe again, for fear of the Duke's Anger. However, ſuffering themſelves to be overcome by the Importunity of the Miſerable Man, and relying on their Eccleſiaſtick Privileges (for here in the Weſt, the Convents are generally allow'd Sanctuaries for all ſorts of Offenders) they took him into their Protection: But he expired that Night.

It is hard to determine whether the Duke, or theſe Derviſes, were in the Right or Wrong. The French, who of late, have by a Faſhion learn'd to grow Obdurate, juſtifie the Proceedings of this Prince's ſaying, That Pity is a Paſſion fit only for Women, Children, and Fools. They eſteem it a Mark of a Great Spirit, a Mind capable of Empire, not to be moved with the Sighs or Tears of the Miſerable; but to frown or laugh at the Misfortunes of others. This, they ſay, is the only Method to harden Men for War, Conqueſts, and Plunder: Where the Victors are to cut their Way to Honour and Riches, through the Hearts of the Vanquiſh'd, to quench the ardent Thirſt of Glory with Humane Blood, and to celebrate their Triumphs, only

nely in the midſt of horrid Maſſacres and Funerals,

'Tis true, theſe Principles and Actions are allowable in Men of the Sword, when they fight the Battels of their King and Country, in Heat of Blood. But, Clemency and Compaſſion, are Virtues becoming the Greateſt Prince, or moſt valiant General, when their Enemies are reduc'd, by the Fortune of War, to kiſs the Duſt of their Feet, and beg for Mercy: Or, when in Time of Peace, their Subjects fall into a Crime which may admit of Indulgence. Certainly, theſe Weſtern Infidels have wrong Notions of Humanity, in aſſerting, That Cruelty is either a Sign of a Noble Nature, or a Step to true Happineſs: Since, the moſt hard-hearted Tyrant, one Time or other, will have need of Compaſſion himſelf; eſpecially in Sickneſs and the Agonies of Death, which perhaps prove more tormenting to him, than to the Merciful and Generous. It is recorded of Al Hejai Eb'n Hoſha'm, a Famous Arabian Captain, that when in a Malignant Fever, he call'd for Water to drink, and it was deny'd him by the Phyſician, who had Care of his Health; It is enough, ſaid he; Rueno'ddaula, once my Lieutenant, to whom I forgave Three Treaſons, and who died a Natural Death, has refreſhed me at this Minute with a Liquor unknown: Sure, 'tis the Wine of Paradiſe. And from that Moment he began to recover his Health, after which he liv'd many Years, often rehearſing this Paſſage among his familiar Friends to his laſt Day.

But

But the Infidels are either ignorant of these Examples, or if they know 'em, Pride will not suffer 'em to learn Morality and Justice. They are destin'd, the greatest Part, to be Incredulous to the Day of Judgement. How many Prophets has God sent into all Nations, to teach them the Right Way, and not the Way of such with whom he is displeas'd; yet they will not be Converted? They look on the Apostles and Messengers of the Eternal, with the Eyes of Swine; They grunt under the Burden of their Sensuality, and like those Filthy Animals, return to their Mire again. Yet, that Superlatively Merciful, winks at their Frailties, and visits them with his Graces every Morning. But they put their Fingers in their Ears, and turn away in Disdain, as from a Beggar. They reject the King of All Things, as a Fugitive and Vagabond on Earth.

From that Delectable Essence, the Odour of whose Sweetness is diffus'd through the Elements, and refreshes the Minds of the True Faithful; let us by continual Devotion and Virtue, attract Divine Tinctures, till our Hearts be all transform'd into Incense, and in this Aromatick Pile, our Souls expire like the Phœnix, to revive again in the Joys of Paradise, in Amours which know no End.

Paris, 8th of the 5th Moon,
of the Year, 1635.

LETTER

LETTER III.

To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna.

I Wonder at nothing: Much leſs, at the Extravagant Caprices of Tyrants. Methinks, there appears no Novelty in Modern Tranſactions. They are but a Repetition of Ancient Practices, under New Forms. Of all the Events in this Age, not one has come to my knowledge which gives me a Surprize. Yet, I muſt confeſs, there is ſomething very Singular in the Puniſhment the Duke of Saxony inflicted, as thy Letter tells me, on the poor Deer-Stealer. And, if it be juſt to put a Man to Death on ſuch an Account, as the Indians hold; the Duke ſeems very Ingenious and Accurate, in the Choice he made of an Executioner.

The Ancient Romans had a Law, which they call'd Lex Talionis. Which in all Criminal Caſes, appointed the Puniſhment to be in ſome Circumſtances Adequate to the Fault. And thou know'ſt, Moſes your Lawgiver, left much the ſame Statutes: Requiring the Loſs of the Eye of him, who had put another Man's out; a Tooth for a Tooth, an Arm for an Arm, and ſo proportionably of other Injuries. But this Prince ſeems to have made a Supplement, where theſe Laws appear'd pear'd ſhort; and has ſhew'd a moſt Exquiſite Niceneſs of Revenge in the Deſtiny of the Unfortunate Huntſman, to cauſe a Stag to be, in ſo peculiar a Manner, the Inſtrument of his Death, who had villainouſly murder'd one of the ſame Species; Doubtleſs, it was a Princely Freak of Juſtice: And had it been done purely to avenge the Blood of the ſlaughter'd Beaſt, and not in vindication of his own Right, I cou'd not forbear to pronounce it a Frolick worthy of a Hero. But, he himſelf is frequently guilty of the ſame kind of Murder, as are moſt of the Great Men in Europe; whoſe Tables are no other than the Altars of Guttony, ſmoaking with Fleſh and Blood, whilſt Hecatombs of Animals are there ſacrific'd to Voracious Appetites, the Idols of theſe Weſtern People.

Methinks therefore, it had been more Generous and becoming a Prince, to pardon the Poor Fellow a Theft, which perhaps was the only Method he had to preſerve himſelf and his Family from ſtarving. And for ought I know, he had as much Right according to the Law of Nature, to kill a Stag, as the Owner his. But, there is no Talk to be made of Right or Wrong, where Power over-rules all.

India is at preſent the only Publick Theatre of Juſtice toward all Living Creatures. There, it is a Capital Crime to ſhed the Blood of any Animal, and puniſh'd with Death no leſs than the Murder of a Man. The Princes and Nobles indeed incloſe Deer, and other

Innocent

Innocent Creatures in Parks, not with a Deſign to prey upon them at their Pleaſure, but to defend 'em from the Violence of others; whilſt thoſe happy Animals range and feed where they pleaſe within thoſe Pales, free from Peril, and never fearing any other Death, ſave what they pay to Nature, when they have ſpun out the accuſtom'd Term of their Life. They alſo build Hoſpitals for a like Purpoſe. And are at a great Charge every Year, to redeem a certain Number of Oxen and Cows from Slaughter. For they eſteem it a barbarous and inhumane Cruelty, to murder thoſe Creatures, which are the Nurſes of our Life.

The Law of Moſes, if I miſtake not, obliges all of thy Nation to certain Specifique Tenderneſſes towards the Dumb Animals. And Eeſa the Prophet, a Man of no obſcure Extract, but of a Noted Race among the Hebrews, ſays, He that killeth an Ox, is as if he ſlew a Man, and he that ſacrificeth a Lamb, as if he beheaded a Dog. And in another place, the ſame Prophet ſays, in the Perſon of God, To what purpoſe is the Multitude of your Sacrifices to me? I am offended with the Smoak of your Burnt-offerings, and nauſeated with the Smell of broiled Fat. I take no Delight in the Blood of Bulls, Lambs or Goats. Who hath required theſe things at your Hands? Bring no more vain Oblations, which my Soul hateth.

By theſe Expreſſions one would think, the Prophet brings in God, denying that ever he commanded any such Sacrifices or shedding of Blood, and protested against it, as an Abomination. Where then is the Reputation of those Writings which go under the Name of Moses? For, in them these bloody Victims are expresly enjoyned. God cannot be Contradictory to himself. Doubtless, a great part of the True Law which God gave to Moses, was lost in the former Captivities of your Nation, when your Cities and Provinces were quite dispeopl'd, your Fathers led away by the Victorious Monarchs of the East, and your choicest Memoirs Abolish'd. So that what remains now, is only a Collection of Fragments patch'd up by Esdras, and other Industrious Scribes, to which they gave the Specious Title of the Law of Moses, that so they might fasten the wavering People in Obedience, to something, tho' of their own devising.

Nathan. I do not go about to seduce thee, Examine All Things. Believe neither me, nor thy own Rabbi's, but trust only thy Reason, which will stand by thee at the Day of Judgment, when all Things else shall fail.

Paris, 8th of the 5th Moon of the Year, 1655.

LETTER

LETTER IV.

To Dgebe Nafir, Baſſa,

THeſe Nazarenes, like the Followers of the Prophet, are divided into Innumerable Sects; and ſo 'tis in all Religions. Men cannot think alike. Nature it ſelf delights in Variety. God has diverſify'd the Faculties of our Souls, as he has the Conſtitutions of our Bodies. The Zealot is ſubject to Choler; the Bigot to Melancholy; the Libertine, is of a Sanguine Complexion; and as for the reſt, they are but ſo many Walking, Speaking Lumps of Flegm. This is the Phyſical Diviſion of Mortals: Under which are comprehended, the various Tempers which reſult from the different Mixture of theſe Four Radical Principles. And for this, we muſt thank Galen and Hippocrates.

But, if we conſult the Aſtrologers, they will aſſign as many different Humours and Complexions, as there be Stars in the Heavens, at leaſt, as there be Conſtellations. They'll tell ye of the Bull and the Bear, and God knows what Heavenly Stories. The Dragon ſhall ſpit Venom on one Man's Nativity, out of his Mouth; and give another a poiſonous Lick with his Tail. If we believe all they ſay, there is not an Herb in the Field, but has its particular Star, whoſe Influence cauſes it to grow and proſper; thô Moſes tells us, that all all the Vegetables appear'd on the Earth, even before the Stars themſelves had their Exiſtence in the Heavens.

But, whether there be any Truth in Aſtrology, or no; this is certain, that Men differ in their Sentiments of Religion, as they do in their Faces. The Phiſiognomy of Faith, is Infinitely various. One Man believes in Moſes, another in Jeſus the Son of Mary, a Third in Mahomet our Holy Law-giver. Then theſe are ſubdivided into Innumerable Parties. The Jews have Seventy eminent Religious Factions. There are number'd Seventy and One Sects of Chriſtians, and Seventy Two of Muſſulmans. Theſe are all at Odds about Words and Exteriour Ceremonies; ſo zealous for Charity and Peace, that they are in perpetual Wars for its ſake, murdering one another in the Love of God: And ſuch ſtout Champions for the Truth, that they ſcruple not to tell Ten Thouſand Lyes in its Defence.

The Differences between the Greek and Armenian Nazarenes, the Neſtorians and Jacobites, with other Sects of the Eaſt, are not unknown to the Miniſters of the Port. But perhaps thou art a Stranger to the Newer Schiſms of the Weſt.

The moſt Eminent Diviſion of Chriſtendom at this Time, is into Catholicks and Proteſtants. The former obey the Roman Mufti, and boaſt of an Uninterrupted Series of Caliphs from Peter the Vicar of the Meſſias, down to the preſent Pope. The Latter are the Followers of of Luther and Calvin, Men who pretended to certain New Lights, and claim'd a Right to reform the Errors of their Fathers, in Matters of Faith and Worſhip. God beſt knows, who's in the Right or Wrong, of theſe Two Parties: But, they have always been at Daggers-drawing in defence of their ſeveral Tenets; perſecuting and maſſacring one another, for Conſcience-ſake. Both Sides appeal to the Written Law, to Apoſtolical Traditions, to the Teſtimony of the Ancients, the Decrees of Councils, and the Practice of thoſe whom they call the Primitive Church. Yet neither Part will allow the other a ſufficient Judgment to Interpret thoſe Memoirs of Antiquity, nor an Authentick Power to decide Controverſies of this Nature. Thus their Diſputes are like to laſt, till the Final Day of Deciſion, when all Human Quarrels ſhall be determin'd before the Grand Tribunal.

In the mean Time they take all Advantages, to excute their Spight and Malice on each other, under the Notion of Juſtice and Piety. We are daily alarm'd here with Tragical Relations of horrid Murders and Butcheries committed on the Proteſtants of Piedmont, and other Parts under the Duke of Savoy. Whilſt ſome ſay, That all theſe Reports are falſe, and the Sufferings of thoſe People are according to Law, the due Puniſhment of their Rebellious Actions.

It is not in my Power, to adjuſt their Differences; nor is it Material to a Muſſulman, man, which of them has the Law on their Side. Yet, if I were inclin'd to take any Part, it ſhou'd be that of the Oppreſſed. Cruelty I abhor: And our Holy Prophet has forbid force to be us'd in Matters of Religion, ſince the Conſcience is Reſponſible to none but God.

May that God, from whoſe Unity have ſprung all the Different Eſſences in the World, and all the Variety in Nature, give us Grace to love the Whole Creation, and not to ſhed Blood unleſs in the Sacred Combat.

Paris, the 13th. of the 6th. Moon, of the Year 1655.

LETTER V.

To William Voſpel, a Recluſe of Auſtria.

I Had concluded thee Dead, till thy Letter certify'd me to the contrary. So long a Silence between Friends, wou'd put any Man upon the ſame Thoughts. Ten Years have ſlipt away between my laſt to thee, and thy Anſwer. I hope thou doſt not meaſure Time, after the Rate of the Seven Sleepers. Perhaps thou haſt been enjoyn'd a ten years Silence and Abſtinence from all manner of Converſation, by the Superiour of thy Convent. Such Severities are not uncommon in Religious Societies, ties, where the main Buſineſs is, to acquire Perfection. The Armenian Monaſteries are much more Rigid, where but for One Extravagant Word, I have known a Man's Tongue lock'd up for the ſpace of Two and twenty Years, under Pain of Excommunication; and then releas'd, only for the ſake of a moſt Significant Jeſt, put on the Patriarch in Mute Signs. Wit will find a way to vent it ſelf, tho it be at the Fingers Ends. And for ought I know, thou haſt oblig'd thy Abbot to take off the Cenſure by the like Method. There was abundance of Satyre in the Subſannation of the Ancient Romans; and no leſs Rhetorick in the Shrugg or Grimace of the Modern Italians. The Mimicks of Scaramouchi, are a perfect Lampoon; and Harlequin is Burleſque all over.

Thou know'ſt I always entertain thee with one frivilous Diſcourſe or other, to divert thy Melancholy; and thy own Letters give me Encouragement. They ſeem to be writ in a pleaſant Humour. But tell me, have I gueſs'd right at the cauſe of ſo tedious a Reſervedneſs, or no? Haſt thou been forc'd all this while, to ſpeak with thy Hands, Feet, Noſe, and the Emphatick Motions of thy Head and Eyes? If it were ſo, I fancy thou wert excellent Company, among thy Grave Flegmatick Brethren; and in a fair way to underſtand the Language of the Beaſts, who by curvetting, creeping, leaping, friſking their Tails and other Poſtures, expreſs their various Paſſions, Deſires and Neceſſities, as Intelgibly ligibly to thoſe who are us'd to them, as we can do by the moſt Elegant Addreſſes in Words.

But to be ſerious: If for the ſake of Virtue, this Penance be impos'd on thee by him who Preſides over thy Convent, or thou haſt Voluntarily undertaken ſo difficult a Part of Self-Denyal on the Score of Philoſophy or Religion, thou haſt approv'd thy ſelf wiſe and brave in not flinching. A Coward in Religious Matters, is as deſpicable, as in the Engagements of the World. 'Tis Honourable to face Temptations, and come off with Victory.

As for what thou deſireſt to know concerning the Sepulchre of King Childerick; It is eſteem'd a Piece of great Antiquity: In Regard he was the Fourth Monarch of France. He Reign'd over the Gauls or Franks in the Year 458. Severus being Emperour of Rome, Severinus and Degalaiphus, Conſuls. Yet in little more than three Years, he was Depos'd and baniſh'd by his Subjects, whilſt one Ægidius a Roman, was Crown'd in his ſtead. Neither did this Man pleaſe the People ſo well, but that after ſome Experience of his Oppreſſion, Avarice and other Vices, they expell'd him alſo, and recall'd their Lawful Sovereign. For Ægidius had vex'd them with unreaſonable Taxes, fleecing them of many Millions, which he privately ſent out of the Kingdom, diſpoſing of this vaſt Treaſure at Rome, and among his Friends in other Parts, as a Support againſt Future Contingencies: For, he look'd for ſome Back-Blows of Fate. Childeric therefore fore being reſtor'd to his Crown, enjoy'd it till his Death; which was in the Year 484 After whom ſucceeded in the Kingdom, Clodoveus the Great, who was the Firſt French King that embrac'd Chriſtianity.

The Time when Childeric's Tomb was firſt diſcover'd, was about Two Years ago, when the Cathedral of Tournay wanted Reparation. For, as the Labourers were digging up the Old Charnel-Houſe, they encounter'd a long Stone; which giving 'em ſome Fatigue, they broke in Peices, and found under it the Entire Skeleton of a Man lying at Length, with Abundance of Greek Medals of Gold, and ſome other Curioſities of the ſame Metal, among which was a Ring with this Motto, SIGILLUM CHILDERICI REGIS.

All theſe Reliques were at firſt poſſeſs'd by the Canons of that Church, where they were found: Of whom they were begg'd by the Arch-Duke of Auſtria, who has them in his Cuſtody. Therefore thoſe who told thee they are in the King of France's Hands, were miſinform'd themſelves, or deſign'd to abuſe thee. For this cannot be ſuppos'd, during the preſent Wars between France and Spain: When they are more ready on both Sides to plunder one another, than to Grant Civilites of this obliging Nature.

I perceive, thou art grown a great Antiquary; and therefore in Token of my Eſteem I have ſent thee a Cabinet of ſuch Old Things as I have ſcrap'd together in my Travels, and during my Reſidence in this City.

The Agates which you will find in the Uppermoſt Drawer, may eaſily be dated by their Figures which are all after the Faſhion of Gentile Rome. As for the Shells in the Second, I leave 'em to thy own Judgment; onely this I will ſay, That they are not Common. The Third contains a Miſcellany of ſeveral Antiques. The Knives were us'd by the Ancient Roman Prieſts in their Sacrifices. The Weights are at leaſt Twelve Hundred Years Old, by the Parallels which I have ſeen in the Kings Library. The Rings alſo are of the Parthian Make: And the Arrow to which they are faſten'd, retains its Oriental Venom to this Hour; as thou wilt find by trying it on any Animal that deſerves it. But, after all, the Lowermoſt Drawer contains Nothing but Counterfeits. For, thoſe Medals are the work of Parmezan, the fineſt Graver in the World. If thou knoweſt not his Character, I'll tell thee in a Word; he was Famous for imitating ſo Exactly the moſt Ancient Medals, that the Tranſcripts cou'd not be diſcern'd, even by the moſt Skilful Artiſts, from the Originals.

Accept theſe, with the ſame good Will as I did, when they were preſented to me, and tell me wherein elſe I can gratify thy Wiſhes.

You Monaſticks are infinitely Happy, in the Advantages of Retirement and Tranquility. You are free from the Cares which moleſt other Mortals. The Bell rings you to Prayers, Prayers, and to your Repaſt. You have Nothing elſe to regard, but your Contemplations and Studies. Many Great Lights have ſprung from your Various Orders. And I tell thee, Father William, the World will be diſappointed, if thou ſhould'ſt prove a Dark-Lanthorn, and only be Wiſe for thy Self.

Paris 25th. of the 6th Moon,
of the Year 1655.

LETTER VI.

To the moſt Illuſtrious and Invincible Vizer Azem, at the Port.

BY the Sound which the Sun makes at his going down, I ſwear, I was not miſtaken in the Idea I had of thy Generoſity. And, the Diſpatch with which thou haſt honour'd the Slave Mahmut, confirms me in a perfect Security of thy Favour and Protection.

I ſhall with exquiſite Diligence obey thy Orders. But it cannot be attempted, without vaſt Sums of Money. And if I may be thought worthy to give Advice to my Superiours, the moſt Effectual Way to accompliſh this, will be by ſending one of the Principal Miniſters to this Court, with a ſplendid Embaſſy. For, this Young King expects very Honourable Addreſs, from all that ſeek his more Intimate Friendſhip. Therefore a Chiaus wou'd be ſlighted on ſuch an Occaſion, and marr all the Deſign. I would counſel, That ſomebody be ſent who perfectly underſtands the Genius of the French, and the particular Aims of Cardinal Mazarini.

Under the Protection of ſuch a one, I ſhou'd be able without Hazard of a Diſcovery, to Act all that is neceſſary to carry on this Deſign with good Succeſs. Here are Abundance of needy Courtiers, on whom Gold will have a powerful Influence. But neither I in Perſon, nor any one whom I ſhall depute, can make ſuch Tenders, unleſs there were here ſome known Publick Embaſſador from the Grand Signior, to countenance the Buſineſs. For, otherwiſe it will preſently be whiſper'd, That ſome private Agent lurks here Incognito. They will ſtart a Thouſand Chimera's of Jealouſie; and ſo I may run the Hazard of a Second Impriſonment, when the Cardinal ſhall call to mind the Occaſion of my Firſt. All that I can then ſay of my being a Moldavian, will find no Credit; and 'twill be no leſs than a Miracle, if they do not expoſe me to a Scrutiny for the Mark of Circumciſion. Which if it be found, all's betray'd and ruin'd.

I do not value the Puniſhments they will inflict on me, nor the Loſs of my Life: But I dread the more Important Conſequences of ſuch a Diſcovery; the unmasking the Secrets of the Grand Signior to Infidels.

Theſe are the Chief Reaſons I have to offer in behalf of an Honourable Embaſſy. As to the the Perſon whom thou ſhalt think fit to employ in ſo Glorious a Truſt, I will not preſume to add any thing to what I have ſaid already, That he be a Man of Experience in the French Affairs, well vers'd in the Knowledge of Chriſtian policy, the different Intereſts of the Courts of Europe, and one that exactly knows what Advantage to make of the New Pope. For, after long Debates, the Cardinals have at laſt Elected one, who has aſſum'd the Name of Alexander VII.

It is hard to Judge at his Firſt Acceſſion to that Sovereign Chair, what Intereſt this Prelate will embrace, whether that of France or Spain: Or whether his Conduct will be Neutral, deporting himſelf with an equal Indifference to all the Nazarene Princes whom he calls his Sons, endeavouring to compoſe their Quarrels, and unite their Forces againſt the Muſſulmans. I tell thee no body can be yet aſſur'd, what the Temper of the Roman Mufti may prove. For, it is uſual for the aſpiring Cardinals, to promiſe many Things in hopes of the Papacy which they never perform, when they have once obtain'd the Uncontroulable Command. Diſſimulation is rank'd among the Principal Vertues, in the Court of Rome: and he that knows not how to diſguiſe his Affections, is not thought worthy of any Important Truſt. Adonai the Jew, has loſt his Liberty in that City, for being defective in this Courtly Accompliſhment. It ſeems, he and ſome others of his Nation rail'd too paſſionately and openly, at the Idolatry of the Romans. Yet I expect daily to hear of his Relief; for, I underſtand by a Letter from him, that he was excepted out of the Number of thoſe, whoſe Condemnation is Irrevocable.

I reprov'd him for his Immorality, in reflecting on the Eſtabliſh'd Religion, of the Country where he reſides. But, this kind of Arrogance, is the peculiar Vice of the Hebrews. They deſpiſe all other people in the World: Whereas thou know'ſt the Impartial God reſpects not One Nation more than another; For, they are all equally the Works of his Hands. And for ought we know, he tolerates the Variety of Religions that are extant in the World, with the ſame Indifference, as he diſpences his Common Bleſſings to ſuch an Infinite Number of Men of diverſe Faces.

The Multiplicity in the Univerſe, exalts the Divine Unity, which is the Root of All. And if there be Ten Thouſand Myriads of Worlds, they all ſprang from One Cauſe, and there they end. For he is the Firſt and Laſt of Every Thing.

Paris, 2d. of the 7th. Moon,
of the Year 1655.

LETTER

LETTER VII.

To Nathan Ben Saddi a Jew at Vienna.

THE Egyptians have a Proverb, That he who thinks and ſpeaks of God, onely when he is Melancholly, ſacrifices to the Planet Pharovin or Saturn, and not to the moſt High and Exalted King of All things, who is the Fountain of Joy to Men and Angels.

I counſel thee, not to liſt thy ſelf in the Number of thoſe who adore the Stars, by cheriſhing ſad Idea's of the ever Indulgent and Merciful Divinity: Nor think thy ſelf the leſs liable to this Cenſure, becauſe it proceeds from a Nation which was once at Enmity with the Sons of Jacob. Deſpiſe not the Wiſdom of that People, from whom even Moſes your Lawgiver learn'd all his, and from whom all Nations borrow'd Improvements of Learning, if they are not Indebted to them for its Firſt Rudiments.

By what I have ſaid, thou wilt perceive that I conſult thy Happineſs, and wou'd have thee chaſe away Vain Fears and Superſtitious Thoughts, the mere Product of an Ill-temper'd Spleen, which is the peculiar Malady of thy Nation. Let thy Heart be always Chearful; for God loves every Thing that he has made: The Univerſe overflows with his Bounty. Be not too Religious, nor ſtrain the Faculties he has given thee for thy Support, and not for thy Bane,

I had rather hear from thee Matter of News, than theſe diſmal Scruples about thy Soul. If thou art not willing to embrace the Muſſulman Faith, in God's Name continue to obſerve the Law of Moſes, and proſecute thy Affairs with Alacrity.

Thou haſt been very ſlack of late in ſending me Advices of what paſſes at Vienna, and other Parts of Germany. We have flying Reports here, of the Death of Eleanora the Empreſs; and that on the ſame Day whereon ſhe died, Leopoldus Ignatius Joſephus, the Emperour's Son, was Elected King of the Romans. I know not how to write to the Miniſters of the Port, till thou haſt aſcertain'd me of theſe Things. For God's ſake, be ſpeedy in thy Diſpatches, and inform me what is done at the Diet of Frankfort. Rowze up thy ſelf, and baniſh ſuperfluous Cares. Remember, that as there is but One God, ſo there is but One Law, but One thing Neceſſary to Men; that is, To live according to Reaſon. This is Engraven in every Man's Heart, and there needs no Comment to explain it. Thou art a ſufficient Lawgiver, Rabbi, Doctor, and Interpreter to thy ſelf. Let not others amuſe thee with Fables.

I will now acquaint thee with ſomething of Certainty. The French have gain'd Landrecies, a ſtrong Town in Flanders. It was ſurrendred to them on the 22.d of this Moon;

And

And the next Day all the Garriſon marched out, conſiſting of 1500 Men, beſides 300 wounded.

The King is gone, upon this good News, to view and take Care of his New Conqueſts. For, this is not the only Town the Spaniards have loſt: They talk of Maubeug, Bovines and Conde; all which, according to freſh Report, are in the Hands of the French. This Young Monarch is ſtrangely Fortunate.

If thou canſt inform me of ſuch ſucceſsful Campagnes among the People of the North, fail not to do it in Seaſon: For we are not plac'd in theſe Stations: to whiſtle to Sheep.

Paris, 29th. of the 7th Moon, of the Year 1655.

LETTER VIII.

To Muſtapha Lulu Beamrilla, a Man of the Law.

I Would willingly be admitted into Paradiſe, as well as other Muſſulmans. Neither would I think, ſpeak or do any Thing, which might prejudice my Title, and baulk my Pretentions to Eternal Happineſs. This Deſire is Natural to all Men; and when I profess it, thou may'st believe me without an Oath. Yet methinks, I wou'd not go Hoodwink'd to Heaven, but wou'd fain enjoy the Benefit of my Sense and Reason, in my Advances to that Region of Bliss.

I beleive the Alcoran, as the Oracle of God; and 'tis so firmly Imprinted in my Memory, that I cou'd repeat it Verbatim from the Beginning to the End, without missing a Versicle. I give an Entire Credence to the Doctrine of the Resurrection; being Naturally desirous of Immortality: but I cannot entertain the gross Conceit, which the greatest Part of Mussulman's have of the Resurrection; that is that our very Dust shall be raised again, and Organiz'd into a Body. The Nazarenes are of the same Opinion. But methinks, there's no need of stretching and straining of Nature. Besides, this Opinion is Inconsistent with other Fundamental Doctrines of the Mussulman Law.

We are all taught to beleive, That the Souls of Just Men, Saints and Martyrs, immediately on their Departure from the Body, ascend to Paradise. If so, then they either live there in an Unbodied State, or they have New Bodies assign'd them by the same Providence which gave them their Old. Be it which way it pleases God; it will appear a manifest Botch in the Works of the Omnipotent, and Indecorum in Nature, to make these Souls either cast off their New Bodies at the Day of Judgment, for the Sake of their Old Rotten Reliques, after they have enjoy'd all the the Ravishing Delights of Eden for so many Ages; or to stand in Need of any Bodies at all, after they have liv'd so long in a Separate Condition. There's no Sense in't. Doubtless, this Opinion was first hatch'd by those who believ'd the Sleep of the Soul, and held that it was Inseparable from the Body. For then they had no other way to comfort themselves with any Probable Hopes of a Surviving immortality, but by maintaining, That as the Soul slept with the Body in the Grave, so both Soul and Body shou'd conjointly Rise again at the Day of Doom.

Or perhaps, this Figure of our Resurrection was inculcated, to insinuate the Faith of an Immortal State, into the duller Minds of those, who were incapable of comprehending either the Pre-Existence of Souls, their Self-Subsistence after Death, or their Translation into other Bodies.

It seems to me much more easie to believe, according to the most Obvious Works of Nature, that after our Dissolution here, we shall either assume some Body of Air, Fire, or other Elemental Supplement, or by Magnetick Transmigration shall be United to some Vegetable or Animal Embrio; than to Dream of Recollecting all our Scatter'd Ashes together after so many Thousands of Years, wherein they have been dispers'd, perhaps through all the Ranges of the Universe.

Surely, our Holy Lawgiver, and all the other Prophets, intended no other Thing by the Doctrine of the Resurrection, but only to convince convince the World, that the Soul was Immortal and that conſequently there wou'd be a Reward of Good and Bad Works after this Life. We ſhall live for ever, Old Lawyer: And what ſignifies it, whether we have the ſame Bodies or others, ſo long as we are Happy in any State: And if we are Metamorphos'd we cannot fail of our Specifick Felicity, ſince every Creature is Happy in his Own Eſſence. Then let us be Apes, Dromedaries, Camels or any Thing but Hogs, and we ſhall have Bliſs enough. That Creature is the very Emblem of Uncleanneſs, and therefore its Life cannot be the Object of a Muſſulman's Wiſh. Yet we know not the Laws of our Change, or Tranſmigration from this Mortal Life. For the Soul, according to Pythagoras and the Ancients, is Capable of all Forms.

If thou wond'reſt what has put me upon this Diſcourſe, it is the Remembrance of what I have heard thee relate of the Apparition of Dead Mens Bones in the Cemetry of Grand Cair in Egypt, at a certain Seaſon of the Year, when Multitudes of People by Cuſtom flock thither to behold this Wonderful Scene of a Sham-Reſurrection. I can give it no better Title, ſince in all Probability, 'tis only the Effect of ſome Artifice us'd by the Chriſtians, to procure Money from the Admiring Croud. And I'm confirm'd in this Belief, by a Letter I receiv'd from Mehemet the Exil'd Eunuch, who now reſides at Caire; and having been curious to obſerve this Celebrated Miracle among the other Rarieties of this City, ſent me me such an Account of this Passage, as convinces me there's some Cheat in't.

He tells a great many other Things of the Superstition and Ignorance of the Egyptians, as to the Pyramids, and the suppos'd Spirits which guard 'em. In all, he laments the Condition of Mortals, who have so far degenerated from themselves, and suffer'd their Reason to be debauch'd with Fables.

Sage Mustapha, thou art of the Race of those who have preserv'd Science and Philosophy. A Halo of Light invests thy Soul. Let no dark opinion of God and his Works, eclipse thy Intellect.

Paris 20th. of the 8th. Moon, of the Year 1655.

LETTER

LETTER IX.

To Solyman Kuſſir Aga, Prince of the Black Eunuchs.

THY Diſpatch came in a Happy Hour; Yet the Contents of it ſurpriz'd me. 'Tis a ſtrange Turn of Fortune, that the Baſſa of Aleppo, after ſo many Rebellions, ſhou'd become the Sultan's Favorite, and be inveſted in the Higheſt Dignity of the Empire. Yet, who knows, but this may be the only Effectual Courſe to reclaim him, and of an Enemy to render him a Friend? For, Ambition is a Vice ſo nearly bordering on Vertue, ſo refin'd and ſubtle in Complexion, that when the Paſſion which cheriſhes it, is once gratify'd with its proper Object, it ſoon becomes a Vertue it ſelf, and transforms a Libertine to a Hadgi, ranking a Man to Day among the moſt deſerving Hero's, who but Yeſterday was in the Number of the Seditious.

Therefore, I cannot but highly applaud the Counſel of thoſe, who perſwaded the Grand Signior to this Uncommon Choice of the Vizer Azem. The whole Empire has languiſh'd for Want of a Man of Abilities in that Supreme Station, ever ſince the Seal was taken from the moſt Illuſtrious Chuſaein Baſſa through the Malice of his Enemies. And in this Juncture, they cou'd not have pitch'd on a Man more more capable of the Charge, than this bold Baſſa; who, beſides his Experience in the Wars, both by Sea and Land, is look'd on as the Stouteſt Man in this Age. As for his Former Crimes, they proceeded only from his Diſcontent and Thirſt of Glory, which is now ſufficiently allay'd by the Bounty of our Sovereign. The Cauſe therefore of his Extravagances being thus ſeaſonably remov'd, the Effect will naturally ceaſe.

But, ſuffer me to ask thee; Do they not reſent at the Seraglio, his Approaches to that Sanctuary of Mortals, with ſuch a Formidable Retinue? Thou telleſt me, he is attended by Forty Thouſand Men, an Equipage fit for a Sovereign Monarch. Perhaps, 'tis only the Effect of his Martial Genius, and that he is willing to appear like a Soldier. Or, it may be he really ſuſpected Danger, and that he was deſign'd for a Sacrifice: which made him come thus guarded to the Feet of his Maſter: That his Son might revenge his Death, by ſome deſperate Attempt on Conſtantinople. Be it how it pleaſes God, it ſeems, the Sultan wink'd at all, and receiv'd him with ſuch Marks of his Eſteem and Affection, as are ſeldom vouchſaf'd to Subjects. I hope, the Event will anſwer his Expectation. Theſe new methods of Clemancy may prove more ſucceſsful, than the ſevere Conduct of former Times. Men of Great Souls, are ſooner ſubdu'd by Favour, than Force and Cruelty.

I am

I am extreamly oblig'd to thee for thy Inſtructions, which I ſhall exactly obſerve, in writing to this Supreme Miniſter. Thou haſt match'd my own Thoughts, in this Advice. For, knowing that Baſſa's Temper, it will be Policy, as well as Juſtice, frankly to own what I have writ againſt him, and not ſtuff my Letter with abject fawning Submiſſions, or ſneaking Excuſes. He is brave himſelf, and will be pleas'd to ſee a Man reſolute in his Duty.

However, let the Conſequence be what it will. I muſt follow the Meaſures of my own Integrity. There is Something ſo Satisfactory in Truth, and an honeſt blunt Carriage, as far ſurpaſſes the little faint Pleaſures of Artifice and Diſſimulation. And I ſhou'd be weary of my Life, were I forc'd to preſerve it by ſuch Effeminate Tricks. Yet, I muſt confeſs, 'tis a vaſt Encouragement, to find thy Sentiments the ſame. What is this World, that we ſhou'd be ſo fond of it? Or what is the Life of Mortals, that we need be ſo overſtudious of prolonging the Reſpiration of that Breath, which may with as much Eaſe be all breath'd out at once, as by ſo many Succeſſive Millions of Moments; For, Death properly poſſeſſes but an Inſtant of Time; no more does Life. Every Gaſp renews the One, and the Laſt commences and finiſhes the Other. As to Pleaſure and Pain we generally have an equal ſhare of 'em. And it appears to me an Equal, if not a Greater Happineſs, at once to be freed for ever from the Latter, than by ſuch ſuch an irkſom Compoſition to protract the Enjoyment of the Former.

Brave Solyman, when I contemplate thy Vertue, it inſpires me with Courage againſt the vain Miſts of Fear, which the Magick of Opinion has rais'd before the Eyes of Mortals. I embrace thee with an extended Soul, and wiſh thee the Two Extremes of Happineſs, Plenitude of Joys in this Life, and an Immortal Series of Felicities in Paradiſe. Live for ever thou Generous Son of Cham.

Paris, the 2d. of the 9th. Moon, of the Year 1653.

LETTER X.

To the moſt Illuſtrious Vizir Azem, at the Port.

BY the Souls of all my Progenitors, I was glad to hear the News of thy Advance to this Glorious Height of Power; Yet when thou wert Baſſa of Aleppo, and heldeſt Correſpondence with the Venetians, I accus'd thee to the Divan, doing thereby no ſmall Service to the Ottoman Empire: For which thou haſt now Reaſon, in Honour, to reward me; knowing, that I prevented a great Deal of Confuſion and Blood. It will not become the Firſt Miniſter, to cheriſh Private Revenges.

venges, or harbour Ill Thoughts of a Faithful Slave. In diſcovering thy Intrigues at that Time, I did but perform my Duty to the Grand Signior, thy Lord and mine. Nay, for ought thou know'ſt, I was happily Inſtrumental in ſaving thy Life, which might have been loſt in the Purſuit of thoſe Hazardous Projects thou wert then engaged in. Be it how it will, thou art now living, and Inſtall'd in the moſt Illuſtrious Charge of the Empire. And, without Flattery I ſpeak it, a braver Man cou'd not have aſcended to that Dignity. May God long continue thee in it, to the Joy and Advantage of all the Muſſulmans.

All the World extol thy Valour and Boldneſs; eſpecially the Nazarenes, among whom the Baſſa of Aleppo is Famous. They alſo highly commend thy Juſtice. And thou wilt find in the Regiſter, that when I acquainted my Superiours of thy Revolt, I was not Envious in concealing thy Vertues.

Therefore I beg of thee, not to be Partial in thy Reſentments; but conſider Mahmut as a Faithful Slave, who will never tranſgreſs the Commands of the Myſterious Bench, nor ſuffer any Siniſter Motives to byaſs him, tho 'twere in Favour of his own Brother. For, this is the ſevere Conduct that is expected of me by my Superiours, and which thou thy ſelf wilt require at my Hands.

But, I believe, thou needſt not theſe Addreſſes to move thee to Generoſity. Thy own Native Juſtice will ſuggeſt to thee, that I rather merit a Reward than a Puniſhment, for doing doing my Duty thó 'twere in accuſing thy ſelf.

Confiding therefore in thy Goodneſs, and my own Innocence, I ſhall not deſpair of that Protection and Favour from thee, which all thy Predeceſſors have afforded me, ſince my Arrival at this place. Nay, I think thy Friendſhip and eſteem is rather due to me than a Thouſand Sycophants and Flatterers.

I will in this Confidence, write freely to thee, as I have been commanded: and vent my Thoughts, without a Timorous Reſerve. For, thou art the Juſt Judge of the Judges, among the Faithful.

There is no doubt, but thou haſt heard of the Duke of Lorrain, a Famous Warriour in theſe Weſtern Parts, but now a Priſoner of State in Spain. I ſent Intelligence laſt Year to Muſtapha Berber Aga, of the Grounds and Circumſtances of this Prince's Confinement: Whereof thou canſt not be Ignorant. For, all my Diſpatches are made Publick to the Miniſters of the Bleſſed Port.

The Brother of that Duke immediately ſucceeded him, by the King of Spain's Orders, in the command of the Army in Flanders, They call him Duke Francis. Every Body thought that he had conſented to the Impriſonment of his Brother, as being diſguſted at his Inconſtancy, Avarice and other Vices. It was ſuppoſed alſo, that his own Ambition, and Thirſt of Honour, had corrupted the Fidelity and Love he owed to the Son of his Mother; as knowing that by his Fall, he himſelf ſhould riſe to to the Dignity of General, which which his Brother enjoy'd during his Liberty.

But now 'tis evident, that this Duke Francis did all along diſſemble his Reſentments of his Brother's Calamity. For, he is lately Reſolved from the King of Spain, and come over to the French, with Five Thouſand Horſe and Foot. He has openly declar'd, That he will never give Reſt to his Sword, till he has either procur'd his Brother's Releaſe, or deeply reveng'd the Injuries have been done him. He was receiv'd by the French King, with all imaginable Endearments and Careſſes. The whole Court are Emulous, in ſtriving to excell one another in the Demonſtrations of their Civility and Reſpect to this Prince: And they have cull'd out the beſt Quarters for his Soldiers. This Nation is always Hoſpitable to Strangers; more eſpecially to ſuch as court their Friendſhip after this Extraordinary Way, who enter into their Intereſts, and engage in their Quarrels. Yet neither France, nor all the Kingdoms of Europe together can match the Bounty of the Munificent Port, which pardons and receives with open Embraces her moſt Implacable Enemies, on their Submiſſions and Repentance.

Commander of the Muſſulman Grandees, thou art but a Man, and haſt not exceeded that Character, in the Worſt of thy Errors. Now, thou art aſſum'd to a Charge which requires the Fidelity and Prudence of an Angel. If thou ſhalt reform the State, and reſtore the Muſſulman Affairs to their true Luſtre, we ſhall have Reaſon to contemplate thy Life in in ſome Meaſure a Parrallel to that of Craſſus, who was pardon'd Three Treaſons by Cæſar, and afterwards became the moſt Loyal and Serviceable Man in the Roman Empire.

Paris, the 2d. of the 9th. Moon, in the Year 1655.

LETTER XI.

To Mehemet. an Exil'd Enunch, at Caire in Egypt.

THOU telleſt me Wonderful Things of Egypt, ſuch as almoſt ſurpaſs Credit. And I perceive thou thy ſelf doſt not believe the Story of the Annual Reſurrection of Bones, which is ſo much talk'd of by Travellers. My Couſin Iſouf Ridicul'd it with ſmart Reaſon; and was almoſt in Danger of his Life among the Bigotted Moors and Coptites.

But I cou'd hardly imagine there had ſtill remain'd in that Region (which has undergone ſo many Revolutions of Government) any Foot-ſteps of the Primitive Egyptians. Yet it ſeems, the Prieſts of thoſe Early Ages were particularly careful to tranſmit to Poſterity, an exact Hiſtory of their Kings, with Memoirs of their Actions, the Building of the Pyramids, the Place of the Statues, the Magical Mirrour, the City of the Black Eagle, the the Caſtle of Dæmons ſeated on the Brow of the Mountain of the Moon, the Palace of Adamant, with Innumerable other Rareties.

I tell thee my dear Mehemet, I know not how to believe all theſe Romantick Stories. It cramps my Reaſon to hear of a Brazen Tree, with Iron Branches and Verſatile Hooks, to catch Lyers and Cheats, and there detain 'em till they ſhou'd do Right to thoſe whom they had Injur'd. Altogether as Improbable is the Story of Gabdafarouis, the Statue ſet up by King Gariac.

Who can read of that Monarch's being carried in the Air by Eagles, but may as well believe the Romantick Voyage of Domingo Gonſailes to the Moon. If thou knoweſt not that Story I'll tell thee in ſhort, That this was a certain Spaniard, who in a paſſage to the Indies being by Shipwreck caſt aſhore on the Iſland of St. Helena, with a Negro his Slave, they were put to their Shifts ſo far as to divide that Unpeopled and Deſolate Iſland between 'em, out of pure Neceſſity, that they might both find Proviſion enough to keep 'em from ſtarving (for it ſeems, there was great Scarcity of every Thing that ſerv'd the Uſes of Life.)

In this Condition, Neceſſity, the Mother of Cunning devices, taught them to hold Correſpondence with one another tho' living at Oppoſite Angles of the Iſle, by the Help of certain Wild Swans, which they took out of their Neſts very Young, and brought 'em up as they do Pigeons at Babylon and Aleppo, to be Letter-Carriers. After-

Afterwards, as the Story goes, Domingo trying ſeveral Experiments on his Birds, and finding all Succeſsful, at laſt, having got Four and Twenty of them together, and having brought 'em up to his Lure, he ventur'd his Carcaſe with 'em in the Air, faſtening 'em together with Ropes and other Materials. But the Extravagant Animals one Day took Wing, and carry'd their Maſter to the Moon: Where he reſided a conſiderable Time, ſaw and convers'd with Divers Inhabitants of that Neighbouring Globe, viſited the Courts of ſeveral Lunar Princes, and was kindly receiv'd by 'em all, even at the Seraglio of the Chief Emperor, or Grand Signior himſelf. And having been preſented with Three Stones of Matchleſs Virtue, and other Rich Gifts, he had his Audience of Conge, and came down to the Earth again, where he publiſh'd a Journal of his Travels, out of which I have extracted this ſhort Epitome; not thinking it worth the while, to trouble thee with the Entire Relation of his Ingenious Whimſies.

Doubtleſs, there is Nothing ſo eaſie, as to invent new and unheard of Fables, to amuſe the Credulous World, and Captivate their Underſtandings. And I have told thee this, as a Parallel to thoſe Monſtrous Figments of Egypt: Such as that of King Gancam's being carry'd in a Pavilion on the Shoulders of Spirits: His Magical Tables, and the reſt of his glorious Whim-Whams. And that of the Queen Borſa, who ſat on a Fiery Throne, and liv'd in an Enchanted Caſtle, whoſe Walls were were full of Pipes, which convey'd to her the Addresses of all Sorts of Plantiffs, and her Decree and Decision of Controversies back again to them. Such another is that of Bardsir's Silver Tower, and his sitting before his People in the Clouds of Heaven: And Bedoura's sending an Angel, who made such a Horrible Roaring, that it caus'd an Earth-Quake.

Who can without laughing, read the Story of the Idol of the Test, which distinguish'd between Harlots and Virgins by the Touch of their Hand? Or of the Spirits which guard the Pyramids, One like a Naked Woman, walking about in the open Air at Noon, and making Men run Mad for Love of her? Another in the Form of an Old Man with a Basket on his Head, and a Censer in his Hand? A Third of a Black Woman with a Monstrous Child in her Arms? There is no End of such Fables. Neither can any Man of Reason, stoop to so much easiness as to regard 'em. And it is a pleasure to me, when I consider thee as a Man Actually Satyrical upon Opinions and Traditions repugnant to Sense.

Mehemet, whilst thou art in Egypt, remember that thou wert born in Arabia, where Science has flourish'd for these Thousand Years.

Paris, 28th. of the 9th Moon, in the Year 1655.

LETTER

LETTER XII.

To Zornesan Mustapha, Bassa of the Sea

I Will not pretend to Divination, nor flatter thee with presages of better Fortune against the Venetians, during thy command of the Navy, than thy Predecessors have had. Ye I believe, thou hast more Honesty and Valour than some of them. And I congratulate thy Rise to this Dignity.

If my Intellegence be true a more Glorious Fleet has not sail'd out of the Ottoman Harbours, than appears now at Sea, under thy Command. May thy Success answer the Expectation of the Mussulmans. But I tell thee, thou hast need to to look about thee; for thou will encounter a Valiant and Subtle Enemy.

These Venetians are not like the Rest of the Nazarenes, Superstitiously devoted to the Sentiments of their Priests. That Kind of Bigottry, chains up Mens Spirits, and renders 'em Effeminate: It blinds 'em, and robs 'em of their Sense and Native Vigour. But these are bold, resolute People, fearing neither Man nor the Devil. They are also well vers'd in Stratagems being as Cunning as Serpents. In fine Venice is a Common wealth made up of Soldiers and Statesmen: And thou canst not expect, that the Sea makes 'em degenerate Threfore look for Hot Entertainment where-ever thou engageſt thoſe Aboriginal Tarpawlins. I ſpeak not this to diſcourage thee, but to arm thee with due Caution. Thou knoweſt the ſame God who made them, made thee and all the Men in thy Fleet. Thou haſt alſo the Happineſs to ſerve the moſt Victorious Empire in the World. Fear nothing therefore: But when thou looſeſt from the Hellſpont, with the Invincible Fleet, adorn'd with Enſigns of High Renown the Proſperous Streamers of Mahomet: When thou hearest the All-cheering Clarions and Tymbrels breathing the Lofty Menaces, the Vital Airs of War; then let thy Noble Heart flouriſh with brave Thoughts, and brisk Reſolutious. Yet let not a falſe Aſſurance of Victory, make thee Raſh and bereave thee of that Conduct, which is as neceſſary a Qualification in a General, as Courage. Conſider that the Fortune of Battels is Uncertain: Therefore, do all Things with great Precaution. Truſt not to the Force of thy Commiſſion, in that thou Fighteſt for the Law and Honour of the Prophet. But remember the Proverb of the Ancients, which ſays, The Devil often carries the Standard of the Living God. There may be thoſe in thy Fleet, who are Treacherous, and at the Devotion of the Nazarenes. For, I hear, that both Spahi's and Janiſaries were very unwilling to embark themſelves; and God knows, how far the Venetian Gold may work on ſome of the Officers. Tho' their Reſentments ſeem'd to be appeas'd by the Bounty of our Glorious Sovereign, yet the ſmalleſt Occaſion may renew their Old Diſcontent again, and put 'em on more dangerous Tumults at Sea, than thoſe they were guilty of aſhore. Or at leaſt, they will become more Remiſs and Cold in the Service of the Grand Signior.

Sovereign

Be it how it will, if the Navy has not good Succeſs, the Blame of all will be laid on thee. Pardon therefore the Freedom I take in adviſing thee, ſince 'tis an Argument of my Affection and Concern for thy Honour and Safety. And no Man can with Reaſon be offended at another, for warning him of Dangers. In a Word, I wiſh thee the good Fortune of the Engliſh; who have lately taken an Iſland in the Weſt-Indies from the Spaniards: They call it Jamaica.

It ſeems, the Kings of Spain had poſſeſs'd this Iſle from the Time of the Firſt Conqueſts in America, where his Subjects had Committed horrid Cruelties on the Natives. For which, they are now puniſh'd by that New Common wealth, who boaſt that they are eſtabliſh'd by God to reform or overturn all the Kingdoms of Europe.

Thou haſt heard, I ſuppoſe, of Oliver, the Sovereign of that Nation. He appears like another Jingiz Chan, ſetting up for a Prophet and Founder of a New Empire. He has refus'd the Title of King, which was offerd him by the Engliſh States, with all the Enſigns of Royalty. But, he aims at a more Sublime Character, laying the Foundation of his Hopes in a pretended Modeſty, aſſuming onely the Style of Protector. They ſay, he talks of leading an Army to the Gates of Rome, and when he has ſubdu'd the Pope, that he will march or ſail to Conſtantinople, and drive the Grand Signior out of his Seraglio.

I tell thee, theſe are not Things to be contemn'd or laugh'd at. For this Oliver has the Fame of a Great and Invincible General. And I can aſſure thee, all the Neighbouring Kings and States court his Friendſhip. In fine, he makes the moſt Formidable Figure at preſent, of any Prince in theſe Weſtern parts.

If it will divert thee at Sea, to hear of the Tranſactions by Land, know, that Leopold Ignatius Joſephus, Son of the German Emperor, is Elected King of the Romans in the Room of his deceas'd Brother. There's alſo a Diet Aſſembled at Frankford, where they have too many Diſcords and Quarrels of their own, to have Leiſure to plot any Miſchief againſt the Empire of True Believers. Theſe Infidels in their Publick Councils, are like Women Scolding away the Time, that ſhou'd be employ'd in Action.

There arrives daily a great Deal of News out of Sweden, Moſcovy and Poland. One Poſt informs us of a Plague raging at Moſco and other Cities of that Northern Tract; Another alarms us with Intellegences of Sieges and Plundering of Towns, Diſpeopling of Provinces, and a Deluge of Blood and Slaughter. For the Swedes, eſpouſing the Quarrel of the Moſcovites, endeavour to make their own Game in Poland: Many Princes and Great Men with their Towers, Villages and Vaſſals, Revolting daily from the Unfortunate Caſimir, and ſubmittnig to the Swediſh Monarch.

And here in France, thoſe that go not to the Wars, make Private Campagnes at Home. Here's nothing but Duelling and Murder among Men of the Sword; whilſt the Eccleſiaſticks are Combating one another with their Pens, and the Lawyers with their Tongues.

In Suiſſerland, they're Mad about Religion. At Dantzich, Two Eagles were ſeen Combating in the Air. And, as if all Nature were in a Ferment, the Winds have been at Variance in the Bowels of the Earth, which has occaſion'd frequent Earthquakes in the Parts of Germany. The King of Polands Brother is Dead; and the Queen Mother of Sweden.

We muſt all die at the determined Hour; And there is no other Terror in Death, but what is Created by our own Opinion nor any greater Pain than attended our Birth. For, at our Diſſolution, every Element of which we were compounded, takes it proper Share; and that which is Divine in Us returns to that which is Divine in the Univerſe.

Paris, 28th. of the 9th. Moon,
of the Year 1655.

LETTER XIII.

To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Grand Signior's Cuſtoms.

OUR Kinſman Iſouf is now gone for Moſcovy, having viſited the moſt Remarkable Places in this Kingdom. I receiv'd a Letter from him dated at Diep, a Sea-Town over againſt the Engliſh Coaſts. He was Juſt going aboard, as he tells me, when he deliver'd his Diſpatch to the Poſt. God grant him a Proſperous Voyage to that Region, and whitherſoever his Genius or Fortune carry him.

I am extreamly pleas'd with his Converſation. Whilſt he was in Paris, I was never ſenſible of Melancholly, unleſs 'twere in the Evenings, which forc'd us to part Company. He has an Excellent Memory, and accounts all the Adventures of his Life with a great deal of Eaſe, both to himſelf and his Hearers: He never was at a loſs for Matter, or confounded one Circumſtance with another; but ranking every Thing in its due Time and Place, deliver'd all with a Clearneſs and Grace, which affected me with ſingular Delight.

Beſides he has a ready Wit, lively Fancy, and Judgment enough for one of his Years. I tell thee, the Relations he has made of his Travels, with his Regular Deportment here in Paris, Paris, of which I have been a Witneſs, have Imprinted in me ſuch an Opinion of his Abilities, that I have truſted him with ſome Particular Inſtructions in order to a ſettl'd Correſpondence between us, in whatſoever Court he reſides. For, in a Word, I find him Mature enough for Buſineſs of Moment: and 'tis Pity his Parts ſhou'd be bury'd without ever appearing in Action.

If he ſucceeds in what I have put him upon, when he arrives at Archangel a Sea-port of Ruſſia, and a place of great Commerce and Traffick; I ſhall have good Reaſon to hope for more Important Matters when he comes to Moſco, the Chief City of the Men who worſhip the Eyes of their Emperour. And then it will be Time to give a due Character of him to the Miniſters of the Port: Wherein thou wilt have many Opportunities, to perform the Office of a Kinſman and Friend. Thoſe of the ſame Blood, ought thus to ſerve one another with Integrity and Affection: For, in ſo doing, we help our ſelves, ſtrengthen the Intereſt of our Family, and ſhall find Returns in Time of Need. As thou haſt receiv'd Favour from Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa, on the Score of being his Countryman; ſo there is greater Reaſon, that thou ſhould'ſt ſhew Kindneſs to Iſouf, who partakes of our Blood.

There ariſes a vaſt Complacency from doing Good Offices, tho' to a Stranger, or even to an Enemy. Man is Naturally Generous; and he has debauch'd his Soul, who acts contrary to this Principle. Yet the greateſt Part of Men are degenerated. They purſue Lyons Tygers, Bears, and ſuch like Ravenous Beaſts with Inexorable Hatred and Revenge; they bear ſecret Antipathies againſt Spiders, Toads, Serpents, and other Venemous Creatures; and yet they are all theſe Things or worſe themſelves. Ever ſince Aſtræa abandon'd the Earth, there has been a ſtrange Metamorphoſis in our Race: Men have for the moſt Part forſaken their Humanity and chang'd Nature with the Salvages. Nay, we tranſcend them in whatſoever is Cruel and Vicious. As if our Reaſon were given us, only to teach us the moſt refin'd Methods of Impiety, and to be a more exquiſite Spur to Vice.

Iſouf has preſented me with Solid Obſervations of this kind in his Travels, eſpecially in Africk; he ſays, that Region is not more Prolifick of Strange and Horrible Beaſts, than it is of Monſtrous Men Bruits and Devils in Humane Shape. And tho' he relates ſome Fair Things of the Indians, and other People in Aſia; yet they are intermix'd with Tragical Reports, and Mournful Memoirs: Such as ſtain the Hiſtory of our Race, and make it evident, That it is hard to meet with one Good Man among Ten Thouſand. The whole World is over-run with Oppreſſion, Cruelty, Avarice, Perfidy, and Luſt.

He relates ſtrange Things of the Antiquities of Egypt. He calls it the onely Scene of Wonders and Miracles on Earth. Indeed this Country was very Famous among all Nations for the Wiſdom and Learning of her Prieſts; who who, in the First Ages of the World, understood all the Secrets of the Elements, the Vertues of Plants and Minerals, and were perfectly vers'd in the Science of the Stars and Spirits, and in all Manner of Myſterious Knowledge. They were ſaid to make Statues and Images, that cou'd Speak, Walk, Run, and counterfeit all Humane Actions. They were alſo exquiſite in making Miraculous Taliſmans and Mirrours, with any kind of Magical Work, whereby they kept the People, and even the Princes in a Profound Awe and Veneration of their Prodigious Knowledge and Power, and likewiſe defended their Country againſt all Invaders. For no ſooner did an Enemy appear with his Armies on the Frontiers of Egypt, but theſe Prieſts had preſent Intimation of it by their Secret Art, even in their Chambers, perhaps at a Hundred Leagues Diſtance. Then by their Enchantments, they either caus'd Fire to conſume them in their Camps, or turned their Swords againſt each other, or ſent an Army of Winged Serpents to deſtroy 'em. So that for many Ages, no King ever proſpered that fought againſt the Egyptians.

But let not thou and I, dear Brother, ſuffer our Reaſon to degenerate by giving Credit to Fictions and Romances, though vouch'd by ſome of our Countrymen, ſuch as Morat Alzeman, Eb'n Abdalhokm, and others.

He alſo tells many remarkable paſſages of the Pyramids of Cairo, the overflowing of the Nile.

Nile, the Mummies, and other Things which I have not now Time to rehearſe; but in another Letter I will gratifie thee with a more Ample Account of his Obſervations.

In the mean Time, live thou to enjoy the Fruits of thy own Travels in the Eaſt. Which if it matches not the South in Prodiges and Stupendous Inventions; yet it ſurpaſſes both it, and all the Reſt of the World, in Juſtice and Morality.

Paris, 17th. of the 11th. Moon.
of the Year 1655.

LETTER XIV.

To Iſmael Kaidar, Cheik, a Man of the Law.

THou haſt the Character and Fame of a Great Hiſtorian; a Man of Intelligence both in the Records of Paſt Times, and the Tranſactions of the Preſent. Therefore the Name of Chriſtina late Queen of Sueden, cannot be ſtrange to thee, I doubt not, but thou haſt heard of this Princeſs, ſo celebrated throughout the Earth for her Learning and other Noble Accompliſhments; and how ſhe voluntarily reſign'd the Crown, to one of her Kinſmen. But perhaps, thou knoweſt not the true Motives which induc'd her to this

Royal

Royal Caprice: For, it deſerves no better Name, as thou wilt underſtand by the Sequel.

Her Father who for his Succeſsful Wars, and perpetual Victories was call'd the Great Guſtave, dying left her in the Entire Poſſeſſion of his Kingdom and New Conqueſts in Germany. But during the Time of her Reign, Piementelly the Spaniſh Embaſſador at Stokholm, by dayly converſing with this Great Queen us'd ſuch plauſible Inſinuations, as prevail'd on her to have a more favourable Opinion of the Pope and his Religion, than ſhe had before entertain'd: For, all the Suedes are Educated in an Averſion for thoſe of the Roman Faith. I need not explain to thee, theſe Diſtinctions of Belief among the Nazarenes: Thou art vers'd in their Hiſtory, as well as in our own. Suffice it to ſay, that this Embaſſador poſſeſs'd Chriſtina whith ſo fair an Idea of the Catholick Religion, that ſhe abandon'd her Crown, and has ever ſince been a Queen Errant, a Royal Rambler through Europe, being reſol'v'd to make Experiment of the Generoſity of Catholick Princes, whoſe Vertues Piementelli had ſo highly extoll'd.

'Twou'd be Work of Seven Moons for the moſt Induſtrious Scribe, to relate all the particular Magnificences, with which ſhe has been entertain'd in her Travels through Germany, Flanders, Alſace, Inſpruck, Italy, and Rome, where ſhe now reſides. Every Prince of the Roman Church, through whoſe Territories ſhe paſs'd, was Ambitious to appear Prodigal of his Favours and Civilities to their Illustrious Stranger: Perhaps to evade the Lashes of her Wit, which, they say, is very Satyrical. Or, it may be, for other Reasons, more forcible and poignant. Be it how it will, the Roman Wits have not spar'd her; as thou wilt perceive by the Following Verses, which on the First Day of the Moon of January were found in the Hand of Pasquin, and on the Portal of the Palace Ferneſe, where ſhe reſides.

Illuſtrious

Pazza, Gobba, & Zoppa viene dal Norte,
Del Monarcha Invitto l' indegna Figlia,
Mentre Pologna Gente & ſi Scompiglia,
A vane Pompe Roma apre le Porte:
Contra queſti Applauſi l' ungrida forte,
Et in baſſe Note l' altro bis Biglia,
Corre la Scioca Genti. alza le ciglia,
Ride Paſquin del Papa, & della Corte.
Su ſu venite voi Ruffiani Snelli,
Et portate a Chriſtiana ſtravagante
Di venere il Scettro ne i Pazzarelli:
Vuol parar dotta, & e rozza Pedante,
E in Braccio a mangiator di Ravanelli
Vuol paver caſta, & e Putana Errante.

I ſend thee theſe Verſes in the Original, knowing thou art a Critick in the Italian Language; beſides, they will not ſound ſo well in Arabick. Thou that haſt been in Rome, know'ſt what Paſquin is, and art no Stranger to the Humours of that City.

Let not Lampoons of Moroſe Italians, abate thy Charity for this Renowned Princeſs. But

let

let her Extravagances be an Argument of the Greatneſs of her Soul; and remember the old Roman Proverb, which ſays, There's no ſurpaſſing Genius, without ſome Mixture of Madneſs.

Paris the 30th. of the 1ſt. Moon, of the Year 1656.

LETTER XV.

To the ſame,

HAving the Space of an Hour before the Poſt goes, I cou'd not forbear to inform thee of a New Star which lately appear'd in theſe Parts, moving in a direct Line from Eaſt to North. The Aſtronomers have made Accurate Obſervations of it, and yet are at a Loſs what to conclude: Some ſay, 'tis below the Moon, others place it in the Sphere of the Fixed Stars. One will have it a Meteor, a Second affirms it to be a Planet; whilſt the Jews report every where, that 'tis the Star of Jacob, and a ſign that their Meſſias is at Hand.

Nathan Ben Sadai, one of that Nation at Vienna, ſends me ſtrange Stories concerning the Prodiges which ſhall go before, and accompany the Appearance of the Deliverer of Iſrael (as he calls him.)

He

He ſays, there ſhall ſpeedily come a Sort of People from the Uttermoſt Parts of the Earth, of a Black and Horrible Aſpect, ſo that whoever ſhall but caſt an Eye on any of them, ſhall immediately die, as by the Glance of a Baſiliſk. For, every one of them ſhall have Two Heads, and Seven Eyes, glowing and ſending forth Sparks of Fire as Poiſonous as the Flaſhes of the Wind El-Samiel in Arabia. They ſhall alſo be Swift as Stags. And about the ſame Time, an extraordinary Heat ſhall flow from the Sun, which being diſpers'd through the Elements ſhall corrupt the Air, Earth, and Waters, and Infect all this Lower World with ſuch Peſtilential Qualites, that a Milion of Gentiles (for ſo the Jews call all that are not of their own Nation) ſhall die every Day. And Men ſhall be in ſo great Conſternation, that they ſhall run up and down the Streets crying, Wo, Wo to us and our Children! They ſhall dig their own Graves, and go down into them of their own Accord, expecting Death. But, that all this Time, the Jews ſhall be in Safety and Health.

This Hebrew adds, that the Light of the Sun ſhall be totally extinguiſh'd for the Space of Thirty Days; during which horrible Darkneſs, the Chriſtians and Mahometans, ſhall acknowledge their Errors, and many of them ſhall embrace the Law of Moſes; for which God being mov'd to Mercy, will reſtore that Planet again to its former Brightneſs.

But what he ſays next, is an Unhappy Preſage to the Romans, whoſe Empire, according cording to this Tradition ſhall be extended over all the Regions of the Earth for the Space of Nine Moons. After which Term, God ſhall ſend the Firſt Meſſias, the Son of Joſeph, who ſhall gather the diſpers'd Tribes of Iſrael, and Conduct them to Jeruſalem. From whence he ſhall Iſſue forth, with a Victorious Army, and lay waſt the Roman Empire, ſack Rome it ſelf, and carry away the Immenſe Riches of the Chriſtians to Jeruſalem; And the very Fear of him ſhall reduce all Nations to his Obedience. He ſhall fight with Armillai Haraſcha, the Antichriſt of the Chriſtians, and ſhall deſtroy Two Hundred Thouſand of Armillai's Flowers; but in the End ſhall be ſlain himſelf, and the Good Angels ſhall tranſport his Body to the Appartment of the Fathers.

The Jews hold, That this Armillai ſhall ſpring out of an Image of the Virgin Mary in Rome, made of Marble, with which the moſt Wicked and Profligate among Men ſhall be enamour'd, and commit the moſt execrable Uncleanneſs that can be nam'd. The Reſult of theſe Adulterous Congreſſes ſhall be, That the Statue by a Supernatural Power, ſhall prove Impregnate; and cleaving aſunder ſhall be deliver'd of this Young Antichriſt, who is to vex and perſecute the Jews, and afflict them with greater Calamities than either they or their Fathers felt ſince the Beginning of the World. They ſhall be forc'd to flee into the Deſarts, and hide themſelves in the Dens and Caves of the Earth, living only on the Graſs Grass, and Herbage, with the Leaves of Trees, till the great Michael the Archangel shall Thrice wind his Horn. Then shall the Second Messias the Son of David, with Elia the Prophet appear, who shall rescue 'em out of all their Troubles, and lead them Triumphant to Paradise.

This is the Sum of what Nathan, and all the Jews believe concerning the Last Times, which they say are now approaching: As is evident by the Rising of this New Star, accompany'd with terrible Thunders and Lightnings. And the Chief Patriarch or Prince of the Jews, is come from Jerusalem to Vienna, to prepare those of his Nation in these Western Parts for the Grand Revolutions which they believe are ready to fall out in the World. All the Jews in that City went out a League to meet him, with great Pomp and Solemnity.

In the mean while I hear that the Son of the late Vizir Azem, makes a confusion amongst you at Constantinople, and the Parts adjacent, being at the Head of Fifty Thousand Men, on Pretence to revenge the Death of his Father: but really to recover his Ravish'd Mistress, the Fair Soltana Zamiaurre, who was forc'd from his Seragl by the Grand Signior's Command. Women and Wine, according to the Proverb of the Franks, make all the Disturbance in the World. And without calling to Remembrance the Trojan Wars, the Unhappy Effects of Helena's perfidy, we may conclude, That Women are the Occasions of many Quarrels among us.

There

There is a Peace lately concluded between the French and the New Engliſh Commonwealth: By which means, the Exil'd King of the Scots, was forc'd to depart from this Realm, which has been his Sactuary for many Years. He went away at the Beginning of the Treaty, and has wandred up and down Germany ever ſince; ſometimes keeping a Court like a King, at other Times living Incognito, and very privately, with onely Two or Three Attendants. That poor Prince is very Unfortunate; yet, they ſay, he bears his Calamity with Singular Moderation, and a certain Royal Stiffneſs of Mind, which will rather break than bend.

This Pope is a great Peace-Maker, and has ſent Nuntio's with Letters to all the Princes of Chriſtendom within the Pale of the Roman Church, earneſtly perſwading them to Unity and Friendſhip, that ſo their Arms may be turn'd againſt the Muſſulmans. His Predeceſſor was of another Sentiment, and wou'd not inter-meddle in the Quarrels of any. One Day as he was looking out of a Window of his Palace with ſome Cardinals, they ſpied Two Men a fighting in the Street; whereupon, they deſired the Holy Father to interpoſe his Authority, and command peace. But he refus'd ſaying, Let them fight it out, and then they'll be good Friends of Courſe. And turning to the Spaniſh Embaſſador, he ſaid, So will it fare with your Maſter, and the King of France: When they have ſufficiently wearied out one another with Wars, they will gladly embrace the Propoſals of Peace.

Here

Here is great Rejoycing for the Reconciliation newly made between the King and his Uncle the Duke of Orleans, who have been eſtrang'd a long Time, the latter having eſpous'd the Prince of Conde's Cauſe. But now he has abandon'd it, and is come to the Court.

Theſe Infidels are as inconſtant as the Winds, which vary to all the points of the Compaſs.

Paris, the 30th. of the 1ſt. Moon,
of the Year 1656.

LETTER XVI.

To Solyman his Couſin, at Scutari.

I See, thou art given over to a Spirit of Diſcontent. Nothing can pleaſe thee. Thou murmureſt at Providence, and caſteſt Obliquies on the Ways of God: As if the Order of All things, and the Eſtabliſh'd Oeconomy of the Univerſe, muſt be Chang'd to gratify thy Humour.

Formerly, thou wert troubl'd with dull Melancholly Thoughts about Religion: Now thou art angry with thy Trade, and pineſt that thou wert not Educated in the Academy. A Mechanick Life, thou ſay'ſt is Tedious and Irkſome: Beſides, that it is beneath one of thy Blood, to be always employ'd in making making of Turbants. Thou wiſheſt rather to have been a Courtier, Soldier, or any Thing ſave what thou art.

Couſin, let not Pride and Ambition corrupt thy Manners. Doſt thou not conſider, that all True Believers are oblig'd to excerciſe ſome Manual Occupation, and that the Sultan himſelf is not exempted from this Duty? Did not the Prophet himſelf practiſe it, and enjoyn it to all his Followers? Haſt thou not heard of his Words, when he ſaid; No Man can eat any thing ſweeter in this World, than what is acquir'd by his own Labour? Doubtleſs all the Prophets, and Holy Men, have gain'd their Bread by their Lawful Employments. Adam was a Gardiner, Abel a Shepherd, Seth a Weaver, Enoch a Taylor, Noah a Ship-wright: Moſes, Saguib, and Mahomet, were Shepherds: Jeſus the Son of Mary a Carpenter: Abu-Bekre, Omar, Othman, Gali, and Gabdoracha-man were Merchants.

Doſt thou eſteem thy ſelf of better Blood than Adam, from whom thou receiv'dſt thine? For Shame prefer not thy ſelf to Noah, the Reſtorer of Mankind, to Jeſus the Meſſias, to Mahomet our Holy Lawgiver, and to the Reſt of thoſe Excellent Perſons who thought it no Contempt to work at their ſeveral Trades, and eat the Bread of their own Labours.

Beſides doſt thou conſider the dangerous Intrigues of a Prince's Court. Art thou ſufficiently arm'd with Wit and Dexterity, to ſecure thy Station againſt the Wily Trains of deſigning Men? I do not reproach thy Abilities:

ties: Yet I think thou wilt do better in the Poſt allotted thee by Deſtiny. that is, in thy Proper Calling; than in the perillous Condition of thoſe who ſtand or fall at the Pleaſure of Others. Whereas, thou art now thy own Ma ı, and needeſt fear no Tempeſts of State, or frowns of thy Prince, ſo long as thou purſueſt none but thy private Affairs. Many Sovereign Monarchs have envy'd ſuch as thee, when they have ſeen, how chearfully and quietly they paſs'd away their Time, under the Umbrella of an Obſcure and Private Life: Whereas, at the Court there is Nothing but Intriguing, plotting, and Treachery; one Undetermining another, to make way for their own Advance. The Court is a perfect Theatre, of Fraud, Diſſimulation, Envy, Malice and a Thouſand Vices, which there act their various parts under the Habit and Diſguiſe of ſeeming Vertues. There a Man muſt flatter the Great, and ſpeak againſt his own Sence, and the Truth to procure the Favour of ſome dignify'd Fool: Than which Nothing is more Ignoble and Baſe.

This puts me in Mind of a pleaſant Repartee, which Diogenes the Philoſopher gave to a Courtier. The Spark paſſing by Diogenes, as he ſat in a Tub, eating of Turneps, put this Scoff upon him; Diogenes ſaid he, If thou wou'dſt but learn the Art of Flattery, thou need'ſt not ſit here in a Tub, ſcranching of Roots. To whom the Philoſopher reply'd: And thou vain-glorious Man, if thou would'ſt but learn to live contented with my homely Fare, need'ſt not condescend to the Fawning of a Spaniel.

not

But, Cousin, let not this Passage cause thee to emulate the Philosopher's Manner of Life; For, he had his Vices, as well as other Men. If he was no Flatterer, yet he was proud and Opinionative: He laid Trains for the Applause of Men in all his Actions, and so taught others to become Flatterers, tho' he was none himself. All his pretended Humility, Mortification, and Rigour, were but so many Decoys for Fame. Of this, Plato was sensible, who was a far more Excellent Philosopher than he. As this Sage was one Day walking with some of his Friends in the Fields, they shew'd him Diogenes standing up to the Chin in Water, whose Superficies was frozen over, save one Hole that Diogenes had made for himself. Pub, says Plato don't regard him, and he'll soon be out: For, had he not seen us coming this Way, he wou'd not have put himself to this Pain. Another Time this Philosopher came to Plato's House: And as he walk'd on the Rich Carpets with which the Floor of the Hall was cover'd; See, said Diogenes, how I Trample on Plato's Pride. Yes, said Plato, but with greater Pride.

Certainly, the greatest Philosophers, Doctors, and even Saints themselves have their Errors and Failings. Do not therefore affect to change thy Calling, for the Life of a Student or a Contemplative Man. For the same Discontent will still haunt thee in that State, which makes thee so uneasy now. Thou art a perfect Stranger to the intolerable Anguish of Mind which afflicts Thinking Men, and ſuch as apply themſelves to the Study of the Sciences. They Labour under a Perpetual Thirſt of Knowledge; and the more they learn the greater and more Ardent is their Deſire of farther Diſcoveries. So that the moſt accompliſh'd Sages, are no more ſatisfy'd with their own Acquiſitions, than he who has never meddl'd with Books.

of

Then as to their Bodies, they are always vexed with one Malady or other, proceeding from the Violent Agitation of their Spirits, the Intenſneſs of their Thoughts, perpetual poring upon Books, and their Sedentary Life.

In all that I have ſaid, I do not diſſwade thee from ſeeking after Knowledge. I rather counſel thee to read Books, and I gave thee the ſame Advice in a former Letter. But, do it with Moderation. Let not thy Studies entrench on the Affairs of thy Calling. Read Hiſtories, or other Tracts according to thy Fancy, when thou haſt nothing elſe to do. But, do not follow it ſo cloſe, as if thou aſpired'ſt to the Character of a Compleat Hiſtorian, or Philoſopher. Still remember, that thou art a Turbant-Maker, and that by the Decree of Fate thou art born for this Buſineſs. Follow it with Alacrity and Mirth. When thou art at thy Work, 'twill be pleaſant meditating on what thou haſt read at thy ſpare Hours. Thou wilt find thy ſelf much more happy, in thus mixing Studies with the neceſſary Offices of thy Trade, than in abandoning thy ſelf wholly to a Contemplative Life. And in the Mid'ſt of thy diſguſts, thou may'ſt comfort thy ſelf with this Reflection, That thou art of none of the moſt Deſpicable Callings, which ſerve the neceſſities of Man's Body. Had thy imployment been only to make Papouches or Sandals, which cover the Feet, it might have been an Argument of Diſcontent to thee, in Regard the Foot is the moſt Contemptible Member in the Body. But now thou paſſeſt thy Time in making Ornaments for the Head, which is the Nobleſt Part, and Commander of all the Reſt, thou haſt no Reaſon to repine.

th

If, after all, thou reſolveſt to change thy Courſe of Life, I adviſe thee to turn Soldier; for, then thou muſt be contented and patient per force.

Paris, 13th. of the 4th. Moon,
of the Year 1656.

LET-

LETTER XVII.

To Melec Amet.

THE Nazarenes boast much of the New Converts they have made from the Mahumetan Law to the Faith of Jesus the Son of Mary. On the 23d. of the last Moon, a Moor of Tripoli was baptiz'd in a Church of this City; and the next Day he was Anointed with their Chrism or Holy Oyl (as they call it) which they say has a Virtue to confirm and strengthen him in his New Religion. On the 25th. he was Cloath'd all in White Linnen, and walk'd in Procession through the Streets with Musick playing before him, whilst the Ground was strew'd with Flowers. When he arriv'd at the Great Mosch of this City, a Priest gave him that which they esteem the Body of the Messias: But in Reality is onley a Wafer with the Figure of a Man Crucify'd on it. These Wafers are made and sold to the Priests by the Common Bakers of the Town, and yet they make the Poor Ignorant People believe with Four words they can change them into an Immortal God.

The Renegado-Moor, appears very zealous and devout, frequenting the Temples, and visiting all Holy Places. He walks along the Streets with Beads in his Hands, which the People Interpret as an Argument of his Piety to the Virgin Mary. The Mother of Jesus

For

For, when they pray to her, it is the Cuſtom to number their Oraiſons on Beads. But all this while they conſider not, that he may be a Hypocrite as to their Religion, and inſtead of addreſſing his Prayers to her, may direct them to God alone; as all the True Faithful do, who uſe Beads, in rehearſing the Divine Ejaculations, as well as the Chriſtians in repeating their Ave Maria, which they ſay, was the Salutation that Gabriel gave the Virgin, when he enter'd her Oratory.

Be it how it will, he gets Abundance of Money by his Devotion: For the Franks are really very Charitable, and give plentiful Alms to the Poor. But eſpecially to one under his Circumſtances, they are extremely Liberal, that ſo they may imprint in him a more fervent Affection, and profound Reverence for their Religion.

But he is not the only Convert they brag of. Many Captives they either wheadle, or force to turn Chriſtians. Thus, he that was taken at Sea by the Ships of Malta Twelve Years ago, when it was reported through Chriſtendom that he was the Grand Signior's Son, is of late turn'd Chriſtian and Friar, having ſolemnly and in Publick abjur'd the Muſſulman Law, curs'd our Holy Prophet, and all thoſe of his Race, with the Believers of the Alcoran. He is like to come to great Preferments in the Roman Church. They call him the Ottoman Father; and boaſt, That the True Heir of the Turkiſh Empire is a Chriſtian, and in their Cuſtody.

Yet after all, the Proſelyte of greateſt Fame is Don Philippo, the Son of the Dey of Tunis, of whom I made mention in one of my former Letters. This Prince is now at Valentia, under the King of Spain's Juriſdiction, who allows him a Conſiderable Penſion, and has given him leave to marry a Princeſs of that Country, very Beautiful and Ingenious, but of a Poor Fortune. He has one Son by her; and 'tis ſaid, the King of Spain deſigns to ſet forth a Mighty Fleet of Ships: And having furniſhed this Prince with all Things neceſſary for a Warlike Expedition, will ſend him thus Equipp'd to claim the Government of Tunis; or in caſe of Denial, to make a Deſcent in that Kingdom, and fight for it. But I believe, this will only prove a Spaniſh Rhodomontade; that Monarch having Work enough cut out for him in Europe and America, by the French and Engliſh, to divert him from any ſuch Wild Enterprize on Africk. However it be, this Don Philippo is much talked of in Chriſtendom, and the Spaniards flatter themſelves with the Hopes of Conquering a Great Part of Barbary by his Means, he having many Friends, and a conſiderable Intereſt in thoſe Parts.

Thou mayſt acquaint the Divan, that Osman the Dwarf is ſtill living, and ſerves the Port with a ſecret and untainted Zeal. Two days ago he diſcovered a Cunning Practice of Cardinal Mazarini, whoſe Motions and Intrigues he watches very narrowly. He aſſures me, That this Miniſter has diſpatched away away two Agents to the King of Sueden and Elector of Brandenburgh, with a Letter to each of theſe Princes from the King of France; alſo with Blank Papers, and the King's Seal, giving them Inſtructions, to fill up thoſe Blanks and Seal them with the King's Signet, according as they found the Treaty go forward between thoſe Princes. The main Deſign of this Trick being, to hinder them from entering into a League againſt the King of Poland, by all the Artifice theſe Agents could uſe, in exactly timing and ſuiting their Counterfeit Letters, to the Difficulties and Miſunderſtandings that always happen in ſuch Treaties, that ſo they may exaſperate each Party againſt the other, as Occaſion offer'd, without being obliged to ſend to France for freſh Letters, which would breed too much Delay, and ſpoil their Deſign.

By this thou mayſt perceive, that Cardinal Mazarini comes not ſhort of his Predeceſſor Richlieu, in managing the Affairs of Foreign Courts. He is the very Soul of all the Grand Buſineſs in Chriſtendom.

A general Heart-burning has poſſeſs'd the French, eſpecially the Inhabitants of Paris, ever ſince the Concluſion of the laſt Year, when the King iſſued out certain Orders, commanding that all the Gold and Silver-Money in the Kingdom, ſhould be brought into his Mint to be new Coin'd. The Merchants firſt complain'd of this Edict; and then it was murmur'd at by all the Trading People. At length the Parliament of Paris took it into their Conſideration, and oppoſed the King's Pleaſure: Upon which he baniſhed Eight of their Members, and has ſeveral Times prohibited them to Aſſemble; yet they perſiſted to meet, till he baniſh'd more of them: Which inſtead of awing them into the expected Compliance, has but incens'd 'em more: And the diſcontented Clergy blow up the Coals, as do likewiſe the Friends of the Prince of Conti. The Parliament are very bold and peremptory in their Proceedings, having expreſly forbid the Citizens of Paris to obey the King's Order, and decreed that Nothing ſhall be done in their Aſſembly, till the Baniſh'd Senators be recall'd.

Things being at this Paſs, we expect Nothing but Inſurrections, Maſſacres, and other Effects of Popular Fury. The Rich are laying in vaſt Quantities of Corn and other Proviſions, as if they expected a Siege. And the Poor fare the better for it, whilſt great Largeſſes are given among them by the Grandees of the Parliament, to engage them in the Faction. Beſides, thou knowſt, the Multitude always delights in Novelty and State Tempeſts, hoping for Plunder, and to enrich themſelves by the Ruine of others.

I know not what Conduct is fitteſt for me to uſe in this Caſe. Whether it will be beſt for me to abide in this City, or follow the Court which is now at La Fere in Picardy. Or whether I ſhould retire to ſome other Place, leſs liable to Civil Diſturbances. I wiſh, the Miniſters of the Port would ſend me full In-ſtructions, what I ought to do in theſe Emergences.

ſtructions

From Rome we hear, that the Pope and Cardinals are in great Conſternation on ſome Intelligence they have received, That the Engliſh intend to make a Deſcent on the Territories of the Church. That Nation is now become the Great Big-bear of all Europe, ſince they have molded themſelves into a Common-Wealth.

Every Kingdom and Empire has a Time to riſe, and another to fall. But, who can determine the Period wherein the Ottoman Glory will decline, which is not yet advanc'd to its Zenith?

Paris, 27th. of the 5th. Moon, of the Year 1656.

LETTER XVIII.

To Sedree Al' Giraw'n, Chief Treaſurer to the Grand Signior.

THY Virtues have at Length raiſed thee to a Glorious Truſt, the Charge of Immenſe Wealth. Thou haſt in thy Cuſtody, the Riches which cannot be match'd in the Univerſe. God inſpire thee with Graces ſuitable to a Dignity ſo full of Temptations. I hope, thou wilt not be affronted at my Prayer, as was thy Predeceſſor Kienan Baſſa, at ſome Counſels of like Nature, which I gave him in a Letter. Some Men are ſtrangely Cholerick, and look on him as an Enemy who gives them good Advice. I only warn'd him of the ordinary Cheats that are practiſed at certain Times in the Treaſury, which thou know'ſt to be true, as well as I. And I tell thee farther, he himſelf was ſuſpected by many in the Seraglio, not to have been altogether exempt from Guilt.

Whether he were or not, I performed but my Duty in giving him neceſſary Cautions. For, ſuch is the Will of my Superiours, that I ſhould not be afraid to unravel the Secrets of thoſe who are falſe to the Grand Signior. I did not charge him with ſuch a Crime, and therefore he had no Reaſon to be angry: But ſome Men will pick a Quarrel with their own Shadows. In a Word, this Grandee forgot himſelf.

In ſaying ſo, I do not reflect on his Original, or that he was found ſleeping on a Dung-hill in Ruſſia, a poor ragged Infant, when the Tartars took him Captive, among many Thouſands of others, in the Plunder of Tſinaren, and ſold him to the Capa Agaſi, for Thirteen Piaſters, by Reaſon of his Beauty. I do not call to mind the Circumſtances of his Youth, ſince 'tis common for the meaneſt Slaves to arrive at an Extraordinary Grandeur by their Merits, or at leaſt through the Favour of the Sultan.

But

But what I aim at is, that in his being diſguſted at the Remonſtrances I made of ſome private and ſiniſter Practiſes in the Treaſury, he forgot, that he himſelf is ſtill a Slave to the Grand Signior, as well as I, and therefore not above Inſtruction.

Well, it ſeems he is now made Captain Baſſa, and thou ſucceedeſt him in the Office of Treaſurer. To him I wiſh all Imaginable Succeſs and Victories at Sea, for the ſake of our Great Maſter, and the Muſſulman Empire: To thee, for thy own ſake, and for my Brother's, whom I know thou wilt ever reſpect as a Friend, I wiſh Encreaſe of Riches and Honours, even as thy Merits and Services augment, in the Eſteem of the Sultan, and of all the World.

And, I tell thee, I have far livelier Hopes to ſee this Latter Wiſh take Effect, than the Former: For, what Reaſon have we to expect better Luck from the Courage or Conduct of this Ourcos Kienan, than from the brave Zorneſan Muſtapha, who commanded the Fleet laſt Year?

This Unhappy Thought has put me into as melancholy a Humour, as Æneas was in when the Queen of Carthage required an Account of the Trojan Wars. For, I have heard that Cara Muſtapha, Baſſa, ſucceeded Zorneſan in the Command of the Fleet, and in the Revolution of a Moon was made Manſoul again, for the ſake of Kienan Baſſa, or rather for the ſake of the licentious Soldiers, who it ſeems command all Things. I have been informed alſo, of all the other Tragedies Acted at the Seraglio, ſince the Second Moon of this Year Neither are the Cauſes and Origin of ſo much Slaughter and Blood-ſhed hid from me. 'Tis too apparent, that there is an Univerſal Diſorder and Corruption in the Diſcipline of the Janizaries.

I formerly wrote to the Kiaya Bey on this Account. But it ſeems, Avarice the Root of all Evil, had render'd him Inſenſible and Obdurate.

Is it not a Shame that the Pay of thoſe who ſerve the Grand Signior in the Wars, ſhould be detain'd, not Three or Four Moons, but Five or Six Years, by their corrupt Officers? They ſit at home enjoying their Eaſe, revelling in Taverns, and committing a Thouſand Riots; whilſt the others undergo numberleſs Fatigues abroad, and are reduced to the extremeſt Neceſſities, not having ſo much as the Veſts allowd 'em by the Sultan, to cover their Nakedneſs! And, if they complain of their Sufferings, inſtead of Redreſs they meet with nothing but Taunts and Reproaches, as if they were not worthy to eat the Sultan's Bread and Salt, thô they freely hazard their Lives for him. It is no Wonder, the Janizaries are ſo unbridled in their Rage, after ſo many Provocations.

Yet, I cannot but lament the Fate of thoſe Unfortunate Men, who were ſacrificed to the Fury of that inſolent Militia: Eſpecially, I condole the Loſs of the brave Solyman Kyzlir Aga. The Janizaries had an old Grudge againſt against him, ever since his hot Dispute with the Bostangi Bassa, and now they were resolved to execute their Revenge.

As for the Kiaya Bey, it seems to be a Stroak of Divine Justice, that he who had been the Cause of all this Mutiny, should in Remorse strangle Himself, and so go to Hell, as an Expiation for the many Lives he had cast away.

And there's little less to be said, in Respect of the Mufti, who was the Chief of those that betray'd their Master, Sultan Ibrahim. To tell thee my true Resentments, I am heartily sorry for all the Rest: But to those who were concerned in that Treason, there seems no Pity due. And the Mufti may thank God and his good Stars, that his Life went not with the Others. They report here, he is fled into Egypt.

But, what was that Gelep Assan, who headed this Rabble of Mutineers? I have heard nothing of him, before the Intelligence I received of his sudden Rise, and equally precipitate Fall, during this Tumult. He was, I suppose, some passionate Fool, of an ill-contriv'd Midriff, which us'd to make a Quarrel between his Heart and his Spleen: And from this Intestine Broil, he habitually learn'd the Way to set People together by the Ears. A popular Man, an Incendiary, and one that knew how to wheadle the Vulgar to his own Ruine. Who can give an Account of these Things? Or who can unravel the Web of Destiny? Tho there's nothing strange in his particular Caſe, yet in the General 'tis prodigious, That ſuch little Inſtruments ſhould be able to give ſo terrible a Shock to the Frame of an Ancient and Mighty Government!

He was a Man of no Fame or Character, and yet for the ſpace of two Moons, he may be ſaid to command the Greateſt Sovereign in the World, Sole Priprietor of Fame and Honour. And, had he puſh'd on his Intereſt, 'tis not improbable, but that he might have exalted himſelf above his Maſter, and ſecured his Poſt againſt all After-claps. For, according to my Intelligence, he had during the Sedition, heap'd together prodigious Sums of Money, the Preſents of Baſſa's and other Miniſters of the Port, who all ador'd this new riſing Comet, and ſought his Protection and Favour againſt the Barbarous Rabble. But, it ſeems, he was infatuated with too much Glory, and conſider'd not that every Body watch'd all Opportunities and Occaſions to ruine him: And that his very Followers would be the Firſt to betray him, as ſoon as the Hurry of their Inſurrection was over. This generally happens to all Ringleaders of Parties. When once the Spirits of a Faction are ſpent, the Lees (which conſiſt of Regret and Confuſion) are diſcharged on thoſe who firſt fermented them, mix'd with the Revenge of the State.

There are Abundance of Great and brave Men gone: But, the old Negidher was of their Council, and he brought them to Ruine, Ruine, as he did the Coreis of Mecca, when they conſpir'd againſt the Life of the Prophet. This Devil enter'd the Temple (where they were aſſembled) in the Shape of an Ancient Man, decrepid and leaning on a Crutch. And when he was commanded to withdraw, he told them, He was a Senior, who had ſeen all Ages, and remark'd the Occurrences of Times; that he was expert in unfolding Secrets, and rendring Difficult Things eaſie. In a Word, he uſed ſo many plauſible Inſinuations, that they admitted him into their Aſſembly. But, none of their Counſels proſper'd.

That malicious Demon, is often preſent in the Cabals of Seditious Men; and thô they ſee him not, yet he ſecretly undermines their Plots, and brings 'em to Shame and Puniſhment. For, he is the Spirit of Envy: And thô he be himſelf a Rebel, and the Ringleader of a Faction in the Kingdom of the Air; yet, ſuch is his ſpightful Nature, that he ſeldom ſuffers any Rebellion to thrive on Earth: Not for any Love that he bears to Government, but becauſe he delights to be active in Miſchief, be it where it will; and the Guardian Spirits, will not ſuffer him to mix with the eſtabliſh'd Divans of an Empire.

The All-Good God preſerve thee from the Malice of Wicked Demons that always hover about Treaſurers of Gold and Silver.

Paris, 22d. of the 7th Moon, of the Year 1656.

LET-

LETTER XIX.

To the same.

THE Troubles of the Sublime Port touch'd me so nearly, and embark'd my Soul in such a Tempest of sollicitous Thoughts and Anxieties, for the Honour and Safety of the Osman Empire, that I had no Leisure to think of my own particular Hazards, whilst I was writing the other Letter. Yet I have been engulph'd in Abundance of Vexatious Circumstances and perillous Accidents.

It generally happens, that when one Misfortune befalls a Man, it brings a Train along with it. So that at some Seasons we seem to be besieged with Evils, or at least so closely block'd up by an Army of Calamities, that there is no Passage left open, either for Relief or Intelligence.

So has it far'd with me of late, and with Thousands of others, I doubt not, in this Populous City. The Rebellion of the Prince of Conde, is the Occasion of all this. For, the King having some Reasons to apprehend a secret Conspiracy of the Prince's Friends and Well-Wishers in Paris and other Places, has caused a very severe Scrutiny to be made of all Strangers and Sojourners. The Soubashi's or Officers go to every House within their Precinct, taking down the Names of all the Inhabitants in Writing, and seizing the Persons of

of those whom they suspect. The Prisons are fill'd with People of all Ranks, and the Nobles are sent to the Castle of the Wood of Vincennes. 'Tis said, the King has a List of many Thousands of Conde's Party in Paris, who design'd on a prefix'd Day to take up Arms for that Prince, and that their Example wou'd have been follow'd all over the Kingdom.

God knows what is in the Hearts of these Infidels: I am sure, Mahmut is wholly a stranger to their Plots. Tho' last Year I receiv'd certain Instructions from the Vizier Azem, commanding me to act secretly in the Prince of Conde's behalf, to abett the Faction, and use all the Endeavours and Art I could, to raise a New Party for him among the Courtiers. But, I wav'd so dangerous an Employment, by proposing to him the vast Expences it wou'd require, and the Necessity of sending some Extraordinary Embassy to this Court, to countenance the Business. To tell thee the Truth. I esteem'd it a thing Impracticable, and a mere Caprice of that Active Bassa, who had a Natural Kindness for Rebels, and delighted to have a Hand in difficult Undertakings, whether there was any likelyhood of success or not.

But, he is dead, and let that atone for all his Rebellions, when he had the Command of Aleppo. I love not to load the departed Souls with Accusations. What I have to say, is in my own vindication, who cou'd not approve his Politick Chimæra: In regard, had it succeeded ceeded, no Profit or Advantage wou'd from thence ariſe to the Ottoman Empire: And had it been diſcover'd, not only I and all the Secrets of my Commiſſion wou'd have lain open to the Infidels, but alſo it wou'd have been an Eternal Diſhonour and Blemiſh to the high reſplendent Port, to be found guilty of violating in ſo notorious a manner, the Faith it had given to the moſt Ancient and Puiſſant Monarchy among the Nazarenes.

Beſides, I know not but this Miniſter had a private Grudge againſt me, for accuſing him formerly to the Divan, when he held Correſpondence with the Venetians; and that he ſtudy'd this way to be reveng'd, by employing me in an Affair, which muſt needs be my Ruine. However, I think I had Reaſon to be Cautious and Apprehenſive of the Worſt. This made me diſpatch to him a Letter, full of ſpecious Umbrages, ſeeming to approve his Deſign, but entangling it with ſuch Difficulties, as wou'd divert him from farther Thoughts of it.

Yet after all, I have been really brought into Danger, on the bare Suſpicion of being concern'd on the Prince of Conde's Side: By which thou may'ſt gueſs at the Conſequence, had I hearken'd to the Vizier's Advice.

One Morning early, the Officers appointed for this Purpoſe, enter'd my Chamber: And having demanded my Name, Buſineſs and Quality; I anſwer'd, My Name was Titus Durlach Nieski; but that for ſhortneſs, and to denote

my

my Country, I was commonly call'd Titus the Moldavian; and that by this Name I was well known to Cardinal Mazarini, as I had been to his Predeceſſor Richlieu, and other Courtiers of great Quality. I told 'em likewiſe, That I was a Clerk, who underſtood ſome Foreign Languages, and therefore had been often employ'd by thoſe Cardinals, in Tranſlating Books out of Greek and Arabick into Latin and French: For which Reaſon, being recommended by Cardinal Richlieu, I had been introduc'd into the Acquaintance of ſeveral Nobles, whoſe Children I taught thoſe Languages. And that ſome of them had promis'd to make me Curate of St. Stephen's Church, as ſoon as it was vacant.

They ſeem'd to be very well ſatisfy'd with what I ſaid; but told me moreover, They had a Commiſſion to ſearch my Lodgings for Arms and Treaſonable Papers.

It is impoſſible to expreſs the Horror I was in when I ſaw them go roundly to work, prying into every corner, and ſearching my Trunks, Coffers, and even my Bed it ſelf. Not that I had any Guilt upon me, of concealing either Arms or Papers relating to this Conſpiracy, but my Concern was for my Box of Letters to the Miniſters of the Port. As for Arms, they found no other but an old Sword, which I told them I Travell'd with out of my own Country, and a Brace of Piſtols for the ſame uſe, to defend me from Robbers, Aſſaſſins, and other Injuries.

These Fellows seem'd mightily pleas'd with the Curious Workmanship of my Weapons, survey'd them all over, and having drawn my Sword out of the Scabbard, and made a Pass or two with it against the Wall, after the French Mode of Fencing, they put it up again; telling me, They had no Authority to take these Arms from me, since they were necessary for my Defence. But when they came to my Box of Letters, and saw them written in strange Characters which none of them could read; they began to look on one another, and change their Countenances, as if there were some dangerous Matter contain'd in these Papers, and therefore writ in Cyphers.

They went aside to one End of the Chamber, whispering together, and nodding their Heads with all the Symptoms of Jealousie. At length, I interrupting them, said, "You "need not, Gentlemen, be concern'd about "those Papers. They were left with me by "a Merchant-Jew of my Acquaintance, and "they are Letters of Correspondence between "him and some of his Brethren at Rome, "Venice, Amsterdam, and other Places in Eu"rope. 'Tis therefore they are written in a "Character which to you appears strange, in "being Hebrew, the National Language of "the Jews. They contain only Matters of "Traffick, being Letters of Mart and Ex"change: For you know, the Jews are the "greatest Merchants, Brokers and Banquiers "in the World.

These

These Words, with some Gold which I gave them, dispers'd all their Suspicions, clear'd up their cloudy Brows, and turn'd their Frowns into Smiles and Complimental Addresses. They told me, I was a very honest Man, and they wou'd do me what service they cou'd. So bid me Adieu.

By this thou may'st see the mighty Power of that Charming Metal, which commands all Things. For, whatever I cou'd have said without that, had been Insignificant. But these Idolaters, melted into an Indifference at the First Sight of the glittering Pistoles, and when I had once render'd them thus ductile, 'twas easie to frame 'em to the most devout Appearance of Respect and Friendship. They promis'd and swore, no Hurt shou'd be done me.

But I knew the Fickleness of Human Fidelity better, than to repose any great Confidence in these Mens words. As soon as they were gone, I convey'd my Letters to Eliachim, who cou'd easily conceal 'em in any private corner of his House; desiring him to furnish me with some Letters of Indifferent Concerns written in Hebrew, that if these Searchers shou'd come again, and demand a second View of my Box, perhaps with Design to carry it to some Minister of State, I might have those Hebrew Dispatches ready to shew; which being put in the same Box, wou'd not be known from the other by such Ignorant Fellows, to whom Hebrew, Arabick and Chinese were all alike, and so I shou'd be acquitted ted from all future trouble of this Nature.

And the Event anſwer'd my Expectation, For, within Three Days, the ſame Men came again with others in their Company, pretending they had freſh Warrants, and were ſworn to be Impartial. Wherefore I was forc'd to attend 'em, whil'ſt they carry'd both me and my Box before a Cadi or Judge, who having examin'd me very ſtrictly concerning my Name, Country, Religion, and other Matters, and ſeeming well ſatisfy'd with all my Anſwers, at laſt ſent for a Prieſt well vers'd in the Hebrew Tongue, ordering him to peruſe the Letters: Which when he had done, he aſſur'd the Cadi, that there was not a word in any of them relating to the State, being purely Matters of private Contracts and Bargains between Merchant-correſpondents, with Bills of Lading, &c. So I had my Box of Sham-Letters reſtor'd to me again, and was Honourably diſmiſs'd.

Yet, thô this Storm was ſoon blown over, I was very near running on Rocks and Sands through the Perſecution of thy Predeceſſor Kienan Baſſa, and Kiſur Dramelec, with many others in the Seraglio: The Firſt keeping from me the Penſion allow'd by the Grand Signior; The Second, either ſending me no Intelligence, or elſe baffling me with trifling News, nothing to the Purpoſe; the Reſt aſperſing me to the Miniſters of the Divan.

I deſire thee to ſend me the Arrears that are behind for the Space of Nineteen Moons,

as

as thou wilt find in the Regiſter of the Haſna. Had it not been for Eliachim, that honeſt Jew, I ſhou'd have been ruin'd in this Place for want of Money.

I need not ſay more to thee, who know'ſt that Gold is the Grand Taliſman, which works all the Miracles in the World.

Paris, 22th of the 7th Moon of the Year 1656.

The End of the Second Book.

LETTERS

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. V.

BOOK III.

LETTER I.

To Dgnet Oglou.

WHO can penetrate into the Myſterious Conduct of Deſtiny; Whether God governs this World by the Influence of the Stars, or by the Miniſtry of Spirits, or by his own Immediate Power? Or, whether All Things did not proceed from Chance, and are ſtill Rul'd by the ſame? Be it how it will, there remains ſomething Adoreable. Even that Chance it ſelf, ſelf, ſuppoſing Epicurus's Opinion true, is worthy of Supreme Honours and Sacrifices, which has with ſuch Exquiſite Luck, perform'd all the Part of Infinite Wiſdom and Forecaſt, in Forming and Preſerving the Univerſe. Were I a Diſciple of that Philoſopher, every Morning when I beheld the Riſing Sun, and at Mid-Day when I ſaw him Climb the Meridian, and in the Evening when he takes his Congè of this Upper World to viſit our Antipodes, would I with Profoundeſt Veneration cry out, O Eternal Chance! O Omnipotent Caſualty! O Incomprehenſible Blindneſs! I adore thee, I burn Incenſe to thee, and do all Things which the duller ſort of Mortals think are only due to an All-Wiſe, All-Good, and an All-Mighty God. Thus would I addreſs to that Infinite Pell-Mell of Atomes, could I believe with Epicurus, that from ſuch an Unconceivable Hurly-Burly, proceeded all this Admirable Beauty and Order which we behold.

Thou wilt perceive by this, that I am Religiouſly diſpoſed; and rather than not Adore ſome Supreme Being, I would make a Deity of that which to others is the Fountain of Atheiſm. And I think there is Reaſon on my ſide. For let this World be produc'd how it will, whether by the Caſual Concourſe of Atomes, or by the Deliberate Act of an Eternal Mind; Whether it be Eternally Self-Exiſtent, according to the Stoicks, or be the Genuine Reſult of the Divine Idea's, as the Platoniſts ſay; It is but Juſt, that we ſhould pay the moſt Devout and Grateful Acknowledgments ledgments to the Source of ſo many Immenſe Prodigies and Wonders.

But then, what ſhall we ſay for all the EVIL that appears in the World? That there is ſuch a Thing as EVIL, ſcatter'd up and down through all the Ranks of Beings, and as it were blended and riveted in their very Eſſences, is manifeſt at firſt View; and every Man has his Share of this Epidemical Contagion. But whence it proceeds, who can inform me? I am not the Firſt that ask the Queſtion. Many Ages ago the Inquiſitive World was buſie in ſearching out the Root of EVIL. And there were almoſt as many Opinions about it, as there were Nations on Earth.

Some aſſerted, That all EVIL came out of the North: Others derive it from the South; as if the Two Poles were the Centers and Native Seats of this Malady of the World. But theſe ſeem to be Men of ſhort Diſcourſe, and Shallow Reaſon, Supinely Credulous, and willing to take up with any Thing, rather than be at the Pains of Attentive Contemplation.

Yet this Opinion has ſo far prevail'd in theſe Weſtern Parts, that the Nazarene Prieſts when they Celebrate their Maſs, ſtand on the North ſide of the Altar at the Reading the Goſpel, turning their Backs to that Quarter of the World. And the Reaſon they give for this Ceremony is, becauſe in the Written Law it is ſaid, Out of the North comes all EVIL. I have heard 'em ſeriouſly maintain this Argument. But, God knows whether there be any ſuch Place in the Written

Law,

Law, or no: Or, if there be, whether it muſt be taken in this Sence. Yet I muſt confeſs, the Romans have ſome Reaſon to believe it, having Experimentally felt a great deal of EVIL from the Northern Goths and Vandals, who in Former Ages ruſh'd out of their Frozen Regions, and came down like a Torrent upon Italy and other Parts of Europe, making Havock of all Things Civil and Sacred. And, if this be the Ground of their Ceremony, they have greater Reaſon now to change their Station, and turn their Backs to the South-Eaſt, having been much more Fatally handled by the Victorious Muſſulmans.

The Ancient Perſians held, That there were Two Principles or Sources of All Things, viz. GOOD and EVIL; and that there has been an Eternal Quarrel between them: But in the End, they ſay, the GOOD ſhall get the Victory, and Exterminate the EVIL. This Opinion was embraced by a Sect of Chriſtians, whom they call'd Manichees. The Founder of that Sect, was a Perſian by Birth: His Name was Manes, a very Learned Man, as the Records of the Eaſt teſtifie: Yet the Chriſtians rank him among the moſt Pernicious Hereticks. He taught, That Wine was the Blood of Devils; And therefore forbad it to his Followers. He alſo prohibited the Fleſh of Animals. This he learn'd from the Prieſts of Egypt, where he reſided a conſiderable Time.

But

But to return to the Sentiments of Men concerning the Origin of EVIL. There are ſome who affirm, God is the Author of it, Which is not far from Blaſphemy. Others ſay, That when the Devils were Exterminated from the Earth, they in Revenge ſow'd the Seeds of EVIL in the Univerſe. But that of the Stoicks ſeems the moſt plauſible to me: For they aſſerted, That Nothing is EVIL of it ſelf, but that the Contrariety which we behold in the World, is very Good, and conduces to Eſtabliſh the Order and Oeconomy of All Things.

My dear Gnet, do not eſteem me an Atheiſt, becauſe of the Liberty I take in diſcourſing of theſe Myſterious Things. There are a ſort of People here in the Weſt, whom they call Deiſts, that is, Men profeſſing the Belief of a God, Creator of the World, but Sceptick in all Things elſe. They have no Implicit Faith in Hiſtorical Religion, but think it the Part of Men as they are endu'd with Reaſon, to call in Queſtion the Writings of Mortals like themſelves, though they had the Character of the Greateſt Prophets. Thus they think it no Sin to canvaſs the Books of Moſes, and the Hebrew Prophets, the Goſpel of Jeſus the Son of Mary, and the Alcoran of Mahomet our Holy Law-giver: Chuſing what is Agreeable to Reaſon, and rejecting the Reſt as Fabulous, inſerted either by the Craft of Men, or the Interloping of the Devil.

I proteſt, there appears to me no Reaſon to call theſe Men Atheiſts or Infidels. They rather seem to deserve the Title of Philosophers, or Lovers of Wisdom and Truth. And 'tis from them I have learn'd this Unwillingness to be imposed on in Matters of Religion. I find them in all Things Men of great Morality and Goodness, far exceeding the Zealots of the Age in true Virtue and Pious Actions. But they make no Noise of what they do: And whilst only their Human Frailties are Conspicuous to all, their Perfections lie conceal'd under the Veil of an Unparallell'd Modesty.

Such of Old were the Associates of Zeid Eb'n Raphan, my Country-man. This was a Person of an Ardent Spirit and Prodigious Understanding, Educated in the Muffulman Law: But when he came to those Years, wherein Men usually examine the Grounds of their Religion, he sought out the most Learned Men, and such as were vers'd in all Sciences. After he had converse'd some Time with 'em, and found 'em to be Persons of Integrity, as well as Men of Sense, he propos'd to them the Convenience of Frequent Clubs among themselves, where they might with an Unrestrained Freedom, discourse of all Things; and being United in an Inviolable Friendship, might improve one another in Knowledge and Virtue, without regarding the Legends and Harangues of the Mollahs. This Society compos'd Fifty Books of so many several Kinds of Science, and they call'd 'em Echwanossapha, or the Writings of the Sincere Fraternity, concealing their Names. They treated ed of Human and Divine Matters without Reſerves or Caution: Aſſerting, That the Muſſulman Religion was Corrupted and Alienated from its Firſt Inſtitution, having imbib'd many Errors; and that there was no Way to reſtore it to its Primitive Purity, but by joining to it the Philoſophy of the Ancients. In a Word, they endeavour'd to reform whatever was amiſs in the Doctrines and Manners of the Faithful, by reducing both to the Standard of Reaſon.

I know not whether thou wilt approve or diſlike their Enterprize. But I am ſure thou art Senſible as well as I, that there are Bigots among the Followers of the Prophet, and that thoſe deſerve Correction. The Devil will ſet his Foot in the Temple of God. But do not thou follow his Steps. If thou do, He that made the Devil, fetch thee back again.

Paris, 30th. of the 7th Moon,
of the Year 1656.

LETTER II.

To the Nazin Eſchref, or, Prince of the Emirs, at the Port.

THE Chriſtians ſay, 'tis an Argument of God's Love when he Chaſtiſes them. Therefore they have no Reaſon to be peeviſh, or call it an Effect of his Anger, that a diſmal Plague is broke out in the Territories of the Pope, the Kingdom of Naples, and other Parts of Italy. This Contagion rages ſo vehemently in Rome, the Capital City of the Weſtern Nazarenes, that above a Hundred Thouſand Perſons of ſeveral Ranks have forſaken that Place. The Pope's Palace is ſhut up, and no Acceſs granted to any, not even to Foreign Embaſſadors, without great Precaution; and then, none of their Retinue are admitted with them.

'Tis ſaid, Seventeen Hundred die daily in that City, and Six Thouſand a Day in Naples. Nay, in ſome Places, the Living are ſcarce ſufficient to bury the Dead. The Grand Duke of Tuſcany, to prevent the ſpreading the Infection in his Territories, has forbid all Intercourſe between his Subjects and thoſe of the Pope, neither will he permit ſo much as a Nuncio to paſs through his Dominions.

This Mortality has frighted Queen Chriſtina from Rome. She has ſent to deſire Paſſes of the the Duke of Savoy and other Princes, deſigning for France. She is already on her Voyage, having been preſented by the Pope with Ten Thouſand Crowns, to defray the Expences of her Travels. Here are great Preparations making for her Reception: The King having ſent Orders to all Governours of Towns and Provinces through which ſhe muſt paſs, to receive and entertain her with a Magnificence due to her Sovereign Dignity, and worthy of the French Grandeur and Hoſpitality.

In the mean time, this Court is in a ſullen Humour, by Reaſon of a late great Loſs they have ſuffer'd at Valenciennes in Flanders. This Place was beſieg'd by the French, at the beginning of the Campaigne, but was reliev'd by the Spaniards this Moon, who kill'd above a Thouſand Men on the Spot, took Five Thouſand Priſoners, with all their Cannon and Baggage. Amongſt the Captives of Note, is the Mareſchal de Ferte Seneterre, General of the French Army. The Names of the others are wanting. Mareſchal de Turenne himſelf very narrowly eſcaped, by timely withdrawing his Brigade from the Fight: For which ſome ſtigmatize him with Cowardiſe and Treachery: Whilſt others affirm, he acted the Part of a Prudent Captain, in thus Retreating, ſince it was impoſſible to reſtore the Battle with any ſucceſs.

From Sueden we hear, that the Elector of Brandenburgh has enter'd into a League with the King of Sueden, by which both their Armies are United againſt the King of Poland:

and 'tis ſaid, their firſt Deſign will be upon Dantzick. That Country is in a horrid Confuſion, the Nobles, Gentry, and Boors, being all in Arms, ſome deſerting their Sovereign, others adhering to his Intereſt. King Caſimir has Inveſted Warſaw with an Army of Forty Thouſand Men. In the mean time, the Hollanders have ſent a great Fleet of Ships of War into the Baltick Sea; but to what end is not known; nor what Part they will take, whether the Suedes or Poles. Yet, the Latter hope for great Aſſiſtance from them, there having been lately ſome Miſunderſtanding between the Dutch and the Suedes. The Moſcovits alſo have entered Poland with a Numerous Army, and the Tartars are coming with another to the Aid of King Caſimir.

Thus is Poland become the Stage of a moſt Terrible War; and which ſide ſoever gets the Victory, that unhappy Country will be near ruin'd.

Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna, and a Private Agent for the Grand Signior, ſends me Word, that the Emperour of Germany hath an Army of Thirty Thouſand Foot, and Twelve Thouſand Horſe in Sileſia, who are to joyn with the Moſcovites, and do ſome conſiderable Action againſt the Suedes, whoſe continual Victories, and growing Greatneſs, gives Jealouſie to theſe Puiſſant Monarchs. He informs me farther, that the Emperour has diſpatch'd a Courier to the Prince of Tranſylvania, with Inſtructions and Letters, to engage him to a Neutrality.

But

But the Young Ragotski, is as Wild as his Father, and hates to be led by the Noſe.

Thou mayeſt inform the Miniſters of the Divan, that Adonai the Jew is dead of the Plague in Rome, having firſt taken Care to tranſmit to me all the Papers which concern the Myſterious Port.

This Court at preſent is at a Place call'd La Fere in Picardy, a Province bordering on Flanders. From whence there may be a more frequent Intercourſe between the King and his Camp.

Prince of the Holy Line, I have ſent thee all the News that is ſtirring at this Juncture, leaving ſome trivial Matters which are not worth a Muſſulman's Knowledge; much leſs thine, who art diſtinguiſh'd from the Crowd of True Believers, by wearing the Sacred Colour of the Prophet.

Paris, the 30th. of the 7th. Moon, of the Year 1656.

LETTER III.

To Melec Amet.

HERE has been a ſtrange Accident lately, not many Leagues from Paris, which has occaſion'd Various Diſcourſes, and put the Philoſophers upon a New Scrutiny. One Morning a certain Peaſant or Farmer, walking over his Lands, as his Cuſtom is, to number his Sheep and other Cattle, miſs'd a Barn or Store-Houſe which ſtood in a Field at ſome Diſtance from his Habitation. Surpriz'd at this, he haſten'd towards the Place where he ſaw it but the Night before: When, to his no ſmall Aſtoniſhment, he perceived, that not only the Barn, but a great Part of the Field wherein it was built, was ſunk into the Earth. He immediately ran and call'd ſome of his next Neighbours to behold this ſtrange Spectacle: And the Fame of it ſpread all over the Country. Divers Learned and Ingenious Perſons have been there, to make Obſervations of this Accident. But none dares venture near enough to the Chaſme, to look down into it; becauſe the Earth continues breaking and falling in, which makes a Noiſe like the Salvo's of the Janizaries, when the Grand Signior viſits the Arſenal.

One would conclude by theſe Uncommon Symptoms, that the Earth grows Ancient and Weak, Weak, that her Inward Strength and Vigor decays, and that we are every where in Danger of being ſwallow'd up. I have not Time to write more, it being Midnight, and the Poſt ready to go.

The Almighty and All-Good God, have thee in his Holy Protection.

Paris, 30th. of the 7th Moon, of the Year, 1656.

LETTER IV.

To Zornezan Muſtapha, Beglerbeg of Erz'ram.

I Will ſtill Congratulate thy Happineſs, even in this Laſt Change of thy Fortune; which, though it be a kind of Deſcent from the more Lofty Stations thou haſt poſſeſſed in the Oſman Empire, yet 'tis attended with Honourable Circumſtances and an Inviolable Security. Thou art not out of the Sultan's Favour, Baniſh'd to Eygpt, and Confin'd to a narrow Penſion during thy Life, as has been the Fate of ſeveral Grandees: But thou art withdrawn from the Intrigues of State, the Toils of War, and the Plots of a Courtier's Life, to the Sweet Retirements of the Country, the Peaceable Poſſeſſion of a Rich and Fertile Province, where thou mayſt paſs thy Days in Uncontroulable Eaſe and Felicity.

I am not ſurpriz'd at the Fall of ſo many Great Men at the Port, nor do I much regret the Death of thoſe who were known Enemies to the Government: Yet it troubles me to think, how the Brave and the Loyal had their Innocent Blood mingled with that of Traytors and Villains. But, theſe Things are unavoidable in Popular Inſurrections, when the Sovereign is compell'd to ſacrifice to the Multitude, whomſoever they require. Thus fell the Illuſtrious Solyman, among the Criminal Eunuchs, though he himſelf was free from Stain. But he was a Negro, and that was his Ruine. For, the Malecontents could not diſcern the Fair Qualities of his Soul.

Curſe on that Fool Chaban Kalfa, and double Curſes on his Rampant Wife Mulkly Kedin, who gave the Firſt Occaſions to all this Diſorder and Spoil of Noble Blood. I remember, the honeſt Solyman gave me once a Hint of the Feminine Debaucheries practiſed in the Queen-Mother's Apartments: But he ſpoke of it with ſo much Modeſty and Reſerve, that it hardly made any Impreſſion on me at that Time. Otherwiſe I ſhould have imparted it to the Vizir Azem, or ſome other Miniſter of the Divan; for, ſo am I commanded, in Caſes that touch the Honour and Safety of the Grand Signior. And, I tell thee, this was none of the leaſt Importance. For, as it appears, the Women were undermining the moſt Sacred and Firmly Eſtabliſh'd Government in the World. They were not contented to wallow in their own Impious and Unnatural Delights, but would have ſet themſelves as a Pattern to others, and by Degrees have infected the whole Muſſulman Empire with a New Species of Debauchery: Which as it began and was carried on by Embezilling the Royal Treaſures, ſelling of Places to Men of no Merit, Buffoons, Pims, and Aſſes; ſo would it have ended in enervating our Militia, corrupting all the Faithful, and laying the Empire naked to Infidels.

not

How many Vizirs, Caimachams, Captain-Baſſa's, and other Officers have we had this Fatal Year? Among the Reſt, I cannot but reflect on the Poyſoning of the Chiaux Baſſa, after he was made Vizir Azem, as a Stroke of Divine Juſtice, for having embru'd his Hands in ſo much Noble Blood, when he enjoy'd that Dignity once before. God purſues the Cruel with Inviſible Scourges.

But what was that Achmet Baſſa, who took Advantage of the Sultan's Domeſtick Troubles, and Foreign Wars, to diſturb his Government in Aſia, and raiſe a Rebellion, which threaten'd even the Imperial City it ſelf? By the Courſe of his Fortune, it looks as if he were not contented with his Command in Aſia, and therefore took this new celebrated Method to obtain a Higher Dignity, viz. by Rebelling againſt his Maſter: Elſe why was he made Baſſa of the Sea, in the Room of Ouroos Kienan? The Baſſa of Aleppo firſt brought into Faſhion this daring Way of growing Great. And if it be thus countenanc'd by the Grand Signior, in all Probability, he will have Reason to make Peace with the Christians, that he may have Respite and Forces to employ against his own Subjects.

nanc'd

Amidst all these Things, Nothing afflicts me so much, as the Horrible Loss our Fleet has sustain'd at Sea. We have various Reports of this Combat, but in general they agree, That the Mussulmans have lost Seventy Two Ships and Galleys, with an Infinite Number of Men; That the Venetians have taken the Isles of Tenedos and Lemnos, and that they are advancing to besiege Constantinople. This News is a great while coming to us: So that, if it be true, and the Venetians pursu'd their Victory; for ought I know, by this Time, the Imperial City, the Refuge of the World, may be laid in Ashes.

I have often propos'd the Necessity of Platforms along the Hellespont, to guard that Important Avenue of the Sacred Port. Had they put in practice Mahmut's Advice, perhaps the Nazarenes would have had no Occasion for their present Triumphs. But now they Banquet in the open Streets; All Christendom rings with the News of our Disgrace. The Drunkards of Europe, insult o'er the Professors of Sobriety: Amidst their Bowls of Wine, they blaspheme our Prophet, and sing in the Praise of Bacchus their God: They menace the Conquest of Asia, and threaten to exterminate the Mussulmans from the Earth.

Enrag'd

Ehrag'd at theſe Prophane Boaſts, I ſtop my Ears, and turning round in a Divine Phrenſie, I pray that God would baffle the Infidels.

Paris, the 6th. of the 9th. Moon.
of the Year, 1656.

LETTER V.

To the moſt Renowned, and moſt Illuſtrious Mahomet, Vizir Azem, at the Port.

THat incomprehenſible Majeſty, which has no Reſemblance, at whoſe Pleaſure all Things are diſpos'd and order'd in Heaven and Earth, by whoſe particular Providence, for the Good of the Oſman Empire, thou art exalted to this Glorious Truſt, to be Vicar of the Vicar of God; augment thy Graces and Virtues, and bleſs thee with Superlative Wiſdom, and perfect Tranquility.

I revere thy accompliſh'd Soul, conſummate in all Moral and Political Science. Thou art the moſt Experienc'd Man in the Empire. And I ceas'd to condole the late Tumults and Riots at Conſtantinople, though their Effects were fatal to ſome brave Men, ſince thou art choſen to this Dignity, from whom the whole Empire may expect, not only a ſerener State of Affairs, during thy Adminiſtration, but alſo a rooting up of the Cauſes of theſe Publick Diſtempers, and of all other Evils which infeſt the Monarchy deſign'd for the Conqueſt and Reformation of the whole World.

Empire

According to the Cuſtom of the Eaſt, I approach thee not without ſome Preſent: But pardon the Slave Mahmut, who can ſend thee none worthy of thy Grandeur. I have enclos'd in a Box the true Effigies of the Preſent King of France, with that of his Uncle the Duke of Orleans, his Brother the Duke of Anjou, and his Couſin the Prince of Conde; as alſo that of Cardinal Mazarini, and Queen Chriſtina of Sueden, who is now at the French Court. Accept alſo from an Exile, a little Cabinet containing Twelve Watches, of ſo many different Contrivances, according to the Circular Variation of the Moons in the Space of Thirty Four Years. They are the Work of my own Hands; therefore I ſhall not commend 'em. Each is wrapt up in a Piece of Silk, wherein is wrought in Arabick Letters, the Method of uſing it. Perhaps thou wilt find ſome Diverſion in trying the Experiments mention'd in thoſe Tables. However, deſpiſe not this mean Teſtimony of Mahmut's Reſpect; but conſider that if I come ſhort of the Curious Artiſts in Europe, yet my Labour is paſſable enough for a Muſſulman, among whom there is ſcarce another Watch-maker to be found in the World.

If

If thou wouldſt know the Occaſion of Queen Chriſtina's being at the French Court: She came thither from Rome, when the laſt Moon was in its Wane. Her Paſſage was by Sea to Marſeilles, having touch'd at Genoua, and receiv'd magnificent Gifts from the Republick; but they would not permit her to land, for fear of the Plague, which then rag'd in Rome, and was the cauſe of her leaving that City.

However, the French ſhew'd no ſuch timorous ſqueamiſhneſs, but receiv'd Her and her Train with open Arms. She landed at Marſeilles on the 29th of the 7th Moon; and when ſhe made her Publick Entry, the Conſuls of that City, with all the Nobles, met her in Coaches, the Great Guns were diſcharg'd to welcome her, and ſhe was careſs'd with all the demonſtrations of Honor that are ſhew'd to the Queen of France her ſelf in her Progreſſes.

The ſame Entertainment ſhe receiv'd at Aix, Avignon, Lyons, and in Fine, all along the Road to Paris, the Keys of Towns being ſurrendred to her (for ſuch was the King's Pleaſure) and a Canopy of State born over her Head, when ſhe enter'd any Town, and receiv'd the Addreſſes and Compliments of Governours, Prelates, and other Great Men in Authority. She was likewiſe Magnificently treated by Princes and the Chief Dukes of the Realm: And on the 8th of the laſt Moon, made her Entry into this City on Horſe-back, apparell'd like a Man: Where having ſtaid ſome Time, ſhe departed for Compiegne, to viſit viſit the Court, which reſides there now.

It is not ſuppos'd ſhe will tarry long in France, but as ſoon as ſhe hears the Plague is abated in Rome, and the adjacent Parts, ſhe will return thither, to paſs away the Reſidue of her Life, in that Neſt of Princes and Prelates of the Nazarene Belief.

A little before ſhe left Rome, the Spaniards there had conſpir'd to ſeize on her Perſon, as alſo on the Pope; to have Murder'd the Portugal Ambaſſador, and ſet the City on Fire. But the Plot was diſcover'd, and the Conſpirators put in Priſon: For, the Sentence of Death is never paſs'd in Criminal Caſes among the Nazarenes, without a Formal Tryal.)

Here is a Rumour, as if a Great Fire had ſome Moons ago broke out in Conſtantinople, and conſum'd much of that City. I wonder, none of my Friends, nor any other reſiding there, have ſent me an Account of any ſuch Thing. Which fills me with Hopes, that this Report is falſe.

From all Hands we are aſſur'd that the Suedes and Brandenbourgers have obtain'd a great Victory over the Poles and Tartars at Warſaw; the Vanquiſh'd having loſt above Six Thouſand Men on the Spot, with all their Ammunition and Baggage: And unfortunate King Caſimir, was forc'd to fly with a ſmall Retinue towards Hungary.

'Twas the general Expectation of Europe, that the Moſcovites and Germans, wou'd have done ſomething extraordinary for the Poles, and and by ſome ſurprizing Action, put a check to the Swediſh Succeſſes and Triumphs. For when the Moſcovite Ambaſſador was at Koningsberg, endeavouring to withdraw the Duke of Brandenbourgh from the Swediſh Intereſt, he vomited forth terrible Menaces, in Caſe they comply'd not with his Maſter's Propoſals. And one Day, in a furious Zeal, he took a large Goblet of Wine, in the Elector's Preſence; and having drank it off to the Czars Health, the Barbarian ſaid aloud, Thus ſhall the Great Emperour of the Moſcovites devour all that oppoſe him. But now it ſeems, theſe were only Empty Bravadoes, and the Moſcovites were reſolv'd to ſtand by, and ſee who got the better on't. The ſame may be ſaid of the Emperour, and Prince of Tranſylvania; ſo of the Danes and Hollanders, who now all declare for the ſtrongeſt Party.

Magnanimous Vizir, if the preſent Engagements and Wars in Dalmatia and Candy, beſides the Domeſtick Troubles of the Ottoman Empire, did not wholly employ the Arms of the Muſſulmans; doubtleſs, 'twould be an Undertaking no leſs Profitable than Glorious, to ſuccour the diſtreſs'd Caſimir, turn the Tide of the Gothiſh Conqueſts, and oblige the Poles to an Eternal Fidelity and Gratitude to the Grand Signior.

Paris, 14th. of the 10th Moon,
of the Year 1656.

LETTER

LETTER VI.

To Abrahim Eli Zeid, Hogia, Preacher to the Seraglio.

I Have frequent Access to the King's Library: Which Favour was first granted me by Cardinal Richlieu, who often employ'd me in Translating some curious Treatises out of Arabick into French or Latin. The French seem very fond of Eastern Manuscripts, where ever they can meet with 'em: And they have no less regard for Men who are skill'd in those Languages. That Minister especially, was very Inquisitive into the Wisdom and Learning of Asia. He Monopoliz'd Persian, Syrian and Arabick Books, and was a profess'd Patron of Linguists. He coveted the Acquaintance of Strangers and Travellers, that he might by their means inform himself of the different Laws, Customs and Religions of Foreign Countreys; and of whatsoever was Rare and worthy of Observation, in any Part of the World.

Hence it was, that I receiv'd Evident Marks of his Esteem, as soon as he knew that I understood the Greek, Arabick, Hebrew, Turkish and Sclavonian Languages. He often made use of me, as I have said, and gave me free Access to his own and the King's Library. And thô his Successor Cardinal Mazarini Mazarini, is not so much addicted to Studies of this Nature, as to the Affairs of State; yet he has continu'd to me, the Priviledge of visiting this Treasury of Learned Books, where I pass many Hours.

One Day I cast my Eyes on a Manuscript written in Arabick, and endors'd with this Title.

[The Original Covenant of Mahomet, the Prophet of the Arabians, with the Professors of the Faith of Jesus.]

and underneath was a Latin Inscription, signifying, That this Manuscript was found in the Convent of Christian Friars on Mount Carmel. I have Transcrib'd the Contents of this Parchment, and sent it enclos'd to thee, that thou may'st judge whether it be Real or only Counterfeit. For, the Nazarenes assert it to be the True Agreement of the Messenger of God; and therefore reproach all the Musulmans with Disobedience to our Lawgiver, and breaking the League, Sign'd and Seal'd by Him whom we call the Seal of the Prophets, and Witness'd by the Four Principal Doctors, Abu Becre, Osman, Omar and Hali.

If thou wilt peruse the Inclos'd Pape, it will be easy to discern, Whether We are guilty of this Violation of Faith, or They. For, though (supposing this to be the Real Testament of the Prophet, as is pretended) that Favourite of Heaven grants many Articles of Peace, Assistance and Friendship, to the Follower lowers of Jesus; with Immunity from Taxes and Impositions, Liberty of Conscience, Freedom of Marriages, &c. Yet 'tis evident, that he promis'd not these Things, but on certain Conditions to be observ'd on the Part of the Christians; as that none of them shou'd harbour, or hold Correspondence with the Enemies of the True Believers, or Privately accommodate 'em with Arms, Horses, Money or any other Necessaries of War: But, on the contrary, should Hospitably receive the Mussulmans into their Houses for Three Days, and Protect 'em from their Enemies. If therefore the Christians should fail in any of these Points, the Prophet declares his Covenant to be void, and that they shall not enjoy the Indulgences granted therein. All this, thou wilt see, is recommended solemnly to both Parties, to be Religiously perform'd, till the Final Consummation.

Now, all the Dispute is, Whether We have First transgress'd these Articles; or the Nazarenes? For, if it can be prov'd, That they are the First Aggressors, then they have no Reason to complain of their Misfortunes, or accuse the True Faithful of Oppression and Tyranny, as they commonly do; Since it is manifest, that they have drawn these Evils on themselves by their breach of Faith, and Infidelity, disannulling the Covenant of God and his Prophet, and forfeiting the Benefits they might have claim'd by Virtue of it. Be it how it will, the Prophet is free from Blame: Let the Guilt rest on the Persons that were Criminal.

I know

I know not how it comes to paſs, that the Chriſtians of this Age, think and ſpeak more Reproachfully of our Holy Law giver, than did their Fathers, who liv'd in his Time, or immediately after it, and who by Conſequence could better inform themſelves of the Circumſtances of his Birth, Life, and Renowned Actions. Some Ancient Writers among the Nazarenes, make Honourable Mention of Him and his Family. They conceal not the early Signs of his Heroick Virtue, and the Grandeur to which he was deſtin'd. I have read in a certain Chriſtian Author, That when the Prophet was but Nine Years old, under the Tuition of his Uncle Abu-Taleb, who carried his Glorious Charge along with him to Damaſcus, and that whilſt they were at Boz'r, a Learned Monk whoſe Name was Bohira, came out of the Convent to meet them; and taking Mahomet by the Hand in the Preſence of many Chriſtians, he ſaid aloud, This Youth is born to accompliſh Great Things: His Fame ſhall be ſpread from Eaſt to Weſt: For, as he drew near to this Place, I ſaw a bright Cloud deſcend and cover him. Sultan David alſo Propheſy'd of him, in that which the Chriſtians reckon the 50th. Pſalm, and the 2d. Verſicle: Where that Divine Poet thus Sings, From Sion God hath proclaim'd the Empire of Mahomet. But the Chriſtians have Interpreted this in another Sence, though the Original remains a ſtanding Witneſs againſt 'em. So Moſes in the Pentetcuch uttered a Myſtery, when when he ſaid, God came from Sinai, he roſe up from Seir, and was manifeſted from Mount Paran. Intimating hereby, the Deſcent of the Written Law to Moſes, of the Goſpel to Jeſus the Son of Mary, and of the Alcoran to Mahomet. The Meſſias alſo ſaid to his Diſciples, If I go not away, the Called of God will not to come to You. But the Chriſtian Interpreters wilfully hide theſe Things from the Vulgar, leſt their Eyes ſhould be opened. There appears an Obſtinate Malice and Ignorance in all their Actions.

Who will not laugh at the fooliſh ſpight of the Spaniards; who, in a certain Town, had a Cuſtom, as oft as they enter'd into the Church or came out, to ſpit on a Black Image of a Man ſitting on an Aſs, near the Gate. But a Muſſulman Embaſſador coming thither from the Emperor of Morocco, and obſerving this Vain Ceremony of the People, ask'd the King, What Perſon that Statue repreſented? He made Anſwer, That it was the Image of Mahomet, the Arabian Prophet. That cannot be, reply'd the Embaſſador, ſince our Prophet never rode but on Camels: It is rather the Figure of the Meſſias; who indeed is recorded to have rode on an Aſs. The King troubl'd at this Anſwer, conſulted the Prieſts and Learned Men, who all concluded, that the Embaſſador had ſpoke the Truth. And therefore, inſtead of offering any more Indignities to this Image, they fell into another Extreme, and built a Chappel for it, burning Incenſe to the Senſeleſs Stock, and paying it Divine Ho- nours. Thus they Pray'd to that, which but a little before, they had Curs'd; and turn'd into a God, that which they had eſteem'd almoſt as bad as the Devil. God's Curſe be on the Devil, and all his Adorers: But on the Holy Prophet, and his Followers, may Bleſſings ſhower down, and reſt till the Knot of the Spheres be diſſolv'd.

nours,

Paris, 14th of the 10th Moon of the Year, 1656.

LETTER VII.

To Murat, Baſſa.

KNow for Certain, that Dom Juan de Braganza, late King of Portugal is dead. He left this World on the 6th of the laſt Moon, after he had been tormented Ten Days with the Stone: His Queen has the Supreme Power in her Hands during her Son's Minority, whoſe Name is Dom Alphenſe. This young Prince was Crown'd within a few Days after his Father's Deceaſe, to prevent the Plots of the Spaniards, who ſupport a Powerful Faction in that Kingdom of Portugal, and are not without Hopes, to reduce it again to the King of Spain's Obedience. The World is always buſie, either in recovering Old loſt Intereſts, or ſeeking of New.

The

The Mareſchal de la Ferte, who was taken Priſoner by the Prince of Conde in the Battle of Valenciennes, and having a Price ſet for his Ranſom, had Liberty to go whither he would on his Parole, either to bring the ſaid Sum, or ſurrender his Perſon, by a certain Day; finding himſelf ſlighted at the French Court, is reſolv'd to perform his Promiſe at the prefix'd Time, and go over to the Prince of Conde's Intereſt, who will not fail to beſtow a very Honourable Command on a General of ſuch Merits.

In the mean Time, the Count of Harcourt plays Tricks with his Maſter, and holds private Correſpondence with the German Emperour. He is a Serviceable or a Dangerous Man, according as he is pleaſed or diſguſted, and therefore they court him on both ſides. He is now at Briſac in Alſace. I cannot admire a Man that is thus Induſtriouſly troubleſome to his Prince, without any thing of Merit or Bravery to boaſt of, ſave his former Services in Catalonia, which have been ſufficiently repay'd with Royal Condeſcenſions and Favours. And thoſe who make a Parallel between his Caſe, and that of the Mareſchal de la Ferte Senneterre, conſider not, that the laſt fell into his Enemies Hands, only by the Chance of War: Whereas, the other is a Wilful Apoſtate, if he embraces the Emperour's Propoſals, when no Neceſſity conſtrains him, and Honour flies in his Face.

From the North we are informed, That Count Comingsmark, Generaliſſimo of the Sue-

diſh

ſh Forces in Pruſſia, as he was ſailing from Wiſmar was taken Captive by the Poles, and Impriſon'd in the Caſtle of Weyſſel-munden, near Dantſick. And the Inhabitants of that City, miſs'd very narrowly of taking the Queen of Sueden herſelf. 'Tis certain, they have got a vaſt Booty from the Suedes, Conſiſting of Eighteen Cheſts full of Gold, with Coffers of the King's Jewels and other Rich Things.

Theſe, King Caſimer demands for himſelf, with a Million of Rix Dollars to be paid him by the Dantzickers; requiring alſo, that they ſhould furniſh his Army with all Sorts of Ammunition and Proviſions: Which tho' it be a heavy burden, yet thoſe loyal Citizens think Nothing too much for their King.

The Moſcovites in the 9th. Moon, Beſieg'd Riga a City belonging to the Crown of Sueden, but have newly rais'd the Siege, after they had loſt above Ten Thouſand Men before the Place.

This is all the News I can ſend thee, ſave that the French have taken Valentia, a City in Italy.

I wiſh I may hear as proſperous Intelligence as this laſt from Candia, after ſuch Immenſe Charges and Slaughter. But, Victory is in the Diſpoſal of the Angel of Time.

Paris, the 2d. of the 12th. Moon, of the Year 1656.

K LET-

LETTER VIII.

To Hebatolla Mir Argun, Superior of the Covent of Derviſhes, at Cogni in Natolia.

IT is difficult to define the particular Temper of my Soul, when I firſt receiv'd the News of thy Predeceſſor's Death, that Renown'd and Venerable Bedredin, who, as thy Diſpatch informs me, is gone to Paradiſe. I was neither in Paſſion, nor yet inſenſible, but wholy Reſign'd to the Will of Heaven. I conſider'd his Immenſe Vertues, and the Courſe of Nature: His Wonderful Age, and more Admirable Actions, a Life Equally meaſur'd by Hours, and Prodiges of Piety. For he was not in the Number of thoſe, who let whole days paſs away, without the leaſt Good Work, or without leaving any Impreſs on the Track of Time. I expreſs my ſelf according to the Vulgar Saying, [Time paſſes away;] Whereas, in my Opinion, Time ſtands ſtill, and only We paſs away, with all Things ſubject to Motion and Change. 'Tis like the Miſtake of thoſe who ſailing on the Water, think the Trees and Mountains move 'whilſt only they themſelves are driven before the Wind: Or like the Philoſophy of thoſe, who truſting to their Groſſer Sence, maintain, the Sun whirls daily round our World; tho'

according

according to Reaſon and better Philoſophy, that Globe of Light ſtands ſtill, whilſt ours turns round its Axel-Tree, and ſo deceives our Eyes. Thus, whilſt we Mortals, glid o'er the Uncertain Waves of Humane Life, and paſs by the Viſible and fix'd Land Marks of Time, Day and Night, we imagine thoſe Land Marks Move, and not we our ſelves. Whereas, Day and Night remain for Ever, ſtedfaſt and invariable in their Succeſſive Intervals, and only the Elements, and Bodies Compounded of 'em are ſubject to Change.

Minutes, Hours, Days and Years, are not properly the Meaſures of Time, but of the Motion and duration of all corruptible Beings: For Time is Infinite and beyond all Dimenſions. In a Word, 'Tis no otherwiſe diſtinguiſh'd from Eternity, than barely by a Name.

All that I have ſaid on this Subject, is comprehended in the Arabian Proverb, which ſays, To Morrow, is never. Doubtleſs, there's no Paradox or Hereſy, in ſaying, 'Tis always To Day; or that this Hour, this Minute is Eternal. And, from this Truth ſprung the Contemplation of thoſe, who place Eternity in a Point or Inſtant.

But, to return to Bedredin, that Faithful of the Faithful, may his Soul repoſe in the Mercies of God, and his Memory be bleſs'd. May Gabriel, the Friend of the Prophet, pray for him; then Michael, Iſrophiel, and the Meſſenger of Death, with all the Angels who made Oraiſons for the Divine Favourite, after his Tranſlation from this Earthly State. And, when thou, and the Religious Fraternity under thy Care, have perform'd the accuſtom'd Prayers and Expiations, for the Illuſtrious Prelate Deceas'd; there is no Queſtion but that he ſhall be in a Condition to Intercede for you and for the whole Muſſulman Empire: for he was a perfect Saint, and the Beloved of God.

O Sage and Reverend Succeſſor of that Holy Man, ſuffer me to tell thee, Thy Name Herbatolla [the Gift of God.] fills me with Glorious Preſages of thy Life and Adminiſtration in that Renowned Colledge, where the Incomparable Bedredin ſhin'd ſo many Years. Now he is gone to God, and to the Gardens of Eternal Retirement, having left his Seat on Earth to thee, repleniſh'd with the Sacred Odour of Vertue.

He was a Religious Imitator of the Prophets, and of all Holy Men in General; a devout Admirer of the Meſſias, and a Faithful Diſciple of the Sent of God. Now he is gone to ſit down with them in the Chioſcs of Eden, on the Banks of Immortal Streems, and Rivers of Wine, Milk and Honey, which glide along the Alleys of Paradiſe. This is the Recompence of Heroick Vertue, the Crown of Good Works, the Bliſs prepar'd for chaſte and purify'd Souls, who in their Tranſmigration from this Earth, carry no Stains of Vice along with 'em. For, nothing Impure can find Admittance into that World of Glittering Eſſence.

O He

O Hebatolla, what is there on this obſcure Globe, that deſerves to be compar'd with thoſe Serener Joys above; thoſe unſullied Pleaſures; That unterniſh'd Bliſs? and yet ſometimes we taſte ſtrange Felicities here on Earth. But 'tis only when the Gates and Caſements of Paradiſe are open, when a Celeſtial Wind tranſports hither the Leaves of the Trees of Eden and perfumes the Air and Skies with the Tranſcendent Odours of that Happy Region, wafting alſo Imperfect Sounds, Muſick in ſoft Fragments and Eccho's, from the Quires of the Bleſs'd. Then 'tis the Hearts of Mortals feel a ſecret and Inexpreſſible Joy ſpringing up from the Root; This Lower World (if I may ſo expreſs my ſelf) is all entrench'd with Pleaſure. This happens not every Day, but only at the Seaſons of Divine Indulgence, on the Feſtivals of ſome particular Saints, and in the Time of the Immortal Jubilee, when God exhilirates the Univerſe with Uncommon Favours, and an Infinite Largeſs.

As for the Reſt of our Enjoyments, they are Mitigations indeed of the Pains and Inſeparable Miſeries of this Mortal Life; They prevail on us to wait the Appointed Hour of Fate and not Hurry our ſelves out of the World before our Time: But they deſerve not to be plac'd in the Rank of true Felicities.

However, our Patience under this Fatigue of Life, our Indifference to Pleaſure and Pain, Poverty or Riches, Sickneſs or Health, Honour or Diſgrace, with all the other Objects of Humane Paſſion, will prove a ſingu-lar Argument of Merit, a prevaling Recommendation to the Life to come, and an effectual Passport or Paradise. For he that is thus insensibly, yet willingly wean'd from the Fulsom Joys of Earth, by the very Course of Nature and Decree of Destiny, must unavoidably ascend to a Purer Region, to a Place capable of satisfying his Aspiring Soul. For, Nature created no Appetite, to baulk it.

This is the Life so recommended by Jesus the Son of Mary whose Character thou hast in the Library of thy Convent. Here I send thee in a Box, that which by all the Nazerenes is esteem'd his true Effigies. I remember, I once saw another of the same Lineaments, in the Treasury of the Grand Signior. These Pieces are very Rare, because not copy'd by the Hands of Common Painters, but by the most Celebrated Masters in Europe. And the Original Draught, they say, was made by the Messias himself on a Handkerchief, which he clapt to his Face, and so left his lively Portraicture.

I cannot ascertain the Truth of this Tradition: but in Regard this is one of those Copies which is Closeted by the Greatest Monarchs in Christendom, I send it to thee, as a worthy Ornament of thy Cell, without either the Peril or Scandal of Idolatry.

The Pious Bedredin, was Covetous of any Memoirs of the Messias; whether Written in Hieroglyphicks, or in the more usual Characters of Speech. He wou'd have made no more Exceptiona t a Picture, than at a Poem, in Praise of of that Holy Prophet, and I Queſtion not, but thou equalleſt him in the ſame Indifference.

I cou'd not ſo eaſily procure the true Picture of John, Surnam'd the Waſher; but here I will give thee a ſhort Hiſtory of his Life. This was a Famous Prophet, who liv'd in the Days of the Meſſias, and was of the Race of the Prieſts. His Habitation was altogether in the Deſert; for, he was an Eremite, and liv'd in a Cave on one of the Mountains of Judæa. Some of the Jews took him for Elias others for the Meſſias, and a Third Sort ſaid he was Mahomet, whoſe coming was foretold in the Book of their Law, and in the Writings of their Prophets.

But John deny'd that he was any of theſe calling himſelf in Modeſty, A Voice or Eccho. His Life was very Abſtemious. For, he fed only on the Tops of plants, and Wild Honey, drinking nothing but Water of the Fountain, which ran by the Side of his Cave. And his Body was only cover'd with a Veſt of Camels Hair, uſing a Leathern Thong for a Girdle.

To that Solitary Reſidence of his, there was great Reſort of People from Jeruſalem, and the Cities round about. For the Fame of his Sanctity had ſpread through all Paleſtine and Syria.

He Waſh'd his Diſciples with his own Hands in the Waters of Jordan, from whence he was call'd the Baptiſt, or Waſher. He daily preach'd Repentance and Good Works to the Incredulous Jews; and openly declar'd, That Jesus the Son of Mary, was the Messia. That Holy Prophet, it seems, was one of John's Disciples, and had been Wash'd by him in the River Jordan.

In fine, after many Years of Heroick Vertue and Piety, John had his Head cut off by the Order of Herod the Governour of Judea, because he had reprov'd the Tyrant, for marrying his Brothers Wife.

Behold these Memoirs are the best presents, the Poor exil'd Mahmut can send thee, when he Congratulates thy Accession to that Holy Chair. Yet, such as these, were more welcom to thy Predecessor, than Gifts of Silver, Gold or precious Stones: For, he was a diligent Collector of Choice Antiquities, and select Fragments of History. He was also a Liberal Patron and encourager of Philosophy and all Sorts of Learning. Follow thou his Example, and the True Faithful will be Eternally oblig'd to thee. Thou hast a fair Opportunity, there being, as I'm inform'd, the best Library in thy Convent, of any throughout the Mussulman Empire. And the Dervishes under thy Government, are Men addicted to the Study of the Sciences. 'Tis Pity such Inclinations shou'd want encouragement whilst the Infidels are every where busie in Founding New Academies, and Augmenting the Old. There is one lately erected in the Dukedom of Cleve by the Elector of Brandenburg, where the Oriental Languages and Sciences are profess'd. If

If the Nazarenes are thus Curious to pry into our Learning, why ſhould we be remiſs in attaining the Knowledge of their Languages and Hiſtories, ſince thereby we ſhall be in a Condition to know their Greateſt Secrets?

Sage Hebatolla, let not the Infidels have any longer Occaſion to term us Barbarous and Ignorant. But remember, that in promoting Literature, thou wilt perform a meritorious Service to the Grand Signior.

Paris, 17th. of the 1ſt.. Moon.
of the Year 1657.

LETTER IX.

To Selim Al' Moſel, Venerable Imaum of the Moſch of Sancta Sophia.

PRaiſe be to God, ſole Lord of the Zenith and the Nadir poſſeſſor of Infinite Regions, who hides the Firſt Meridian in the Palm of his Hand! The Names of Peru, and Mexico, are not now Foreign in the Ottoman Empire, eſpecially to Travellers, and Men of Science.

When our Fathers firſt heard of America, they had no other Way to expreſs ſo Unknown a Part of the World, than by calling it the Land of the Golden Mines, becauſe o the Abundance of that Metal, which was brought from thence by the Spaniards, since their Conquests in those Parts. But now we are no Strangers to the Geography of that Remote Continent. Commerce and Traffick, have Render'd all the Known Nations of the Earth familiar one with another. And I remember, when I was at Constantinople, the Names of Peru, Mexico, Florida, &c. were as Common in the Copha-Hans, as the Names of Indostan, Turquistan, Gurgistan, or any other Province of Asia. So that a Man wou'd have been laugh'd at, who in speaking of America, shou'd have us'd any Circumlocutions, as to call it the Empire, of the Golden Mines, the World beyond the Great Sea, or the like.

Yet we must confess, our Knowledge in this Kind is owing to the Franks who sail into those far distant Regions, and at their Return communicate their Intelligence and Observations to us; for else we had been yet altogether Strangers to the History of this New World.

It was first discover'd by Christopher Columbus, a Genouese, in the Year 1492. of the Christians Hegira. This Man had a happy Genius in Contemplating the Motion of the Sun, and the Frame of the Universe. He was no Stranger to the Extent of our Continent, and the Situation of all its Parts. He had been often at Sea, and seen divers Regions; And particularly when he was in Portugal, the most Westerly Part of Europe, he took took great Delight to walk on the Shore in the Evenings, and obſerve the Setting of the Sun. This Cuſtom of his produc'd various Thoughts in his Breaſt. But, what was of moſt Import, his Reaſon ſuggeſted to him, That it cou'd not conſiſt with the Order of Nature, that the Sun, after he left our World, ſerv'd only to give Light to the Fiſhes, or glid the Waves of the Weſtern Ocean. Therefore on good Grounds he concluded, There muſt be ſome Unknown Land, beyond thoſe mighty Tracts at Sea, which waſh'd the Weſtern Shores of Europe and Africk.

This Thought made him uneaſie, and put him upon a Reſolution of attempting a Diſcovery. He made Propoſals to the Republick of Genoua, but was rejected. Then he addreſs'd himſelf to Henry VII. at the Engliſh Court; Where not finding Encouragement, he went to the King of Spain; who approving his Deſign, furniſh'd him with Two Ships. He ſail'd on the Ocean for the Space of Two Moons, without ſeing any Land, which made his Mariners mutiny, their Proviſions falling ſhort. They threatn'd to throw him over-board, if he would not return. But he, with mild Words and ſtrong Reaſons, appeas'd their Fury; promiſing to ſail back again, if they ſaw not Land within Three Days. On the Third Day, the Boy on the Main Top-Maſt ſaw a Fire, and within a few Hours afterwards they came within View of Land.

When

When he had made his Observations, and done what was requisite in his Circumstances, he return'd to give the King of Spain an Account of his Expedition.

After his Death, Americus Vesputius was sent to Conquer these Unknown Regions; from whom, that whole Continent is call'd America; But methinks, not without some Ingratitude to the First Discoverer.

It wou'd be endless to recount all the particular Adventures of the Spaniards in these Parts, with their Cruelties and Massacres: Suffice it to say, to the Eternal Infamy of that Nation, that according to their own Writers, they Butcher'd in Cold Blood above Twenty Millions of the Natives, in the Space of Twenty Years: and all this for the Lucre of their Gold; tho' under the pretence of propagating the Christian Religion.

I will not list my self in the Number of those who pretend to be God's Privy Counsellors, neither will I presume to descant on Things out of my Reach. But the Spaniard have lately felt a terrible Blow in Peru. Which, if it be not a Mark of the Wrath of Heaven, is at least a Sign, that the Earth is weary of them, especially in those Parts where they have stain'd it with so much Innocent Blood.

The City Lima, not many Moons ago was all swallow'd up by an Earthquake; and Calao, another City not far from it, was consum'd by a Shower of Fire out of the Clouds. Eleven Thousand Spaniards lost their Lives in in this Calamity; and the Earth devour'd a Hundred Milions of Refin'd Silver, which the Lucre of the Spaniards had forc'd out of its Bowels. All the Mountains of Potosi, from whence they dug their choiceſt Metal, were level'd with the Plain, and no more hopes of Gold was left to their Inſatiable Avarice.

I leave the Judgment of theſe Events to thee, who art of the Holy Line, full of Reſplendent Thoughts, Prophetick Iſcharif, Conſecrated Emir, Glory of the Houſe of Mahomet. Yet give me leave to tell thee, that this Calamity of the Spaniards, in Part reſembles the Fate of Sodom and Gomorrah, and the reſt of the Nine Cities of the Lake. The Infidels ſay, there were but Five. Let them alone in their Errors; 'tis certain the Muſſulmans have the only True Hiſtory of Former Times. Doubtleſs, God is ſevere in his Chaſtiſements, when he is Incens'd againſt a Nation. Witneſs the People of Aad and Themod, with the Men of the Valley of Smoke, and the City whoſe Inhabitatants were in one Hour, all turn'd into Statues of Stone, and are to be ſeen at this Day, as a ſtanding Monument of Heavens Diſpleaſure. Yet no Nation is ruin'd till it ruin it ſelf, as God ſpeaks in the Alcoran.

O Emir, in whoſe Veins runs the moſt purify'd Blood in the World, pray for Mahmut, that he may never turn Apoſtate from God and his Prophet nor do any Thing which may hurry him to an untimely Fate.

Thing

Paris 17th. of the 1st Moon, of the Year 1653.

LETTER X.

To Mustapha, Bassa.

THis following Summer, if all Reports be true, is like to afford some Campagnes of Blood. The General Discourse here is, that the Grand Signior will Speedily have an Army of Three Hundred Thousand Men in the Field: Part to act in Dalmatia and Candy against the Venetians; the Rest to be employ'd against the Persians, the more inveterate Enemies of the Ottoman Empire.

That sawcy Embassador, Ismael Bir Coli Can, deserv'd the Punishment was inflicted on him for his Impertinent Huff, and drawing his Sabre in Presence of the Greatest Monarch of the World. And let it be an Eternal Precedent to the Envoys of Foreign Princes, that they may learn a Lesson of Modesty, when they address to the Lord of their Lords, and not by Presumption Incense the King of the Earth.

But

But 'tis apparent, this Embaſſador took Advantage of our Troubles: He ſwell'd with a vain and falſe Idea of the Perſian Puiſſance. Beſides, they ſay, his Maſter has enter'd into a Solemn League with the Czar of Moſcovy, againſt the Shining Empire. And 'tis certainly known here, that Two Embaſſadors are arrived at Venice from that Potent Emperour of the North; and others are expected from Perſia, to Negotiate a Tripartite League between thoſe Crowns and that Republick againſt the Victorious Oſmans. Hence I ſuppoſe it was, that the Rude Heretick took the Boldneſs to commit an Action, which all the Eaſt puniſhes with Death. Neither is it any Thing to the Purpoſe, what the Chriſtians of theſe Parts ſay, That the Perſons of Embaſſadors are Sacred: For, much more ſo are the Perſons of Sovereigns. And, ſo long as an Envoy obeys the Law of Nations, in only delivering his Meſſage with Reſpect and Civility, that Law will protect him from all Injuries. But, if he muſt needs leap over his own Fence, and inſtead of appearing like an Embaſſador, he will act the part of an Aſſaſſin, a Furioſo, a Contemner of Majeſty, he can expect no better Treatment, than what is due to his Audacious Inſolence: He throws off with Scorn the Protection that his Character claims, and in a mad Bravado courts the Revenge of the State.

This Iſhmael has all along been counted a bold Fool in the Court of Perſia. He has committed a Thouſand Wild Pranks at Iſpahan, han, more becoming a Jester, than a Wise Minister of State. Yet his Master still wink'd at his Extravagances, for his Fathers Sake, who did many notable Services to that Crown; Among which, his recovering Candahar from the Mogul, was none of the least: it being the onely Town, which commands the Frontiers of Persia and the Indies.

For this and other Merits, Sha Sephi preferr'd both him and his Son to the most Considerable Governments and Offices in the Empire: Wherein the Old Man acquitted himself fairly to the last. But this Young Buffoon grew unwieldly with too Much Honour, affronted the Grandees, and play'd upon the King himself, for wich he had once like to have been cast to the Dogs. But, at the Intercession of some of his few Friends that Punishment was remitted and chang'd into Exile; whilst his Enemies made Use of his Absence to ruine him.

They were some of the Greatest Lords of the Court, who bore him a Grudge, and they had hourly the Kings Ear. Which Advantage they made Use of to insinuate such an Ill Character of Ishmael, that he knew no better Way to be handsomly rid of him, than by sending him on this desperate Embassy to the Mysterious Port: Chusing rather that he should fall by the Grand Signior's Command, than by his own, who had reap'd so much Benefit from the Services of his Father,

By

By this thou may'ſt diſcern, that the King of Perſia is earneſtly reſolv'd upon War, without regarding how his Herald that proclaim'd it, is received: (For that Embaſſador deſerves no other Title who comes not with the accuſtom'd Preſents and Supplications; but with an Addreſs of a Harſher Style, denouncing Enmity at his very Firſt Approach to the Feet of the Invincible Sultan Mahomet.)

After all it rejoyces me to hear, that thou, and the other Baſſa's of the Empire, are ſo ready to aſſiſt our Great Maſter. For I am aſſur'd that from your Perſonal and Voluntary Contributions, he has received a Supply of Thirty Millions of Aſpers, beſides the Conſtant Revenues, Cuſtoms, Tributes, and Subſidies of the Empire. This is nois'd all over Chriſtendom: Yet the Venetians ſeem not much to dread the Conſequences of theſe Vaſt Preparations; Judging that they will be employ'd elſewhere, than againſt any Province of their Dominions except in Dalmatia, where theſe Infidels truſt to the Strength of their Forts, and the Inacceſſible Heights of Rocks.

But He that laid the Foundations of the Earth, and cauſes it to tremble when he pleaſes; the ſame God form'd the Lofty Mountains, and can level them with the Plains ſerve the Followers of his Prophet: Even as the Stones came Voluntarily to Salute the Divine Meſſenger himſelf: The Trees rowz'd themſelves, as out of a deep Sleep; and the Earth, yielding on all Sides to the Forcible Motion of the Inspired Roots they walk'd out of their Places, and compos'd an Umbrella over the Head of Mahomet, when he was ready to faint with the Violent Heat of the Sun.

Earth

Thus shall the Elements conspire to aid the True Believers: And when they fight for the Alcoran against Infidels, God shall endue the Inanimate Beings with Faith and Devotion.

Paris, 7th. of the 2d Moon,
of the Year 1657.

LETTER XI.

To Mehemet, an Exil'd Enuuch, in Egypt.

PRepare thy self with a Constancy of Spirit becoming a Mussulman, when thou shalt understand, that the best Friend thou hast in the World is gone to Paradise, May God grant him the repose of a True Believer, in Apartment of Singular Delight. For 'tis the Brave Solyman I speak of, who not only deserves thy most Grateful Vows for saving thy Life, but has done a Thousand Meritorious Actions besides, which now crown him with Chaplets of Immortality.

I will

I wish I cou'd have been the Relater of better News to my baniſh'd Friend. But perhaps thou haſt heard of his Death already, by ſome Veſſels from Conſtantinople, and ſo 'twill be Needleſs to ſay any Thing as to his Untimely Fate, or the Tragedies of the Seraglio and Imperial City.

It ſeems very ſtrange to me, and a Thing Unaccountable, that there can be no Means found out to prevent theſe dangerous Inſurrections of the Soldiers; and that the moſt Formidable Empire on Earth, ſhould be thus frequently ſhock'd by her own Subjects! Mehemet, the Things of this Preſent World are a perfect Riddle. and our Life it ſelf is but the Shadow of a Dream. Thou haſt Experienc'd the Inconſtancy of Fortune, and that there is Nothing on Earth deſerves a Wiſe Man's Confidence. Therefore if I may adviſe thee, it ſhall be, to wean thy ſelf from the Trivial Affairs of Mortals. Let not the Natural Fondneſſe which thou may'ſt poſſibly have for thy former Courtly Life in the Seraglio, return to diſquiet thy Soul. A Man may be Happy any where, that knows how to be Contented. Nature is ſerv'd with a Little: And we ought to eſteem our Irregular Appetites as Foreigners. If our Fortune be not extended to the larger Meaſure of our Wiſhes, 'tis eaſy to contract and adequate our Minds to our Fortune.

Thou may'ſt carve to thy ſelf various Sorts of Felicities in Egypt, and render Caire as Pleaſant to thee now, as Conſtantinople was formerly.

formerly. Virtue makes all Places Delightful. If thou art for an Active Life, there's Buſineſs enough in that Populous City; and Opportunities are never wanting to a Man that is ready to lay hold of them. Beſides, 'tis the Popular Character of Egypt, that whoſever dwells in it, finds an Employment ſuitable to his Inclination. But if thou art Melancholly and Contemplative, in my Opinion thou cou'dſt not have choſen a Country more agreeable to ſuch a Temper.

Were I in thy Station, I ſhou'd make frequent Viſits to the Pyramids, and never be weary of ſearching out the Antiquity of thoſe Admirable Structures. There is hardly any Thing made by Humane Art, which has put me upon more Important Studies and Diſquiſitions, than the Original of theſe Stupendous Fabricks. They far ſurpaſs in Grandeur and Magnificence the moſt Renown'd Buildings of the Greek and Roman Empires, even in the Zenith of their moſt Flouriſhing State. And I wou'd fain learn, when they were Firſt Erected, by Whom, and for What Ends? For I cannot believe what Joſephus the Jewiſh Hiſtorian reports of them, That they were built in the Time of Moſes their Lawgiver, and that all thoſe of the Hebrew Nation, amounting to ſome Hundreds of Thouſands, were employ'd as Slaves in the Work, by the King then Reigning in Egypt.

I have perus'd Herodotus the Grecian, Diodorus the Sicilian, with Strabo, Pliny and other

other Writers, who have all taken great Pains to ſearch into the Antiquity of the Pyramids: Yet after all their Travel in Egypt, and their Converſe with the Prieſts of that Country, they ſeem to have receiv'd but ſmall Light in this Affair; leaving Things in Uncertainty, and not agreeing in their Accounts. One will have 'em to be only deſign'd for Sepulchers of the Kings: Another ſays, they were built by Joſeph the Hebrew, the Vizir of Egypt, and that they were the Granaries were he laid up Seven Years Proviſion of Corn, againſt the Famine, which in his Days afflicted the Earth. Thus they differ in their Sentiments. And our Countryman Ibn Abd' Alhokm declares, That when he was in Egypt, he could not draw from any of the Prieſts, the leaſt Certainty as to the Age of theſe Pyramids, or their Founders. Which make him conclude, That ſince there was no Memory or Footſteps of their Original left among Men, it is Probable they were built before the Flood.

This agrees exactly with what others of our Arabian Writers have deliver'd concerning King Saurid, who Reign'd in Egypt Three Hundred Years before the Deluge. They relate ſtrange Things of this Prince; and among the Reſt, That he dreamt, The Fixed Stars came down from Heaven to the Earth, overturning all Things with the Violence of their Precipitate Fall. Being much troubl'd at this Viſion, he ſent for the Prieſts and Sages; who when they were aſſembl'd together in the Kings

Palace,

Palace, Aclimon their Cater, or Prince of the Aſtrologers, told the King, That a Year before, he had ſeen a Viſion which made a deep Impreſſion on his Mind. For, the Celeſtial Orbs appeared to deſcend ſo low as to touch the Earth, ſo that the Stars were mingl'd among Men. Then he Lift up his Hands above his Head in his Dream, to keep the Heaven from quite oppreſſing Mortals with its Weight. Whilſt I were in this poſture, ſaid he, methought I addreſs'd my Self to the Sun, beſeeching the Reſplendent God, to retire with all his Glittering Train of Lights to their Ancient Stations on High. Whereupon, the Sun made Anſwer, When I ſhall have accompliſh'd Three Hundred Circuits, the Heavens will return to their Proper Places.

When Aclimon had related this Viſion, the King, commanded the Aſtrologers to erect a Scheme of the preſent Configurations Above, and to tell them what they Preſag'd. They did ſo, and all agree'd, That a Deluge ſhou'd Firſt overflow the Whole Earth, and that Afterwards it ſhould be totally deſtroy'd by Fire.

Upon the hearing of this, they ſay King Saurid commanded the Pyramids to be built, carrying all his Riches into them, with the Tables of the Miſterious Sciences, and Laws, and Whatſoever was eſteem'd Precious, and Worthy to be preſerv'd from the General Deſtruction. And the Annals of Egypt ſay, that he commanded theſe Words to be Engraven on them :

I

I Saurid, laid the Foundation of the Pyramids, and finish'd them in Six Years: Yet I Challenge any Future King, to demolish them in Six Hundred Years; Tho' it be much easier to Ruine, than to Build. I cover'd 'em with Silks; let any Man after me, cover 'em with Mats, if he can.

In thus asserting Saurid to be the Founder of the Pyramids, it ought to be understood only of some of the Greatest; and that other Succeeding Princes (perhaps after the Flood) four'd on with Emulation and Desire of Glory, built the Rest; Which is the only Way to reconcile our Arabian Writers to Herodotus, Diodorus and other Historians of the West, who assign Cheops or Chemmis, with Chephren, Chabryis, and Mycerinus the Son of Chemmis, as Founders of some Particular Pyramids. Whilst Strabo and Pliny, ascribe the Building of one to Rhodope, a Famous Strumpet, or at least to some of her Paramours.

Doubtless, there is great Obscurity and Confusion in the Records of the Ancients about the exact Time when these Illustrious Monuments were built, which yet is an impregnable Argument of their Antiquity; since, when when One Author aſſerts this or that King to have built a Pyramid, Another demonſtrates the Contrary, by proving that that Pyramid was in being, long before the Days of the ſuppos'd Founder. Neither can I find any Concurrence of Authorities, ſo Rational and exactly agreeing, as that of the Arabians; who all Unanimouſly deliver as a certain Truth, that theſe Unparallell'd Structures, were built long before the Flood. All which is confirm'd by the Egyptian Annals themſelves, pen'd by thoſe of the Coptite Race, who deſcended from Coptim, the Son of Maſar, the Son of Banſer, the Son of Cham, the Son of Noah; With whom and his Family, Philemon the Good Prieſt made an Alliance by Marriage, and in their Cuſtody were the Records and Traditions of the Old World.

But if it be granted, Dear Eunuch, that thoſe Hiſtories are true, which relate the Tranſactions of the Kings of Egypt before the Flood; what Reaſon have we to call in Queſtion the Fragments of Manethos, a Prieſt of Egypt; or the Genealogy and Succeſſion of Egyptian Monarchs delivered by Herodotus; or the Chronological Regiſters of Egypt unfolded by Diodorus, which carry up the Reign of their Kings to above a Thouſand Years beyond any other the moſt Early Epocha of the Creation, except that of the Aſſyrians, or the Interminable Aſcent of paſt Ages in the Records of the Chineſe and Indians.

I know not what to call it, whether the Cowardiſe of the Intellect, which dare not venture venture to launch into ſo vaſt a Speculation; or its Sloth, which will not take the Pains to unfold and ſtretch its drowzy Faculties on the moſt Natural Idea in the World. 'Tis true indeed, we cannot without ſome Fatigue, contemplate ſtedfaſtly the Eternal Exiſtence and duration of Things. 'Tis an Immortal Thought, that can tranſport the Soul back through ſuch an Infinity of Ages. Yet the Pleaſure is Agreeable to the Undertaking: Becauſe Truth, ſerene as the Mornings in Egypt, enlightens the Proſpect, and tempts the Mind, if twere poſſible, to look even beyond Eternity it ſelf: Whereas, he that only confines his View to the narrow Horizon of Particular Hiſtories, is like a Man in a Wilderneſs, or a low and ſhady Vale, where his Eye is curb'd with the Interpoſition of Thickets, Uneven Ground, and Envious Encloſures. For, ſuch are the Dark Controverſies, Inextricable Difficulties, and Affected Umbrages of moſt Writers, who never durſt peep o'er the Mountains of receiv'd Opinion; or, if they did, they fearfully or maliciouſly hid their Diſcoveries from the Reſt of Mortals: I tell thee, as God is Eternal, there cannot be aſſign'd an Inſtant of Time, wherein the World did not Exiſt. For, the Firſt Matter flows as Naturally from his Eſſence, as Light from the Sun.

If thou Adoreſt any other God but this, thou wilt befound in the Number of Idolaters and Infidels, who pay Divine Honors to certain Mighty Angels, Architects, as they believe, of the Univerſe.

They behold Houſes, Caſtles and Great Cities built by Mortals, and at a certain Period ruin'd by Fire, Water, Earthquakes, or other Accidents; Or deſtroy'd by the Effects of War: from hence they form a Notion, of the Worlds Original and Cataſtrophe. They conſider the Animals, Plants and Minerals, That every Individual periſhes in Time, and that even in the Heavens there are ſtrong Symptoms of Corruption and Alteration. Hence they collect Arguments to prove the weakneſs and decay of Univerſal Nature, which they vainly compare to the Life of a Man, a Beaſt, or a Tree. And as theſe have their appointed Seaſons of Birth, Growth, Maturity, Decay and Death; ſo is it with the Univerſe.

But all this is Sophiſtry; or, to ſpeak more favourably, we ought to charge it to the Account of ſhort Meditation. For, thô the Individuals of all Kinds are chang'd, ceaſe and diſappear at their appointed Periods; Yet the Species or Kinds themſelves remain for ever before our Eyes. As faſt as One Man dies, Another is born; and ſo 'tis with the Brutes: And the Seaſons of the Year in their proper Courſe, renew all the Vegetables. We find the Elements, the Sun, Moon, Stars and Earth remain unchangeable. And why then ſhou'd we think, they were not always ſo, and will not continue ſo for ever? Or, if this be too bold a Stretch, let us conceive them at leaſt much more Ancient and Durable, than they are generally thought to be. And if theſe Greater Bodies ſhall undergoe a Change in their their Outward Forms; we may yet believe their Subſtances will remain for ever.

But, whether Corporeal Beings are thus laſting or no, we have Something in us that can never periſh. Our Souls are Immortal, and need not the Embalming of Egypt to preſerve 'em from Corruption.

Therefore, Dear Mehemet, ſince we are Deſtin'd to live for ever in one State or other, let us not fear Death which is but a Minutes Slumber, a ſhort Trance, out of which we ſhalll immediately awake, to increaſe our Knowledge and Experience of thoſe Myſteries and Secrets in Nature, which at Preſent are hid from us. In a Word, let us live like Philoſophers, and then we may hope to die with the ſame Equanimity of Spirit as he did, who in his laſt Agonies being ask'd by his Friend, Where was all his Philoſophy now? Anſwer'd, I am juſt entring on a new Diſcovery concerning the Nature of Salt. And with that Word he Expir'd.

Paris, 7th. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1657.

LETTER XII.

To the most Venerable Mufti.

IF the Publick Seditions ſhou'd always continue, or be as frequently renew'd as they have lately been at Conſtantinople: and if their Effects ſhall be Equally Fatal to the Grandees as has been this laſt Horrid Mutiny of the Soldiers; To Congratulate any Man's Riſe to an Eminent Dignity, will be but to flatter him, and Addreſſes of this Nature muſt be eſteem'd no better than Mock-Compliments, Civil Inſults, and faſhionable Sarcaſms: Since at this Rate, Great Honours ought to be look'd on no otherwiſe, but as direct Advances and nearer Approaches to Infamy, and Death; when a Man is exalted from an obſcure Faſtneſs, and Humble Security, to the Glorious Hazard of a Precipitate Fall.

'Tis therefore, when I come to kiſs the Duſt of thy Feet, among the Crowd of True Believers, and to welcome thee to the moſt Sacred and Sublime Vicarſhip on Earth; I draw near with an Indifference, ſuitable to a Muſſulman, wiſhing thee not more Joy than Safety in that Myſterious Station, but ſuch a Temperament of both, as is due to thy Sanctity and Incorrupt Actions. In a Word, I wiſh thee a perpetual Immunity from thy Predeceſſor's Temptations, and from his crimes; and then thou need'ſt not fear his Misfortune and Diſgrace.

Prede-

Let not what I have ſaid, paſs for an Argument of Diſreſpect and Undutifulneſs to the Heir of Prophetick and Apoſtolick Revelations, the Great Patriarch of the Faithful. I reverence both thy Office and Perſon: Yet am Commanded to avoid Flattery and Partial Addreſſes, when I write to the greateſt Sages in the Empire. And had not this Injunction been laid on me, my own Natural Temper wou'd prompt me to ſhun that Vice, which renders a Man ſo much leſs than himſelf. by how much he exalts another above his due.

I have often propos'd to thy Predeceſſor, the Mighty Benefit that wou'd redound to the whole Ottoman Empire, if Learning were more Encourag'd and the Hiſtories of Foreign Nations were Tranſlated into the Familiar Language of the Muſſulmans.

It is that thoſe who are deſtin'd to ſubdue All Things, and have already ſpread their Glorious Conqueſt through the greatſt part of the Earth, ſhou'd be acquainted with the Tranſactions of Former Times, the Wars of Illuſtrious and Brave Hero's, the Riſe and Fall of Ancient Kingdoms, and in General, the moſt noted Revolutions in the World. From ſuch Records, our Generals and Military Men may draw Examples of Fortitude and Patience, Conduct and Prudence in all the Fatigues and Difficulties of War, Our States- men may improve their Knowledge in all the Maxims of Policy and Wiſdom requiſite in Time of Peace. In fine, Men of all Conditons may learn the Precepts of Morality and Virtue.

Methinks 'tis pity, that we who poſſeſs the Territories of the Ancient Grecians, the Kingdoms of Corinth, and the Argives; the Common-wealth of Athens, and Lacedæmon; the Empire of Macedon, and the State of the Jews; ſhould be ignorant of the Laws by which theſe divers Countries were of Old Govern'd, and the Characters, Lives and Actions of their Firſt Law-givers, and Succeeding Governors.

But if thou ſhalt determine, that the Knowledge of theſe Remote Affairs is Superfluous and Unneceſſary for True Believers; let 'em at leaſt not be Ignorant in their Own Hiſtory, and the Original of their Progenitors.

'Tis true, we Arabians have all along taken Care of Our Genealogies, every Family and Tribe being diligent to preſerve the Memory of their Anceſtors; and all concur with an Unanimous Zeal to Regiſter the Holy Lineage of Mahomet, the Meſſenger of God. So that we can from his Father Abdalla, run up in a direct Paternal Line to Caydar, the Second Son of Iſmael (on whom be the Benedictions of God.) We are not Ignorant how this Caydar (from whom the Noble Coreiſ's derive their Pedigree) Firſt ſetled at Mecca, in pure Devotion to the Square Temple, which was built by Angels: when we might as well have choſen the more Fertile Plains of Media, Perſia, Perſia and Aſſyria, as did his Brethren Doama, Naphis, and Redma. But he foreſaw by his skill in Aſtrology, that the Inhabitants of thoſe Regions would be Idolaters. And ſo it came to paſs: For, they were in the Number of of thoſe who ador'd the Fire. For the ſame Reaſon he choſe not for his Seat, Armenia, though that Country be Renowned for the Reſting of Noah's Ark on Mount Geudis, and the Famous City Themanine, or the Work of Eighty, being the Firſt City built after the Deluge, by the Eighty who eſcap'd in the Ark. But Caydar knew that the People of that Province ſhou'd worſhip the Sun: And it was verify'd in the Poſterity of his Brethren, Nabſam and Maſna. Therefore he choſe Mecca, though a Barren Country, becauſe he knew it was the Seat predeſtin'd to the Elect Lineage, the Generation of Juſt Men and Prophets from whom was to ſpring the Light of the World, Mahomet, who in Paradiſe is called Al Batraſim, and in Heaven, Achmet.

Caydar was the Onely Son of Iſmael, who took Part with his Father, and follow'd his Example. Worſhipping One God, Creator of the Worlds, as he had learn'd by Tradition from Abrahim the Beloved of the Eternal: Whereas Nabayeth, Abdael, Thema, and the Reſt of the Twelve, either Ador'd the Sun, Moon and Stars, or the Elements; except Jackour, who paid Divine Honours to the Tree Betlemer; and Hadal and Maſſa, who ſacrific'd Beaſts to the Idols Bohinum and Alleze.

And as our Hiſtorians have been thus particularly exact in Recording the Affairs of the Twelve Sons of Iſmael; ſo have they ſhew'd themſelves no leſs preciſe, in relating the Tranſactions of the Twelve Tribes which deſcended from them, even down to the Preſent Age.

I do not inſiſt on this, to teach thee ſomething whereof thou art Ignorant: but to put thee in Mind of the Benefit and Advantage, beſides the vaſt Delight which accrues to a Nation by thus preſerving the Memoirs of their Anceſtors. In which, my Countrymen have exceeded the Fidelity and Care of all other People.

Had it not been for the Induſtry of Arabian Writers, the Hiſtory of the whole Saracen Empire, the Succeſſion of the Caliphs, with their Wars and Conqueſts, would have been either quite loſt to this Age, or at leaſt much deprav'd and falſify'd by the Malice of Chriſtian and Perſian Authors, both Equally Enemies to the Truth. By which it is Evident, that every Nation ought to Regiſter their own Tranſactions.

What therefore I chiefly aim at, is, That the Glorious Oſmans, who have by their Valour enter'd into the Poſſeſſions and Territories of many Ancient Nations, might alſo be acquainted with the Hiſtories of thoſe People whoſe Lands they Enjoy: But, above all, I wiſh, that after they have found a way to ſo much Wealth and Honour, they would not loſe themſelves, and their own Original.

I ſpeak

I ſpeak of the Turks properly ſo call'd; the Deſcendants of the Scythians, who by ſome were eſteem'd the moſt Ancient Nation on Earth; a People form'd by Nature for the Empire of the World; were never Conquer'd themſelves, yet ſpread their Victories over all Aſia. They routed Zopyrio, a General, of Alexander the Great; and drove back a huffing King of Egypt, with Shame and Loſs to his own Country. In fine, they were a People Naturally Juſt, Temperate, Hardy and Endu'd with all the Excellent Qualities, which the Philoſophy of the Greeks and Romans cou'd never inſpire into their Subjects, though they aim'd at it.

Theſe were the People, O Oracle of Believers, from whom the preſent Turks deſcend. And is it not a Shame, that they can give no other Account of their Anceſtors, but what they borrow from the Chriſtians, who in the mean time reproach the Muſſulmans with Ignorance and Barbariſm?

'Tis for this Reaſon I renew the ſame Requeſt to thee, which I often made to thy Predeceſſor, that Learning may be encourag'd. Let all the Ancient Records and Hiſtories of the Greeks and Romans be ſought out and Tranſlated, by Men skilful in Languages, into the Familiar Speech of the Ottomans. Some, I know, are already common among the Grandees, as Herodotus, Plutarch, and others; but, let not any Credible Writer be wanting.

In doing this, thou wilt put a check to the Scoffs of Infidels, augment the Honour and Intereſt of the Muſſulmans, and leave an Immortal Name behind thee on Earth: Which will make thy Joys in Paradiſe more ſweet to an Infinity of Ages.

Paris, 19th. of the 3d. Moon, of the Year 1657.

LETTER XIII.

To the Caimacham.

ALL Europe, except the French and Suedes hangs down the Head for the Death of the German Emperour. He went to the Immortals, on the 2d. Day of this Moon, after a long Fit of Sickneſs, and Forty Nine Years Life on Earth.

Nathan Ben Saddi, the Agent of the Port at Vienna, informs me, That on the ſame Day whereon the Emperour died, the Imperial Palace took Fire on a ſudden, and with ſuch Impetuoſity, that a great Part of it was preſently conſum'd; and the King of Hungary and Bohemia, the Emperour's Son, narrowly eſcap'd with his Life. This is eſteem'd a bad Omen to the Empire. And without being Superſtitious, I can aſſure thee, That Germany is in a very bad condition at this Juncture.

Juncture. The Electors are ſo divided on the Score of Religion, and their Secular Intereſts and Allyances, That in all Probability, they will not with Eaſe decide the Succeſſion.

The Duke of Brandenburgh having United himſelf to the Suedes, will not conſent to the Inſtalling Leopoldus Ignatius Joſephus, the Emperor's Son, becauſe that Prince ſupports the Cauſe of the Poles and Danes. The Palatine of Heydleberg and Duke of Bavaria, are at odds about their Private Pretenſions. The Duke of Saxony wou'd fain be Emperor himſelf, or have one at leaſt of the Lutheran Religion: And the Reſt are ſo incens'd againſt the Houſe of Auſtria, that it is thought, none but the Eccleſiaſtick Princes will vote for the King of Hungary and Bohemia. So that there being no King of the Romans to claim the Succeſſion by the Laws of the Empire, the Throne is like to be Vacant yet a while.

Cardinal Mazarini, who watches all Opportunities to Aggrandize his Maſter, has diſpatch'd away ſeveral Couriers into Germany, to negotiate privately with the Electors, and concert thoſe Meaſures, which will be moſt for the Intereſt of France. And I tell thee, this Miniſter has no ſmall Influence on the Elector of Colen, and Prince Palatine of the Rhine. Beſides, thou wilt ſay, he goes the Right Way to work, when thou ſhalt know that he makes Uſe of the French Gold to compaſs his Deſigns.

No-

No sooner did the News of the Emperour's Death arrive at this Court, but it was obſerv'd the Cardinal took up a Hundred Thouſand Piſtoles, of the Publick Banquiers in this City. And every Body gueſs'd how 'twou'd be diſpos'd.

The Portugueze Ambaſſador at this Court, has caus'd Extraordinary Fire-works to be play'd on the River Seyne before the Palace of the King, in Honour of his Maſter's Coronation, the young King of Portugal. But the Spaniards are preparing more deſtructive Fire-works on the Frontiers of that Kingdom, being ready to enter it with an Army of Sixteen thouſand Men to recover the Portugueze Crown.

In ſending thee theſe Intelligences, Sage Miniſter, I am not concern'd for the Infidels. Who dies or who lives, who riſes or who falls is all one to Mahmut, provided the Grand Signior's Health, Life and Happineſs be augmented. And this I ſpeak as an Arabian and True Believer.

Paris, the 30th. of the 4th. Moon,
of the Year 1657.

LETTER

LETTER XIV.

To Raba Mahomet, General of the Ottoman Forces, at his Camp near Adrianople.

THE Sacred Empire of True Believers, is beſet at this Time with Infidels, Rebels, and Hereticks. Here are many Rumours ſpread abroad concerning the Perſians, and the Intereſt they have in the Baſſa and Citizens of Babylon. They talk alſo, that ſome Male-contents deſign Things which ought not to be nam'd.

God has given me two Ears, and I hear theſe Diſcourſes with both, but I entertain them with one Unchangeable Judgment, That they are only the Whiſpers of Fame, which has a Thouſand Double Tongues. If it be true, that the Four Chiauſes who were diſpatch'd to Babylon from the Grand Signior, to confirm the Inhabitants of that City in their Allegiance, and aſſure them of ſpeedy Succors, were Murder'd by the diſloyal Citizens; I doubt not but 'tis as true, that the Plague has conſumed the Greateſt Part of the Red-heads in their Camp at Aranſacat. What thô theſe Babylonian Mungrels cry, Long Live the King of Perſia! The reſt of the Empire with true Zeal and Devotion, pray for the Health and Proſperity of the Grand Signior. What thô thô the Sultan has ſworn by God and his Throne, by the Heavens and Earth, That he will go againſt the Venetians in Perſon! The Mufti can eaſily abſolve him in Caſe of Supreme Neceſſity, whence his Preſence is requiſite againſt the more Accurſed Kyſilbaſchi.

'Tis probable, the Oſman Monarchy may be much embaraſs'd by Domeſtick Troubles, and Foreign Wars: Yet he that founded it, and is the Conſervator of Ages, will out of theſe very Diſtempers and Evils, produce a good Conſtitution of Health in the State, and a Firmer Eſtabliſhment againſt all Enemies.

In the mean while, the Venetians are very buſie in their Levies at Home, and in making Intereſts abroad. Couriers are perpetually poſting up and down Chriſtendom, to and from that City. They would willingly have all the buſineſs of Europe ſuperſeded for their Sakes. Every where 'tis whiſper'd, There's ſome Grand Deſign a foot againſt the Turks; but no body knows what. And I tell thee, France, Spain, Germany, Poland, Sueden, and the Reſt of the Nazarene Kingdoms, are too much entangled among themſelves, to have any Thoughts of medling with Remote Affairs.

The Poles would have had the German Emperor taken that Crown in Vaſſalage, on Condition of Protecting it from the Swedes. But, whilſt the Emperor was alive, he weigh'd the Difficulties, and refus'd ſo Chargeable an Offer. Now, he is lately dead, and the the Empire is hardly capable to defend it ſelf.

Differences are newly riſen between the Duke of Bavaria, and the Elector Palatine of Heydelburg; each claiming the Right to be Vicare of the Empire during the Vacancy. And they are preparing on both ſides, to diſpute the Matter with the Sword: Whilſt the King of Sueden ſmiles ſecretly at their Inteſtine Quarrels, reſolving to be reveng'd on Germany, for the Aſſiſtance they have given to Caſimir King of Poland.

At the ſame Time, the Danes are Arming and Equipping by Sea and Land, to Demand Juſtice of the Suedes. Whilſt the cunning Moſcovite ſtands aloft, amuſing all Parties with ſpecious Pretexts, but deſigning only to play his own Game, and eſpouſe that Quarrel, which will bring him moſt Booty. Prince Rogotski, promiſes fair to the Suedes, but 'tis thought, will prove falſe in the End. The Counſels of theſe Uncircumciſed, are full of Treachery; They are infatuated, blinded, and know not what they do.

The Caſe is as bad in Spain, where the King is making vaſt Preparations to enter Portugal, and claim that Crown, hoping to make Advantage of their Domeſtick Factions ſince the Death of Dom Juan de Braganza, the late Portugueſe King: Not conſidering, that the French are like to find him Work enough in Italy, Flanders, and Catalonia; beſides the Continual Damages he receives by Sea from the Engliſh, and the Loſſes he ſuſtains in A- merica.

merica. I tell thee in a Word, all Europe is at this Time in ſuch a Hurly-Burly, that they have no Leiſure to attend our Motions in the Eaſt; every Kingdom and State being wholly buſy'd in their own Affairs. And Venice can rely on Nothing but her own Strength.

Go on then Brave General of the Army, deſtin'd to Chaſtiſe theſe Infidels; and let nothing diſcourage thee, from purſuing the Aims of Honour and Religion. Let the proud Franks know, That there is a Sword drawn in the Eaſt which will never be put up, till it has not only cut off the Exteriour Members, but even ript up the Bowels of the Weſtern Empire.

The Inhabitants of Sicily are in great Conſternation, by Reaſon of a freſh Eruption of Fire from Mount Ætna, or Mount Gibel, whereby the City Catanea, and Adjacent Parts, are much in Danger, and the Aſhes are ſcatter'd all over the Iſland. This Mountain has at Times flam'd forth in an Extraordinary manner from Immemorable Ages; and in all Probability, will continue to do ſo till the Day of Judgment.

There is like to be a New Quarrel between France and Holland; the latter complaining, that they have had above Three Hundred Merchant-Ships taken from 'em by the French within theſe Seven Years. Upon which they have ſtopt two Veſſels belonging to this Kingdom, and Miſunderſtandings encreaſe apace between them.

In

In the mean time, the German Court is preparing to chuſe a New Emperor. His Son is the Perſon deſign'd for this Dignity, if the Elector does not oppoſe it. His Name is Leopoldus Ignatius Joſephus, King of Hungary and Bohemia. He lies ſick of a dangerous Diſeaſe, not leſs loathſome than the Plague.

And now I have mention'd this Scourge of God, it will not be amiſs to inform thee, that in Rome and Naples, where it has rag'd theſe Eleven Moons, and has deſtroy'd a Hundred and Eighty Thouſand People; 'tis not now to be heard of: Commerce is reſtor'd: Publick Courts ſit; Ambaſſadors have Audience; and all Things run in their wonted Channel. Yet in Genoua, they feel it ſtill.

The Souls of theſe Infidels are Infected with an Infernal Peſtilence, and therefore God rains Curſes on them; whilſt the Elect in all Nations, are preſerv'd from all Evil, being mark'd in the Forehead by the Angel of Health.

Paris, 15th. of the 5th Moon,
of the Year 1657.

LET-

LETTER XV.

To Cari Hali, Phyſician to the Grand Signior.

I Have encounter'd a Paſſage in the Hiſtory of the Firſt Caliphs, which a little entangles me. My Faith is disjoynted. Thou know'ſt, we Muſſulmans believe, that Abu Becre was the True Succeſſor of the Prophet. Yet when I conſider, that he attain'd the Sovereignty by Surprize without the Conſent of the Muſſulmans, I know not what to think of it.

After the Death of the Meſſenger of God, the Inhabitants of Mecca and Medina rais'd a Sedition, and took up Arms, each Challenging the Right of Election to themſelves. When, to prevent the Ill Conſequences of this Tumult, Abu Becre and Omar immediately came to them; and to end the Controverſie, Omar ſtretching forth his Hand to Abu Becre, ſaluted him Caliph, and lifting up his Hand to Heaven, ſwore Allegiance to him. Which Example ſuddenly prevail'd on others, and ſo the Tumult was appeas'd. Yet, Omar himſelf ſeem'd to repent of what he had done: For a while after he was heard to ſay, Aſſuredly, the Inauguration of Abu Becre was a Raſh, Unadvis'd Thing; God avert the Evil which may reſult from it. But, let it be a Law, That if any one hereafter ſhall preſume to do as I have done, and ſwear Fealty to another without the Aſſent of the Muſſulmans, he ſhall be put to Death.

to

But, that which is of greateſt Moment with me, is, that Ali Eb'n Abi Taleb the Son-in-Law of the Prophet, was not preſent at this Election, who had as much Right to the Caliphate, as any of them, if not more: At leaſt he had a Right to Vote. And when he firſt heard the News, he proteſted againſt what they had done as Null and Invalid, in Regard they had not conſulted him. Certainly, Ali Eb'n Abi Taleb was a Matchleſs Hero, performing Miracles of Valour in Defence of the Prophet. When he beſieg'd Chaibar, a City of the Jews, he took the Gates of the City from off their Hinges, and us'd them as his Shield. When he brandiſh'd his Glittering Sword, he made his Enemies tremble. I will not ſay more in his Praiſe, leſt thou ſhouldſt conclude, I have liſted my ſelf in the Number of the Kyzil Baſhi. What I write, is only by way of Scrutiny, being diſſatisfy'd about theſe Things.

So when Abu Becre lay on his Death-bed, he call'd from Othman Eb'n Aphan the Scribe, and bid him write as follows: "In the Name "of God, Gracious and Merciful; This is "the Teſtament of Abdollah Eb'n Abu Kohapha, when he was arrived to the Laſt Hour "of this World, and the Firſt of the World "to come. Then he fell into a Trance, while Othman proceeded, and wrote the Name of Omar Eb'no'l Chattab. Then Abu Becre awak'd; awak'd; and asking Othman, Whom he had named for his Succeſſor; He reply'd, Omar. Thou haſt done well, ſaid he, and according to my Mind. Yet, if thou hadſt named thy ſelf, aſſuredly, thou art worthy of the Honour. Thus Omar ſucceeded in the Caliphate, by the Private Order of Abu-Becre, without asking the Conſent of the Muſſulmans. It looks like a Contrivance or Bargain between theſe Two at Firſt. When Omar ſwore Fealty to Abu-Becre, one would ſuſpect he made him promiſe to bequeath the Caliphate to him. Be it how it will, thou ſeeſt Omar accepted the Government, on Conditions which he himſelf had made Unlawful, when he prohibited any Succeſſion that would be made without the Conſent of the Muſſulmans. He was the Firſt that was call'd Amiro'lmumenin, or Commander of the Faithful.

It is reported, that when Omar was near his Death, thoſe that ſtood about him deſir'd hime to name his Succeſſor, they themſelves recommended Ali Eb'n Abi Taleb, becauſe of his Relation to the Prophet. But he rejected him, and committed the Election of his Succeſſor to Othman, Ali, Telha, Azobair, Abu Obeid, and Saad Eb'n Abi Wakka. Abu Obeid therefore coming to Ali Eb'n Abi Taleb, ſaid thus to him, Art thou he to whom I may ſwear Fidelity, that thou wilt act according to the Book of God, and the Laws of his Prophet, and the Conſtitutions of the Two Seniors? Ali anſwered, I will ever act according to the Book of God, and the Law of his Prophet; but as to the Conſtitutions tions of the Two Seniors, I will follow my own Counſel. Then Abu Obeid going to Othman, ſaid the ſame Words: And Othman promiſed to perform all that they requir'd. So they choſe Othman to ſucceed Omar in the Caliphate. He was accus'd of too great Partiality to thoſe of his Blood; for he recall'd Hacem Ebno'l As Eb'n Omaih, whom the Prophet had baniſh'd. He gave him alſo a Hundred Thouſand Aſpers, and to Abdella Eb'n Chaled, he gave Forty Thouſand. They tax'd him alſo with Pride, in that he ſate in the Higheſt Seat of the Prophetick Throne, where none but the Holy Prophet himſelf had ever ſate: For, Abu-Becre, in Reverence to the Meſſenger of God, ſate One Step below it, and Omar, Two. So that the Arabians being Incens'd at Othman's Arrogance and other Vices, took up Arms, and kill'd him. Then ſucceeded Ali.

I rehearſe this Hiſtory to thee, that thou may'ſt know the particular Grounds of my Diſſatisfaction, and give me thy Opinion in this Matter. For, if Abu-Becre, Omar, and Othman, were Unlawfully lifted to the Caliphate, it follows, that they were Uſurpers, and Hali the only True Succeſſor of the Prophet. And, if this be granted, then we have no Reaſon to Curſe the Perſians, who are the Followers of Hali. God knows which is in the Right, We or They. We all are Diſciples of the Prophet, and believe in the Unity of the Divine Eſſence.

God bleſs Mahomet our Law-giver, with all thoſe of his Houſe. God bleſs Mahomet our Glorious Glorious Sultan; In fine, God bleſs thee and me.

Paris, 15th of the 5th Moon of the Year, 1657.

LETTER XVI.

To Cara Muſtapha, Baſſa.

BY the Notices which I receive from Conſtantinople, it appears that the Ground of all the Publick Diſcontents in that City, is the Venetians Conqueſt and Poſſeſſion of Tenedos: As if the People thought that Iſland would prove as Fatal now to the Muſſulmans, as it was formerly to Old Troy, when the Grecians under the Conduct of Agamemnon, pitch'd their Firſt Camp there, to recover Helena the Faireſt Woman of Greece, whom Paris the Prince of Troy had Raviſh'd from her Husband's Embraces.

That Rape was Fatal to the Trojans: For, after a Ten Years War, their City was taken by Stratagem, and burnt to Aſhes: Their Princes and Nobles either all ſlain, or carry'd away Captives by the Victorious Greeks. Only Æneas ſav'd his Father alive, carrying him on his Back out of the Flames, and with ſome other Commanders, eſcap'd to Sea in ſuch Veſſels as they found ready. The Hiſtory ſtory of all his Adventures, is too tedious for a Letter. Suffice it to ſay, that after many Voyages from one Region to another, at laſt he landed in Italy, where he and his Company ſetled; And from them the Venetians, with other People of Europe, derive their Original.

'Tis this makes their preſent Poſſeſſion of Tenedos, appear as an Ill Omen, in the Eyes of the Superſtitious. As if thoſe Reliques of Ancient Troy, where now come to recover the Habitations of their Fathers, and drive both Greeks and Muſſulmans out of the Empire.

But, theſe are only Chimæra's and Dreams; For, when a Nation is once diſplanted from their Native Seat, they ſeldom or never take Root there again. Beſides, who knows whether the Venetians deſcend from Troy, or no? 'Tis true indeed, if Hiſtorians ſpeak Truth, that Æneas ſail'd into Italy, Two Years after the Burning of Troy: 'Tis probable alſo, that he built Lavinium; as Padua is aſcrib'd to Antenor, one of his Captains. But where's the Conſequence, that the Venetians ſhould therefore be the Off ſpring of theſe Heroick Fugitives? They may as well ſay, the French are the Poſterity of the Moors, becauſe thoſe Africans once ſeated themſelves in Spains. For, juſt ſo Independent are the States of Italy, one of another, and their Inhabitants of as different Genealogies, as are theſe Two Potent Kingdoms, with the People that dwell in them.

And

And now the Trojan War is in my Mind, I cannot but ſmile at the Egregious Folly of Ajax, the Son of Telamon. This was a Great Commander in the Grecian Army, a huge, brawny, Giant-like Fellow, that had perform'd Prodigies of Strength and Valour in combating the Trojans, and yet at laſt, fell upon his own Sword and kill'd himſelf, becauſe he could not have his Will of Ulyſſes; and all about an Old Ruſty Buckler, taken from the Enemy, which Ajax claim'd as his Right, in Reward of his Meritorious Services, and the many Scars he had received. But Ulyſſes over-rul'd the Council of War, which was call'd on Purpoſe to decide this Quarrel, and got the Shield himſelf. For, being a cunning, plauſible Fellow, he pleaded, That though the Courage and brave Actions of Ajax deſerv'd all due Honour and Acknowledgment; yet the Surprize of Troy and ending the War, was only owing to his Wit and Contrivance, who deluded the Trojans with a Wooden Horſe, in the Belly of which lay a Detachment of Armed Men; and theſe, after the Horſe was admitted into the City, came out of their Neſt in the Dead of the Night, and ſet Fire to the Houſes, opening the Gates alſo to the Grecian Army.

If the Venetians could invent ſome ſuch Stratagem, perhaps there would be Danger of their taking Conſtantinople: But, till then, Illuſtrious Baſſa, there's no Reaſon to fear theſe Infidels. Beſides, it will be very eaſie to diſpoſſeſs 'em of that Ominous Iſland, and ſo ſo diſſipate the Charm which has bewitch'd the Seditious Rabble. But I would counſel, that it be attempted in Time, before the Venetians are got into the Helleſpont with their Navy: For, there's no Succeſs againſt theſe Infidels by Sea. That Element, it ſeems, is the Wife of the Duke of Venice; being E-ſpous'd with a Ring and other Solemn Ceremonies, on a certain Feſtival of the Nazarenes.

One would think alſo, that the Engliſh had made ſucceſsfull Love to the Sea; For, their Navies are always proſperous. We have freſh News come in, of an Encounter between them and the Spaniſh Weſt-India Fleet, near the Iſland of Teneriff; wherein there were Seventeen of the Spaniſh Ships ſunk and burnt, and among them were Five great Galleons. They took from them an Immenſe Treaſure of Gold and Silver, with other coſtly Merchandiſe.

The French Court rejoyces mightily at this Exploit; not in any Real Love to the Engliſh, but in Hatred of the Spaniards. For, between theſe Two Nations, there ſeems to be an Irreconcilable Antipathy. Beſides, the French have Reaſon of State for their Joy, being in League with the Engliſh Common-Wealth.

That which renders this Victory the more Remarkable, is, that it was obtain'd in a Spaniſh Harbour, the Port of Santa Cruz in Teneriff. Every one extols the Engliſh Commander for a very brave Perſon. His Name is Blake. I am the more Particular in this Relation, becauſe thou art expert in Marine Affairs, having had the Command of the Invincible Ottoman Armado.

There is a Poſt newly come in from Germany, who informs us, that the King of Sweden and Prince Ragotski, have taken the ſtrong Fort of Brzeski Litenski from the King of Poland.

The Portugueſe Embaſſador at this Court, preſſes the King with much Earneſtneſs, to ſend Aids to his Maſter; in Regard the Spaniards are actually enter'd into Portugal, and have taken Olivenza, a City of that Kingdom.

I formerly acquainted the Miniſters of the Divan, that the King of Spain had caus'd all the People of his Kingdom to be Number'd: Now I tell thee farther, That in Order to carry on the War effectually againſt Portugal; this Monarch has commanded the 5th Man in every Family to take up Arms, and follow the Campagne. At which Rate, they ſay, he will have a Hundred Thonſand Men in the Field.

In the mean time, all the Diſcourſe here at preſent is, concerning the Siege of Montmedi, a very ſtrong Place in Flanders. It was Inveſted by the French Army on the 11th of this Moon, under the Command of Mareſchal de la Ferte Seneterre.

France has ſent a great many Brave Generals into the Field this Summer; and I perceive, the Baſſa's of the Ottoman Empire are not not like to tarry at home. God inſpire thee, and thy Equals, with a Reſolution which knows no Medium between Victory and a Glorious Death.

Paris, 26th of the 6th Moon of the Year 1657.

LETTER XVII.

To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna.

THE Beginning of thy Letter ſurpriz'd me with wonder, when I Read that a Chiaus from the Grand Signior, the Sovereign of Sovereigns, Lord of Three Empires, and Five and Twenty Kingdoms, ſhould have the Diſhonour, not to find Admittance within the Walls of Vienna; and that in a Time when the Germans have no Reaſon to provoke a Foreign War, being ſufficiently embarraſs'd with Domeſtick Troubles. But, when I read farther, and perceiv'd, That no Embaſſador, not even of the Chriſtian Princes, has any more Privilege at this Juncture; and that it is an Eſtabliſh'd Law of the Empire, thus to reverence the Majeſty of their deceas'd Sovereign, and conſult the Safety of the next Election; I ceas'd to reſent this any longer as an Indignity to our Great Maſter, and only concluded it to be ſome Myſtery of the Auſtrian State.

It is an Argument of profound Reſpect to the Imperial Ghoſt, That the Churches are all hung with Mourning, throughout the Hereditary Dominions, and that no Muſick is permitted either in the Temples or elſewhere; no Jollity or Mirth, till the Funeral Obſequies are perform'd, and the Body of Cæſar is conſign'd to the Place of its Everlaſting Repoſe.

As to the Quarrel between the Duke of Bavaria, and Prince Palatine, about the Vicariate; there's much to be ſaid on both ſides: And it ought to be a Thing Indifferent to thee and me, which of thoſe two gets the Victory. Yet, for the ſake of Truth, I will tell thee in ſhort what I have collected out of the Journal of Carcoa, thy Predeceſſor, and out of other Memoirs, as they came to my Hands.

It appears then, that by the Golden Bull of Charles V. this Dignity was declar'd Inherent in the Palatinate Family, in Right of their Poſſeſſion of that Principality; and that it had been ſo for many Ages, even before there were any Electors Eſtabliſh'd in the Empire. 'Tis upon this Ground the preſent Elector Palatinate claims it. But on the other ſide, it is as manifeſt, that when Maximilian the Father of the Preſent Duke of Bavaria was Inveſted with the Electoral Dignity, it was Inſerted in the Imperial Bull, that the Vicegrevcy of the Empire, during an Interregnum, ſhould ſhould henceforth belong to that Family. Yet, this Grant was again diſanull'd by the late Pacification at Munſter. And ſo the Buſineſs is left in Diſpute between theſe two Families. He of Bavaria truſts to his Strength and Riches, being alſo back'd by the Eccleſiaſtick Princes; whilſt the other only confides in the Juſtice of his Cauſe, the Right of Unqueſtionable Inheritance.

Leaving therefore theſe Grandees to proſecute their ſeveral Claims, I'll tell thee what makes the freſheſt Noiſe in this City, is an Attempt which the Prince of Conde made lately on the Town of Calais, a Sea-Port of this Kingdom. He had receiv'd certain Intelligence, that the Governour had ſent out the beſt Part of the Garriſon to fortify Ardres, a Place not far from Calais, and ſuppoſed to be in greater Danger; Upon this News, the Prince march'd with great Expedition, deſigning to ſurprize Calais by Night. But he was diſcover'd before he came near them; and the Inhabitants taking up Arms, appear'd on the Walls and Ramparts to welcome him, ſo that he was forc'd to retire again with the loſs of near a Thouſand Men.

Here are Two Men come out of England, that pretend to be Prophets, foretelling the Downfal of the Pope, whom they call Anti-Chriſt, a Beaſt, a Dragon, and I know not how many other Titles. One of them is gone to Rome, to tell the Holy Father to his Face what is like to befall him. The French Court looks upon them as Mad Men; and no Body can eſteem them better if they go to Rome, where they will Infallibly fall into the Hands of the Inquiſition; which thou know'ſt is a Hell upon Earth. Thy Brother Adonai felt the Smart of it, only for two or three Words, utter'd in Contempt of their Religion; And thô he was not Condemn'd to Death, yet he ſuffer'd a tedious Impriſonment; till at Length, the Plague releaſed him both from that, and the Chains of this Mortal Life.

Nathan, if he had dy'd by the Stroke of the Executioner, or by Fire, the Common Death of thoſe who rail at the Roman Faith, I could not pronounce him a Martyr, unleſs it were to his own Folly and Raſhneſs; ſince he was not plac'd there to make Proſelites, either to the Law of Moſes or Mahomet, but to penetrate into the Secret Tranſactions of the Followers of Jeſus.

Thy Buſineſs is the ſame at Vienna; purſue that with Alacrity, and God ſhall protect thee from all Adverſity.

Paris, 9th. of the 7th. Moon,
of the Year 1657.

LET-

LETTER XVIII.

To Melec Amet.

I Welcome thy Return to the Earth again For it appears by thy Letter, that thou haſt been in the Other World. 'Twere to be wiſh'd thou would'ſt favour the Living with a Journal of thy Travels and Obſervations among the Dead. Thoſe Regions of Silence, would afford Matter of Noiſe enough to Mortals, that are always greedy of Foreign News. Perhaps if thou would'ſt communicate the Remarks thou haſt made during that Ramble of thy Soul, we might find out ſome Method of Correſpondence between Our World, and that Inviſible State. We might contrive a Way to ſend Diſpatches to our Friends, and to receive their Anſwers again. Or, at leaſt we might make ſome Uſeful Diſcoveries, in that Empire of Shadows.

But tell me ſeriouſly, doſt thou think that it was any more than a Trance or Dream that has happen'd to thee? Such as frequently falls out in Melancholy Conſtitutions? I once inform'd Cara Hali the Phyſician, of ſuch an Accident as this not far from Paris. It was of a Man that had lain Five and Thirty Hours as Dead, in all Humane Appearance, and ſo given over by the Phyſicians: Yet after that Period, he recover'd his Senſes again, and told ſtrange Things to thoſe that were about him. Surely, theſe are but the Slumbers of the Soul; and Death it ſelf is but a deeper Sleep, when it cauſes the Diſſolution of the Body. Doubtleſs, Men awake again in ſome other Active State. For, as a Flame of Fire is Equally diſpoſed to embody it ſelf in the Fat of Fleſh or Fiſh, in Oyl, Wax, Sulphur, or any Proper Vehicle; and as ſoon as it is extinguiſh'd in One, will readily tranſlate it ſelf ſucceſſively to all the Reſt, if they be within the Sphere of its Activity (as the Weſtern Philoſopher ſpeaks:) So is the Spirit or Flame of Life, always in a Poſture of Tranſmigration. For ought we know, he that is a King This Hour, may be a Peacock the Next, and within a Few Days be ſerv'd up at his Succeſſor's Table, as a Royal Diſh.

But not to inſiſt too much on theſe Secrets, I will relate to thee a Paſſage, not unlike that thou haſt Experienced.

It is Recorded in the Writings of an Authentick Pen, the Manuſcript of an Ancient Arabian, That Al' Raſhid, Emperour of the Faithful, had many Famous Phyſicians about him. Among the Reſt, he highly eſteemed Saleh Eb'n Nahali, an Indian, for recovering one of his near Kinſmen, out of ſuch a Condition as I ſuppoſe thou haſt been in. That Kinſman was very dear to the Emperor, who was ſitting at a Feaſt, when News was brought him that he was Dead. The Emperor extremely troubled to hear this, burſt forth into Tears, and cauſed the Table to be taken

taken away. Then Jaafer Ebn Yahya, one of his Confidents, immediately desired that Saleh the Indian Physician, might visit the Corps of his dead Relation. Who went accordingly, and having felt his Pulse, and consider'd him well, he returned to the Emperor, and said, Cease to mourn, my Lord, Commander of the Faithful: For if this Man be dead, and I do not restore him to Life again, may I be divorc'd from all my Wives for Ever.

He had scarce made an End of saying this, when a Second Dispatch came to the Emperor from those who were about his Kinsman, assuring him, That he was really departed this Life.

Then Al Rashid began to Curse the Indians, and their Ignorance. But Saleh persisted in his Assertion, crying out with some Vehemency, Be not Incredulous, O Emperor of the Faithful, nor suffer thy Kinsman to be buried, till I have been with him again: For assuredly he is not dead. I will shew you something that is Admirable. Al Rashid pacify'd with these Words, took Saleh along with him to visit the supposed dead Person.

As soon as they came into his Chamber, the Indian took a Needle, and thrust it between the Nail and the Flesh of his Left Thumb. Then the Entranc'd snatch'd up his Hand toward his Mouth. At which Saleh cry'd out, Now my Lord comfort your self; for dead Men use not to be sensible of Pain. After this, he blew up a Powder into his Nose. Upon which, in a few Minutes the Patient ſneez'd; and ſitting upright in his Bed, ſpoke to Al' Raſhid, kiſſing alſo his Hand. The Emperor asking him, How he found himſelf; He reply'd, Benefactor of Mankind, I have been in the ſweeteſt Sleep that ever I remember fell on me in my Life. Only I dream'd that a Dog came and bit me by my Left Thumb, the Pain of which wak'd me. With that, he ſhew'd him the Mark of the Needle, and the Blood. Adding, Surely it was no Dream, but a Truth; for I feel it yet. The Emperor was extremely pleaſed with his Indian Phyſician, and did him great Honour. His Kinſman alſo, whoſe Name was Ibrahim, lived many Years after this, and was made Governor of Egypt, where he dy'd and was bury'd.

The Eaſtern Phyſicians have been Famous in all Ages, and are now much in Eſteem among the Franks, who addict themſelves to ſtudy the Sciences. Here are ſome very Learned Phyſicians in theſe Parts, and not a few Ignorant ones, who ſerve as Foils, to ſet off the Luſtre and Fame of the others. Every Province and City in France ſwarms with 'em: And they all find Employment either to Kill or Cure. The Nazarenes live very Intemperately, and fall into abundance of Diſeaſes, whereof the Eaſt is wholly Ignorant: Therefore it is Neceſſary for 'em to be well ſtock'd with Phyſicians. Yet 'twas Satyrically obſerved by a certain French Lord, That in a Town not far from his Palace, the Inhabitants were all healthy long-liv'd Men, till a certain certain Emperick came and took up his Reſidence there: For then they began to ſicken and die apace. But this may be an Invidious Remark. The Arabian Proverb ſays, No Man is a good Phyſician, but he that is born ſuch: Meaning, that ſome are Naturally diſpoſed and fitted to this Science. Indeed, I have known Admirable Cures perform'd by Men, who never ſtudied in the Academies, or could anſwer three Queſtions in Anatomy. Nay, ſome Women have a Gift of this Nature, and are very Fortunate in their Practices. But, when all's done, the Beaſts are moſt Happy, who are all their own Phyſicians by Inſtinct.

Melec, I wiſh thee ſuch a State of Health as needs no Medicines. But if it be thy Misfortune to fall into Parmenides his Indiſpoſition, I counſel thee to make uſe of the Advice given him by a Philoſopher; who, when Parmenides complain'd of a Pain in his Stomach, and usk'd his Advice, he bid him uſe ſuch and ſuch Confections and Electuaries. The other reply'd, He had made Tryal of them all, and many more, yet found no Eaſe. Then ſaid the Philoſopher, Turn Poet, for they Generally have Good Stomachs.

Paris, 9th. of the 7th. Moon,
of the Year, 1657.

LETTER

LETTER XIX.

To the Kaimacham.

COuriers upon Couriers, are come to this City with the Joyful News that Monmedi is ſurrender'd to the French. For which, the whole Body of the Parliament, and City of Paris, the Chancellour of the Kingdom, with Cardinal Antonio Barberini, and all the Eccleſiaſticks, went to the Grand Moſch or Temple, where Te Deum was ſung this Afternoon, with a Pompous Solemnity. And now whilſt I am writing, there is ſuch a Confuſed Noiſe of Great Guns, Ringing of Bells, and Shouts of People, that one would think it were enough to wake the very Dead, and make them ſtart from their Graves, to enquire what's the Matter.

The Truth of it is, this Place is counted one of the ſtrongeſt in Europe; and the Inhabitants were not Inſenſible of it, when they made their Conditions of Honour with the King. And therefore we need not wonder at the Exceſſive Joy of the French.

When the Keys were deliver'd to the King by the Deputies of the Town, one of them in the Name of the Reſt, made this following Addreſs.

" Sire, We ſhould have had juſt Reaſon to " complain of Fortune, and accuſe our ſelves " of Cowardiſe, if we had ſurrender'd this

" Impreg-

" Impregnable Fortreſs, to the Arms of a " Prince leſs Glorious and Puiſſant than your " Majeſty: Since our very Walls are of ſuf- " ficient Strength to defend us, without ta- " king up Arms, againſt a Power Inferiour " to yours. But, in regard it is the Will of " Heaven, that we muſt change our Maſter, " we rejoyce to fall into the Hands of ſo In- " vincible and Generous a Monarch. And we " hope, Sire, that your Majeſty will ſhew us " the more Favour, for having us'd our Utmoſt " Efforts to conſerve an Inviolate Fidelity to " the Catholick King, who but Yeſterday was " our Maſter.

This was ſpoken with ſo graceful an Action, and ſuch a becoming Frankneſs, that the King being mightily pleaſed with them, made them this Anſwer.

" Yes, I ſhall always remember, that your " Conſtancy deſerves my Eſteem. And now " conſidering you as my Subjects, I will be- " ſtow ſuch Privileges on this City, as ſhall " oblige you to manifeſt no leſs Courage and " Zeal for my Service, than you have done " for the Catholick King.

And to evidence, that he has equal Sentiments of Gratitude and Eſteem for his Officers, by whoſe Courage and Conduct this Important Place is come under his Obedience; the King has beſtow'd the Government of it on the Lieutenant-General of his Armies, who was preſent at the Siege, and was ſhot in Seven Places of his Body. They call him the Marquis of Vandi. He has ſignaliz'd his Va-

lour

lour in Sixteen Sieges and Battels, being mark'd all over with Scars, the Glorious Characteristicks of an Indefatigable and Fortunate Hero.

It is fit the Divan should be inform'd of all such Passages: Not to instruct them what to do in the like Cases (for they are Perfectly Wise) but that these Examples may be Register'd, as Spurs to Vertue and Magnanimity of Spirit. For, it cannot be supposed, that the Emperor of True Believers will come short of these Infidel Kings, in Rewarding his Faithful and Undaunted Slaves.

Mareschal de Ferte Senecterre has also had his Share in the Caresses and Acknowledgments of the King and the whole Court.

This Success has given a great Damp to the Spaniards, who begin to retire as fast as they can from the Neighbourhood of the French Armies. On the other sides, these are full of Vigour and brisk Resolutions; resolving not to end the Campaign, without some farther Attempts in Flanders.

They creep by Degrees into the very Heart of that Province, which is ever like to be the Stage of War, so long as the King of Spain has one Town left in it. 'Tis a very Rich Country, abounding in all the desirable Productions of Nature. And the People are very Industrious, to learn and improve whatsoever is Profitable in Art. All their Unhappiness lies in this, That they are not able to protect themselves and subsist Independent of one or other of the Neighbouring Crowns. So that whenever thoſe Sovereigns fall out, theſe Poor People are miſerably oppreſs'd with Armies; and in this Caſe, their Friends many Times give 'em as much Trouble as their Enemies. Nay, 'tis difficult to determine, which are their Enemies, and which their Friends. For, to whatſoever Maſter they are ſubject, he dreins their Coffers of Money by Taxes and Contributions; beſides the Intolerable Vexation of Quartering unruly Soldiers, who commit a Thouſand Inſolences unpuniſh'd.

one

Poland is at this Time in as bad a Condition, between the Armies of Sueden, Auſtria, Brandenburgh, Moſcovy, Tranſylvania, and the Forces of King Caſimir.

The Son of the deceas'd Emperour, has ſent a great Army to the Aid of that Unfortunate Monarch; and 'tis confirm'd on all Hands, that they have laid Siege to Cracow. Whilſt his Embaſſador is Negotiating with the Elector of Brandenburgh, to draw him off from the Suediſh Intereſt. This is like to prove a War of long Continuance, if the Plague do not make Peace, which rages in thoſe Parts, and deſtroys many Thouſands more than the Sword or Gun. The Moſcovites have Combated with this Diſtemper above theſe Two Years, the Grand Duke being forc'd to fly with his Army, like Vagabonds, before this Inexorable Conquerour, which gives no Quarter.

In

In the mean time, I hear Ill News from Candia, where they say, the Mussulmans have in a Late Attempt on that City, lost above Four Thousand Men, with Thirty Four Ensigns, and a Considerable Treasure. These Infidels have also taken and destroy'd this Summer above Thirty Ships of Barbary, and as many more of Constantinople, Smyrna, Aleppo, Scanderoon, &c. On Board of one of which, they seiz'd the Yearly Revenue which comes to the Grand Signior from Scanderoon: And out of another they have taken the Revenue of Rhodes, kill'd a Thousand True Believers, took Half that Number Captives, and releas'd Abundance of Christian Slaves: In a Word, they have taken out of the several Vessels which fell into their Hands, an Immense Treasure of Silver, Gold, and Precious Stones.

These continual Successes of the Nazarenes, would tempt one to think, That this War was Unjustly commenc'd by Sultan Ibrahim, and therefore Unhappily carry'd on by his Glorious Successor, Sultan Mahomet. Pardon the Effect of Melancholy, Benign Minister, if it be a Crime to think, that the Creator of All Things is Angry with those who Violate their Solemn Word and Oath. Thou know'st the whole Story of this War, and the First Occasions of it. I say no more.

They have a Proverb here in the West, That the Voice of the People, is the Voice of God. And though I approve not the Practice of those, who make Use of this Popular Aphorism rism to foment Seditions in a State; yet I cannot but own, there's a great Deal of Reason in it, and it may be verify'd in the present Circumstances of Constantinople.

Thou obſerveſt, that the Soldiers are Mutinous, and unwilling to ſerve any longer in this Unfortunate War. Thou findeſt the Merchants, and in General, all ſorts of People diſcontented and Factious. The Avenues to that Sanctuary of the World, are block'd up by the Venetians; ſo that neither Corn nor other Neceſſary Proviſions can be brought in, to ſupply the Wants of ſo many Hundred Thouſands of People. In a Word, thou ſeeſt the Publick Calamities have made them almoſt deſperate; they care not what they do. Peace with the Chriſtians, is the Word every where; or elſe each Impertinent Mechanick, will preſage Ruine to the Ottoman Empire.

May God inſpire thee and the other Miniſters of the Divan, in this Calenture of the State, to apply ſuch Remedies, as may prevent the Inconveniences of a Domeſtick War which is always more Fatal to a Government, than a Foreign Invaſion.

Paris, 17th. of the 8th. Moon,
of the Year 1637.

LETTER

LETTER XX.

To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna.

NOW thou giveſt me ſome Solid Hope of a Convert. Thy Letter has raiſed my Expectation, ſince 'tis not penn'd in a Style full of Scruples and Inſignificant Doubts, which would be Endleſs: Nor yet does it favour of Hypocriſie and Diſſimulation, as if thou intendeſt only to mock me and my Faith, and ſtill continue thy ſelf an Infidel. But it abounds with very fair Conceſſions, Articles of Reaſon and Honour on thy ſide; Only expecting from me, a True and Authentick Account of our Holy Prophet's Life, and of the Miracles which can be produced in Confirmation of his Prophetick Office. Thou wouldſt fain ſee, if any Thing happen'd of this Kind, to the Meſſenger of God, parallel to the Stupendous Wonders which recommended Moſes your Lawgiver to the World, as the undoubted Oracle of Heaven.

I proteſt, there is no Fault to be found in this Demand: For it is but Reaſon, that he who aſſumes the Character of a Prophet, ſhould be diſtinguiſh'd from Impoſtors by ſome Evident Signs and Wonders. Yet, 'tis needleſs to make an exact Parallel, becauſe the Occaſions of Moſes's Miracles were different ſerent from thoſe of Mohammed, the Seal of the Prophets. Your Lawgiver had a Commiſſion and Power given him to work Miracles when he pleaſed: Whereas Ours declar'd, That he was not ſent to work Miracles, but to preach the Unity of the Divine Eſſence, the Reſurrection of the Dead, the Joys of Paradiſe, and the Torments of the Damn'd.

Yet, leſt the Unbelieving World ſhould doubt the Truth of his Miſſion; From his very Birth, his Life was graced with many Supernatural Favours. His Mother bore him without the leaſt Pain of Body or Mind: And as ſoon as he breath'd the Vital Air, he ſpoke with an Audible Voice, ſaluting his Mother, and adding, I profeſs, That there is only One God, and that I am his Apoſtle. He was alſo Circumcis'd by Nature, coming into the World without his Prepuce. At the ſame Hour, the Devils were forbid to aſcend above the Orb of the Moon: And Four Voices were heard from the Four Corners of the Square Temple: The Firſt ſaying, Proclaim, The Truth is riſen, and all Lies ſhall return into Hell. The Second uttering, Now is born an Apoſtle of your own Nation, and the Omnipotent is with him. The Words of the Third were, A Book full of Illuſtrious Light is ſent to you from God. And the Fourth Voice was heard to ſay, O Mahomet, we have ſent thee to be a Prophet, Apoſtle, and Guide to the World.

When he was about four Years Old, accompanying the Sons of his Nurſe into the Field, the the bleſſed Child retir'd into a Cave at the Foot of the Mountain Uriel to pray: When the Archangel Gabriel appeared to him, and ſaid, Biſmillahi rrahmani rrahimi, &c. In the Name of God, Compaſſionate and Merciful, O Child greatly beloved, I am ſent to diſplant from thy Heart, the Root of Evil; for thy Ejaculations made the Gates of Paradiſe fly open. The Young Reſigned one ſaid, The Will of thy Lord and Mine be done. Then the Angel open'd his Breaſt with a Razor of Adamant, and taking out his Heart, ſqueez'd from it the Black Contagion, which was derived from Adam: And having put the Child's Heart in his Place again, he bleſs'd him, and retired to the Inviſibles.

From that Time the Young Favourite of Heaven grew up and proſper'd in all Things, having the Smiles of God and Man. He was under the Tuition of his Uncle Abu-Taleb, who diſcerning the Marks of an Immenſe Soul in his Young Nephew, was more Solicitous for his Welfare, than if he had been his Son. His Fortune being Low in the World, he had no other Way to provide for his Illuſtrious Charge, than by placing him as a Factor to Chadijah, a Widow of the ſame Tribe with Mahomet, which was the Nobleſt among the Arabians. Beſides, ſhe was very Beautiful and Rich: And there wanted not Hopes, that in Time ſhe might become Mahomet's Wife.

That which chiefly encourag'd 'em to this, was a Viſion of Chadijah, every where talk'd

of

of in those Parts. For, she had divulg'd it her self, long before Mahomet became her Servant, or his Uncle had any Thoughts of thus disposing of him. "The Sun seem'd to "leave his Heaven and come down to her "House, from whence he dispers'd his Beams "through Arabia, Egypt, Persia, and in "fine, through the whole Earth. This Vision had made a deep Impression on the Mind of Chadijah; and she could not rest, till she had told it to a certain Famous Sage in those Parts, who had great Skill in Astrology and other Mysterious Sciences, and was Celebrated for the Integrity of his Manners. As soon as he heard the Contents of her Vision, he said, "In the Name of God, O Widow, "enter into thy Bath, and prepare thy self "with the Necessary Purifications: For, thou "shalt shortly be married to the Greatest "Prophet in the World. And when she ask'd the Astrologer, What was the Country, Tribe, and Name of her next Husband? He told her, He was an Arabian of Mecca, of the Tribe of the Corei's, and that his Name was Mahomet.

As yet, the Prophetick Widow knew Nothing of the Nephew of Abu-Taleb. But, thou may'st imagine she felt strange Passions, when his Uncle afterwards recommended him to her Service; and she knew, that he was the Man in whom the Astrologer's Character was verify'd, as to his Country, Tribe, and Name. For, Mahomet was the Son of Abdalla, who descended from the Bani Haschim, who who were the Nobleſt Family in the Tribe of the Corei's. Who can expreſs her Sentiments, when ſhe ſaw the Beautiful Youth making his Firſt Addreſſes to her as an humble Slave, whom ſhe believ'd Heaven had ordain'd for the Partner of her Bed? With what a Grace and becoming Modeſty did he receive the laſt Inſtructions and Farewel of his parting Uncle? However, ſhe concealed her Tranſports, and ſent her beloved Slave with a Caravan into Syria, allowing him a Noble Penſion.

In that Journey, there happen'd ſomething very Remarkable in Honour of the Admirable Young Man. For at a certain Place on the Road, as he waited on the Captain of the Caravan to a Synagogue of the Jews, no ſooner had Mahomet ſet his Foot o'er the Threſhold of the Synagogue, but all the Lamps therein were looſen'd from their Chains, and fell down on the Floor. All thoſe of thy Nation that were preſent, being aſtoniſhed at the Portentous Accident, fell at the Feet of the Rabbies, deſiring their Advice in this amazing Circumſtance. They having performed the accuſtomed Ceremonies and Expiations, anſwer'd, It is revealed in the Traditions of the Seniors, That at what Time ſoever an Arabian, called Mahomet, ſhall be preſent at our Solemnities, God ſhall remove the Candleſticks out of their Place. It is therefore moſt certain, that ſuch a one is now among us; let him not eſcape our Hands, leſt Reproach and Contempt come on Iſrael. But behold, whilſt whilſt they were buſy in ſearching for the Cauſe of this Prodigy, Two Angels conveyed Mahomet to Mecca, where he ſoon after married Chadijah.

It were eaſie to recount many more Miracles in the Life of the Prophet; ſuch as that of the Cloud Overſhadowing him, the Eagle perching on his Head when he was aſleep, the Trees and Stones proclaiming him the Apoſtle of God. And, if we were to make Parallels, I think, the Stupendous Deſcent which the Moon made, at the Prayer of the Divine Meſſenger; comes not far ſhort of the Celebrated Diſorder on Mount Sinai, when your Law was delivered by Moſes.

If thou requireſt Undoubted Teſtimonies for the Truth of this Miracle on Our ſide, offer ſomething that is Unqueſtionable on thy Own. We both equally confide in the Different Records of our Nations, which were penn'd by Men as liable to Temptations and Errors of all ſorts, as thou and I, and all that believe what they write. Therefore, unleſs thou canſt ſtart ſome more Infallible Authority, to prove the Eternal and Univerſal Obligation of your Law, than I can to the Contrary, thou lieſt under a manifeſt Diſadvantage: Since I profeſs with our Holy Prophet and all the Muſſulmans, that the Alcoran contains Nothing Repugnant to the Law of Moſes; but is only a more Perfect and Complete Idea of the Divine Will: And that as Moſes was the Lawgiver of the Sons of Iſaac; ſo Mahomet was the Apoſtle of the Sons of Iſmael, and the Seal of all the Prophets.

Sons

Uſe thy own Reaſon; and rather be of no Religion, than in the Number of thoſe to whom it ſhall be ſaid at the Laſt Day, Drink, ye Worſhippers of Ozair, and be damn'd for ever.

Paris, 10th. of the 9th. Moon, of the Year 1657.

LETTER XXI.

To Dicheu Huſſein, Baſſa.

THere has been a mighty Quarrel of late between the French and Spaniſh Embaſſadors at the Hague, about Precedency. The Occaſion was this. One Evening the French Embaſſador was Riding in a Coach, in a Place where the Spaniſh Embaſſador met him in another Coach; and both ſtriving for the Upper Hand, they met with their Horſes Heads one againſt another, and ſo ſtood ſtill. There was preſently a Tumult of People gathered about them: And the French being moſt reſpected, many Gentlemen came in to his ſide with Swords and Piſtols; and all Things ſeemed to portend a Combat. But, the Magiſtrates having Notice of this Diſturbance, ſent ſome of the Guards to keep the Peace, and defend the Embaſſadors from any any Attempts of the Rabble. In the mean while, ſeveral Great Lords walked to and fro between the Ambaſſadors propoſing Expedients of Accommodation: But it being at the very Juncture when the French Ambaſſador had received the News of the Surrender of Montmedi, he would not in the leaſt yield to any Terms. So that at laſt the Spaniard was forced to drive out of the way, thinking it a Matter of ſufficient Triumph, That he had ſtopp'd the French Ambaſſador ſo long.

There is a Poſt come in from Denmark, who brings News of the Total Deſtruction of Itzchow by Fire. This was a Town belonging to the Danes, and was Fir'd by the King of Sueden's Order. The Danes are very Unfortunate of late Years; they make no Figure in Europe. There is a Period ſet to the Grandeur of every Kingdom and State, and the Danes were once very Victorious and Formidable; but now their Monarchy declines apace, to make way for the Riſing Luſtre of the Suedes.

By Sea the Dunkirkers make a great Noiſe: They have lately taken from the French, Twenty Merchant Veſſels, and from the Engliſh near halfe that number. But, if they have not better Fortune than their Neighbours, the French will take their City from them e're long. Every Campagne makes a fair Advance toward it. I ſent an Account already to the Kaimacham of the Surrender of Montmedi, , one of the moſt Important Places in Chriſtendom. Now I acquaint thee; that St. Venant, which has not ſo great a Character, yet conſiderable enough, has yielded upon Articles. This was done on the 28th. of the laſt Moon. At this Rate the French Prieſts will have little elſe to do, but to ſing Te Deum, for their repeated Succeſſes and Victories.

From Portugal we hear, that that Court to ſecure themſelves the better againſt the Spaniards, have ſent to implore the Aſſiſtance of Morocco and Fez: Which is much cenſur'd among the Nazarenes. Others ſay, they are only Meſſengers, gone to buy up all the Horſes they can get in that Country.

In the mean while the King of France is taking all the Politick Meaſures he can, for the Empire of the Weſt. His Ambaſſadors in Germany appear with a Magnificent Train of Three hundred Men, and they ſtyle their Maſter, His moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, King of France and Navarre, Sovereign Prince in Germany and Italy; Which laſt is look'd upon as a Fair Step to the Title of Emperour.

The Counſels of the German Court are not a little diſturb'd, to hear that our Invincible Forces are approaching towards the Confines of Hungary. It will put ſome ſtop to the deſign'd Election. Beſides, they cannot agree among themſelves about a Succeſſor.

The Queen Chriſtina of Sweden, is come back again into this Kingdom, being frighted out of Italy a Second Time, by the Return of the Plague.

There is a War commenc'd between the City

City of Munster and the Bishop of that Place: So that he has laid a Formal Siege to it, and presses them very close.

All this is of no such Importance, as the News that I receive from Constantinople, which assures me, that the Mussulmans have retaken the Isles of Tenedos and Lemnos, tho with some Loss of Men.

I wish they cou'd as easily drive the Venetians out of the Archipelago, and then the Imperial City would have no longer Reason to complain for want of Bread.

Paris, 10th. of the 9th Moon,
of the Year 1657.

LETTER XXII.

To Dgnet Oglou.

I Know not what's the Matter, but most of my Friends are of late grown strange to me. They write but seldom, and then their Letters are full of Reserves, as if they suspected my Integrity: Or, because that I am commanded to inform the Divan of all Criminal Practices, therefore they are afraid to communicate their Sentiments with the same Freedom as formerly; tho on Themes no Ways belonging to the State, but purely Speculative, and the Common Discourse of all Senſible Men. Are you become more Moroſe and Rigid at Conſtantinople, than you were Twenty years ago? In thoſe Days, I remember it was common in the Publick Coffee-Hans for Muſſulmans, Greeks, Curds and Franks, or Men of any other Religion, to meet together and vent their Thoughts with Liberty: No Man being willing to be Stigmatiz'd with the Character of a Clown, for taking Offence at another's Faith, thô different from his own.

It was then eſteem'd a point of Gallantry, to favour the Chriſtians of all Sects, and let 'em talk and act as they pleas'd, provided they Blaſphem'd not God, or his Prophets. And they themſelves wou'd have condemn'd any of their own Party, who ſhou'd have been Guilty of ſuch an Immorality and Affront to the Eſtabliſhed Religion of the Muſſulmans, and the General Sence of Mankind.

But why then is the ſame Liberty retrenched now, and that among Muſſulmans who are intimate Friends? Is it not now as Lawful for us to converſe with one another by Letter or any other Way, as it was then to enter into Dialogues with Infidels? I wou'd not encourage or imitate the Bold and Prophane Efforts of their Wit, who deny the Being of a God, or utter Blaſphemies againſt his Meſſenger: The whole Univerſe is an Irrefragable Teſtimony of an Eternal and Omnipotent Nature: And the Alcoran is an Evident Proof, of the Sanctity and Indiſpenſible Commiſſion mission of Our Holy Law-giver. But I hope 'tis no Crime, to enter into Speculations of Things lyable to Controverſie. At leaſt, I will venture to diſcloſe to Thee my Thoughts, who art the moſt Agreeable of all my Friends. I tell thee, my dear Gnet, it appears to me ridiculous, and like the Quarrels of Children, for Muſſulmans to wrangle about mere Trifles in Religion, and that the Reſign'd to God ſhou'd be zealous for the Whimſies of Men. One Party believes the Alcoran is Eternal, Another ſays 'tis Created. In my Opinion, they are both Abſurd Aſſertions. The Firſt, becauſe then it will follow, That there are more Eternals than One, which is a fair Step to Polytheiſm and Idolatry: The Second is only an Impropriety of Speech; For we do not uſually ſay of any Writing, That it is Created but Penn'd.

I can eaſily believe the Manifold Deſcents of Gabriel from Haaven, when he brought down the Hundred and Four Sheets of Science and Faith. But whether Adam had only Ten of theſe Sheets; or One and Twenty, as ſome ſay: Or, whether his Son Seth had but Twenty-Nine of them; or Fifty, according to Others; is not Material, according to my Faith. It is poſſible Edris had no more nor leſs than Thirty, and Abrahim our Father, juſt Ten of theſe Divine Manuſcripts. Of this we are ſure, That the Volume of the Law was ſent to Moſes, the Pſalms to David, the Goſpel to Jeſus the Son of Mary, and the Mighty Alcoran to Mahomet the Seal of the Prophets

It is as easie for me to believe the Celestial Pen with which all these Manuscripts were written, to be of some Admirable Substance. But, why it shou'd be made of Pearls, rather than of Diamonds, or any other Jewels, I see no Reason; Or that it shou'd be a Journey of Fifty Years, for the swiftest Horse in Arabia to run from one End of it to the other. Yet if I have not Faith enough for these things, I will not be angry with those that have. Let every Man enjoy his Fancy.

But I cannot be so indifferent, when I hear Men tell me, that God has a Body like Ours, with Eyes, Ears, Nose, Hands, Tongue, and all other Members and Organs of Life, Sence, Speech and Motion: That he is subject to Passions of Love, Hatred, Anger, Grief, and all the Affections that are common to Mortals. Yet thou knowest there is a Sect of Mussulmans, who believe all this, and Preach it to others with great Assurance. What is this, but to set up an Idol, in the Place of God? For, the Original of all Idolatry was the vain Presumption of Men, who represented the Incomprehensible Divinity, under some Common Visible Figure of Men or Beasts.

If we must assign a Body to God, it wou'd seem more Rational to adhere to their Opinion among the Sephatim, who say, his Body is Infinite, Uncircumscrib'd, and beyond all Form. Neither is it of any Import, that the Western Philosophers assert, It is of the Essence of all Bodies to be Circumscrib'd and Finite:

nite: Since, though this may be readily granted true of Particular Bodies, yet muſt it ever be deny'd of the Immenſe and Univerſal Body out of which the World is Form'd: Unleſs they will allow an Unlimited and Interminate Unbody'd Space, which is more Unintelligible and Abſurd. Doubtleſs, if the Eternal Mind has a Body, 'tis Expanded Wide as the Endleſs Æther, and Equally Preſent in all Places: Neither can this Body be any more Circumſcrib'd, Confin'd, or ſhut up in any Place, than the Light of the Sun can be Reſtrain'd within a Room, or ſeparated from its Source by the drawing of a Curtain. For all the World is Pervious to this Infinite Body, which is altogether Indiviſible into Parts, even as that which we call a Spirit. In a Word, we muſt conceive it to be ſimple and uncompounded, the Fineſt and Faireſt Matter of the Univerſe.

But if thou wilt have my Opinion, all this is Infinitely too low and narrow an Idæa, of that Eternal and moſt Exalted Eſſence, that Intellectual Beauty, which no Mortal Eye has ſeen, no Tongue or Pen can deſcribe; the ſmalleſt Glimpſe of whoſe Ineffable Majeſty, falling on the Thoughts of Holy Men and Prophets, ſnatches away their Souls in Sacred Paſſions and Divine Extaſies, whilſt their Bodies are in the Cuſtody of the Angel of Death. At ſuch Times they are carry'd up through the Seven Heavens, beholding all their Wonders, and the Purple Sea which divides the Firſt Heaven from the Second. They paſs by the Orbs, where Fire, Hail,

Snow and Thunder are prepar'd and kept as in Reſervatories againſt the Day of Calamity; being guarded by the Spirits of Vengeance, who are Created to puniſh Infidels. Then they aſcend to the Fourth Heaven, where dwell Innumerable Armies of Holy Ones. Next to the Fifth, where are the Angels of Interceſſion. Then to the Sixth which is the Reſidence of Arch-Angels, the Internuncio's or Meſſengers of the Eternal Majeſty. And laſt of all, they are introduc'd into the Preſence of the moſt Sublime Potentates and Principalities, who wait before the Receſs of the Creator in the Heavens above all Heavens, whoſe Height tranſcends the Power of Created Intellects to meaſure.

O Dgnet, when I have ſaid all I can, 'tis nothing to the purpoſe. For no Words nor Thoughts can reach that Infinite above all Infinity. Nothing but pure unbodied Minds, can have Acceſs to the Skirts and Borders of that Endleſs Region of Light.

Therefore, let us not ſtretch our Vain Imaginations, nor greedily pry into thoſe Secrets, which for ever fly from Humane Thought: But keeping our ſelves within the Bounds of Reaſon and Sobriety, let us Adore God and believe his Prophet, Obey the Law of Cleanneſs and Purity, without Injuring Man or Beaſt; And that's the way, if there be any to aſcend to the Viſion and Enjoyment of that Happineſs, which at preſent is hid from us.

Paris 5th. of the 11th Moon,
of the Year 1657. LET.

LETTER XXIII.

To the Aga of the Janiſaries.

I Receiv'd the Diſpatch coming from Valorous Hands, an Expreſs perfum'd with Narciſſus; full of Honourable Words, and exhibiting a Command worthy of an Ottoman General. May the Angel of Fortitude, conduct thee in all thy Expeditions, againſt Infidels, Rebels, and Hereticks.

Thy Conceptions of the Preſent State of Europe, are very proper and lively. Yet in ſome Things, 'tis poſſible thou haſt been miſinform'd. The Affairs of Italy are Inconſiderable, when compar'd with the more important Wars of the North. That Quarter is at preſent the Theatre of the moſt Remarkable Actions. Yet the Campagnes in Flanders this Year, have made ſome Noiſe in the world.

But, all the Diſcourſe at preſent is, of the Famous Siege and taking of Fredericks-Ode by the Suedes. This is a Fortreſs belonging to the King of Denmark, and eſteem'd one of the ſtrongeſt in Europe. Yet it was taken by Storm: Wherein the Danes loſt Ninety Three Principal Officers, and about Three Thouſand Common Soldiers; Thirty Three Colours; Seventy Seven Great Guns of Iron and Braſs; Three Hundred and Eighty two Barrels of Powder; Forty Thouſand Muſquet Bullets; Six hundred Granado's; Three thouſand Pikes, and Two thouſand Two hundred Suits of Armour.

This Victory makes the Suedes appear Terrible to their Enemies; and they are look'd upon as the only Flouriſhing Nation in the North, as France is in the Weſt. Yet, to ſhew that there's no unmix'd Happineſs here below, their Intereſt has been much leſſen'd, by the Deſertion of the Brandenburgers, who now ſeem to favour the Cauſe of King Caſimir.

That Monarch had an Interview lately with the Elector of Brandenburgh, at a Place call'd Broombergh; where they embrac'd one another, Banqueted together, and buried all the Memoirs of Enmity in Generous Compotations: For, this is the Way of the Northern Princes of Europe; who live in ſo Cold a Climate, that Nothing leſs than a Debauch with Wine, can thaw their Frozen Souls, and melt 'em into an obliging Humor.

As for the State of England, I perceive thou know'ſt the Character of Oliver, the New Sovereign of that Common-wealth. Yet I can inform thee, that he begins to change his Temper. There are Perſons in his Court, who give conſtant Intelligence to the King of France, of all his Secrets. And as the Exil'd King of Scots cou'd not Snuff a Candle in a Paſſion, but that Uſurper had Knowledge of it; ſo neither can Oliver have a Dream, but ſome ſpightful Mercury carries the News into Foreign Countries. His Sleep is Interrupted with fearful Viſions of Plots and Treaſons againſt his Life; which makes him change his Bed Five or Six times a Night. They ſay, he is Metamorphos'd from a Hero to a perfect Coward. And this is not the Report of the Multitude, who take things upon Truſt; but 'tis the Sport of the French Grandees, who wiſh well to the Son of the late Murder'd Engliſh King.

Meta-

I muſt be Irregular in my Method of Writing, that I may oblige thee with Military Remarks. A more particular Account of the Storm of Frederick-Ode, is juſt come to my Hands, wherein we are aſſur'd, that it was taken at the Firſt Aſſault, which much redounds to the Honour of General Wrangle; and that the Crown-Marſhal of Denmark, with many Senators and Grandees, fell by the Edge of the Sword; And that Two Thouſand Captives were driven yok'd in Couples like Beaſts, as an Augmentation of the Conqueror's Triumph.

Thou wilt not be diſpleaſed at the little Coherence and Order of theſe Memoirs, conſidering that it ſuits well enough with the Subject: For I write a la Campagne, as the French ſay, and ſo am oblig'd to Entertain thee with broken Detachments of News, from ſeveral Parts, as Occaſion offers.

The Spaniards are ſtark Mad, for the loſs of Mardike which was taken by the Engliſh and French in the 9th Moon, and all the Gariſon ſent Priſoners to Calais. They ſwear, they will have this Important Place again, whatever it coſt 'em. The Prince of Conde, lies dangerouſly ſick of a Fever at Gaunt: Whilſt Don John of Auſtria, labours under a Malady of another Nature, being much diſtreſs'd for Want of Money to pay his Soldiers. This is look'd upon as a very bad Symptom in a General of an Army.

Want

The Great City Cracow in Poland, is surrendred by the Suedes to King Caſimir. That Monarch begins to find a turn of his Affairs; and 'tis thought he will draw halfe the Princes of Europe into a League againſt the King of Sueden.

It will be of no great Importance for thee to know, that the Siege of Munſter is rais'd, and a Peace concluded between that City and their Biſhop: Yet 'tis convenient, that this ſhould be related to the Miniſters of the Divan: who are the Judges of all Humane Events. Beſides, in one of my Letters, I mention'd this Quarrel and Siege.

Illuſtrious Aga, I have obey'd thy Commands, in ſending thee an Abſtract of all the moſt Remarkable Tranſactions in Europe, during the laſt Three or Four Moons. I wiſh, 'twere as agreeable to any of my Friends, to ſend me the News of our Armies and Navy.

But I am more oblig'd to Strangers and Infidels, for the Intelligence I have of the Ottoman Affairs, than to any of the True Believers.

Brave Commander, may God preſerve thee from the Common Vices of a Soldiers Life, and make thee as Renowned as Caſſim Hali, who was preſent in 25 pitch'd Battels, receiv'd 48 Wounds, and yet lived to the 63d. Year of his Age.

Paris, 27th. of the 12th Moon,
of the Year, 1657.

The End of the Third Book.

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. V.

BOOK IV.

LETTER I.

To Cara Hali, Phyſician to the Grand Signior.

MOST of my Letters to the Grandees of the Port, carry News of Wars, Sieges, and Battles among the Chriſtians. Now I'll tell thee who art my Friend, I'm at War with my ſelf, One Potent Paſſion takes the Field againſt another, Oppoſite Armies of Affections, ctions, are Embattel'd in my Breaſt: My Heart is block'd up: Here, lies Intereſt Intrenched; There, Honour diſplays its Standard. One Minute, Nature and Self-Preſervation makes a Sally; the next, they are beat back by Generoſity and Love. The Woſt of it is, that theſe contrary Factions in the Soul, are ſo blended together by a ſecret Correſpondence, that it is almoſt impoſſible to diſcern which is which.

Wouldſt thou know what the meaning of this is? I'll tell thee in Brief; I'm in a Controverſie with my ſelf, whether I'd beſt to die or live.

Wonder not at the Expreſſion, as if 'twere in any Mans Power to make this Choice; ſince according to the Muſſulman Faith, we cannot haſten or retard the Moments decreed by Fate. Aſſuredly, Predeſtination does not in the leaſt interfere with what is call'd Man's Free Will. Every the moſt Voluntary Action of our Lives, complies as exactly with the Appointment of Eternal Deſtiny, as the Accidental Fall of a Tile of a Houſe, or the more Regular and Conſtant deſcent of Rain, Snow and Hail from the Clouds. And, for ought I know, we may as properly call it the Free-Will of a River to run toward the Sea, as for a Man to purſue the Various Currents of his own Reaſon or Appetite. For ſo a Fountain frequently divides it ſelf into many Streams, before it falls into the Ocean, which is its Center. And Man himſelf, notwithſtanding the boaſted Freedom of his Will, is as much confin'd to act according to his Principles, Prepoſſeſſions, Prejudices, Paſſions and Habits; as the different Rivulets iſſuing from the ſame Spring, are reſtrained each within the Banks of its proper Channel.

as

But not to entertain thee with more Allegories; both thou and I, and all Men, find our ſelves Violently carry'd away by certain Inclinations ſo forcible, as no Power of our Will is able to reſiſt: Sometimes our Love, Hate, Joy, Grief, and ſo the reſt of Humane Paſſions, are as Involuntary, as the Motions of our Pulſe. And thô in the moſt Important Actions of our Lives, we Generally form ſome Regular Deſign, as their Scope and Center; Yet we do many Things without Reflection, as Muſicians are ſaid ſometimes to play Excellent Tunes, without ſo much as regarding or thinking what they are about. By all which it is Evident, that our Will has little to do in the Conduct of our Lives. We, like all other Creatures, act according to certain Secret Impulſes of Nature. The very ſame Faculty which we call Inſtinct in the Beaſts, is no other than what we term Reaſon, Wiſdom, Knowledge, Diſcretion and Forecaſt in our ſelves. And I think 'tis no Soleciſm to ſay, That that was a Prudent Dog, who perceiving his Maſter making ready a Rope to hang him, ſlily ſlipt away, and never came near him more.

Suffer me to make yet a farther Digreſſion, and aſcribe it to Fate. For I'm on a ſudden ſtrangely Interrupted in my Thoughts, by a moſt most Furious Tempest; A Medley of Hail, Rain, Lightning and Thunder. And this last, tho not over-noisy and loud, yet it was the most singularly terrifying, that ever I heard in my Life. There is a sort of Thunder which they call the Drum, because it approaches near the Sound of that Warlike Instrument, making a lively, fierce Rumbling in the Air, like the Beat of an Alarm. There is another more surprizing, like the Roaring of Cannons. But this had a Touch in it, of the most Harsh, Affrighting and Irregular Noises that ever shook the Welkin.

I was possessed with a deep Melancholy, as soon as I heard the Horrid Clatter begin, and saw the Air darken apace, with a more than ordinary Gloominess. Then I felt some Religious Passions strugling with my Reason. I was full of Fears, lest God was angry with me, for my Counterfeited Life among the Christians: And imagined no less, than that this Tempest was raised on purpose to destroy me; and make me an Example to all Mussulmans, who dare deny the Holy Prophet, to serve the Interest of the Grand Signior, as much a Mortal as themselves. Or, at least, I concluded I should taste my share of the Wrath of Heaven, at this cholerick Juncture. Nay, and all the Philosophy I could muster together, served but to raise my dismal Expectations of the Fatal Blast. For I could not avoid thinking, That a Wicked Man is a Magnet which Naturally attracts the Vengeance of Heaven: And that I being such in the Higheſt Degree, could not fail of having my Soul ſcorched up at once to Nothing, or Metamorphoſed to a Fury (Which is Worſe) by ſome ſurprizing and inevitable Flaſh. For, to paſs from this Life by Lightning, Poiſon, or an Earthquake, are the only Deaths I fear.

the

I fell on my Knees and Face, addreſſing my ſelf to God with the moſt Humble and Fervent Devotion I was capable of. I made my Application alſo to his Prophets. I ſaid and did, all that I thought would procure a Reſpite of the Puniſhment I fear'd At length, being tired and ſick of too much Prayer, I roſe and ſate down chearfully; remembring I was a Muſſulman, and reſigned to the Will of Deſtiny. Conſidering alſo that I was an Arabian, of a Noble Stock; I reſolv'd, if I muſt die, to prepare my ſelf with a Moderation worthy of my Blood; that ſo I might go to the Inviſibles, like the Grand-Son of an Emir.

Perhaps thou wilt impute this to Vanity: But I eſteem it a point of Juſtice, for a Man to take care, that he may live and die like himſelf, without degenerating from the Virtue of his Anceſtors, or bringing a Diſgrace on the Tribe to which he belongs. For, thô God has Created all Men of the ſame Mould, yet he has diſtinguiſh'd One Family from Another, by more than Specifique Characters Imprinted on them in their Nativity: And has Ennobled ſome Mortals with Peculiar Qualities ties and Innate Perfections, which Others are wholly Strangers to. So, there are Others Remarkable for Hereditary Vices.

Whether theſe things depend on the Blood, or on the different Circumſtances of Souls before they came into theſe Bodies, is a Queſtion not ſoon reſolv'd. But, this I'm ſure of, That I find in my ſelf both ſome Virtues and Vices, which I could never yet diſcover ſo Odly blended together in any other Mortal. I'm always Campagning on the Frontiers of Good and Evil. Yet my Paſſions are not Mercenary: No Price can tempt me to Treaſon or Perfidy. I am Maſter of a certain Faſtneſs of Spirit, which no Human Charm is able to diſmantle. My integrity cannot be warp'd by Gold. And 'tis for this Reaſon, I a little value my ſelf. Which makes me ſometimes inclin'd rather bravely to ſally forth into the Unknown World, than tarry in This, where I meet with Nothing but Contempt and Diſeſteem from the Slaves of Him, for whoſe Sake I bear the Fatigue of Life. Surely, think I, wherever it be my Lot to go, after my Eſcape from this Mortal State; the Spirits of that Region will be kind to me, for the ſake of my Incorruptible Truſtineſs: For, they have Intrigues as well as we; and conſequently, will be glad of Faithful Agents.

In a Word, ſince all my Zeal and Loyalty is thought not to merit any Reward in this Life; I would fain try, whether at leaſt I may not deſerve to be a Ghoſt of Honour; If there be be any such Distinctions in that World of Spirits.

Paris, the 27th. of the 12th. Moon, of the Year 1657.

LETTER II.

To Mustapha, Bassa.

I Shall acquaint thee with a late Transaction in this Kingdom, which I believe has but few Examples. The Kaimacham has already received a Dispatch from me, wherein I signify'd the Return of Christina, Queen of Sweden into France: This Princess since her Arrival at Fontainblean, having discover'd some secret Treachery in one of her Retinue who was an Italian Marquis, pronounc'd a Formal Sentence of Death on him: Which was accordingly executed on the 10th Day of the 11th. Moon, by her own Officers, in a Gallery, of her Palace, after he had been warn'd of it by her Express Order, and had a Confessor sent to him, to prepare him for Another World.

When this was done, she immediately sent a Messenger to acquaint the French King with this Action, and the Reasons which induc'd her to it. Some of the Courtiers at first perswaded him, That the Queens Proceeding entrench'd trench'd on his Royal Prerogative, he being the ſole Arbiter of Life and Death within his own Dominions: Whereupon Monſieur de Chamut was ſent to Expoſtulate with her. I have formerly mention'd this Perſon in ſome of my Letters, when he was Ambaſſador from this Crown to Queen Chriſtina, then Reigning in Sueden. He is a Gentleman of Great Abilities: And for that Reaſon, has been employ'd in the moſt Difficult Negotiations, with the States of Holland and other Countries.

Yet People Cenſure variouſly; And the Caſe has been referr'd to the Doctors of the Civil Law, who Pronounc'd this Sentence in her Favour, That being an Independent Sovereign, and having the King of France's Permiſſion to reſide in this Realm, the Rights of Sovereignty could not be deny'd her over her own Subjects: Such are to be eſteem'd all that are in her Service and take her Pay, except the Subjects of the State where ſhe reſides.

The Swift Execution of this Queens Sentence on her Servaot, in Part reſembles the Rigour of our Eaſtern Juſtice, which admits of no Delays in puniſhing Criminal Perſons, and removing Traitors out of the way. Neither is it to be diverted, by any Fears of After-claps. And though theſe Weſtern Monarchs generally put no Man to Death without a formal Proceſs at Law; yet ſometimes they have leap'd over this Rule, and only given the Word of Command to ſome of their Officers, and the Buſineſs was done: As

As in the Caſe of the Marſhal d'Ancre, and the Duke of Guize; the One falling by a Piſtol Bullet, the Other by the Stab of a Dagger; and both in the King's own Palace, ſurrounded with their Servants and Friends. And there was no other way for the Crown of France to ſecure it ſelf from the Attempts of theſe dangerous Men, who were grown to ſuch a Height, as to Monarch it almoſt as much as their Maſters.

Mighty Baſſa, the Charms of Sovereignty are very ſtrong, Creating Envy and Ambition in Subjects, and Jealouſie in Princes. It is not ſafe for an Eminent Grandee, to appear too Popular. For he that is Inveſted with a Diadem, can never brook a Rival, or one whom he has Reaſon to ſuſpect for ſuch.

Paris, 15th. of the 1ſt Moon, of the Year 1658.

LET-

LETTER III.

To Muſtapha, Berber Aga.

THE Spaniards are all diſſolv'd in Joy for the Birth of a young Prince and Heir of that declining Monarchy. 'Tis ſaid, that the King his Father, appointed a Solemn Feſtival throughout all his Dominions, commanding his Subjects to Celebrate it with the moſt exalted Demonſtrations of Joy, And on that Day, he himſelf wore the Ranſom of Kings in his Apparel; the very Diamonds and Pearls in his Hat, being valu'd at Three Millions of Gold. By which thou mayſt gueſs at the Reſt.

He has alſo communicated this Joyful News to all Chriſtian Princes and States, his Friends and Allies. And indeed, he has ſome Reaſon to make a noiſe of this Good Fortune, being an Old Man, and in all Mens Opinion not likely to have any more Children.

His Ambaſſadors in Foreign Countries, endeavour to imitate their Prince in all manner of Magnificent Triumphs. And particularly from Holland we have the following Account: That on a certain Day of this Moon of January. Don Stephano de Gamara, the Spaniſh Ambaſſador at the Hague. caus'd Te Deum to be Sung with Excellent Voices and Muſick, whilſt Fifty Pieces of Ordnance plaid continually. At Night a Hundred and Fifty Pitch-Barrels Barrels were lighted on ſeveral Scaffolds in the Streets, and all the Windows in the Hague were Illuminated with Wax Tapers. And theſe Words were ſeen flaming in an Artificial Fire-work for Two Hours together;

ParVo, at Magne PhILIppe,
Proſpere proCeDe, et regna.

I need not explain this Inſcription to thee who art vers'd in the Roman Language; and wilt find, that all the Salt of theſe words lies in the Capital Letters pointing at the Year wherein this young Prince was Born, viz. MDCLVII. except a little Pun upon his Name, which is Philip Proſper. On each Side appear'd the Arms of the Spaniſh King; and underneath, the Golden Fleece, ſo Artificially contriv'd, that from it ſprung Fountains of divers kinds of Wine, at which the Multitude drank liberally for ſome Hours: Whilſt many new Coin'd Pieces of Gold and Silver, were ſcatter'd among them out of the Ambaſſadors Windows. They were ſtamp'd with an Olive Tree, having this Motto on One Side, and on the Other Side a Hand, with this Inſcription in a Label, Dabit Populis Pacem.

Creſcente hac, Pax aurea creſcet:

The French ridicule this latter Motto, and ſay, The King of Spain will e're long deſerve the the Title of Peace-maker: when he ſhall be forc'd to ſue for it, not being in a Condition to carry on a War.

Illuſtrious Officer, I know thou art well verſed in the Roman Hiſtories, having been Educated under Achmet-Lala, who was a Learned Man. And 'tis probable, thou art no Stranger to the more Modern Relations of Europe, and the Diverſe Characters of the People that Inhabit it. Yet give me leave to tell thee, that Rome in all its Victorious Bravery, never ſaw firmer Soldiers in a Battle, than the Spaniards are at this Day, But the French have Finer Wits, more Money, and better Fortune: And 'tis this makes 'em inſult. Beſides, Deſtiny over-rules all Things. Every Kingdom and Empire has its Climacters, wherein it droops, declines, and at the Grand Critical Period falls to Ruine.

The Greeks had Money enough when the Great Sultan Mahomet beſieged Conſtantinople: But they had not Wit to uſe it for their own Preſervation; and ſo that City, the laſt Conſiderable Stake of the Empire, was loſt to the Ottomans, who ſoon after became Maſters of all the Reſt.

Thou haſt Wealth in Abundance, and Diſcretion to manage it: Slip no Opportunities, but remember the Old Arabian Proverb, which ſays, God has given whole Days to the Fortunate, but to the Unhappy he affords only ſome Hours.

Paris 17th. of the 1ſt. Moon,
of the Yearr, 1658. LET-

LETTER IV.

To Pesteli Hali, his Brother, Master of the Grand Signior's Customs, at Constantinople.

I Remember my promise, though it be late. Thou know'st I have many Hindrances, and therefore will not tax me with feigning an Excuse. However, thy Letter came to me in a good Hour, to put me in Mind of these Things, and to enquire of our Mothers Health who still resides in this City.

I have said Nothing of her, since my First Letter after her Arrival at Paris. And, to tell thee the Truth, she has said Little her self; being Ignorant of the French Tongue, and too Old to learn it. Therefore her Chief Conversation has been with Eliachim and me, above these Three Years: For that Jew speaks Indifferent good Turkish and Arabick.

If thou wou'dst know how she has spent her Time, 'Tis divided between her Devotions and her Needle. She lives more Recluse than a Christian Nun; seldom or never stirring abroad, unless to take the Air of the Fields, and then shut up in a Coach with her Maid. In a Word her Manner of Living, is a fit Example for the French Women: For, in all Things she observes the Laws of her Education, and the Modest Customs of the East.

No Argument can perſwade her to change her Grecian Garb, or dreſs her ſelf after the Looſe Mode of Weſtern Females. Neither will ſhe eat or Drink any where, but in the Houſe of Eliachim, for Fear of infringing the Precepts of the Alcoran, and diſobeying the Meſſenger of God: For ſhe eſteemes the Diet of the Jews Pure, and free from Pollution. In her Pious and Motherly Zeal, ſhe rebukes me for eating and Drinking with Infidels: And I've nothing to ſay in my Defence, but the Neceſſity I lie under of preventing Suſpition, that ſo I may ſerve the Sultan with greater Succeſs, and that I have the Mufti's Diſpenſation for this and many more Irregularities. When ſhe hears this, ſhe lifts up her Eyes to Heaven, lays her Hand upon her Breaſt, and appears reſign'd: Yet ſhakes her Head, and ſeems to pity my Caſe; not without ſome Reflections on the Corruption of the Times, the Impiety of the Seraglio, and Want of Zeal for the Holy Prophet.

She has her Health to a Miracle: And excepting the Firſt Two Moons after ſhe came to Paris, I never heard her complain of the leaſt Indiſpoſition. 'Tis poſſible, the Change of Air, with the Inconveniences of Travelling ſo far by Sea, and Land, might incommode her at Firſt. She was for a while troubled with Rheums, Obſtructions, and a Dyſentery: But ſhe ſoon overcame theſe Diſtempers, and has ever ſince been perfectly well.

We

We often discourse together of thee, and thy Travels in the East. Sometimes I read Part of thy Journal to her, which affords her infinite Delight. She congratulates her self, and thy Good Fortune, in escaping so many Perils and Deaths, as every where threaten a Stranger: And takes a particular Delight to hear thy Adventures with the Indian Lady, at the Court of Raja Hullaca. Thou may'st be assur'd, our Mother bears a Singular Affection to thee: For we never meet, without wishing thee in our Company. She rejoyces mightily, to hear of thy Prosperity and advancement in the Favour of the Grand Signior, and his Principle Ministers; Wishing thee every Day a New Step of Honour and Interest. Thou may'st also rest satisfyed that Mahmut comes not short of the Affection he owes to such a Brother.

At other Times we talk of our Cousin Iusef, who is now in the Frozen Regions of the North. His Itinerary Memoirs, are also very Pleasant; and we pass some Hours in reading and comparing 'em with the Dispatches which I frequently receive from Mehemet an Eunuch in Egypt. For Iusef is more large in his Description of that Colontry, and his Remarks on its Antiquities, than on any other Part of Africa. Yet he says enough of all that Southern Quarter.

As to what I promis'd to inform thee, concerning the Pyramids, Mummies, and other Singularities of Egypt; know, that our Kinsman Iusef is a great Critick, and gives the Lye to Herodotus, Diodorus, Strabo, Pliny, and other Writers of Greece and Rome. Neither will he consent in all things to our Arabian Historians. He says, the Pyramids are neither so High, nor does their Basis take up so much Ground, as is reported by the Ancients. He laughs at those who affirm, They cast no Shadow at Noon, having experienc'd the Contrary, when the Sun was in Capricorn. And we may believe him in this, on good Ground: For it is Recorded of Thales Milesius, who liv'd above Two Thousand Years ago, that he took the Height of their Pyramids by their Shadow.

There are Three of these Admirable Structures how far from Cairo, and about Fifteen more in the Deserts of Lybia. It is generally suppos'd, That they were built for Sepulchres of the Egyptian Kings; some of them before the Flood, the rest after. There are not wanting Historians, who affert the Greatest of the Pyramids to be the Tomb of Seth, the Son of Adam.

Joseph was within this Mighty Fabrick, and relates, That after he, and his Company had descended and ascended through certain Stories, they came at last to a Square Chamber, wall'd about with Pure Thebaick Marble, in the Middle of which was a Chest of the same Stone, which when struck, with the hollow sounded like a Musical Instrument. It is believ'd that in this Chest was laid the Body of the King who built that Pyramid.

The Ancient Egyptians were of Opinion, That even after that which we call Death or the Separation of the Soul and Body, there were certain Arts to retain 'em together; If not in so strict an Intimate and Union as before, yet in a very Familiar Correspondence for many Ages. So that the Soul should always take delight to hover about the Body, and so exercise its Faculties in the Place where that was reposed.

For this Reason, in the First Place they took out the Bowels, and whatsoever was most liable to Corruption: And having wash'd the empty Belly with Wine of Palmes, mix'd with Aromatick Powders, they stuff'd it with Myrrh, Cassia, and many costly Confections; and then sowed it up. After this, they purifi'd the Whole Body with Nitre; And having drawn out the Brains by the Nostrils with a Hook, they fill'd up the Skull with melted Gums. And last of all, they Swathed up the whole Body in Silk smearing it over with Rich Mixtures of Bitumen, Spices and Gums, and so delivered it to the Kindred to be laid up in the Sepulchre.

These were the Preparations they made to Court the Presence of the Soul by rendring the Body for ever Sweet and Incorruptible. And, that the Majesty of Royal Ghosts might never be interrupted or Violated by the Neighbourhood of Vulgar Spirits, or the Rude Approach of Mortals; Kings built these Magnificent Piles, as the Palaces of their last Repose. 'Tis therefore they were Erected in Desert and Unfrequented Places, and in such a Form as was esteemed the most Durable, and secure from the Injuries of Time, the Assaults of the Elements, and from the Common Fate of all Humane Enterprises. Each Stone of a Prodigious Bulk, and riveted to the next with a Bar of Iron: Which with the strength and Invincible Fastness of the Cement, renders it a Thing Impossible for any one of these Pyramids to be demolished, tho' all Mankind were set to Work for many Successive Generations.

Dura-

Al Mamun the Calipb of Babylon, attempted to do it, but in vain. For after he had set his Men to Work, and been at Vast Expences, they made but one small Breach, so Inconsiderable, that being made Sensible it would exhaust his Treasures to remove but the Hundredth Part of the Pyramid, he desisted, full of Wonder at the Wisdom of the Founders.

If it be true, that the Soul may by such Allurements as these, be prevail'd on to remain with the Body in its Sepulchre, and that a Man's Future Happiness Consists in this, I should my self Admire and Imitate those Egyptian Sages, I would in my Life-Time build me a small Musoleum, according to my Ability, and order in my Last-Will and Testament, that my Body be Embalmed and Condited for a perpetual Duration. But if none of these Arts can alter the Decrees of Destiny, or force an Immortal Spirit from Ranging where it pleases; I must conclude with Pliny, That this Celebrated Wisdom of the Egyptians, was no other than Glorious Folly, and all the Magnificence of their Kings in building ſuch coſtly Sepulchres, but Royal Waſte.

Folly,

They themſelves in thus cautiouſly providing to ſecure the Soul's Abode with the Body after Death, tacitely own'd, That by the Courſe of Nature it would immediately paſs into ſome other. Nay, the Tranſmigration of Souls, was an Eſtabliſh'd Doctrine in Egypt. How then could they be ſo blind as to imagine a Dead Carcaſe, however Perfumed and Fenced againſt Corruption, was more inviting than an Embrio formed to live? Or that it was more Eligible for the Soul to be Impriſoned in a Dark Dungeon (for no better are the Inſides of the Pyramids) than to enjoy the Light of the Sun, Moon and Stars, and the Various Sweets of the Elements? Brother in my Opinion, 'twere better to be a Bird, a Worm, a Fly, or any Living Thing, than to be thus Immur'd for many Ages, and have no other Companion, but an Old Salted Mummie.

Iſouf has made ſome Remarks on the River Nile, to which he ſays Egypt owes not only its Corn and Fruits, but alſo the very Soil which brings 'em forth. For every Year, at the Time of the Inundation, that River brings along with it from Æthiopia, or ſome other Regions through which it paſſes, Abundance of Slime and Mud, with which it covers all the Land of Egypt, leaving it behind at the Decreaſe of the Waters; So that the Soil of Egypt is borrowed from other, Countries, And if this be true, for ought we know, the Place of its Situation may be borrowed from the Sea, according to the Opinion of some Ancient Philosophers.

Herodotus, Pliny and others, were of this Perſuaſion grounding their Conjectures on the nearer Approaches of the Continent to the Iſland Pharos, from the Time of Homer who exactly Calculated its Diſtance. And they concluded, that the Immenſe Quantities of Slime which the Nile tranſports from the Mountanous Regions of Africa, might in the Space of two Myriads of Years, have filled up all that part of the Sea which is now Firm Land, and call'd Egypt.

If this be true, it ſeems to be very ſtrange, That the Egyptians ſhould boaſt of Greater Antiquity than any other Nation in the World, tho' their Country it ſelf be the Youngeſt of all the Regions on Earth, an Abortive Spot of Ground hatched by a River in the Depths of the Sea, and ever ſince-cheriſh'd by that River as by a Parent or Nurſe, which ceaſes not to convey to it Yearly a Convenient Proportion of Aliment, whereby the Country it ſelf grows in Bulk, And the Inhabitants are maintained. O Admirable Providence of Nature, who can penetrate into thy Myſterious Conduct! O Egypt abounding in Prodigies and Wonders! Where the Land and Water, with the other Elements, conſpire to render thee all over Miraculous.

Dear Peſtell, I am tranſported when I think of that Region and could relate a Thouſand find more Passages, both out of Isouf's Memoirs, and from the Mouths of others, who have travelled thither to observe so many Miracles. But I believe, thy Patience will be sufficiently tir'd with the length of this Letter. Besides, my Mother is just come to visit me, and desires me to recommend her Unfeigned Affections to thee.

Be assured also, that Mahmut loves thee with the Integrity of a Man, and the Tenderness of a Brother; And he serves thee in all Things without repining.

Paris the 17th. of the 1st. Moon, of the Year 1658.

LETTER V.

To the Kaimacham.

THE Venetians are very angry for the Loss of Tenedos; and not without Reason; For, that Island is a delicate Spot of Ground, abounding in Rich Wines, and other Products of Nature. Besides, it commands the Avenue of the Shining City, the Refuge of Mortals.

They variously relate the Manner of its being taken from em, by the Arms which no Earthly Power is able to resist. Endeavouring in all their Rumours, to disguise the Truth as much as they can, and misrepresent the Bravery of the Ottomans; that so the Actions of their own Generals, may make the Greater Figure.

These Nazarenes have a bad Cause, and therefore are Compelled to make Use of shifts and Equivocations to support it. They are quite degenerated from the Integrity of the Primitive Followers of Jesus. In a Word, they make good the Character of the Ancient Candiots; Of whom a Certain Poet says, They are thorow pac'd Lyars, Ravenous Beasts, and Gluttonous Drones.

It is believ'd in these Parts, that when the Venetians quitted the Island they departed not without Revenge, setting Fire to a Mine, and blowing up several Hundreds of Mahometans, into the Air.

However, they have for ever Proscribed and Excommunicated Girolamo Loredan, and Giovanni Cornarini, in whose Custody the Chief Fortresses of the Island were; accusing them of Cowardise and Treachery: Offering also Two Thousand Cequins to any that Seizes on 'em within the Dominions of Venice, and Three thousand to him that kills 'em in another Country.

I know, 'tis in the Power of the All-Commanding Port to protect these Exiles, if they are within the Territories of our Sovereign; much more, if they shelter themselves in that Sanctuary of the Distressed. But thou, and the other Supreme Ministers, are best able to judge whether these Infidels merit so great a favour.

Perhaps

Perhaps, their Caſe may be like that of Nadaſt, Governour of Buda, when Solyman the Magnificent beſieged that City. For Nadaſt was a Man of Invincible Courage and Fidelity, but was betrayed by the Soldiers, who bound him in Chains, and deliver'd up the City and Caſtle to the Victorious Sultan. That brave Hero underſtanding their Treachery, and the Reſolution of Nadaſt, ſet him at Liberty, and preſented him with Noble Gifts; but commanded the perfidious Garriſon to be cut in Pieces: A due Reward of their Treaſon. For, tho' Princes often make Uſe of Traytors to ſerve their own Deſigns; yet, when the Work is done, they commonly purſue the Hated Inſtruments, with the Effects of a Juſt Contempt and Indignation.

Plutarch the Greek Hiſtorian, abounds with Inſtances of this Nature; ſo does Herodian, and other Roman Authors. But, no example of Puniſhment in this Kind, ſeems ſo Proportionate, Regular and Ingenious, as that which Brennus, King of the Gauls, cauſed to be Inflicted on a Virgin of Epheſus; who, when he beſieged that City, promiſed to deliver it into his Hands, on Condition that his Soldiers would beſtow on her, all their Ornaments of Gold, which they had Plundred in the Wars of Aſia, and wore about them as Trophies: For, when ſhe had performed her Contract, the Wiſe General to do his Part, cauſed this Virgin to ſit down on the Ground; and then every Soldier in his Army caſting his Plate into her Lap, ſhe was oppreſſed oppreſſed with the Inſupportable Weight, and buried Alive in a Heap of Gold.

I do not mention this, as if the like were due to the Venetian Captains. I refer the Judgment of ſuch Things to my Superiours, Miniſters of the Bleſſed Sanctuary of Mankind.

'Tis poſſible the Vizirs of the Bench thought me dead or turned Renegado, becauſe they have not received any News from me theſe Five Moons. But I tell thee, neither Men nor Devils can corrupt the Faith of Mahmut. But by the God of my Vows, there is not a more truſty Man in the Univerſe.

All the Reaſon of my Silence, was the Height of the Waters, which ſeemed to threaten the Earth with a Second Deluge. Germany was a Sea, and Flanders a Lake, for above Three Moons together; ſo that 'twas Impoſſible for the Poſt to travel. There were ſeen alſo ſtrange Spectres of Fire in the Air; And the People of Brabant, were Alarmed with Uncouth Noiſes in the Elements.

Perhaps Illuſtrious Kaimacham, theſe are the laſt Preparations, to the Grand Cholick of Nature; when Wind, Water and Fire, ſhall ſtrive to turn this World into its Old Chaos.

Paris, the 3d. of the 6th. Moon, of the Year 1658.

LETTER

LETTER VI.

To Solyman, his Couſin, at Conſtantinople.

MORE Melancholy ſtill? Wilt thou have no compaſſion on thy Exil'd Uncle, but harangue him to Death with thy Religious Jargon? Believe me, thy Letters of this Kind are as Irkſom to me, as the Continual Din and Babling of Boys is to a Poor Weary Pedagogue. I forbid thee not to write to me, and that as often as thou wilt: 'Tis a Comfort in my Baniſhment, to hear from thoſe of my Blood. But let me beg of thee, to alter both thy Theme and Style. Leave Spiritual things to the Mollahs and Imaums; And let thy Thoughts be taken up in Things belonging to thy Trade. In that be as Inquiſitive as thou canſt. Bend thy Mind wholly, to make new Diſcoveries and Improvements in that; and it will turn to thy Advantage. At thy Hours of Leiſure I councel thee to read Hiſtories, and ſometimes go into Company: There is much to be gain'd by Converſing with Men of Sence. Such will ſerve as Mirrours, wherein thou may'ſt behold Humanity in its Proper Figure, and the Deformity of that Vizard, with which Error and Superſtition diſguiſe our Nature. They will correct thy Miſtakes, without putting thee to a Bluſh, Bluſh. Wit and Reaſon ſhall flow from their Tongues, as ſoft Harmonies breath from the Pipes of an Organ, which chear the Spirits, and ſerene the Heart that was clouded with Sadneſs.

The Imperial City is full of ſuch, both Natives and Strangers. Cull them out from the mix'd Multitude, and make 'em thy Companions, without regarding the Difference of Religion, whether they be Muſſulmans, Franks, Armenians, Jews, or others. Above all Things, ſhun the Society of Bigots; and number not thy ſelf among thoſe who are Opinionated, becauſe they profeſs the True Faith: For, what ſignifies that, if their Lives be Vitious? I tell thee, they are worſe than the Idſidels. Give no heed to Fortune-Tellers, and ſuch as pretend to Aſtrology. For whilſt they boaſt of knowing other Mens Fates, they are Ignorant of their own. And if there be any Truth in that Science, one may ſay, their Ignorance in it affronts the Stars, and often provokes 'em to haſten their own Ruine. Aſſure thy ſelf, they only amuſe the World with Portentous Stories, to get Fame and Money.

Aſſociate thy ſelf with none but Prudent and Moderate Men, whoſe Morals are not leaven'd with a too Furious Zeal; who look not Superciliouſly, and with Diſdain on a Frank as he walks along the Streets, much leſs offer him any Indignity, when he goes about his Honeſt Buſineſs, under the Protection of the Grand Signior. It becomes none but but Janizaries and Ruffians, to be guilty of these Incivilities to Strangers. The Law of Nations, and the particular Commands of our Holy Prophet, oblige us to treat such with all Humanity and Tenderness. Besides, 'tis Reflection on the Justice and Hospitality of the Magnificent-Port, which is the Refuge and Sanctuary of all the Earth, that a Stranger cannot walk the Streets in Peace. Despise no Man on the Score of his Religion; for there are no Factions in Paradise: But consider, that whilst Thousands of Mussulmans shall go to Hell for their Wicked Lives, so an Equal Number of those we call Infidels, may be receiv'd into the Mansions of the Blessed for their Virtues.

Thou seemest to be much concern'd for thy Soul: Thy Letter abounds with overmuch Care in this point. In being too sollicitous, it is Evident thy Faith is small. Every Line is tinctured with Sad Expressions about the Perils, Snares, Ambushes, Hooks, Gins, and I know not what other Devices the Devil has to ruine thy Poor Soul, (as thou call'st it.) Cousin, dost thou know what the Soul is, about which thou keep'st such a Pudder; If thou do'st, 'tis more than I do, and yet I have been searching and prying into it above these Thirty Years; I mean, from the time that I first began to think and consider of Things; but am as far to seek as ever I was. Neither cou'd all the Wise Men of Old, the Philosophers and Sages, for ought I perceive, agree in their Verdict about this Mysterious thing which we call the Soul. One

One will have it to be, Only the Finest Part of matter in the Body. Another says, 'Tis the Air which the Lungs suck in, and diffuse through all our Members. A Third sort affirm it to be, A mixture of Air and Fire; A Fourth, Of Earth and Water; A Fifth call it, A Complection made up of the Four Elements, a Kind of Quintessence, and I know not what. The Egyptians call'd it, A certain Moving Number; And the Chaldeans, A Power without Form it self, yet Inhibing all Forms. Aristotle call'd it, The Perfection of a Natural Body. All these agreed, That it was Corporeal, and as it were Extracted from Matter. The best Definition among them is not worth an Aspre.

But there were Men of Sublime Speculations, who affirm'd the Soul to be, A Divine Substance, Independent of the Body. Of this Opinion were Zoraster, Hermes Trismegistus, Orpheus, Pythagoras, Plutarch, Porphyr, and Plato. This last defin'd the Soul to be A Self-Moving Essence, endow'd with Understanding. But when they have said all, I prefer the Modesty of Cicero, Seneca, and others who acknowledged they were altogether Ignorant what the Soul is.

There was no less Disagreement among the Philosophers, about the Seat of the Soul. Hippocrates and Herophilus plac'd it in the Ventricles of the Brain. Democritus assign'd it the Whole Body. Strabo was of Opinion, it resides between the Brows; Epicurus in the Breast. The Stoicks lodg'd it in the the Heart; and Empedocles in the Blood Which laſt ſeems to be the moſt Current Opinion of the Eaſt to this Day: In Regard both Moſes the Lawgiver of the Jews, and Mahomet our Holy Prophet, aſſerted the ſame, and for that Reaſon forbid Fleſh to be eaten with the Blood.

But be it what it will, either Corporeal or Incorporeal, a Subſtance or an Accident, whether it dwell in the Head or in the Feet, Within or Without the Body, there is no Certainty of theſe Things, neither can we be aſſur'd, what will become of it after Death. Therefore 'tis in vain to diſquiet thy ſelf in Search of a Myſtery that is hid from Mortals. And equally fooliſh it will be, to frighten thy ſelf with an Imagination of Hooks, Gins, and ſuch like Chimera's, which thou ſuppoſeſt the Devil is buſy with to entrap thy Soul. 'Tis a Wonder thou art not afraid to ſleep, leſt he ſhould catch thee Napping, and ſteal thy Soul from thee. I wou'd fain know, what Sort of Tools he muſt uſe, to take hold of a Subſtance more thin and Imperceptible than a Shadow, or how he will be able to ſeize and run away with a Being Active and Free as Thought?

Couſin, ſerve God after the Manner of thy Forefathers: love thy Friends, pardon thy Enemies, be Juſt to all Men, and do no Injury to any Beaſt. If thou obſerveſt this Rule, thou may'ſt defy the Devil; for thy Soul is in Safe Cuſtody. God is nearer to thee, than thou art to thy ſelf. He is in the Center of Every Thing, and is Himself the Centre of All Things. In a Word, He is All in All.

of

Paris, 3d. of the 6th Moon,
of the Year 1658.

LETTER VII.

To Asis, Bassa.

NOW the Scenes are changed in Europe. Enemies are become Friends, and those who professed a Mutual Friendship, are at open Defiance. Constancy is a Vice in the Politicks, and a Dextrous Way of shifting from one Engagement to another; for Interest, is esteemed the only State Virtue.

I have already Intimated to the Divan, the War which broke out last Year between the Suedes and Danes. The latter begun it by Solemn Proclamation, sending a Herald at Arms to the Suedish Court, and dispatching Embassadors to all his Allies in Christendom, to give them an Account of his Proceedings. Now I shall entertain thee with a short Idea of this War. By which thou wilt comprehend, That the Danes are either much degenerated from the Valour of their Ancestors, who who formerly made the moſt terrible Figure of all the Nations in the North: Or elſe, they are leſs obliged to Fortune, who has not favoured them with ſo many Succeſſes and Triumphs of late, but rather expoſed 'em to the Inſults of their Enemies, and the Contempt of all Men.

When the King of Denmark firſt proclaimed this War, he had a fair Advantage of the Suedes, who at that time were ſorely entangled between the Polanders, Germans, and Moſcovites, and had more Need of helps than Hindrances. Yet King Guſtavus turning Part of his Forces into Holſtein, Schoneland, and Juitland, he took one Part after another, till he had over-run thoſe Provinces in the ſpace of Six Moons; And reduced the Danes to a Neceſſity of Compoſition, and that on ſuch Diſhonourable Terms, as renders them the Scorn of the Neighbouring Nations.

On the 13th of the 3d Moon, the Two Kings had an Interview near Copenhagen, the Capital City of Denmark: For, ſo far had the Fortune of the Suediſh Arms carried their Victories. They Eat and Drank together ſeveral Times, and Converſed privately ſome Hours. At laſt, a Firm Peace was Concluded between them, and they concerted the Meaſure of a Perfect Friendſhip.

But, before this, the Dane had been forced to yield up Schoneland, with Elſimberg, which commands Half the Baltick Sea. He ſurrendred alſo the Provinces of Blakin and Halland, Holland, with a very strong Castle; the Island of Burtholme; Ten Ships of War; and obliged himself to pay a Million of Dollars; and to maintain Four Thousand Horse and Foot in the King of Suedland's Service, and give Free Quarter to all the Swedish Forces till the 5th. Moon. These are such Dishonourable Articles, that the King of Denmark has quite lost himself in the esteem of all his Allies. They call him a Poor Spirited Prince, not Worthy of Support or Assistance.

In a Word, Serene Bassa, it is like to fare with him, as with other Unfortunate Men, who when they are once falling, every Body will help to throw them down. Therefore conserve thy Honour, as the only Bulwark of thy Interest and Life.

Paris 3d. of the 6th. Moon, of the Year 1658.

LET-

LETTER VIII.

To the Mufti.

BY the Faith of a True Believer, I swear, the Christians are Enemies to themselves, if they do not embrace the Project of a certain Jesuite. They are no Friends to their Messias, if they reject so Regular an Idea, so Reformed a Model of the Nazarene Empire, as this Sage has lately proposed to the Pope and the Cardinals.

He lays his Foundation very deep, and draws his Examples from the Practice of Peter, the Prince of the first Twelve Christian Caliphs, whom the Franks call the Apostles of Jesus the Son of Mary. For, according to their Traditions, the Messias before he ascended to Heaven, left an exact Battery of the Empire he designed to Establish on Earth. He divided this Empire into Twelve distinct Provinces, according to the Number of his Apostles or Vicars, assigning to each that Quarter of the World where he was to preside, as Moses had formerly Cantonized the Holy Region of Palestine among the Twelve Tribes, that descended from Jacob.

But the Happy Son of Mary, being a far Greater Prophet than Moses, or any that had gone before him, they say, he would not be content with diminutive Territories, or Dominions minions disproportionate to his Ineffable Descent and Original. Therefore he resolved on the Conquest of the Whole Earth; commanding his Vicegerents to disperse themselves through all Nations, according to a certain Method, and proclaim his Laws to every Creature on the Globe.

Venerable President of the Faithful, I relate these Things, as I receive them from the Mouths and Pens of Learned Christians, who may be presumed to know their own History. Thou wilt perhaps expect to hear of Armies immediately raised; of Camps, Battles and Sieges; of Devastations by Fire and Sword; Storming of Cities, and Famishing of the more impregnable Fortresses. In a Word, I believe thou lookest for a Relation of Campagnes and Victories, more Glorious than the Atchievements of the Roman Cæsars, more Fortunate than the Successes of Alexander the Great: but, I tell thee, all the Registers and Archives of the Primitive Christians cannot furnish us with any Memoirs of this Nature.

Their Gospel mentions no Warlike Undertakings, not so much as the drawing of a Sword by the Son of Mary, or any of his Followers, unless in a Private Rencounter, when Peter the Lieutenant of the Messias, enflamed with a Passion to see his Master betrayed by Judas, his Kabya, or Tefterdar, and rudely assaulted by Malchus, a Slave of the Jewish Mufti, the Valiant Apostle drew his Cimeter, and cut off the Fellow's Ear,

Believe

Believe me, O Myſterious Doctor of the Muſſulmans, I have perus'd the Four Hiſtories of the Life of Jeſus, written by thoſe who were Eye-witneſſes of his Actions; and I find indeed, that he once ſaid to them of his Retinue, I come not to ſend Peace on Earth, but a Sword. Yet by the Sequel it is evident, That when he examin'd what Weapons his Followers had, and they told him, but Two Swords; he ſeem'd to be well ſatisfy'd, ſaying, It is enough; Though a Moment before, he bid him among 'em that had no Sword ſell his Robe and buy One.

And I have ſeen a Diſpatch ſent by Paul, one of the Primitive Chriſtian Caliphs, to the Nazarenes at Epheſus; wherein he counſels them, to put on compleat Armour, as Helmet, Breaſt-plate, Shield, Buskins, Sword, and the Reſt.

Beſides theſe Paſſages, or ſuch like, there is no Military Diſcourſe throughout the Book of the Goſpel; much leſs any Relation of Battels, Sieges, or any Martial Exploits. And the Chriſtian Mollahs or Doctors, Interpret that Letter of Paul in a Myſtical Sence.

Wilt thou know then, how the Meſſias and his Apoſtles ſubdu'd the World; I tell thee, it was by Exemplary Virtue and Good Works, by Miracles and Evident Demonſtrations of a Supernatural Power aſſiſting them. For, they ſpake all Languages, yet were moſt of them Illiterate Perſons; They Cur'd the Deaf, the Blind, the Lame and the Paralytick, without the Methods of Surgery

or

or Physick, (They cast out Devil's; Rais'd the Dead: And Finally, perform'd such and so many Stupendous Actions, that the World became Captivated to their Doctrines and Laws, and willingly submitted to a Yoke, which seem'd to come from Heaven. With Divine Eloquence, and the Dint of Irresistible Reason, Peter the Prince of the Christian Caliphs, subdu'd the Minds of his Astonish'd Auditory, one Day in Jerusalem; so that before the Sun went down, he gain'd Five Thousand Proselytes. The Fame of these Things was soon spread through the Adjacent Countries, and diverse Remote Provinces; and the Number of the Converts was proportionably encreased. In a Word, all that Embrac'd the Faith of Jesus, surrendred both themselves and their Estates, to be entirely dispos'd of, at the Pleasure of the Apostles. So great and unreserv'd an Attach had they for the Vicars of their God.

Now the forenamed Jesuite considering these Things, and comparing the State of those Devout Times, with the Libertinism, Divisions, Wars and General Contempt of the Priesthood among the Christians of Succeeding Times, and especially in this present Age; attributes the Source of all these Evils to the Ill Conduct of the Apostles themselves, and their Successors in the Primitive Times, who did not sufficiently improve the Advantages they were possess'd of, when the Pious Multitude wou'd willingly have made 'em Lords of All Things. For, says he, by the

sam

ſame Methods and Reaſons might they have Claimed the Dominion o'er the Eſtates of Kings and Emperors themſelves, as o'er the Goods and Lands of the meaneſt Proſelyte: Since they were all equally Sons of the Church, and Subjects to the Diſcipline and Laws of Jeſus.

This Eccleſiaſtick Politician therefore mightily blames Pope Sylveſter, who ſate in the Chair of Peter, when Conſtantine the Great became a Chriſtian, being the Firſt of the Roman Emperors who embraced that Faith. He accuſes him, I ſay, of Weakneſs and a Meen Spirit, for accepting of that Donation, which to this Day is called the Patrimony of the Church, and comprehends all the Temporal Eſtate the Roman Pontifs can boaſt of. Whereas, he ought to have claimed an Entire Reſignation of the whole Roman Empire into his Hands, as Supreme Vicar of God on Earth. This would have been a Pattern, ſays he, to all the Kings and Princes of the Earth, who thought fit to turn Chriſtians. And ſo the Dominions of the World, had all fallen to the ſhare of the Prieſts.

Neither could it appear difficult, in his Opinion, to have reduced the Greateſt Monarchs, to ſuch a Forgetfulneſs and Contempt of their Royal Birth, and all the Potent Charms of a Crown: Since the ſame Rhetorick which perſuaded 'em to be Followers of the Meſſias, would have alſo convinc'd 'em of the Vanity of all Earthly Enjoyments; and of the Obligation they had to be Mortified.

fied, and to purſue their Claims to Diadems of a more Exalted Degree, the Ineffable Regalia of Paradiſe.

But ſince Things are thus in their Preſent State, and the Chriſtian Princes retain their Sovereignty, without any other Dependance on the Pope, ſaving in Matters purely Religious; this Jeſuite propoſes, That the Roman Pontifs would either firſt Reform their owe Lives and Court, to the Height of that Primitive and Apoſtolical Purity, which ſhined ſo eminently in the Earlieſt Governours of the Church; and by that means perſuade all the Monarchs in Chriſtendom to become their Subjects: Or elſe, compel them by Force to take the Order of Prieſthood, and ſo turn their Crowns into Mitres, their Kingdoms into Eccleſiaſtick Commonwealths, where all the Publick Offices of State, Seats of Judicature, and in Fine, the whole Syſtem of the Civil and Politick Adminiſtration ſhould be managed by the Prieſts, in a Subordinate Dependance one of another, according as their ſeveral Characters required. By which means, all Chriſtendom would be ſoon United into one Eccleſiaſtick Empire, whereof the Pope ſhould be the Supreme Head, in Temporals as well as Spirituals.

What I have related, is not only this Man's Private Project, but the Univerſal Aim of his Whole Order. And Thouſands of other Prieſts and Dervifes are Caballing, in all the Courts and Countries of Europe, to bring it to paſs.

Venerable

Venerable Eſad, if God ſhould ſuffer their Contrivance to take Effect; it is to be feared, our Wars with the Chriſtians would be as Expenſive and Troubleſome, if not more Fatal to the Muſſulman Intereſt, than when theſe Infidels, formerly laying aſide their Private Feuds, banded together to Conquer the Holy Land.

Paris, 25th of the 7th Moon of the Year, 1658.

LETTER IX.

To Abdel Melec Muli Omar, Preſident of the College of Sciences at Fez.

I Received the Pacquet of Venerable Import, containing Sacred Counſels and Acceptable Intelligence; repleniſhed with Noble Memoirs and Illuſtrious Remarks, Sage Precepts, and Refined Improvements in Philoſophy and the Myſterious Science of Nature.

With abundance of Affection and Joy I read the Character of Muſu Abu'l Yahyan, and the Encomium of his Wiſdom and Virtues. May a Conſtellation of ſuch Lights always adorn that Renowed College, and from thence diſperſe their Learned Influence and Rays, not only through Africa, but over all the Earth: That Fez may be Numbered among the Cities whose Fame is ſweet; That it may be ranked with Jeruſalem the Holy, Maſre the Ancient, Medina Talnabi the Chaſt, and the Salutiferous Babylon; acquiring a Peculiar Title of Honour, an Attribute worthy of Reſpect, when Men ſhall every where call it, Fez, the Mother of Sciences.

My Soul has been very Inquiſitive and Reſtleſs for many Years, and I think this is owing to my Captivity in Palermo. For, before that, whilſt I lived at Eaſe in the Seraglio, basking under the Warmer Influence of Royal Majeſty, the Sacred Preſence of the Grand Signior, who like the Sun gives Motion, Heat, and Life to all things; I ne'er regarded Books, or once applied my Mind to ſtudy any Thing, but how to acquit my ſelf in my Station, and ſtrengthen my Intereſt at the Court: Eſteeming all other Learning as Barbarous, which conduced not to this End.

Foreign Hiſtories and Languages, were Equally Contemptible to me: I thought it beneath a Muſſulman Courtier, to give his Tongue and Mind the Fatigue of any other Dialect, ſave the Perſian, Arabick, and Turkiſh: Or to load his Memory with the Records of other Nations, deſigned to be the Slaves of True Believers.

As to the Speculative Sciences, I was Naturally deſirous enough of Knowledge. But I either had not Leiſure, or wanted Books and other Advantages of Study. So that all the Knowledge I could then boaſt of, conſiſted only in ſome looſe Notions of Logick and Metaphyſicks, which I had got by reading an Old Arabick Manuſcript. And I thought my ſelf Hiſtorian enough, after I had peruſed the Annals of the Ottoman Empire, and now and then caſt an Eye on the Turkiſh Tranſlation of Herodotus and Plutarch.

Knowledge

'Tis true indeed, by Converſing frequently with the Greeks, I ſoon learned their Vulgar Dialect; But this is far from the Polite Language of the Ancient Grecians: And a Page of the Treaſury, taught me the Rudiments of Sclavonian; which afterwards I learn'd more Perfectly, hoping it would be of ſome Service to me one Time or other.

All theſe were very Superficial Accompliſhments; yet I thought my ſelf Happy enough, without ſearching any farther. The Pleaſures and Gayeties of a Courtly Life, took from me the Edge and Guſt, with which I have ſince purſued more Solid Studies, and looked into the Wiſdom of the Ancients.

But when once Misfortune had changed the Scene of my Life, and inſtead of the Honourable Poſt I had in the Grand Signior's Service, Fate had render'd me a Miſerable Abject Slave in Sicily; I began to grow very Thoughtful and Penſive. The Continual Drudgery and Labour I underwent, ſoon mortified my Former Paſſions, and weaned me from all Hopes of Worldly Honour. And the Cruel Stripes I daily received from that Barbarous Infidel, my Maſter, ſo broke my Spirits, that Servitude became Familiar to me; and despairing to be Happy in this World, I was only Ambitious to be Wise.

I grew very Contemplative: And having acquainted my self with an honest Carpenter in the Town where we lived, who had a great many Books in's Custody, he lent me several Choice Treatises; and I borrowed all the Hours I could from Sleep, to peruse them with Attention and Profit. That Carpenter pity'd my Condition, and did me many Good Offices of Friendship, without other Hopes of Reward, save what he expected from God. By his Means, I contracted a Familiarity with Two or Three Learned Men, who spared no Pains to Instruct me in the Roman and Ancient Greek Languages, as also in the Principles of Philosophy. My Master often beat me for this, attributing the Neglect of his Business, to my Bookishness (as he called it) and keeping the Priests Company. But all his Severity, could not abate my Ardent Thirst after Knowledge. I still continued Studying at certain Seasons, till the Happy Hour of my Redemption; and then I frequented the Academies, Ever since which Time, I have neglected no Opportunities of Improving my Reason: Yet find my self at this Day, much in the Dark. There appears no Certainty, in any Science but the Mathematicks. All the Rest are entangled with a Thousand Controversies and Riddles: Which has made me turn Sceptick in most Things: Only I retain an Inviolable Faith for the Alcoran, and the Book of Prophetick Doctrines and Traditions. Next to these, I pay a Profound Respect to the Writings of Porphyry the Philisopher, who seems to approach neareſt to Reason of all the Ancient Sages. His True Name was the same as thine [Melech] which thou knoweſt, in the Syriack signifies [King.] Whence his Tutor Longinus taking Occasion from the Usual Colour of Royal Robes, called him Porphyrius, which in the Greek signifies, One clad in Purple. He was born at Tyre, the Metropolis of the Ancient Phœnicians. His Pedigree was Noble, and his Education Generous. Nature also had formed him for a Sage, and Fortune favoured him with Anvantages enough. For besides his First Tutor, whom I have already mentioned (who was the Greateſt Grammarian and Orator of his Time;) Porphyry went to Rome, where he gained the Friendship of Plotinus: And that Philosopher accomplished him in the Perfection of all Science. So that he had Power over the Dæmons, and expelled the Genius Atan, which Infeſted certain Baths in Rome. In a Word, his Doctrines appeared Divine, and his Actions more than Humane. Yet he himself before his Death, publish'd a Reverse of his Former Writings: Which is a sufficient Argument, That there is no Stability in the Thoughts of Mortals.

Book

Therefore, since the Wiſeſt of Men contradict themselves and turn Scepticks, tell me, O Oracle of the Age, Why may not I?

Paris, 13th. of the 8th. Moon;
of the Year 1658.

LETTER X.

To Murat, Baſſa.

THere has been ſomething lately tranſacted between the French and the Engliſh, which ſeems a Myſtery. No body here underſtands the Meaning of it, but the very Privado's of the Cabinet: Yet every one gueſſes, 'tis a Fetch of Mazarini's Wit. That Miniſter has more Meanders in his Brains, than an Old Turkiſh Gameſter at Cheſs; who forſees no leſs than Nine Unavoidable Conſequences, before he makes One bold Motion: And, to be ſure, the laſt ſhall be to his own Advantage. In a Word, Dunkirk, the Strongeſt and moſt Important Sea-Town of all the Weſt, is ſurrendered by the Spaniards to the French; and by theſe, as an Earneſt of Friendſhip, is put into the Hands of the Engliſh.

The little Politicians of the City, are amaz'd at it; and the Greateſt Machiavil's of the Court, either cannot, or will not inform 'em of the True Secret.

You ſhall ſee Two or Three Grave Citizens brooding Thoughts together over a Box of Polvita, and ſneezing out their Sentiments, without Reſerve. Yet after all their Wiſe Conſult, they part as great Fools as they met, and only ſatisfie themſelves, with Nodding

Wiſdom

Wiſdom to each other, at the laſt Congè; wherein is comprehended, the whole Syſtem of the Politicks.

It was generally thought to be ſome Extraordinary Overture this Court would make to the Engliſh, when a little before the Surrender of Dunkirk, the Duke of Crequi, Firſt Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber, and Monſieur Mancini, the Cardinal's Nephew, were ſent with a Splendid Retinue of French Nobles to England. Every Body gueſs'd ſome Surprizing Action would follow; and that it muſt needs be a Myſtery of Grand Importance, which could not be truſted to Perſons of leſs Note than the Two Chief Favourites of the Cardinal Miniſter. And now 'tis come out, they know not what to make on't. Neither can I poſſibly learn as yet, the true Reaſon of putting the Engliſh in Poſſeſſion of ſuch a Town as this, which commands all the Northern Seas, and has coſt ſo much Sweat and Blood to take from the Spaniards. I have ſet Oſmin the Dwarf to Work, and laid Traps to get the Secret from ſeveral other Courtiers. But, I might as well have attempted to find out the Body of Moſes, which cauſed a Quarrel between Michael and the Devil. Time perhaps will diſcover the Secret. And I dare at preſent conclude, that the Engliſh are the only Nation in Europe, whoſe Friendſhip the French think worth Courting.

The King has been very Ill of a Fever, and in great Danger of his Life: But is now recovered again; which occaſions Abundance of Real Joy among his Friends and Loyal Subjects. As for the Reſt, they know how to counterfeit.

I had almoſt forget to tell thee, that the Spaniards endeavouring to relieve Dunkirk, were encounter'd by the French, and Routed: About Two Thouſand of their Men being killed, and as many taken Priſoners.

Sage Baſſa, the Succeſſes of this Monarch are ſo Conſtant, that they have given Birth to a Proverb: For when they would encourage any Man's Hopes, or make a ſtrong Aſſeveration, they uſually ſay, As ſure as the Great Lewis will get a Town or Two in Flanders this Campagne.

Mareſchal Turenne is a Brave General, and the French Victories are in a great Meaſure owing to his Conduct. He is very Expeditious in his Undertakings. There were but a few Days between the Surrender of Dunkirk, and his taking of Bergen, Furnes, and Dixmude, Three ſtrong Fortreſſes in Flanders. And, 'tis thought, 'twill not be long before he takes others.

The French King is in a Fair Way to the Empire of the Weſt. But this will not be for the Intereſt of the Grand Signior. For, then he will have a New Enemy, of an Old Friend, and one more Potent than he had before. Yet, Deſtiny over-rules All Things.

Paris, 13th. of the 8th. Moon,
of the Year 1658.

LETTER

LETTER XI.

To Mahammed, the Eremit of Mount Uriel in Arabia.

I Have often troubled thee with Importunate Addreſſes, O Matchleſs Mortal; Permit me once more to unboſom my Thoughts, as to my Confeſſor, or rather as to an Oracle.

Surely, this Hour the Stars of my Nativity ſuffer a Mighty Change. I ſeem to my ſelf, like one newly awak'd out of a deep Sleep, or from the Deluſions of a long Dream: For, ſo methinks, have my Paſt Years gone away like a Night, wherein my Labouring Spirit has encounter'd with Nothing but Phantaſms, Viſions, and Darkneſs.

My Infant Days I eſteem the moſt Happy, when my Ignorance of Vice had greater Influence on my Actions, and preſerv'd me more free from Blemiſh, than could afterwards all my Acquir'd Knowledge of the Precepts and Maxims of Virtue. For no ſooner was I enjoin'd the Study of Morality, and taught to diſtinguiſh between Good and Evil, but my Curioſity prompted me to examine the Nature of the Latter, more cloſely than by bare Speculation. I found my ſelf more Forcibly carry'd away by a Secret Pleaſure, to make Experiment of what was Forbidden, than to practiſe what was Commanded: So prone is Man to be jealous of his Tutors, and to ſuſpect thoſe Laws as Impoſitions, which put a Reſtraint on his Native Liberty.

to

Beſides this, there are certain Genial Inclinations in every Mortal, which the Youngeſt, and he that is in his Nonage, thinks he has as much right to gratify, as the Wiſeſt Senior. Nor can any Reaſon eaſily perſuade him to part with this Privilege, but under the Notion of being highly wrong'd; ſince every Man Naturally places his Intereſt and Happineſs, in purſuing the Motions of his own Will.

'Tis true, I never was prone to any Enormous Vices, or ſuch as for their Singularity, would make the moſt harden'd Libertine bluſh, did he practiſe them to the Knowledge of Men.

I ever had an Unconquerable Abhorrence for thoſe Specifick Acts of Laſciviouſneſs, which ought not to be nam'd, and whoſe very Idea makes the Thought recoil: Yet am Naturally Amorous, and cannot but pay to Beauty, the Sentiments and Paſſions which are due from Platonick Love. I admire Symmetry and Elegance, where-ever I diſcern them; and can ſtand gazing whole Hours together, on a Flower, a Tree, or a Peacock. I am Enamour'd with the Brightneſs of the Sun; and like another Endymion, I languiſh for a more Intimate Acquaintance with the Moon. The Leſſer Beauties of the Night, the Stars, enflame me with a Thouſand Paſſions. I make my Court to the whole Hoaſt of Heaven, yet I hope commit no Idolatry. In fine, I am in Love with the Univerſe; and die hourly, when I contemplate the Glory of that Tranſcendent Eſſence, which is the Root and Source of All Things.

in

Theſe are Paſſions not unbecoming a Muſſulman. But I have alſo ſome Emotions for Beautiful Women, more Violent than all the Reſt, more Dangerous and Fatal. Tell me, O Pious Sylvan, how I ſhall gratifie my Love, without offending Virtue, or the Gravity of a Man?

Theſe Creatures ſeem to be Created for our Perplexity; ſince a Man can neither well be Happy with, or without 'em. They are Perfect Riddles: And to love 'em, or hate 'em too much, is an Equal Soleciſm. 'Twere a Queſtion worthy of a Philoſopher, Whether this Sex, among all the Neceſſary Good Offices they do us, were not ſent into the World as Spies and Trepans, to obſerve our Counſels and Actions: And by mixing Smiles with Frowns, Flatteries with Reproaches, Sullenneſs with more Obliging Favours; to keep us in a Perpetual Maze and Labyrinth, leſt the Aſpiring Wit of Men ſhould, if left to themſelves, attempt ſomething more Audacious than the Poets feign of the Sons of Titan, or the Written Law Records of Nimrod and his Companions, who built the Tower of Babel.

But, whether they be Spies, or Faithful Aſſiſtants, Enemies, or Friends, I tell thee plainly, I have not been able to forbear Loving 'em exceſſively. And this is Part of the Dream or Trance, out of which I am juſt now Awak'd.

Another

Another Scene, is that of Honour. This is a Phantome alſo, a mere Vapour, a Shadow. I never hunted after Glory, nor courted Popular Applauſe. Yet being entruſted with the Sublime Secrets, and commanded to ſerve the Grand Signior in this Station, I would fain acquit my ſelf without Diſgrace. Nay, like other Mortals in ſuch a Poſt, I would willingly have the Smiles of my Sovereign, and the Careſſes of the Happy Miniſters who ſerve him, if it ſhall be my Lot ever to return to the Seraglio. Nothing appears to me more Terrible, than at ſuch a Time to encounter with Rugged, Furrow'd Viſages, or Cold and Faint Embraces of my Fellow-Slaves.

This puts me upon a Thouſand Inquietudes; makes me ſwear to Contradictions; utter Lyes and Blaſphemies, which would turn the Devil to a Saint for Fear. In a Word, I ſtumble at no Vice or Immorality, which may promote the Cauſe I am engag'd in. And all this for the ſake of a Fair Character at the Port: Whilſt I'm cajoling my ſelf as well as others with a Perſuaſion, that 'tis only on the Score of Honeſty, and to acquit my ſelf a Good Man. Thus, I purſue a Blaſt, a Bubble, the Idea of Nothing, mere Vanity and an Empty Dream. And 'tis harder for me to ſhake of this Enchantment, than that of Love.

Yet, all this while, I have not taken the French Method to gain Honour. I never was Guilty of Oppreſſion and Cruelty, nor bath'd my Hands in Human Blood. No Widow or Orphan

Orphan mourns for what I've taken from 'em. Nor did I ever Dragoon any Body into Compliance with Reaſon. All the Parts I've Acted in this Nature, were Defenſive; Pure Efforts of Self-Preſervation: Which, thou know'ſt, is a Principle Natural to all Men, and even to the Worms of the Earth. Theſe little Reptiles, when they're trampled on, will turn again. And nothing more do I, unleſs in the Sultan's Cauſe.

This puts me in Mind of my Integrity: For I muſt tell thee my Virtues as well as my Vices. Neither Arabia, nor all the Eaſt, have ever brought forth a Man more true to his Truſt, than Honeſt Loyal Mahmut. I will for ever boaſt of this, in an Age ſo full of Treachery. This alone will carry me ſafe to Paradiſe, in ſpight of all the Mollahs. As for the Reſt, they're only Venial Sins, eaſily dropt off on the Bridge of Tryal. And ſo long as no Body can ſay, I've betray'd my Maſter's Secrets, I'm ſafe as an Angel that is not oblig'd to ſtand Sentinel at the Loweſt Poſt of Heaven: For, there he's within Gun-ſhot of the Devil.

Juſt as I drew my Pen from that Word, a ſuddain Noiſe in the Streets call'd me to the Window. Where turning my Eyes from the Earth to the Moon and Stars (for 'twas a very ſerene Sky) I obſerved a ſmall ſwift Cloud to glide along from South to North, much in Appearance like a Bale of Silk. It cleft the Element like a Sly Arab Thief, that ſwims for Booty on the River Tigris. Wondring dring at this, when all the Firmament was Clear, and not another Cloud above the Horizon; I ſoon concluded, 'twas the Chariot of ſome Airy God, a Mercury or Meſſenger, ſent with ſpeedy News, to the High Lords, Commanders of the Artick Regions; to bid 'em be upon their Guard, or ſome ſuch weighty Matter. Perhaps, thought I, a War is commenc'd between the Spirits of the Poles. Or, it may be, King Æolus has ſent a Summons to the Northern Winds, being reſolved to play ſome Royal Pneumatick Freaks upon the Sea.

In good Earneſt, it made me reflect on our Ignorance of the Laws and Conſtitutions of the Elements. It put me in Mind of the Fogs and Miſts, which ſometimes envelop the Globe in Darkneſs; on purpoſe, for ought we know, to hinder us from ſeeing what is tranſacting at ſuch Seaſons in the Higher Regions of the Air. The Spirits of thoſe Serener Tracts, may then be Frolicking in Viſible Forms, Celebrating Solemn Feſtivals, and kindling all the Meteors of the Upper Welkin, as Natural Fire-Works and Illuminations, not fit for Mortals to behold, leſt we ſhould learn too much, and grow as Wiſe as they. However, it made me very Contemplative, to ſee a ſingle Solitary Cloud thus glide along the Air: And I could have wiſh'd for Wings to purſue its Motions, becauſe the Appearance was not Common.

Thou that haſt meaſur'd the whole Frame of Nature, and taken the True Dimenſions

of

of the World; that haſt penetrated into the Secrets of the Elements, and art always buſy'd in the moſt Sage and Solid Scrutinies; wilt ſmile at the Vanity of Common Mortals, ſuch as I, who when we are Unintelligible to our ſelves, yet preſume to comprehend the Ways of the Omnipotent, who is Perfect in Knowledge.

As for me, who have ſtudy'd in the Academies, and read Ariſtotle, Avicen, Plotinus, Averroes, with other Philoſophers; I eſteem my ſelf ſtill but at the Bottom of Plato's Cave, Converſing with Shadows, miſtaken in every Thing, but the Idea of thy Sanctity and Immenſe Wiſdom, which is Imprinted on my Soul, as thoſe which the Philoſophers call Firſt Principles, becauſe they are Self-Evident.

I deſign'd to have ſaid more to thee, but a ſudden Indiſpoſition and Extreme Faintneſs, has taken away my Spirits. My Limbs tremble, my Head is giddy, my Heart fails me. In a Word, I ſeem like one between a Mortal and a Ghoſt.

Paris, 29th of the 8th Moon
of the Year 1658.

LET-

LETTER XII.

To Achmet Padiſhani Culligiz, Baſſa.

THY Sur-Name argues thee a Favourite at the Seraglio: And for that Reaſon, I know thou art accuſtom'd to receive Infinite Submiſſions and Flatteries. But I muſt be as blunt with thee, as I was with the New Mufti, when I Congratulated his Acceſſion to the Chief Patriarchate. I told that Prince of the Muſſelman Prelates, that I had no Encouragement to welcome him to a Dignity, which though in it ſelf Sacred and Inviolable, yet could not ſecure him from the Perſecutions of Popular Envy, any more than it did his Predeceſſor. And the ſame I muſt ſay to thee.

Darniſh Mehemet, Baſſa, is fallen a Victim to the Rage of the Multitude; and thou haſt got his Seat on the Bench. May'ſt thou enjoy it long, and never be Mob'd out of thy Honour and Life as he was. Some Years ago he forbad me to write any more to him. What his Reaſon was, I know not, neither did I ever enquire. However, I obey'd his Injunction; being Indifferent to whom I ſend my Intelligence, provided I do the Grand Signior any Service, For, to that End am I plac'd here,

Illuſtrious

Illuſtrious Baſſa, I ſhall now acquaint thee with Two the moſt Principal Points of News ſtirring in Europe. One is, the Election of Leopoldus Ignatius Joſephus, King of Hungary and Bohemia, to the German Empire. They have been canvaſing this Buſineſs Eleven Moons: And at laſt the Auſtrian Faction carried it, This was done on the 8th of the 7th Moon. And he was ſolemnly Crown'd on the 22d of the ſame. This has height'ned the Quarrel between the Duke of Bavaria, and the Prince Palatine. The Latter was ſo far tranſported with Paſſion at the Diet of Frankford, that he threw a Standiſh of Ink at the Bavarian Embaſſador: Which is reſented as an Unpardonable Affront. And the Duke is marching with an Army to revenge it, or demand Satisfaction. The Elector of Mentz has deny'd him Paſſage through his Principality. And they are all like to be embroil'd in a Civil War about it. This is no bad News for the Muſſulmans.

But that which makes yet a greater Noiſe is the Death of Oliver, the Protector of the Engliſh Commonwealth; who whilſt Living, was the Terror of all Europe. The Superſtitious, and ſuch as regard Signs, ſay, This was preſag'd Three Moons ago, when a Great Whale, Nine Times as long as a tall Man, was taken in a River of England, near the Capital City Forty Miles from the Sea. I know not whether theſe Kind of Obſervations are worthy of Credit. Yet, it ſeems, the Annals of that Nation take Notice, That the Unuſual uſual Appearance of a Whale ſo far within Land, has always Prognoſticated ſome Mighty Change. Perhaps, the Fate of Illuſtrious Perſonnages, affects Nature with a more than ordinary Paſſion, puts the Elements into a Diſorder, and inſpires the Brutes with Sympathy.

We are aſſured, that on the Day of this Prince's Death, and at the very Hour of his Departure, there was ſo Violent a Tempeſt of Wind, Rain, Hail, Thunder, and Lightning, as had never been known by any Man then alive in that Nation. Which ſome Interpreted to his Diſhonour, as if he were a Magician, or at leaſt a very Wicked Man: And that this Hurricane was rais'd by the Devils, who tranſported his Soul to Hell. Whilſt others affirm'd this Mix'd Storm, to be only the Sighs and Tears of Nature, the Mournful Paſſions of the Guardian Spirits of England, for the Loſs of ſo Great and Fortnnate a Hero: And that the very Inanimate Beings Condol'd his Death. As for me, I look on all theſe Things as pure Accidents, the Effects of Chance. I have an Equal Opinion of another Circumſtance, much obſerv'd both by his Enemies and Friends; That he died on the ſame Day, whereon he had formerly gain'd ſome Notable Victories. The One, deſcanting on this to his Reproach, the Other drawing from it Arguments of Honour. 'Tis difficult to ſay any Thing of him, without appearing Partial. He had Great Virtues, and no Leſs Vices. He was a Valiant General, and wiſe

States-

Stateſman: Yet a Traytor to his Sovereign. As for Religion, though he profeſs'd himſelf a Zealot, yet 'tis thought he was as indifferent as other Princes; who for Reaſons of State, and to pleaſe their People, make a Shew of Piety, but in their Hearts Adore no other Gods but Fortune and Victory.

He was eſteem'd one of the Greateſt Politicians of this Age; and none could match him but Mazarini. Yet I cannot but ſmile when I call to Mind, how both theſe Eminent Stateſmen were cheated this Year, by Two or Three Fugitives.

A certain French Captain named Gentilot, that had ſerved under the States of Holland in the Wars, and on that Account had often paſs'd through the Sea-Towns in Flanders; obſerv'd a Weakneſs in one Part of the Walls of Oſtend, by which the Town might eaſily be ſurpriz'd. At his Return to Paris, he acquainted Cardinal Mazarini with this; and gave him ſo great Encouragement, that the Cardinal reſolved to try ſome Stratagem in Order to gain that Important Place, without the Coſt and Hazards of a Formal Siege.

To this End, he commands Gentilot to ſeek out ſome Perſons fit to be engag'd in the Plot: Men of Reſolution, Conduct, and Secrecy. This Captain therefore knowing Two or Three Fugitives in Paris, who were forced to fly out of Flanders to ſave their Lives, having committed Murders, and other Crimes againſt the Spaniſh Government; breaks the Buſineſs to them, promiſing Mountains of Gold, if they would aſſiſt in carrying it on. They

They ſeem'd to embrace his Propoſals with Abundance of Readineſs, and were introduced into the Cardinal's Cabinet. Where that Miniſter being ſatisfy'd in their Characters, and the Offers they made to ſerve him in this Affair; ſeconded the Promiſes which Gentilot had made him, with many Additional Encouragements. In a Word, they conſulted together frequently; were late every Night in the Cardinal's Lodgings: And at laſt, having adjuſted all the Neceſſary Meaſures that were to be taken; the Fugitives were diſpatch'd away into England, with Letters from Mazirini to Oliver, the Engliſh Protector. Wherein he acquainted him with the Deſign, requiring the Aſſiſtance of ſome Engliſh Ships to tranſport Men into the Haven of Oſtend.

Theſe Agents went accordingly, but with a Reſolution to put a Trick both on the Cardinal and the Protector; and by doing their Country ſo Conſiderable a Service as the ſaving this Town, to merit a Repeal of the Sentence pronounc'd againſt 'em, that ſo they might return Home in Peace, and enjoy their Eſtates and Native Liberty.

Oliver received 'em very kindly, and embraced the Motion with ſome Warmth. But upon Second Thoughts, try'd to out-bribe Mazarini, and hire theſe Perſons for himſelf. Oſtend was too ſweet a Bait in his Eye, to let it ſo tamely fall into the Hands of the French, for want of a few larger Promiſes, and Offers of Gold. Wherefore he ply'd theſe Agents briskly briskly with all the Effectual Oratory he could, to win 'em over to his own Separate Intereſt; engaging to beſtow Great Preferments on 'em in England, with Two Hundred Thouſand Sequins, as ſoon as the Buſineſs was accompliſhed.

The three Flemings deſired no better Sport, than thus to cajole Two the Ableſt Stateſmen in Europe. They poſſeſſed Oliver with an Entire Belief of their Zeal and Fidelity in his Service: And it was agreed on between 'em, to hold Mazarini in Play, and that Oliver ſhould ſend him an Anſwer, refuſing to meddle in an Intrigue which ſeemed to carry ſo little Probability of Succeſs.

From England their Agents paſſed over into Zealand. It having been ſo concluded before they parted from Cardinal Mazarini; that ſo they might there gain more Confederates, and lay all the Neceſſary Trains to bring this Intrigue to the deſired Iſſue. But, Inſtead of doing either the Protector or Cardinal Mazarini this Service, they went immediately, and revealed the whole Secret to the Governor of Flanders.

He having duly examined all Circumſtances, and being ſatisfied in the Truth of their Relations, and in their Loyalty to the King of Spain; commanded them to proceed in deluding both the French and the Engliſh, as long as they could, with fair Hopes of accompliſhing their Aims. Whilſt he took Care to ſecure Oſtend, and other Parts of Flanders, from all Attempts of this Nature.

In

In fine, the Protector falling off again, being frighted by Cardinal Mazarini's Threats, who had diſcovered his Under-Hand Dealing; theſe Agents applied themſelves cloſe to the French, who were now made ſo much more Eager, by Oliver's Deſign to Interlope 'em. They ſpun out the Intrigue ſeveral Moons, brought the French King to ſign Articles, and to paſs his Word for the Payment of near a Million of Gold; cajol'd his General in Flanders, and at one Time made him believe, 'Twas his Intereſt to lie ſtill for Six Weeks together, when all the World expected he would purſue his Conqueſts in that Province. At another Time, cauſed him to march with ſo much Precipitation, when the Ways were Unpaſſable, that he was forced to leave moſt of his Cannon, and a Thouſand Waggons plunged in the deep Roads, with the Loſs of Three Thouſand Men, who were either drown'd or ſtarv'd: And all this for the ſake of gaining Oſtend. When after all, they were not only cheated of their Hopes in that Point, but moſt ſhamefully expoſed to the Deriſion and Contempt of all Europe. For Cardinal Mazarini repoſed an Entire Confidence in the Fidelity of his Flemiſh Agents. So that whatſoever they propoſed, as an Expedient to compaſs the Deſign, was a Law. Hence it was, that the French General in Flanders received Expreſs Orders to embarque part of his Army on certain Veſſels that lay before Dunkirk, and on a prefixed Day to ſail into the Haven of Oſtend, there ro to Land his Men, and take Poſſeſſion of the Town, in the Name of his Maſter: Being made to believe, That the Gates would be opened to him, and that the Spaniſh Gariſon ſhould march out in his Sight.

All this was carried on with ſo much Artifice and ſubtle Management, that when he entred the Haven with Ten Veſſels, he thought himſelf ſecure of the Place: Yet no ſooner Landed his Men to the Number of Fifteen Hundred, but they Thund'red upon them ſuch Vollies of Great and Small Shot, from the Walls, that Two Hundred of them fell immediately, as many threw down their Arms, and the Citizens making a Vigorous Sally, the Reſt were either Kill'd or taken Priſoners, he himſelf not eſcaping that Misfortune.

By this thou may'ſt diſcern, how eaſie 'tis for an Agent of any Prince, to embaraſs his Maſter's Affairs: And, that a Publick Miniſter can never commit a greater or more dangerous Error, than in being too Credulous.

Serene Baſſa, let not Mahmut's Name ſound harſh at the Port, nor his Honour be traduced by Sycophants: Since his Loyalty is Proof againſt all Temptations, And this the Miniſters of the Divan know by Twenty Years Experience.

Paris 5th. of the 10th Moon of the Year 1658.

LETTER XIII.

To Peſteli Hali his Brother, Maſter of the Grand Signior's Cuſtoms at Conſtantinople.

I Have receiv'd a Diſpatch from our Couſin Iſouf. He has been in a Cold Region, within the Artick Circle, but now is at Stockholm in Sueden. The Parts he has viſited, are the Farthermoſt Tracts of our Continent to the North. They may be call'd, The Territories of Night and Darkneſs: For they have but One Day in a Whole Year. The Sun appears but Once above their Horizon, during his Annual Progreſs through the Zodiack. Yet, he makes them amends by the long continued Light he affords them at that Seaſon: For, that One Day is without the Miracle of Joſhua, prolong'd the ſpace of Four, Five, or Six Moons, according to the Proportionate Diſtance of each Country from the Pole.

Iſouf relates Strange Things of thoſe Dark Countries, and ſuch as ſeem almoſt to ſurpaſs Credit, were they not confirm'd by very grave and Learned Writers. He ſays, that in ſome Parts of Norway, no Tree is to be ſeen, by Reaſon of the Violent Force of the Winds, which blow down all before 'em, carrying away even the Roofs of Houſes, and ſcattering them at a great Diſtance. So that the Inhabitants bitants are forced to dwell in Dens and Caves, and burn the Bones of Fiſhes, for want of better Fuel: Since it is Impoſſible for any Plant to grow in thoſe Parts. Neither can Men travel ſafely on Horſes, or a Foot, at certain Tempeſtuous Seaſons. For, the Wind will either throw both Horſe and Man to the Ground, or catch 'em up into the Air.

But when he deſcribes the horrible Coldneſs of theſe Regions, the very Idea of it is enough to make one quake. He ſays, Cold is an Active Quality, and Reigns under the North Pole, as in its proper Kingdom or Centre, from whence it darts its freezing Rays through the Earth. Yet, others are of opinion, that Cold is only a Privation of Heat, a bare Paſſive Diſpoſition of the Elements; and therefore more ſenſibly felt in thoſe Climates that are fartheſt from the warm influences of the Sun, whoſe Beams give Life and Vigor to All Things. Be it how it will, its Effects are very remarkable in theſe Northern Regions.

All the Rivers, Lakes, and Seas there, are frozen up during the Winter. Men, Horſes Waggons, Coaches, and even whole Armies paſs as commonly over the Ice, as before Ships Sailed there, or as we Travel o'er the Firm Land. And laſt Winter, the Baltick Sea was the Road of Ice, over which the King of Sueden marched with his Army of Horſe and Foot into Zealand, to proſecute the War in thoſe Parts. They alſo raiſe Strong Forts of Snow, able to ſuſtain the Battery of Bullets, and Engines of War with all the Violence of the Fierceſt Aſſaults. They build Carvanſera's on the Frozen Seas and Lakes, for the Convenience of Travellers; and ſet up Branches of Firr or Juniper, as Marks to diſtinguiſh the Holes and Fiſſures of the Ice, from that which is ſolid and ſecure; For there are High-ways on thoſe Congealed-waters; and Officers appointed to ſurvey them, and take all Neceſſary Orders for the Security of Travellers. And ſometimes they fight Pitch'd Battels on the Frozen Element.

Our Kinſman alſo has made Curious Remarks on the Triumphal Obelisks, and Funeral Monuments of Ancient Hero's among the Goths and Suedes: For thoſe Nations boaſt of Giants and Famous Warriours. Theſe Monuments, thô of Stone, and Exquiſitely Shaped, yet were never cut by the Hand of Man; but are as ſo many ſplinters of Rocks and Mountains, torn from the main Body by the Violence of Earthquakes, Thunders, or the like motions of Nature; And falling down in the Forms of Pyramids, and other Artificial Figures were of Old ſet up by the Graves of Giants and other renowned Perſons. Having alſo Inſcriptions on them, ſignifying the Particular Hero who there lies buried. Such as theſe,

I Uſſo,

I Uſſo, Fighting in Defence of my Country, with my own Hand Kill'd Thirty Two Giants, And at laſt being kill'd by the Giant Rolvo, my Body lies here.

And,

I Ingolvas, that Subdu'd all Oppreſſors, aud Defended the Poor and Weak; Now grown Old, Poor and Weak my ſelf; yet having my Sword girt to my Thigh, am forc'd to yield to Death (who Conquers All Things) ana to go down into this Sepulchre, which I prepar'd for my Laſt Retreat.

It ſeems, there are Infinite Numbers of theſe Tombs all over the Deſarts, Mountains, and Vallies of the North, which is an Argument, That however Contemptible theſe People may ſeem to the True Believers; Yet they have not been wanting in Valiant Men and Hero's. Doubtleſs, God has diſpens'd his Virtues and Graces to Men of all Nations: He is not Partial in his Gifts. We ought to Praiſe him in the Beginning and End of all our Actions. And if we contemplate his Honour in the Middle of our Affairs, we ſhall not do amiſs; Since, as he is the Firſt and the Laſt of the Univerſe, ſo he is the Center of Every Thing.

I had not theſe Relations only from Iſouf, but out of the Hiſtorians themſelves, who write of theſe Countries: Yet our Kinſman informs me of ſome Things, which are omitted by thoſe Authors. Every Traveller is Singular in his Obſervations: For, all Men have not the ſame Genius. And thy Journal of the Eaſt, abounds with Remarks which are not common in other Writers.

Brother, if I may adviſe thee, it ſhall be, to do nothing by Imitation; but purſue the Dictates of thy own Sence, and the Peculiar Bent of thy Soul. For whatever is forced and affected, is Nauſeous.

Paris, 16th. of the 12th. Moon,
of the Year 1658.

LET-

LETTER XIV.

To Zeidi Alamanzi, a Merchant in Venice.

THE Kaimacham has informed me, that thou art appointed to ſucceed Adonai the Jew in Italy. He has alſo acquainted me with other Matters relating to thy Charge. I am glad they have found out a Muſſulman Capable of that Important Truſt; and that we ſhall not always ſtand in need of Jews to ſerve the Grand Signior, Emperor of the Faithful. Thô ſome of that Nation are very Honeſt and Loyal; yet 'tis better to be without 'em.

Thou and I are Strangers to each other: But 'tis neceſſary for us to be ſpeedily acquainted, and hold a mutual Intimacy by Letters, that ſo we may ſerve our Great Maſter, without Interfering or Claſhing in our Intelligence. I have been here theſe Twenty Years, and made no Falſe ſteps in my Sovereigns Buſineſs, whatever I have done in my own: Yet have encounter'd a Thouſand Difficulties and Perils; ſuffered Impriſonment many Moons in Paris, for my Fidelity; whilſt my Enemies at Conſtantinople, perſecuted me as a Traytor and an Infidel.

'Tis impoſſible to avoid theſe Croſſes, in the Courſe of Humane Life. They are as Natural as the Wind or the Rain. All that we can do is, by a prudent and dextrous management of Contingences, to wind our ſelves out of Trouble as well as we can. And above all, rather to be our own Executioners, than betray the leaſt Secret committed to us.

I queſtion not, but thou haſt had the ſame Inſtructions given thee by the Miniſters of the Happy Port. What I ſay, is only to confirm thee in thy Fidelity and Care. Write to me with the ſame Frankneſs, and let Nothing make thee reſerved to thy Fellow-Slave. We are both Followers of the Prophet: We Worſhip One God after the ſame Manner, and Equally reverence the Alcoran. We ſerve One Maſter; and thô in different Stations, yet let our Affections and Intereſts be United as Friends. Let no little narrow Paſſions or Emulations, corrupt our Integrity; or teach us to Un-Man our ſelves.

I know not thy Original, whether thou art of Mahometan or Chriſtian Parents. 'Twould be very obliging to ſend me a ſhort Hiſtory of thy Life, and how thou Learned'ſt the Italian Tongue: For without that, I judge they would not have ſent thee into that Country.

As for me, I'm an Arabian by Birth, brought up in the Seraglio; from thence ſent to Sea; there taken Captive by the Chriſtians; Sold in Sicily, where I underwent a tedious Servitude, yet at length gained my Freedom: and having paſſed through Various Fortunes, at laſt was ſent hither, to obſerve the Secret Counſels of the Chriſtians, eſpecially of this Court.

ous

I now grow Old, having ſeen near Fifty Years, Yet, thô the Strength of my Body fails, I feel not the leaſt Decay in my Zeal for the Muſſulman Faith, or my Maſter's Service, I'm ſtill Mahmut the Loyal Slave of the Port; and thy Friend ſo long as thou art ſo to thy ſelf.

Paris, 30th. of the 1ſt. of the Year, 1659.

LETTER XV.

To the Kaimacham.

IT Rejoyces me to hear, that Adonai's Place is ſupplied by a Muſſulman, in whom the Sublime Port may put more Confidence, than in any of the Jewiſh Race. 'Twill be Encouragement to the True Faithful, and a Precedent of good Import. For, no Nation love to ſee their Prince beſtow Offices of Truſt on Strangers, when his own People are as capable of Employment as they. 'Tis Generally taken as an Affront and Contempt of their Abilities or their Virtue, and has often produc'd Ill Conſequences.

I deny not, but there are many Honeſt and Wiſe Men among the Hebrews, Perſons of Merit and Honour, from whom the Sultan receives no ſmall Services. But, this ought not to diminiſh the Reputation of thoſe who are of the ſame Faith with their Sovereign. Doubtleſs Arabia and Turkey are not barren of Good Soldiers, Prudent Statesmen, and Dextrous Miniſters.

I know not the Character of Zeidi Alamanzi, whether he be a Natural born Turk, a Tributary Son of a Chriſtian, or a Voluntary Renegado. However, the choice that is made of him, convinces me, that the unerring Divan eſteem him a Man fit for the Buſineſs committed to his Charge.

He ought to be perfectly skill'd in Italian, or at leaſt in ſome other Language of the Nazarenes: That ſo he may paſs the better unſuſpected among the People where he reſides, who are more jealous of Strangers, than any other Nation in Europe. 'Tis a Crime thought worthy of Impriſonment, for a Venetian to converſe with a Foreigner too frequently, and in Private: For they are afraid leſt by that means, a dangerous Correſpondence ſhould be eſtabliſhed betwixt ſome Ill-affected Subjects of that Common-wealth, and its Enemies: Whereby their Secrets may be betray'd, and Meaſures taken to ruine 'em.

For this Reaſon alſo they have forbid Falſe Hair, or Perukes to be worn by any in their Dominions, leſt this might ſerve as a Diſguiſe for Villains and Traitors. Yet Nothing thing more common in France and other Countries of Europe, than for Men to wear on their Heads, Ornaments of Womens Hair, inſtead of their own.

As to Religion, I believe, they will not much trouble him, being no Zealots themſelves: And provided he does but profeſs himſelf a Chriſtian and a Catholick, they'll make no farther Inquiſition.

The Italians in General, are much like the Ancient Romans in their Humour. Men of grave Aſpect and Carriage, and much more compos'd in both than the French, who appear Ridiculous through the Levity of their Diſcourſe and Actions. The former abound in Sage Precepts of Morality, and Politick Aphoriſms, which ſerve as a Rule whereby to ſquare the courſe of their Lives: The Latter only affect ſome flaſhy Improvements of Wit and Converſation, ſtudying rather how to pleaſe Women than Men; coveting to be perfect in External Accompliſhments, and the Graces of the Body, whilſt they ſlight the more valuable Endowments of the Mind. In a word, they are mere Apes and Mimicks. On the contrary, the Italians are Men of an Awful and Majeſtick Behaviour, ſolid Judgment, and deep Reach. If you ſee them ſmile, you ſhall ſeldom or never hear 'em laugh: Whereas the Motion of a Feather will ſet the French a Braying like Aſſes. Theſe will contract a warm Friendſhip with any Man at firſt Interview, heighten it with a Thouſand Compliments, make him their Confeſſor.

Confessor, and unbosom all their Secrets. Yet a Second Encounter shall extinguish this Passion, and a Third shall revive it again. Whereas those are cautious and slow in the choice of their Friends; and when once that Knot is dissolv'd, 'tis never to be fasten'd there again. They are Irreconcileable in their Hatred and Revenge.

But, there are Men to be excepted in Both Nations, who fall not under these General Characters. France affords many Wise, and Learned Persons; and Italy, not a few Fools and Ideots. Virtues and Vices are strangely mix'd in all People. War, Commerce and Travel, with other Humane Occurrences, alter Men's Natural Dispositions, and give the Lye to the Exactest Observations that can be made. Besides, Time changes all Things: And the Qualities which this Age remarks in the Italians, may in the next be transferr'd to the French. For, there is no Constancy in any Thing under the Moon.

Zeidi will find great Examples of Frugality, among the Venetians, in the necessary Expences of their Persons and Families; Yet abundance of Magnificence in whatever relates to the Publick, which the Subjects of that Commonwealth serve with open Purses, and free Hearts.

Indeed, they are not so remarkable for their Temperance, as some other Parts of Italy, Libertinism, and Voluptuousness, Reign uncontroul'd in Venice. Women and Wine are there almost as Common as the Elements.

Yet,

Yet, tis obſerv'd, that Strangers generally debauch more with Both, than the Natives. God preſerve Zeidi from their Temptations.

If it be his Fortune or Duty to viſit Padua, he ought not to make too long an Abode in that Neſt of Philoſophers and Phyſicians, leſt they firſt Anatomize his Soul, and diſcover the Secrets of his Commiſſion; and then turn his Body to a Skeleton, as they once ſerv'd a Moor, whom they Diſſected Alive, to make Experiment, perhaps, whether a Mahometan's Blood Circulated the ſame Way as a Chriſtians.

Thoſe Italian Phyſicians, are very Cruel; and think it no Sin to try Poiſons, and other Fatal Tricks on the Poor, that ſo they may be the better able to keep the Rich on the Rack at their Pleaſure, and make their Market on 'em.

I know not Zeidi's appointed Station, or what Cities he is to ſee: But, wherever he goes, 'twill be neceſſary for him to uſe abundance of Caution; for the Italians are the cloſeſt, ſlyeſt and moſt Judicious People in the World.

But, I forget that he is choſen by the Divan for this Employment, to whom the Characters of all Nations are known, and who penetrate into the moſt Intetiour Receſſes of Men's Spirits.

Therefore I lay my Hand upon my Mouth in profound Submiſſion, and acquieſce to my Superiours. Still praying, That the Grand Signior Signior may have Faithful and Wiſe Miniſters at Home, and no Novices for his Agents Abroad.

Paris, 3d. of the 2d. Moon, of the Year, 1659.

LETTER XVI.

To William Voſpel, a Recluſe of Auſtria.

THere is a Street in Paris, which they call the Street of Hell. The Reaſon of this Name is ſaid to be, becauſe at one End of it, there formerly ſtood an Old Houſe, poſſeſs'd by Devils, who were ſo troubleſome, that as the Records of Paris affirm, an Edict of Parliament was paſs'd, to remove all the Inhabitants out of their Houſes in that Street, and ſhut up the Entrance with a Wall. Since which, theſe Demons were expell'd by the Carthuſians, who built a Monaſtery in the Place. If this Story be true, it redounds much to the Reputation of that Order, and of all you Monaſticks in General, who by your Exorciſms are able to ſubdue the Infernal Spirit. But I have heard ſo many ſilly Tales of Houſes being haunted by Ghoſts and Hobgoblins, that I know not how to give Credit to this.

Beſides,

Beſides, when I conſider the Nature of Incorporeal Beings, it ſeems Ridiculous to think, that they can take Delight to play the Anticks, to frighten poor Mortals: Or confine themſelves to an Old Ruin'd Caſtle (for ſuch was this Houſe) for the ſake of a little Sport; When according to the Ancient Philoſophers, every Incorporeal Being is far more Excellent than the moſt Perfect Body, and can be Every Where: Neither are they at any Time Locally Preſent in Bodies, but only by Propenſion or Habit are inclin'd to them: And this they mean of Living Bodies. What Charm then can there be in an Old Rotten Fabrick of Stone and Wood, to allure and detain Immaterial Subſtances?

Certainly, the Nature of theſe Separate Eſſences, is very Remote from all Compounding Beings. I have been often at a Loſs, in Contemplating the Soul of Man. Sometimes it ſeems no otherwiſe diſtinguiſh'd from the Souls of Brutes, than by being United to a Body of Different Organs; Which cauſes us to ſhew more Evident Tokens of Reaſon than they, in the Faculty of Diſcourſe, and in our Actions. Yet when I conſider more attentively the Operations of our Mind and Intellect, I cannot but conclude, there is a vaſt Diſtinction between our Souls, and thoſe of the Beaſts. I have with Pleaſure obſerved the Excellency of Humane Intellect in Madmen and Dreamers; who being come to themſelves, (as we uſually ſay) relate many Things of which they were before Ignorant, and comprehend prehend Things ſurpaſſing their former Imaginations.

It appears therefore more rational to me, That the Soul is Every-Where and No-Where, as the Ancients ſay; Than that it is ſhut up and impriſon'd in the Body, as a Wild Beaſt in his Den, or Liquor in a Glaſs. However, by an Ineffable Production of it ſelf, it is Preſent in Every Part of the Body, as the Light of the Sun is diffus'd through the Air, and can as ſoon withdraw it ſelf, as that Light when interrupted by a Cloud. In a Word, I conceive the Soul to be a very Free Agent, and that it is here and there, and Every where. It United it ſelf to the Body by its own Choice, and can retire again from it at Pleaſure.

One cloſely purſu'd Act of Contemplation, will at any Time carry thee or me to the Inviſibles, when-ever we go reſolutely about it.

Paris, 1ſt of the 4th Moon, of the Year, 1659.

L. E. T.

LETTER XVII.

To the Venerable Ibrahim, Cadileſquer of Romeli.

THere has not a Year eſcap'd, ſince my Arrival at Paris, wherein I did not ſend to the Miniſters of the Ever Happy and Exalted Port, conſtant Intelligence of Battles, Sieges, Storming of Towns, and ſuch other Occurrences of War, as happen'd between the Kingdoms of France and Spain. But now I believe my Future Diſpatches muſt contain other Matters. For, in all appearance, this War which has laſted Four and Twenty Years, is in a fair way to be ended. The King of Spain grows weary of his Continual Loſſes in Italy, Flanders and Catalonia: And he of France, ſeems glutted with perpetual Victories and Conqueſts. In a word, theſe Two Potent Monarchs laying aſide their Quarrels, are making diligent Preparations this Year for a Campagne of Friendſhip and Love.

They are both in Arms, yet commit no Acts of Hoſtility. Whilſt Cardinal Mazarini on the part of this Crown, and Don Louis d'Aro de Guſman, Firſt Miniſter of Spain, are gone to meet each other on the Frontiers of both Kingdoms, as Plenipotentiaries for their reſpective Maſters, to concert the Meaſures ſures of a Laſting Peace, and treat of a Marriage between the King of France, and the Infanta of Spain.

All Europe is amazed at this ſurprizing Change. And the French and Spaniards, who border on each other, can hardly believe their own Senſes, whilſt they find a Mutual Commerce reſtor'd between their Frontier Towns and Villages, which had been Interrupted, ever ſince the Year 1635. about Sixteen Moons before I came to this City.

But, though they are thus diſpoſed to Peace here in the Weſt; the Northern Monarchs are puſhing the War forward in Sueden, Denmark, and Poland, with all Imaginable Vigour and Animoſity. The coming over of the Elector of Brandenburgh to the Daniſh Intereſt, has made a great Alteration in their Affairs. For, whereas Fortune ſeem'd before in all Things to favour the Suedes; now they loſe Ground, and find their Attempts Unſucceſsful. Four Thouſand of their Men fell before the Walls of Copenhagen, in Three Nights and Two Days: Which caus'd King Guſtavus to raiſe the Siege. Whilſt the Duke of Brandenburgh retook Fredericks-Ode, and thereby reſtored to the King of Denmark, the Provinces of Holſtein, Jutland and Ditmarſen.

The Hollanders alſo have had a Combat with the Suedes at Sea, and ſunk Fourteen of their beſt Ships: Beſides what they burnt and took,

Theſe

These Events have ſtirr'd up ſeveral Princes to mediate a Peace. And 'tis not Improbable, but in a little Time, we may ſee all the Chriſtians good Friends: And then 'twill be Time for the Muſſulmans, to be upon their Guard.

As for Mahmut, he will not fail to pry into the Counſels of theſe Infidels; and ſend timely Notices to the Port; Leaving the Reſt to the Wiſdom of his Superiors, and the Pleaſure of Deſtiny.

Paris, 29th of the 6th Moon of the Year 1659.

LETTER XVIII.

To Muſu Abu'l Yahyan, Alfaqui, Profeſſor of Theology at Fez.

THE Character, which the Great and Illuſtrious Abdel Melec Muli Omar, Preſident of Preſidents, Grace and Ornament of Ancient Learning, Oracle of Africa, and Reſtorer of Obſolete Truth? has given me of thy profound Wiſdom and Science, fills me with Reverence and Sacred Love. I am raviſhed with Wonder and Joy to hear, That in this Age, wherein the Muſſulman Theology has ſuffered ſo many Innovations, there yet ſurvives a Man who dares, and is able to aſſert againſt againſt all Oppoſers, not only the Primitive and Original Truth, brought down from Heaven by the Hand of Gabriel; but alſo the Real and Indubitable Sayings, Sermons, Counſels and Actions of the Prophet, whilſt he was on Earth converſing with Mortals, before his Tranſmigration to the Gardens of Eternal Repoſe and Solitude. Thou art the Enoch, the Hermes Triſmegiſtus of the Age.

I have ſeen many Copies of the Zunè, or the Book of Doctrine; each pretending to comprize the whole Syſtem of that Divine Philoſophy and Wiſdom, which dropt from the Lips of our Incomparable and moſt Holy Lawgiver, and were Atteſted by his Wife, the Holy Ageſha, Mother of the Faithful, and by his Ten Diſciples. Yet all theſe various Tranſcripts differ, both in their Sence and Manner of Expreſſions.

I have peruſed the Books Entituled Dabif, or Imperfect; which contain the Memoirs of his other Wives; and the Manuſcripts called Maucof, or Fragments: Being only a Collection of ſome Select Sentences, Aphoriſms and Parables of the Sent of God. But theſe have no other Authority to back 'em, ſave the Credit of ſome Learned Scribes, who were not familiar with the Divine Favourite, only living in his Time, and taking Things on Report.

In fine, I have met with ſeveral Parchments of the Zaquini, or Pretended Traditions of Abu Bexre, Omar, and Othman: But theſe I eſteem as Spurious, Corrupted, and full of Errors.

What

What ſhall I ſay? The Zeal of Omar Ebn Abdi'il-Aziz, the Ninth Caliph of the Tribe of Merwan, is not unknown to me. I am no ſtranger to his ſingular Piety, not to be matched among Crowned Heads: For, of him it is Recorded, That as he deſcended from the Throne at the Time of his Inauguration, he gave the Robe from his Back, as an Alms to a Poor Man; And, That during his whole Reign, he ſpent but Two Piaſters a-Day on himſelf. And ſo great was his Reſignation to Deſtiny, (an Admirable Vertue in a Sovereign Emperor) that when he was on his Bed in his laſt Sickneſs, and was counſell'd to take Phyſick, he anſwered, No; if I were ſure to heal my ſelf, only by reaching my Finger to my Ear, I would not. For, the place to which I am going, is full of Health and Bliſs.

This Caliph was a Miracle of Humility, and his Charity always kept him poor. Moſlema Ebn Abdi'l Malec relates, That going to viſit Omar on his Death-Bed, he found him lying on a Couch of Palm-Leaves, with three or Four Skins inſtead of a Pillow, his Garments on, and a foul Shirt underneath. Seeing this Moſlema was grieved and turning to his Siſter Phatema the Empreſs, he ſaid, How comes it to paſs, that the Great Lord, Commander of the Faithful, appears in ſo ſqualid a Condition? She reply'd, As thou liveſt, he has given away all that he had, even to the very Bed that was under him, to the Poor, and only reſerved what thou ſeeſt, to cover his Nakedneſs. Then Maſlema could not refrain, but burſt forth into Tears, ſaying, God ſhew thee Mercy upon Mercy, thou Royal Saint: For thou haſt pierced our Hearts with the Fear of his Divine Majeſty. This Caliph was numbred among the Saints.

cover

He it was, that perceiving the Contradiction, and Diſputes of the Muſſulman's, the Darkneſs and Confuſion in the various Copies of the Zunè, or Book of Doctrine; aſſembled a General Divan of Mollah's, and Learned Men at Damaſcus, from all Parts of the Empire: Commanding that all the Manuſcripts of the Zunè, which were extant, ſhould be brought in to this Aſſembly, on Pain of Death to him that ſhould detain one. This being done, he Commanded Six of them, to be choſen out of the Whole Number, by Vote; Men Eminent for Learning and Piety; And that theſe Six ſhould ſeverally collect, out of all the Multitude of Copies, each Man a Book, containing what he thought to be the moſt Genuine Diſcourſes of the Prophet, concerning this World, and that which is to come. When this was executed according to his Will, he commanded all the Old Books to be burn'd, in a Field near Damaſcus.

Yet after all the Religious Care of this Holy Caliph, to reſtore theſe Writings to their Primitive Integrity, the Muſſulman's ſoon fell into New Contentions, about the Sence and Interpretation of theſe Correct Copies of the Zunè. From whence ſprang the Four Cardinal Sects, on which, all the Innumerable, leſſer and later Diviſions among True Believers, are founded.

Ieſſer

I cannot therefore but inwardly rejoyce, and from my heart highly applaud the Method taken by thoſe of your Renowned Colledge, to diſcern the True Doctrines and Sayings of the Holy Prophet, from thoſe which are Suppoſititious by comparing all the Books that are extant together, and reducing Matters of Divine Revelation to the Analogy of the Alcoran; Thoſe of Philoſophy and Moral Regards, to the Standard of Experience and Reaſon: For, it is Impious to believe, that the Divine Apoſtle would impoſe any thing on our Faith, repugnant to the Sence of Men, or the Expreſs Will of Heaven, By the Soul of Pythagoras, Mahomet ſaid Nothing but what was Rational, and Evident to any Unprejudiced Mind. But, the Greateſt Part of theſe Sectaries, are beſotted. They form to themſelves Falſe Notions of God and his Prophet, and think to merit Paradiſe by their Stupidity.

Reverend Alfaqui, I have much more to ſay to thee, and many Queſtions to ask; But, Time and the Grand Signior's Service, force me to conclude abruptly, wiſhing thee Perfection of Bliſs.

Paris, 29th of the 6th. Moon, of the Year 1659. according to the Chriſtian Style.

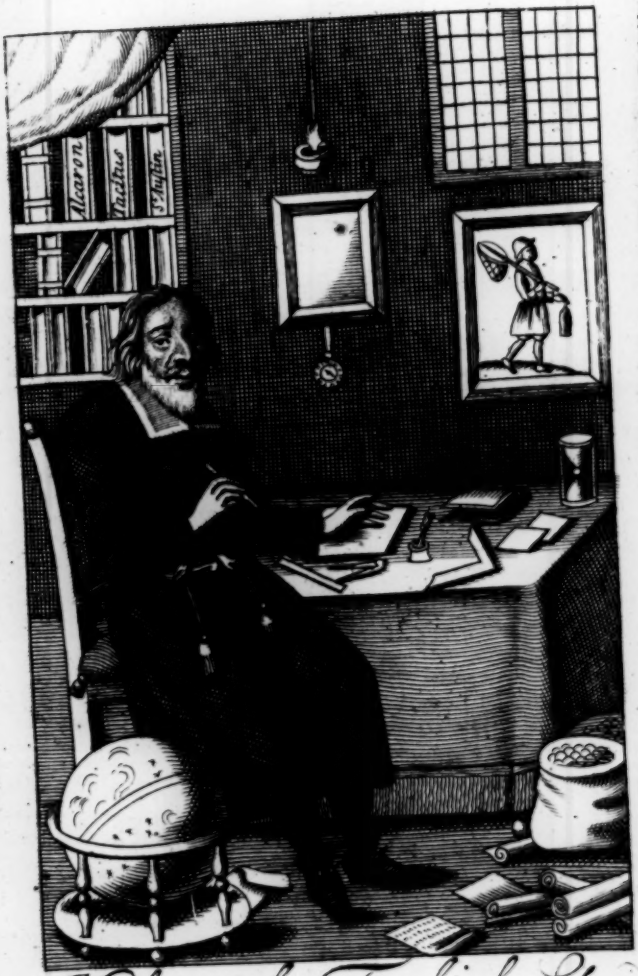
The End of the Fifth Volume.



Mahmut the Turkish Spy

Ætatis suæ 42.

THE

Sixth Volume

OF

LETTERS

Writ by a

Turkiſh Spy,

Who lived Five and Forty Years, Undiſcover'd, at

PARIS:

Giving an Impartial Account to the Divan at Conſtantinople, of the moſt Remarkable Tranſactions of Europe; And diſcovering ſeveral Intrigues and Secrets of the Chriſtian Courts (eſpecially of that of France) continued from the Year 1659, to the Year 1682.

Written Originally in Arabick, Tranſlated into Italian, and from thence into Engliſh, by the Tranſlator of the Firſt Volume.

LONDON,
Printed by J. R. for J. Hindmarſh and R. Bare, at the Golden Ball in Cornhil, and at Grays-Inn Gate in Holborn, 1694.

TO THE READER.

AS ſuperfluous as Prefaces ſeem, yet there is one thing which makes it in a manner neceſſary to prefix a few Lines to this Volume, in regard there is an Occaſion given by the Objections ſome Gentlemen have been lately pleaſed to make againſt the Style of the Engliſh Tranſlation. Theſe Perſons having by a very coſtly Inquiſitiveneſs, found and procur'd the Italian Copy of theſe Letters, and compar'd them with the Engliſh, pick many Faults in the latter, which they would fain improve to the leſſening the Reputation of the Turkiſh Spy, or at leaſt to the heightening their

TO THE READER.

AS ſuperfluous as Prefaces ſeem, yet there is one thing which makes it in a manner neceſſary to prefix a few Lines to this Volume, in regard there is an Occaſion given by the Objections ſome Gentlemen have been lately pleaſed to make againſt the Style of the Engliſh Tranſlation. Theſe Perſons having by a very coſtly Inquiſitiveneſs, found and procur'd the Italian Copy of theſe Letters, and compar'd them with the Engliſh, pick many Faults in the latter, which they would fain improve to the leſſening the Reputation of the Turkiſh Spy, or at leaſt to the heightening their own Characters as Wits and Criticks, Maſters of Languages, and the Grand Patentees of Humane Senſe.

In the Firſt Place they ſay, the Italian Tranſlation keeps cloſe to the Original Arabick; whereas the Engliſh abounds too much with Angliciſms, which are not ſufficient to expreſs the Author's Primitive Senſe.

How Impoſſible a Thing it is, to pleaſe all People in Undertakings of this Nature! Formerly they were offended that ſo many Turkiſh and Arabick Words were left untranſlated. And that being anſwered in the Preface to the Fourth Volume, they have now form'd New Arguments out of that very Anſwer, to aſſault us on the contrary Side, and tax us with being too Vernacular. 'Tis true, the Letters they have ſent to the Bookſeller on this Accounr, are not ſubſcrib'd at Length. Yet by Accident, one of the Gentlemen's men's Hand-Writing is known. And tho' we acknowledge him to be an Ingenious Perſon, and a Man of Learning; yet I believe he would be unwilling his Letter ſhould here be expos'd in Print (or the Original ſhew'd to ſome that know him, and perhaps may claim an Equal Rank among the Criticks.)

But to come to the purpoſe; I have often heard Tranſlations blam'd for keeping too cloſe to the Original Phraſe, but never any before this, for a Negligence that is abſolutely neceſſary to retain the Senſe of a Foreign Author. All the World knows, there is a vaſt Diſtance between Arabick and the Languages of Europe; and if the Italian Tranſlator was more exact in forming his Words up to a near Imitation of the Eaſtern Proprieties of Speech, no doubt but Impartial Men will rather Cenſure it as a Fault, than cry it up for an Excellency; ſince nothing ſounds well in any Language which is not deliver'd in the Natural Idiom. Every thing ought to be writ in as Familiar a Style as we Diſcourſe; eſpecially Letters, which are but a Proxy-Method of Converſing at a Diſtance. And he that Tranſlates out of one Language into another, ought to aim Chiefly at this, That he be ſure to retain the Original Senſe, and render it ſmooth and eaſy to the Reader. The Flowers of Arabia and Italy, when once Tranſplanted to our barren Engliſh Soil, loſe their Vertue and Beauty, till they are Naturaliz'd: What then muſt we expect from their Weeds? Doubtleſs, there are ſome Peculiarities in all Languages; and to Tranſlate Verbatim from ſo Remote a Tongue, would ſound as harſh as French does in an Engliſhman's Mouth, when he pronounces it as 'tis writ.

What I have more to ſay is, that as this Volume contains a Hiſtory ſtory of things tranſacted within the Memory of moſt Men now living; ſo the Two ſucceeding Tomes fall down lower and nearer to the preſent Times: Giving an Account of Events whereof many have been Eye-Witneſſes, and wherein not a few have had a Perſonal Share either by Way of Action or Suffering, Profit or Damage; which muſt needs afford Delight to thinking Men, ſince there is nothing more Agreeable to Mortals than to reflect on the former Paſſages of their Lives, according to that of the Poet:

Hæc olim meminiſſe juvabit.

Beſides, for the farther Encouragement of the Candid Reader, he may aſſure himſelf, that toward the Concluſion of the Laſt Volume, he will meet with ſeveral Secrets between the French and Turkiſh Courts, which will diſcover the true Source of the Preſent War between the Emperor of Germany, and the Grand Signior; and give a Glimps of the Private Machinations and Springs which have put all Europe into the Hurly burly 'tis now in.

I have but this more to say, That we hope to be more Speedy in publishing the Remainder of these Letters, than we have hitherto been in the Former Volumes. Reader, Adieu.

A TA-

A TABLE OF THE LETTERS and Matters contained in this Volume.

VOL. I.

BOOK I.

LETTER I.

MAhmut the Arabian at Paris, to Dgnet Oglou his Friend at Conſtantinople. pag. 1

He relates the Errours he committed in Point of Addreſs and Carriage, when he firſt came to Paris.

II. To the Reis Effendi, or Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 9

Of a Fellow that dogg'd him up and down the Streets of Paris; and his Apprehenſions thereupon.

III. To Abdel Melec Muli Omar, Preſident of the College of Sciences at Fez. 14

He

He complains of his frequent Sadneſs on the Account of his Employment.

IV. To the Kaimacham. 18

Of the Quakers in Holland, England, Germany, and other Parts of Europe.

V. To the Same. 23

Of the Peace concluded between France and Spain. Of the Match between the King of France and the Spaniſh Infanta. Of the Duke of Lorrain's Releaſe, and the Prince of Conde's Reſtauration.

VI. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottomam Empire. 26

He congratulates his Acceſſion to that Dignity. Of the Death of the King of Sweden, and the Duke of Orleans.

VII. To Dgnet Oglou. 32

He diſcourſes againſt the little Superſtitions of the Mahometans. Of Moſes and the Jews in Egypt.

VIII. To the Kaimacham. 40

Of the Prince of Conde's Reception and Entertainment at the French Court. Some Paſſages of his Life.

X. To the Same. 43

Of King Charles II. his Reſtauration to the Crown.

X. To Mehemet, an Exil'd Eunuch, at Caire in Egypt. 47

He

He breaks forth into melancholy Excursions.

XI. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 51
He relates some Passages of Henry IV's Life.

XII. To Mustapha, Berber Aga. 55
Of the Extraordinary Magnificence at the New married King and Queen's Entry into Paris.

XIII. To Ognet Oglou. 58
Of an Earthquake at Paris.

XIV. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 61 Observations on the Reign of Lewis XIII.

XV. To Mahummed, in the Desart. 67
Of the Earthquake at Paris, and other Parts of France.

BOOK II.

LETTER I.

TO the Venerable Mufti. 71
Of Cardinal Mazarini's Death. Some Remarks on his Life.

II. To the Vizir Azem at the Port 75
Farther Remarks on Cardinal Mazarini.

III.

III. To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Cuſtoms at Conſtantinople. 77
Of his Couſin Iſouf's Reſidence at Aſtracan. A Character of the Moſcovites.
IV. To Orchan Cabet, Student in the Sciences, and Penſioner to the Sultan. 80
He congratulates his Converſion to the Mahometan Faith.
V. To the Mufti. 83
Of the King of France's Power to cure the King's-Evil.
VI. To Mirmadolin, Santone of the Vale of Sidon. 86
He applauds the happy Life of a Santone.
VII. To Dgnet Oglou. 90
Of Painters. A Story of Martin Heemſkirk. Another of Giotto.
VIII. To Lubano Abufai Saad, an Egyptian Knight. 97
Of the Dauphin's Birth.
IX. To Cara Hali, Phyſician to the Grand Signior. 101
Of Hardineſs, Indifference, and Reſignation.
X. To the Same. 106
Of Plays, and an odd Accident that happen'd at one, in the Preſence of the King and the whole Court.

XI.

XI. To Dgnet Oglou. 113
He compains of the Slanders caſt on him by ſome at the Seraglio.
XII. To Abrahim Eli Zeid, Hadgi, Preacher to the Seraglio. 116
Of the Wicked Lives of Prieſts and Monks.
XIII. To the Chiaus Baſſa. 152
Of the French Kings Conduct and Government.
XIV. To the Same. 130
More on the ſame Subject. Of an extraordinary Tournament, or Carouſal, at the French Court.
XV. To Zeidi Alamanzi, a Merchant at Venice. 135
He applauds his Sincerity in embracing the Muſſulman Faith.
XVI. To the Kaimacham. 141
Of the Attempts made on the Lives of the Duke and Dutcheſs of Crequi.
XVII. To Mohammed, the Illuſtrious Eremit of Mount Uriel in Arabia. 144
Of the Contradictions and Uncertainty of Antient Records, &c.
XVIII. To Haſnadar-Baſſi, Chief Treaſurer to his Highneſs. 148
Of the Birth and Death of Madam of France. Of the Peace concluded between France and Spain. He reflects on on the Engliſh, for delivering up Dunkirk to the French. Of the Marriage between the King of England and the Infanta of Portugal.

XIX. To the Kaimacham. 152

He relates a ſtrange Paſſage that happen'd to him in Viſiting a Calabrian Traveller, profeſſing Aſtrology and Phyſick.

XX. To the Captain Baſſa. 157

Of a Wonderful Man taken up on the Coaſts of North-Holland.

XXI. To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna. 161

He endeavours to convince him, that Iſmael was Heir of the Promiſes made to Abraham, as being the Firſt-born Son. With ſome Recriminations on the Race of Iſaac.

XXII. To the Same. 166

He diſcourſes concerning the Origin of Nobility and Grandeur among Men.

XXIII. To Codarafrad Cheik, a Man of the Law. 173

Of a Man that was executed at Paris, for aſſerting, That he was the Son of God.

The TABLE.

BOOK III.

LETTER I.

TO Solyman, his Couſin, at Chalcedon. 177

He applauds his Removing from Place to Place; and adviſes him to travel farther in the World; or at leaſt to viſit his Couſin Iſouf at Aſtracan.

II. To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Cuſtoms at Conſtantinople. 181

Of the Wars and Revolution in Indoſtan; with ſome Remarks on the different Policy of Eaſtern Nations.

III. To Uſeph Baſſa. 186

Of the Converſion of the Duke of Mecklenburg to the Roman Faith. Of the Magnificent Entry the Suis-Embaſſadors made into Paris.

IV. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 188

Of the King of France's Amours. A pleaſant Story of his Confeſſor.

V. To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Grand Signior's Cuſtoms at Conſtantinople. 191

Of

Of Mahmut's Inclinations to travel; his particular Phancy for Indoſtan: With a Deſcription of the Pleaſures he ſhould take in paſſing thither.

VI. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 200

Of the Death of the Dutcheſs of Savoy, and Carolus Joſephus, Brother to the German Emperor. A General Character of Germany, France, Spain, England, Holland and other Parts of Europe.

VII. To Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa. 206

He acquaints him, how he had been Aſſaſſinated one Night in the Streets, as he was returning to his Lodgings. Of his Removal thereupon to another Part of the City.

VIII. To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna. 213

He informs him of the ſame Accident, referring him for farther Inſtructions to Eliachim, who would be ſhortly at Vienna.

IX. To Zeidi Alamanzi, a Merchant at Venice. 216

He forbids him to ſend any Letters to Paris, till he has receiv'd Freſh Orders from the Port.

The TABLE.

X. To Murat, Baſſa.
He complains for want of timely Intelligence from the Miniſters of the Port. Of the Victories and Succeſſes of the Ottomans in Hungary. Of Count Strozzi's Arrival at Paris in Quality of Embaſſador from the Emperour.
XI. To Iſouf, his Kinſman, a Merchant at Aſtracan 223
A Character of Spain.
XII. To Aſis Baſſa. 225
Of the General Conſternation in Europe, upon the News of the Grand Signior's Advances into Hungary. Of Cardinal Chiſi's Arrival at Paris in Quality of Legate de Latere from the Pope.
XIII. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 228
He gives him a Character of Spain, different from that he ſent his Couſin Iſouf.
XIV. To Muſu Ab'l Yahyan, Profeſſor of Philoſophy at Fez. 233
He diſcourſes of the various Languages of Europe. A Story of a German Embaſſador at the French Court.
XV. To Oſman Adrooneth, Aſtrologer to the Sultan at Adrianople. 238
Of a Comet appearing in the Firmament.

From

From whence he takes Occaſion to diſcourſe about the Nature of Comets.

XVI. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 241

He informs him of the Peace made between the Pope and the King of France, after the Affronts put upon the French Embaſſador at Rome. Of the French King's Deſign on Africk.

XVII. To Abdel Melec, Muli Omar, Preſident of the College of Sciences at Fez.

He complains that True Science is not to be found, unleſs among the Bramins of India.

XVIII. To Mirmadolin Santone of the Vale of Sidon. 250

He aſſerts, That Men are Partakers of the Divine Nature. A Digreſſion concerning the Ancient Religion of the Gentiles.

XIX. To the Same. 253

A Sceptical Diſcourſe, after the manner of an Epicurean Philoſopher.

XX. To Iſouf, his Couſin, a Merchant at Aſtracan. 256

Mahmut complains of his Uneaſineſs in Paris, and expreſſes his Emulation of the Arabs and Tartars.

XXI. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 260
Remarks on the Mareſchal de Turenne; with a Character of that Prince.
XXII. To Orchan Cabet, Student of the Sciences, and Penſioner to the Grand Signior. 265.
Of a Paper of Verſes, which the King of France found one morning on his Table.
Of Anne Marie de Skurman the learned Maid of Saxony.
XXIII. To the Captain Baſſa. 268.
Of a Notable Victory obtain'd by the Engliſh, under the Command of the Duke of York, in a Sea Fight with the Dutch. Of the King of France's Deſign to Unite both Seas, by Cutting a Canal through Part of his Kingdom.

BOOK IV.

LETTER I.

TO Achmet Beig. 273
Of the Death of Philip the IV. King of Spain; and the Duke of Vendoſme.

II. To William Vosſpel, a Recluſe of Auſtria. 278

Mahmut endeavours to reclaim him from Bigottry.

III. To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna. 284

He reflects on the Miſna and Talmud of the Jews; rehearſing briefly ſeveral ridiculous Stories out of the Latter. Of a Sort of Jews in North-Aſia, different from the Reſt of that Lineage, in their Language, Laws, and Religion.

IV. To the Same. 289

He gives him a more particular Account of theſe Jews, their Cuſtoms, and Manner of Life.

V. To Mohammed, Hadgi, Dervich, Eremite of Mount Uriel in Arabia the Happy. 295

He tells him he is in doubt of his Future State: However, aſſerts, That 'tis good to meditate on the laſt Things.

VI. To the Kaimacham. 300

Of Mirammud, the Son of the Xairiph of Salle's being taken Priſoner by the French. His Character and Entertainment at the Court.

VII. To Hamel Muladdin, Xairiph, of Salle. 302

He acquaints him with the ſame thing, and adviſes him to ſend ſpeedy Embaſſadors to the Court of France, in Order to his Son's Redemption.

VIII. To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Cuſtoms at Conſtantinople. 305

He informs him of the Treachery of Soliyman his Couſin, in employing ſome Armenian Merchants at Paris, to pry into Mahmut's Secrets.

IX. To Dgnet Oglou. 308

More on the ſame Subject.

X. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 313

Of the Plague at London, and in other Parts of England. Of the Death of the Queen-Mother of France, and of the Prince of Conti.

XI. To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna. 317

He reproaches him with Bigottry, in believing Sabbati Sevi, the pretended Meſſias of Smyrna, &c. to be the True Redeemer of Iſrael. A ſhort hiſtory of Sabbati Sevi's Life.

XII. To the Kaimacham. 323

An Account of the Jew's Extravagances on the appearing of Sabbati Sevi, as their Meſſias. Strange Reports of the Ten Tribes that were carried away captive by Salmanaſſar King of Aſſyria.

XIII. To

XIII. To Murat, Baſſa. 327
Of a War between the French and the Engliſh. Of a Marriage between the Emperour of Germany and the Infanta of Spain.
XIV. To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Cuſtoms, and Superintendent of the Arſenal at Conſtantinople. 331
He congratulates his New Advance; relates the Blowing up of Rezan a City in Ruſſia, and Deſcants on the Day of Doom.
XV. To Uſeph, Baſſa, 337
Of the Continuance of the Plague in England. Of the Fire at London.
XVI. To Cara Hali, Phyſician to the Grand Signior. 341
He complains that our Knowledge of a future State is very uncertain.
XVII. To Kerker Haſſan Baſſa. 347
He rejoyces to hear, that he is to be remov'd from Paris to a Country Life, ſomewhere in Aſia.
XVIII. To Iſouf, his Kinſman, a Merchant at Aſtracan. 354
He gives him a Character of his Couſin Solyman, and bids him beware of him if he ſhould come to Aſtracan

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. VI.

BOOK I.

LETTER I.

Mahmut the Arabian at Paris, to Dgnet Oglou, his Friend at Conſtantinople.

IT makes me ſmile ſometimes, when I reflect how often I was put to it for an Addreſs ſuitable to the Manners of the Nazarenes, and the particular Mode of Paris, when I firſt arriv'd at this City: For, thou know'ſt, we had other Employments, than to learn Faſhions and Conge's at Palermo.

The Mind of a Slave is dejected under the Circumſtances of his Captivity; ſo that he has not Leiſure to regard any Thing, but how to accompliſh his daily Task, and to pleaſe his Patron. All his Study and Care is bent upon this, and there's no Room left for Generous Thoughts; Neither has he Means or Courage to venture on Projects, or improve the Preſent Occurrences in Order to his Future Happineſs: Nay, he hardly dares think of ever being Happy again. This was my Caſe, and I believe 'twas not much better with thee.

Yet, notwithſtanding all the Rigorous Uſage I had, the Baſtinado's, Kicks, Bruiſes, Cuts and Wounds, I receiv'd from the Hands of that Barbarous Giafer, my Maſter, which made me ſometimes Incapable of doing him any Service by Day, or of taking any Reſt my ſelf by Night, I was reſolv'd to find ſome ſpare Time for Books. I roſe Early, and went Late to Sleep; neglecting no Moment, wherein I cou'd apply my ſelf to Study. The Acquaintance I had with that Sicilian Carpenter, our Friend, was of Singular Advantage to me in this Kind: For, thou may'ſt remember, he was well ſtock'd with many Ancient and Learned Treatiſes. He furniſhed me with Plutarch, Polybius, Strabo, Pliny, and other Hiſtories. All which, and many more, I devour'd with Greedineſs; for I had a ſtrong Appetite to Knowledge. And after my Redemption, I paſs'd away ſome Time in the Academies, where I learn'd the Knotty Tricks Tricks of Logick, how to ſplit Moods and Figures, and chain one Impertinent Syllogiſm to the Tail of another to Eternity. I alſo ran through a Courſe of Phyloſophy and other Sciences. Neither was I altogether Ignorant of Men: For the Reading of Hiſtories, fits a Man the better to make Practical Experiments in the Affairs of the World. To which alſo, Philoſophy is not a little helpful, in directing our Obſervations on the various Tempers of People, Mens Perſonal Diſpoſitions and Singularities, with the Humours and Cuſtoms Peculiar to this or that Nation. For theſe things depend many Times on the Difference of the Climate, the Nature of the Soil, the Qualities of the Air, and the Manner of their Diet.

But neither Hiſtory, Logick or Philoſophy, were able to efface the Impreſſions of my Early Years, or unteach me the Manners in which I had been Educated from my Infancy. I brought Arabia and Conſtantinople along with me even to Paris. And becauſe I had not been uſed to diſſemble the Profeſſion and Carriage of a Muſſulman, during my Thraldom in Sicily; I was at a Loſs in my Deportment, when I came Firſt hither.

How often have I been like to diſcover my ſelf by Pronouncing the Sacred Biſmillah, either when I ſat down to Eat, or put a Glaſs of Water to my Lips; or, when I begun any other Action of Importance? So likewiſe in uttering the Handillah, after a Repaſt, or when any Thing happen'd which prompted me to praiſe God.

When I met any of my Acquaintance in the Streets, I was apt to forget that I had a Hat on. And inſtead of putting off that, according to the Faſhion of the Franks, I laid my Hand on my Breaſt, and ſometimes bowed ſo low, that my Hat fell off from my Head, before I was ſenſible of my Error.

If I had Occaſion to addreſs my ſelf to a Perſon of Quality, I was ready to take up the Bottom of his Cloak, Gown or Robe, and to Kiſs it in Token of Reverence, as the Cuſtom is in the Eaſt, when we ſalute the Grandees. Nay, ſometimes I could not forbear falling on my Knee, or proſtrate on the Ground before Cardinal Richlieu, and thoſe of his High Dignity. All which, nevertheleſs, paſſed only for Clowniſhneſs, and want of Courtly Education, which teaches the Nice Punctilio's of Addreſs. They took me for a Kind of Moldavian Ruſtick, without any farther Jealouſy. Or perhaps, they ſmil'd at all this, as ſome Singular Caprice or Humour, like that of the Philoſopher Paſicles, who coming to ſalute a Great Captain, and the Ceremony of thoſe Times requiring him to touch the Captain's Knee, he laid his Hand on his Genitals. At which the Captain being affronted, and thruſting his Hand away with Scornful Words; What! ſays the Philoſopher, does not that Part belong to you, as well as your Knees? It often diverts my Melancholy, to conſider how many Errors of this Kind I have committed, not through Ignorance, or any Cynical Humour, but only in pure Overſight, and Forgetfulneſs.

It

It was a long Time ere I could frame my Fingers to handle a Knife and Fork at Meals, as is the Univerſal Cuſtom in theſe Weſtern Parts; Whereas thou knoweſt, we make uſe of no other Inſtruments in Eating, but our Fingers and Teeth. Whence it was, that I could not ſometimes forbear thruſting my Hand into a whole Diſh of Meat; which is counted a great Indecency in France. And after I was reconciled to thoſe Nicer Inſtruments of Voluptuouſneſs, ſo as to Carve my Meat à la Mode; yet when once I had it on my own Plate, I laid aſide thoſe Tools as Uſeleſs, and tore it aſunder with my Fingers and Teeth, feeding à la Turceſque, as the French call it; that is, like a Muſſulman.

Nevertheleſs, no Body ſuſpected me; but all theſe Miſcarriages paſs'd for Moldavian Barbariſms, the ſalvage Cuſtoms of that my ſuppoſed Country. I tell thee, that tho' the Manner of Eating among the French, ſeem to have ſomething more of Neatneſs and Delicacy in it; yet it appears full of Softneſs and Luxury, and I cannot in Reaſon prefer it to the more Natural and Simple Method of Diet, us'd in the Eaſt. Neither wou'd the Franks themſelves condemn us for Salvages in this Point, as they commonly do, did they but conſider, that this Negligence very well becomes Men of the Sword; and that in their Campagnes, their own Generals are ambitious to appear Careleſs in every Thing relating to their Body.

Doubtleſs, the Ancient Romans, who brought the Greateſt Part of the World under their Power, ſhunn'd all Fineneſſes in Diet and Apparel, till ſuch Time as their Manners were debauched, and their Empire in its Decline. Our Annals record, That when Sultan Selim lay down with his Army before a certain Place, and the Governour of the Town ſent Commiſſioners to treat with him about a Surrender; they found him at Dinner, which conſiſted only of Two or Three Onions, a little Salt and Bread.

Hiſtories alſo relate of the Faithful Omar, Succeſſor of the Prophet, That when he was with his Army not far from Jeruſalem, the Nazarene Prince who govern'd that City, ſent a Spy into the Hoſt of the Muſſulmans, to obſerve their Diſcipline, and bring him a Lively Character of their General. The Spy went according to his Maſter's Order. And having tarried ſome Time in the Arabian Camp, returned again, and thus ſpoke to the Governour.

"It will be Needleſs to recount every "Thing I obſerved among theſe Souldiers; "ſince by what I ſhall ſay of their Leader, "thou mayeſt comprehend the Manners of "them all: For they obey him, and follow "his Example in every Thing, with Exqui-"ſite Silence and Modeſty. I ſaw Omar their "Prince, at the Head of his Army, ſitting "on a Camel, his Face Tawny and Scorch'd "by the Sun, in a Veſt of Perſian Cotton, "girded about with a Belt of Leather, at "which hung a Cymetar and Dagger, with a

"Knapſack

"Knapſack tied behind him like the Meaneſt "Souldier. I ſaw him take out from thence "hard Cruſts of Bread, ſhaking off the Husks "of Millet which ſtuck to them; and ſaying, "In the Name of God, he Eat heartily of the "ſame. Then he drank Water out of a Leathern Bottle hanging by his Side; And when "he had done, he ſaid, Praiſe be to God. All "his Army made their Repaſt at the ſame "Time, and in the ſame Manner with Admirable Temperance, and ſuch an Order "and Modeſty, as I never ſaw before, neither "can I expreſs.

When the Prince heard this, he ſtood ſtill a Conſiderable Time; muſing as one Aſtoniſhed. Then turning to the Seniors and Chief of the People who were preſent, he ſaid, "It is Neceſſary that we ſurrender our City "to theſe People; for they have the Smiles "of Heaven. Their Prophet and their Law, "oblige 'em to Temperance, Frugality, Obedience and a Modeſt Deportment. Theſe "Virtues are certain Steps to Victory and Empire. Beſides, I have received a Tradition "from my Anceſtors, That a People ſhall "come out of Arabia, with a New Law and "Religion, which ſhall aboliſh all that went "before it. They ſhall ſubdue Paleſtine and "Egypt, and ſhall build Moſques, wherein "their Prayers ſhall ſound like the Humming "of Bees. Their Empire ſhall extend from "Eaſt to Weſt, and to the Extremities of the "Earth. This is what I have learned from "my Fore-Fathers, and which I believe is " now coming to paſs. Therefore it will be " in vain to reſiſt theſe Men; for they are In- " vincible by a Decree from Above.

Thoſe that were about him, did not approve the Counſel of this Wiſe Nazarene. However, he ſent to Omar, and obtained Favour for himſelf and his Family.

Thou wilt ſay, I'm got wide of the Mark of my Firſt Diſcourſe, which related to my ſelf, and not to any of the Primitive Cailiphs: But 'tis impoſſible to reſtrain our Thoughts from roving. Some ſay, they hang together like the Links of a Chain; and that one Idea being faſtened to another in our Memory, we muſter them in Rank and File, according to their proper Order, when we think, or make Reflections. God knows how 'tis. This I'm ſure of, That when I write to my Friends, I ſtudy not to make an Elaborate Speech on't, as if I were penning an Oration; but purſuing my Firſt Intention at Random, I run on, letting one Thought and Word beget another.

But I was telling thee how great a Bungler I was at firſt in all the Ceremonies and Manners of the Franks, which differ from thoſe of the Eaſt. I was as much to ſeek in my Addreſs, as an Aß would be to play on a Lute, according to the Roman Proverb: Yet Time and Practice render'd all theſe Things Familiar and Eaſy. Now, methinks, I'm a thorow-pac'd Nazarene as to my Exteriour. I go to the Court, and the Temples with as much ſeeming Formality as the Chriſtians whilſt whilſt, God knows, my Heart is ſomewhere elſe. All my Actions are out of their Natural Byaſs, ſo long as I am Abſent from the Society of True Believers.

In a word, I'm forc'd to imitate the Fox, which Creature, when it is environ'd with Huntſmen and Dogs, counterfeits a Barking like the Latter, and ſo paſſes undiſcover'd for one of their Company.

Paris, 3d. of the 9th. Moon, of the Year 1659.

LETTER II.

To the Reis Effendi, or Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

I Am at this Time poſſeſs'd with more Apprehenſions and Jealouſies, than an Old Infidel Uſurer. My Lodging affects me with greater Melancholy, than would a Priſon. And my Uneaſineſs is the ſame when I go out of Doors. Every Body that meets me, looks either as my Accuſer or my Judge: And ſome appear as terrible as Executioners. By Day, my Imagination torments me like a Fury; and by Night, I am affrighted with Melancholy Viſions. I dream of nothing but Racks, Wheels, Saws, Gibbets, and ſuch like Inſtruments of Humane Cruelty. Or that I am in ſome dark Dungeon, condemn'd to more Unſufferable Tortures, by Order of the State; with Cardinal Mazarini, ſitting by me like a Spaniſh Inquiſitor, and in the moſt Tyrannical Manner, threatning me with Pains, to which the Damn'd themſelves are wholly Strangers, if I will not confeſs what I am, and reveal the Secrets with which I am entruſted.

The Occaſion of theſe Terrors which haraſs me Night and Day, is this: I have for Four or Five Days together, found my ſelf dogg'd up and down Paris, by a Man whoſe Face I never ſaw before in my Life. Let me go where I will, he's always at ſome Diſtance from me. If I ſtand ſtill, ſo does he: Or if I turn back, he's quickly at my Heels. I have endeavour'd by all the Prudent Methods I could take to drop him in the Crowd of People, or in the Churches: But all in vain; for ſtill I encounter with the ſame Face. He purſues me like my Shadow. Neither Coach nor Boat, Land or Water, Houſe or Alley, can reſcue me from the Fellow's Eyes, who is more quick-ſighted than Argus, and nimbler than Mercury. He is very Cunning alſo in this Buſineſs, and as dexterous as a Jugler, conveying himſelf when he pleaſes out of my Sight; yet preſently after, he's in View again. And if I chance to loſe him in the Dark, I am ſure to find him not far from my Lodging next Morning.

This is it which gives me ſo much Diſturbance, and pierces me with a Thouſand Anxieties:

ties, For I know not what to conjecture of this Fellow's Deſign. Sometimes I think he is employed by Cardinal Mazarini to watch my Motions, obſerve what Houſes and Company I frequent, and trace me in all my Appointments. And I am the more confirm'd in this Suſpicion, when I reflect on my Former Impriſonment in this City, and the Occaſion of it. Beſides, when I went Yeſterday to ſee Eliachim the Jew, this Spark followed me near to the Door: And tho' I tarried there Two full Hours, yet when I came out, I had not walked a Hundred Paces, before I ſaw him again, footing it after me in a Careleſs manner, with his Arms folded, and his Eyes fix'd on the Ground, as if he knew Nothing of the Matter. Theſe are convincing Circumſtances, that he is ſet at Work by the Cardinal, or ſome Body elſe, to diſcover my Buſineſs.

But when on the other Side, I conſider, that if the Cardinal ſuſpected me, he might go a nearer Way to work, and ſeize me in my Chamber, where my Letters would betray me; this Thought vaniſhes, and I am at a Loſs what to think.

Then comes into my Mind the Encounter I had once with my Sicilian Maſter, who ſtrove to ſet the Rabble upon me in the Streets of Paris, but my better Stars delivered me out of his and their Hands, whilſt, for ought I know, he drew upon himſelf the Miſchief he deſign'd for me. However, when I reflect on that Paſſage, I am apt to think he may may be now in Paris, and having by ſome Accident ſeen me go in or out at my Lodging, contrives how to revenge himſelf on me, and uſes this Fellow's Aſſiſtance in compaſſing his Ends. Perhaps, think I, he will cauſe me to be ſtabb'd or piſtoll'd at ſome convenient Seaſon; Or, he will find out ſome other Way, leſs noiſy and more malicious to diſpatch me. It may be he ſeeks to entrap me, and render me Obnoxious to the State. I have a thouſand Imaginations about it, and know not what to conclude. I value not my ſelf, nor am I careful to prolong a Miſerable Life for my own Sake. All that I can hope to enjoy in this World, would come far ſhort of tempting me to skreen my ſelf from the Stroke of Death, by any Action Unworthy of a Philoſopher, and a Man. But the Duty and Affection I owe to the Grand Signior's Service makes me willing to live, till I have acquitted my ſelf of my Province with perfect Succeſs, that ſo I may return to Conſtantinople with Honour. And then I care not how ſoon I poſt to that Unknown World, where all the Generations of Mortals take up their Eternal Reſt: For in this there's Nothing but Labour and Grief.

In the mean Time, I know not what Conduct to uſe in this Emergency; Whether I'd beſt to ſpeak to this Fellow, or diſſemble my Suſpicion; Whether it will be ſafe to truſt this Event to the General Providence, or to ſacrifice him that gives me ſo much Diſquiet, and ſo ſecure my Peace. I could eaſily have him diſpatch'd without any farther Noiſe. But then my Conſcience would trouble me with after-Claps, leſt I ſhould have Murder'd a Man without Reaſon, which is expreſly forbid by the Alcoran. Beſides, I ſhould always ſtand in Fear of ſome Diſcovery, I proteſt, I am at a Loſs for want of Ample Inſtructions in ſuch Caſes as theſe. And I am weary of mentioning what I have ſo often intimated already to the Miniſters of the Port, without any Direct Anſwer. However, I will do what my Reaſon ſuggeſts, and leave the Event to Deſtiny.

him

Happy Miniſter, the Affairs of this World are full of dark Windings and Meanders; and we have all need of a Guide or a Clew to conduct us through 'em. May that Omnipreſent aſſiſt us, whenever we are catch'd in a Knot, or loſt in a Labyrinth of Difficulties.

Paris, 3d. of the 9th. Moon,
of the Year 1659.

LETTER

LETTER III.

To Abdel Melec Muli Omar, Preſident of the College of Sciences at Fez.

THY Venerable Diſpatch I received with Kiſſes, and a Tranſport of Joy. I Thrice touch'd my Eye-lids with the Paper of High Eſteem, and as oft I laid it to my Breaſt. I broke up the Seals with Modeſty and Reverence, and my Greedy Eyes devour'd the Lines of Profound Wiſdom; the Sentences and Aphoriſms worthy to be written in Letters of Gold. Then 'twas I bleſs'd the Hour of my Nativity, and the more Happy Moment wherein I Firſt had the Honor of thy Familiarity and Friendſhip: O thou Sincere and Eximious Patron of ſuch as love the Sciences! Renowned for thy Learning and Probity of Manners! Prince of the Alfaqui's and Doctors! Crown of the Sage Aſſembly of Philoſophers! Oracle of the Age!

Glory be to God, who has neither Beginning nor End; Who alone poſſeſſes the Infinite Expanſe and Life Eternal; Who is Ador'd by the Inhabitants of Heaven, of Earth and of Hell. Benedictions on Michael, Gabriel, Iſraphiel, Ithuriel, Jeremiel, Haſmariel, and on all the Happy Miniſters of his Divine Majeſty; as alſo on the Angel of Death. Peace to the True Believers on Earth, and Salvation to the Devils and Damn'd, after they have accompliſh'd compliſh'd their Penance in Hell, and the Term of Wrath ſhall be Expir'd.

An Univerſal Charity dilates my Heart; I embrace with Love all the Creatures of God. This is owing to the Seaſonable Arrival of thy Letter: For at the Moment when that came, I was plung'd in ſo deep a Melancholy, that I cou'd hardly afford a Kind Thought for any Thing on Earth, and I perfectly hated my ſelf. I have theſe Fits of Sadneſs often, it being an Effect of my Conſtitution.

At thoſe Seaſons Life appears an Inſupportable Burden, and all the Buſtle and Noiſe of Mortals a Vain Fatigue. My Senſes, which at other Times adminiſter Delight and Pleaſure, are now the Inſtruments of Anguiſh and Pain. Every Thing I ſee and hear, diſguſts me. I abhor my Neceſſary Food. Neither can the Sweeteſt Odors, or ſofteſt Strains of Muſick bring me into a better Temper; Till Sleep Eclipſes the Light of my buſy Imagination, and puts out every glaring Thought. Then my Soul takes her Repoſe: And ſtealing from my Body, enters into the Shady Vale of Viſions, and ſports with Innocent Idea's. Thus having diverted my ſelf with jumbling Monſtrous Eſſences together, and hurling one Chimæra at another, I return again to my Body, and Sighing awake, griev'd that I cou'd not longer ſtay in that Mock-World, where I cou'd have wiſh'd my Reſidence for Ever, rather than in this, which gives me ſo much Real Pain. Thus is my Anguiſh renew'd with the Morning. Light is more Irkſom to me than Darkneſs, and the Day which brings Joy to other Mortals is more terrible to me than Night, and the Shadow of Death.

me

I complain to the Elements, but they will not hear or regard me. All Nature ſeems to laugh at my Affliction, and the Beaſts of the Field triumph o'er me. As for Men, here are none but Infidels, my profeſs'd Enemies to whom I can vent my Sorrows: And I'm aſham'd to make a Woman my Confeſſor, tho' 'twere my own Mother, who lives in Paris, and daily ſees me.

If in this dolorous Condition I prepare my ſelf with the accuſtom'd Purifications of the Law, and addreſs to the Omnipotent, I know not where to find him: His Eſſence is Unſearchable, and flies from Human Thought. I call him aloud by his Ninety Nine Adorable Names, but receive no Anſwer. I repeat his Incomprehenſible Attributes, but all to no Purpoſe. In a Word, I ſay and do all that the Law enjoyns, the Prophet counſels, Holy Perſons recommend, or my own Reaſon ſuggeſts, as proper Means to obtain the Favor of Heaven, and a Redreſs of my Calamity: But find no Comfort. And, for ought I know, that Spaniard might as ſoon be heard, who being ignorant what Form of Prayer to uſe, rehears'd the Four and Twenty Letters of the Alphabet, deſiring God to form ſuch Words out of 'em, as beſt expreſs'd the Petitioner's Neceſſities.

I tell thee, Illuſtrious Prelate, after I'm tyr'd with Vocal Devotions, I have Recourſe

to

to Contemplation. I examine my Paſt Life, and find that I my ſelf am the Source of my own Melancholy, in not ſtrictly obeying the Law of the Prophet, the Precepts of the Seniors, and the Dictates of my Conſcience: And all this, for the Sake of Loyalty to the Grand Signior, and in Confidence of the Mufti's Diſpenſation. Now I ask of thee, Whether it be Lawful to commit a Thouſand Vices, that I may only acquit my ſelf fairly in One Virtue? Or, to think, that in ſuch Caſes, the Mufti has Power to diſannul the Expreſs, Poſitive Injunctions of our Holy Law-giver? Is the Empire of the Faithful to be ſerv'd by the Infidelity and Prophaneneſs of Muſſulmans? Or the Truth to be ſupported by Lyes and Perjuries?

I tremble to think what a Confuſion I ſhall be in, when the Prophet ſhall reproach me, That I have preferr'd the Favour of Men, to the Smiles of Heaven. I know not what to do. Oh, that I were in the Parching Deſarts of Libya, or any the moſt Unfrequented Solitude of Egypt! A Companion of Dragons, and other Horrid Monſters of Africk! rather than in this Station, which renders my Life a Hell upon Earth, and torments me with Half the Diſquiets of the Damn'd.

But if this appears too Extravagant and Deſperate a Thought, let me at leaſt wiſh my ſelf at Fez, the meaneſt of thy Slaves, or of the Incomparable Muſu Abul Yahyan, of whom thy laſt Letter gave ſo high a Character. I have addreſs'd a Diſpatch to him, hoping hoping for the Honour of his Friendſhip and Correſpondence.

Let not the Liberty I've taken to tell thee of my Sadneſs, diſcourage thee from writing: But reſt aſſur'd, that whenever thou ſhalt vouchſafe me a Letter, tho' I were in the Agonies of Death, 'twould call me back again.

Paris, 25th. of the 9th. Moon, of the Year 1659.

LETTER IV.

To the Kaimacham.

THeſe Nazarenes are very Fertile in New Religions. Europe is a Wilderneſs overrun with Monſtruous Sects and Hereſies. Every Age produces freſh Pretenders to Prophecy and Divine Revelation. Error is Prolifick and multiplies Infinitely, whilſt Truth remains the ſame for Ever, and is comprehended in a few Rules.

Of late Years there are a Sort of People ſprung up in England, Holland, Germany, and other Parts of the North, boaſting of a New Commiſſion given them from Heaven, to Preach the Everlaſting Truth, reform the Errors and Vices of Mankind, and lead People the only Infallible Way to Happineſs.

Their

Their Addreſs is Plain and Simple, Bold and Uniform, uſing no other Ceremonies or Compliments in their Diſcourſe or Carriage to Perſons of the Greateſt Quality, than to the Vulgar, and thoſe of the moſt Inferiour Rank.

They ſtile themſelves, The True Seed, the Offspring of Jacob, Jews of the Promiſe, Iſraelites without Fraud, with ſuch like vain Titles; but by others they are generally call'd Quakers.

They ſay the Ring-Leader of this People, profeſſes himſelf to be the Meſſias, being in all Parts of his Body and Features of his Face like Jeſus the Son of Mary: Or at leaſt 'tis obſerv'd, That he exactly reſembles that Pourtraiture of him which Publius Lentulus ſent to the Senate of Rome out of Judea, when he was Governour of that Province. Hence his Followers ſcruple not to call him Jeſus, The Beauty of Ten Thouſand, The Only begotten Son of God, The Prophet who is to Seal up all Things, the Prince of Peace, King of Iſrael, Judge, Conſolation and Hope of the World.

When he travels, his Diſciples attend him bare-headed (which, thou knoweſt, is a Token of Reverence among the Franks) yet they never uncover to any other Mortal. He rides on Horſeback, whilſt they walk on Foot before, behind, and on each Side of him, ſpreading their Garments in the Way through which he paſſes. The Hoofs of his Beaſt tread tread only on Silks, or other Coſtly Stuffs. And as they enter any Town or City, they Chaunt aloud his Praiſes, proclaming him the Son of David, and Heir of the Divine Promiſes.

All his Followers pretend to be Prophets, boaſting of ſtrange Illuminations and Raptures, foretelling Things to come, and reproaching the Vices of Governours and the Greateſt Princes, with a Boldneſs which has but few Precedents. In a word, they every where preach, That God is laying the Foundation of a New Monarchy, which ſhall deſtroy all the Reſt in the World, and ſhall never have an End it ſelf.

This gives a Jealouſy to the States where they live, and therefore they are perſecuted in all Places. Yet they appear very conſtant in their Sufferings, and tenacious of the Doctrines they preach.

They ſeem, in my Opinion, to reſemble one of our Muſſulman Sects, who aſſert, That Jeſus the Son of Mary ſhall return again upon Earth: That he ſhall Marry and beget Children, be Anointed King of the Nations who believe in One God, and in this Glorious State ſhall reign Forty Years. After which he ſhall ſubdue Antichriſt, and then ſhall follow the Diſſolution of all Things. Yet the Orthodox Believers reject this Tenet as Fabulous. Neither is there any Countenance given to it in that Verſicle of the Alcoran, where it is ſaid, Thou Mahomet ſhalt ſee thy Lord return in the Clouds: Since that only ly intimates the Glorious Deſcent which Moſes, Jeſus and Mahomet ſhall make from Paradiſe, with Enoch, Elias, and the One Hundred Twenty Four Thouſand Prophets, to aſſemble the Elect at the Day of Judgment.

If thou would'ſt have my Opinion of theſe New Religioniſts in Europe, and their Leader; I take him to be an Impoſtor, and his Followers to be either Fools or Mad-Men. Even juſt ſuch another Crew, as thoſe who follow'd Moſeileima, in the Days of our Holy Law-Giver. This was an Arabian Impoſtor, who pretended to ſet up for a Prophet, and attempted to compoſe a Book like the Alcoran. But he was Infatuated with a Vain Arrogance, and there was no Truth or Elegance in his Writings, no Juſtice on his Side, nor Underſtanding in him or his Party. To be ſhort, both he and they were all cut to pieces in the Vale of Akreb, by the Troops of Abu-Bacroſſadic, the Firſt Cailiph.

As to theſe Modern Seducers, they are not Men of Arms, but a Herd of Silly, Inſignificant People, aiming rather to heap up Riches in Obſcurity, than to acquire a Fame by any Heroick Undertaking. They are Generally Merchants or Mechanicks, and are obſerv'd to be very Punctual in their Dealings, Men of few Words in a Bargain, Modeſt and Compos'd in their Deportment, Temperate in their Lives, and uſing great Frugality in all things. In a word, They are ſingularly Induſtrious, ſparing no Labour or Pains to encreaſe encreaſe their Wealth; and ſo Subtle and Inventive, that they wou'd if poſſible, extract Gold out of Aſhes. I know none that excel them in their Characters, but the Jews and the Banians. The Former being the Craftieſt of all Men, and the Latter ſo ſuperlatively Cunning, that they will over-reach the Devil.

But theſe are no Signs of a Pure Religion; For that only preſcribes the Methods of withdrawing and ſeparating the Soul from the Contagion of Earthly Things, and of uniting it to the Deity, which is its Sourſe.

Illuſtrious Kaimacham, I bid thee Adieu, praying that thou and I may at laſt meet in that Center of all Things, after our Various Epicycles and Excurſions in this Lower World.

Paris, 15th. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year 1659.

LETTER

LETTER V.

To the Same.

I Sent a Diſpatch ſome Moons paſt to the Cadileſquer of Romeli, Guardian of the Imperial Canons, Interpreter of the Laws of Equity; wherein I inform'd him of the Advances that were made in order to a Peace between France and Spain. Now I can aſſure thee, that Peace is concluded, and the Articles Sign'd on both Sides by the Two Plenipotentiaries.

I need not repeat what I particularly related to that Grandee. My Letters are all publiſh'd in the Divan, and Regiſter'd. Yet it will not be unwelcome perhaps to thee, to hear with what Niceneſs of Punctilio, theſe Infidel Miniſters met to accompliſh an Affair, whereon depends the Intereſt and Honor of their Reſpective Maſters, the Happineſs of the Two Kingdoms, and the General Byaſs of all the Weſt.

There is a little Iſland form'd by the River Bidaſſoa, call'd the Iſle of Pheaſants, through the Middle of which, a Line is drawn which exactly ſeparates the Territories of both Monarchs. This Place was agreed on for the Interview of the Two Miniſters. Each had his Bridge to enter the Iſland in that Part which belong'd to his Maſter. And over the Line of Separation was erected a large Divan or Council-Room, to be enter'd only by Two Private Doors, one out of Cardinal Mazarini's Lodgings, rais'd on the French Side of the Council-Room, the other out of Don Louis D'Aro's Apartment, built on the Spaniſh Side.

Each of theſe Miniſters was accompany'd by ſeveral Princes, and Grandees of the Court, and above Sixty other Perſons of Quality, with a Guard of Four Hundred Horſe and Foot, to ſecure their Bridges, and the Place of Conference. In a word, Things were manag'd with ſo much Moderation and good Succeſs, that the Mareſchal de Gramont was ſent Embaſſador Extraordinary into Spain, and receiv'd at that Court with Infinite Civilities and Honour.

The Subject of his Negotiation, was to treat of a Match between the King his Maſter, and the Infanta of Spain. His Conduct and Addreſs were ſuch, as ſoon procur'd the Catholick King's Conſent: And from that Time the Marſhal approach'd the Infanta with more than ordinary Submiſſions, eſteeming her now as the Queen of France. Soon after this, the Nuptial Contract, and the Peace was mutually Sign'd, to the Immenſe Joy of the Subjects of both Sides, who were very glad to exchange the Toils and Calamities of War, for the Sweets and Profit of Peace.

It will be needleſs to inſert here all the Articles on which they agreed. Two will be worth the Knowledge of the Supreme Divan. And thoſe are, the Releaſe of Charles Duke of Lorrain, Lorrain, on the Spaniſh King's Side; And on the Part of the King of France, the Reſtauration of the Prince of Conde to the Free Poſſeſſion and Enjoyment of all his Eſtates, Honours, Dignities and Priviledges, as the Firſt Prince of the Royal Blood, with the Government of the Provinces of Bourgoigne and Breſſe.

A little before theſe Articles were Sign'd, the Young Prince of Spain dy'd ſuddainly, not having ſeen Twelve Moons. I mention'd the Birth of this Royal Infant in one of my Letters, and the Extraordinary Solemnities that were made thereupon by the King of Spain, and his Embaſſadors at Foreign Courts. Theſe Infidels appear in all things too paſſionately affected with the Glories of our Mortal State, which at the Height are but Tranſient Shadows, or ſomething leſs Conſiderable.

I'm amaz'd at the bold Rebellion of the Baſſa of Aleppo, and that he ſhou'd endeavour to cheat the Empire with ſo ſtale an Impoſture, as a Sham-Son of Amurat. Yet it ſeems he made a Conſiderable Progreſs under this Pretence. Some were glad of Novelty, others were frightned out of their Allegiance: Whilſt only a few ſerv'd his Intereſt in pure Diſcontent and Hopes to amend their Fortune. The Country People are generally oppreſs'd by their Governours, and 'is no Wonder if they take up Arms for one that promiſes to deliver 'em from their Calamities. This is the Uſual Pretext of all Innovations in the State. The Soldiers alſo are defrauded of their due Pay; and then they're ready to Fight under the next General that brings moſt Money with him. Neither are there wanting Male-contents among the Grandees at ſuch Times, to foment and abett an Inſurrection.

All theſe Events proceed from the Ill Conduct of the Supreme Miniſters, who alone are Reſponſible for the Miſcarriages of the State.

Illuſtrious Kaimacham, the Frame of the Ottoman Government is out of Order; I wiſh Fate does not pull it in Pieces, as a Neceſſary Step to its Amendment. Adieu

Paris, 2d. of the laſt Moon,
of the Year 1659.

LETTER VI.

To Hamet Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

I Wiſh thee all Imaginable Joy of thy New Dignity; yet queſtion, whether thou or thy Predeceſſor be the Happier Man. 'Tis a vaſt Honour indeed, and attended with Immenſe Profit, to ſerve in this Station the moſt High, moſt Potent and moſt Invincible Monarch on Earth. But at the ſame Time, there's Infinite Toil and Fatigue in it, with Abundance of Perils. From all which the Fortunate Muzlu is now deliver'd, and they are become thy Portion.

nate

As for him, I cannot but eſteem him Happy, in that he has got Permiſſion to retire to his Country-Seat, out of the Crowd and Noiſe of the City, and from the Stifling Buſineſſes of State, which choak the more Innocent and Natural Delights of the Soul. Now he is fully reſtor'd to the Elements, and to himſelf; whereas before, the perpetual Hurry of the Court, made him in Part a Stranger to Both: For there a Man inſenſibly loſes Acquaintance with his own moſt Intimate Affections: His Spirit is alienated amidſt the Multiplicity of his Concerns; 'tis ſtretch'd on the Rack of Ten Thouſand Cares and Inquietudes; 'tis divided, ſhatter'd and rent in Pieces.

Beſides, were he as free from theſe diſtracting Thoughts as a Santone; yet the very Neceſſity of living always in a City, was enough to render him Miſerable. For I eſteem ſuch a Confinement, no better than a Priſon at Large; and not far from being buried Alive.

'Tis true, Conſtantinople has the Advantage of all the Cities in the World, for the Delightfulneſs of its Situation; the Houſes being ſo pleaſantly intermix'd with fair Gardens, and the Streets refreſh'd with cool Breezes from the Sea. It looks at a Diſtance like a Town in a Wood; or one may term it, a Foreſt compos'd of Minarets and Cypreſſes. The Terraſſes afford agreeable Proſpects of the Neighbouring Fields and Mountains: And 'tis pleaſant to ſtand on the Water-Side, and view the Innumerable Variety of Boats and Veſſels Sailing from one Port to another, with all the other Divertiſements on the Sea, and the Beautiful Mixture of Palaces and Groves, Chioſcs and Gardens, Seraglio's and Villages which grace the Oppoſite Shore. O Queen of Cities, Miſtreſs of Kingdoms, Glory of Nations, Commandreſs and Sanctuary of the Whole Earth! Thrice Happy ſhou'd I count my ſelf, if I might have the Favour to reſide within thy Venerable Walls, and exchange the polluted Society of Infidels, for that of True Believers.

How often do I languiſh to ſee the Glittering Creſcents, the Triumphant Enſigns of the Ottomans, on the Tops of the Minarets in the Imperial City? How oft do I wiſh my ſelf proſtrate on the Carpets of the Sacred Moſques, in the devout Aſſemblies of the Faithful, Adoring the Eternal in Perfection of Sanctity? Whereas, now I'm forc'd to go into the Temples of Idolaters, to kneel and bow down before Stocks and Statues, to join ſeemingly with Unbelievers, and pray to that which has no Life, nor Senſe, nor Power,

How do I envy the Bleſſed State of the meaneſt Artizan in Conſtantinople, who daily feeds on the wholeſom Pillaw of the Eaſt, and drinks the delectable Sherbets, or Waters tinctur'd with the Rich Fruits of Greece? Whereas, I am compell'd to eat Meats forbidden by our Holy Prophet; and to render my Soul Execrable by an Impure and Prophane Diet, or I muſt Starve. For, theſe Uncircumcis'd are more Abominable than Ravens and Vultures, to whom the moſt filthy Carrion is a Dainty. And to cloak their Uncleanneſs they corrupt their own Goſpel, and forge a Toleration from the Meſſias himſelf. As if that Holy Prophet, who in every the leaſt Tittle obey'd the Law of Moſes, and ſet himſelf as an Example for his Followers to imitate, cou'd be guilty of Contradicting thoſe Divine Precepts, and running Counter to his own Practice, in recommending Uncleanneſs and Libertiniſm. No: the Admirable Son of Mary, was the moſt Temperate and Abſtemious Man in the World, and both in his Words and Actions preach'd up thoſe Vertues to others; having often expreſly declar'd to his Diſciples, That he came not to aboliſh the Law, but to refine and perfect it.

Soul

He was Circumcis'd on the Eighth Day after his Nativity, according to the Injunction of Moſes, and the conſtant Practice of the Sons of Iſrael. In a Word, through the whole Courſe of his Life, he never deviated from the Traditions of his Fathers, the Seniors of the Houſe of Jacob.

'Tis true, he frequently argued againſt the many Trivial Superſtitions of the Phariſees, who evacuated the more Eſſential Points of the Law, by ſuperinducing a Number of Inſignificant Ceremonies: But he never open'd his Mouth againſt any Poſitive Precept; ſuch as were thoſe which limited the Choice they were to make of Meats, diſtinguiſhing the Impure from the Clean. Yet, the Chriſtians delude themſelves with a Falſe Belief, that he gave 'em a Diſpenſation to eat any Thing without Caution or Reſerve.

Hence it is, that they defile themſelves with Swines-Fleſh and Creeping Things, and Blood is in all their Diſhes. They ſcruple not to eat of that which died of it ſelf, and banquet as freely with what was knock'd down or ſtrangl'd, as we wou'd do with the Fleſh of a Beaſt that was kill'd in Pronouncing the Name of God. The Shambles here afford no other Proviſion but ſuch as this; and he that will not Eat that which is an Abomination to a Muſſulman, muſt be contented with Herbs. This I reckon as one of the Greateſt of my Misfortunes, and it makes me burn with Deſire to return to Conſtantinople.

Yet, after all, I ſhou'd think my ſelf far more Happy, if I might have the Liberty to ſpend the Reſt of my Days in my Native Country: So great an Admirer I am of a Rural Life, and Solitude. And 'tis for this Reaſon, I count thy Predeceſſor a Happy Man, in having the Privilege of a ſweet Retirement; where he may take Breath from the vain Importunity and Buſtle of Mortals.

In the mean Time, there is a Species of Felicity in thy Employment: And thou can'ſt not be call'd Miſerable, ſo long as thou acquitteſt thy ſelf fairly, and enjoyeſt the Favour of thy Sovereign.

I perceive by thy Letter, that thou art curious to know the Characters of Foreign States, with the various Intereſts of Nazarene Princes; The Intrigues of theſe Weſtern Courts; their Overtures of Peace and War; And the different Laws, Maxims and Cuſtoms by which the People are Govern'd. Thy Converſation with Embaſſadors at the Port, will furniſh thee with Abundance of Uſeful Remarks in this Kind: But, ſince thou requireſt me to ſend my Obſervations, I will hereafter obey thy Commands in Succeſſive Letters. For, this is too large a Theme for one Diſpatch.

At preſent, thou mayſt receive and Regiſter for true News, That the Peace between France and Spain has been Sign'd by both Kings, and Solemnly publiſh'd throughout their Territories, with Inexpreſſible Joy and Magnificence. It is certain alſo, that the King of Sueden is dead, and the Duke of Orleance, Uncle to the French King: Which has in ſome meaſure qualify'd the Mirth of the French on this Occaſion. Aſſuredly, Human Affairs are Equally checquer'd with Good and Evil. Bliſs comes not to us in Pure Unmix'd Streams. Death keeps an even Pace, and knocks as boldly at the Gates of Kings, as at the Cottages of the Meaneſt Slaves.

It is the Part of a Wiſe Man to be always reſign'd to Heaven, and prepar'd for the worſt Events: As for the Beſt, they never come amiſs.

Paris, 17th. of the 3d. Moon,
of the Year 1660.

LETTER VII.

To Dgnet Oglou.

SHall I converſe with thee, as Horace us'd to do with his Friends over a Glaſs of Generous Wine? Let us lay aſide Maſques for a while, and diſcourſe with open Souls. I believe thou haſt as equal a Veneration for our Holy Prophet, as I; and haſt been Educated in all the Tenderneſſes of Piety, the Niceties of Divine Love, as our Mollahs are pleas'd to call it. We have been both of us Careful to riſe before the Sun, and ſay our Oraiſons every Morning in a Demy-Trance, that is, Half a-ſleep, and Half a-wake. This, no doubt, is a neceſſary Point of Piety. And we have been no leſs ſollicitous in obſerving the other Four Hours of Prayer. Either of us wou'd have counted it an Irreligious Negligence, if we had ſeen a Piece of Paper on the Ground, and had not ſtoop'd to take it up, with Reverence wiping off the Dirt, and kiſſing the Tabula Raſa, on which Men uſe to write the Name of God. As if 'twere not an Equal Argument of Reſpect, to ſecure from Prophanation, Sticks, Stones, Rags, or any Thing whereon 'twere poſſible to Engrave or Print the All-Myſterious Characters; Nay, or the very Sands themſelves, which, as ſome ſay, were the Firſt Books on Earth. However, if they were not the Firſt, we are ſure that in very Early Ages, Men us'd to ſtamp their Memoirs, or draw them out in perceptible Figures on the Surface of the Earth: Witneſs the Old Ship-wreck'd Philoſopher, who being caſt aſhore in an Unknown Land, ſoon trac'd out the Manners of the People, by certain Mathematical Impreſſions which he found in the Sands: For, he concluded theſe to be the very Foot-ſteps of Humanity and Vertue. But, to return to the Bus'neſs of Religion: We have been Obedient to the Inſtructions of our Fathers and Tutors; Zealous in obſerving every Punctilio of Traditional Piety. We have Faſted, Pray'd, Waſh'd, and given Alms, at the Appointed Seaſons, and in the Manner preſcrib'd by the Law. All theſe, I own, are Commendable Exerciſes. But, methinks, they are not the Solid and Subſtantial Parts of True Religion. I hate Hypocriſy, and the devout Wantonneſs of thoſe who think to mock God with Ceremonies and Empty Forms. It were much better to mix with the Idolatrous Rites of Bacchus (if they deſerve that Epithet) and rant in Honour of Eternal Wine, talk Reputed Blaſphemy, and reform the Model of the Univerſe; I ſay, I'd chuſe to do all this, and more, rather than cheat my ſelf with Empty Hopes of gaining Paradiſe, for acting to the Life, the Shams of Pious Mimickry.

ſure

I would not have thee think, that what I have now ſaid, proceeds from any Contempt of the Eternal Majeſty.

By thoſe fair Heavens above, and all the Immortal Spangles of the Sky, I ſwear, there's not a Faculty in Mahmut's Soul, which is not fill'd with Gratitude and Veneration, which does not burn with Flames of Sacred Love to the Adorable Fountain of All Things. In a word, I only ſtrive to reſcue my Friend from the Attempts of Pious Frauds, the Religous Burleſques of our Mollah's and Muftis.

Believe, my Dear Dgnet, That there is a God, a Firſt Cauſe, a Juſt Judge preſiding over the World: Believe alſo his Prophet, the Holy, the Beloved, Mahomet, the Minion, as I may ſay, of the Omnipotent. But, have ſome Faoth alſo for the Reſt of his Meſſengers and Favourites. Let not Hali be thought of, without ſome Inward Flurry's of Devotion. He was a Muſſulman, and the Fourth Cailiph, tho' his Followers be damn'd Hereticks in our Divinity. Had Right taken Place, perhaps he had been the Firſt of the Vicars, but his Cauſe was ſuperſeded by his Abſence. Let him, and that, reſt till the Final Inquiſition: And acknowledge, that I have ſaid too little for a Schiai, and not too much for a Synni.

I know no Reaſon alſo, why we ſhou'd not reverence the Memories of Mercury, Orpheus, Cadmus, Meliſſus, Faunus, and the Reſt of the Ancient Sages and Lawgivers, who Inſtructed the Nations of the Earth in the Myſteries of Religion, taught them to Adore One Supreme God, to believe the Immortality tality of the Soul, and to practiſe Good Works.

What, tho' the Ceremonies of their Worſhip were different from ours, and perhaps polluted with an Unjuſtifiable Adoration of Images? What tho' their Altars reek'd with the Blood of ſlain Beaſts, and ſometimes ſmoak'd even with Humane Sacrifices? Theſe Barbarous Rites were not Inſtituted by the Firſt Oracles of Religion, Illuminated Souls, Nuncio's from God to this Lower World: But, they were afterwards ſuper-induc'd through the Corruption of Times, the Avarice of Prieſts, and the Superſtition of the People. And for ought we know, our own Hiſtorians have not been Impartial in relating the Truth.

There is an Innate Envy between People of different Families and Nations. Both We and our Fathers that deſcend from Abraham by Iſmael, and the Jews who are his Poſterity by Iſaac, have been too favourable to the Offspring of that Beloved of God. We generally entertain and cheriſh a Specifick Pride on the Score of our Illuſtrious Pedigree: Eſpecially the Jews, who will not allow any People on Earth to be their Equals, either in Point of Antiquity, the Nobility of their Race, or the Innumerable Multitude of their Brethren. Whereas they conſider not, that they are diſpers'd up and down over the whole Earth, like Sheep without a Shepherd, not permitted to poſſeſs a Cubit of Land which they can call their own: Contemn'd, hated, and made a Proverbial Scoff among all Nations: Infamous,

mous Vagabonds, Uſurers, Slaves, and Pimps to other Men's Pleaſures: Men of no Fame or Character: Finally, in their preſent Circumſtances, the moſt Spurious and Ignoble of all the Sons of Adam, except the Kafars of Ethiopia, who feed on the Guts and Dung of Beaſts.

'Tis true indeed, their Anceſtors made a Conſiderable Figure in the World in the Days of Solomon and other Victorious Kings, during their Poſſeſſion of Paleſtine. And yet in thoſe very Times, they were often humbled and led away into Captivity, by the more Fortunate Kings of Babylon, Perſia, and Aſſyria, and afterwards ſubdu'd by the Grecians; till at laſt they were totally Ruined, their Cities laid Waſte, their Temple burnt to Aſhes, and their Country quite diſpeopled by the Romans.

If we aſcend yet higher to their Celebrated Migration out of Egypt, of which their own Hiſtorians make ſuch a Noiſe, and tell ſo many Fabulous Wonders. We ſhall find a very Mean and Contemptible Character given of 'em by Egyptian Writers, and thoſe of other Nations, Men of as great Authority, as Joſephus, or any other Jewiſh Hiſtorian. Manethos a Prieſt of Egypt, calls 'em a Crew of Leprous and Naſty People, and ſays, they were expell'd the Country by Amenophis then Reigning, and driven into Syria; their Captain being Moſes, an Egyptian Prieſt. A like Relation we have from Chæremon, an Author of good Credit among the Greeks, who tells tells us, That in the Reign of Amenophis, Two Hundred and Fifty Thouſand Lepers were forcibly baniſh'd out of Egypt, under the Conduct or Tiſithen and Peteſeth (i. e.) Moſes and Aaron. And tho' other Writers differ in the Name of the King then Reigning in Egypt, yet all agree in aſſerting the Iſraelites to be a Naſty Sort of People, over-run with Scabs and Infectious Boils, and that they were eſteem'd the Scum and Filth of the Nation. Tacitus, a Roman Writer, of Unqueſtionable Authority; adds, That Moſes, one of the Exil'd Lepers, being a Man of Wit and Reputation among them, when he ſaw the Grief and Confuſion of his Brethren, bid them be of good Cheer, and neither truſt the Gods or Men of Egypt, but only confide in him, and obey his Counſel: For that he was ſent from Heaven to be their Conductor out of this Calamity, and to Protect them from all their Enemies. Upon which the People not knowing what Courſe to take, ſurrendred themſelves wholly to his Diſpoſal, from which Time he became their Captain and Lawgiver, leading them through the Deſarts of Arabia, where they committed great Rapine and Spoil, putting Man, Woman and Child to the Sword, burning their Cities, and laying all Things deſolate. Dear Dgnet, What could be ſaid worſe of a Company of Robbers and Banditi?

Moſes is gone to Paradiſe, and when I mention his Name, it is with a profound Reverence; for, he was the Greateſt of the Ancient cient Prophets. Yet give me Leave to have ſome Regard for my own Reaſon. He was but a Mortal as well as I; and without doubt, was not exempt from Humane Frailties. He had the Advantage to be Educated in the College of the Royal Prieſts at Memphis, which none of his Nation could boaſt of beſides himſelf. Suffer me to tell thee my Thoughts frankly, and without Diſguiſe. Magick and Aſtrology were the only Sciences then in Vogue: And he being perfectly vers'd in all the Myſteries and Secrets of Egyptian Wiſdom, 'twas no hard Task for him to poſſeſs the Rude and Ignorant Sons of Jacob, with a profound Attach and Veneration for his Perſon: And in that diſtreſs'd Condition, to mold their flexible Spirits to what Diſcipline he pleas'd.

Suſpect me not for an Infidel or an Atheiſt, becauſe I diſcourſe with this Freedom. I have heard ſome of our Mollahs, ſay a great deal more in their Private Converſation. And 'tis a ſuperſtitious Timerouſneſs, not to be bold in the Exerciſe of our Reaſon, which taught even the Prophet Moſes himſelf, the Methods of Conqueſt, and getting a Fame which ſhould know no End.

I am not Ambitious, nor would I tempt thee to aſpire at an undue Grandeur: But let us not be leſs than our ſelves, that is, Men, There is no reaſon we ſhould be impos'd upon by Fabulous Reports of Interreſs'd and Deſigning Writers: Or that we ſhould give Faith to every Credulous Fool, Doubtleſs,

there

there were many Nations eſtabliſh'd on Earth before the Iſraelites; and Great Prophets, who were not of the Lineage of Abrahim. The Date of the Olympiads is much more certain to a Day, nay, to an Hour, than the Hejira of the Iſraelites: ſince the Former is Demonſtrated by the Eclipſes of the Sun and Moon, interwoven by the Gentile Hiſtorians, in the Body of their Hiſtory; whereas the Latter is defective in this Material Point, and is expos'd to a Thouſand Diſputes among Writers.

My Friend, let not thou and I trouble our ſelves with Needleſs Controverſies, or be Zealous for Things of no Moment; but Adoring One God, and believing what is Rational, we may poſſeſs our Souls in Tranquility and Peace.

Paris, 11th. of the 5th. Moon,
of the Year 1660.

LET-

LETTER VIII.

To the Kaimacham.

AT length, after a long Alienation, the Prince of Conde is reſtor'd to the King's Favour: For which, he is oblig'd to the King of Spain. I have already intimated in one of my Letters, That this was agree'd on in the Treaty of Peace between theſe Two Crowns, as an Article Equivalent to that of the Duke of Lorrain's Releaſe, ſollicited by the King of France. Now 'tis put in Execution, and the Rebel Prince is receiv'd with Abundance of Careſſes, by the King, Queen-Mother, Cardinal Mazarini, and the whole Court.

He is counted the Valianteſt Man of this Age; and was ſo pronounc'd long ago by the Mareſchal Turenne, who is a Souldier of no mean Character, both for his Judgment and Courage. He was once extremely belov'd by all the French. But his Wildneſs and Inconſtancy, with the Deſtructive Effects of the Civil Wars which he rais'd, chang'd their Affections for a while into Indifference, Coldneſs, and Ill-Will. But now all's well again.

He and his Brother the Prince of Conti, ſeldom agree'd, being often the Heads of Contrary Parties, during the Minority of this King. And the Younger being crump-Shoulder'd, der'd, Conde us'd to be a little Sarcaſtick upon him, threatning to ſhave his uncourtly Back into the Faſhion with his Sword.

It is certain, the Prince of Conde was very wild and profuſe when Young, but now he begins to take ſoberer Meaſures. During his Father's Life, he was call'd the Duke of Enguien. And to reflect on the Parſimony of the Old Prince, he us'd to take ſeveral Handfuls of Gold with one Hand, and fill a Purſe, ſaying, This is my Father's Practice. Then he would turn the Purſe up-ſide down with t'other Hand, and ſcattering the Gold among his Favourites, would add, This is my Humour.

Once as he was paſſing on Foot through a Town in France, under his Father's Government; the Chief Magiſtrate of the Place, who was an Old Man, met him and begun to make an Oration with the beſt Rhetorick he could. But the Prince being in a Frolickſom Humour, took Advantage of a very low Conge the Old Gentleman made him, and leap'd over his Head, and ſtood ſtill behind him. The Magiſtrate not taking any Notice of this wild Prank, turned very gravely about, and addreſs'd himſelf with a new Obeiſance, but not ſo low as the Former. However, the Nimble Prince catch'd him upon the Half-Bent, and ſetting his Hands on the Old Monſieur's Shoulders, whipt over again the ſecond Time; Which quite ſpoil'd his intended Speech, to the great Diverſion of all the Spectators.

In

In his Youth he was much addicted to Women, and took a peculiar Delight in debauching Nuns: Which occaſion'd the Queen-Mother to reflect on him ſomething Satyrically once, when he inform'd her that the Suiſſe Souldiers were guilty of great Diſorders, ſome of them getting into the Nunneries, and violating the Chaſtity of thoſe Conſecrated Females. For the Queen replied, If you had told me they broke into the Wine-Cellars, I would believe you; for the Suiſſes are all known Drunkards. But as for Amours with Nuns, none is ſo likely to make 'em as the Duke of Enguien.

However, all that I have ſaid, hinders not but that he is now a Prudent Man, a good General, and Fortunate in recovering his Sovereign's Favour.

In a Word, this Court is ſo overjoyed at the Marriage of their King with the Infanta of Spain, that they have no Room left for peeviſh Reſentments. All Crimes are forgiven. And the Devil himſelf would be welcome at the Wedding, provided he would be debonair, and good Company.

The Nuptials are only Celebrated by Proxy as yet. But here are vaſt Preparations making for the compleating the Ceremony.

What the Iſſue of this Marriage and Peace will be, 'tis not eaſy to divine: But I doubt, the Chriſtians are hatching Evil againſt the Ottoman Port, in Regard all the Princes in Europe, are coming to an Agreement.

Illuſtrious

Illuſtrious Kaimacham, Let not this Intimation paſs away as a Dream. For I tell thee again, theſe Infidels are plotting of Miſchief.

Paris, 1ſt. of the 7th. Moon, of the Year 1660.

LETTER IX.

To the ſame.

I Believe thou wilt now receive from me the earlieſt News of a Mighty Change, a Surprizing Revolution in the Engliſh Government. Know then, that he whom I have ſo often mention'd under the Title of King of the Scots in my Former Letters, the Eldeſt Son and Rightful Heir of the Britiſh Kingdoms' Charles II. is reſtor'd to the Throne of his Father's, without Violence or Blood-ſhed, by the Unanimous Conſent, and Earneſt Deſire of his Subjects.

This Young Prince has been an Exile for Twelve Years in Foreign Courts, and has heard of as many ſeveral Alterations in the State of his Dominions, during his Abſence; every Change producing a New Form of Government. The Rebels had run over all Ariſtotle's Politicks, and the Various Models of Plato and other Philoſophers, who treated of Common-

Common-Wealths, to find out such Patterns as best suited with the Necessities and Genius of that Nation. There is not a Species of Aristocracy, Democracy and Oligarchy, which they did not put in Practice to support the Frame of that Government, whose Basis they had remov'd; for it was founded on a Monarchy of a long and Hereditary Descent. And therefore all their most Artificial Contrivances were Ineffectual, and they might as well have endeavoured to make Buttresses for a Castle in the Air. In a Word, the English found themselves so disjointed and weaken'd by Civil Wars, Taxes, and the other Usual Effects of Usurpation and Tyranny, that they had no other Way left to save their Nation from utter Ruine, but by bringing their Lawful King back again, who is the Angular Stone whereon all their Welfare and Interest is built.

There is one Thing Remarkable in this Turn of English Affairs, That their Sovereign landed and made his Triumphant Entry into that Island, on the Anniversary Day of his Birth. Which puts me in Mind of what is Generally discourſed here at Paris; That on the Day of his Nativity, there was seen a Bright Star in the Heavens, when the Sun was just above the Meridian. From hence the Astrologers of those Times predicted great Things concerning him. And those of the Present Age, who have seen his Fortunate Return to his Kingdoms, presage yet greater Events to come.

God

God only knows what Embryo's are in the Womb of Futurity; and we Muſſulmans have no Reaſon to rejoyce at the Grandeur of any of theſe Infidel Princes. Yet ſuch a Sign as that of a Star appearing at Noon-Day, juſt over the Place where a Mighty Queen was in Labour with a Prince, has Something in it Extraordinary, and full of Promiſing Circumſtances. It was an Appearance of this Nature which render'd the Birth of the Meſſias ſo Illuſtrious, tho' otherwiſe obſcure enough; when the Eaſtern Magi, directed by ſuch a Star, came and found Mary the Mother of Jeſus in a Stable, and the Infant-Prophet lying in a Manger, inſtead of a Cradle. So we are told, That Eclipſes of the Sun portend the Misfortune or Death of Great Perſonages; and that all other Prodigies, whether in Heaven or Earth, have their proper Signification.

But whether theſe Obſervations be true or no, 'tis certain this late baniſhed Prince, is return'd with Abundance of Splendor and Advantage to his Native Royal Poſſeſſions. And I thought it would be a Grand Neglect in me, to let one Poſt-Day paſs, before I gave thee an Account of a Revolution ſo aſtoniſhing to all Europe, and which is like to give a New Turn to the Affairs of moſt Chriſtian Princes and States, Beſides, I know there is an Ambaſſador from England, reſiding at the Auguſt Port; which determines the Quarrels of all the Nations on Earth. There are alſo Abundance of Engliſh Merchants in the Imperial City. They may have Feuds among one another. The Intereſt of ſome of them is joyn'd with that of the Engliſh Rebels; others are for their King. Therefore knowing of his Reſtauration, thou wilt be better able to adjuſt all Matters of this Nature, according to Reaſon, Equity, and the Honour of the Majeſtick Port. For this King makes already a greater Figure than any of his Progenitors, and therefore his Friendſhip is not to be contemn'd.

of

The Care of theſe Things reſts on thee, who art the Vicars Vicar of the Vicegerent of God.

Paris, 3d. of the 7th. Moon, of the Year 1660.

LET.

LETTER X.

To Mehemet, an Exil'd Eunuch, at Caire in Egypt.

OH that I were in one of the Pyramids near the City where thou reſideſt, ſhut up in Tremendous Darkneſs, in the moſt Obſcure and Horrible Vault of the Royal Pile! That I might converſe with the Ghoſts of Egyptian Kings, hugg Dæmons in my Arms, and run the Gerit with Hobgoblins and all the Spirits of the Night round the Tomb of Cheops, or up and down the diſmal Galleries, or in the Neſt of Bats, Screech-Owls, Harpies, and the reſt of the Winged Monſters, the Excrementitious Spawn of Humane Souls, or at leaſt the Superfetation of pickled Carcaſſes, repoſited there for Eternal Mummies, ſome of them before Noah's Flood, and the Reſt after, if the Story be true. God knows whether it be or no: That's Nothing to me: But I have a ſtrong Inclination to try what I can find in thoſe Antique Monuments, after all the Search of ſo many Travellers. I have a Specifick Sort of Melancholy upon me, which cannot be vented any other Way, than by keeping Company with the Dead, or having Ten Hundred Thouſand ugly rampant Spirits dancing their Infernal Meaſures about me, and grinning like Babboons of Hell. Oh, God! How

'twould

of Engliſh Merchants in the Imperial City. They may have Feuds among one another. The Intereſt of ſome of them is joyn'd with that of the Engliſh Rebels; others are for their King. Therefore knowing of his Reſtauration, thou wilt be better able to adjuſt all Matters of this Nature, according to Reaſon, Equity, and the Honour of the Majeſtick Port. For this King makes already a greater Figure than any of his Progenitors, and therefore his Friendſhip is not to be contemn'd.

The Care of theſe Things reſts on thee, who art the Vicars Vicar of the Vicegerent of God.

Paris, 3d. of the 7th. Moon,
of the Year 1660.

LET.

LETTER X.

To Mehemet, an Exil'd Eunuch, at Caire in Egypt.

OH that I were in one of the Pyramids near the City where thou reſideſt, ſhut up in Tremendous Darkneſs, in the moſt Obſcure and Horrible Vault of the Royal Pile! That I might converſe with the Ghoſts of Egyptian Kings, hugg Dæmons in my Arms, and run the Gerit with Hobgoblins and all the Spirits of the Night round the Tomb of Cheops, or up and down the diſmal Galleries, or in the Neſt of Bats, Screech-Owls, Harpies, and the reſt of the Winged Monſters, the Excrementitious Spawn of Humane Souls, or at leaſt the Superfetation of pickled Carcaſſes, repoſited there for Eternal Mummies, ſome of them before Noah's Flood, and the Reſt after, if the Story be true. God knows whether it be or no: That's Nothing to me: But I have a ſtrong Inclination to try what I can find in thoſe Antique Monuments, after all the Search of ſo many Travellers. I have a Specifick Sort of Melancholy upon me, which cannot be vented any other Way, than by keeping Company with the Dead, or having Ten Hundred Thouſand ugly rampant Spirits dancing their Infernal Meaſures about me, and grinning like Babboons of Hell. Oh, God! How 'twould

'twould ſet me a Laughing? An Entertainment of this Nature would eaſe my Spleen, and reſtore me to a Good Humour.

Are there no Beings extant, but thoſe which are every Day expos'd to our Senſes? Or, is Nature Poorer than the Imagination of a Mortal, which can form the Idea's of an Infinity of Creatures that he never ſaw? I am cloy'd with the Crambe of Objects and Joys which theſe Narrow Elements afford, and therefore would fain grope out ſome New and Untry'd World, to find Refreſhment in.

But oh, my Mehemet, when I look toward the Heavens, and behold the Moon and Stars; when my Eye is loſt in the Boundleſs Firmament, and my Soul can find no Limits to the Univerſe; then I ſink into my ſelf, full of Humility and Confuſion, becauſe I have injuriouſly reproach'd the Omnipotent, and caſt Obloquies on his Works. For all Things appear admirably Beautiful and Perfect, and the leaſt Atome is large enough to afford Apartments for a Thouſand Souls. Every Thing in Nature is pregnant and full of pleaſing Wonders: Yet I cannot be free from theſe Hypochondriack Fits at certain Seaſons. I am ſometimes the ſaddeſt and moſt Melancholy Man in the World. I take all things by the wrong Handle, look on them through falſe Opticks, and yet perſuade my ſelf I am in the Right, and ſee them in their true Complexion. Such is the Fatal Sophiſtry of this black and ſullen Paſſion: It takes away the Guſt and Reliſh Reliſh of the ſweeteſt Enjoyments. And if the Contagion could poſſibly find Admittance among the Bleſs'd Above; ſurely 'twould enber their Paradiſe a Hell, and would afford ſome Ground for the Fiction of the Ancient Poets, who brought up the Uſe of Nepenthe among the Gods, to appeaſe their Choler, and put 'em in a good Humour.

I know not what that Drink was: But I tell thee, my Nepenthe is a Glaſs of good Languedoc Wine, which is as Rich, and far more Delicious than the Wines of Tenedos and Mitylene. I once could boaſt of another Method to ſubdue my Melancholy, by giving Battle to my Thoughts in open Field; but now I am fain to have Recourſe to Stratagems and Ambuſcades, trepanning the ugly, hideous Monſters out of their ſtrong Retrenchments and Faſtneſſes in the Spleen, by Generous Frolicks with Wine, Women and Muſick. I bury all Care in profound Sleep, the Effect of brisk and free Drinking. And then I awake as merry as a Lark; as young as if I'd been in Medea's Cauldron.

What ſignifies it to pretend Sanctity in our Words and Exteriour Carriage, whilſt at the ſame Time we are ready to burſt with Malice, Pride, Ambition, Avarice, and a Thouſand more Vices? Whereas Wine ſeaſonably drank, cures all theſe Diſtempers of the Soul, makes a Miſer Liberal, a Cruel Man Tender, a Spightful Fellow Kind, melts Stiff and Haughty Spirits into a Wonderful Softneſs and Complaiſance. In fine, it makes a Lamb of a Lion, and changes a Vultur to a Dove, purifying and transforming Souls into a Temper wholly Divine.

Why then ſhould we be ty'd to Laws of Morality, never practis'd by thoſe who made them? All the Philoſophers were boon Companions, and our Holy Prophet himſelf privately drank the Juice of the Grape. Our Emperours and Grandees do the ſame. The only Reaſon why they forbid it to their Subjects, is, leſt they ſhould grow too Wiſe, and ſtrive to ſhake off the Yoke: For Wine elevates the Spirits, emboldens the Heart, and transforms a Slave to a Lord in his own Conceit. For want of this Liquor, all Nations where the Vine grows not, have found out one Beverage or another, as efficacious to relieve Melancholy, and drive away Sorrow from the Heart. The Chineſe make Wine of Rice. In my Country they have another Intoxicating Drink, compounded with certain Roots. The ſame is uſed in ſome Parts of Perſia. In theſe Weſtern Provinces, they brew divers Sorts of Strong Liquors of Wheat, Barley, Honey, Moloſſa's and other Ingredients. And they make Wine of Apples, Pears, Cherries, Currans, and moſt Fruits that grow. I tell thee, my Friend, there's no living, unleſs we ſometimes give Nature a New Ferment to rouze her from her Lees.

Yet let us practiſe a due Mediocrity, remembring that God gave us theſe Things for our Health and Refreſhment, and not for our Bane-Bane. In a Word, Mehemet, let us be Merry and Wiſe.

Paris, 26th. of the 8th. Moon, of the Year 1660.

LETTER XI.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

I Have taken ſome Pains; turn'd over a great many Memoirs of Old Courtiers, and convers'd with not a few now living, who can remember the Days of Henry IV. that ſo I may comply with thy order, and oblige thee with ſome Remarks on the Life of that Prince, who tho' he had but a little Body, yet like another Alexander, had ſo vaſt a Soul, and perform'd ſuch illuſtrious Actions, as deſervedly faſten'd on him the Title of Great, and made him be eſteem'd the Arbiter of all Europe.

It is obſerv'd of him, that he was always Unfortunate in his Wives; yet they relate a pretty Paſſage of his Firſt Wife, Margaret of Valois, which ſeems to contradict that Remark.

He was then a Proteſtant, and only King of Navarre, when the Famous Maſſacre of Paris was committed, with Deſign to Murder him among the Reſt of his Religion. But being aware of this, when he heard the Aſſaſſins making toward his Chamber, where he ſate with the Queen, he hid himſelf under her Garments as ſhe ſate in a Chair. The Villains ruſhing in, ask'd for the King. She with a great Aſſurance of Spirit, told 'em, He went out from her in a Paſſion. They ſeeming ſatisfy'd, went away without doing any farther Hurt. Which occaſion'd a Common Jeſt, That Queen Margaret's Smock, ſav'd King Henry's Life.

This Woman was call'd the Minerva and Venus of France, on the Score of her Learning and Amours, never denying any Thing to her Lovers, and being ſeldom without Men of Science in her Company. In a Word, King Henry look'd on himſelf as a Noted Cuckold, and ſo gave her a Bill of Divorce. Her own Mother Katharine de Medicis, was call'd the Fourth Fury of Hell.

It is Recorded of this Lady, that ſhe practis'd much with Wizards and Magicians, who in an Enchanted Glaſs, ſhew'd her who ſhou'd Reign in France for the Time to come. Firſt appear'd this Henry IV. then Lewis XIII. next Lewis XIV. and after him a Pack of Jeſuites, who ſhould aboliſh the Monarchy, and govern the Nation themſelves. This Glaſs is to be ſeen in the King's Palace to this Day.

As for Henry IV's Second Wife, 'tis ſaid he never enjoy'd a Peaceable Hour with her, but when

when ſhe was aſleep. They often fought together, and ſhe ſpar'd not ſometimes to Beat and Scratch him even in his Bed, ſo that he has been forc'd to quit the Field, and take Sanctuary in another Chamber. This Prince was tax'd with Ingratitude towards his moſt Faithful Servants, and want of Liberality to all. It was a Common Saying of his Predeceſſor Henry III. That he ſhar'd his Kingdom with his Loyal Servants and Friends. But Henry IV. lov'd not to part with any Thing which he could handſomly keep.

Yet he was very obliging to his Miſtreſſes, and his Paſſion for them carried him into many Irregularities. He was ſo deeply enamour'd of one, that to enjoy her he ſign'd a Promiſe of Marriage to her with his own Blood; which, one of his Favourites ſeeing, tore the Paper in Pieces. The King being incens'd at that, ſwore by the Belly of St. Gris, an ordinary Oath with him, that this Perſon was mad. Yes, reply'd he, but I wiſh I were the only Madman in the Kingdom. Thereby reflecting on the King's Extravagancy. Another Time he gave Fifty Thouſand Crowns, for one Night's Enjoyment of a Lady.

I have many Years ago ſpoke of the Death of this Prince, in my Letters to the Miniſters of the Port. Now I will acquaint thee with one Circumſtance, to which I was then a Stranger.

It happen'd, that the Vice-Roy of Navarre, was walking with ſeveral Nobles in the Meadows of Bearn, a Town under his Juriſdiction, waſh'd by the River Pau. When on a ſudden all the Cows, (of which there was a great Number in thoſe Fields) ran violently into the River, and were there drown'd. The Vice-Roy being aſtoniſh'd at this, as at a Prodigy, writ down the Day and Hour when it happen'd, which prov'd exactly the very ſame Time to a Minute, when Henry IV. was ſtabb'd in his Coach by Ravaillac; as the Vice-Roy was ſoon certify'd by Diſpatches which he receiv'd from the Court, containing Intelligence of that Tragedy.

All this may be pure Chance, for ought I know, but there are Abundance of Symptoms of ſomething elſe. As for Man, he is wholly a Stranger to himſelf, and the Secret Operations of his own Soul are hid from him. How then can he know the Natures of other Things, or be familiarly acquainted with the Occult Diſpoſitions of Beaſts? The leaſt Worm or Inſect, baffles our ſevereſt Scrutiny, and we are loſt in the Speculation of their Embryo's. The moſt Silent and Inanimate Beings, proclaim aloud the Folly of our boaſted Science: Every Atom in Nature, ridicules our beſt Philoſophy. Who then will pretend to unriddle the more Uncommon Myſteries of Providence, or trace the Footſteps of Eternal Deſtiny? Hiſtorians ſpeak variouſly of this Parricide. Some ſay, the Villain was approv'd of at the Court of Rome, and that he was there rank'd in the Number of Martyrs. 'Tis certain, he under went as horrible a Death, as the Wit of Man could invent, invent, to puniſh his matchleſs Treaſon. And it ſeems, the Judges that examin'd him were either afraid, or aſham'd to divulge what they heard from his Mouth: Obliging themſelves by an Oath to Eternal Secrecy. Ravaillac himſelf own'd, that he had Twice before attempted to kill the King, but was thruſt back by one of his Nobles, who ſuſpected ſome ill Deſigns in his Looks.

Sage Hamet, may God preſerve our Glorious Sultan from the Rage of Mutineers, from a Jewiſh Phyſician, and from the Common Diſaſters of Humane Life. And the Care of his Attendants will prevent the ſudden Strokes of a deſperate Aſſaſſin.

Paris, 26th. of the 8th. Moon,
of the Year 1660.

LETTER XII.

To Muſtapha, Berber Aga.

THis City is now as full of Noiſe and Lights, as ſome Cities of Aſia are at an Eclipſe of the Moon, or as Conſtantinople is during the Faſt of Ramezan. 'Tis near Midnight, and yet here's ſuch a Medley of Noiſes compounded of the loud Acclamations of Mortals, the Ringing of Bells, Beat of Drums, Sound of Trumpets, and other Muſical Inſtruments, ments, with the Thunder of Sky-Rockets, Guns, and other Fire-works, that a Body would think ones ſelf in a Battel or a Siege.

The Occaſion of all this, is the publick Entry of the New-Married King and Queen, it being the Firſt Time they have ſeen Paris ſince the Nuptials. Neither my Tongue or Pen are able to expreſs to the Life, the Inimitable Pomp and Magnificence that have appear'd to Day in the Royal Train, and in the Preparations which the City made to receive them. The Luſtre of Silver, Gold and Precious Stones, dazl'd ones Eyes from all Parts; and I could have wiſh'd for a Muſſulman Army, to have been at the Plunder of ſuch Immenſe Riches. Yet there were Forty Thouſand of the Citizens, and King's Guards in Arms, to augment the Glory of the Day.

The Monarch with his Royal Spouſe, appeared ſeated on a Majeſtick Throne, all glittering with Gold and Diamonds. It was rais'd on High, and there were ſeveral Steps or Degrees to aſcend up to it. On theſe were placed the Princes of the Blood, the Dukes and Peers of the Realm, with other Grandees and Nobles, as alſo Princeſſes, Dutcheſſes and Ladies of the Firſt Quality.

'Twas at the Foot of this Throne, there were made Innumerable Speeches, and Congratulatory Addreſſes by the Prieſts and Monks of all Orders, by the Students in the Academy, and by the ſeveral Companies of Tradeſmen. But, that which was moſt ſurprizing, a certain ſtrange Maid utter'd ſeveral

Orations

Orations in Latin, Greek, French and Spaniſh wherein ſhe magnify'd the King's Heroick Undertakings, his wonderful Succeſſes, great Wiſdom and Courage, with other Vertues, which ſhe made the Subject of her Panegyrick. She alſo no leſs extoll'd the Queen's Matchleſs Beauty, the Greatneſs of her Birth, the Royal Endowments of her Mind; And concluded with reflecting on the Joy of all Europe, for this Illuſtrious Match, and Alliance of Two the moſt Potent Crowns in Chriſtendom.

She delivered herſelf with ſuch an Incomparable Grace and Modeſty, as drew the Eyes and Ears of all that were preſent. And 'tis ſaid, the King was extremely pleaſed with her; much more the Queen, who had never before encountred ſo Learned a Female.

The French Ladies have for many Years applyed themſelves to the Study of Languages and Philoſophy. But 'tis not ſo in Spain, where the Men are too Rigorous to the Fair to allow 'em that Liberty. They are as moroſe to Women, as the Moors, from whom a great Part of that Nation are ſaid to deſcend. Every Country in Europe, has ſuffer'd mighty Changes, by the Incurſions and Conqueſts of the Moors, Goths, Huns and Vandals. So that 'tis difficult to trace the Original of any People in ſuch a Hotch-Potch of Foreign Blood. Neither have they any Care of their Genealogies, as we Arabians have in the Eaſt.

Illuſtrious Aga, tho' it ſignifies Nothing to ſpring of a Noble Stock, unleſs we inherit the Vertues of our Anceſtors, as well as their Splendid Titles and Eſtates: Yet 'tis both profitable and pleaſant to have by us a Regiſter of our Families, that reading their Characters and Heroick Actions, we may imitate their Examples, and add to the Glory of the Tribe from which we deſcend.

Paris, 26th. of the 8th. Moon, of the Year 1660.

LETTER XIII.

To Dgnet Oglou.

I Know not whether I ſhall finiſh the Letter I begin; or, if I do, whether it will be above Ground, or in the Bowels of the Earth. However, I cannot forbear writing to thee, my Dear Friend, though both the Paper and I, with the Houſe wherein I lodge, and all this Beautiful City, may, for ought I know, be tranſported to another Region before Morning. Nay, 'tis poſſible this very Hour may People Elyzium with a New Colony from France, and Paris may deſcend with all her Magnificent Palaces to the Shades below, changing the Banks of the River Seyne, for thoſe of Acheron or Styx, and the Refreſhing Airs of Champagne, for the Choaking Sulphurs of Hell. In a Word, we have felt the Menaces of a Terrible Earthquake this Evening, but as yet have ſuffered no Damage.

When

When I liv'd in Aſia, an Earthquake was almoſt as Common as the Yearly Revolutions of Summer and Winter: And we took as little Notice of it, as we did of Lightning, Hail or Rain. Beſides, one Muſſulman encouraged another, and the General Faith of True Believers confirm'd us all, That we ought to be reſign'd to God, and to the Appointments of Eternal Deſtiny, whether it were for Pleaſure or Pain, Good or Evil, Life or Death. But now I have been ſo long diſus'd to theſe Convulſions of the Globe, (for I have not felt one above theſe Two and Twenty Years) and am alſo ſeparated from the Society of the Faithful; that I am become like the reſt of the World, and even like theſe Infidels, Timorous, aſtoniſhed, void of Reaſon, and of little or no Faith.

My Mind at firſt, ſtagger'd as much as my Body, when I was walking croſs my Chamber, and felt the Floor rock under me, with that Singular Kind of Motion, which no Humane Art or Force can imitate. I ſoon concluded 'twas an Earthquake, but knew not how to bear that Thought with Indifference. Death is familiar to me in any other Figure, but that of being ſo ſurprizingly buried alive. It appeared horrible to ſink on a ſudden into an Unknown Grave, I knew not whither: Perhaps I might fall into ſome Dark Lake of Water; or it may be, I might be drench'd in a River of Fire, or be daſh'd on a Rock: For, who can tell the Diſpoſition of the Caverns below, or what Sort of Apartments he ſhall find find under the Surface of the Earth? We walk on the Battlements of a Marvellous Structure, a Globe full of Tremendous Secrets. And whether Nature or Deſtiny, Providence or Chance, occaſion the Ruptures that we find are made in divers Parts of the Earth, it matters not much, ſo long as we are in Danger of tumbling in. Such a terrible Fall, would put the beſt Philoſopher in the World out of Humour, and Spoil all his Reaſoning. I'm ſure, 'twould vex me thus in a Trice to be plundered of my Thoughts. Which makes me either wonder at the Vanity of Empedocles, if he threw himſelf into the flaming Chaſm of Mount Ætna, only for the Sake of being eſteemed a God, (as the common Report is); or, gives me Reaſon to conclude, he had ſome other End in his Venturous Leap: Since 'tis not probable, that empty Fame could be eſteemed by that Great Sage, as his Final Happineſs. A much eaſier way had Ariſtotle, who, diſguſted at his Ignorance of the Flux and Reflux of the Sea, threw himſelf in, to put an End to his Diſquiſitions, if the Story be true. But, I can hardly believe the Stagyrite was ſuch a Fool. I gueſs of other Men, according to the Experience I have of my ſelf. I am as little ſollicitous about Death as any Man; yet I ſhould be unwilling to hurle my ſelf out of the World headlong, without a Firm or a Teſta, I love New Experiments, but am not very fond of ſuch as take from us irrecoverably the means of trying any more.

We

We had News here of an Earthquake which has overthrown Part of the Pyrenæan Mountains, ſome Days before this happened at Paris; but few regarded it. Calamities at a Diſtance frighten No-body. Yet, thoſe which we feel, put us all in Tears. For my Part, it has this Effect on me, that I am improved in my Careleſſneſs, and become fearful of Nothing. And, I think, there is Reaſon on my Side, ſince all my Care, Apprehenſion and Forecaſt, can never defend me from the Underminings of the Omnipotent.

Paris, 15th. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year 1660.

LETTER XIV.

To Hamet Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

LET not the Diſtance of Time between my Letters, prompt thee to conclude, I forget my Duty; or that I am careleſs to oblige ſo Illuſtrious a Friend. I have many Obligations to diſcharge; and therefore endeavour to husband my Hours to the beſt Advantage, and ſo to divide my Diſpatches, That the Grand Signior may be ſerved, the Divan inform'd of all Material Emergencies, and the Expectations of each Miniſter gratified.

As

As to the Reign of Lewis XIII. It was ſhar'd ſucceſſively between the Marſhal D' Ancre, the Duke of Luines, and Cardinal Richlieu, The Firſt was the Queen-Mother's Favourite; the Second was the King's; As for the Third, he was abſolute Maſter both of King, Queen and Kingdom.

During the King's Minority indeed, Queen Mary de Medicis, the Relict of Henry IV. took the Regency into her own Hands, and managed Things in an Arbitrary Manner. But the Princes of the Blood, with other Grandees, not able to brook the Government of a Woman, conſpired againſt her. Among theſe were the Prince of Conde, Father to the preſent Prince, and the Duke of Bovillon. The Former was a Bold Man, and durſt do any Thing that was Brave: The Latter was a Cunning Stateſman.

They Caball'd not ſo privately, but the Queen-Mother was acquainted with their Meetings, and the Duke of Bovillon was the Firſt who knew his Party was betrayed. This Intelligence was brought him from aſſured Hands, whilſt he was ſitting with the Prince of Conde, and other Nobles at the Place of their Private Rendezvous. Whereupon, he acquainted them with it, exhorting all to abſcond immediately, leſt they ſhould be ſeized on the Spot. But they retorting, That the Queen would not venture on an Action of ſuch dubious Conſequence; He ſtarted up and took his Leave of 'em, with theſe Words: "My Lords, you may follow your own "Coun-

" Counſel. I'll immediately to Horſe, and " eſcape to Sedan, in my Stockings: Where, if " they make me wear out a Pair, as an Exile; " by Heavens, I'll make them wear a Thou- " ſand Pair of Boots.

His Words came to paſs, and the Effect was a diminutive Civil War; when the Queen was forced to raiſe an Army to reduce this Prince to Obedience, the Reſt of his Party being Impriſoned, as ſoon as ſhe heard of his Flight.

Whilſt theſe Diſturbances laſted, the Moors were expell'd out of Spain, to the Number of Six Hundred Thouſand. Part of thoſe who liv'd toward the Maritime Coaſts, went by Sea into Africk. The Reſt, whoſe Reſidence was farther within Land, ſought a Paſſage over the Pyrenæan Mountains, and ſo through the Southern Provinces of France; offering a Ducat a Head to the Vice-Roy of Navarre, for their ſafe Conduct. He, out of Curioſity coming to ſee theſe Travellers, and beholding 'em ragged and almoſt naked, with Viſages like Ghoſts; took Pity on them, and gave 'em Liberty of Paſſage gratis: Saying, " God for- " bid I ſhould extort ſo much Money from " theſe miſerable Wretches, who are abandon- " ed to the wide World.

But, it ſeems, his Commpaſſion was needleſs. For theſe Muſſulmans were too cunning for him, having their Squalid, torn Garments, quilted all over with Gold and Precious Stones. Which occaſioned all People to ridicule the Vice-Roy's Eaſineſs, and to call him the Friend the Gibeonites.

I ſhould appear too Partial in reflecting Satyrically on this Prince, whoſe Generoſity deſerves Praiſe: Yet I cannot but ſmile at the Craft of the Moors, whereby they not only eſcaped paying the accuſtomed Tribute of Paſſengers, but alſo blinded theſe Infidels, and took from 'em the Suſpicion of greater Riches; which if they had once known, perhaps not a Moor ſhould have carried a Piece of Money along with him into Africk.

This Paſſage ſeem'd worthy of thy Knowledge, ſince it in Part reſembles the Famous Departure of the Iſraelites out of Egypt, tho' it comes ſhort of the Robbery and Plunder which they committed on the Inhabitants, the Day before they began their Journey. However, this Story may afford thee ſome Divertiſement.

As to the Marſhal D' Ancre, the Queen's Favourite; in his Life and Death, he was compared to Sejanus, being qualified with the like Vertues and Vices, and having much the ſame Fortune; his Body after having been dragg'd about the Streets by the Rabble, was at laſt torn in Pieces.

If thou would'ſt know, how the Duke of Luines obtain'd the King's Favour, it was by Ingratitude. For, when he and his Brother were firſt brought to Court, they were both ſo poor, that they had but one Cloak between 'em; and for that Reaſon could not go abroad together. Yet being recommended to the King by a certain Nobleman for excellent Falkners, they were received into Favour, But they abus'd abus'd the Kindneſs of their Patron; and inſinuating malicious Things into the King's Ear, againſt the Nobleman and his Family, cauſed him to be baniſh'd from the Court. After which they managed all Things.

Then ſucceeded Cardinal Richlieu in the Chief Miniſtry; of whom I have ſaid a great Deal in my Former Letters to the Grandees of the Port, and thou wilt find them in the Regiſter. I will now add, what I never mentioned before; That he was very Ambitious to be thought a good Judg of Verſe. He gave to one Poet, for a Witty Conceit on his Coat of Arms, Two Thouſand Sequins, tho' 'twas but a Verſe of Seven Words. Another he promoted to an Eccleſiaſtick Dignity, worth a Thouſand a Year, for comparing him to the Primum Mobile. But he cauſed a Third to be kick'd out of Doors, for his Obſtinacy in denying to alter a Word of his Poem, which the Cardinal diſliked.

This Miniſter was very Revengeful, and amongſt other Effects of his Temper, none was more taken Notice of, or reflected on, than the Death of Monſieur de Thou, whom the Cardinal cut off for no other Reaſon, but becauſe his Father in a General Hiſtory which he wrote, had repreſented one of Richlieu's Anceſtors, under a very Ignominious and Abominable Figure. That Hiſtorian was the Renowned Thuanus, of whom, I ſuppoſe, thou haſt heard.

As to King Lewis XIII. himſelf, he was eſteemed a great Diſſembler; accuſtomed to careſs careſs thoſe with more than ordinary Endearments, whom he deſigned ſuddenly to ruine: Whence it grew to a Proverb in his Time at the French Court, when they ſaw any Nobleman ſmil'd on, to ſay, His Buſineſs is done. It cannot be denied that this Prince had a Great Spirit, and ſome Wiſdom; yet he was obſerved to take Delight in many petty Actions unbecoming Royal Majeſty. He would ſpend much of his Time in Painting, and ſend for the moſt Famous Maſters in that Art, to view his Works. An equal Inclination he ſhewed to Muſick. And ſometimes he was ambitious to be thought a good Cook. Once he made a Great Paſty with his own Hands, filling it with Veniſon only fit for the Mouths of Infidels, viz. The Fleſh of Dogs, Wolves and Foxes, with other Abominable Animals, of which it is not lawful for a True Believer to taſte. This he cauſed to be ſerved up to Table at a Feaſt which he made to ſome of his Courtiers, who to Honour the King's Handy-work, eat greedily of the Horrid Diſh, and highly praiſed his Skill; whilſt he diverted himſelf with laughing at them. He had many other ſuch Freaks as theſe, which render'd him Contemptible and Ridiculous to the Grandees of his Kingdom. In a Word, he was more reverenced Abroad, than at Home. And this was owing to the Conduct of Cardinal Richlieu; who was juſtly eſteemed the very Genius of France.

Illuſtrious Miniſter, all that I have ſaid of this Monarch, ſpeaks him but a Man: And

no

no body is Wiſe at all Times. But the Follies of Princes are more Conſpicuous, than thoſe of meaner Perſons.

Paris, 5th. of the 12th. Moon,
of the Year 1660.

LETTER XV.

To Mahummed in the Deſart.

MAY the Angel of Peace pitch his Pavilion at the Entrance of that Bleſſed Cave where thou reſideſt. May thy Soul feel Calm and Undiſturbed Joys, and for ever repoſe in Divine Tranquility; Whilſt the Reſt of the World are moleſted with Perpetual Cares and Fears, Broils and Enmities, Paſſions within, and Furies without: In a word, whilſt they are always in Danger of one another, of themſelves, and of the Elements which compound their Nature.

O Man highly beloved of God, Favourite of the Angels, Care of Heaven, and the ſingular Darling of Providence. The Palm of an Almighty Hand is extended under thee when thou ſitteſt down or walkeſt, always ready to ſnatch thee up from the Calamities which threaten this Lower World, and lift thee to Paradiſe, where the Aſſembly of the Juſt wait for thy Preſence.

There

There has been an Earthquake lately in theſe Parts, which has put all France into a great Conſternation, aſtoniſh'd every Body, and encreaſed the Thoughtfulneſs of the Wiſe. The Firſt Effects of it were felt by the Inhabitants of the Pyrenees, which are certain Mountains dividing France and Spain. There it did great Miſchief, overwhelming ſome Medicinal Baths, many Houſes, and deſtroying Hundreds of People. Only one Moſque or Church, which ſunk into the Caverns below, was thrown up again, and ſtands very Firm, but in another Place. This is look'd upon as a great Miracle, eſpecially by the French, who, for ought I know, may cenſure Partially, favouring their own Intereſt; in regard this Church has been diſputed between them and the Spaniards, each Nation claiming Right to it, as ſtanding before exactly on the Frontier Line. But now their Quarrel is unconteſtably decided; For 'tis removed by this Convulſion of the Globe, near half a League from its Former Situation, which is ſo far within the acknowledg'd Limits of France. This the French Prieſts magnify, as an apparent Proof of the Juſtice of their Pretenſions, and the People ſeem very willing to believe it.

As for me, I have another Opinion of Earthquakes, and am perſuaded, that they are as Natural as the Winds, which no Man knows how to draw into any Party or Faction, unleſs we believe the Stories of the Lapland Witches. I am perſuaded, that this Globe is much more Ancient than the Generality of Mankind imagine it to be: That it has undergone various Changes by the Predominance of Fire and Water: And that it is now haſtening towards another Revolution. I believe the Central Fire has eaten its Way almoſt to the Surface, and kindled all the Mines of Sulphur, and other Inflammable Matter, which it meets with in its Circular Aſcent. Theſe corroding and daily conſuming their own Vaults, approaching alſo ſometimes too near the vaſt Receptacles of Subterranean Waters which lie nearer the Surface, over-heat thoſe Lakes; which being thus rarified into Vapours, and pent up in the Hollow of the Globe, ſtrive to break forth with Immenſe Violence, which cauſes that Heaving and Rocking of the Superficies, that ſo terrifies Mortals. But then the Cauſe is very deep and far from us. For where the Surface is ſhallow, in ſuch Paſſions of the Globe, the Earth commonly breaks and tumbles in, with whatſoever is upon it. Nay, whole Cities ſometimes have been thus ſwallowed up. And the Danger is eaſily fore-known by a ſhort Snatching and Trepidation of the Ground, Houſes, Trees, Men and every Thing within its Reach; for then the Convulſion is Generally Fatal. But where the Motion is Heavy, Grave and Regular, 'tis a Sign that both the Source and the Danger of it are far off. And this is ſo much the more Evident, by how much farther the Earthquake is felt above Ground, For the nearer any ſuch Paſſion happens to the Center, it muſt be granted, that its Force is extended the wider on the Circumference. This depends on a Mathematical Demonſtration, and there needs no more be ſaid to thee who art Conſummate in the Sciences.

happens

What I eſteem a due Reflection on this is, That tho' there be no Peril in theſe Remote Earthquakes, yet we know not how ſoon they will come nearer to us, neither can we be aſſured, where or when they will happen, or how far they will reach. It follows therefore by a Natural Conſequence, That ſince theſe Things are Unavoidable, and all the Wit of Man cannot invent a Means to eſcape ſinking into the Bowels of the Earth where it breaks in; we ought to be careleſs and Indifferent what Death we die, and only be ſolicitous to live like Men, that is, according to Reaſon. For whether our Souls ſurvive or no, 'twill be comfortable to expire in Peace, and full of our own Innocence.

Paris, 5th. of the 12th. Moon,
of the Year 1660,

The End of the Firſt Book.

LET-

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. VI.

BOOK II.

LETTER II.

To the Venerable Mufti.

HERE is now like to be a great Change at this Court. Cardinal Mazarini is dead. He died at the Caſtle of the Wood of Vincienes, on the 9*th*. of this Moon, having been ſick a long Time. There happened a great Fire at the Louvre (ſo they call the King's Palace in this City) about Five Weeks ago, which which obliged the Cardinal, who log'd there at that Time, to remove to his own Houſe. From whence, for the Sake of Air, he was adviſed by his Phyſicians to go to the aforeſaid Caſtle. But all in vain: For Death, which finds Acceſs into the ſtrongeſt Fortreſſes, purſued him thither, and led him in Triumph to the Region of Silence and Forgetfulneſs, who had made ſo great a Noiſe and Buſtle in this our World.

It is reported, that a certain Aſtrologer foretold him, he ſhould die in this Moon. But the Cardinal gave no Credit to him: Tho' one would think he had ſome Reaſon to believe him in this, for the Sake of a Former Prediction of his, concerning the Duke of Beaufort. I have mentioned this Prince, and the Enmity that was between Mazarini and him, which occaſioned the Duke's Impriſonment in the Caſtle of the Wood of Vinciennes. During his Reſtraint, the fore-mentioned Aſtrologer gave it out in Paris,. That the Duke ſhould eſcape out of Priſon preciſely on ſuch a Day. The Cardinal being informed of this, waited till the Day came, deſigning to puniſh the Aſtrologer as a Cheat, or at leaſt to expoſe him for an Ignorant Perſon. To which End he ſent for him, and upbraiding him with Preſumption and Folly, in that the Day was now come, and yet the Duke of Beaufort was ſtill a Priſoner, without any Hopes, or ſcarce a Poſſibility of eſcaping, order'd him to be ſent to the Baſtile. But the Aſtrologer addreſſing himſelf with much Submiſſion and Earneſtneſs, neſs, ſpoke to this Effect: May it pleaſe your Eminence only to reſpite my Sentence till to Morrow, and then hang me if you do not find that I have ſpoke Truth. The Day which I foretold, is come indeed, but it is not paſt. A Courtier will ſoon convince you, that I have not ſtudied this Science in vain.

The Cardinal mov'd with theſe Words, only confin'd the Aſtrologer in a Chamber of his own Palace. And the next Day he receiv'd an Expreſs, which gave him an Account of the Duke's Eſcape, and the Manner of it, viz. That on the Day before, he had let himſelf down by a Ladder of Ropes into the Caſtle-Ditch, and was no more to be ſeen or heard of. Thus the Aſtrologer eſcap'd the Cardinal's Revenge, and got much Fame at the Court, which was encreas'd by the Cardinal's Death, falling out exactly according to his Prediction.

This Miniſter was a very ſubtle Man; and Cardinal Richlieu us'd to ſay of him, That if he were minded to put a Trick on the Devil, he would only ſet Mazarini to Work. Therefore he made him his Confident, inſtructed him in all the Secrets of the French Court, the Art of Government, and on his Death-Bed recommended him to the King, as the fitteſt Man to ſucceed him in the Management of the Publick. He was after the Death of Lewis XIII. at firſt oppoſed by ſeveral Grandees; but the Queen's Authority, and that of the Prince of Conde ſupported him: Whence aroſe a Common Proverb in thoſe Days, The Queen permits All, the Cardinal Commands All, and the Prince puts All in Execution: For this laſt had then the Office of General.

This Miniſter was not eſteem'd ſo Covetous as his Predeceſſor, yet he heap'd up Vaſt Treaſures; Part of which he beſtow'd in Magnificent Buildings and Furniture, the Reſt he ſent into Italy to his Father; who aſtoniſh'd at the Prodigious Quantities of Gold he receiv'd, us'd to ſay, Sure it rains Money in France. However, he made himſelf Odious to the Subjects of this Nation by his Continual Oppreſſions; and they are glad he is gone.

'Tis a By-Word at Rome, when any Pope dies, to ſay, Now the Dog is dead, all his Malice is buried with him. But I doubt, it will not prove true in the Court of France at this Juncture. For the King will either find a Miniſter Equal in Subtlety to the Deceas'd Cardinal, who ſhall ſupply his Place; or he will take the Adminiſtration of Affairs into his own Hands. Be it which Way it will, we are like to ſee the ſame Maxims purſu'd, ſo long as Cardinal Richlieu's Memoirs are in Being, who firſt taught this Crown to underſtand its own Strength.

Paris, 14th. of the 3d. Moon,
of the Year 1661.

LETTER

LETTER II.

To the Vizir Azem at the Port.

I Have ſent a Diſpatch to the Mufti acquainting him with the Death of the Cardinal Mazarini, Firſt Miniſter of State, and the Greateſt Favourite that ever liv'd. Now I will inform thee of ſome Paſſages, which I omitted in my Letter to that Venerable Prelate. It is Neceſſary for me thus to diſtribute my Intelligence, with a due reſpect to the different Quality of my Superiours.

Thou, I ſuppoſe, wilt require ſome Account of his Diſpoſition and Morals, with ſuch a Character as may render this Great Genius familiar to thy Knowledge.

He ſeemed to place his chief Happineſs in aggrandizing his Maſter whom he ſerv'd with a Zeal ſo pure and diſintereſs'd; a Loyalty ſo Incorruptible, and by ſuch regular Methods of Prudence and Policy; as if in his Days, nothing were to be counted Vertue or Vice, but what either favour'd or oppos'd the King of France's Intereſt. He was of a Happy Conſtitution for a Courtier, being by Nature Debonair, Complaiſant, Affable, and of a Sweet Deportment. Yet Experience and Art, taught him to improve theſe Advantages, to the Height of Diſſimulation. You ſhould ſee Courteſie and extraordinary Goodneſs flowing into every Feature of his Face; You ſhould hear Words breathing from his Mouth, like the ſoft Benedictions of an Angel: Yet at the ſame Time, his Heart gave the Lye to Both. He meant nothing leſs, than that a Man ſhould find him as good as his Word. He was ever ready to promiſe any Thing that was demanded of him: But in Performance, ſlow and full of Excuſes. Frugal of his Prince's Money, and Liberal of his own. Magnificent in his Buildings, and the Furniture belonging to them: Aiming in all Things to exceed other Men, his Equals; and in ſome, to ſurpaſs even Mighty Princes, his Superiours. In a Word, he was accompliſh'd with all Qualifications requiſite in a Fortunate Courtier, and a good Stateſman.

Yet after all, this Sublime Genius yeilded to Death: But not like Common Mortals. He died altogether like himſelf, without ſo much as changing that ſettled Gravity, and Serene Air of his Face, as had been Remarkable during his Life. He made the King Heir of his Eſtate, and bequeathed abundance of Legacies.

To ſay all in Brief: If he was Great in his Life, he was much more ſo in his Death; mingling his laſt Breath with the Sighs and Tears of the King, who lamented his Departure with the Mourning of a Son for a Father.

Paris, 26th. of the 3d. Moon,
of the Year 1661.

LETTER

LETTER III.

To Pesteli Hali, his Brother, Master of the Customs at Constantinople.

YEsterday a Dispatch came to my Hand from a very Remote Part of the Earth Our Cousin Iſouf ſent it from Aſtracan, a Famous City for Traffick, formerly belonging to the Crim Tartars, but now in the Poſſeſſion of the Moſcovites. He has been there a Conſiderable Time, finding Profit by Merchandiſe: For, there is a vaſt Reſort to that City from China, Indoſtan, Perſia, Moſcovy, and other Provinces of Europe and Aſia. The Roads to it, are daily covered with the Caravans of Trading People. And the River Volga can hardly ſuſtain the Innumerable Multitude of Veſſels that Tranſport Paſſengers with their Goods backwards and forwards, between Aſtracan, and the Regions round about the Caſpian Sea, into which that Mighty River diſcharges it ſelf.

Iſouf is Ingenious, and has pitch'd upon ſome Advantageous Way of enriching himſelf, which tempts him to take up his Abode in that City, and there end his Travels; or at leaſt, he will repoſe himſelf there, till Fortune preſents him with a fairer Opportunity of encreaſing his Wealth.

In the mean Time, I perceive by his Letter, that he gets Money apace, lives very happily, and has the Wit to keep himſelf free from the Yoke of Marriage, which embaraſs'd him ſo much formerly. He ſoon put that troubleſome Wife out of his Mind, after he had Divorc'd her; and he never fail'd to gratify himſelf with new Amours, where-ever he came in his Travels. He writes very Comically; and I can't forbear ſmiling, when he tells me, He has had as many Concubines as the Grand Signior. By which thou wilt perceive, That Iſouf is much addicted to Gallantry. He frankly confeſſes, That he firſt learned this Mode of loving at large in Perſia, eſpecially at Iſpahan; where he ſays, 'tis a Mark of Honour for a Man to be good at Intriguing with the Ladies: And he is call'd a Turk by way of Diſgrace, who frequents not every Evening the Gardens and Houſes of Pleaſure in the Suburbs. But he adds, that in India the Liberty of courting Women is much greater. And that the very Nature of that Climate, diſpoſes a Man to this ſoft Paſſion. In a word, our Amorous Kinſman retains the ſame Humour ſtill.

Yet this does not hinder him from proſecuting his neceſſary Affairs with Diligence, and Alacrity. He diſpatch'd a Buſineſs for me at Archangel in Ruſſia, and another at Moſco, very dexterouſly. Which convinces me, that he is not leſs Sedulous and Careful in Things which concern himſelf. He ſays, the Moſcovites are the greateſt Drunkards in the World.

World. Their Chief and moſt beloved Liquor, is what the French call, The Water of Life. 'Tis a Chymical Drink, extracted from the Lees of Wine, or other Strong Beverages: ſuch as thou know'ſt is common among the Greeks, Armenians, and Franks in the Levant. When the Moſcovites are once got into a Houſe where this Nectar is Sold, and are a little warm'd and elevated with it, they will not depart till all their Money's is gone: Nay, they will pawn their very Garments from their Backs in a Frolick, rather than want their Doſe of this Inebriating Stuff, and go out ſtark Naked in the Coldeſt Weather that is, fall aſleep in the open Streets, and yet are ne'er the worſe for it when they wake, but go to their daily Work with the greater Ardour. For, 'tis only the Common People are guilty of this Extravagance. As for the Gentry and Nobility, they are more cloſe and reſerv'd in their drunken Debauches.

The Moſcovites, according to the Character he gives me of them, are a very rude and unpoliſh'd People; Surly to one another, and extremely rugged to Strangers. They deſpiſe all other Nations in the World, and ſay, 'tis impoſſible for any Man to go to Heaven, who has not a Moſcovite Soul in him. They profeſs the Chriſtian Religion, and were formerly of the Greek Church; but now they have ſeparated themſelves, and ſet up a Patriarch of their own, to whom ſo great a Veneration is paid, that the Emperour himſelf ſelf holds his Stirrop when he mounts on Horſe-back.

Brother, I deſire thee to ſpeak advantageouſly of Iſouf, to the Illuſtrious Kerker Haſſan, and to the other Baſſa's of the Bench. He will be a ſerviceable Man to the Grand Signior, if encourag'd by ſome Place of Honour and Profit. I wiſh I could ſay the ſame of our Couſin Solyman. But he is too Wiſe in his own Conceit.

Dear Peſteli, excuſe my Abruptneſs; For my Hours are divided between the Service I owe to the Sultan, and the Affection I bear my Friends.

Paris, 7th. of the 5th. Moon,
of the Year 1661.

LETTER IV.

To Orchan Cabet, Student in the Sciences, and Penſioner to the Sultan.

I Have heard of thy Fame, and the Manner of thy Converſion to the Law brought down from Heaven: How that from a Chriſtian Prieſt, thou art become a Muſſulman Abdalla, that is, a Believer and Servant of the True God. May thy Reward, both here and hereafter, be according to thy Integrity in this Change of Faith and Religion: For Hypocrites are are neither Acceptable to God nor Man. Yet moſt Men are Proſelyted for Intereſt, Fear, or other Humane regards. And in the Senſe of the Chriſtians, thou knoweſt, a Renegado and a Villain are Reciprocal Terms.

The Inſupportable Miſeries of Servitude, tempt many to embrace Circumciſion, which at once ſets 'em free, and often puts 'em in a Condition to mend their Fortunes, and live more happily than they did, even before they were Captives: whilſt Ambition and Avarice, are prevailing Motives with others in more Proſperous Circumſtances to be of the Grand Signior's Religion, that ſo they may riſe in his Favour, and obtain ſome Conſiderable Preferment at the Court, or Office in the Army; like the Ancient Melchites among the Chriſtians, who were ſo call'd, becauſe they always profeſs'd the Faith of the Grecian Emperours, without examining whether it was Orthodox or no. A Sort of Religious Paraſites, who would be any Thing to ſerve their own Intereſt, and Adore the Devil himſelf, provided their Sovereign ſhew'd 'em an Example.

Yet after all, there are ſome who change their Religion in pure Sincerity, only compell'd thereto by the Dint of Exalted Reaſon, and Motives of Vertue. Such as theſe are Thinking Men, Perſons of Bold Spirits, who dare call in Queſtion the Tradition of their Fathers, examine the Principles in which they were Educated, diſpute every Thing, and bring all to the Standard of Natural Truth,

I rejoyce to hear that thou art one of this Character, and not in the Number of Counterfeits or Bigots: For ſuch bring no Credit to the Religion they embrace, but rather a Scandal. Yet the Arms of the Munificent Port are open to receive all who profeſs that God is One, and that Mahomet is his Apoſtle; leaving the Scrutiny of their Intention, to him who ſearches the Heart.

Thy Learning gives thee Fair Opportunities of doing Good. Put it to a Right Uſe. Convince the Infidels whom thou haſt forſaken, of their Errors; Confirm the True Believers, in the Faith without Blemiſh.

Do this by Diſcourſe, by Writing, and by thine own Exemplary Life, which laſt will prevail above Ten Thouſand Eloquent Sermons.

In a word, ſhew thy ſelf a True and Faithful Follower of the Prophet on Earth, and God will tranſlate thee to his Company in Paradiſe; where Moſes will introduce thee, Jeſus will Entertain thee with Joy, and all the 124000 Prophets will welcome thee to the Pleaſures which know no End.

Paris, 21ſt. of the 5th. Moon,
of the Year 1661.

LET-

LETTER V.

To the Mufti.

WE are apt to admire ſome Strange Paſſages which we find Recorded in Ancient Hiſtory, and whoſe Truth is out of the Reach of any Mortal to prove: Yet we ſlight the Miracles which are before our Eyes, Evident Matters of Fact, which no body can contradict. Whence this ſhould proceed, I know not, unleſs it be from a Natural Kind of Drowſineſs in the Soul, Common to the greateſt Part of Men; like the Sleep of thoſe, who cannot ſo ſoon be awaken'd by the loudeſt Noiſes they are accuſtom'd to, as by the ſoft and ſtill Idea's of a ſtrange Dream; So we regard not the Things to which we are daily habituated, tho' in themſelves never ſo prodigious: Whilſt we ſtart and are amaz'd at the moſt Ordinary Relations of Antiquity, only becauſe they are Novel to us, and we were not Eye-Witneſſes of the Things themſelves.

I formerly ſent a Letter to Cara Hali, the Sultan's Phyſician, wherein I mentioned ſeveral Phyſicians of Arabia, who in paſt Ages, were Eminent for ſome Remarkable Cures. But, I tell thee, not one of them could match the King of France's Succeſs in Curing an Epidemical Diſtemper, which they call the KING's KING's-EVIL. The General Symptoms of this Malady, are certain Swellings in the Face, Neck, or other Parts of the Body; ſometimes accompanied with Blindneſs, Deafneſs, Lameneſs, and other Imperfections. Thoſe who are troubled with this Diſeaſe, flock to the King's Court at certain Seaſons of the Year, and being introduced into his Preſence, he only touches the Part affected with his Hand, and an Infallible Cure follows.

They ſay, this Gift has been Inherent in the Kings of France for many Generations: And the Prieſts magnify it as a Great Miracle. But, I tell thee, all the Prodigy in my Opinion, lies in the Strength of the People's Imagination, which thou knoweſt works half the Cure in many Diſtempers. The Prieſts ſtand by the King, whilſt he touches the Sick: They repeat their Goſpel, and uſe certain Prayers and Exorciſms, being veſted all in White like Magicians. Theſe Ceremonies are perform'd with abundance of Gravity, which ſtrikes an Awe into the Credulous Patients. And to render the Buſineſs yet more Myſterious; whereas other Phyſicians take Money of the Sick, this Royal Æſculapius beſtows a Piece of Gold on every one whom he touches, which they are obliged to wear about their Necks as long as they live. Now whether the Charm lies in the Gold, or the King's Touch, or the Prayers and Ceremonies of the Prieſts, or finally in the Patients Fancy, it matters not much. This is certain, That Thouſands who come to the King's Feet, very much diſorder'd by this Evil, find a ſenſible Alteration in their Bodies, before they depart from his Preſence; and in a few Hours or Days at moſt, are perfectly recover'd.

Evil

Perhaps, the Kings of France have ſome Magical or Phyſical Tincture in their Blood. Or, it may be, they have found out the Philoſopher's Stone, ſo much talk'd of; and deliver'd it down to their Poſterity, as a Part of the Royal Inheritance. Which enables the preſent King, to do ſo many Prodigious Things both at Home and Abroad, in Peace and in War, beſides his Part in Curing this Sickneſs. I am no Roſicrucian, nor very fond or credulous of Miracles; yet I often wonder at the Treaſures of this Monarch, which appear Inexhauſtible. But the Ways of Kings are ſecret, and he of France is ſingular in his Myſterious Methods of growing Rich and Great. Neither do all his Magnificent Expences, ſeem to diminiſh his Wealth. The King of Sueden has been his Penſioner ever ſince he began to Reign: And Millions of French Gold, are diſperſed among the German Princes.

Theſe Things cauſe his Subjects to deſcant variouſly. But I referr 'em to thy Oraculous Judgment, whoſe Single Teſta is of Ten Thouſand Times more Worth, than the Decrees of a French Parliament.

Paris, 3d. of the 7th. Moon,
of the Year 1661.

LETTER

LETTER VI.

To Mirmadolin, Santone of the Vale of Sidon.

NOW I will vent Holy Things, and what the Divinity ſhall inſpire. The World was in Weeds when Hoſain the Prophet was ſlain, and the Moon put on her Mourning Dreſs. The Tymbrels of Perſia, Arabia and Babylon were heard in the Dead of the Night: Their Sound reach'd to the Third Heaven: The Shepherds ran to the Heights of the Earth, to diſcover the Occaſion of ſo much Noiſe. The Sentinels of Forts and Caſtles gave the Alarm, and the Men of War took hold of the Sword, the Bow and the Spear. The Tygris overflowed its Banks, and Diarbekir became a Lake. A Dark Body of Clouds overcaſt the Sky, and poured forth Thunder, Lightning and Hail. Fire ran along on the Sands of the Deſart, and the Air was all in a Flame. Horrour poſſeſs'd the Minds of Mortals, and the Angels themſelves were Uneaſy. The Beaſts of the Field ran into Dens and Caves, and the Dragons were touch'd with Remorſe. Only the more Venomous Kiſilbaſchi ſwell'd with Pride: The Poyſon of Murder and Hereſy had puffed up their Souls: They and their Poſterity are accurs'd to this Day, and to the Hour of the Irrevocable Sentence.

O Santone,

O Santone, Great is thy Faith, in that thou haſt abandoned the Shadow of this World, and ſeparated thy ſelf from the Contagion of Mortals. I revere the Majeſty of thy Sublime Soul, the Intellect ranging at Liberty. Thou daily gathereſt Flowers from the Garden of Eden, and being in the Body, enjoyeſt the Sweets of Paradiſe. Kings would lay down their Crowns to taſte of thy Pleaſures, did they but know them, and exchange all the Glory of Empires, for one Moment of thy Unſpeakable Bliſs. Thou Companion and Care of Angels, Darling of the Monarch Omnipotent!

Where-ever thou lieſt down, whether by Day or by Night, the Watchers Above ſtand ready with Umbrella's to skreen thee from the Scorching Beams of the Sun, the Chilling Darts of the Moon and Stars, and from all Injuries of Weather. The Elements go out of their Courſes to ſerve thee, and all Nature eſpouſes thy Intereſt.

The Merchant hires a Thouſand Camels, and loads them with the Choiceſt Riches of the Levant. He endures all the Fatigues of a long and dangerous Travel, through Syria, Arabia and Perſia; runs the Riſque of Robbers, Diſeaſes, and Ten Thouſand Methods of Death: and after all his Hazards and Pains, is not half ſo Happy nor ſo Rich as thou, who aboundeſt in Every Thing, becauſe thou deſireſt Nothing which thou haſt nor, or that is Unneceſſary. The Plough-men labour for thee in the Field, and ſo do the Artificers in the City. The Noble and the Vulgar gar are thy Purveyors, and the Greateſt Sovereigns pay Tribute to thee. Every Houſe is thy Home, and they count themſelves Happy, under whoſe Roof thou vouchſafeſt to ſleep. They are really ſo; for Benediction accompanies the Perfect Man in all his Ways, and the Favours of Heaven over-take them that ſhew Kindneſs to him. Thou art Lord of other Men's Eſtates, and every Man's Field is thy Inheritance. Thou enjoyeſt the Riches of this World, without being tainted with the Vices that attend 'em, and receiveſt Immortal Aſſurances and Seals of the Future Glory, in the Life which is to come. Oh! Happy Eſtate of the Righteous! Oh! Life to be truly envied!

As for me, I'm like a Galley-Slave, chain'd down to his Oar, and forc'd to Row Inceſſantly whither the Maſter of the Veſſel Commands. So am I oblig'd to obey the Dictates of my Superiours, whether there be Sin in the Caſe or no. I am faſten'd in the Cares of this Vain World, and the more Particular Anxieties of State. From all which thou art Happily free.

Oh that it were Lawful for me to ſhake off the Fretting Yoke, and diſintangle my ſelf from the Snares of Humane Policy! That I might live like the Men of the Firſt Ages, who honour'd the Earth as their Common Mother, and made no Envious Encloſures! They ſported Innocently on her Fragrant Boſom, and never moleſted their Kind Parent, by Cruelty to any of her Off-Spring. They ſuck'd

the

the Milk of her Breaſt: Her Veins ſtream'd with Wine and Honey. They banquetted on Variety of excellent Fruits, and no Body thought of Killing and Eating his Fellow-Animal. The Birds could then range the Air without Fear of the Fowler; neither did any Yawling Huntſman rouze the Timorous Hare from her Seat. The Roes and the Hinds could ſcamper at Pleaſure o'er the Plain, without being hatter'd to the Mountains and Rocks for Sanctuary; neither did any ſly Angler trepan the Fiſh of the Rivers. As for the Sea, 'twas then Unknown; No Man as yet, had ventur'd on that Perfidious Element, or found out the Uſe of Ships. There was in thoſe Days no Foreign Commerce or Traffick, nor any Need of it. Every Region ſupply'd its Inhabitants with what was Uſeful and Neceſſary: And thoſe Temperate Mortals deſir'd no more. They liv'd without Irregular Appetites, free from Ambition, Fraud and Blood.

This is the Life ſo much deſir'd by me, and which thou actually enjoyeſt. God augment thy Felicities and Raptures, that thou mayeſt paſs from one Viſion and Extaſy to another, till Gabriel ſnatch thy Soul away in a Divine Tranſport, beyond the Poſſibility of a Relapſe.

Holy Santone, whilſt thou art on Earth, pray for me; and when thou art among the Immortals, do me ſome Favours which may laſt for ever.

Paris, 26th. of the 8th. Moon,
of the Year 1661.

LETTER

LETTER VII.

To Dgnet Oglou.

MY Buſineſs in this Place obliges me to keep Company with all Sorts of People. Hence I indifferently aſſociate my ſelf with Stateſmen, Souldiers, Courtiers, Prieſts, Fidlers, Mechanicks, Seamen, or Perſons of any Profeſſion, from whom I can hope for any Improvement: For, there is hardly ſo deſpicable a Fellow in the World, who may not teach an Inquiſitive Mind ſomething, to which it was a Stranger before.

Sometimes I converſe with Painters, whom I generally find to be Men of Wit and Senſe, but very lewd and diſſolute: However, they ſerve to divert my Melancholy, to which thou knoweſt I am much inclin'd. For they are the merrieſt Sparks in the World, abounding with ſmart Repartees, Jeſts and Comical Stories, beſides a Hundred Mimical Tricks of good Buffoonry to make one laugh; that it is almoſt Impoſſible to be ſad in their Company.

They are moſt of them bred in the Academy, or in Colleges and Schools where the Sciences are profeſs'd: It being in a Manner neceſſary, That Men of this Trade ſhould have a Smack of all Sorts of Learning, and eſpecially, that they ſhould be indifferent good Hiſto-

Hiſtorians; they being many Times deſir'd to repreſent Pieces of Antique and Modern Hiſtory, without a Pattern. They have a very Facetious Way alſo of telling a Story to the Life, as well as of drawing it ſo in Picture. They would diſſolve the moſt ſtiff and moroſe Hadgi into Laughter and Jollity, to hear how gracefully they will ridicule the moſt ſerious Matters, and turn every Thing into Burleſque: For they are Admirable Satyriſts by Nature.

Yet theſe are not all alike, but differ in their Tempers like other Men. Some of them are Proud and Stately, others Fawning and Abject: And all of them great Humoriſts.

It was an odd Whim of Martin Heemskirk, a Famous Painter, that was born at a Village of the ſame Name. He died in the Year of the Chriſtians Hegira, 1574. This Man had amaſs'd together in his Life Time a Vaſt Quantity of Money; and having no Wife or Children, nor other Relations of his own to leave it to, he was reſolv'd to do ſomething, for which he might be talk'd of after his Death. I have heard of many dying Men, that have had one Caprice or other in making their laſt Will and Teſtament: But thou wilt ſay this of Martin's was Singular. For, on his Death-bed he bequeath'd all his Wealth to be diſtributed into Equal Dowries or Portions, wherewith to marry a certain Number of Maids of Heemskirk, his Birth-place, Yearly, on this Condition, That the New-married Couple, with all the Wedding-Gueſts, ſhou'd dance on his Grave.

It

It is neceſſary for thee to know, that ſince his Death, there has been a great Alteration of Religion in thoſe Parts: The Inhabitants, which in his Time were Roman Catholicks, are now all Proteſtants. And at the Time of this Change or Reformation, as they call it, it was the General Practice of the Proteſtants, to demoliſh all Images and Croſſes where-ever they found 'em. Now it was the Cuſtom of the Roman Catholicks to ſet up a Croſs at the End of every Sepulchre of the Dead. Yet, ſo great a Veneration have the Heemskirkers for the Memory of this Painter, that whereas there is not a Croſs to be ſeen ſtanding in all the Country beſides; yet his, being of Braſs, remains untouch'd, as the only Title their Daughters can ſhew to his Legacy.

'Twas a more Cruel and Inhumane Caprice of an Italian Painter (I think his Name was Giotto) who deſigning to draw a Crucifix to the Life, wheadl'd a poor Man to ſuffer himſelf to be bound to a Croſs for an Hour, at the End of which he ſhou'd be releas'd again, and receive a Conſiderable Gratuity for his Pains. But, inſtead of this, as ſoon as he had him faſt on the Croſs, he ſtabb'd him Dead, and then fell to drawing. He was eſteem'd the Greateſt Maſter in all Italy at that Time. And having this Advantage, of a Dead Man hanging on a Croſs before him, there's no Queſtion, but he made a Matchleſs Piece of Work on't.

As ſoon as he had finiſh'd his Picture, he carried it to the Pope, who was aſtoniſh'd, as at at a Prodigy of Art, highly extolling the Exquiſiteneſs of the Features and Limbs, the Languiſhing, Pale Deadneſs of the Face, the Unaffected Sinking of the Head: In a Word, he had drawn to the Life, not only that Privation of Senſe, and Motion which we call Death; but alſo the very Want of the leaſt Vital Symptom.

This is better underſtood, than expreſs'd. Every Body knows that it is a Maſter-piece to repreſent a Paſſion, or a Thought well and naturally. Much greater is it to deſcribe the total Abſence of theſe Interiour Faculties, ſo as to diſtinguiſh the Figure of a Dead Man, from one that is only aſleep.

Yet all this and much more, cou'd the Pope diſcern in the Admirable Draught which Giotto preſented him. And he lik'd it ſo well, that he reſolved to place it over the Altar of his own Chappel: For, thou know'ſt, this is the Practice of the Nazarenes, to Adore Pictures and Images. Giotto told him, Since he lik'd the Copy ſo well, he wou'd ſhew him the Original if he pleas'd.

What doſt thou mean by the Original, ſaid the Pope? wilt thou ſhew me Chriſt Jeſus on the Croſs in his own Perſon? No, repli'd Giotto, but I'll ſhew your Holineſs the Original from whence I drew this, if you will abſolve me from all Puniſhment.

The good old Father ſuſpecting ſomething extraordinary by the Painters thus Capitulating with him, promis'd on his Word to pardon him. Which Giotto believing, immediately ately told him where it was: And attending him to the Place, as ſoon as they were enter'd, he drew a Curtain back, which hung before the Dead Man on the Croſs, and told the Pope what he had done.

The Holy Father extremely troubl'd at ſo Inhumane and Barbarous an Action, repeal'd his Promiſe, and told the Painter, he ſhould ſurely be put to an Exemplary Death.

Giotto ſeeming reſigned to the Sentence pronounc'd upon him, only begg'd leave to finiſh the Picture before he dy'd; which was granted him. In the mean while, a Guard was ſet upon him to prevent his Eſcape. As ſoon as the Pope had caus'd the Picture to be deliver'd into his Hands, he takes a Bruſh; and dipping it in a Sort of Stuff he had ready for that Purpoſe, daubs the Picture all over with it, ſo that nothing cou'd now be ſeen of the Crucifix: But it was quite effac'd in all outward Appearance.

This made the Pope ſtark mad: He ſtamp'd, foam'd and rav'd like one in a Phren'ſy. He ſwore the Painter ſhould ſuffer the moſt Cruel Death that cou'd be invented, unleſs he drew another full as good as the former: For if but the leaſt Grace was miſſing, he wou'd not pardon him. But if he cou'd produce an exact Parallel, he wou'd not only give him his Life, but an Ample Reward in Money.

The Painter, as he had Reaſon, deſir'd this under the Pope's Signet, that he might not be in Danger of a Second Repeal: Which was granted him. And then he took a wet Sponge, and wip'd off all the Varniſh he had daub'd on the Picture. And the Crucifix appeared the ſame in all Reſpects, as it was before.

was

The Pope, who looked on this as a great Secret, being Ignorant of the Arts which Painters uſe, was raviſhed at the ſtrange Metamorphoſis. And to reward the Painter's treble Ingenuity, he abſolv'd him from all his Sins, and the Puniſhments due to them; ordering moreover his Steward, to cover the Picture all over with Gold, as a farther Gratuity for the Painter. And, they ſay, this Crucifix is the Original by which the moſt famous Crucifixes in Europe are drawn.

I need make no other Reflection on this, Than that as the Suppos'd Murder of Jeſus the Son of Mary, is the Source of all the Chriſtians Devotion; ſo the real Homicide which this Painter committed, has made it more intenſe and fervent, by how much the Crucifixes drawn after this Pattern, excel all that were ſeen before them, in the Tragical Portraiture of the Martyr'd Meſſias.

And, from this Reaſon it is, that Painters are in ſo great eſteem among the Italians, becauſe they form the Gods which thoſe Infidels Adore. It is no wonder therefore, that the Chief Head of their Church, ſhould ſo eaſily Abſolve Murder in a Painter, as a Venial Sin, eſpecially when it is done in Ordine ad Deum, as the Jeſuits ſay, that is, to promote God's Glory, as the Pope eaſily perſuaded ſuaded himſelf this was: Since Idolatry is the main Engine which ſupports the State and Grandeur of the Roman Court. And all the World knows, that Holy City is a Type of Heaven; or at leaſt, the Crafty Prieſts would fain repreſent it ſo.

My Friend, thou and I have ſeen enough of their Tricks and Holy Frauds in Sicily. Praiſe be to God, they had not Power to pervert us. Our Faith remains inviolate: We ſtill poſſeſs the Integrity of Muſſulmans, the Native Attach we owe to the Prophet, who was ſent to Exterminate Idols. In a word, we Adore none but One God, Creator of the Worlds. May that Incomprehenſible for ever keep us in the ſame Faith and Practice, till the Releaſe of our Souls.

Paris, 13th. of the 9th. Moon,
of the Year 1661.

LET-

LETTER VIII.

To Lubano Abufei Saad, an Egyptian Knight.

THIS Court is now at Fontainbleau, and all ſeems to be diſſolv'd in Joy for the Birth of a Dauphin. The Queen was delivered of this Young Prince, on the Firſt Day of this Moon. There's Nothing but Feaſting, Dancing and Revelling on this Account, with Boneſires and Congratulatory Addreſſes. Only the Duke of Orleans, the King's Brother has little Reaſon to be over-merry, ſince he was the next Preſumptive Heir of the Crown, in Caſe the King died without Iſſue Male: For the Laws of France exclude a Female from Reigning. Yet, this Duke diſſembles his Inward Grief, for being thus put by his Hopes, and appears as Joyful as the Father himſelf. He huggs and admires the Royal Babe, wiſhing him Health and Long Life in a Compliment, whom he really could rather wiſh out of the World; or at leaſt, that he had never come into it. So violent are the Temptations to a Crown, ſo ſtrong the Deſire of Empire, That the Nearneſs of Relation, which endears the Reſt of Mortals one to another, eſtranges the Hearts of Princes from thoſe of their own Blood, if they ſtand in the Way of their Ambition. And I can aſſure thee, the French do not ſpare to ſay, the Duke of Orleans has enough of this Vice to attempt great Things, were not his Genius over-aw'd, by the Matchleſs Fortune and Spirit of his Brother.

Neither is the King himſelf Inſenſible of this; remembring with what Warmth the Duke received the Flattering Addreſſes of ſome Courtiers, during his Brother's dangerous Sickneſs, when the Phyſicians had well-nigh given him over for a Dead Man.

I was acquainted with this Paſſage but lately by Oſmin the Dwarf, who watches all the Motions of this Court. He tells me that the King being inform'd, a Rumour was whiſpered among the Grandees of his Death, cauſed them all to be ſent for, and to paſs through his Chamber, whilſt the Curtains of his Bed were drawn open, that they might ſee their Sovereign alive, tho' in a bad State of Health. He ſays moreover, That the true Reaſon, why ſeveral Lords of late have been removed from their Offices about the King, is becauſe he reſented ill the too early and paſſionate Court they made to the Duke of Orleans, on the Report of his Brother's Death. 'Tis natural to all Men to love themſelves, and to deſire the Diſpoſal of their own Affairs. No Man would be content to have his Eſtate given away by his Servants, at their own Diſcretion. And Sovereign Monarchs are the moſt Jealous of all Men in ſuch Caſes: Particularly, the King of France is known to be a Prince very ſenſible of his Honour, and ſoon touched in that Point, by the leaſt Appearance pearance of Diſ-reſpect in his Subjects, and of Encroachment in his Neighbours.

As for the Duke of Orleans, he is a Prince of no great Character, either as a Souldier, or a Stateſman. Neither has he been much talked of in the World, till the Beginning of this Year, when he Married an Engliſh Princeſs, by Name Henrietta, Daughter to the late Murder'd King of that Nation.

We have had another Match here alſo, between the late Duke of Orleance's Daughter, and the Prince of Toſcany. Theſe things occaſion various Diſcourſe among thoſe who pretend to weigh exactly the different Intereſts of Chriſtian Courts, eſpecially of ſuch as are concerned in the New Alliances. For, the Greateſt Monarchs here in the Weſt, marry only for Profit and Advantage, to Fortify themſelves by a cloſer Union with the Houſe to which they are Ally'd. Whereas our Eaſtern Princes only indulge their Paſſions in the Choice of their Wives; admitting none to their Embraces, but the moſt Exquiſite Beauties that can be found. And where they once pitch their Phancy, they neither regard Riches, Honour, or any other Recommendation, ſave what their Love ſuggeſts; being themſelves Inexhauſtible Fountains of Wealth, Nobility and good Fortune to all who have the Happineſs to be in their Favour.

They ſcorn to ſell themſelves, and proſtitute the Glory of their Diadems to a Foreign Prince, for the Sake of a little Gold, and much Trouble, with a proud Female, whom perhaps they never ſaw. Yet this is the common Practice among the Princes of the Nazarene Belief; Who conſider not, that inſtead of a Wife, a Partner of their Empire, and a Friend, they often entertain a Snake, a Traytor, an Enemy: Eſpecially if ſhe be a Woman of Wit and Intrigue, as moſt of them are. This made the now Queen-Mother, the Relict of Lewis XIII, ſuſpected by her Huſband; and the preſent Queen of France is under the like Circumſtances: And it will always be ſo, where Princes Match themſelves after this manner, and cannot debar their Wives from holding a ſecret Correſpondence with the Family from which they Deſcend.

Aſſuredly, the Ottoman Politicks are the moſt refined and ſecure of any in the World; our Religion moſt Holy, and our Morals moſt Sound. Which Three are evident Signs, That God has raiſed up this Sacred Empire, to ſubdue all the Nations on Earth, and bring 'em to the Faith of his Divine Unity.

Paris, 9th. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year 1661.

LET-

LETTER IX.

To Cara Hali, Phyſician to the Grand Signior.

I Am now in my Chamber by a Glowing Fire, wanting Nothing that can comfort a Reaſonable Man: Whilſt I hear the Winds whiſtling, the Snow driving upon my Windows, and the hollow Voices of the Watch proclaiming a Night little leſs Cold, than that laſting one they feel in the Artick Circle once a Year. Yet I wiſh my ſelf in a Plain, or on the Top of ſome High Mountain, where I might feel Nature in the moſt Rigid of all her Humours. I love Variety, and 'tis a Pain to be confined to Pleaſure it ſelf, when 'tis all of one Kind, or what I'm us'd to.

'Tis to thee, my Dear Hali, I owe this Thought, when you told me once, as we were walking together in the Cemetery of Sultan Sclyman's Moſque, That Man is made for all Things.

I remember the Elegance and Force of Reaſon with which you explained your Sentiments, upon a Loſs which I had then ſuſtained by Shipwrack; comforting me with this Reflection, that all the Gains on Earth are only Burdens; all the Riches, Honours, Pleaſures, and whatſoever is deſired by Mortals, are but ſo many Clogs to tie us faſter to this,

Little, Narrow Globe, where we are born to trample on as our Foot-ſtool.

All this is true; but I conſider farther, That the Occurrences of this Life ought to be received with Indifference, and we ſhould be as Chearful in a Priſon, as in a Palace; becauſe Nothing can happen to us, which was not decreed by Fate. Methinks I could go as freely to Torments in a Juſt Cauſe, as to a Sumptuous Banquet. I could ſmile at the Malice of my Perſecutors, and triumph o'er the Vain Executioners, when I ſee them ſweat at their Inhumane Toil, and yet can never have their Wills of a Soul caſt in ſuch a Mold as mine. Whatever they may do with my Body, tho' they excruciate me with a Thouſand Inventions of Cruelty, tho' they reduce me to Aſhes, yet they cannot rob me of my Reaſon. Neither Fire, nor Sword, nor Rack, nor any other Inſtrument of Barbarous Rage, can hurt my Thoughts. I ſhall ſtill have the Power of Meditating, in Spight of 'em all: And I eſteem that the Specifick Happineſs of a Rational Creature. There's no ſuch Thing as Pleaſure or Pain, but what our Opinion makes ſo. I have try'd to handle Fire; I've graſped hot burning Coals in the Palm of my Hand, with which I now write. The devouring Element ſoon faſtened on my Skin, and eat its way through into my Fleſh, whilſt I was buſy in Contemplating its Nature and Effects, without being concern'd in any Senſe of Pain. I kept a tite Rein, and curb'd my Soul. I held it within Compaſs, and would not ſuffer it to winch, or laſh, or flounce out of it ſelf, or deſcend into my Body, to reſcue the Part affected, or be concern'd at its Grievance. But when I reflect on the Inconveniences that might follow, and that it would hinder me from ſerving the Grand Signior and my Friends, I threw the Coals away, well ſatisfied that I had made the Experiment without prejudicing my Reaſon, or falling into any Paſſion Unbecoming a Man.

not

I take as much Pleaſure in Faſting, as in Eating or Drinking; in Labour, as in Reſt; in Watching, as in Sleep. There's no Exceſs or Contrariety in Nature, which does not afford me as much Delight as Mediocrity, or the Golden Mean it ſelf. I find Guſt in every Thing that happens to me. And this I take to be the Proper Part of a Muſſulman, or of one Reſigned to God.

Yet this hinders me not from buſtling in the World, and proſecuting my Buſineſs with Alacrity and ſome Eagerneſs. We are born for Action, and not wholly for Thought. 'Tis a mix'd Life we are to lead on Earth. But when I fail of my End or deſired Succeſs in any Undertaking, I am not troubl'd; conſidering I was born to encounter Evil as well as Good in this Mortal State.

In all that I have ſaid, I do not pretend to the Celebrated Apathy of the Stoicks. I feel Pleaſure and Pain from the ſame Objects which thus affects other Men: But I feel 'em with Indifference, not ſuffering my Underſtanding and Judgment to participate with my Paſſion and Senſe.

I have perceived my ſelf ſometimes in Agonies, which I thought exactly anſwered the Character of thoſe which dying Perſons feel. And I believe they were in a Degree the very ſame: Yet I found no Panick Fears upon me, no Dread of that Amazing Change: But rather certain Blooming Hopes, Young, Tender Springing Joys, ariſing from the Thoughts of a New Life, the Unavoidable Effect of that which we call Death, wherein I promiſed my ſelf the Pleaſure of Freſh Enjoyments and Diverſions, to which I was wholly then a Stranger.

If thou thinkeſt this too Extravagant, and that Death is not a proper Object of our Wiſhes, yet thou wilt at leaſt acknowledge, That it may furniſh us with ſufficient Arguments of Content and Acquieſcence, ſince no Man can avoid it, and it is ſure to entertain us with Novelties which we never were acquainted with before, which recommends it under a very deſirable Figure, becauſe Humane Nature perpetually covets New Things.

I have ſeen Perſons Condemned to Death here in Paris, who have been offer'd Life on certain Conditions not agreeing with their Humour; yet have refuſed it, and rather choſe Death which they knew would free 'em at once from all their Preſent Troubles. And thou know'ſt with what Reſignation our Greateſt Baſſa's ſubmit their Necks to the Executioners, when the Grand Signior thinks fit to call for their Lives. All that they reply to the Fatal Mandate, is, The Will of my Sovereign vereign Lord be done. They at once gather up all the Strength of their ſcattered Reaſon, and ſhrink their dilated Souls to a Point. Then with a Re-doubled Force, they ſhake off their Inclinations to Honours, Riches, and the Pleaſures of this Life, as a Man rowzes from a long Dream or Trance. With Smiles and a profound Submiſſion they kiſs the Royal Firme, being awaken'd to the Thoughts of more illuſtrious and Serene Joys than this groſs Earth affords, even to the Ineffable Pleaſures of Eden, the ſure Reward of thoſe that die in Obedience and Peace: Since they are to be eſteemed Martyrs, as well as thoſe who meet Death in the Field of the Sacred Combat, in the War for our Holy Faith.

Oh! That it were my Lot thus to expire in Honour, to have my laſt Breath mixed with the Devout Aſpirations and Suffrages of True Believers, that ſo my Example might edify others, and the Publick Character of an Untainted Loyalty might benefit my ſelf: Whilſt Fame proclaimed it before my Arrival at the Inviſible Regions, to prepare the Ghoſts of Juſt Men to bid me welcome, and give me a kind Reception, who am yet wholly a Stranger in thoſe Parts of the World: For Death it ſelf cannot baniſh me out of the Univerſe. And there's my laſt Comfort.

Thou my dear Phyſician, wilt conclude, I'm Melancholy by this Kind of Diſcourſe. But I tell thee, 'tis only another way of Expreſſing the Secret Pleaſure and Tranquility of my Soul, which is more to be valued by him that enjoys it, than all the Laughter and Extravagant Mirth in the World. These only ruffle our Passions, and raise a Dust in our Eyes: whereas the other compose and purify our Reason, giving us a Constant Prospect of Things Past, Present, and to Come. So that we can never be at a Loss, but always ready equipp'd for the worst Contingencies. Hali, Adieu.

Paris, 15th. of the 12th. Moon,
of the Year 1661.

LETTER X.

To the Same.

THE Court of France in all things endeavours to imitate the Ancient Grandeur of the Roman Emperours, and their Policy. As they had their Amphitheatres, whereon were exhibited all Sorts of Shows and Spectacles to divert the People in Time of Peace; so have these their Theatres whereon according to the more Acceptable Mode of the present Age, are represented the Various Kinds of Vertue and Vice; Men's Follies, and Perfections; Modern Humours, and the Ancient Morality; Intrigues of Love, and of State; Surprizing Actions of War, and the Subtle Overtures of Peace; The Tyranny of of Sovereigns, and Rebellion of Subjects. In fine, whatſoever is treated of in Books, is here Acted to the Life on the Stage, and with ſo much Advantage of Scenes, Interludes, Muſick, Dances, Language, Wit, Humour, and the like Charming Circumſtances, That a Man at ſome Hours cannot better paſs away his Time, than in being preſent at theſe Entertainments. Where all that he has read, either in Ancient or Modern Hiſtory, deſerving Remark, ſhall be ſucceſſively preſented to his View, as efficaciouſly as if the Perſons were now living, and in preſence, whoſe Actions each Play deſcribes.

There you ſhall be introduced as it were, into the Court and Camp of the Grand Cyrus: You ſhall accompany Alexander the Great in his Expeditions through Aſia: You ſhall ſee him die of Poyſon at Babylon, and the Macedonian Empire Cantoniz'd among his Officers: You ſhall behold all the Roman Cæſars in their Riſe and Fall: With whatſoever Particularities were obſervable in this or any other Renown'd Monarchy on Earth; not excluding the laſt and moſt Univerſal Empire of the Ottomans. For theſe Infidels preſume to act o'er again, the Part of Tamerlain, and lead about in Dramatick Triumph, the Encag'd, yet ſtill Invincible Bajazet. In Habits, which only become the deſtin'd Conquerors of the World, theſe Slaves dare perſonate the Glorious Solyman, Mahomet the Great, the Victorious Selim, and even Amurat himſelf, the Stouteſt Emperour that ever Reigned: I mean, the Uncle of our preſent Sovereign.

Be-

Beſides True Hiſtory thus repreſented, the Spectators are ſometimes diverted with Fabulous Entries of Gods, Nymphs, Fauns, Satyrs, Muſes, Graces, Monſters, and whatſoever we find in the Ancient Poets.

There you ſhall ſee Prometheus fetching Fire from Heaven, to give Life to his Men of Clay; Lycaon transformed into a Wolf, for his Inhoſpitable Carriage to Jupiter; Ganymede ſnatched up into Heaven by an Eagle, and made Jupiter's Cup-bearer, for his ſingular Beauty. It is pleaſant alſo to ſee Phryxus with his Siſter Helle, ſwiming o'er the Helleſpont on the Back of a Ram, with a Golden Fleece; whilſt ſhe for Fear, falls off, and is drowned: And from her Name [Helle] that Sea is ſuppos'd to be ſo called. In the mean while, Phryxus ſwims forward, and arrives at Colchis, where he ſacrifices the Ram, and hangs the Golden Fleece up in the Temple; which was afterwards ſtole away by Jaſon and his Argonauts. It is equally diverting, to ſee the Artifice of the Scenes and Machines, which repreſent Jupiter transforming himſelf into a Show'r of Gold, and ſo deſcending into Danae's Lap, when he begets Perſeus on her, who ſubdued the Gorgons, and with Meduſa's Head, turned the Cephen Nobles into Statues. In a word, all the Ingenious Fictions of Orpheus, Homer, Heſiod, Ovid and the reſt of the Greek and Roman Poets, are here tranſlated, not ſo much from one Language to another, as from Words to Actions, and from Dead, Inanimate Characters, to Living Figures of the Things Things themſelves. For theſe ſort of Plays are acted by Men, Women and Children culled out, and Educated for that Purpoſe. And the Managers are at a vaſt Charge, for Variety of Proper Scenes and Dreſſes for every Occaſion; each Actor being exactly Apparell'd according to the different Quality of the Perſons repreſented, and the Mode of the Age and Country wherein they lived.

Theſe Sort of Divertiſements, are very agreeable both to the Court and the City. The King takes great Delight in them, eſpecially in Ballets and Paſtorals, which conſiſt chiefly of good Songs and Dances, mixed with bold and uncouth Entries of Antiques, repreſenting Monſters and Devils, as the Chriſtians uſually deſcribe 'em.

But there was lately a check given to their Sport, by an Accident which has ſurpriz'd all People that hear of it, and has puzzl'd the moſt Intelligent Heads to give an Account of ſo ſtrange an Occurrence.

On the 19*th*. of this Moon, the King and the whole Court were preſent at a Ballet, repreſenting the Grandeur of the French Monarchy. About the middle of the Entertainment, there was an Antique Dance performed by Twelve Maſquerades, in the ſuppos'd Forms of Dæmons. But before they had advanced far in their Dance, they found an Interloper amongſt 'em, who by encreaſing the Number to Thirteen, put 'em quite out of their Meaſures: For they practiſe every Step and Motion before-hand, till they are perfect. Being ing abash'd therefore at the unavoidable Blunders the Thirteenth Antique made 'em commit, they stood still like Fools, gazing at one another: None daring to unmask, or speak a word; for that would have put all the Spectators into a Disorder and Confusion. Cardinal Mazarini (who was the chief Contriver of these Entertainments, to divert the King from more serious Thoughts) stood close by the Young Monarch, with a Scheme of the Ballet in his Hand. Knowing therefore, that this Dance was to consist but of Twelve Antiques, and taking Notice that there were actually Thirteen, at First imputed it to some Mistake. But afterwards when he perceived the Confusion of the Dancers, and that they could not procced, he made a more narrow Enquiry into the Cause of this Disorder. To be brief, they convinc'd the Cardinal, that it could be no Error of theirs, by a kind of demonstration, in that they had but Twelve Antique Dresses of that Sort, which were made on purpose for this particular Ballet; whereas the Thirteenth Dancer was disguiz'd after the same manner. Therefore they concluded, that either the Devil or some body else, had put a Trick upon 'em. That which made it seem the greater Mystery was, that when they came behind the Scenes to uncase, and examine the Matter, they found but Twelve Antiques, whereas on the Stage there were Thirteen.

The preciser Sort of Bigots gave it out for certain, That the Devil was amongst 'em:

Whilst

Whilſt others more probably ſay, 'Twas only ſome Envious or Ambitious Dancing-Maſter, who was either reſolv'd to be reveng'd for not being one of the Twelve, or deſign'd to ſhew his Parts Incognito, againſt another Opportunity, and in the Interim, ſet the Court a wondring at his Singular Skill and Dexterity: For it was obſerv'd, That one of the Thirteen far ſurpaſs'd all the Reſt, and did Things to a Miracle.

Be it how it will, it has brought to Memory a Paſſage that happen'd on the like Occaſion at a Town not far from Paris, about Eighteen Years ago, yet was not half ſo much talk'd of then, as 'tis now: Which was the Reaſon, I took no Notice of it in any of my Letters. But now they are big with it: 'Tis the general Diſcourſe of all Companies, who make Compariſons of that Event with this. Perhaps 'twill not be unpleaſant to thee to know it.

In the Year 1644. toward the latter End, a Company of Stage-Players were at a Place call'd Vitry, entertaining the People with Comedies; But there happen'd ſomething really Tragical to one of the Actors. This Man was to perform the Part of one Dead, and then he was to revive again by Magick. He acted his Part too truly, and baffl'd the Necromancers Art. For when he touch'd him with his Taliſman, as the Rules of the Play requir'd, in Order to his Reſurrection, the Inanimate Trunk could not obey. The Man was Dead indeed.

Whether

Whether he overſtrained himſelf in imitating the Silent, Still, and Irrecoverable Privations of that Paſſive State, and gave his ſlippery Soul a ſtrong Temptation, with a fair Opportunity to eſcape its Bonds; Or, whether Heaven had a Particular Hand in ſo Remarkable a Cataſtrophe, I will not preſume to divine. But this and the other Occurrence, has put the People quite out of Conceit with Plays.

Sage Hali, remember the Arabian Proverb, which ſays, 'Tis not good to Jeſt with God, Death or the Devil. For the Firſt neither can, nor will be mocked; the Second mocks all Men, one Time or other; and the Third puts an Eternal Sarcaſm on thoſe that are too familiar with him. Adieu.

Paris, 30th. of the 1ſt, Moon, of the Year 1662.

LET-

LETTER XI.

To Dgnet Oglou.

GOD unravel my Soul, reverſe my Faculties, turn my Nature inſide out, make me a Monſter of a New Predicament, or annihilate me, which he pleaſes, if I am not true to my Truſt: Yet the Miniſters of the Port ſuſpect me.

By the Thoughts of Mahomet our Holy Law-giver, whilſt he was climbing the boundleſs Heights of the Firmament, I've a Heart like the Roman Curtius, who bravely leap'd into the Fathomleſs Abyſs to ſave his Country from Ruin. They miſtake Mahmut, who think he'll be pimp'd out of his Loyalty by Frowns or Smiles, Flatteries or Threats, Gold or Tortures. I'd run the Riſque of Damnation it ſelf to ſerve my Sovereign, or to do any Thing becoming a Man of Honour. Yet my Superiours uſe me like a Villain or a Traytor. Their Letters are full of Reproaches and Threatnings, as if I were not worthy to live. 'Tis ſtrange to me, whence all this Malice ſhould proceed; and that after I have done and ſuffered all that could be expected from a Muſſulman in my Poſt, to demonſtrate my Incorruptible Fidelity to the Grand Signior, I ſhould ſtill be perſecuted as a Tiaſer, and Enemy to the Ottoman Intereſt. I know not what to think of it.

If

If I have done any Thing which deſerves Death or Impriſonment, why do they not ſend for me to Conſtantinople, and execute Juſtice on me? Or if I am not thought fit to continue any longer in this Poſt, why do they not call for my Commiſſion, and give it to ſome Body better qualify'd? Either of theſe wou'd be a merciful Proceeding, compar'd with the more Cruel and Ignominious Way they have invented to murder me; For, now they put me to a lingring Death, by continually corroding and waſting the Piece of my Soul, which is my Life, with Contempts and Reproaches.

I am not at all troubl'd when they tax me with Atheiſm, or ſay, I'm a Kyſilbaſchi, a Libertine, a Chriſtian, a Heathen Philoſopher; or when they are pleas'd to make a Monſter of me, a Mungrel Gallimaufry, a walking Hotchpotch, compounded of Jew, Turk, Nazarene and Epicure. In loading me with theſe opprobrious Titles, they rank me with ſome of the Greateſt Mortals, and engage even our Holy Prophet himſelf to eſpouſe my Cauſe, and vindicate my Reputation; ſince he is in theſe very Terms blaſphem'd by the Followers of Jeſus: Thoſe Infidels forgetting that their own Meſſias was after the like Manner traduc'd by the Jews, who call'd him Impoſtor, Magician, Heretick, Devil, and I know not what. This has been the Lot of all Holy Men and Prophets, to be envied and aſpers'd by the Grandees of the Nation and Age wherein they liv'd: Becauſe they boldly reprov'd reprov'd their Vices, and taught them the ſincere Maxims of Vertue both by Word and Example. And though I have not Vanity enough to liſt my ſelf in the Number of Prophets, or Perfect Men; yet I have Rea- to conclude, That all this Perſecution is rais'd againſt me, on the Account of the Liberty I take to reprehend the Errors and Failings of thoſe, who are Slaves to the Grand Signior as well as I: Tho' I have been commanded to do this by the moſt Auguſt Miniſters of the Empire. But great Men in Power, love not to be told of their Faults. They wou'd live Arbitrary as Sovereigns, without the leaſt Check or Controul. They will rather cheriſh a Thouſand Flatterers and Sycophants, than ſuffer one Diogenes to live.

But that which vexes me moſt, is, That they glance upon me in ſome Expreſſions, as if I were falſe to the Truſt which is repos'd in me. A Crime for which I ever had an Invincible Abhorrence, and which wou'd ſooner tempt me a Thouſand Times to die, than to be once guilty of it. Thou know'ſt my Temper, and I need ſay no more.

I ſhou'd have burſt with Grief and Indignation, had I not given my Reſentments this Vent, and that to a Friend, who by knowing my Affliction, takes one Half of it for his own Share, and ſo I'm eas'd.

Paris, 2d. of the 4th. Moon, of the Year 1662.

LETTER

LETTER XII.

To Abrahim Eli Zeid, Hadgi, Preacher to the Seraglio.

THEY have a Proverb here in the Weſt, which ſays, All is not Gold that gliſters. And 'tis frequently verify'd in their own Prieſts, who are generally the greateſt Hypocrites in the World.

I had not been long in this City, before I ſent a Letter to Bedredin, Superiour of the Derviſes of Cogni in Natolia, whoſe Soul is now with God; wherein I gave him an Account of the Converſe I once had with a Jeſuite. For, pretending to be a Student and Retainer to the Clergy, I cou'd not avoid the Company of Eccleſiaſticks: Beſides, It was my Intereſt to inſinuate into their Acquaintance; and to tell the Truth, I have made it a great Part of my Buſineſs to gain a Familiarity with Prieſts, and Derviſes ever ſince I came hither.

There was Abundance of Reaſon for this, on ſeveral Accounts. For I improv'd my ſelf much by the Society of thoſe amongſt them that are Learned; and I edify'd not a little by the very Ignorance and Follies of others. From ſome I ſqueez'd out Secrets of State, and the Deſigns of Cabals: By others I penetrated into the Myſterious Vices of their own Order. In a Word, all of them taught me ſomething or other which I knew not before; and I never had Occaſion to repent of keeping them Company.

or

I contracted a particular Friendſhip with an Honeſt Friar or Two in this City, who were Perſons of Candour and Learning: But, now they are Dead. Beſides, I have had no ſmall Intimacy with Cardinal Richlieu, and his Succeſſor Mazarini. I tell thee, if I had not coveted the Friendſhip of theſe Princely Prieſts, yet it had been impoſſible to eſcape their Knowledge, as obſcure a Figure as I make. For, it was their conſtant Practice, thus to ſeek out all the Strangers and Travellers in this City, under Pretence of that Great Regard they had for Men of Merit; but in Reality, to pump out of them Foreign Secrets.

Cardinal Richlieu profeſs'd a great Kindneſs to me, becauſe I had been at Conſtantinople and in other Parts of the Grand Signior's Dominions. He ſeem'd alſo to value me not a little for my Skill in Interpreting Greek, Sclavonick, and other Languages of the Eaſt. What he thought of me in's Heart, I cannot divine; but I have Reaſon to think, he ſuſpected me for a Muſſulman. And yet I wonder he never ſearch'd for the main Proof, the Mark of Circumciſion. Perhaps, 'twas an Effect of his Good Nature, as being loath to ruin me Irrecoverably. But, I rather aſcribe it to Providence, which wou'd not ſuffer him, it may be, to make ſo Fatal a Reflection: Yet, by his Order ſome Years ago ago, I was Impriſon'd for Six Moons. What the Meaning on't was, I could never dive into. But, I had a ſhrewd Jealouſy of a certain Tranſylvanian Reſident at this Court, who perhaps might do me ſome ill Offices. The World's like a Lottery, wherein we muſt expect to meet with many Unlucky Chances.

By what I have ſaid, thou wilt eaſily perceive, That though the Prieſts make a fair Semblance of Piety, Mortification, and other Religious Vertues, yet they are great Buſy-Bodies, and wholly taken up in Secular Affairs.

If this were the Worſt Character they deſerve, they might paſs for very Good Men, and neceſſary Inſtruments of the Publick Welfare: Becauſe, they have the Tutelage and Guardianſhip of all Men's Conſciences; they form 'em in their Youth, and govern 'em in their Ripeſt Years. Beſides, they have many Advantages of ſtudying the Politicks, more than other Men, as being all Educated in the Academies, where if they be not very dull, they cannot fail of becoming good Hiſtorians, and Indifferent Stateſmen. For, their Libraries abound with all Manner of Ancient and Modern Writers; and their Converſation is generally refin'd and pregnant in Intrigues.

But they corrupt their Learning, with falſe Maxims which they borrow from an Intolerable Pride and Senſuality; perſwading themſelves, that they are as far above other Men, that is, the Laity, as thoſe are above the Beaſts; That God has beſtow'd on them a

Dignity

Dignity Superiour to that of the Greateſt Temporal Monarchs; and, in fine, That this Earth is a Paradiſe, and themſelves the Gods and Lords of it.

When I ſpeak at this Rate of the Nazarene Prieſts, underſtand me not without Reſtriction. There are ſome Good and Holy Men amongſt them Perſons of Unblemiſh'd Manners, and Incorrupt Sincerity. But, theſe are very rare; and the French Prieſts are eſteem'd the moſt ſincere of any within the Pale of the Roman Church.

As for the Italian Clergy, they are mere Libertines; the moſt debauch'd and profligate Fellows in the World.

Adonai the Jew, a late Private Agent of the Grand Signior, who had travell'd up and down through all Italy, and reſided a conſiderable Time in the Chief Cities and Towns of Note, made many curious Obſervations and Remarks on the Lives of the Prieſts, which he ſet down in his Journal. This I have by me now, it being ſent me, according to my Deſire, after his Death by Zeidi Alamanzi, his Succeſſor in that Station, who is at preſent at Venice.

I have perus'd this Relation my ſelf, with no ſmall Pleaſure; and believe 'twill not be unwelcome to thee, to give thee an Abſtract of what he ſays.

It is poſſible, he may exaggerate ſome Things, and deliver himſelf too partially in others, out of the Natural and Inherent Averſion the Jews have for the Chriſtians: But thou thou wilt find, that in the Main, he inſiſts only on ſuch Reflections as it becomes any Man to make, who has the leaſt Spark of Common Morality and Reaſon.

In the Firſt Place, he finds Fault with the Eccleſiaſticks, in that they abſtain from Marriage themſelves, yet recommend that State to the Laity as a very Holy Sacrament and Myſtery of Religion: Whilſt they indulge themſelves at the ſame Time in all Manner of Laſciviouſneſs, wallowing in Fornication, Adultery, Inceſt, and Sodomy it ſelf. He ſays, there is hardly one Prieſt in Ten, who does not keep Two or Three Harlots; and the moſt Recluſe Derviſes, are either Pimps to other Men's Luſts, or they indulge their own with the moſt infamous Courtezans and Catamites. Theſe Pretenders to Perfection and Sanctity, are often found Maſquerading and Revelling about the Streets, in the Time of Carnaval, with a Company of Whores for their Attendance. Nay, all the Year round their Monaſteries are no other than Stews or Brothel-Houſes. They introduce Women into their Cells in a Monaſtick Habit, and ſo they paſs for Men who come to viſit them as Friends, Relations or Travellers. Theſe Ladies of Pleaſure lie thus conceal'd for many Days and Nights together. And the Superior of the Convent winks at this for a little Money, being moſt commonly as bad as any of them.

Theſe Holy Fathers, go marching and ſlouching along the Streets, in the moſt Mortify'd tify'd Manner Imaginable. You wou'd take 'em for perfect Santones and Ideots. Yet this is all but Mummery, whilſt they are the moſt glozing Hypocrites in the World, mere Devils in a City, and abounding in wicked Thoughts and Practices.

Adonai tells a pleaſant Story of a young Monaſtick of St. Dominick's Order at Rome. This Monk was of Noble Extraction, and his Parents were very rich, and powerful in the City. On which Account he was indulg'd many Liberties, deny'd to the reſt of his Religeous Brethren. He was permitted to carry good Quantities of Gold and Silver about him, for his Perſonal Expences; and to wear a Secular Habit, ſuitable to his Birth and Quality. But this Liberty had like to have prov'd fatal to him, one Night during the Carnaval.

It was late, and very dark, when this Religious Bully was beating the Streets, upon the Hunt for Whores; and walking under certain Piazza's near the River Tyber, he was accoſted by a Woman mask'd, and in a very good Dreſs; who ſpoke to him frankly, asking him the Way to Il Rotundo. This is the Name of a Church in Rome, dedicated to All the Saints: In the Time of the Gentiles, 'twas call'd Pantheon, or the Temple of all the Gods. The Monk being in one of his Rambling Equipages, and his Inclinations equally bent on Pleaſure; having alſo a Hundred Florins about him; preſently made Anſwer, He wou'd conduct her to the Place

ſhe enquired for. She, after ſome counte feit Eſſays of a modeſt Repulſe, at leng accepted his Offer: And by the Way, perſwaded her into a Tavern. The cunni Nymph manag'd her Buſineſs ſo well, th the Monk over-heated with Wine, a other coſtly Entertainments, grew ſo in Lo with her, that he forgot ſhe was to go the Pantheon, and offer'd to wait on h home. She accepted the Motion; and t ling him, her Houſe was ſeated on the Ba of the Tyber, they return'd the ſame Way they came.

When they arriv'd at the Piazza's, wh they firſt met, Three Perſons appear'd, m fled up in Cloaks: Two of which ſudde ſeiz'd the Monk, holding their Ponyards his Breaſt; whilſt the Third, diſcloſing hidden Light of a Dark Lanthorn, which held in his Hand, faſten'd on the Lady, a made her unmask. As ſoon as he ſaw Face, he ſtamp'd and rav'd, menac'd a ſwore, he wou'd be the Death of that V lain who had debauch'd his Wife. All t was but a fore-laid Deſign. In a Word, ter all the Parts of an abus'd, incens'd, vengeful Husband, acted to the Life; at h through the Interceſſion of the Two o Ruffians, and the Monk's penitent and miſſive Addreſs, it was concluded to ſp his Life and only ſtrip him naked; lea him in that Condition to ſeek his Fort among the Watch.

T

This was ſoon put in Execution, and the Free-booters, with all their Prey, ſecurely march'd off. The poor Monk, thus miſerably abandon'd, without Garments, Money, or any Thing to comfort him in his Calamity, or to bribe the Watch, gave himſelf over to Melancholy and Deſpair, in regard this Accident would bring an Eternal Infamy on him, and he ſhou'd be no longer able to ſhew his Face in Rome, the Seat of his Nativity; nor among any of his Kindred and Friends. Sometimes he thought to drown himſelf in the Tyber; or elſe to counterfeit a Phrenſy, and ſo run bawling, driveling, and talking Nonſenſe through the Streets; hoping the reſt wou'd never be divulg'd.

Whilſt he was in theſe penſive Thoughts, irreſolute what to do, the Watch walking their Rounds, bolted upon him on a ſudden; and ſeeing a naked Man, at that Time of Night, in ſuch a ſolitary Place, at firſt were ſtartl'd, as tho' they had met a Ghoſt; but recollecting themſelves better, they boldly ſeiz'd his Perſon, and examin'd how he came in that Condition.

It was in vain for him to beg, entreat, and promiſe any Thing, if they wou'd not expoſe him to open Shame. This did but increaſe their Curioſity and Suſpicion. In a Word, the Place of their Rendezvous being very near the ſame Tavern where this unfortunate Monk had regal'd his Strumpet, they led him thither, and kept him Priſoner till the Morning. He that kept the Houſe re-member'd his Face again; and knowing that the Governour of Rome had a ſecret Enmity againſt the Monk, and all his Race, ſent him private Intelligence of this Adventure, encouraging him to take this Opportunity of Revenge; hinting withal, That he need not take notice, that he knew the Monk, but only puniſh him as an ordinary Fellow breaking the Laws of the City.

The Governour, glad of this Occaſion when the Monk was brought before him, order'd him to be whip'd through the very Street, where his Monaſtery ſtood. This was done accordingly; and as he paſs'd by the Gate, his Brethren, ſeeing him in that Condition, ruſh'd out, and reſcu'd him from the Executioner's Hands; breathing Revenge againſt the Governour, and all that were concern'd in putting this Diſhonour on their Houſe, and the whole Order.

I muſt be forc'd to break off, before I have inform'd thee of half their Tricks; leſt I ſhou'd tire thee with the Length of my Letters. Beſides, it is neceſſary for me to conclude, unleſs I wou'd miſs my Opportunity; For the Poſt tarries for no Man.

Venerable Hadgi, live thou to enjoy the Serene Pleaſures of Vertue and Innocence, and pray for Mahmut, that he may never be ſtain'd with the Corruptions and Vices of the Infidels, among whom he reſides.

Paris, 18th. of the 5th. Moon,
of the Year 1662.

LETTE

LETTER XIII.

To the Chiaus Baſſa.

THE French King's Genius ſeems altogether bent on Martial and Politick Affairs; and tho' he allows ſome Moments to his Love, yet the greateſt Part of his Time is conſecrated to the Neceſſary Affairs of State, and to the Improvement of Military Diſcipline. This has been his Courſe ever ſince the Death of Cardinal Mazarini. That Miniſter, whilſt he was living, endeavoured Nothing ſo earneſtly as to divert the Young Monarch from minding Buſineſs, by Plays, Ballets and other ſoft Entertainments. But as ſoon as he was dead, the King began by Degrees to forſake his Youthful Recreations, and look into the Affairs of his Government.

The firſt Bold Stroke of Regal Authority which he gave, was the Suppreſſing the Superintendant of the Finances, a very Ancient Office in France, but much abus'd of late by thoſe who have enjoy'd it. For, having the Management of the Royal Revenues, it has been found out, That they embezzel'd them to their own private Uſes, purchaſing Houſes, Caſtles, Towns and the faireſt Eſtates in the Kingdom for them and their Poſterity.

The laſt in this Office, was the Sieur Fouquet; who, beſides the waſte he made of the King's Money in this Kind, was laying up an Extrordinary Proviſion of Arms and Powder in Belle Iſle, a Sea-Port of France: which gave the King ſo great a Suſpicion of his ill Deſigns, That he went in Perſon after him as far as Nantes; and being there farther informed of a private Correſpondence held between the Sieur Fouquet, and ſome Malecontents of Cardinal de Retz's Party, he cauſed him to be arreſted, and ſent Priſoner to the Wood of Vinciennes: From whence he has been ſince brought to the Baſtile. This was done in the 9*th Moon* of the laſt Year; and was the Occaſion of erecting a New Chamber of Juſtice, to enquire into the Conduct of thoſe who were employed by Fouquet in the Management of the Finances.

The great Diſcoveries this Chamber has already made, of the Cheats and Tricks practiſed by thoſe through whoſe Hands the King's Revenues have paſs'd, will, its thought, move the King to eſtabliſh it as a perpetual and Sovereign Court of Inquiſition: So that not the Value of an Aſper ſhall henceforth be paid out of the Royal Treaſury, without the Approbation of this Chamber. He has alſo retrenched many ſuperfluous Offices in his Houſhold, that he may the more eaſily ſupport the Charges of thoſe that are Neceſſary.

Thou wilt better comprehend the Wiſdom of this Prince, when thou ſhalt know, that he truſts Nothing abſolutely to his Miniſters, but pries into every Thing himſelf. He examins Matters of the ſmalleſt Moment, as narrowly

as

as the moſt Important Concerns. He makes daily Reformations among his Domeſtick Servants, and New-Models both the Army and the State. Which is alſo no ſmall Argument of his Courage, and the Greatneſs of his Spirit, in that he dares contradict the Methods of all his Progenitors; take the Frame of this Mighty Government, as it were to Pieces; and having mended every Thing that was amiſs, join it together again; but after a Pattern wholly depending on his own Judgment. This has aſtoniſhed the Greateſt Stateſmen of the Age, who conſider the Boldneſs of the Undertaking, and yet cannot find one falſe Step in his Meaſures. For whereas formerly, the Princes of the Blood, the Officers of the State, the Governours of Provinces, with other Grandees, have given frequent Trouble to the Kings of France, and not ſeldom rais'd Civil War, when any Thing diſgusted them (ſo great was their Power, and ſo ſmall their Dependance on the King:) This Monarch has, by a Happy Effect of his Judgment and Reſolution, given ſo dextrous a Turn to the whole Syſtem of the Publick, that the Princes find themſelves more aggrandiz'd than Ever; the Officers of the Crown perceive their Dignity encreas'd with New Luſtres, and the Governours of Provinces exerciſe a Stronger Hand over their Subjects; yet all of them are reduc'd to an entire Dependance on the King himſelf, not being in a Capacity ever to Rebel again. Which is eſteemed a Miracle of Policy.

As he has thus gained the Point of his Subjects at Home, and eſtabliſhed his Realm in the moſt perfect Oeconomy that can be imagined; ſo he has recovered a particular Honour Abroad, that till this Time has been always diſputed between the Crowns of France and Spain.

It ſeems an Embaſſador from Sueden arriv'd at the Engliſh Court in the 10th. Moon of the laſt Year: The French Embaſſador ſent his Coaches to honour his Publick Entry, as is Uſual between Friends. But the Spaniſh Embaſſador, deſigning to affront the French, ſent his Coaches alſo to attend the Ceremony, accompanied by his own Servants and a Rabble of Idle Perſons whom he had hir'd on Purpoſe. Theſe fell on the French as they were paſſing along the Street, kill'd ſeveral of them, and by Force ſtopp'd their Coaches, till thoſe of the Spaniſh Embaſſador were got before them; the Preheminence of Place being the Chief Thing aim'd at.

This was highly reſented at the French Court, and every body thought that a freſh War would break out again between the Two Nations on this Account. The angry Young Monarch commanded the Spaniſh Embaſſador reſident here to depart the Kingdom; and when another was ſent to ſupply his Place, the King forbad him to enter his Dominions. Complaints were made at Madrid, and all Things tended to a Rupture. Till at Length the King of Spain, having promiſed to make Satisfaction, his Embaſſador was received at this this Court, who aſſured the King, That his Maſter diſavow'd the Action of his Miniſter in England, and had given expreſs Command to all his Embaſſadors in Foreign Courts, not to diſpute the Place with thoſe of France, but to yield it to the latter, where they ſhould both be preſent at the ſame Entry. This was declar'd in the Preſence of Thirty Foreign Miniſters reſiding at this Court. Which has rais'd a vaſt Reputation to the King of France among all his Neighbours, and ſtruck the greater Reverence into his Subjects at Home.

In a word, he is look'd upon as the moſt Fortunate Prince in Chriſtendom, and every State courts his Friendſhip. He gives the Law to the reſt of Europe, yet remains himſelf Arbitrary and above Controul.

How long his Affairs will continue at this Height, is known only to God, who exalts and abaſes whom he pleaſes; who is the ſole Monarch of all Things, Reigning for ever without the leaſt Shadow of Revolution or Change.

Paris, 12th. of the 7th. Moon,
of the Year 1662.

LETTER XIV.

To the Same.

IT was late when I finiſh'd my other Letter, being the Hour of the Devil's Range, when the Infernal Spirits are permitted to air themſelves in this Upper World. Methought I heard the Clattering Eccho of the Gates of Paradiſe, which are ſhut at that Seaſon to keep out the Dæmons from entring and diſturbing the Repoſe of the Bleſs'd. This made me conclude ſo abruptly, leſt ſome buſie Scribe of the Dark Regions, ſhou'd have inſerted Evil in my Letter whilſt I were aſleep. I recommended my ſelf to God, and went to Bed. After Two Hours Reſt awaking, I perceiv'd by the Crowing of the Cocks, That the Troops of Hell were retir'd to their Den, chas'd down by Arcturus, and the Guardian Conſtellations of the South, and by the Angels of the Second Watch. Then I aroſe, and chearfully addreſs'd my ſelf to God, praiſing him for the Succeſſive Benefits of Day and Night, and extolling his Magnificent Works, with the exquiſite Order that he has eſtabliſh'd in the World. Remembring alſo that I was a Man, and not born to ſleep, but to ſerve the Grand Signior and my Friends, I readily ſet Pen to Paper again, to give thee a farther Account of the French King and his Court, with ſuch Occurrences as have happen'd of late.

This

This Monarch is very Singular in his Conduct, and Manner of Life; not brooking to be confin'd to the Maxims of others, but ſquaring all his Actions by Rules of his own: Yet 'tis difficult to find a Fault in his Proceedings. He hears the Advice of his Counſellors and Friends; and when they have done, he convinces them in many Things, That they are under a Miſtake; which makes 'em admire the Force of his Reaſon, and the Readineſs of his Wit, eſpecially when they ſee the Events anſwering Expectation.

Neither is he altogether ſo Intent on State-Matters, but that he ſometimes gives himſelf the Diverſion of a Familiar Diſcourſe with the moſt Ingenious Artiſts of all Sorts, who find themſelves much improv'd by the Quickneſs of his Invention, and the Solidity of his Judgment in the Mechanicks: For he is an Excellent Gun-Smith, Sword-Cutler, Armour-Maker, and every Thing that becomes a King to profeſs.

He is a good Architect alſo, and takes vaſt Delight in Buildings, having laid the Foundations of ſeveral Magnificent Structures, Palaces of a Noble Deſign, and intended to outvy the moſt Polite and Glorious Fabricks of Ancient Greece and Rome. For, I tell thee, this Monarch wou'd not willingly come ſhort of any of the Cæſars.

At the Beginning of this Year, he aggrandiz'd his Court, by a Promotion of Sixty Two Knights of the Holy Spirit. I have often mention'd this Order in my Letters to the Miniſters of the Port; and thou that haſt been in France know'ſt, That 'tis the next Step to being made Peer of the Realm. I ſhall only inform thee, that during the Ceremonies of this laſt Promotion, the Dukes of Vendoſme and Longueville had a Feud about the Precedency, which at laſt was adjuſted in Favour of the Former. In a Word, the King declar'd the Houſe of Vendoſme to have a Right of Priority before all other Princes, and to ſucceed in the Throne it ſelf, next after the Houſe of Bourbon.

Miniſter

This is look'd upon as a Bold Effort of Royal Power, and has ſtartled all the Court. No leſs ſurprized were they to ſee the Duke of Lorrain reſign all his Eſtates to the King of France, reſerving only the Poſſeſſion of 'em during his Life,

And, now the King having weather'd the Point with all his Enemies, both Foreign and Domeſtick, ſtudies Nothing more earneſtly, than to divert his Queen, and to let his Subjects taſte the Sweets of Peace, the Effect of his Matchleſs Fortune, to which even Crowned Heads find themſelves compell'd to ſtoop and ſubmit.

On the 5*th*. of the foregoing Moon, by his Appointment was held a Tournament or Carouſel, as the French call it. This is a Sort of Exerciſe on Horſe-Back, in Imitation of the Ancient Manner of fighting with Spear and Shield.

The Place where they run, was raild about, and Magnificent Choiſes erected for the Queen

Queen and Ladies of the Court to ſit in, as Spectators. The Divertiſement was very Pompous; And the King was one of the Combatants. The Reſt were the Duke of Orleans, the King's Brother, the Prince of Conde, the Duke of Enguien Son to the Prince, and the Duke of Guize. Each of theſe led a Troop of Horſe into the Field. That of the King's was habited after the Manner of the Old Roman Knights. The Duke of Orleans's made a Figure like the Perſians; the Prince of Conde's repreſented the Ottomans. The Duke of Enguien's Troop were in Indian Habits; and the Duke of Guiſe's appear'd like the Salvages of America. It wou'd be too tedious to deſcribe the Particular Magnificences of each. Suffice it to ſay, That they were all prodigiouſly Majeſtick and Rich in their Equipage. The Courſes alſo they made, were Brave and full of Gallantry. But the Prize, which was a Diamond of Great Value, was adjudged to the Prince of Conde by the Queen-Mother.

One of the Former Kings of France, loſt his Life at this Royal Exerciſe, being run through the Eye into the Brain by the Spear of an Engliſh Knight then at the French Court, and one of the Combatants: For which Reaſon, the Following Kings of France, forbore to expoſe themſelves to the like Danger. But this Young Mars fears nothing, being as Venturous and Bold as was Sultan Amurat, the Trophies of whoſe Victorious Combat with the Perſian Challenger at the Siege of Babylon hang up in the Treaſury to this Day, as Monuments numents of his invincible Courage and Strength. Sultan Achmet alſo took great Delight in throwing the Lance with his Courtiers in the Atmeidan. Theſe are Sports fit for Kings and Great Generals. And ſome of the Roman Cæſars themſelves wou'd play the Gladiators.

It is not lawful for me to cenſure or reflect on the Actions of my Sovereign. But I will tell thee what the French ſay of him by Way of Contempt; That he never Combated in his own Perſon, with any Thing but Timorous Hares and Hinds. It makes me bluſh to hear the Great Emperour of the Eaſt thus blaſphem'd by the Prophane Mouths of Infidels. And it were to be wiſh'd, he wou'd do ſome ſurprizing Action, to raiſe himſelf another Character. I ſay no more, but recommend thee to God and the White Angel.

Paris, 12th. of the 7th. Moon,
of the Year 1662.

LET-

LETTER XV.

To Zedi Alamanzi, a Merchant at Venice.

THOU haſt oblig'd me beyond my Expectation, in that Ample Hiſtory of thy Life, which thy Letter contains. I eſteem thee not the worſe, becauſe thou wert born of Chriſtian Parents; but rather put the higher Value on thy Merit, in that being bred in Superſtition and Error, Thou haſt voluntarily embrac'd the Truth, without any Proſpect of advancing thy Intereſt.

When a Man of a Noble Stock, born to Riches and Honours, bred in Softneſſes and Delights, and actually poſſeſs'd of a fair Eſtate, ſhall thus abandon his Country, his Relations, Friends and Acquaintance, with all his Native Rights and Enjoyments, purely for the Love of God, reſigning himſelf wholly to the Will of Deſtiny, and the Conduct of Providence, without conſulting his own Eaſe and Delight in this World; 'tis an Evident Sign of a Faithful Heart, and that his Integrity is without Stain.

All this and much more, it ſeems, thou haſt done, and therefore thou can'ſt not fail of being Happy in this World, and in Paradiſe.

I am

I am extremely pleas'd in reading the various Adventures of thy Youth, thy early Inclinations to viſit Foreign Countries, and thy Actual Travels through Europe, Aſia, and Africa. This is the only Way to learn true and complete Wiſdom. For, a Man edifies a Thouſand Times more by his own Perſonal Experience of Things, than by all the moſt Elegant Deſcriptions, that can be made by others. Beſides the Advantage of becoming expert in the ſeveral Languages and Dialects of the Earth; which he can never learn ſo perfectly in Books, as by converſing with the Natives of each Country through which he paſſes.

Beyond all this, there is an infinite Pleaſure in ſeeing the Variety of Objects, which every where expoſe themſelves to a Travellers Eye. There is nothing more delightful to Humane Nature, than to try all Things. Man is cloy'd with what is too Familiar to him. The moſt Magnificent Palace, wou'd appear as a Priſon to him that were always Confin'd to it. The Greateſt Fields, and moſt ſhady Groves, wou'd afford us no Refreſhment, if we had not Liberty to ſtraggle out of them when we pleas'd. Man is Naturally wild as other Animals, and 'tis as bad as Death to be reſtrain'd of his Freedom. I had rather at certain Seaſons, range in a Wilderneſs, all over-run with Weeds and Briars, than in the moſt Regular and Fragrant Garden in the World. I would willingly chuſe the Fatigue of Climbing up a High, Steep, Craggy Mountain, for the ſake of a new and larger Proſpect;

Proſpect; before the Eaſe of walking always in a Low Valley, or Even Plain, tho' grac'd with never ſo many Inviting Objects, which muſt always be the ſame: So fulſom are the very Pleaſures we are daily accuſtomed to.

I doubt not, but that it was very agreeable to thee in thy Journeys, when every Remove thou made'ſt from Stage to Stage, promis'd thee Something Novel and freſh. A Man in ſuch Caſes, is apt to think the Sun himſelf New, who has ſhined upon him from his Nativity: The Air, the Earth, and Waters, appear not the ſame Elements, in different Places; or if our Reaſon convinces us their Nature is not changed, yet we look upon 'em as Maſquerades, every Day in a New Dreſs: Eſpecially when we go from one Region and Climate to another, the Strangeneſs of the Diſguiſe is heighten'd. So Infinite a Variety preſents its ſelf to thoſe who travel.

But nothing affords a Man greater Delight, than to be familiarly acquainted with the different Habits, Laws, Cuſtoms, Manners, and Religions of Mortals like himſelf. To ſee 'em in one Part of the World Adoring the Sun, becauſe he ſhines on 'em but once a-Year, whilſt all the Reſt of the Time they are ſhut up in Continual Darkneſs, very near being ſtarv'd with Cold, and making hard ſhifts to live; in another to behold 'em grimacing, and hear 'em curſing that Glorious Planet, becauſe he is always to near 'em, rendring their Countries Barren, drying up their Water, and ſcorching their Perſons almoſt to Death; muſt needs be delightful to a Contemplative Man. And for ought we know, the Laughter of Democritus might be the Reſult of as good Thoughts as Heraclitus's Tears. Who would not ſmile to ſee ſome paying Divine Honours to the Scar-Crow of their Garden, to a Tree, a Hog, a Dog or any Thing they firſt caſt their Eyes on in the Morning as they do in Lapland? And yet who can forbear to weep, when he ſees Men profeſſing to believe the Laws of Moſes, and the Meſſias, (who both preach'd up the Divine Unity) pretending to the Pureſt Religion in the World, and bred in the Study of the Sciences; worſhip Stocks and Stones, Pictures and Images, Nails, Rags, Bones, Hairs, Bits of old Wood, or any Thing, that their cunning Prieſt impoſe upon 'em as Adorable?

ſcorching

Happy art thou, Zeidi, who art freed from theſe Superſtitions of the Nazarenes; and Thrice Happy, in that thou haſt chang'd 'em for the Faith unblemiſh'd, the Doctrines of Truth and Reaſon, the Practices of Sincere Morality and Vertue. Thou haſt not ſhun'd a Rock, to fall into a Quickſand, nor abandoned Idolatry, to ſink into Atheiſm: But thou haſt eſcaped from Narrow Gulphs and Streights, into a Free and Open Sea; from the Dark Fogs and Miſts of Frozen Chriſtianity, to the bright Empire of the Oſmans, the Serene Company of True Believers, where Charity and Zeal are in their Genuine and Primitive Warmth.

Since

Since the Time that thou firſt lifted'ſt up thy Finger to Heaven, and madeſt a Confeſſion of One God, and Mahomet his Apoſtle, none of the Imaum's or Mollah's have ever attempted to circumvent thy Reaſon with Feigned Miracles, Fooliſh Pilgrimages, Tales of Old Women, Fictions of Poets, or any Holy Frauds. Thou perceiveſt nothing but Right-down Integrity, in the Converſation of the Faithful. Whereas the Chriſtians whom thou haſt juſtly deſerted, have a Thouſand Windings and Turnings, Foldings and Intricacies, in their Doctrines and Lives. So that it is almoſt as eaſy for a Blind-Man to walk from Paris to Conſtantinople, as for theſe Infidels to grope out the way to Paradiſe, through ſo many Meanders and Mazes: They are involved in a perfect Circle of Error and Vice.

Praiſe be to God, who planted the Moon in the Heavens, and cauſes the Stars to dart their Refreſhing Rays by Night, Thou art happily delivered out of their Snares. Let not thy Reſidence now among them, ever tempt thee to return to the Religious Vanities of Holy Trifles, which have once made thee Sick at the Heart. Remember, that thou beareſt in thy Body the Mark of a True Believer, the Seal of a Great Sacrament, the Character of a Profound Myſtery, Circumciſion, the Emblem of Purity, by which thou art more enobl'd than by the Blood of the Poloniian Lord, thy Father, which ſtreams in thy Veins. For now thou art incorporated into the the Society and Lineage of Ibrahim, the Illuſtrious Patriarch, and Friend of God. Conſider that thou art as it were engrafted into the Glorious Stock of the Iſmaelites, born to ſubdue all Things, and in the determined Time, to poſſeſs the Empire of the Univerſe. Thou haſt the Honour alſo to ſerve the Grand Signior, Lord of the Climates and Seas, Majeſtick Heir of the Ottomans Houſe, Shadow of God on Earth.

Hold faſt therefore the Profeſſion of an Unblameable Faith: And whatever Temptations thou mayeſt meet with, keep thy Mind always fixed on the unſeen Joys of Paradiſe, the Crown of Juſt and Faithful Men, the Reward of ſuch as adhere to God and his Prophet, without Flinching.

Mahmut ſalutes thee in Imagination, with a parting Kiſs, and an Affectionate Squeeze of the Hand. Which thou knoweſt, was in all Ages a Token of Hearty Good Will, and Friendſhip.

Paris, 15th. of the 9th. Moon,
of the Year 1662.

LET-

LETTER XVI.

To the Kaimacham.

THere is like to be a Breach between this Court and that of Rome, if the Pope does not condeſcend to the Demands of the French King, who Styles himſelf the Eldeſt Son of the Church, and therefore highly reſents an Indignity that has been done him of late, in the Perſon of the Duke of Crequi, his Embaſſador at the Roman Court.

It ſeems, the Pope's Guards on the 20*th*. of the 8*th*. Moon, made an Attempt on the Life of this Miniſter, and of his Wife: They alſo put Barbarous Abuſes on all the French that were in that City: Inſomuch as the Duke and Dutcheſs of Crequi, were oblig'd to quit Rome privately, and retire into Toſcany; being adviſ'd to take this Courſe, by all the Cardinals and other Grandees, that are Friends to France.

The King received News of this, by an Expreſs which came from the Duke of Crequi on the 11*th*. of the 9*th*. Moon. And he was paſſionately touch'd at ſo Sacrilegious an Injury, whereby he is not only wrong'd himſelf, but the Law of Nations is violated in a moſt Notorious Manner.

Wherefore to ſhew his Reſentments, on the ſame Day that the Courtier came from Rome, Rome, the King order'd the Lieutenant of his Guards, to tell the Pope's Nuncio at this Court, That he muſt forthwith depart the Kingdom, under the Conduct of Thirty Horſe. This was performed accordingly, and the Nuncio was hurried away immediately, without ſuffering him to ſpeak with any Perſon living, ſave thoſe who were to accompany him to the Frontiers: And this Order was publickly proclaimed in Paris. The King alſo wrote to the Pope, demanding Satisfaction for ſo horrible an Outrage, and caus'd Diſpatches to be ſent to all the Cardinals in Rome, adviſing them to contribute what lay in their Powers, towards a good Underſtanding between the Pope and him, proteſting that otherwiſe the Calamities which might follow, were not to be laid to his Charge. This is a modeſt way of Threatning, us'd by Chriſtian Princes, who do not always ſpeak in Thunder, like our Eaſtern Monarchs when they menace War.

I relate this as a Thing, which tho' it appear of ſmall Moment at the Beginning, yet its Conſequences may be great and extenſive, if the French King and the Pope ſhould come to an open Rupture. All the Princes in Europe would find themſelves engag'd on one Side or other. And we Muſſulmans might live to ſee the whole State of Chriſtendom disjoynted, alienated, and embroil'd in Wars among themſelves; whereby they would lay their Countries naked and open, to the invincible Arms of the Ottomans, a Lineage of high high Renoun, and deſtin'd to ſubdue All Things.

But 'tis thought the Holy Father at Rome, will not farther provoke ſo daring and powerful a Monarch as him of France, by juſtifying the Inſolences of his Janizaries, who proceeded to that Height of Fury, as to diſcharge Guns into the Windows of the French Embaſſador, kill'd ſeveral of his Retinue, and aſſaſſinated the Dutcheſs of Crequi in her Coach, as ſhe paſſed along the Streets, Illuſtrious Miniſter, theſe are Violations not practiſed by the moſt Barbarous Savages. And 'tis an evident Sign of a decaying Empire, where the Publick Faith is thus perfidiouſly broke. God infatuates the Infidels, that he may ſpeedily bring 'em to Ruin: Whereas he daily enlightens the Juſt Followers of the Prophet, and directs them in the ways of Proſperity and Peace.

Paris, 3d. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year 1662.

LET-

LETTER XVII.

To Mohammed, the Illuſtrious Eremit of Mount Uriel in Arabia.

IN the Name of God, Benigne and Merful, I approach the Reſidence of great Sanctimony, the Tremendous Solitude, the Cave bleſs'd by frequent Viſitations of Angels, and by the former Preſence of the moſt Sublime among Mortals, Mahomet the Legat of the Eternal, the Plenipotentiary of Alla, King of Heaven and Earth. Alla! There is but One! Whoſe Name reſounds through all the Orbs Above, when pronounc'd by the Faithful Adorers of the Divine Unity on Earth: And the Eccho thereof from the Adamantine Gates of Paradiſe, reaches the Abyſs of Hell, ſtriking the Infernal Spirits with Horrour and Aſtoniſhment. They tremble at the Sound of the Dreadful Word, which chains them up in their Priſons of Darkneſs. Whereas had they Faith, they would rather rejoyce, believing, that the ſame Word will one Day releaſe 'em from their Torments. For ſuch is the Clemency of the Omnipotent, as our Holy Doctors teach.

O Mohammed, Friend of the Moſt High, and Tenant to his Prophet; I have experienc'd, that it is good and wholeſome to begin every Thing we do or ſay, in the Name of God. Whoſoever does otherwiſe, either fails in the Progreſs Progreſs, or the End of his Deſign, and ſo remains in Confuſion. Tagot creeps into his Enterprize, and through Malice ſpoils it, robbing a Man of his Crown: Or Negidher, the Spirit of Envy, winds himſelf in, and entangles it: Or Ablis, the Dæmon of Melancholy, caſts a Damp on it, and bereaves the Undertaker of his Joy. Such is the Fate of thoſe who through Prophaneneſs, Sloth, or Contempt, forget to pay the due Veneration we owe to the Author and Source of Providence, and Good Succeſs.

Let us not therefore think the Time miſpent, which is taken up in the Praiſes of Him who has neither Beginning nor End, Father of all the Ganerations in this Viſible World, and that Other which is conceal'd from Mortals. He is the Governour of our Lives, and our ſole Patron in all Neceſſities. Let us extoll and magnify his Attributes without End.

I am by Nature Contemplative, and Thoughtful; but I muſt needs acknowledge, That I owe to my Education among the Muſſelmans the Force of my Faith and Religion. The various turns of Fortune and Experience, which I have had in the World, cou'd never yet blot out the impreſſions of my Early Years, or diminiſh the Reverence I have for our Holy Prophet. I often revolve in my Mind, the Series of paſt Ages, and the Hiſtories of former Times; the Origin of Nations, and the Various Laws, Religions, Wars and Changes. I traverſe the different Epocha's of the Poſterity of Ibrahim, and the Gentiles, comparing the Date of Iſrael's Tranſmigration out of Egypt, with the Years of Nabonaſſar and the Olympiads, In all of them I find great Obſcurity, Contradiction and Doubtfulneſs, which puts me upon examining the Records of Egypt and the Aſſyrians. The Antiquity of both is very great, and yet it comes far ſhort of the Chineſe Chronology, and that of the Indian Bramins.

When I have tir'd my Soul with a vain Search of that which can never be diſcover'd; When I conſider the Probability of an Univerſal Deluge in the Time of Noah, and the Arguments which almoſt demonſtrate the contrary, comparing this with the Flood of Deucalion, and that other of Ogyges: In a Word, when I reflect on the numberleſs Incongruities that are found in the Regiſters of Paſt Ages, I cannot but conclude, there is as much Reaſon for me to believe, That God has determinately thus dark'ned the Knowledge of Mortals, as that he confounded their Language at Babel, according to the Celebrated Relation of Moſes. Whence it will be but loſt Labour for us who live in theſe later Times, to ſeek for any Aſſurance or Certainty of the Truth in Matters of ſo Remote and Early a Date.

Wherefore leaving every Nation to their own Traditions, the Jews to the Manuſcripts of Moſes, and their Rabbi's, the Gentiles to the Fragments of Hermes Triſmegiſtus, giſtus, Orpheus, Homer, Heſiod, Theophraſtus and other Sages of Egypt, Phœnicia and Greece; I, for my Part, acquieſce to the Volume of Majeſty, the Great Alcoran; and to the Writings of our Holy Doctors, Arabians, the Sons of Iſmael; not puzzling my ſelf with endleſs Diſputes and Queſtions; nor cenſuring others who Worſhip God after their own Way, and the Documents of their Fathers; but firmly believing, That he who ſerves God according to the Dictates of his Reaſon; who is Juſt to Men and Beaſts, and in all Things conſerves an Innocent Purity of Life; is as Acceptable to the Great Creator, and Impartial Judge of the Univerſe, as he that has had the Happineſs to be inſtructed in the Poſitive Injunctions of Heaven, the Reveal'd Will of the Omnipotent. And this I take to be the Senſe of our Holy Lawgiver, of the Meſſias, and of all the Prophets in General.

Doubtleſs, that ſuperlatively Merciful and Indulgent, connives at the Frailties of Mortals; He pities the Invincible Ignorances of ſome, and the Fatal Neceſſities of others. He knows the infinite Variety of our Bodily Conſtitutions, and the equally different Bent of our Souls. He conſiders the Force of the Elements and Climates wherein we live, and the unconquerable Influence of the Stars under which we were Born. The whole Syſtem of Human Nature with its moſt hidden Circumſtances, is expos'd to the Eyes of him who ſees All Things.

He is no Stranger to the Anatomy of his own Works. Therefore he requires no more of Men, than can be expected from the Faculties with which he has endu'd 'em. Neither will he damn any Man for an Involuntary Evil.

O Mohammed, this is my Faith, my Hope, and my Confidence. Otherwiſe I ſhould deſpair every Moment. If I am guilty of Error and Preſumption, Correct me in thy Wiſdom. For, before thee, I am but as an Idiot.

Paris, 22d. of the 12th. Moon,
of the Year 1662.

LETTER XVIII.

To Haſnadar-Baſſi, Chief Treaſurer to his Highneſs.

THE French have newly felt the Motions of a Joy, whoſe Birth and Growth was like that of a Muſhroom, ſudden and ſwift, the Product of a very little Time, and which ended in Mourning and Tears. The Moon of November beheld a Daughter born to the Queen of France: But that Planet had hardly carried the News through all the Signs of the Zodiack, and commanded the Stars of France to celebrate a Dunal-

ma;

ma; before she was oblig'd to be the Messenger of more sad Tidings, and to proclaim the Death of this Young Princess, to the Constellations that assisted at her Birth.

In a Word: She was born on the 18*th.* of the 11*th.* Moon, and died on the 30*th.* of the 12*th.* It looks as if she only came into the World to be a Witness of the Conclusion of the Peace between her Father, Lewis XIV. and her Grandfather, Philip, the King of Spain; and so return to the Region of Separate Souls.

This Peace was in General Terms sign'd and seal'd long ago, but there remain'd some Difficulties in adjusting the Limits of the French Conquests, which were referr'd to the Management of Commissioners on both Sides: And these, after they had debated the Matter for the Space of Two Years, at St. Omers, Arras, and Metz, at length finish'd their Negotiation on the 25*th.* of the 11*th. Moon*, of the last Year. Which was just Seven Days after the Nativity of the French Princess.

This Royal Infant also liv'd to see Dunkirk, one of the strongest Sea-Ports in the World, re-deliver'd to her Father by the English, in whose Hands it had been, ever since 'twas first taken from the Spaniards. The King took Possession of this Important Place in his own Person, entring the Town on the 2*d.* of the last Moon.

'Tis look'd upon as a grand Oversight in the English, thus tamely to part with a Fortreſs which is inexpugnable be Land, and commands the Northern Seas. But Money over-rules all other Conſiderations. And, it ſeems, the Engliſh Court had Occaſion for Gold.

There is lately a good Underſtanding eſtabliſh'd between this King and the Emperour of Germany. They often write Friendly Letters one to another, and ſeem to be perfectly reconcil'd. To ſpeak the Truth, this may be call'd the Pacifick Year among the Inhabitants of Europe. For, excepting ſome Skirmiſhes and Bravado's of War between the Spaniards and the Portugueze, all the Reſt of Chriſtendom is in Peace. And the Portugueze have ſo ſtrengthen'd themſelves by marrying their Infanta to the Engliſh King, that what through his Aſſiſtance and the Aid of France, ſhe has almoſt reduc'd Spain to a Neceſſity of making Peace.

Thou wilt ſay the Portugueze have overreach'd the Engliſh in the Dowry they give with their Infanta. This is only the Town of Tangier in Barbary. A Place which will coſt them far more to defend againſt the Moors, than it is really worth. For, thoſe bold Africans will perpetually aſſault the Town, and oblige the King of England to maintain a vaſt Gariſon in it, beſides a Multitude of other Expences. This makes the Portugueze ſecretly ſmile, to find themſelves handſomly rid of Two great and burdenſome Charges, a Daughter of the Royal Blood, and an Old Fortreſs of no Uſe or Service.

Service, ſave only to diminiſh the Publick Treaſure, and make away with ſome Thouſands of Men every Year.

Illuſtrious Grandee, 'tis no ſmall Encouragement to the poor Exil'd Mahmut, that though he be malign'd, ſlander'd, and perſecuted by his Enemies, yet he ſtill finds Protection and Friendſhip from the Principal Miniſters. And that inſtead of Checks and Reproaches, to which I was formerly accuſtomed, my Salary is now augmented to the Proportion of my Neceſſary Expences; Money is ſent me with a Liberal Hand, and my Slanderers are put to Silence and Shame.

Thou may'ſt accquaint the Divan, that there is now at this Cour, the Eldeſt Son to the King of Denmark. What his Buſineſs is, People conjecture variouſly. Some ſay 'tis Love, others affirm 'twas only the Deſire of ſeeing Foreign Courts drew this Prince from his Native Country.

Thou mayſt alſo inform them, that the Duke of Savoy has married a Princeſs of the Blood Royal, they call her Madamoiſelle de Valois. Eliachim the Jew lies dangerouſly ſick of a Fever.

As for me, who never had my perfect Health ſince I came to Paris, yet I retain a ſound Mind, and a Heart inviolably devoted to the Intereſt of the Grand Signior: Whom God long preſerve on the Throne of the Ottomans.

Paris, 10th. of the 1ſt. Moon,
of the Year 1663.

LETTER XIX.

To the Kaimacham.

HERE is a Man come to this City, a Calabrian by Birth, and of all Countries by Education; For he has been a Traveller from his Infancy, if what he relates of himſelf be true. He ſpeaks all or moſt of the Languages of Europe very fluently, and is reſorted to by People of divers Countries, under the Character of a Fortune-Teller and Phyſician. He performs both Parts to the Admiration of all that have been with him.

The Princes and Nobles of France viſit him daily, and ſo do Perſons of Meaner Birth. They diſcover to him their Secret Maladies, and this Apollo ſeldom fails of Succeſs in curing them. He beſtows Ten Hours a-Day in freely converſing with People of all Ranks and Qualities; healing the Diſeaſes of ſome, and telling to others their Future Deſtinies.

I went to his Chamber one Day, not to learn my Fate (for I have little Faith in Modern Prophets or Aſtrologers; Nor to be cur'd of any Diſtemper, having no Eſteem for Quacks and Empericks; beſides, I was in good Health at that Time) but Curioſity was the only Motive which led me thither, that I might improve my ſelf in other Reſpects by this Stranger's Company, and learn

ſomething

ſomething which I knew not before of Foreign Courts, whereby I might become more Serviceable to the Grand Signior in this Station, and farther unravel the Secrets of Chriſtian Princes. For ſo it often falls out, that a Man reaps ſome Conſiderable Advantage from the Society of Travellers and Men of Experience: And I had good Reaſon to hope for ſome Profit by this Man's Acquaintance, who is thought worthy to be Courted by the Grandees of France.

Wherefore I addreſs'd my ſelf to him with Abundance of Ceremony and Regard; uſing alſo as much Diſſimulation as I thought neceſſary to conceal my ſelf and the Deſign I had in coveting his Friendſhip. I ſeem'd a great Admirer of Judicial Aſtrology, and told him I was very ambitious to learn the Rudiments of that Science from him, having heard his Skill highly commended not only by Vulgar Fame, but by the Mouths of Men of Senſe and Quality, who gave him a fair Character. I ſaid a great deal more to inſinuate my ſelf into his good Opinion. But there being Company with him, he return'd my Compliments with much Civility, and deſir'd me to come to him at a more convenient Seaſon, and to leave my Name, that he might order his Servants to give me a kind Reception at any Time, if he himſelf ſhou'd be out of the Way, becauſe it was Common to ſend many from the Door without introducing 'em. I told him my Name was Titus of Moldavia, and that my Buſineſs at Paris was to ſtudy in the Academy, in Order to my Preferment in the Church. When he had taken this down in Writing, with the Hour and Minute of the Day, after the Manner of Aſtrologers, he begg'd me to excuſe the Neceſſity he was under of returning to his Company; and ſo I took my Leave.

Not many Days after, I went to him again, full of Hopes that I ſhould benefit much by his Company. But as ſoon as he ſaw me, he ſurpriz'd me with this Language:

"Sir, you have ventur'd much in coming "to me: For now 'tis in my Power, to diſ- "cover you and your Buſineſs in this City. "But if I ſhou'd betray any Man, my Gift "wou'd be taken from me. I am neither a "Follower of Moſes, Jeſus or Mahomet, nor "of any Sect that is now extant on Earth: "But I adore the Spirit and Soul of the Uni- "verſe, which is Eternal and Infinite. There- "fore I hate no Man for his Religion, let it be "what it will. And you that are not what you "ſeem to be, ſhall receive no more Hurt "from me in this Place, than the Coadjutor "of Paris: For I am of no Party or Faction. "All Men are equally my Friends, who do "me no Wrong, and every Place is my "Home.

Thou may'ſt imagine that I was in no ſmall Aſtoniſhment at this Diſcourſe. But recollecting recollecting my Spirits, and conſidering it had always been my Opinion. That theſe Fortune-Tellers deal by Confederacy; and ſuſpecting that my Name being known to him ſo long before, it was not difficult for him to inform himſelf ſomething of me; or that ſomebody of his Acquaintance who knew me, had ſeen me go in and out from him, and ſo told him ſome of my Circumſtances; I made a Shew of going away diſſatisfy'd, ſaying, It will be but loſt Time to hearken any longer to you: For I perceive you know nothing of me, in telling me I'm not the Man I ſeem to be. No, reply'd he, with an obliging Kind of Earneſtneſs, you are an Arabian, and ſerve ſome Eaſtern Prince Incognito. Then he went on, and told me in a few Words ſome Former Paſſages of my Life. He hinted at the Dangers I had been in, during my Reſidence at Paris; mention'd my Captivity at Palermo, and the Rencounter I had with my old Sicilian Maſter. To be brief, he told me ſo many other Things which I knew to be true of my ſelf, that I grew very uneaſie in his Company, and yet durſt not depart from him of a ſuddain, or ſhew any Diſcontent. But muſtering together all the Diſſimulation and Artifice I cou'd, I turn'd the Diſcourſe to other Subjects; ſeeming very Importunate to learn Aſtrology of him, and promiſing him a large Gratuity, if he would teach me, I fairly took Leave, reſolving, if poſſible, never to ſee him more.

Never

Never was Man in greater Anxiety, than I was when I came home to my Chamber, and ponder'd on what had paſs'd between this Stranger and me. I am not Credulous of Miracles, Prophecies or pretended Revelations. Yet I proteſt ſolemnly, I cou'd not forbear thinking, he was endu'd with an extraordinary Faculty of Divining, or at leaſt, that he was an excellent Aſtrologer. Nay, to this Day I know not well what to conclude of him. He may, for ought I know, be a Dæmon Incarnate, or perhaps he is a Magician. Sometimes I think one Thing, and ſometimes another. If he performs theſe Prophetick Parts by Confederacy, ſtill I'm at a Loſs how he ſhou'd come to know ſo much of me, who always thought my ſelf the privateſt Man in Paris, and have neglected no Methods that were proper to render me ſuch in Truth. Then I ſuſpect my Old Sicilian Maſter is one of this Man's Correſpondents, and has told him ſome of my Circumſtances: For I have no Reaſon to be jealous of Eliachim the Jew. It muſt be ſome ſuch Way, or elſe he is more than a Man, that can thus readily penetrate into the Secrets of a Stranger.

Sage Kaimacham, I pray God defend thee from the Snares of Counterfeits and Falſe Pretenders.

Paris, 13th. of the 1ſt. Moon,
of the Year 1663.

LETTER

LETTER XX.

To the Captain Baſſa.

WHAT I am going to relate wou'd ſeem Incredible to my ſelf, and for that Reaſon I wou'd not give it any Room in a Letter to all the diſcerning Miniſters of the Port, were it not confirm'd by Letters from ſeveral Merchants in the North Parts of Holland to their Correſpondents in this City. And they all agree, That on the 9*th.* Day of the Moon of November, a Strange Man was ſeen to float on the Sea near the Shore, being ſupported by a Piece of Timber, on which he ſate with a Bottle of Strong Waters in his Hand. Thoſe who firſt beheld this Spectacle, were Fiſhing in a ſmall Boat; and judging him to be the Relique of ſome Shipwreck (for there had been Violent Tempeſts in thoſe Seas about that Time) made up to him, and took him into their Skiff. He expreſs'd his Gratitude for this Kindneſs, in the beſt Manner he cou'd (for no Body underſtood his Language.) And when he was come aſhore, he fell on his Knees; and having lift up his Eyes and Hands to Heaven, he proſtrated himſelf, and kiſs'd the Earth. His Garments were made of the Skins of Fiſhes, the Hair of his Head of a Flaxen Colour, and he ſeem'd not to be Faint for Want of Suſte-

nance:

nance: Which made every one conclude, That he had kept up his Spirits with that Chymical Liquor in the Bottle, which was near half emptied.

As ſoon as he ſaw the Riſing Moon, he fell on his Face, and mutter'd certain Barbarous Words, knocking his Fore-head againſt the Ground. Then he roſe and danc'd after a Wild Manner, ſinging pretty Natural Airs: And at every Stop, with his Right Hand extended, pointed to that Planet, expreſſing both in Tone and Actions much Devotion and Love.

Many Learned Men were ſent for, to conſider this Stranger, and if poſſible, by Signs or other Means to diſcover from whence he came, and what Fate or Accident had thus abandon'd him to the Fury of the Winds and Waves, to the Extremity of Hunger, Cold, and Watching; and to the devouring Jaws of Sea-Monſters. But all their Efforts were unſucceſsful; They ſpoke to him in ſeveral Languages, and he anſwer'd them, but ſtill in a Dialect different from any of theirs, and altogether unknown. He ſeem'd to utter his Words in a Tone between whiſtling and ſinging; which made ſome conclude, he was a Chineſe, becauſe that People pronounce many of their Letters after the ſame Manner. So do the Inhabitants of Tunquin, and Malabar, with other Kingdoms in the Eaſt of Aſia, and Letters with them are as ſignificant as Words with the Europeans. They ſhew'd him Globes, and Maps of the World, done done by ſeveral Hands, and in various Languages, with particular Charts of all the Maritime Regions on Earth. But, to no other Purpoſe, than to excite his Devotion afreſh to the Moon, whoſe Reſemblance he ſaw on ſome of thoſe Papers. He wou'd ſmile at that Sight, kiſs his Fore-finger, and with a Religious Complaiſance touch the Figure of that Planet: Then ſeeming to be in a wonderful good Humour, he wou'd turn round and fall a dancing with his Arms ſtretch'd, and turn'd in the ſame Poſture as thoſe who uſe Caſtanets, or Cymbals. Singing all the while a Sort of inarticulate Sounds, but ſurprizingly Muſical and Sweet. So that No-body knew what to make of him.

He appear'd very temperate, modeſt, and reſign'd; refuſing no Meats or Drinks that were offer'd him; yet neither eat nor drank to Exceſs. Neither was he diſcontented at his Lodging, or any other Uſage; though they tried to vex him ſeveral Ways, that they might ſee how he would vent his Paſſion. But he ſmiled at all, and ſubmitted patiently to every Thing they impos'd on him.

One thing was obſervable, That wherever he ſaw any Water, he wou'd run to it immediately, and waſh himſelf, as well as he cou'd in thoſe Circumſtances, never forgetting to ſprinkle ſome toward that Part of the Heaven, where the Moon was viſible. And when they led him into the Fields or Gardens, he wou'd crop the Graſs, and Flowers,

Flowers, and with a compos'd Look wou'd throw them up in the Air, adding ſuch Relious Geſtures, as convinc'd every one, That he did it in Honour of ſome Power above. Various were the Conjectures of Men about him; ſome were of one Opinion, and others of a quite different. No-Body cou'd poſitively conclude any Thing. Neither is it poſſible, as I'm inform'd, for the Wiſeſt Men in thoſe Parts to find out this Myſtery.

Perhaps he's ſuch another, as Imaum Rapibabet, a Perſian Writer, mentions, who in the Year of the Hegira 502. was taken up by a Merchant-Ship of India, in the Streights of Babel-Mandel, pretending to be dumb, but capable of Hearing, Writing, and expreſſing himſelf ſeveral other Ways, if any Body con'd have underſtood his Language. At laſt he was found to be an Ethiopian Slave, run away from his Maſter; an Ingenious Fellow, and one that ſpoke all the Languages of thoſe Parts; and therefore, that he might be admir'd, wou'd be ſure to write in a Character of his own Invention, which the greateſt Sages cou'd not read.

Mighty Baſſa, thou encountereſt on that Element, with ſtrange Monſters, and Creatures under no Name or Predicament that is known, yet none ſo terrible and dangerous as Cheats and Impoſtors. From which I pray Heaven defend thee and me: For they infeſt both the Sea and Land.

Paris, 17th. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1663.

LET-

LETTER XXI.

To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna.

THE Term of our long mutual Silence, enjoyn'd us by our Superiours, is now happily expir'd; and we have with good Succeſs, manag'd our ſeparate Parts without holding any Correſpondence together. This was only a Tryal of our Fidelity, Conduct, and Obedience: Or perhaps 'twas no more than a Caprice of Policy, or a vain Whim of State. For, 'tis uſual with great Men, thus to practiſe Experiments on thoſe whom they deſign to employ in the moſt important Affairs. Whatever it be, we have acquitted our ſelves like Truſty Slaves; and that's enough for us.

This comes to thy Hand by an Armenian Merchant: One in whom I confide. Here are Abundance of that Nation in Paris and other Parts of France. They travel up and down from one Country and City to another, under the Pretext of Trading; but are really Spies, ſent from the Princes of the Eaſt, to obſerve the Counſels of theſe Weſtern Courts, the Deſigns of Nazarene Monarchs, and to take an exact Eſtimate of the Strength and Riches of theſe Infidels. For, though they outwardly profeſs themſelves to be Followers of Jeſus, yet in their Hearts they believe the Alcoran, and Honour Mahmut our Holy-Lawgiver.

lowers

There is a Kind of Magick in Truth, which forcibly carries the Mind along with it. Men readily embrace the Dictates of ſincere Reaſon. Yet thoſe of thy Nation are obſtinate, and ſhut their Eyes wilfully againſt the very Light of Nature. You over-value your ſelves and your Lineage; becauſe you are the Poſterity of Iſaac, the Son of Sarah the Free-Woman and Wife of Ibrahim: reproaching us, that we are the Off-ſpring of Iſmael the Son of Hagar, a Concubine and Slave. You conſider not that Iſmael was the Eldeſt Son of that Glorious Patriarch; and that by the Law of Moſes it is enacted, That the Firſt-born Son ſhall inherit his Fathers Patrimony, though he were the Son of a baſe abject Slave, or hated Concubine. Did Moſes make a Law contrary to that of his Fathers; Or, cou'd Ibrahim the Beloved of God, do any thing contrary to the Divine Will? How then cou'd he be guilty of diſinheriting Iſmael his Eldeſt Son, the Flower of his Strength, and Firſt-Fruit of his Vigor? Doubtleſs the Majeſty and Light of God which paſs'd from Adam to Seth Enoch, Noah and Ibrahim, reſted alſo on Iſmael, Heir Apparent of the Divine Promiſes, Father of many Princes and Noble Nations.

Let thoſe therefore of thy Nation, ceaſe to boaſt of their Pedigree, and exalt themſelves ſelves above the Victorious and Triumphant Iſmaelites, Children of a high Stock, a Race wherein ſhines forth the Luſtre of the Ancient Renown, and the Right of Primogeniture: A Lineage of Illuſtrious Honour, multiply'd as the Leaves of the Trees, numerous as the Stars of Heaven, proſperous in all Things, by the Special Benediction of God. Whereas, thou knoweſt, the Iſraelites never made any great Figure on Earth, and are now reputed no better than Vagabonds throughout the World.

Your Rabbi's reply to this, by owning that our Father Iſmael was indeed a Great Prince; but that he was withal a Wild and Salvage Man, who ſupported his Nobility and Grandeur by Rapine and Blood, dwelling altogether in Deſarts and unfrequented Places; robbing the Caravans of Merchants and Travellers, oppreſſing the Poor, and murdering the Innocent. In Fine, they give this Character of him, That his Hand was againſt every Man, and every Man's Hand againſt him.

To this Accuſation they alſo add another, That the Princes of the Eaſt who deſcend from Iſmael, have all along, even to this Day, eſtabliſhed their Thrones in Cruelty, Maſſacres, and Patricides. Fathers bereaving their Children of the Lives they gave 'em; and Children putting their Parents to Death: Brothers murdering Brothers, and ſacrificing their neareſt Relations to the Maxims of a Barbarous Policy, the Reſtleſs leſs Suſpicions of State. And that all this is more eſpecially manifeſt in the Sublime Houſe of the invincible Ottomans.

Theſe are the Charges of Hebrew Spight, the Slanders which your Doctors caſt on the Progeny of Ibrahim, even on Iſmael and his Children, to this Day. But I would have thee, Nathan, reflect impartially on Things, and ſuffer not thy Judgment to be impoſed on by the Sophiſtry of your Scribes. Look back to the Primitive Times of Iſrael, examine the Written Law, the Records of Moſes and the Seniors. There thou wilt meet with frequent Examples of thoſe very Crimes which you lay to our Charge; true Parallels of the ſuppoſed Tyranny and Inhumane Actions, with which you tax the unblemiſhed Iſmaelites.

Did not your Father Jacob ſupplant his own eldeſt Brother Eſau? Did he not cheat his Uncle Laban of his Sheep? What was wanting to him of Iſmael's Valour and Fierceneſs, he ſupplied with a Fox-like Craft and Subtilty. Yet, how often did he plunder the Children of Hamor? And boaſted afterwards of the Preys he had taken from them with his Bow and Spear.

When your Fathers came out of Egypt, what a Carnage did Moſes their Leader commit, when he commanded the Sons of Levi, to ariſe with their Swords in their Hands, and every Man to kill his Brother, his Friend and his Neighbour; ſo that there fell that Day, at the Foot of Mount Sinai, Three and and Twenty Thouſand Men? Yet for the Sake of this deteſtable Tragedy he bleſs'd 'em, ſaying, You have conſecrated your Hands this day in Blood, every Man in the Blood of his Neighbour. Behold! the Original of your Prieſthood, which is the Higheſt Rank of Nobility among the Jews.

Remember how your Fathers almoſt cut off the whole Race of Benjamin, ſo that there were not above Six Hundred Men of that Tribe left alive. Forget not alſo, how Abimelech of the Tribe of Menaſſe, got the Sovereignty by Maſſacring Seventy of his own Brothers on one Stone. Your own Records ſay, That God gave you Kings in his Wrath, among whom there was not one who was not a Man of Blood. And in the whole Catalogue, you can ſcarce find Four who were not tainted with Sacrilege, Idolatry, and other enormous Vices.

In a Word, Nathan, both the Sons of Iſmael and Iſaac, were but Men; and if thou haſt nothing elſe to object againſt the Former, but what thou muſt confeſs the latter were equally guilty of; I adviſe thee henceforth to lay thy Hand upon thy Mouth, and ceaſe to ſpeak Evil of thoſe, againſt whom No-Man can ſharpen his Tongue or Pen and proſper.

Paris, 22d. of the 2d, Moon,
of the Year 1663.

LETTER

LETTER XXII.

To the ſame.

I Concluded my other Letter ſomething imperfectly, and ſhort of my Deſign, being interrupted by a ſudden Deluge of Humours overflowing my Eyes, accompanied with a Tempeſt in my Head, which at once took from me the Power of thinking regularly, and of ſeeing how to Write. I am often ſubject to theſe Weakneſſes of late, and to many other Maladies. My Body ſenſibly decays; Age and Care, Watching and Sickneſs, with a Thouſand Caſualties beſide, have almoſt diſſolv'd this congeal'd Medly of the Elements. Methinks, I aw now no more than a poor Skeleton, to which Nature and Fortune, have left a dry wither'd Skin, for Modeſty's Sake, to cover its Nakedneſs; with a few evacuated Veins and Arteries; ſhrunk Sinews, Tendons, Muſcles, and Cartilages, to tack this Machine of Bones together, and keep it in Motion. In a Word, I ſeem to my ſelf to be only a Hobgoblin or Ghoſt in Diſguize; I cannot ſay, Incarnate, (for I've loſt all my Fleſh) but only bagg'd or clouted up in the moſt contemptible Shreds, Rags, and antiquated Reliques of Mortality, like a Maudlin or Scare-crow. I hang together by Geometry.

Yet,

Yet, ſuch as I am at theſe Years, I ſtill poſſeſs at certain Seaſons more ſerene and vigorous Thoughts, than in the Days of my Youth, when I was full of Marrow and good Blood. I can feel my Soul ſometimes fluttering her Wings, and briskly ſhaking off the heavy, ſlimy Cloggs of Earth, of Sleep, and of enchanted Life, or living Death. She ſtruts and plumes herſelf, ſhe mounts aloft and glides in Happy, though but Momentary Foretaſtes of Eternal Bliſs. And then lur'd down again by Charms of her accuſtom'd Eaſe and Pleaſure in the Fleſh, ſhe comes to Hand at Call, and being hoodwink'd from the Radiant Light of Heaven, ſhe tamely perches on the meaneſt ſenſual Appetite, which eaſily conveys her to her wonted Darkneſs. This is the changeable State of Mortals, and we muſt not expect a fixed Condition on this ſide the Sepulcher. The Noble and the Vulgar are equally liable to theſe Inconſtancies of Spirit; neither can the moſt exalted State of Sovereign Monarchs, Privilege them from the common Frailties of Mankind. They are no otherwiſe diſtinguiſhed from the Meaneſt of their Slaves, than only by the Vaſtneſs of their Poſſeſſions, their numerous Retinue, their unlimited Power, and the vain Pageantry of external Honour.

If we examine the Origin of Nobility, and Royal Grandeur; if we trace the Genealogies of Princes and Potentates up to their Fountain, we ſhall find the Firſt Fathers of theſe theſe noiſy Pedigrees to be cruel Butchers of Men, Oppreſſors, Tyrants, Perfidious Truce-breakers, Robbers, and Parricides. In a Word, the moſt Primitive Nobility was no other than Potent Wickedneſs, or dignified Impiety. And all the ſucceſſive Continuations of it by Inheritance, Election, or otherwiſe, even to thoſe Modern Times; are but ſo many Traducts of exorbitant Power and Honour, acquir'd and propagated by the moſt enormous Vices, by Practices unworthy of Men, and of which the Authors themſelves are always aſham'd. Therefore they cover their unjuſt Encroachments and Invaſions, with the ſpecious Pretexts of Juſtice and Vertue, calling that Conqueſt, which is no other than down-right Robbery, and profeſſing themſelves Patrons of Mens Liberties and Rights, Religion and Laws, whilſt in Effect they are the greateſt Oppreſſors, Hypocrites, Atheiſts, and Out-laws in the World.

This is not only true in the Race of Iſmael and Iſaac, of whom I made mention in my other Letter, but in all the Families which have ever made any eminent Figure and Noiſe in the World.

What were the Four renowned Monarchies, but ſo many Empires of Banditi, Governments of Free-booters, Pyrates and Licens'd Thieves? As Diomedes told Alexander the Great. "I, ſays he, becauſe I play the pri-"vate Corſair, and cruiſe up and down the "Seas with one ſingle Ship, am accus'd as a "Pyrate.

" Pyrate, Thou that doſt the ſame Thing " with a mighty Fleet, art call'd an Empe- " rour. If thou wert alone and a Captive, " as I am, they wou'd eſteem thee no better " than a Thief: And were I at the Head of a " numerous Army, as thou art, I ſhou'd be " reverenc'd as an Emperour. For as to the " Juſtice of our Cauſe, there is no other " Difference but this, That thou doſt more " Miſchief than I. Misfortune has compell'd " me to be a Thief, whereas nothing but an " intolerable Pride, and inſatiable Avarice " puts thee upon the ſame Courſe of Life. " If Fortune wou'd prove more favourable " to me, perhaps I might become better: " Whereas, thy continual Succeſſes make " thee but the worſe. Alexander admiring the Boldneſs of the Man, and the Reſoluteneſs of his Spirit, gave him a Command in his Army, that ſo he might rob and Plunder from thenceforth by Authority.

But, I ſhou'd have begun higher in Antiquity with the Empire of the Aſſyrians, founded by Ninus, in the Blood and Slaughter, Ruine and Deſtruction of all his Neighbours, and increas'd after the ſame Methods by his Wife Semiramis, who begging of her Husband, that ſhe might reign for Five Days, and he granting her Requeſt, ſhe put on the Royal Ornaments, and ſitting on the Throne of uncontroulable Majeſty, commanded the Guards to degrade and kill her Husband. Which being done, ſhe ſucceeded in the Empire, adding Æthiopia to her other Dominions, carrying a War into India, and encompaſſing Babylon with a Magnificent Wall; at laſt was kill'd by her Son Ninyas. Thus was the Aſſyrian Monarchy eſtabliſhed in Regicides, Maſſacres, and Carnage. And by the ſame Methods 'twas tranſlated by Arbactus to the Medes. He having caus'd Sardanapalus, the laſt, and moſt effeminate of all the Aſſyrian Kings, to die in the midſt of his Concubines. Thus was Treachery and Murder handed down with the Sovereign Power; till at length Cyrus the Perſian tranſferr'd them to his Country. Whoſe Son Cambyſes rais'd the Second Univerſal Monarchy, on the additional Ruines of many other Kingdoms, cementing it with the Blood of his Brother and his Son. Yet, after all, it was tranſlated to the Macedonians, by Alexander the Great, not without an equal Guilt of Parricide, and other Exorbitant Vices. From whom at laſt it devolv'd to the Romans.

What need I mention the ſcandalous Birth of Romulus and Remus, the Twin-Sons of an Inceſtuous Veſtal? Or, their debauch'd Education under a common Proſtitute, fabulouſly veil'd by the Roman Hiſtorians, under the Title of a Wolf, to render the Origin of their Empire Miraculous? Why ſhou'd I recount the Horrid Fratricide committed by Romulus on Remus his Brother; or the celebrated Rape of Sabine Wives, Virgins, and Widows? It will ſeem invidious, to call to Mind the deteſtable Murder of Titus Tacius, the Good old Captain of the Sabines, with many other Barbarous Maſſacres. Yet theſe enormous Crimes were the Foundations of the Roman Grandeur and Nobility, ſo formidable afterwards to the whole Earth. And the Superſtructure was anſwerable, through all the various Changes and Revolutions of Government, even to the Reign of Auguſtus Cæſar, under whom Rome gain'd the Title of the Fourth Univerſal Monarchy.

the

This Emperour, though he was eſteem'd the moſt Merciful and Juſt Prince on Earth, yet he eſtabliſh'd his Throne in the Blood of his Kindred, ſacrificing the Children of his Uncle to the ends of State: And that he might not deviate from the Royal Ingratitude of other Princes, he barbarouſly extinguiſh'd the Off-ſpring of his Fathers Brother, who had adopted him to the Inheritance of the Imperial Dignity. Scorning by an unkingly Tenderneſs, to ſpare the glorious Names of Antony and Cleopatra, to whom he was ſo nearly related, and who had inveſted him with the Power of being ſo inhumane.

I will not make thee ſick, by rehearſing the abominable Lives and wicked-Actions of the Nero's, Domitian's, Caligula's, Heliogabulus's, Galienus's, and the reſt of thoſe Royal Monſters. Hiſtory it ſelf bluſhes to recite ſuch Prodigies of Impiety, and their very Names are odious to all Generations.

If we paſs from theſe mighty Empires to Kingdoms of leſs Note, we ſhall ſtill trace the Foot-ſteps of the ſame Vices. Both Ancient and Modern Records are full of theſe Tragedies. The Original Kingdom of the Greeks took its Riſe from the Parricide of Dardanus; and the Female Empire of the Amazons, began in the barbarous Maſſacre of their Husbands. All Ages and Nations afford us Examples of this Nature; and the higheſt Honours, Dignities and Commands were ever acquir'd and maintain'd by the Higheſt Injuſtice.

Therefore, Honeſt Nathan, let thou and I never envy the Nobles and Grandees of the Earth; but contented in our Humble Poſts, ſitting under the Umbrella's of a happy Obſcurity, let us ſerve the Grand Signior with Integrity and a Zeal void of Injuſtice.

Paris, 22d. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1663.

LETTER

LETTER XXIII.

To Codarafrad, Cheik, a Man of the Law.

THou wilt approve the Sentence that was Yeſterday executed on a Frenchman in this City, who ſaid he was the Son of God, and had perſwaded a great many poor Ignorant People to believe him. He was burnt alive for his Blaſphemy, and his Aſhes kick'd into a Ditch. Had he been convicted of this horrid Impiety in any of the Grand Signior's Dominions, he had undergone the like or a more terrible Puniſhment: For the Alcoran expreſly ſays, That God has neither Wife, Son, Daughter, or Companion: And that thoſe ſhall ſuffer Eternal Pains, who teach any ſuch Doctrine. Doubtleſs, there is but One God, and the Eternal Unity cannot be divided, or multiply'd, to make more Gods in Faction, or procreate an Off-ſpring of diminutive Dieties. He, the Father of all Things, dwells in Eternal Solitude, and from an Infinite Retirement beholds the Various Generations of the Univerſe; they are all equally his Off-ſpring, and 'tis Blaſphemy to affirm he has a Son, or a Daughter, or a Companion like unto himſelf. For he is increated, unbegotten, and entire: Sole Poſſeſſor of his Own Glory, without Rival or Competitor. There was none before him, neither ſhall there be any after him. He is without Beginning or End.

But theſe Infidels harbour ſtrange Opinions about a Trinity of Gods, and follow the Doctrines of Hermes, Triſmegiſtus, Plato, Plotinus, and other Pagan Philoſophers, who aſſerted a Triad in the Deity; and on that Baſis, founded all the Polytheiſm of the Gentiles. Hence Pythagoras drew his Tetragrammaton, by playing the Chymical Arithmetician, and extracting a Quaternity out of Three. But the Poets not puzzling their Heads with the Myſteries of theſe Divine and Unintelligible Numbers, deliver'd their Theology in plain, groſs Fictions, ſuitable to the Capacities of the Vulgar: One midwifing a Goddeſs out of Jupiter's Brains: Another ſtarting a God from his Thigh. But this ſilly Fellow, could not derive his Pedigree ſo near as from a Little Toe of the Divinity. Therefore, he was deſervedly reduc'd to his Firſt Atomes, and ſpurn'd out of the World.

The French have various Kinds of Puniſhments for Maleſactors; but none more terrible than Breaking on the Wheel. This is inflicted only on Notorious Criminals, and the Manner is thus: The Party condemn'd is faſten'd to a Wheel, with his Arms and Legs extended to their full Length and Wideneſs. Then comes the Executioner, and with an Iron Bar breaks one Bone after another, till the miſerable Wretch is in the Agonies of Death;

Death; and ſo he is left, to expire in unutterable Torments: For, ſome Men of ſtrong Conſtitutions, will retain Life in this Condition for Twelve or more Hours together.

Honourable Codarafrad, Though the Executions of the Eaſt are more ſwift and ſurprizing, than thoſe in the Weſt; yet they are not Comparable to them for Cruelty: The worſt Death being but a Minutes Pain.

Sage Cheick, I reverence thy accompliſh'd Knowledge in the Laws of Equity and Juſtice.

Paris, 15th. of the 3d. Moon,
of the Year 1663.

The End of the Second Book.

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. VI.

BOOK III.

LETTER I.

To Solyman his Couſin, at Chalcedon.

I Commend thee for removing thus from Place to Place, and cou'd wiſh that thou would'ſt not only exchange thy Reſidence through all the Cities ſeated on the Boſphorus, Propontis, Euxine Sea, and the Helleſpont, but viſit by turns all the Famous Marts in the World.

Praiſe be to God, we are not born in Moſcovy, Ruſſia, China, or under the narrowſoul'd Governments of Lycurgus, Plato, and ſuch kind of Jealous Lawgivers; where it would be no leſs Puniſhment, than the Loſs of one's Eyes, Ears and Feet, if not of Life it ſelf, to travel out of his Native Country, or for a Stranger to come in, excepting Foreign Embaſſadors and Agents, who in China are forc'd to travel with their Faces veil'd or muffl'd, from the Confines to the Court, leſt they ſhould ſpie the Diſadvantages of the Country.

Doubtleſs this is repugnant to the Law of Nature and Nations, an Oppreſſion of Humanity, and directly oppoſite to the Purpoſe of God, when he deſign'd and made us for Sociable Creatures: For, the whole Earth is but as one Country or Province, common to Men and Beaſts. 'Tis our Element, and therefore we ought to be free in it, to range where we pleaſe, as the Fowls do in the Air, and the Fiſh in the Sea, without any Law, Reſtraint, or Injury. Such a Thought as this, made Socrates, when he was ask'd, What Country-man he was, anſwer, I am a Native of the Univerſe, and therefore free to live where I will.

Thou know'ſt, our Couſin Iſouf has travell'd over all Aſia and Africk, with ſome Parts of Europe. My Brother Peſteli Hali, has alſo viſited many Regions in the Eaſt. Both of them have improv'd their Eſtates and Fortunes in the World, the one at Aſtracan, the other at Conſtantinople. Follow their Steps and thou may'ſt have thy Hearts

Content.

Content. Go, and obſerve the different Manners of Men, their various Cuſtoms, Laws and Religions. Survey the Mountains, Vallies, Deſarts, Rivers, Lakes, Seas, Cities, Caſtles, Palaces, and all the other deſirable Objects, which embelliſh this Globe.

But beware of the Infirmity of moſt Travellers, who, Camelion-like, change their Humour and Manners as the Regions vary through which they paſs. Mere Mimicks, Buffoons, and Apes, who place their Excellency in imitating every Thing they ſee, or meet with. Thus degenerating from themſelves, inſtead of Improving their Minds in true Science and Wiſdom, and hardening their Bodies to endure patiently the Injuries of the Elements, with all the Fatigues and Contingencies of Humane Life, which are the chief Ends of Travelling, next to that of Learning how to ſerve our Sovereign, and our Country in a more refined Manner.

Solyman, never think that thou wilt deſerve the Character of a Prudent Traveller, if at thy return thou canſt only boaſt of Strange and Incredible Things thou haſt ſeen, tell monſtrous Romances, and Fictions more Fabulous than thoſe of the Gentile Poets. Aim at Solid Knowledge, and the Improvements of a Rational Creature. As thou goeſt out a Muſſulman, ſo return; but with all the Advantages that may recommend thee for a Perſon accompliſh'd in Hiſtory, Morals, Politicks, and Divine Philoſophy.

If thou dar'ſt not undertake a Ramble at large, go to thy Couſin Iſouf at Aſtracan, where he is ſettl'd in a Way of Traffick and Merchandiſe. Take thy Voyage by the Black Sea, and the Palus Mæotis. Caſt thy Eyes on the ancient Kingdom of Colchis, as thou ſaileſt by her Shores; conſider the Temper of the Mingrelians, Circaſſians and Tartars, with the Reſt of the People through whoſe Territories thou wilt paſs. And when thou arriveſt at Aſtracan, tell my Couſin Iſouf, that I wiſh'd thee to take this Courſe: He will reſpect thee for thy Uncle's Recommendation. Shew him this Letter, and let his own Eyes ſee the Hand-Writing of Mahmut, the Aged, Weather-beaten Slave of the Earth's Great Sovereign; the old Grey, Griſled Watchman of the Sublime Port, which is the Refuge of Mortals. He will find many Opportunities to advance thee. But I adviſe thee to wean thy ſelf from all Fondneſs, Inconſtancy, and Diſcontent. Be true to thy Truſt, Sedulous and Active, Patient and Reſign'd. Take all Things as they come from Deſtiny, without being peeviſh, or fretful.

So may God bleſs thee, and give thee the Riches of the Earth, and the Sweet Influences of Heaven; make thee happy here, and hereafter. Finally, may thy Reſt be on high, in Paradiſe.

Paris, the 1ſt. of the 5th. Moon,
of the Year 1663.

LET-

LETTER II.

To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Cuſtoms at Conſtantinople.

THere is no Doubt, but when thou waſt in the Indies the Names of Sultan Dara, Suja, Aurengzebe, and Morad Batche were not leſs known to thee, than that of their Father Cha Iehan, the Grand Mogul. Thy Buſineſs as well as Curioſity call'd thee often to the Court, where thou haſt heard the Characters of theſe young Princes, whoſe early Years furniſh'd the World with Matter of Noiſe, and great Expectations, and gave the old Monarch that begat 'em, Trouble and Care enough to keep 'em in Order, and prevent their Machinations againſt one another, as well as againſt himſelf. For, in thoſe Days he ſaw his Family divided into Factions, and a Royal Envy mix'd with Ambition, whetting Brothers and Siſters againſt each other, who by Nature were made for the Offices of Reciprocal Love.

Surely, 'tis but a glorious Infelicity for Children to be thus born Candidates of a Crown, when each is oblig'd by a Principle of Self-Preſervation, to purſue his Claim, in a Method wholly repugnant to Humanity, and the Affection that is due to thoſe of the

ſame

ſame Blood: When ſhaking off all Tenderneſs and Compaſſion, the Sons of one Mother muſt ſheath their Swords in each others Bowels, to prevent their own Eſtate, and raviſh a Crown by Force, to ſave their Lives.

Yet this is the Misfortune of all the Eaſtern Courts, that they cannot ſee a Prince aſcend the Throne, without the Slaughter of his Brethren, and all that can be ſuſpected to pretend or ſtand in Competition with him for the Sovereignty.

However, it muſt be confeſs'd that the Indian Policy in this Point is far more generous, than that of the Ottomans or Perſians. Who either immediately after their Poſſeſſion of the Throne, murder in cold Blood all the reſt of their Lineage; or at leaſt impriſon them in ſome dark Dungeon during their Lives, and not ſeldom put out their Eyes. And this is owing to the Diſadvantage the unhappy Children of our Monarchs lie under, in that from their Infancy they are confin'd to the Seraglio, and educated under the Tutelage of Women and Eunuchs, even during the whole life of their Father; ſo that he who is advanc'd to the Throne, has all the reſt in his Cuſtody the firſt Hour of his Reign.

Whereas, in Indoſtan, the Princes of the Blood, are committed to able and learned Tutors, and as they grow in Years, encreaſing alſo in Knowledge, Wiſdom and Courage, they are diſpos'd of, every one ſuitable to his Capacity. Some being made Miniſters of State,

State, others Generals of Armies, or Governours of Provinces: Whereby each is put in a Condition to make Parties for himſelf, among the Grandees, and thoſe of Inferiour Degree, and to fortify his Intereſt in Court and City, Country and Camp. Thus an open Field is left for all to try their Wit and Courage in, for the Sake of Inheritance; and 'tis more equal to let them Nobly Skirmiſh for a Crown, and make a Warlike Lottery for Life or Death, then ſet up one with the Advantage and Character of a Butcher, and turn the Seraill to a Shambles, always polluted with Royal, Innocent Blood.

But every State purſues its own Maxims; and there are not wanting Men of the Law, who juſtify this Inhumane Conduct of our Sultans, as the only means to prevent Publick Diſtractions and Civil Wars: which always happen, where there are many Pretenders to the Imperial Dignity. As it lately fell out in the Indies.

I need not acquaint thee with what particular Dignities and Commands, the Great Mogul inveſted his Four Sons. Thou could'ſt ſufficiently inform thy ſelf of theſe Things when thou waſt at Dehli, the Capital City of Indoſtan. Neither need I ſay any Thing of Rauchenara Begum, or her Siſter Sahieb, the Two Daughters of Cha Iehan. Thou that haſt been there in Perſon, know'ſt more of theſe Things, than I who am oblig'd to the Merchants and Travellers for all my Intelligence of the Indian Affairs.

But

But I can certify thee of ſomething, which has been tranſacted there ſince thy Return to Conſtantinople, the Fame whereof perhaps is not yet arriv'd to the Imperial City.

Know then, that in the Year 1655, a Rumour being ſpread abroad through the Provinces of India, that Cha Iehan was dead; each of his Four Sons, began to lay about him for the Crown. They did all that is uſual in ſuch Caſes for Ambitious Perſons to do, by courting the Omrahs and Rajas with large Preſents and larger Promiſes, by obliging the Souldiery with immenſe Largeſſes; in a Word, by rouzing up the Friendſhip and Integrity of their Adherents, and by winning over Strangers to their different Parties, with whatſoever elſe was thought neceſſary to carry on a proſperous War againſt one another: For the Innate Deſire of Reigning, had equally poſſeſs'd them all. But Deſtiny, which appoints and conſummates Humane Events, had reſerv'd the Crown for Aurengzebe, who ſurpaſs'd all the reſt in Policy and Diſſimulation.

With profound Craft this Prince overreach'd his younger Brother, Morad-Batche, and put him in Chains, in the midſt of Morad's own Army; pacifying the Officers with Bribes, and the Common Souldiers with Encreaſe of their Pay, whilſt he ſent their General away Priſoner to one of his ſtrongeſt Caſtles. This was the Firſt conſiderable Stroke he gave toward the gaining a Crown.

For,

For, now he was not only rid of one Competitor, and the moſt dangerous of all the reſt, but alſo became Maſter of his Army and all his Treaſure, which being joined to his own, put him in a Condition, to purſue his good Fortune with Succeſs. Yet the War laſted almoſt Six Years, his Brother Sultan Sujah keeping him in Play on the Side of Bengale, and Sultan Dara near the Capital Cities Agra, and Dehli.

But at laſt they were both forc'd to yield to the Fortune of Aurengzebe. In fine, he was eſtabliſh'd and now ſits on the Throne of his Fathers, whilſt they fell Sacrifices to the Jealouſy and Revenge of their Victorious Brother, being, as I'm inform'd taken Priſoners, and afterwards poyſon'd or hurry'd out of the World ſome other Way.

Thus paſſes away Humane Glory, like a Cloud driven before the Wind; or like the Smoak of a Fire, which looks bright and gay for a while, crackles and gives Heat to all that are near it, but is either ſuddenly quench'd with Water, or evaporates into Air, and is no more remember'd. Dear Peſtheli, conſider that this Earth is not our Native Country: we are Foreigners here below; let us improve our ſelves, by every Thing we encounter, in Knowledge and Vertue, without Learning the Vanity and Vices of Mortals.

Paris, 4th. of the 6th. Moon,
of the Year 1663.

LET-

LETTER III.

To Uſeph, Baſſa.

HEre is great Rejoycing for the Converſion of a certain Proteſtant Prince to the Faith of the Roman Church. They call him the Duke of Mekklebourgh. He is ſaid to ſpring from an Ancient Race of Kings among the Vandals. This Court careſſes him in an extraordinary Manner, as they uſually do all Proſelytes of his High Quality; as for poor and vulgar Converts, they ſerve only to become the Prieſts Slaves and Aſſes.

The King, who is Styl'd the Eldeſt Son of the Church, and therefore ought to appear a living Demonſtration of her boaſted Vertues, has been very Liberal of his Favours to the New Devotee, creating him Knight of the Holy Spirit, which is the moſt Sublime Degree of Honour in this Kingdom, next to that of being made Peer of the Realm.

Couriers arrive one at the Heels of another from the Duke of Beaufort, who is Cruiſing about on the Mediterranean. But, I cannot get a Sight of any of them, nor learn what their Expreſſes contain. The Courtiers and Stateſmen here are the very Whirl-Pools of Intelligence. Whatever News is communicated to them, is ſwallow'd up and loſt loſt for ever in profound Silence. They receive all, but return none again. However, People take the Liberty to gueſs, every Man according to his Reaſon or Fancy. Some ſay, the Duke of Beaufort has engaged with a Fleet of Algerines, and driven 'em into their Harbour with great Loſs on their Side, and Triumph on his. Others laugh at this as only a Court-Romance, who ſtrive to prepoſſeſs the Nation with proſperous Stories of the King's Arms, both by Sea and Land. Whilſt a Third Sort affirm, That thoſe Diſpatches come not from the Duke of Beaufort, who, they ſay, is dead, being kill'd by a Cannon-Bullet, in an Encounter with the Corſairs of Barbary: But, that they are ſent from the next Chief Officers in the Thoulon Fleet, to give the King an Account of his Death, and receive New Orders.

In the mean while, we are wholly taken up here at preſent with the Reception of the Swiſs-Embaſſadours. They made their Publick Entry into Paris yeſterday, after they had been magnificently entertain'd at the Caſtle of the Wood. A Thouſand Chariots accompanied them through the Streets of Paris. They are brave Jolly Perſons, Sons of Bacchus, and Hirelings to Mars, Stout in a Wine-Cellar, and no Cowards in the Field.

Courteous Baſſa, Thou ſeeſt, I do not forget my Friends, but ſend to all by Turns, the Advices that come to my Hands. I wiſh thou would'ſt favour me with a ſhort

Sketch

Sketch of thy Pleaſure with the Grand Signior, in the Neighbouring Plains of Adrianople.

Paris, 10th. of the 11th. Moon, of the Year 1663.

LETTER IV.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

'TIS hard to determine, whether the French King excel in Martial Affairs, or in thoſe of State. He is good at Both. His Counſels are Wiſe, and his Actions great. A Man both in Body and Mind, form'd for Empire: And out-ſtripping his Years in all Things ſave the Affairs of Love. Theſe indeed he purſues with youthful Vigour and Paſſion, being by Nature very Amorous, and eſteem'd the Handſom'ſt Prince of this Age, by thoſe who conſider a Regular Shape, Graceful Features, and a Majeſtick Awfulneſs in the Face, as the Principal Ingredients in a Maſculine Beauty.

'Tis certain, he's very Acceptable to the Ladies, who are the moſt Competent Judges in this Caſe. And they value him ſo much the

the more, becauſe his Love never abates the due Sentiments a Monarch ought to have of his Glory. For he gratifies both Paſſions, without ſuffering them to interfere, manageing his ſofteſt Intrigues with ſuch exquiſite Prudence, as he ſtill comes off a Hero.

He has had many Miſtreſſes, and 'tis a manifeſt Diſcovery of his Wit, that he never faſten'd his Affections on any that deſerv'd not the ſame Character. She that has the greateſt Share in his Heart at preſent, is call'd the Dutcheſs of Vaujour; a Woman rais'd to that Title by the King's Bounty, for the Sake of his Love. She has a Refin'd Wit, and that's all can be ſaid in her Praiſe. For, as to her Body, 'twould hardly tempt an indifferent Painter to employ his Skill, unleſs it were, in deſcribing what the Taylor endeavours to hide, and that's a Deformity much like mine, a Remarkable Bunch in the Back. Yet this great Monarch, loves her paſſionately, and will not be eaſily croſs'd in his Amours.

The Queen and his Mother have endeavour'd by divers Methods to reclaim him; but all prove ineffectual. A while ago they ſet his Confeſſor to work, who with Abundance of unſeaſonable Gravity, repreſented to the Young Invincible Monarch, the Ill Conſequences of Unlawful Love (for, theſe Infidels eſteem none Lawful, but what is beſtow'd only on One Wife.) He ſaid all that was proper for a Jeſuite to urge on ſuch an Occaſion, and a great deal more; threatning ning the Royal Lover with Severe Penance, and I know not what. Impatient of this Diſcourſe from a Subject, yet reſpecting the Character he bore as a Prieſt, the King with a Reſerv'd Countenance, thank'd him for his Pious Counſel, telling him withal, that for the Future he diſcharg'd him from his Service, being reſolv'd to obey the Old Canons of the Church, and confeſs to none but the Prieſt of the Pariſh. Thus the poor Jeſuite was diſcarded, and beſides the King's Diſpleaſure, he has drawn upon himſelf the Cenſures and Curſes of his whole Order, for diſobliging ſo potent a Monarch, only to pleaſe Two peeviſh Women.

Illuſtrious Miniſter, Kings are as Gods on Earth; and they eſteem it a Prophanation of their Divinity, when their Actions are too narrowly ſcann'd by their Subjects.

Paris, 7th. of the 1ſt. Moon,
of the Year 1664.

LETTER

LETTER V.

To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Grand Signior's Cuſtoms at Conſtantinople.

THE News which thy Letter imparts, wou'd affect me with Incredible Delight, were ſuch a Thing poſſible to come to paſs. It is a long Time ſince I have been weary of dwelling in Paris, and of converſing only with Infidels. There is a perfect Antipathy between their Humour and mine. And 'tis no ſmall Violence a Man does to his Nature in ſuch a Caſe, when all his Actions and Words are counterfeited. This goes mightily againſt the Grain. But I have thought nothing too much to do or ſuffer, for our Great Maſter's Intereſt. And I'm ſtill of the ſame Reſolution. Yet Nature it ſelf abhors Force and Reſtraint. Therefore 'twoud be a vaſt Comfort to be recall'd from this diſagreeable Station, and plac'd in ſome other Poſt, where I might ſerve God and the Grand Signior with more Eaſe.

Beſides, I have met with nothing but Perſecutions and Reproaches from ſome at the Seraglio, ever ſince I came to this City; as I have often hinted in my Diſpatches to the Grandees, and particularly once to the Noble Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa, our Country-man man and Friend. Wherein I alſo implor'd his Favour and Interceſſion, that I might have leave to retire into Arabia, and ſpend the Reſt of my Days in the Place where I firſt drew my Breath; or at leaſt, that I might be permitted to return to Conſtantinople, and give an Account of my Agency in theſe Parts, though it were to the Loſs of my Head, if I deſerv'd it.

I perceive that generous Baſſa took Compaſſion on my Sufferings, and has done his utmoſt to relieve me. 'Tis to him I owe the Propoſal that was made in the Divan, of ſending me to the Court of the Grand Mogul, there to Negotiate ſome Private Affairs of Importance for the Sultan.

There is nothing that I have had a greater Paſſion for theſe many Years, than the Happineſs of viſiting thoſe remote Parts of the Earth, ſo venerable for the Antiquity of their Inhabitants, and the Excellency of their Laws, Cuſtoms, Religion and Government; I mean, the Gentile Indians, and not the Race of the Moguls, who came out of Tartary, and are but of Yeſterday, in Compariſon with the Aboriginal People, whoſe Genealogies and Poſſeſſion of that Country, ſtretch beyond all the Records in the World beſide.

Ever ſince I read the Journal of thy Travels in the Eaſt, I was inflam'd with an ardent Deſire to ſee that Renowned Nation to converſe with the Bramins, and pry into the Myſteries of their Unknown Wiſdom, which which occaſions ſo much Diſcourſe in the World.

I know not what ails me, but I promiſe my ſelf more Satisfaction from their Books, were I capable of underſtanding the Language in which they are writ, or from the Lips of thoſe Prieſts who have 'em in their Cuſtody; than from all the Prophets and Sages in the World. I fancy I ſhou'd find ſomething prodigiouſly ſtrange and amazing in their Hiſtory, yet ſquaring with Human Reaſon, and Probability of Truth. If ſhou'd meet with Arguments which I cannot yet ſtart, to prove the Eternity of the World; Arguments clear and demonſtrative: ſuch as wou'd eſtabliſh this Doctrin, againſt all Objections that have or can be made to the contrary.

The Idea which I already entertain of ſo unmeaſurable a Duration, is only founded on my own Natural Thoughts, and ſupported by the Concurrent Opinion of ſeveral Ancient Philoſophers. But I ſhou'd hope to ſee it diſcover'd by theſe Indian Records, to be a Truth as bright as the Sun, and fixed as the Center of the Earth.

There is another Thing, for which I mightily admire the Indians; and wherein I endeavour to imitate them to the utmoſt of my Power: That is, the Juſtice and Tenderneſs they ſhew towards the Beaſts. 'Tis a Thing which needs a conſiderable Expiation, if by chance they kill any living Creature.

But, if they do it wilfully, out of Cruel Wantonneſs or Malice, and not in their own Defence; 'tis puniſh'd with Death, no leſs than if they had murder'd a Man. No care of Health, or Fear of Diſſolution by Sickneſs, can tempt one of the Brachman Race, to taſte a Bit of Fleſh: Much leſs cou'd they be induc'd by the meer pleaſure of their Appetites, to commit that which they eſteem ſo enormous a Sin, and the very Fountain of all other Vices. They count it the greateſt Injuſtice that can be, to ſuſtain their own Lives, by the Death of any of their Fellow-Animals; and they eſteem it a Puſillanimity unbecoming a Man, when he dares not venture his Life on the Fruits of the Earth, and the Milk of Cattel, which he may enjoy in Innocence, and Nature affords him more than enough, of all Sorts of lawful Nouriſhment.

This Religious Abſtinence, is the Mother of Heroick Vertues; and thoſe who practice it inviolably, are always in a State to contemn the World, Death, and all Momentary Things. Hence it is, that the Indians go to the Inviſible World as cheerfully, as they wou'd take a Journey to China, and Perſia. Turky, or any other Part of the Earth. For they eſteem Death no other than a ſetting out, or Voyage of the Soul to a more agreeable Religion.

But, I need not inſiſt ſo much on theſe Things to thee, who haſt been among them, and and art familiarly acquainted with their Genius and inclination. I ſlide into this Diſcourſe inſenſibly, by the Pleaſure I take in thinking of theſe People and their admirable Vertues, as a Man falls in Love with a Beautiful Woman, by attentively gazing on her, and many Times forgets himſelf, and the Buſineſs he was about, commits Errors and Indecencies, and through the Confuſion of his Spirits, is quite loſt, like one in a Wood.

To return therefore to my Purpoſe; a Journey to the Indies would be very pleaſant to me on ſeveral other Accounts. The very Stars of my Nativity inclin'd me to travel, and from my Cradle in my Father's Houſe, I was transported to Conſtantinople, many Hundreds of Leagues from the Place of my Birth. Thou know'ſt, what a Romet I've been ſince that Time: And I can aſſure thee, I retain the ſame Diſpoſition ſtill. But, there's no Country under the Moon which I wiſh to ſee with greater Earneſtneſs, than Indoſtan; the very Name whereof ſounds almoſt as ſweet as that of Paradiſe. Doubtleſs 'tis the Eden of the Earth, in many Reſpects. And the Inhabitants believe there was no better for the Original Parents of Mankind to dwell in, ranking the Hiſtory of Moſes on that Subject in the Number of Celebrated Fables. I approve not this Cenſure of the Indians, yet I tell thee as a Muſſulman, I dare ſay, the Myſterious Writings of Moſes are quite miſunderſtood by the greateſt Part of Mankind. Neither can any Two of his Interpreters, agree exactly which was the Particular Situation of Paradiſe. Some plant that Garden in Meſopotamia, others in Paleſtine; and a third Sort affirm, twas in Egypt: This Man will have it in Aſia, That in Africk. They are divided in their Opinions. And I might as well ſay, 'twas under the Red Sea between them both; and bring as many Cabbaliſtick Proofs to defend it. But, it ſignifies nothing to us, let it be where 'twill. Every Place is a Paradiſe, which a Man phanſies to be ſo; and Nothing can beat me off from the Conceit I have of the Indies

Beſides, I ſhou'd take a vaſt Delight in my Journey thither; whether I went by the Way of the Black Sea, and ſo through the Ancient Kingdoms of Colchis, Georgia and Cathay, coaſting along the Foot of Mount Taurus: Or, by the more Common Road, through Syria, Arabia, and Perſia. Either way wou'd afford Matter of Thought to a Contemplative Man, whilſt in ſome Places he beholds the Ruines of Famous Cities, and his Eye revels on the Spoils of Time, of Fire, of War, or of Earthquakes. In others, he beholds whole Provinces laid Waſte, and diſpeopl'd; only meeting here and there a few Cots, Herds, or Tents of Arabs, Tartars or Circaſſian Herdſmen; who ſtraggle up and down the pleaſant Fields of

Aſia,

Aſia, to pick and chuſe convenient Paſtures for their Cattle.

How pleaſant would it be to travel thro' my own Country, and behold the Tents of the Sons of Iſmael, ſpread o'er the Plains of the Vaſt and Horrible Deſart? To meet with Emirs and Sheghs of Arabia, with their Flocks and Herds, Summering it up and down, and Frolicking from Mountain to Valley at their Pleaſure.

From this to paſs to another Variety in Perſia, would be equally diverting. What kind of Thoughts ſhould I have whilſt on my Bed, within the Walls of Bagdat, the Stage of ſo many Great and Renown'd Actions, mention'd in Ancient Hiſtory! I ſhould call to Mind Semiramis, the Foundreſs of that Noble City, and all her Wars with the Indians and other Nations of the Eaſt. I ſhould reflect on her Policy, and the Weakneſs of her Son Ninyas. I ſhould conſider the various Tranſlations of the Eaſtern Empire; the Alternate Fate of the Medes, Aſſyrians, Babylonians and Perſians. And from thence I ſhould Naturally fall upon the Conqueſts of Alexander the Great; the Riſe of the Macedonian Empire, the Death of that Mighty Hero in Babylon, and the Cantonizing the Empire among his Chief Officers. Such Memoirs as theſe, would waken my Thoughts of the Vanity of all Human Affairs, as it does at this time: And particularly I reflect on my Folly, in ſetting my Heart ſo much on Travelling to a Country, which I am never like to ſee.

For, alas, my Dear Brother, I am not able to endure at this Age, the Hardſhips of ſo long a Journey, as I could in my Youth. Much Sickneſs has impair'd the Strength of my Conſtitution. I am grown as tender as an Infant. The leaſt Puff of Wind is ready to blow out the Flame of Life. And whereas formerly, neither Heat nor Cold, Hunger or Thirſt, Labour or Watching could hurt me; now my Health receives Damage from every one of theſe. I could not poſſibly out-live the Fatigue and Pain of travelling Two or Three Days together without a Drop of Water to refreſh my panting Soul. An Habitual Fever has made me the Thirſtieſt Man in the World. Then I am not able to bear the ſcorching Heats of the Sun, to which a Traveller in thoſe Parts is Neceſſarily expos'd. I ſhould daily diſſolve like Wax, or rather exhale in Smoke, in the midſt of ſo many Fervors. In a Word, my Body is ſo Infirm, that I am very ſure to die, before I can get Half Way to Indoſtan, let me take the neareſt Road I can.

Yet if the Miniſters of the Port ſhall think fit to ſend me, I am reſign'd. For, I take no farther Care of my Life, than as I may be ſerviceable to the Grand Signior.

I in-

I intend to write to our Illuſtrious Friend about it. In the mean time, do thou for me, what the Prudence of Man, and the Affection of a Brother ſhall ſuggeſt, as moſt conducing to the Intereſt of our Sovereign, and our own Honour, which we ought to prefer to our Lives.

Our Mother is in Health, and Salutes thee with a tender Embrace.

Paris, 9th. of the 3d. Moon,
of the Year 1664.

LETTER VI.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

THis Court of late makes a double Figure; the one of Real Sorrow for the Dutchess of Savoy's Death, who was of the Blood-Royal of France; the other of Counterfeit Mourning for the Death of Carolus Josephus, Brother to the German Emperour. For, they inwardly rejoyce at this Latter, and wish the whole House of Austria were laid in their Graves: That Family being the only Obstacle to the Grandeur, at which the French Monarchy aspires. The only Rub which Cardinal Richlieu, and his Successor Mazarini found in their Way, when they sought to exalt the Bourbons to the Empire of the West.

The Rise and Fall of Kingdoms, the various Changes of Government, the Alternate Fate of Nations, are Themes worthy of a Mussulman's Thoughts; considering that the Victorious and Happy Osmans at this Day possess the Territories of ancient Renown, the Provinces and Dominions which formerly made the greatest Figures and Noise in the World.

What

What is now become of the most Famous Monarchies of Babilon, Persia, Assyria, Macedon, Greece and Rome? Look for the Mysterious and Learned Kingdom of Egypt; the Religious State of the Jews; The most Ancient Kingdoms of the Sicyonians and Argives; The Commonwealths of Lacedæmon and Athens, with many other Countries mention'd in the Records of Time, and we shall find them all Swallow'd up in the Universal Empire of the Ottomans.

The Histories of Belus, and how he got the Sovereignty by Hunting; of Ninus his Son who first taught the World the Methods of Idolatry; of Serimamis, Ninyas, Sardinapalus, Arbaces, Belochus, and the rest of those Assyrian Monarchs; sound now like an antiquated Tale, or Dream. Neither is there any more Life at this time in the Babylonian and Persian Registers. The mighty Acts of the Nebuchadnezzar's, Cyrus's and the rest of those renown'd Conquerours, now serve but as Foils to set off the more Glorious Enterprizes, and Successes of our Immortal Sultans.

'Tis true, the Persians at this Day retain some Fragments of that once Vast and Formidable Eastern Empire. And the Germans have a Shadow of the Ancient Imperial Majesty of the Romans. But both the one and the other, are grown Effeminate and Weak; they have lost the Vertue, the Power and Fortune of their Predecessors.

Thou haſt travell'd over all the Dominions of the Sophi, and been an Eye-Witneſs of the Perſian Luxury, Libertiniſm, and Nakedneſs. Thou haſt ſeen the Off-ſpring of Heroick Sages, transform'd to Swine, Dogs, Aſſes, and other contemptible Brutes, as if they'd drank of Circe's Cup. So fatal is it to decline from the Way of Vertue; nay, ſo impoſſible even to ſtand ſtill in that ſacred Path, without being violently pull'd backward. In a Word, thou art ſo thorowly acquainted with the Preſent State of Perſia, and all its Circumſtances, that I ſhou'd appear too officious in pretending to deſcribe either the Country, or the People that inhabit there.

But, as to Europe, thou profeſſeſt thy ſelf a Stranger, and haſt commanded me to characteriſe this Quarter of the World; Wherein Germany makes the moſt Majeſtick Figure by Land, England and Holland by Sea: Spain boaſts of her Gold; whilſt France treaſures it up to pay her Armies, to keep foreign Kings in Penſion, to Build mighty Fleets, and Magnificent Palaces; to corrupt the German Princes, and make 'em Pimps to her Ambition, Inſtruments of her deſign'd Grandeur, which is no leſs than the Weſtern Empire.

As for the Duke of Savoy, he is a mere Tennis-Ball, or a Shuttle-Cock, bandied to and fro between the Kings of France and Spain.

The

The Swiſſes are Poor and Mercenary. They cannot ſtay at Home unleſs they cou'd banquet on the Turfs and Stones: For all the Fleſh, Fruit, and Corn in the Land, is not half enough to keep 'em alive, and they have little or no Money, but what they get abroad. This makes 'em all Travellers, and moſt of them take up the Trade of War. They ſerve the Pope, the French King, and many other Princes for Pay: And where they once engage, they are very true to their Truſt. But, I can tell thee, they wou'd be unwilling to fight for the Grand Signior, unleſs he wou'd allow 'em plenty of Wine, which thou know'ſt is contrary to the Diſcipline of the Muſſulman Armies: And theſe Swiſſes are the profeſs'd Adorers of Bacchus.

The Hollanders are Induſtrious and Rich: They mind nothing but Merchandizing and Mechanicks. They wou'd fain engroſs the Trade of the Indies and the Levant, to themſelves. They traffick, that they may be in a Condition to fight, and they fight to eſtabliſh their Commerce; having no ſenſe of Honour, but only of Profit. If they attempt any Conqueſt, or make an Invaſion, it muſt be in America, or ſome other remote Country: For they're only upon the Defenſive among their Neighbours, not daring to be the Firſt Aggreſſors in a War; in a Word, they're like a Neſt of Piſmires, that trudge up and down continually to get Proviſion, but ſting and bite thoſe under whoſe Protection

they

they live, if they have an Opportunity.

'Tis thought, the Prince of Orange, who deſcends from an Illuſtrious Stock, wil e'er long reduce thoſe Republicans to another Form of Government. The French Style him the Head and Heart of the United States, and theſe thou know'ſt command the Hands and the Feet.

Germany is counted the Bulwark of Chriſtendom againſt the mighty Power of the Ottomans and Tartars. But, in my Opinion, one of our Embaſſadors at the Emperor's Court, gave a truer Deſcription of it, when he compar'd Germany to a Great Monſter; with many Heads and Tails, which having a deſire to break through a certain quick-ſet Fence or Hedge, and each particular Head making Way where it cou'd beſt among the leſs entangl'd Branches, were all caught in ſo many different Noozes, by the Interpoſition of ſtrong Trees, and ſo the Monſter was forc'd to retire with Shame and Loſs: Whereas, he ſaid, the Oſman Empire, was like an Animal with One Head, and many Tails, and that One Head not encountring the like Difficulties, eaſily paſs'd through, being follow'd by the Tails with one Conſent, as the untwiſted Ends of a Ten-ſtring'd Cord paſs through a Ring or Hole, when the united Part has lead them the Way.

I ſhou'd have mention'd Italy, Poland, Denmark, Moſcovy, and other Regions of Europe, but it wou'd be too tedious for one Letter, Letter, which I ſhou'd neither have Time to write, nor thou Patience to read, at once.

Therefore, I deſire thee to accept of this only as a rough Draught, an Imperfect Sketch of ſome Parts of the Weſt. But in my future Diſpatches, I will imitate the Painters, and endeavour to draw each Member and Lineament of this great Body to the Life, as near as I can diſcern 'em by the Lights I have in Paris.

Paris, 10th. of the 4th. Moon,
of the Year 1664.

LETTER

LETTER VII.

To Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa.

MAY God multiply his Bleſſings on thee, and cauſe thy Heart to ſparkle with freſh Lights and new Joys, like the Sky-Rockets on a Dunalma [or Royal Holiday.] Accept alſo a ſmall Preſent, not worth an Inventory, (conſiſting only of a few Pictures, Looking-Glaſſes, Watches, and other Manufactures of France,) from the Hands of Mahmut, thy Countryman, Son of thy Fathers Neighbour, and a Voluntary Slave of thoſe who ſerve thee, if I had the Honour of an Opportunity.

Neither the Gift, nor he that offers it, is worthy of Eſteem. But, thou haſt Condeſcenſion enough to look on Both with the Eye of a Noble Arab, who knows not how to value the Sincerity of any Man's Devoir and Affection, which way ſoever he expreſſes it.

I can never forget the former Diſcoveries of thy Friendſhip to my Brother Peſteli and me; and in General, to all thoſe of our Houſe: Which ſtill encourages me to expect greater Kindneſſes; nay, in a manner, aſſures me of them: becauſe, I know the Nature of true Generoſity is ſuch, that where it once begins to faſten on an Object, it never ceaſes to communicate its Favours, till Damn'd Perfidy fidy gives a Check to the Current. And may he be Damn'd that then has the Impudence to ask for any more.

But Praiſe be to God, my Caſe is otherwiſe; I am not in the Number of the Ungrateful and Treacherous: And therefore, with Boldneſs I preſume once more to addreſs to the Duſt of thy Feet, illuſtrious Baſſa, begging thy Patronage and Shelter from the Perſecution of my Enemies; whoſe whole Endeavour is to ruine me.

Thou know'ſt I came to Paris in the Year 1637. of the Chriſtians Hegira. The Sun had then reviſited the Sign he was in at my Nativity, juſt the Eight and Twentieth Time. I was a mere Youngſter in the World. However, my Superiours thought me fit for this Employment. How I have acquitted my ſelf in it ever ſince, I leave to themſelves to judge: Yet, for Faſhion's Sake, they will be always a finding Faults. One Sycophant or other is perpetually Railing againſt me, when they find any of the Vizirs and other Grandees in a Humour to hearken to them. I Fancy 'tis for Want of Diſcourſe. When they have nothing elſe to talk of, then they fall a cenſuring of poor Mahmut, who undergoes more Fatigues than a Hundred Thouſand ſuch * Thlguch, as they. I can't imagine, what they aim at; unleſs it be, that they wou'd have me turn Chriſtian, and enter my ſelf into ſome Monaſtery.

* This Word Thlguch was left ſo in the Italian, and the Eng. Tranſlator knows not what to make of it.

Suffer

Suffer me, my Noble Friend, to tell thee, that a Man cannot want for Temptations to ſuch a Change of his Faith, without being confin'd to a Recluſe Life. He may be a Friar or a Libertine, a Prieſt or a Layman, A Zealot or an Hypocrite, a Chimney Sweeper or an Abbot, which he pleaſes, according as he is qualify'd. And I can aſſure thee, he that wou'd be a good Man, which is beyond all the Reſt, has incentives enough among the Profeſſors of the Nazarene Worſhip, though the greateſt Part are wicked.

As for me, I never thought that True Religion conſiſted in Empty Names and Titles, in Forms and Ceremonies, in Parties and Factions, or in any Thing but in a Life conform to Reaſon, and to the Will of God.

They take me here at Paris for a Moldavian Rambler, that has read ſomething more than the Pariſh-Clerks. And becauſe they know, I underſtand Greek, Sclavonian, and Two or Three Languages more, they wou'd fain make me a Prieſt, Doctor, Orator, or any Thing that I wou'd accept of, to ſerve an Intereſt. And I am compell'd to uſe, either a down-right Humility, or a forc'd Pride, that I may handſomly evade their Courtſhip: convincing 'em ſometimes, that I am not fit for ſuch Dignities, at other Seaſons telling 'em, I am above Inferiour Orders, and that nothing leſs than an Archbiſhops Pall, or a Cardinal's Hat will ſatisfy my Ambition,

Thus

Thus I really diſſemble, and jeſt my ſelf in earneſt out of Ample Eſtates, to ſerve God, his Prophet, and the Grand Signior: Yet am traduc'd at the Seraglio for a Hypocrite, an Infidel, and God knows what.

Here's honeſt Eliachim the Jew undergoes the ſame Fate; Whilſt thoſe of his own Party, eſpecially the Rabbi's, proclaim him every where for a Chriſtian; and the Nazarenes point at him, as a Turk. Only my Landlord where I before lodg'd, who is an honeſt old drunken Fleming, takes Eliachim for a Saint, and ſwears he will have him Canoniz'd after his Death: And all this, for no other Reaſon, but becauſe Eliachim treats him now and then with a Bottle of Wine: So partial are all Men to their own Humours and Intereſts. But the Truth on't is, Eliachim's an excellent Counterfeit, and my Landlord is not the only Man who has this Veneration for him. He paſſes for a very Good Catholick, and a Holy Man among a great many others. His Looks are ſo demure, his Mien ſo compos'd, and he has ſuch Godly Diſcourſe with him, about the Sacraments, Indulgences, Miracles and Graces of the Church, when he is in Company with Chriſtians, That he wou'd deceive the Spaniſh Inquiſition, and cheat the Devil himſelf.

Such is the Violence we are forc'd to uſe to our ſelves, who live in theſe hazardous Stations. And yet No-body conſiders us, or regards our Zeal for the Grand Signior.

Signior. Our Reputation, Liberty, and Lives are precarious. We are not only in perpetual Danger of the Revenge of the Nazarenes who are our real Enemies; but alſo expos'd to the Envy, Malice and Perſecution of thoſe who ought to be our Friends.

I have often complain'd of the malicious Calumnies thrown on me by Icingi Cap-Oglani, and his Aſſociates: And the Miniſters were pleas'd to receive my Apologies. But now I ſuſpect greater Treachery. I ſent an Account to the Reis Effendi ſome Years ago, how I was dogg'd up and down the Streets of Paris, by a Fellow whom I knew not, and what Apprehenſions that put me upon. I will acquaint thee farther, that being afraid of an Aſſaſſine in the Dark, I arm'd my Breaſt with a Quire of Paper, which is known to be Dagger-Proof. I was not at all miſtaken in my Gueſs. For the laſt Night, as I was returning home to my Lodging, between the Hours of Nine and Ten; I receiv'd a Stab in my aforeſaid Breaſt-Plate, right againſt my Heart. It was not ſo dark but I could perceive the Perſon who gave me this Blow; and Self-Preſervation taught me immediately to ſeize on him, and grapple as cloſe as I could, extending his Arms with mine at a good Diſtance from our Bodies. I am but little and ſhort, yet I have a ſtrong Spring with my Body, when I am once rouz'd, as thou wilt imagine I was now. Beſides, I have generally a certain Preſence of Mind in Time of of Danger, which fails not to prompt me with the readieſt and moſt proper Courſe to eſcape. In a Word, I wreſted the Ponyard out of the Ruffian's Hand, and ſtabb'd him dead with it, not thinking it ſafe to make a Noiſe, but chuſing rather to die if my Strength fail'd me, than by crying out for Help, run the Riſque of worſe Conſequences: For I had long expected ſome ſuch Attempt as this upon my Life, from my Enemies at the Port. And concluding this Fellow to be one employ'd by them for that Purpoſe, I thought it no Prudence to have him ſeiz'd by the Watch, and puniſh'd by the Law, leſt he ſhould in Revenge diſcover me and my Buſineſs to theſe Infidels. Therefore I play'd the Executioner my ſelf, and ſent him out of Hand to another World, to prevent his telling Tales in this. Thou wilt ſay there was no Injuſtice in this, ſince 'twas in my own Defence, and to ſave the Honour of my Sovereign. As he fell, he uttered theſe Words in a faint broken Tone, Mahmut, my Death will be reveng'd before long, and you cannot eſcape the Trap that is laid for you. Then he expir'd.

This made me preſently conclude, that he was employ'd by ſome-body at the Port: For, how elſe ſhould he know my True Name? But upon Second Thoughts, I cannot be certain, but that he was ſet at Work by my Old Sicilian Maſter, ſince he knew my Name alſo. However, I have greater Reaſon to ſuſpect the Former; becauſe, it is not not probable, that the Infidel would take ſo Chargeable and Troubleſome a Method to Murder me. Neither had he Provocation enough. Beſides, for ought I know, he may be dead. God only is acquainted with the Truth. However, to prevent future Aſſaults of this Nature, and a great many other Inconveniencies, I have remov'd my ſelf to a New Lodging, in the moſt obſcure Corner of the City, and very remote from the Place where I liv'd before, being reſolv'd alſo not to frequent the Court, nor any Publick Places as I have done formerly, but to take other Meaſures for Intelligence.

What I deſire of thee is, to repreſent my Caſe favourably to the Divan, That they may approve of my Conduct. Do alſo whatever elſe thou judgeſt the Part of a Country-man and a Friend.

As for the Event, I patiently wait the Appointments of Deſtiny. For 'tis in vain to be too Sollicitous.

Adieu, High-born Kerker, and forget not Mahmut in his Diſtreſs. For, that is the Time, wherein true Friendſhip is tried.

Paris, 17th. of the 5th. Moon,
of the Year 1664.

LETTER

LETTER VIII.

To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna.

BE not diſhearten'd at the Troubles which thou encountereſt in this World of Lotteries. But, remember the Adage of thy Rabbi's, That EVIL which is Old as Night, is yet the Off-ſpring of every Morning. The Ages are meaſur'd exactly, and our Hours are cheker'd with Equal Mixtures of Happineſs and Misfortune. We are not born to our own Deſires. And as not a Man of us can remember how he was form'd in the Womb, ſo have we no Reaſon to repine at what happens to us ſince we came out of it. Whatever Power, Wiſdom and Goodneſs took Care of us then, and afterwards inſpir'd our Mothers and Nurſes with Tenderneſs, and a Thouſand Degrees of Patience beyond what is Recorded of Job, the ſame will provide for us to Eternity.

The Deſire of Knowledge kill'd Adam, and the ſame Luſt, propagated with his Seed, deſtroys all his Poſterity. We can never be ſatisfi'd in our Confinement to this World, and therefore we flounce and flutter on all Sides, like Fiſh or Birds in a Net, to find a Way out: Whilſt we do but entangle our ſelves the the faſter, render our Reſtraint more uneaſy, and delay the Poſſibility of our Releaſe. Whereas Patience would ſoon ſet us free, and rank us among the Immortals. One thinks to eſcape by high-drinking; another by Fevers of Love or Glory; and a Third conceits he ſhall by his Gold, be able to bribe the Watch, who Guard the laſt Paſſes of this Life, and perſwade 'em to let him Scamper ſafe to Paradiſe. Alas! Alas! All this is but the Sophiſtry of our Paſſions. 'Tis in vain to think of haſt'ning or retarding our Fate. Our Time is ſet, though we know not the Period. Reſignation is our beſt Leſſon, and Prudence the next.

Perhaps thou wilt call this a Sermon, rather than a Letter. But, I adviſe thee to read it with the Eyes of a Stoick; That is, whether it pleaſes thee or not, regard it not farther than it agrees with Reaſon. I would fain ask of the Man who expects to have his Will accompliſh'd in this Life, whether he can prevail upon the Sun to riſe any Morning within the Artick Circle, or the Moon to deſcend, ſome Night, and ſweep the ſnow off from the top of Mount Athos. So Inexorable is our Deſtiny, ſo unalterable the Decrees of Fate.

Be not troubled therefore at any Thing; but remember that thou art a Part of the Univerſe, and that nothing can betide thee, which is not for the Good of the Whole.

What I have ſaid is, to arm thee againſt all the Contingencies which may aſſault thee unawares, awares ruſhing upon thee on a ſudden from behind the Veil, which covers all the Deſigns of Providence and Nature, Deſtiny and Chance.

I my ſelf have lately experienc'd, that it is good to be thus prepar'd for future Events, having narrowly eſcap'd Death by a little Timely fore-caſt.

It is not Neceſſary for thee at this Time, to know all the Circumſtances of my Danger. Suffice it to ſay, That I was aſſaſſinated in the Dark, kill'd him that deſign'd to be my Murderer, and am now forc'd to remove my Habitation.

Eliachim thy Brother in Iſrael will be at Vienna within Fourteen Days. He will give thee a farther Account of all Things which it behoves thee to know: with freſh Inſtructions concerning my New Lodgings, and the Method we muſt obſerve for the Future in conveying Letters. We cannot be too cautious in the Grand Signior's Buſineſs.

As for our own Lives, let us imagine, they were only ſent to ſerve him, on whoſe Life ſo many Millions of Lives depend.

Paris, 18th. of the 5th. Moon,
of the Year 1664.

LETTER IX.

To Zeidi Alamanzi, a Merchant at Venice.

I Am oblig'd to ſend Circular Letters at this Time, to all the Slaves of the Grand Signior, who have Buſineſs with me at Paris; to inform them, that upon a very Important Emergency, I am forc'd to change my Lodgings. I have already ſent away Diſpatches to Conſtantinople and Vienna on this Account to prevent the Errors they might commit in addreſſing their Letters. For the ſame Reaſon, I now write to thee. Thou needeſt not enquire after the Occaſion of this Conduct; nor wonder at any Thing that happens to us extraordinary in thoſe hazardous Poſts. We muſt expect to encounter with Rubs and Obſtacles in ſerving our Great Maſter. If theſe difficulties have but their proper effect, which is to whet our Inventions, encreaſe our Diligence, and confirm us in our Zeal, all ſhall go well.

The Soul of Man never diſplays her Faculties and Perfections with greater Luſtre, than when ſhe is environ'd with Perils. Theſe are the Tryals of Fortitude, Prudence, Juſtice and all the Vertues. He that ſinks under Misfortunes, and Croſs Events, has either no Soul, or 'tis aſleep.

Courage

Courage then, Fellow-Slave, and let thy Heart beat a continual Alarm. Be not diſmay'd at any Thing, nor let Self-Love bereave thee of thy Honour: But go on in thy Duty, and truſt thy Soul to God.

Thou liveſt in a City where Vertue and Vice are in Emulation, ſtill ſtriving to ſurpaſs each other: There are not more wicked People in the World than Venice affords, nor yet more Pious and Good. Follow thou the beſt Patterns, and be happy. But do nothing by bare Imitation: For that's the right Way to become a Hypocrite. Let all thy Actions proceed from Vital Principles of Reaſon and Generoſity in thy ſelf. And when thou ſeeſt rare Examples, let 'em ſerve only to awaken and rowze thy Innate Vertue.

Send me no Letters till thou haſt receiv'd freſh Orders from the Port. They will furniſh thee with all Neceſſary Inſtructions. After that, let me hear from thee as often as thou wilt. Thy Diſpatches will be always welcome. Let them contain Matter of Intelligence chiefly, and that of the freſheſt Date. Penetrate into the Counſels of the Republick where thou reſideſt. Inſinuate thy ſelf with the Senators and Grandees. Dive into their Hearts, and unlock their Secrets. Communicate Nothing but the Truth to the Miniſters of the Port or to me. If thou canſt Diſcover their Inclinations to a Peace, or their

Absolute Need of it, thou wilt do an Acceptable Service to the Grand Signior, and to the whole Empire of the Faithful: For then w can bring 'em to our own Terms.

Zeidi, to God I recommend thee, desiri him to preserve thee from Wine, Women an Cards, which are the Three Capital Temptations of Venice.

Paris, 1st. of the 6th. Moon,
of the Year 1664.

LETTE

LETTER X.

To Murat Beſſa.

I Cannot eaſily divine the Reaſons why I am ſo much neglected by the Miniſters of the Port. Above Four Years have paſs'd away, wherein many Notable Events have happened; yet no-body thought it worth his Labour to inform Mahmut of any Thing. So that all the Notices I could gain of Remote Tranſactions, are owing either to the Publick News of Europe, or at beſt to ſome particular Letters of Merchants reſiding in this City, with whom I conſerve an Intimacy, for the ſake of Intelligence, and for other Cauſes.

Thus I ſhould have been in Ignorance to this Day, what Iſſue the Baſſa of Aleppo's Rebellion had, were it not for an Accidental Interview I lately had of ſome French Travellers, who came from Conſtantinople. Theſe inform'd me of the ſudden Fate of that Baſſa, when he was at the Height of all his Grandeur, within a few Days March of the Imperial City, at the Head of a Potent Army, and juſt upon the Point of Accommodation with the Grand Signior. They much extol his Bravery and Reſolution: For the French are Naturally Lovers of ſuch as dare boldly oppoſe their Sovereign. They equally condemn the ſly Perfidiouſneſs

Mortaza Baſſa, to whoſe ſafe Conduct Generous Rebel truſted his Life, and by Eaſineſs loſt it. Yet they applaud Mort za's Loyalty, Courage and Wiſdom, w the Eminent Services he afterwards did Empire, in leading the Army againſt gotski, Prince of Tranſylvania, which at len lifted him to the Government of Babylon.

All theſe Things had been hid from were not the Nazarenes my Intelligence Nor ſhould I have known how the Rebell was carried on after his Death by his vengeful Nephew, by the Son of Cheuſ Baſſa, by a Bey of Egypt, and other Ma contents. Yet ſuch Paſſages are fit for a M in my Poſt to be acquainted with, that may have a clear Idea of his Maſter's C cumſtances, and ſo apply himſelf more fectually to ſerve him.

It had not been amiſs, if I had recei timely Intelligence of the Death of Pr Ragotski, in Regard there was always a vate Correſpondence between him and Court. Which ceaſing by his Death, it been worth my Pains to obſerve, whe
it would be continued by his Succeſſor, what other Meaſures they would take.

'Tis true I was acquainted with this, not by the Miniſters of the Port. I h alſo of all the following Commotions Tranſylvania, occaſion'd by the different ctions of Michael Apaſi and Kemini Ja
the Two Rival Princes. I was not ſorry

this News, knowing that the Diviſions of the Nazarenes ſtrengthen the Unity and Force of the Muſſulman Empire. I was likewiſe inform'd of the Fate of Mortaza, Baſſa of Babylon, who fell a Victim to the Grand Vizier's Jealouſy; with many other Paſſages. But neither from the Port, nor from any other Hands could I learn the leaſt Intelligence of the Venetian War, and what Progreſs our Arms have made in Candia, Dalmatia, and the other Dominions of the Republick. Which makes me conclude, that either the Grand Signor's Reſidence at Adrianople, abated his Inclinations to Martial Affairs, which is alſo the Common Opinion of the Chriſtians here in the Weſt; or, that the War in Hungary for a while ſuperſeded all other Deſigns.

However it be, 'tis certain the Succeſſes of the Ottoman Arms in taking Newhauſel, Leventz, Novigrod, and other Places of Strength, with the terrible Incurſions of the Tartars through Moravia and Auſtria, put the whole German Empire into a great Conſternation. Embaſſadors are ſent from the Imperial Court to all the Chriſtian Princes, imploring their Aſſiſtance in this General Danger of Europe.

Here is one arriv'd at this Court, whom they call Count Strozzi, a Perſon of good Addreſs, and Maſter of much Eloquence. He has prevail'd on the French King to maintain at his own Charges Six Thouſand Horſe and Foot, to ſerve againſt the Victorious Oſmans. A great many Perſons of Quality, have liſted themſelves as Voluntiers; and the meaner Sort talk of nothing but marching to Conſtantinople, and driving the Turks back to Scythia, from whence they firſt came.

Courteous Baſſa, thou wilt laugh at the Vanity of theſe Infidels, who conſider not that by the Grace of God, and Miracles of his Prophet, our Emperour is the King of all the Kings on the Earth, the Mightieſt of the Mighty ones; the Phœnix of Honour, Power, and Unparallell'd Majeſty; Brother and Companion of the Sun, Moon and Stars; a Prince of a Myſterious and Sublime Lineage, in whom are center'd all Glory and Excellency; the Shadow of God on Earth!

The Breath of Fame goes before the Van-Couriers of his Armies, purifying all Places, and filling them with Veneration and Terror. The Duſt that is rais'd by his Heroick Cavalry, paſſing through the Air, cauſes Trembling and Aſtoniſhment in the Hearts of the Chriſtians. The Infidels fall before the Fatal Cymetars of True Believers.

May the Angel of the Houſe of Iſmael continue to proſper the Holy Off-ſpring, to extend their Conqueſts, and propagate the Faith unblemiſh'd; that the Names of Alla and Mahomet may be heard in all Climates, and from the utmoſt Borders of the Earth.

Paris, 5th. of the 6th. Moon,
of the Year 1664.

LET-

LETTER XI.

To Iſouf, his Kinſman, a Merchant at Aſtracan.

I Have often wonder'd, why among the Reſt of the Nations in Chriſtendom, thou would'ſt not beſtow the leaſt Tranſient Viſit on Spain! But upon more mature Conſideration, I find thou art a Man of Judgment in Travelling. That Country lies under a very ill Character, for the Penury of all Things neceſſary to ſuſtain the Lives of the Natives; and by Conſequence, 'tis not to be thought, they can ſpare much for Strangers. A very Inhoſpitable Region, abounding in Beggars, Thieves and Drones: Full of Wine and Gold, yet barren of Corn, and Rich People.

Thou wilt not think this a Paradox, when thou ſhalt conſider, That the Spaniards have all their Corn from France, Germany, or Sicily: And that for this and other Reaſons, Spain is but like a Sieve through which the Immenſe Treaſures of Peru and Mexico, are drain'd into other Countries.

You may Travel ſome Days together in Spain, without ſeeing any Thing ſave the dry Face of a Deſart. And if you chance to meet with a Houſe, wherein you may ſhelter your ſelf, and your Horſe, expect no better than a Ramezan-Entertainment. For you muſt faſt all Day, and think your ſelf much reſpected, if you can get a few Onions, or other Roots and Herbs, with a Morſel of Bread and Fleſh at Night. to keep you from being ſenſible, That you are actually ſtarving.

Then the Inhabitants are the Proudeſt People on Earth. You ſhall meet with none but Kings, Princes, Viceroys, or at leaſt Men that conceit themſelves ſuch. They are alſo Mercileſs in their Revenge; Cruel, Obdurate, Covetous, Moroſe and Inexorable. In a Word, Spain is the Jeſuites Paradiſe; the Jews Purgatory; and the Hell of Women.

I therefore commend thy Fortune, or thy Prudence rather which would not ſuffer thee to fall into the Hands of thoſe Barbarians; nor think it worth thy Pains to breath an Air infected with ſo many Vices. Thou haſt paſs'd through many more inviting Provinces, and art at laſt happily ſeated to thy Mind. Improve thy Opportunities in doing good.

I ſent a Letter to our Couſin Solyman, adviſing him to give thee a Viſit. If he comes, receive him kindly, and perform the Part of a Kinſman; put all Expences to my Account, and remember member that no Man is born for himſelf.

Paris, the 6th. of the 7th Moon, of the Year 1664.

LETTER XII.

To Aſis Baſſa.

ALL Europe is alarm'd with the Mighty Preparations which our Invincible Sovereign is making to invade the German Empire. Great is their Conſternation and Fear, and Couriers are every where running up and down from one Kingdom and Court to another, to remonſtrate the Common Danger, and beg Aſſiſtance. Every Body appears Zealous in a Cauſe which concerns all Chriſtendom, and the French King has lent the Emperour Eight Thouſand Men.

The Duke of Beaufort is alſo gone with a Squadron of Ships to encounter the Corſairs of Argiers, and other Dominions of Barbary.

The Pope has ſent to the Emperour's Aſſiſtance Six Thouſand Foot, and Two Thouſand Horſe. And the Reſt of the Emperour's Allies are raiſing Levies for him as faſt as they can: It being current News, that the Grand

Signior in Perſon, is at the Head of Two Hundred Thouſand Men, entring Hungary as a Conqueror: That he has taken above Forty Towns, ruin'd all the Country where he paſs'd through, and that in a little time he will be at the Walls of Vienna.

In the mean time, this Court appears Inſenſible of the General Danger which threatens Chriſtendom. They are altogether taken up in Ballets, Plays, and Feaſting, minding their own Intereſt more than that of their Neighbours, and revelling as if the King of France were ſole Monarch of the World.

Here is arrived a Legate from Rome, to compoſe the Differences between the Pope and this Crown. His Name is Cardinal Chiſi. He is receiv'd with unparallell'd Magnificence, as if he were an Angel from Heaven: For the French King loves to ſhew his Grandeur on ſuch Occaſions. Beſides, all the Nations which are in the Communion of the Latin Church, have an unreſerv'd Veneration for the Roman Mufti, whom they eſteem the Succeſſor of Peter the Prince of the Apoſtles.

This young Monarch has a large Soul. The whole World ſeems too little to ſatisfy his Ambition. He lays the Foundation of Deſigns, greater than thoſe of Alexander, the Conqueror of Aſia. He heaps up Money at a prodigious Rate, raiſes vaſt Armies, builds Magnificent Palaces, keeps Kings in Penſion, ſupports many Princes of Germany; and in a Word, commands more of them, than does the the Emperour himſelf, who is their Lawful Sovereign.

Yet after all I cannot perceive that he loſes any Degree of that Reſpect which he owes, and which his Predeceſſors have always paid to the Grand Signior, who is the undeniable Arbiter of the whole World.

God grant our Sovereign long Life, perpetual Victories, and a good Stomach to his Meat, which the King of France wants, to the Accompliſhment of his happineſs: For at preſent he feeds like a Sparrow.

Paris, the 19th. of the 8th. Moon, of the Year 1664.

LET-

LETTER XIII.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

THou wilt perceive the vaſt Reſpect I have for thee, by my frequent Diſpatches. Thy Commands are to me as the Laws and Sanctions of the Ottoman Empire, which I will never violate. I am no Flatterer; witneſs my Letters to ſome of the Grandees; wherein I have not ſpar'd to reprove their Vices, Errors, and Male-Adminiſtration. If a Baſſa has been unjuſt, ſeditious, or engag'd in Rebellious Practices: If he has prov'd an Extortioner, a Drunkard, or a Tyrant; he has not eſcap'd without a due Reprimand. I have been bold in correcting, adviſing, and giving Counſel to the Greateſt Miniſters in the Empire. And this was a Province appointed me by the Flower of Sublime Glory, the Phœnix of Honour, Sole Favourite and Truſtee of the Grand Signior, the Vizir Azem, in whoſe Cuſtody were the Seals of Imperial Secrets, Majeſtick Decrees, and Royal Edicts: Who being the Primum Mobile of the Refulgent Muſſulman State, gave Life, Activity, and Order, to all the Inferior Orbs, Springs, and Inſtruments of Government,

I re-

I receiv'd this Command many Years ago; and he that gave it me, is gone to the World of Spirits. Yet the Injunction remains in Force, being ſtamp'd with the Myſterious Signet, the Character of Supreme and Immutable Authority. In Obedience to which, I have never warp'd or flinch'd from the duty enjoyn'd me. And to demonſtrate, that I did not do this in a vain Oſtentation of the Power which was given me; I have not fail'd all along to pay to a Man of Merit, the Attach and Veneration which was his due.

'Tis with inexpreſſible Pleaſure, I throw my ſelf at the Feet of a Wiſe and Vertuous Man; with extream complacency I kiſs the Duſt whereon he treads, and unfold all my Faculties, in expreſſing my Eſteem. I am full of Platonick Love, and build Altars in my Breaſt, to a Soul deſerving the Innocent Sacrifices of amorous Paſſions; the Incenſe of Gratitude, and a pure Affection, an Holocauſt of Integrity and Loyal Friendſhip.

I proteſt, by the hopes I have of ſitting on the Banks of the Rivers in Eden, and of being regal'd in the delectable Chioſcs of Paradiſe, that I honour thy Learning and other Sage Perfections; that unblemiſh'd Life, thoſe excellent Morals, and the unparallell'd Sweetneſs of Modeſty, which Crowns all thy Actions. But I will ſay no more to a Man who cannot hear his own Praiſes. The beſt Method of expreſſing my Regard, will will be to answer thy Expectations, in presenting thee with the true Pourtraicture of these Western Nations and People, which thou so passionately coveteſt.

I must desire thee to excuse the Confusion and want of Order in my Letters; since I send thee a Medly of Remarks, as they come to my Knowledge and Memory.

It is not long ago since I wrote to Iouf Eb'n Achmed, a Kinsman of mine, a Merchant at Astracan; and among other Things, I took Notice of his neglecting to see Spain in his Travels; for he has been in most of the Kingdoms of Europe, and over all Asia and Africk. In that Letter I describ'd Spain in its worst Colours, Now I will shew it to thee in another Figure, without swerving from the Truth: For every Country has its Perfections and Excellencies, as well as its Defects and Blemishes.

If Spain have a barren Soil for Corn, Nature has made Amends for that Fault, in the Purity of the Air, and the Plenty of Fruits: The Sands of her Rivers are the most perfect Gold. Her Villages, tho' few, are greater, and more Populous than some Cities, witness Madrid. Her Mountains are of Iron, Marble, and Jasper. Her Vallies underlaid with Lead, Brass, and Silver. Spain of old was the Tharsis of Solomon, the Ophir of the Phœnicians, and the Peru of Rome.

In those Days the Inhabitants of Spain were Famous for their Fortitude, and Invincible

cible Conſtancy. 'Tis recorded, that the Inhabitants of Sagunto in the Province of Valentia, when they were beſieg'd by Hannibal, and ſore preſs'd by the Carthaginians, choſe to burn themſelves, with their Wives, Children and all their Wealth, rather than yield to their Enemies.

Their Fidelity alſo was ſo remarkable, that ſome of the Roman Emperours had always a Guard of Spaniards near their Perſons; as the French King, the Pope, and other Princes do now confide in the truſty Swiſſes.

But tho' there remain ſtill ſome ſcatter'd Remnants of the Ancient Vertue among them, eſpecially in Biſcay and Caſtile, yet the greateſt Part of the Spaniards are degenerated. They make no Figure now in the World, but only for their Gold, and the Vaſtneſs of their Dominions. For they poſſeſs the beſt half of America, are Lords of Two Mighty Empires, and not without large Territories in the other Three Quarters of the World. Yet the too great Extent of their Power has weaken'd its Vigor; the Affluence of their Wealth, has really impoveriſh'd them; and by ſtraining their Honour too high, they have crack'd it, being now of little or no Eeem in Europe. Their Glory fades, at the riſing Grandeur of France, which makes radiant and ſwift Advances towards its Zenith. This young Monarch is already become the Arbiter of all Chriſtendom.

Accom-

Accompliſh'd Miniſter, there is nothing in Nature ſtedfaſt: The World is but an Eternal Circulation of Events, Viciſſitudes, and Changes without Beginning or End. Only God remains Immutable, in his own Eſſence, which is the Center of every thing. May thou and I meet there, and then we ſhall be eternally happy. Adieu.

Paris, 12th. of the 9th. Moon,
of the Year 1664.

LETTER

LETTER XIV.

To Muſu Abu'l Yahyan, Profeſſor of Philoſophy at Fez.

BY the Faith and Obedience I owe to Mohammed our Holy Lawgiver; by the Alcoran, and all that is eſteem'd Sacred among the Muſſulmans, I ſwear, thy long Silence made me conclude my Firſt Letter was unwelcome to thee. But now I'm convinc'd to the contrary. Thy generous Anſwer has remov'd my Apprehenſions, and fill'd me with Complacency. Henceforth I ſhall reſt aſſur'd and confident of thy Friendſhip, promiſing my ſelf vaſt Improvements from ſo learned a Converſation, tho' only by Letters at many hundred Leagues Diſtance.

As to what thou requireſt of me, concerning the various Languages of Europe, I will inform thee the beſt I can, according to the Obſervations I have made, and the Intelligence I have receiv'd from Men of Letters, and from Books, which are the Pictures of learned Souls, Mirrors wherein they may behold their own Perfections, whilſt they are on Earth, and after their Departure to the Inviſibles, other Men may ſee the Interiour Beauties of their Mind repreſented to the Life. For Words are the perfect Sculpture of the Intellect, or at leaſt its Mezzo-Tinto.

Tinto. They are the expreſs Portraicture of Divine and Humane Reaſon. Thus the Alcoran is call'd by ſome of our Holy Doctors, The True Image of Original and Increated Wiſdom.

Now of all the Words and Languages on Earth, thou know'ſt the Preheminence has been for ever given to thoſe of the Eaſt, and among them to the Arabian, both in Regard of its Purity, and of its Antiquity, from whence it is Styl'd the Virgin-Mother of Languages, the Dialect of the Bleſſed above.

Thou know'ſt, that for this Reaſon it is, the True Faithful covet no Species of Learning more ardently than to be perfectly skill'd in ſo Divine a Speech, wherein the Volume of Celeſtial Majeſty was penn'd in Heaven before the Throne of God, and ſent down on Earth by the Hand of Gabriel, Prince of the Meſſengers who fly on the Errands of the Omnipotent. It was ſent I ſay, to the Prophet, who could neither write nor read, that the World might be convinc'd of its Divine Original. Yet the Incredulous will not believe: Tho' it is manifeſt to any Man of Impartial Senſe, That a Perſon altogether ignorant of Letters, could not poſſibly compoſe a Book, the moſt Elegant that ever was penn'd in the World, and wherein not the leaſt Blemiſh or Contradiction can be found from the Chapter of the Preface, to the laſt Verſicle, which winds up the whole Volume. Oh! obdurate Hearts of Infidels; Oh! wilfully fully Blind, that ſhut their Eyes againſt the Splendors of Eternal Light: Oh! reſolvedly Deaf, that ſtop their Ears againſt the Voice of God and his Prophet, neither will they liſten to the ſoft Whiſpers which are wafted from Paradiſe.

Such are the Nazarenes, who for the Sake of the Greek and Roman Tongues, of which they are paſſionately enamour'd, educate their Children in a fair Way to believe all the Monſtrous Fictions of the Ancient Poets, or at leaſt all the Lying Tales and Legends of their own Prieſts, which are Ten Times more Fabulous than the Former, and more Inconſiſtent with Reaſon. And this they do rather than be at the Pains of learning Arabick, which would inſtruct them in Truths as Clear and Serene as the Orient Sun.

I ſhall ſay little of theſe Two ancient Languages of Greece and Rome, in Regard they being now grown Obſolete, and only to be learn'd in Schools, thou, no doubt, art vers'd in them ad Unguem, as the Latins phraſe it.

That which ſeems propereſt for me to inform thee of, is, That the Roman or Latin Tongue appears like an old Antiquated Mother thruſt out of Doors by her Four ungrateful Daughters, Italian, French, Spaniſh, and Portugueze. Theſe are her Natural Offſpring, begot during the Roman Conqueſts in the Weſt, and degenerating after that Empire was in its Decline. So that now they are

are taken for no better than Mongrels or Baſtards. In Spaniſh there is a great Mixture of Gothiſh and Moreſco Words; the French retain many of their old Gauliſh Idioms. The Italian is corrupted with a Hotch-poth of Words, left by the Vandals, Huns and Longobards. Yet that Fault is recompenc'd by Abundance of Greek Etymologies. As for the Portugueze, 'tis but a Dialect of Spaniſh, and lies under the ſame Imperfections.

The only pure Maternal Languages now current among the common People in any Part of Europe, are the Teutonick, Sclavonick, and Britiſh: The Firſt is ſpoken in Germany to Perfection, but corruptly in Suedeland, Denmark and the United Provinces. The Second is common to the Hungarians, Moldavians, Poles, Raſhians, and many other Nations. The laſt is confin'd to the Welſh, a People inhabiting a Corner of Great Britain, driven thither by the Victorious Saxons their Conquerors, above a Thouſand Years ago. As for the Reſt, they are only mix'd Dialects, and ſo not worth taking Notice of; excepting one Mountainous Part of Spain, where the Inhabitants are ſaid to ſpeak Pure Arabick at this Day. They are ſuppos'd to be a Remnant of the Moors.

The Criticks here in the Weſt, uſe to give theſe following Rules in Reference to Languages. If you would addreſs to God, ſpeak in Greek or Latin, becauſe of their Antiquity, Purity, and Majeſtick Loftineſs. If to Kings, ſpeak in Spaniſh, in Regard of its

ſlow

ſlow Pronunciation and Gravity: If to Men, uſe Italian, to Women, French; to Dogs, Welſh: But if you would affright an Enemy, or the Devil himſelf, ſpeak High-Dutch.

They relate a Story of a German Embaſſador at the French Court, who deliver'd his Meſſage in Teutonick; which when a certain Grandee heard, and took Notice of its harſh and ſtrong Emphaſis, he ſwore 'twas his Opinion, That this was the Language wherein God curs'd Adam, Eve, and the Serpent. The German turning to him, anſwer'd briskly, 'Tis poſſible, Monſieur, it may be ſo; but then I hope you'll grant, that French was the Occaſion of this Curſe, when the Devil choſe to tempt Eve in that Language for its Effeminacy, wheedling her à la mode de Paris, to eat the forbidden Fruit.

Renowned Muſu, do me the Honour of frequent Letters: Inſtruct me in Things whereof I'm ignorant: Make me familiar with the Remarkables of the Country where thou reſideſt: Tranſport Fez, with the other Parts of Africk which are known to thee; tranſport them I ſay ſucceſſively to Paris every Moon, on a Piece of Paper, and I will ſend thee all Chriſtendom by way of Exchange: For thus it becomes the Lovers of Wiſdom, to barter for Knowledge.

Paris, 10th. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year 1664.

LET-

LETTER XV.

To Oſman Adrooneth, Aſtrologer to the Sultan at Adrianople.

THoſe of thy Profeſſion here in the Weſt, are wholly taken up in contemplating a certain Comet which appears in the Firmament. 'Tis of that Sort which they call [Bearded.] And ſome will have it to reſemble a Lyon, others ſay 'tis like a Dragon, a Crocodile, a Bear, and I know not what. There is hardly a Species of Four-footed Beaſts, to which the Giddy Rabble do not reſemble it. And ſome aſſert it to be the perfect Figure of a Sword.

The Mathematicians are ſtraining all their Skill, to take the true Dimenſions of this Celeſtial Apparition. The Painters are drawing it to the Life; the Poets are making Songs and Ballads of it. And the more Learned Sages are framing Aſtronomical Schemes, like ſo many Gins or Traps to catch this Meteor in. They watch all its Motions, and dog it from one Heavenly Houſe to another; they track it through the moſt intricate Paths of the Sky.

If it ſtands ſtill, or makes a Tranſient Addreſs to any Planet, Eminent Star, or Conſtellation, we are preſently alarm'd with the News of it, and bid to be upon our Guard, as if there were ſome Miſchief a-plotting againſt us Above. The World is harangu'd with Fatal Predictions of Wars, Famine, Earthquakes, and other Calamities, the ſure Conſequences of this ſuppos'd Prodigy.

as

Tell me, thou who art Converſant in the Science of the Stars, and the Myſterious Philoſophy of Nature, what theſe Comets are? Whether they be only Exhalations drawn up into the Higher Region of the Air, by the Force of the Sun; Or, whether they be more ſolid and durable Subſtances? Whether they be of a Poſthumous Origin like the Clouds, Hail, Rain, Snow, and other Meteors, the daily Products of Nature, the Upſtart Off-ſpring of the Elements? Or, whether they are in the Rank of thoſe Beings, whoſe Antiquity is untraceable, which are as Old as the World; ſuch as the Sun, Moon, Stars, and this Earth whereon we tread?

For my part, I believe 'tis no Hereſy in Science, whatever 'tis in Religion, to ſtart New Maxims. For ought we know, both in the one and the other, what we call Innovation, is but a Reviving thoſe Principles, which through Deſuetude, or the Corruption of Times are grown Obſolete, out of Date and forgotten, tho' really the moſt Primitive and Ancient Truths in the World.

Thus I cannot forbear thinking there are ſome other Globes ſcatter'd up and down the Infinite Expanſe, beſide thoſe whoſe Continual Brightneſs expoſes them to our Eyes.

The Moon, 'tis known, with Venus and other ther Planets, receive their Light Gradually from the Sun, by Hemiſpheres: So that 'tis certain each of theſe Orbicular Bodies is always Dark by Half. And where is the Soleciſm, if we ſuppoſe there are other Opake Bodies in the Firmament which receive no Light at all, and by their Nature and Qualities, are Incapable of receiving any but from within themſelves? So we may ſuppoſe theſe Comets to be ſuch ſolid Globes, made Reſplendent by an Eruption of their Central Fires.

God only knows the Truth in ſuch Caſes. And thou art better able to decide theſe Queſtions than I. Therefore referring it to thy Sage Judgment, I pray him who made the Stars, and orders their Dominion on Earth, to bleſs thee with Favourable Influences, That thy Soul may be always like a Land flouriſhing under the Sweet Aſpects of Orion and the Pleiades.

Paris, 22d. of the 12th. Moon,
of the Year 1664.

LETTER

LETTER XVI.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

THE French have had ſo many Occaſions of Joy of late, that it is hard to determine, which affects them moſt nearly.

The Satisfaction which the Pope gave this Monarch, for the Injuries formerly done to his Embaſſador at Rome, began the Triumph of the French Court. I have already ſent Intelligence of that Quarrel, and how high the Reſentments of the King flew, on the ſame Day that he receiv'd the Firſt News of ſo Barbarous an Affront. Now I ſhall acquaint thee, That there enſu'd a Treaty between them at Piſa, a City of Italy in the Dukedom of Tuſcany, after the French Troops had terrified them into a State-Penitence, by the menacing Approaches they made toward the Eccleſiaſtical Territories, through the Principalities of Modena and Parma. Theſe Two are Friends to France, and their Intereſt makes them ſo, in Regard that Crown protects 'em from the Pope's Oppreſſion, who is always eſteem'd an Ill Neighbour, by the Italian Princes, whoſe Dominions lie next to his. For this Roman Prelate is very Potent and Rich; he would in a ſhort time be Lord of all Europe in Temporals as well as Spirituals, were he not curb'd by the King of France and his Allies.

This makes all the little Sovereigns round about Rome, ſtand in Awe of the Monarch, who was born to command Crowned Heads. Wonder not at the Expreſſion: For I tell thee, ſome of the greateſt Princes in Europe are his Penſioners. This very Quarrel with the Pope, has gain'd the French King Three Cardinals more than were his Friends formerly.

The Concluſion of the Treaty was, That the Pope ſhould ſend a Legate de Latere into France, to pacify the King's Wrath; and that the Militia or Roman Guards whom they call Sbirri and Corſes, ſhould be for ever aboliſh'd, and a Pyramid to be erected over againſt their Guard-Houſe, with an Inſcription in Latin and French, declaring their Crime and Puniſhment.

This put the Court of France into a very Jolly Humour. They fell preſently to Feaſting and Revelling; and the King's next Project was the Conqueſt of Barbary. To this End he ſent the Duke of Beaufort with a Fleet of Great Ships, to clear the Seas of African Corſairs, that ſo an Army might be ſafely tranſported from Toulon, and landed on the oppoſite Shore. His Deſign in this was to reduce the Inhabitants of thoſe Happy Countries to the old Idolatry of their Forefathers, to plant there the Nazarene Superſtition, ſtition, and make himſelf the Sole Lord and Proprietor of Africk.

I cannot divine what Succeſs he will have in this great Enterprize; but it appears as if God were angry with the Muſſulmans: Such continual Loſſes they ſuſtain by Land and Sea.

It is with no ſmall Grief I ſaw not long ago, the French who ſerv'd in Hungary this Campagne, return to Paris laden with the Spoils of True Believers. I cannot behold the very Cymetars and Enſigns which theſe Infidels took from the vanquiſh'd Oſmans, hang up in their Temples as Trophies of their Victory, without inexpreſſible Paſſion and Regret. 'Tis ſaid here, the Grand Signior has loſt in Hungary above Thirty Thouſand Men this Campagne; whereof Ten Thouſand were kill'd in one Battle, and a Hundred and Fifty Colours taken, with Sixteen Cannons.

Beſides, theſe Giafers grate my Ears with another Bravado, boaſting that one French Ship of War fought Seven Hours with Three and Thirty of the Grand Signior's Gallies, ſunk Five, ſcatter'd the reſt, and came off with a compleat Victory.

'Tis a vaſt Advantage the French have in the Situation of their Country, in that it is waſh'd on the South by the Mediterranean, on the North by the Main Sea: So that 'tis eaſy for them to curb the greateſt Part of Europe on one Side, and ſufficiently moleſt the Levantines on the other. As for the Weſtern Parts, this Kingdom is their very Center:

where all the Lines of War, Peace, Commerce and Traffick meet and terminate. She is to Chriſtendom, what Egypt and Sicily were in former Ages to the Empire of Old Rome, an inexhauſtible Granary. Whatſoever deſirable Things, Nature has frugally drop'd here and there in other Regions, are found in this Kingdom as in their Original Seminary. Corn is plentiful as Graſs, Wine is almoſt as cheap here, as Water with you in ſome Parts of Turky. The Fens and Lakes are cover'd with Wild Fowl. The Meadows with Sheep, Deers, Goats and Oxen. There's nothing ſcarce but Hens, Eggs, and True Believers. I had almoſt forgot their Remarkable Plenty of Sault, the bare Cuſtom of which, augments the King's Coffers with Four Millions of Zequins every Year.

France alſo abounds in Hemp, a moſt neceſſary Vegetable, whereof ſhe not only makes all her own Cordage and Sails, but alſo furniſhes her Neighbours; which brings in a conſiderable Revenue. There is an Infinite Plenty of Fruits, and Trees for Timber, of Iron, Marble, Free-ſtone, and all Things neceſſary for Building Ships or Houſes, for Defence or Offence by Land or Sea. Neither are there wanting Mines of Gold, Silver, Tin, Lead, Copper and other Metals whereof Men make the Inſtruments of War, and the Entertainments of Peace. In a word, this Country is ſo enrich'd with every thing, that ſome Hiſtorians and Philoſophers have call'd it the Parent of Plenty, others the Fountain of Earthly Bliſs, the moſt Incomparable Region of this Globe, the Epitome of the World, or rather a little World it ſelf.

tain

Serene Scribe, thou wilt not wonder at the Univerſal Succeſſes of the French Arms, when thou conſidereſt theſe things, and that here the Provinces are Peopl'd like Kingdoms, the Cities appear like whole Provinces, for Multitude of Inhabitants. To ſay all in a Word, The common Character of France, is the ſame which Philoſophers give to Nature. That there can be no Vacuum found in it.

Paris, 25th. of the 12th. Moon,
of the Year 1664.

LETTER XVII.

To Abdel Melec, Muli Omar, Preſident of the College of Sciences at Fez.

PErmit me to ruſh into thy Preſence, Venerable Patron of Philoſophy, without the uſual Formalities of Addreſs, or Punctilio's of Introduction. Let me be admitted like a Man with Coals of Fire on his Head, as the Cuſtom is at the Imperial Port, in urgent Caſes: For I am newly inflam'd afreſh with Pythagoriſm, Platoniſm, and Indianiſm.

Floods, Fires, and other Devaſtations by War, Famine, Peſtilence, Earthquakes, and ſuch like Contingencies, have either quite aboliſh'd the True and Primitive Science of the Firſt Ages, in moſt Parts of the Earth; or at leaſt very much diminiſh'd and obſcur'd their Original Splendor.

The beſt Manuſcripts are loſt, unleſs the Indians have preſerv'd 'em. Our Fathers grew Torpid, Stupified, and Deſperate, under the Publick Calamities which overwhelm'd whole Cities, Provinces, Kingdoms, and Empires: There was no Encouragement for a Scribe or a Man of Letters, to put himſelf to a needleſs Toil in labouring to preſerve the Records which came from Heaven: Hiſtories ſtories of the World Inviſible, Celeſtial, Perfect, and Eternal; Traditions of undiſcoverable Antiquity; Pandects repleniſh'd with Bright Oriental Wiſdom, and ſeal'd with the Tetragrammaton, which thou know'ſt is the Signet of the Firſt and the Laſt; even of the Divinity which comprehends all Things, and is it ſelf comprehended of none.

Had they gone about ſuch a Task, they knew that ſome ill Fate or other would ſwallow their Writings, and bury them in Eternal Oblivion. Hence it is, that at this Day we can hardly boaſt of the Footſteps of ancient Knowledge, a few Fragments and Reliques of Primitive Learning, ſcatter'd up and down in divers Authors, and much adulterated with the vain Opinions and Errors of After-Times. For every Writer was either inclin'd, or forc'd, to flatter the Age wherein he liv'd, and not oppoſe their Tenets. So that now there is ſcarce any True Philoſophy extant on this ſide the Ganges.

How thoſe Brachmans only had the Happineſs to conſerve ſo Sacred a Treaſure, can be no other way made out, than by their own conſtant Tradition, that the Deluge of Noah never reach'd thoſe utmoſt Borders of the Land toward the Eaſt. And perhaps the ſame Reaſon may be given for the untraceable Chronologies of the Chineſe, their Neighbours. For tho' they differ in the Sentiments and Rites of their Religion, in their Laws, Cuſtoms, and manner of Government, yet they both agree in affirming the World to be indeterminately Old, puting a certain Number of Millions of Years, for an uncertain, far beyond it; which is but a modeſt Retrenchment of their own Thoughts, as if they were unwilling, it ſhould be falſly cenſur'd that they aim'd at an Hyperbole.

They ſay, That the Firſt Matter is Co-eternal with God, as Light is Co-eval with the Sun, produc'd alſo, and depending after the ſame Manner. For as the Light diffus'd through the Air, is not properly the Sun, but an Inſeparable Effect of it; ſo the Univerſe is not God, but his Production, ever ſubſiſting on him, and never to be divided from his Eternal Eſſence. And for ought I ſee, the moſt ſignificant Language in the World has no other way to expreſs things of this abſtruſe Nature. They are too ſublime for humane Thought; much more do they tranſcend the Power of Speech. All the Dialects on Earth are too barren of Words, and Words too defective in Senſe, to deſcribe the Ineffable Secrets of Eternity.

As for the various Ranks of Beings, the Infinite Diverſity of Forms, reſulting from the Firſt Matter, they think it reaſonable to believe, That they were ſucceſſively produc'd in time; every one in its Order, and according to its Perfection.

I tell thee, it appears much more Rational for me to believe this, than that the Firſt Matter it ſelf was produc'd out of nothing about Five or Six Thouſand Years ago, as the Jews and Chriſtians ſeem to teach.

Rather

Rather than ſtarve my Reaſon with ſo ſhort an Idea of the World's Age, I would embrace the Sentiments of Democritus and Epicurus, ſuppoſe an Infinity of Spaces and Worlds, an Eternity of Generations and Corruptions, a Continual Change not only of Individuals, but of the very Species of things, through the Fatal Concourſe and Blending of Atomes: Yet not denying the Unity of the Divine Eſſence, nor undervaluing his Providence all the while. For theſe things are, in my Opinion, very compatible one with another.

I do not pretend to be ſingular, or ſet up for a Dogmatiſt: Neither am I ambitious of being eſteem'd a Wit, by venting Notions above the reach of Vulgar Capacities. 'Tis only the pure Love of Truth, which encourages me to take this Liberty with thee, who in Matters of Philoſophy art the only Maſter of the Age.

To thee therefore I ſubmit all my Sentiments, as to an Oracle; deſiring thy Impartial Anſwer, and couching the Faculties of my Soul, in the moſt humble Attach to thy Venerable Wiſdom, I become mute as a Mommie.

Paris, 30th. of the 12th. Moon, of the Year 1664.

LETTER XVIII.

To Mirmadolin, Santone of the Vale of Sidon.

WHat is this World, that on all ſides Invades our Senſes? This Earth under our Feet; thoſe Clouds whirling over our Heads; theſe Winds ſhaking the Trees; that Azure Sky, with all its glittering Ornaments? What's all this but an Eternal Dream; a mere Shadow of God Almighty's Thoughts? 'Tis pleaſant living in it; 'tis alſo painful. In his Senſe this Univerſe is perfectly good; in ours 'tis mixed with evil. He made it for his own Diverſion, and our Scrutiny. 'Tis to us a Field of Riddles, and Contradictions. In Summer we curſe the Heat, and in Winter blaſpheme the Cold. Yet we bleſs both the one and the other, when we feel 'em in due Meaſure and Seaſon. One Hour, this Colour pleaſes the Eye, another that; and perhaps in the next, 'tis diſguſted at them both. We never find Reſt or Content in any thing. The ſofteſt Muſick at ſome times grates our Ears, like the croaking of Toads. The moſt agreeable Odours, are as the Smell of a Sepulchre, loathſome and abominable. The moſt delectable Wines and Savoury Meats, at ſuch Seaſons, are unpalatable as the Beverage and Diet of Hell, Hell. Neither can the more inſinuating Charms of Women, put us in a better Humour. All the whole Syſtem of Nature joined together, is not ſufficient to afford us Eaſe. Nothing but a Ray from the Omnipotent can alleviate our Melancholy, or give us a taſte of our ſelves. For we are the very Deity in ſcatter'd Fragments; or we are ſeparated Drops of the Divine Eſſence: Volatile Spirits of Eternity; by Fate or Chance, fix'd in proper Vehicles of Time, and Matter. O Santone! This whole Corporeal Univerſe, is but a Web ſpun from the Bowels of an Infinite God, and wrought with inimitable Artifice, to catch Immaterial Forms, Idea's and Souls in, which are the Genuine Off-ſpring of the Eternal Mind. We Mortals of Humane Race, are but ſo many Parcels of the Divinity in Diſguiſe, trapan'd into Bodies, by certain hidden Baits, Magnets and Charms lurking in Embryo's, with which we have ſome Sympathy. We are all Gods in Maſquerade. So are the Beaſts of the Field, the Birds of the Air, and the Fiſh of the Sea.

Let us not therefore condemn the Antique Ceremonies of Gentile Religion, which taught Men to adore the Sun, Moon and Stars; the Elements and all that is within their Circumference, eſpecially the Souls of departed Heroes, Demi-Gods, Nymphs, and the reſt of thoſe Beings which are the Eldeſt Progeny of Eternal Nature. For in ſo doing, they did but build Altars to the Original Fountain

Fountain of the Univerſe. Since God is in the Winds, in the Rain, in the Thunder, Lightning, Hail and other Meteors; in the Heavens, and Air, Sun, Moon and Stars; in the Fire, Earth and Water; in Plants and Animals; finally, ſince he is in the Elements, and every thing compounded of them; he is not only in them, but is theſe very Things by an Ineffable Production of himſelf. And when the Final Conſummation ſhall come, it will be but a withdrawing all the extended Lines of his Infinity, into their Center, where thou and I, and every divided Atome in Nature ſhall meet, be united and ſwallowed up in Eternal Beatitude. Amen! Amen! Oh thou Lord and Father of all things, Inexhauſtible Abyſs of Miracles which know no End.

Paris, 6th. of the 1ſt. Moon,
of the Year 1665.

LETTER

LETTER XIX.

To the ſame.

SUppoſing it were otherwiſe than I have ſaid: Grant the Doctrine of Epicurus true, Believe that we and all things were produc'd by the Fortuitous Concourſe of Atomes. Yet ſtill we have the ſame, or greater Reaſon to value our ſelves as diminutive Gods, ſince in this Senſe we muſt of neceſſity be Eternal, every Atome being ſo, of which we are compounded. In the Opinion of theſe Philoſophers, there's no ſuch thing as an Origin or Beginning of the Univerſe: Each Particle of Matter with them, is as old as the Divinity. We have all rang'd Eternally from one Form and World to another; danc'd to the meaſures of Fate, been Parts of the Orbs above, and of the Caverns below; ſtray'd through the Heavens and all the Elements; taken an Univerſal Carier, through Infinite and Endleſs Spaces; and are now (as fix'd as we ſeem in theſe ſolid Hulks of Fleſh) in the ſame Hurly-Burly as ever.

Theſe Bodies which we carry about us, are not compounded of the ſame Atomes as they were Seven Years ago. There is a perpetual Flux and Reflux of Particles. We die as faſt as we live. Every Moment ſubſtracts from our our Duration on Earth, as much as it adds to it. We move, breathe, and do all things by Paradox. Our very Eſſence is a Riddle.

With an open Heart therefore, I applaud thy Religious Negligence of Humane Affairs, in that thou art Divinely careleſs of thy ſelf, and every thing elſe, ſave only to conſerve thy Innocence.

What ſignifies it, whether we believe the Written Law or the Alcoran; whether we are Diſciples of Moſes, Jeſus, or Mahomet; Followers of Ariſtotle, Plato, Pythagoras, Epicurus, or Ilch Rend Hu the Indian Bramin? Of what Import is it, whether we pray or not? Whether we kneel before Images, or in a naked Moſque? 'Twill be all one in the winding up. We are but the Machines of Chance. As we live, ſo ſhall we die; and God knows what will become of us afterwards; neither is it worth our while to be ſollicitous, ſince we can be certain of nothing. Perhaps, every Atome of which we are made, may be ſcatter'd from the reſt; we may be tranſported Piece-meal into Ten Hundred Thouſand Millions of Worlds; and ſeven-fold as many Years may expire, before Two the minuteſt Particles of our Frame, meet together again. We need not be troubled at all this; nothing can hinder us from being Immortal and Eternal, tho' it be but in Fragments.

Go on then, Sacred Vagabond, Pious Rambler, Holy Fugitive; go on, to aſſert in the courſe of thy Life, this great Truth, That all things depend depend on Everlasting Chance or Destiny. Thy Actions shall reprove the Hypocrites of the Age, who abound in Specious Words. And thy Divine Indifference shall condemn the Hellish Zeal of furious Bigots, who think to please God, and atone for their Sins, by sacrificing Humane Blood; and massacring all that are not of their Faith.

God, or Chance, or Fate, shall transport thee after Death, to Happy Regions, Immarcessible Joys, and an Endless Succession of Bliss. Every Atome shall find its Paradise. Thou shalt mount by Degrees to Full, Infinite and Eternal Felicity. Adieu for a time.

Paris, 20th. of the 1st. Moon, of the Year 1665.

LETTER

LETTER XX.

To Houf, his Couſin, a Merchant at Aſtracan.

WHen I reflect on thy Happineſs, in having been all thy Life at Liberty to change thy Reſidence, and ramble whither ſoever thy Fancy invited thee, and that even now at Aſtracan, thou art no longer confin'd than by thy own Pleaſure or Intereſt, I cannot forbear envying thee.

There is an inexpreſſible Delight in ranging the various Tracts of the Earth. Whereas, to be perpetually ſhut up and impriſon'd as I am, in a City ſo cloſe and high-built, that the very Winds can ſcarce find a Way into her Interiour Parts, is a perfect Hell upon Earth.

To ſpeak the Truth, Paris may be call'd a Heap or Aggregate of Cities, built one upon another, like Pelion upon Oſſa, ſince the Houſes here are as high as the Minarets at Conſtantinople, and divided like the Air into the lower, middle, and upper Regions or Apartments: Or rather like the Heavens, whoſe Number Aſtronomers aſſert to be Nine. For with ſo many Stories, do ſome Houſes, nay whole Streets in Paris, lift up their Heads; and every Story or Apartment's peopl'd like a Bee-hive.

So

So that in this Infinite Throng of Inhabitants, and ſuch as come hither about Buſineſs, we are ready to be ſtifled with one anothers Breath. Whereas, thou know'ſt, in the Cities all over the Eaſt, the Houſes are intermix'd with Gardens: They are low-built, with Terraſſes on the Top to take the cool Air on by Night, with Parterres, Kaſ-kaneys, Divans, Conſervatories, and all the other Conveniences for refreſhing the Senſes, by Water, Wind, and Odoriferous Smells.

This makes me long to be at Conſtantinople, Damaſcus, Moſul, or even at Aſtracan, where thou reſideſt, though that City want many Delights, which others enjoy. However, I ſhou'd there encounter with Tiara's and Turbants, the very Sight of which wou'd half cure my Diſcontent. May my Portion be with Tagot, if I am not tyr'd with ſeeing Nothing but theſe Hats, and Short-Coats, theſe ridiculous Franks, theſe Apes without Tails. And then to hear 'em rant againſt the Grand Signior, and all True Believers; to hear 'em blaſpheme the Meſſenger of God, curſe the Alcoran, revile the Muſti, and all the Mollahs, with a Thouſand other Impertinences, which none but ſuch Reprobates, Giaurs, and Infidels wou'd be guilty of; makes me either wiſh my ſelf Deaf, or that my Tongue were at Liberty to anſwer them. But, much rather wou'd I deſire to be in a Place, where I might enjoy my Ears, to receive the Salem from my Friends.

Friends that are Muſſulmans, and to hear the Name of God devoutly bleſs'd on any Occaſion that awakens the Senſe to Piety.

Oh that I were among my Countrymen, the Arabians, who dwell in Tents, and frolick about from Hills to Valleys, taſting by Turns the various Sweets of the Foreſt and the Plain! The Groves and Meadows, Paſtures and Arable Grounds, Cities and Villages, all contribute to their Delight. They want no Innocent Joy that the Earth can afford. Their Wealth conſiſts in the Multitude of their Sheep, Camels, Goats and Oxen. And for them is all their Care, that they may not want Graſs and Water in due Seaſon. As for themſelves, they are reſign'd to Providence.

So are the Tartars, who ſleep in Hords or Waggons; the only Cavaliers of Aſia: Whoſe Life is a perpetual Campagne, from the Cradle to the Grave. Their Labour and Eaſe are derived from the ſame Fountain; exerciſing themſelves on Horſe-back at Seven Years old; and feeding on the Milk of Mares as ſoon as they are wean'd from their Mother's Breaſts. Toil and Recreation with them are one and the ſame thing, ſince they know no other Pleaſure but what conſiſts in Riding, Fighting and Conquering; or elſe in Death, which they believe tranſlates them to new Joys, and thoſe more poignant than they knew before. Therefore they bravely court it at the Point of a Sword, or the Mouth

Mouth of a Cannon: Nothing being more ſcandalous or hateful than a Coward among them.

I proteſt, the very Idea of Palus Mæotis, and Taurica Cherſoneſus, with the Reſt of thoſe Horrible Fens and Marſhes, on the North of the Black Sea, which encompaſs the Dominions of the Tartars, affects me with a Paſſion, or rather ſuch a Medly of Paſſions, as I know not how to name. Thoſe ample Deſarts, thoſe untrack'd Solitudes, appear to my Imagination, like the Limits of this old Habitable World; and the Frontiers of ſome new, ſtrange and unknown Region; ſome Terra Incognita, where an Univerſal Deſolation and Silence keep their Seat for ever: Where no Voices are heard but thoſe of uncouth Satyrs, Fauns, and other Exotick Tenants of the Woods and Moors. No other Sound but the whiſtling and roaring of the Winds. No Proſpect but that of Trees which have appear'd from the Infancy of Time, and where thoſe are wanting, the Eye is wearied in a long, endleſs Waſte, which nothing ſeems to bound, but the declining Arch of diſtant Skies, or low, black, melancholy Clouds, skirted with Miſts and Fogs, Eternal Mantles of the Northern Climes.

This is the Figure of thoſe ſolitary Tracts where I wou'd chuſe to live, rather than in a City which ſtifles me, with too much Plenty of every Thing, but freſh Air, and honeſt People.

Iſouf, the Contrarieties which we find in Earthly Things, give a Guſt to each other. And, the moſt Magnificent Palace wou'd ſeem a Priſon, were a Man always confin'd to live in it.

Couſin, I wiſh thee perpetual Liberty, and Happineſs.

Paris, 7th. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1665.

LETTER XXI.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

AMidſt the Variety of Obligations which I have to diſcharge, I forget not to obey thy Commands. I have already in my former Diſpatches acquainted thee with the Characters, and ſome Remarkable Paſſages of Henry IV. Lewis XIII. Lewis XIV. Cardinal Richlieu, Cardinal Mazarini, and the Prince of Conde. Now I will ſay ſomething of the Famous Mareſchal de Turenne, whoſe Fame reaches whereſoever the French Wars have been talk'd of for theſe Forty Years. The Name of this great General, is Henry de la Tour d' Auvergne, Son to the Duke of Bouillon.

When

When his Father was near his Death, he call'd for both his Sons, whereof this was the youngeſt. And among other Exhortations, he recommended in a ſpecial Manner Three Things to their Practice: Never to renounce or change their Religion: Never to take up Arms againſt their Sovereign: Nor to provoke the Firſt Miniſter.

As to the Firſt, the Mareſchal de Turenne has hitherto kept it inviolably, but he has faulter'd in both the other; having revolt from his Maſter's Service during his Minority, and oppos'd the Intereſt of Cardinal Mazarini, when the Parliament perſecuted that Miniſter.

However, this hinders not but that he is a Great Souldier, and beſides he is ſince reconcil'd to the King. He ſeems to be born for Martial Affairs. And they relate of him, That when he was but Ten Years Old, and his Governour miſſing him, had ſought up and down every where for him, he at length found him faſt aſleep on a Cannon, which he ſeem'd to embrace with his little Arms as far as they wou'd reach. And when he ask'd why he choſe ſuch a Couch to lie on, he made Anſwer, That he deſign'd to have ſlept there all Night, to convince his Father that he was hardy enough to undergo the Fatigues of War, though the Old Duke had often perſwaded himſelf to the Contrary. And to ſpeak the Truth, no Man was more Careleſs of his Body than this Prince.

As

At Fourteen Years of Age he was ſent into Holland to ſerve in the Army under the Prince of Orange, who was his Uncle. There he apply'd himſelf to all the Diſcipline of War, doing the Duty of a Private Soldier: Which is the common Way that Cadets or Younger Brothers take to riſe to the moſt Eminent Offices. He was equally forward in Labours and Perils, never ſhunning any Fatigue or Hazard, which might bring him Glory, yet he was not raſh, the Common Vice of Youth, but temper'd all his Actions with an extraordinary Prudence and Solidity of Judgment, beyond what was expected from him at thoſe Years. Yet, on the other Side, his Counſels were not ſlow and Flegmatick, being of a very ready Forecaſt; and he ſeldom fail'd in his Contrivances. He was ſoon promoted to a Place of Command. And the Exactneſs of his Conduct rais'd him a vaſt Reputation, ſo that by Degrees he at laſt arriv'd to that Height of Power and Honour he now poſſeſs. He appears Indefatigable in his Body, and of an Invincible Reſolution. He hates Flatterers, that think to gain his Friendſhip by praiſing him. And is equally averſe from making Uſe of ſuch fawning Inſinuations to others, though the Greateſt Princes of the Blood, or the Firſt Miniſter himſelf.

He has alſo a certain Stedfaſtneſe of Spirit which cannot be warp'd by any Artificial Addreſſes, though made to his own apparent Advantage; if they propoſe to him any Thing that has the leaſt Semblance of what is baſe and diſhonourable. Thus he wou'd never conſent that the Honour of taking Dunkirk ſome Years ago, ſhould be aſcrib'd to Cardinal Mazarini, tho' that Miniſter privately courted him to it, offering him the Greateſt Commands in the Kingdom, if he would do him that Service; and the Mareſchal knew it might prove his Ruin, if he did not. Yet ſuch was his Integrity and Love to the Truth, that by no means would he be brought to condeſcend to this Meaneſs of Spirit: Yet, perhaps it might only proceed from the Averſion which in thoſe Days he had for the Cardinal. Many times it is evident, That a Natural Paſſion is made to paſs for a Moral Vertue. Beſides, perhaps he was unwilling to be depriv'd of the Glory due to him for that Important Service.

He is a Man of few words, and ſo ſecret in all his Counſels, that no-body knows any thing of his Deſigns, till he puts them in Execution. Every Man eſteems him the moſt Liberal Prince of this Age, having no other Regard for Money, than, as it ſerves the Neceſſities of his Family, and enables him to oblige his Friends.

In a Word, whatever Vices he may have, he is yet endu'd with ſo many Good Qualities and Vertues, that he is belov'd by all the Nation, and in Particular Favour with his Sovereign, who treats him not as a Subject, but as one of his moſt intimate Friends.

May

May God, who has rais'd up this Great Genius, to aggrandize the French Monarchy, continually supply the Grand Signior with Valiant and Expert Generals, that the Empire of the Faithful Osmans, may encrease like the Moon, but never be in its Wane, till that Planet shall no more appear in the Heavens, and the Fastning of the Elements shall be dissolv'd.

Paris, 12th. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1665.

LETTER

LETTER XXII.

To Orchan Cabet, Student of the Sciences, and Penſioner to the Grand Signior.

This Letter was written Originally in Sclavonick.

THE French King has lately receiv'd a groſs Affront from the Poets. They have often been Satyrical upon his Loves, and now they begin to burleſque upon his Money. A Day or Two ago, as he was newly riſen out of his Bed, he found on a Table in his Chamber, a Paper containing theſe Verſes.

Tu és Iſſue de Race Auguſte, Ton Ayeul eſt Henry le Grand;
Et ton Peré Lowis le Juſte, Pour Toy, tu n'és qu'un Louis
d'Argent.

Thou know'ſt where the Force of the Poet's Wit lies, having travelled in France and learned their Language. The King ſmil'd at the Reading of it, and ſeem'd to be pleas'd with the Frankneſs of the Author, ſaying, He was worth a Thouſand Flatterers. He promiſed likewiſe to give him Five Hundred Louis's for his Wit, if he would diſcover himſelf, ſelf, as alſo to pardon him on his Royal Word. But the Satyriſt would not venture himſelf, knowing that Kings have more ways than one to revenge themſelves of Private Perſons, their Subjects. However, ſince the King appear'd ſo well pleaſed with this, he was reſolv'd to give him another Touch of his Skill. And the very next Morning in the ſame Place, the King found theſe words:

Tu ne le Sçaura pas Louis,
Car j'etois ſeul quand je le fis.

There have been many Conjectures made about the Author of theſe Lampoons. Some ſay one thing, and ſome another. And there are not wanting ſuch as faſten it on a Virgin of Collen, now reſiding at this Court: Her Name is Anne Marie de Skurman. She is very Learned, and ſpeaks Arabick, Latin, Turkiſh, Greek, Italian, French and Spaniſh, as fluently as her Native Dialect. She is of a Fine Wit, and piercing Judgment in the Controverſies of Philoſophy and Religion.

There are ſeveral Epiſtles of hers in Print, ſome penn'd in Latin, others in French, addreſs'd to the Queen-Mother, Cardinal Richlieu, Cardinal Mazarini, and others; beſides a Book of Poems, moſt of them Satyrs. And 'tis this laſt gives the World ſuch a Jealouſy of her writing the Lines which were found on the King's Table. For the Criticks have compar'd 'em with her Style; and find a very near Reſemblance between them.

and

But let who will be the Author, I think the French King is wrong'd in the Character they give him. For tho' he has heap'd up great Quantities of Gold and Silver to carry on his vaſt Deſigns, yet he is no Miſer, being very Liberal to Perſons of Merit.

I ſend thee this for thy Diverſion, and in order to our Future Correſpondence. Take it for an Example, and be as Familiar with me, remembring the Old Latin Proverb, Manus manum fricat.

Paris, the 11th. of the 6th. Moon, of the Year 1665.

LETTER XXIII.

To the Captain Baſſa.

MAY thy Heart be Chearful, and thy Voyage crown'd with Succeſs, whereever thou ſaileſt, Noble Old Tarpaulin, and Favourite of the God of the Sea. The Empire of the Ottomans has not had ſo brave a Commander of the Navy theſe Thirty Years. God grant thee good Fortune againſt the Infidels, whether on the White or Black Seas. Thou art already Famous for thy Exploits on the Latter, in above Twenty Engagements with the Coſſaks, Circaſſians, and the reſt of thoſe Thieviſh Countries. But nothing has rais'd thy Character ſo high, as the laſt Combate thou hadſt with Pachicour, the Renowned Pyrate of thoſe Parts, who threatned not only his Chriſtian Neighbours, but alſo the Ottoman Empire with Infinite Ravages.

But thou haſt ſtemm'd the Tide of his Glory, humbled the Maritine People his Confederates, and by that means made thy ſelf a way into the Archipelago and Mediterranean, where thou rideſt as another Neptune, King of the Waters.

Take not this for Flattery; for I tell thee, I have not ſaid ſo much to a Baſſa of the Sea theſe Seven and Twenty Years: Neither indeed deed had I any Reaſon. He that merited the moſt Applauſe in all that Time, was the Brave Zorneſan Muſtapha. And I addreſs'd no more to him than his due. Fortune did not favour him, or elſe he had done great things. As for the Reſt, they were generally Men never bred to Sea-Affairs, but Miniors of the Court, or Bullies of the City, who were better at making a Noiſe, than at any Action of Hazard or Importance. And there were ſome Bold Renegadoes, but they play'd faſt and looſe, and no body knew where to have 'em.

Treachery infects the whole World; but in theſe Weſtern Parts it reigns as in its Center. Here's nothing but Undermining and Ambuſhes: One State trepanning another out of their Guards, and then they play their own Game.

It would be endleſs to acquaint thee with the Original of the Quarrel between the Engliſh and the Dutch. Let it be enough for thee to know, that theſe People are at odds now: And in Regard the Strength of both Nations lies in their Shipping, they are preparing to cover the Northern Seas with Navies: But the Iſlanders ſtill get the beſt on't. They claim the Sovereignty of thoſe Seas, and in my Opinion they deſerve it. I ſpeak according to my Intelligence; being aſſur'd. that no Nation ever prevail'd againſt 'em on that Element.

They have had a terrible Fight this Summer, wherein the Dutch loſt Seventeen Ships of War, beſides Veſſels of ſmaller Note. The Commander of the Engliſh Fleet is call'd the Duke of York, a Great General, and Brother to the Engliſh King. His Name was famous in France and Flanders, during the Spaniſh War. And tho the Land afforded him no farther Occaſions of Glory, yet he has found ſome in the Sea. Opdam, the Greateſt Admiral that ever the Dutch could boaſt of, fell a Sacrifice to his Genius.

I am the more Particular in this Relation, becauſe it is fit thou ſhould'ſt know the Characters of all the Brave Heroes living.

Since this Fight, the King of France has ſent an Embaſſador to the Engliſh Court to mediate a Peace. What Iſſue his Negotiation will have, is of no great Import to us, who ſerve the Grand Signior, Sole Lord of the Four Seas: But I will tell thee ſomething which it concerns thee to know.

The King of France is a going to cut a Canal through Part of his Kingdom, by which the Mediterranean may be joyn'd to the Main Sea. This is a vaſt Deſign, and much diſcours'd of in Europe, being a Parallel to what has been formerly attempted by ſome Kings of Egypt, and Emperours of Rome, to joyn the Mediterranean and Red Sea together, for the ſake of an eaſier Traffick to the Eaſt-Indies.

Thou oughteſt alſo to be inform'd of the Duke of Beaufort's Exploits on the Coaſts of Barbary. He is Commander of the French Navy in thoſe Seas, and has done great Injuries juries to the People of Algier, Sarcelle, Bougie, and other Ports.

Tho' these Rebels are deservedly punish'd for deserting the Protection of the High Port, yet let us remember, that the Algerines are Mussulmans, and therefore ought not to be abandon'd to the Malice of Infidels.

Mighty Bassa, sail thou in the Strength of God against the Enemies of the Ottoman Empire. And when thou hast finish'd thy Voyage here below, may a Wind of Mercy waft thee o'er the Waters which are above the Firmament, and land thee safe in one of the Ports of Paradise.

Paris, 3d. of the 9th. Moon,
of the Year 1665.

The End of the Third Book.

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. VI.

BOOK IV.

LETTER I.

To Achmet Beig.

THIS Court has put on the Exteriour Semblance of Mourning, whilst they inwardly rejoyce, at the Death of Philip IV. King of Spain. He deceas'd on the 17th. of the 9th. Moon. 'Tis possible their Grief is more real for the Death of the Duke of Vendosme, a Prince of Royal Extraction, and whilst living not far remov'd from a possibility of inheriting the Crown of France. But now he is gone to the Grave, the General Receptacle of all Mortals, and which makes no Diſtinction between the Noble and the Vulgar.

There have been Abundance of Ceremonies perform'd on the Part of the King, the Dauphin, the Duke of Orleans, the Duke of Valois, and other Princes of the Blood, for the Health of the Departed Soul: For the Nazarenes, to give them their due, fall not ſhort of the True Faithful in believing the Reſurrection and Immortality to come. They conſign the Bodies of the Dead to their Sepulchres, with ſolemn Rites of Religion, perfuming them with Incenſe, and ſprinkling them with Holy Water: Rehearſing alſo certain Sacred Hymns and Prayers appointed for that Purpoſe. Neither do they neglect to Faſt, and give Alms, to perform any Pious Office which is practis'd by the Muſſulmans, for their Friends who are gone to the Inviſible State. They agree with us in Abundance of good things, and if they mix ſome Superſtitions and Errors, let us pity their Weakneſs, and praiſe God who guides us into the Right Way, and ſuffers us not to be ſeduced into the Way of Infidels. He is the Merciful of the Merciful, the Joy of the Elect, and the Hope of all Nations. Should he puniſh Men according to their Hourly Demerits, the Earth would ſoon be depopulated, and void of any other Inhabitants ſave the Beaſts. But he knows our Mold, and remembers that we are no more than a mere Froth or Spume of the Elements, Elements, and that in a very little time, by the Courſe of Nature, we ſhall vaniſh like Bubbles which yield to every Blaſt of Wind. Therefore he ſpares us, and connives at our Infirmities, becauſe he is the Lover of Souls.

I ſpeak this as an Incentive to Charity among our ſelves, and to our Fellow-Mortals. It ſeems to me unreaſonable, that we ſhould purſue with Inexorable Hatred all the Followers of Jeſus. He was a Holy Prophet, humble, mild, chaſte, and harmleſs. He did many Good Works himſelf, and commanded his Diſciples to imitate his Example. He rebuk'd thoſe amongſt them, that would have call'd down Fire from Heaven to conſume his Enemies: Enjoyning them to return Bleſſings for Curſes, Prayers for Blaſphemies, and Good for Evil. There are thoſe amongſt them, who obey his Precepts: As for the Wicked, I am not their Advocate. If the Greateſt Part of the Chriſtians live contrary to the Law of the Meſſias, let us conſider alſo how many Hypocrites, Libertines, Hereticks and Atheiſts there are among thoſe who profeſs the Muſſulman Faith. Doubtleſs, there are Good and Bad of all Religions. And 'tis impoſſible to find an Aſſembly of Juſt Men, without a Mixture of Sinners.

As for our Difference with the People of Jeſus, in Matters of Worſhip, it ought not to make us forget that we are Men, compounded of the ſame Fleſh and Blood as they. And for ought we know, God who made all the

the Nations of the Earth, may accept of their various Rites and Ceremonies in paying him Divine Adoration.

We that are the Posterity of Ismael, and worship the Eternal after the manner of our Fathers, who followed the Pattern of Ibrahim the Beloved of God, cannot deny but that the Law of Moses was of Divine Original: And yet it contains Precepts and Injunctions, to which we are wholly Strangers in our Practice; tho' the Jews, who are the Descendents of Jacob, obey them to this Day.

So we believe what the Alcoran says of the Messias, That he is the Breath and Word of God; That he heal'd Diseases, rais'd the Dead, wrought many other Miracles, and preach'd the true Heavenly Doctrin. Yet there's abundance of Difference between the Ceremonies which the very Apostles us'd in the Service of God, and the Worship establish'd by Mahomet our Holy Lawgiver. But he tells us, That they who live up to the Law of Jesus, shall go to Paradise as well as the Mussulmans.

The greatest Scandal which the Christians give us, is their Setting up Pictures and Images in their Temples, and the Reverence they pay to those Insensible Pieces of Humane Art. And yet for ought we know, they may be excusable before God; since they profess openly in the Publick Decrees of their Councils, That the Veneration and Honour they pay to the Figures of Saints and Angels, is only Relative, their Devotion at the ſame Time reſting not on this ſide the Prototypes.

is

If this be true, I ſee no more Hurt in their Worſhip of Images, than in Bowing and Proſtrating before the Alcoran, which is but another Sort of Imagery repreſenting the Divine Will.

In a word, if the Hieroglyphicks of the Ancient Egyptians are allow'd to be Lawful Letters, and Inſtruments to expreſs the Inward Conceptions of the Mind; in my Opinion, the Painting and Sculpture which we ſee in the Churches of the Chriſtians, ought not to be condemn'd as an Idolotrous Practice, when 'tis only us'd as an eaſier way to convey the Hiſtory of Jeſus, and the reſt of the Prophets and Saints, to the Vulgar, who are generally Ignorant of Letters. Unleſs we ſhall ſay, That the Son of Mary was an Idol, and the Prophets and Saints were Devils; which God avert from the Mouth of a True Believer.

Paris, 13th. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year 1665.

LET-

LETTER II.

To William Voſpel, a Recluſe of Auſtria.

THY Diſpatch came to my Hands, in a good Hour. I perus'd with Reverence the Paternal Inſtructions it contained; the Grave and Judicious Apothegms; the Sacred Rules and Inſtitutions of a Regular and Spiritual Life; the Morals more refin'd than thoſe of Pindar, Epictetus, Seneca or Cato. But pardon me, if I reliſh not ſo well thy Panegyrick on ſome of the newly Canoniz'd Saints; from which you take Occaſion to extol the the Pope's Infallibility, and to exclude from Salvation, all that are not within the Pale of the Roman Church.

I am a Chriſtian and a Chatholick as well as you. I honour the Apoſtles and Martyrs, with all the Primitive Saints, Confeſſors and Holy Doctors of the Church. But I can never be perſwaded, that a Man for being a Murderer, Traytor, an Inventor of Cruel Devices, or a learned Sycophant, can merit Heaven, tho' he may be rank'd in the Red Lines of the Calendar. Much leſs can I believe, that all Men ſhall be Damn'd, who are not in Communion with the Biſhop of Rome. Certainly the the Catholick or Universal Church, is not shut up within the Narrow Confines of the shatter'd Roman Empire. Consider Greece, Armenia, Egypt, Moscovy, Æthiopia, and all the Spacious Territories of Europe, and the East. How many Millions daily say the Pater-Noster, and pray in Jesus's Name, yet never paid Obedience to any but their own Patriarchs and Bishops? Were not all the Apostles equally in Commission; were not the Churches they founded and establish'd, equally Holy, and Orthodox? Where then commenc'd the Mighty Schism, but in the morose Pride of Victor, who, (for the Sake of Paschal Niceties) affronted all the Churches in the World, and was for that Reason severely reprov'd by a French Bishop of his own Obedience; besides the Reprimands of Polycarp, and other Prelates of the East? Was not St. John the Beloved, that rested his Head with Divine Honour on the Breast of Christ, as privy to the Laws of his Master, as Peter, Paul, or any other Abortive Apostle? Remember the First General Council at Jerusalem, where James the Brother of our Lord sate President, decreeing Abstinences exactly opposite to the present Roman Faith and Practice. And believe at the same time, that 'twas Imperial Vanity and Pride, which first begot the Fatal Separation. Heresy was but the Bastard of the Apostolick Canons, cherish'd, and too much countenanc'd, by Constantine and his Successors, till the Fatal Time of Phocas, cas, whoſe untimely Death made all things ripe for the intended Uſurpation. Oh! Guicciardine! How truly haſt thou writ the State of Modern Rome! Worthy as Horace of Eternal Honour. Thy Faithful Proſe equals his Courtly Verſe, and merits New Auguſtus's to Patronize it.

Believe me, Father William, I have no Spight or Enmity againſt the Roman High-Prieſt. I reverence him equally with his Brethren, the Patriarchs of Conſtantinople, Jeruſalem, Alexandria, and Antioch. I would go beyond this, for the ſake of Conformity to Ancient Cuſtom, and in Obedience to the Celebrated Council of Nice: I would willingly acknowledge him the Primate of the World. Let him have the firſt Place, in God's Name, among the Patriarchs of the Univerſal Church. But let him not ride on the Necks of his Equals. Let him not pretend a Power to cancel the Apoſtolick Canons; reverſe the Traditions of the Fathers; repeal the Decrees of General Councils; diſpenſe with the Laws of Nature, Grace, Reaſon, Morality, and the very Inſtitutions of his Predeceſſors, Men, without Queſtion, as Infallible as he. This is not the way to make Proſelytes to the Roman Faith, unleſs it be of Fools and Knaves. The World has receiv'd New Lights, Father William; and Men begin to hiſs Religious Bantering off the Stage. Nay even they who are moſt guilty of it, I mean the Roman Courtiers, Cardinals, nals and Prieſts, cannot forbear laughing at the Folly, and Credulous Eaſineſs of thoſe, on whom they impoſe their Pious Frauds. The bigotted Laity are by them eſteemed no better than ſilly Aſſes, tamely couching under the Burdens of their Eccleſiaſtick Lords and Drivers.

Therefore 'tis time for thee to open thy Eyes, lift up thy Head, and lay aſide Monaſtick Simplicity. I do not Counſel thee to turn Libertine, or imitate the Italian Gallantry, which has taught the Prieſts, inſtead of Sacred Continence, to ſquint a Benediction on ſome Charming Lady from the Altar, in the Name of Dominus Vobiſcum, or Surſum Corda; even whilſt they are preparing for Divine Revels, to banquet on the Fleſh and Blood of God. Oh! Monſtrous Perfidy and Execrable Profaneneſs! Nor if thou art affronted and revengeful, would I adviſe thee to time the Execution of thy Wrath like the Sicilian Veſpers, and make the Bells become the Signals of thy Cruelty; which ought and were deſign'd and conſecrated on purpoſe, to drill on Harmleſs Souls to Church, with their dull, ſleepy, jangling Chimes; and with their more Triumphant, Lofty Muſick, on the Feſtivals of Saints, to make devouter Chriſtians dream they're going to Heaven, inſtead of to a Maſſacre. I would not have thee hope to merit Paradiſe, by ſending thither in Obedience to the Pope, or General of thy Order, the Majeſtick Souls of Kings or Emperors, Emperors, in Vehicles of Sacred Poyſon, or Envenom'd Euchariſts. Believe that thoſe Prelates, Prieſts, or Monks, who are thus Divinely Profane, and Mercifully Cruel, ſhall become Mitered, Veſted, Cowled Monſters, in the fierceſt and moſt violently glowing Dens of Hell; there with the moſt exalted Arſenicks, Mercuries, and whatſoever gives the higheſt Pains, to languiſh, pine, and rack away Ten Thouſand, Thouſand, Thouſand Ages, in Penances of ſlow Effect; which expiate but very late, the crying Sins of guilty Murderers, and Bloody Hypocrites.

Yet ſuch as theſe, ſince Modern Times, are the only Men thought worthy to be Canonized for Saints, which made a certain Honeſt Cardinal cry out in Preſence of the Pope, Theſe New Saints, force me to doubt the Old ones.

Father William, the ſame Thought begins and ends my Letter. Yours was upon the ſtretch, extolling far too high the Largeneſs of the Roman Church, the Infallible Power of Popes, the Miracles of theſe New Saints, &c. And I for my Part, am a Man abhorring Bigotry. I cannot believe things contrary to my Reaſon. I wiſh the Differences of Mankind in Point of Religion, were rationally compos'd; and that the Good of all Sects, Factions, Parties, Churches and Communions, were united in this Life, as they ſurely will be in the next.

In

In the mean time, to the Father without Beginning; to the Son without a Younger Brother; to the Holy Ghoſt, the Firſt and the Laſt; to the Virgin Mary, the Mother of the Entire Deity, I recommend thee and all good Chriſtians, hoping to ſee you in Heaven, tho' we cannot it ſeems think alike on Earth.

Paris, 1ſt. of the 12th. Moon,
of the Year 1665.

LETTER

LETTER III.

To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna.

ACcording to thy Desire, I have procur'd and sent thee the Alcoran, with other Writings of our Holy Doctors; Books which will conduct thee into the Right Way. Thou wilt find in these Volumes, a Spirit of Life and Power. There breathes in them a certain Vital Principle of Reason; so that whosoever reads them attentively, may feel (if I may so speak) the very Pulse of intellectual Wisdom, beating in every Sentence.

There is a vast Difference between these Writings, full of Arguments Clear and Intelligible; and the Whimsies of thy Rabbi's, who abound in Sacred Fables and Divine Romances.

Who can peruse your Celebrated Misna without Disdain? Or look into your more applauded Talmud, and not feel himself touch'd with Horrour, at the Monstrous Blasphemies and Ridiculous Forgeries therein contain'd? Dost thou not laugh at the Story of God's pickling up the Leviathan till the Days of the Messiah; and that other of the Bull which daily devours the Fodder of a Thou-a Thouſand Mountains? Or wilt thou ſhew me the Neſt of that Bird from whence the Talmud ſays, an Egg falling on the Earth, threw down Three Hundred tall Cedars with its Weight and at Length breaking, overflow'd Sixty Villages with the Liquid Subſtance included in the Shell?

Such as theſe, muſt needs be fit Themes for the Contemplations of the Omnipotent: And yet your Rabbi's teach, that God ſtudies Nine Hours of the Day in the Talmud. Can any Man of common Piety, hear theſe Blaſphemies and not tremble? What Affronts are theſe to Humane Senſe? What Impoſitions on the Reaſon of the Credulous Jews? Does the moſt perfect of all Beings acquire Knowledge by Degrees, or is the Eternal Intellect improv'd by reading of Books? Or if it were ſo, would he not make a better Choice than of a Volume, which in the Incredible Stories it relates, exceeds all the Figments of the Poets?

Tell me, Nathan, canſt thou ſwallow that loud Lye of the Talmud, which tells thee, That there was a Lyon, who when he roar'd at the Diſtance of Four Hundred Miles from Rome, all the Women that were with Child in that City, being affrighted at the Noiſe, miſcarry'd, and the Walls of Rome fell down? And when he drew nearer by a Hundred Miles, he ſet up his Throat again, which made ſo terrible a Sound, that all the Roman's Teeth fell out of their Heads, and the Emperour himſelf felt ſuch Convulſions, ſions, as had well-nigh coſt him his Life.

Surely the Crow which the Talmud ſpeaks of in another Place, was but a Puny to this Monſtrous Lyon; and yet it ſeems, that Crow ſwallow'd a Serpent that had eaten a Frog as big as a Village of Threeſcore Houſes, and when he had done flew into the next Tree. I ſuppoſe, that was the Tree which grew in Paradiſe, and was Five Hundred Miles high, according to the Talmud. Have I not Reaſon for this Raillery, when one of your Rabbi's ſolemnly ſwears, he was an Eye-Witneſs of theſe Things? Who can forbear to ridicule the Bigotry of thoſe, who give up their Faith to ſuch Deluſions?

Thou wilt meet with more Rational Entertainment in the Books of the Muſſulman Doctors; more eſpecially, in that Tranſcript thou haſt of the Volume firſt dictated in Heaven. That confirms the true Law of Moſes, but damns the Impoſtures of the Talmud, attributing the Invention of ſuch Errors to the Devil.

But thou wilt ask me, perhaps, what I mean by the True Law of Moſes. Shall I tell thee the Opinion of one of thy own Nation, a Hebrew of the Hebrews, as he pretends; and for ought I know, of the ſame Tribe with thy ſelf: For I am a Stranger to the Genealogies of you both.

Some Years ago here was in this City, a Man who if we may believe him, has been in all the Cities of the World, The French call call him the Wandring Jew; and he confirmed that Title, by the Profeſſion he made of his Birth, Deſcent, and Univerſal Travels. No doubt but thou haſt heard of this Man, or at leaſt of ſuch a Character, and therefore I need not repeat what he ſaid of himſelf, and what the Generality of Mankind believe of him. Suffice it to tell thee, that I was once in his Company half a Day together; when among other Diſcourſes, he told me, That the true Law of Moſes has been loſt for above theſe Two Thouſand Years, except in the North Parts of Aſia, where there are an Infinite Number of Hebrews, but far different in their Religion from all the Jews in the reſt of the World. He ſays, the Country where they Inhabit, is environ'd round with High and Inacceſſible Mountains. I aſk'd him the exact Geographical Situation of this Country; but receiv'd no other Anſwer, than that it lay beyond the River Sabbation. Then I remembred what I had read in Eſdras, a Scribe of thy Nation, concerning the Tranſmigration of the Ten Tribes, who were carried away Captives by the Aſſyrians: How they paſs'd through a certain River on dry Ground, the Waters being divided to the Right Hand and to the Left, and that after the ſame manner they ſhould return again in the Latter Days; But that in the mean time the Region where they live, was hidden from all other Mortals.

Comparing this Paſſage with what I had heard from the Wandring Jew, I became almoſt moſt perſwaded, That the People and Country of which he ſpoke, were the very ſame mention'd by Eſdras. God only can diſcern the Truth from Error in Hiſtories of ſo remote and Ancient a Subject.

As to their Religion, I was juſt going to give thee an Account of what he ſaid concerning it, but am interrupted by Company. Wherefore I am forc'd to break off abruptly. Expect a full Relation in my next. I am in haſte.

Paris, 4th. of the 1ſt. Moon,
of the Year 1666.

LETTER

LETTER IV.

To the ſame.

THE Interruption which made me ſo ſuddenly conclude my other Letter, laſted not long; ſo that I have time enough to perform my Promiſe by the ſame Poſt.

I was about to relate what the Wandring Jew told me of the Religion of thoſe Remote Hebrews in Aſia, which take as follows.

He ſays, they are a Nation of Philoſophers, bound by their Laws to Study the Liberal Arts and Sciences. They have none but Iron Mony current among them; the Uſe of Gold and Silver Coins being expreſly forbidden by their Laws to prevent the Temptations of Avarice and Theft: For who would ſteal or covet a Metal, which for its Bulk was not eaſy to be hid, nor for its Beauty very deſirable, being every where common in the Veins of the Earth and ſerv'd only as a Method of Barter and Commerce among themſelves, where the Inequality of Merchandiſes entangled their Traffick, and would not admit of a ready Exchange?

This took from them the Occaſion of many unneceſſary Arts at Home, and they had no Temptation to travel abroad; The Chief Deſign of their Lawgiver being to oblige them to ſpend moſt of their time in Religious and Philoſophical Exerciſes, and the reſt in preparing Neceſſaries for humane Suſtenance. They had no Need to buy any thing of Foreign Countries, or to build Ships for that End, who were bound to live content with the Natural Product of their own Fertile Country: For Luxury has not as yet ſet Footing in that happy Region, if we may believe this Traveller. He ſays, they feed altogether on the Fruits of the Earth; not admitting any Art or Employment which tends to ſuperfluity; but only ſuch as ſerve the neceſſary Uſes of Life, wherein they ſhew an admirable Dexterity and Skill.

When they travel from one Town to another, which is very frequent, they never carry any thing to defray their Charges by the Way, or when they arrive at their Journeys End: All Entertainments of this Nature being free and reciprocal. Such is the Cuſtom of the Country.

They have no Lawyers among them, but if any Contention ariſe, 'tis preſently determin'd by the Arbitration of the next Neighbours, to whoſe Sentence all ſubmit: Every Man being willing to loſe ſomething of his Right, rather than diſturb the Publick Amity and Peace.

As to the manner of their Worſhip, they are ſtrict Obſervers of Purity in waſhing, anointing, and ſhaving their Bodies.

They have Temples alſo where they aſſemble every Seventh Day, and having offer'd up up the First-Fruits of the Earth, they sit down in the Courts, and Banquet together with Joy, whilst the Priests entertain them with excellent Musick, and Songs, in Praise of God and his Works. To this End the Courts of their Temples are made very large, that they may contain so many distinct Families; and stately Pavillions are set up, adorn'd with the Boughs of Green Trees, with all manner of Flowers carelessly intermix'd. But amidst all their Feasting they are not permitted to taste of Flesh. They eat only the Fruits of the Earth with Milk, Honey and Oyl. And their common Drink is Water and Wine.

At the Age of Sixteen Years, every Man is bound to take the following Oath:

"I swear that I will adore but One God, "who brought our Fathers out of Egypt, "and has conducted us by a Mysterious Path "to this Land of Promise. I will Religiously serve him all my Life, for that he has "vouchsafed to plant me in the Family of his "Elect, and not either of the Two Tribes "who were left behind in the Land of Delusions. I will do Justly to all Men, neither will I voluntarily hurt or kill any "Living Creature, unless it be in my own "Defence. I will not taste of the Flesh of "any Animal, but in all things observe the "Abstinence commanded by Allah to Moses "on the Mount. I will Religiously obey "my Prince, to my last Breath, and rather "be torn in Pieces by wild Beasts than be"tray him, or consent to betray him to another: For he is the Vice-Roy of God. I "will never conceal my Knowledge of any "Conspiracy against him, or my Country, "neither will I discover his Secrets to any, "if it should ever be my Honour to know "them. I will observe the Traditions of my "Fathers, and teach the same and no other "to my Posterity. In fine, I will in all "things obey the Laws of this Sacred King-"dom, this Region of Peace, this Garden of "Bliss. All this I solemnly swear by the "First Father of Light, and by Nothing the "Profound Womb of Darkness, and by Si-"lence the Companion of that Depth which "no Created Being can fathom, which is the "same as if I should wish my self annihilated, if I violate this Oath in the least "Point.

These are all the Terms of the Oath, that I can distinctly remember, which I here insert to shew thee what Opinion these People have of the Law which was given to Moses on the Mount, and how they reject the Two Tribes that were left in Palestine, and esteem of that Country but as the Land of Delusions; accounting their own Country the Region of Promise, and themselves the Elect of God.

One would think, that these were the Posterity of the Ten Tribes that were carried away Captives by Salmanasar King of Assyria. And this was also the Opinion of that Wanderer, who told me, that both their Pentateuch was different from yours, and the Language

Language wherein it is written. For he ſaid, it was rather a Dialect of Arabick, in which Language thou know'ſt God wrote the Ten Commandments on the Two Tables: Among which one is, Thou ſhalt not Kill. This Prohibition they ſay, extends to all Living Creatures, tho' your Doctors interpret it as only reaching to Men, and ſo do the Chriſtians. But the Muſſulmans interpret it thus, Thou ſhalt neither kill Man nor Beaſt without Reaſon. By which Clauſe, the Beaſts are priviledg'd from the wanton Cruelty of Men, who otherwiſe would murder them only to make Sport; yet wicked Men are not exempted from a violent Death, as a Puniſhment of their Crimes.

This Traveller ſays alſo, that the People of that Country are ſo healthy that they generally live till they are a Hundred and Twenty Years old, which is almoſt twice the Age of other Mortals. This he aſcribes to their exquiſite Temperance and Moderation in all things, as alſo to the Dryneſs of the Soil, and to the Force of certain Winds, which continually ſweep the Air of this delectable Region, and purge it of all hurtful Qualities.

If ever it be thy Fortune to ſee this Perſon, he will acquaint thee with a great many more delightful Paſſages, which it would be too tedious for me to inſert in a Letter. Beſides, my Memory is treacherous, and I often forget thoſe things at one time, which I remember at another: But if thou art ſollicitous to hear more, I will oblige thee with all that I can call to mind of this Traveller in another Letter.

In the mean time, make a right Uſe of theſe Hints, and weigh one thing with another; examine all things without Prejudice or Partiality. Truſt no Man's Reaſon but thy own in Matters of a diſputable Nature, ſince thou haſt as much right to decide the Controverſy, as any Man. And thus thou wilt never become a Bankrupt in Religion.

Paris, the 4th, of the 1ſt. Moon, of the Year 1666

LET-

LETTER V.

To Mohammed Hadgi, Dervich, Eremit of Mount Uriel in Arabia, the Happy.

AS I think, this is the laſt of my Hours in this World, and the Firſt of a New Life, which I ſhall commence in Immortality. I perceive, That the Fatal Period, the Moment of Tranſmigration, ſet by Deſtiny, is approaching. The Craſis of my Blood is diſſolving apace, my Spirit haſtens to get looſe from theſe Mortal Chains: I feel my Soul trying and ſtretching her Wings, preparing to take her Eternal Flight to the Region aſſign'd her by God and Nature.

I have not Preſumption enough to hope for Paradiſe, nor am I ſo abandon'd to Deſpair as to conclude I ſhall go to Hell. I rather believe, Aaraf, or the Place of Priſons, will be my Portion; in Regard I fear the Evils which I have been guilty of, are not over-balanc'd by my Good Actions. 'Tis well if Vertue has counterpois'd Vice in the Courſe of this Mortal Life. However, I am reſign'd, and commit my ſelf to the Indulgent Creator of All Things, who will not fail to diſpoſe of me according to the Order which he has eſtabliſh'd in the Univerſe.

Methinks were I even in Hell, I cou'd not forbear praising that Fountain of all Things. I wou'd teach the Devils and Damn'd a new Lesson of Patience and Contentedness, of Humility and Devotion, of Generosity and Love, amidst their Tremendous Torments. I wou'd survey with an Indifference becoming a True Believer, the Horrid Abyss, with all its dreadful Vaults and Apartments. I wou'd consider the Wonderful Architecture of those Infernal Prisons, the inexpugnable Strength of the Walls; their Prodigious Thickness and unmoveable Fastness; I wou'd contemplate every Thing with the Reason of a Philosopher, and the Piety of a Mussulman, not giving my self up to the Passions of a Fool, and an Infidel.

All this I imagine were easy to perform in those Fatal Caverns and much more, but God knows how the Experience of such an Intolerable Anguish and Restraint, might alter a Man's Mind.

However, I find it Medicinal to think of the last and worst Things, to be always prepar'd for Death, and whatsoever shall follow it; For, Surprizes are apt to unman us, and plunder us of our Reason. I was in the Heighth of a violent Fever, when I began this Letter; yet now 'tis abated, and I palpably feel the gentle Returns of Health and Life. This is owing, in my Judgment, to the real Belief I had, that my last Hour was come, which I have so long expected. And I cou'd almost perswade my self, ſelf, That I ſhall diſperſe a Thouſand Maladies, recover out of the moſt dangerous Paroxyſms, and prolong my Days to Old Age, by the mere Force of theſe Contemplations.

My Faith in this Point is grounded on Experience: For, I have often found, That to be arm'd againſt Calamities with an even Mind, is either a ſure Way to avoid them, or at leaſt to protract the Seaſon of their Arrival. And, if there were nothing elſe in't, but the rendring 'em more eaſy when they come, 'twere worth any Man's Pains to try the Experiment.

Doubtleſs, there is no Terrour in Death, but what the vain Opinion of Men creates. Tis as pleaſant for a Thinking Man to die as to live, if it be only for this Reaſon, that in his Paſſage from the Life he has lead before, he ſhall not have bare naked Idea's for his Contemplation; but Matter of Fact, and the moſt Important, that ever employ'd the Souls of Men.

O Admirable Sylvan, conſider with thy ſelf, whether it will not be highly grateful to thy languiſhing Soul, when thou ſhalt perceive demonſtratively, by the Infallible Enthymema's of thy trembling Pulſe, that thou art juſt ready to be releas'd from the deceitful Sophiſtry of Humane Life! That thou art near eſcaping from a narrow Cage to be upon the Wing at large, to fly into the Ample Fields of Beauty, Light and Endleſs Happineſs: Reflect alſo at the ſame

Time, O Holy Eremite, that I ſhou'd think it no Pain to be freed from my Confinement to a ſtinking Neſt of Infidels.

But why ſhou'd I give them that Reproachful Epithet, when for ought I know, I am a greater Infidel my ſelf? 'Tis true indeed, I am of the Lineage of Ibrahim, Iſmael, and the Holy Race; I bear in my Body the Seas of a Divine League or Covenant between God and Man; I was circumcis'd in due Time, and gave Supreme Glory to One God, and Honour to Mahomet his Meſſenger. I pronounc'd the Seven Myſterious Words, whoſe Sound excites the Harmony of the Spheres, ſets the Angels a dancing, puts all Nature into Motion, and makes the Devil as deaf as a Beetle. Nay, as our Holy Doctors teach, the very Breath with which that Sacred Confeſſion is utter'd, blows the Aſhes of Hell into the Eyes of the Damn'd, and ſtrikes 'em blind. In a Word, I have faſted, pray'd, given Alms, and perform'd all the External Duties of a True Believer, yet I have Reaſon to fear, that the beſt of my pious Actions are not ſufficient to cancel my Sins. My Practice runs counter to my Faith, there ſeems to be a double Spirit in me, one inclining me to Good, and the other forcing me to Evil. For, whilſt I really in my Heart believe the Alcoran and obey Mahomet, our Holy Lawgiver, I am compell'd to deny both, to profeſs the Life and Manners of a Nazarene, to counterfeit an Infidel, and do a Thouſand

other

other ill things, to pleaſe the Grand Signior and his Slaves Thus I play faſt and looſe with God Almighty; and turn Religion into Croſs Purpoſes. Yet Heaven knows, and I obteſt all the Elements to Witneſs, that I wou'd fain be Innocent, and live in unblemiſh'd Vertue: But the Fatal Neceſſities I lie under, conſtrain me to a perpetual Courſe of Vice. Which makes me ſometimes cry out in the Agonies of my Soul, O God! I pray thee, either to alter my Circumſtances, and reform my Nature, or make new Laws more eaſy to be kept.

Venerable and Patient Solitary, bear with my importunate Complaints; and remember that though thou art as an Angel for thy Perfections, yet Mahmut is but a Man, ſubject to a Thouſand Frailties. Pity him and continue to afford him thy Sage Counſel; reſt alſo aſſur'd, that amongſt all his Infirmities, he ſtill retains an Inviolable Affection, and Dutiful Regard for the Tenant of God's Prophet.

Paris, 22d. of the 2d. Moon, of the Year 1666.

LET TER

LETTER VI.

To the Kaimacham.

THou mayſt report it to the Divan for a Certainty, That Mirammud the Son of the Xariph of Salle, is taken Priſoner by the French. That bold Youth has long rov'd the Seas uncontroul'd; has done many Injuries to the Chriſtians, fill'd Salle with Slaves: Now he himſelf is become a Captive. Such is the Fortune of War by Sea and Land; to Day Triumphant and Victorious, to Morrow Vanquiſh'd and in Chains.

Yet he loſt not his Honour with his Liberty, having bravely defended his Veſſel, and ſtrew'd the Decks with ſlaughter'd French; till overpower'd with Numbers, he was compell'd to yield: His Enemies extol his Courage, and the Greatneſs of his Mind, which would not ſink under the Preſſure of this Misfortune. He ſeem'd to have the Command of himſelf, (which is the moſt Glorious Victory) and ſuffer'd not his Free-born Soul, to be led Captive by his Paſſions; but behav'd himſelf with ſuch an even Temper, as plac'd him above the Pity of his Enemies, and rather made him the Subject of their Emulation. He is brought to the Court, where he is entertain'd as a Gueſt, rather rather than as a Priſoner: Being invited to their Banquets, Masks, Plays, and other Divertiſements. Neither is he debarr'd the Privilege of Hunting, which might give him the faireſt Opportunity to eſcape. But he is ignorant of the Language of this Country; and few of the French underſtand Moreſco: So that it is almoſt impoſſible for him to make any Party, or conſult his Flight, unleſs the King's Interpreter ſhould aſſiſt him. Beſides, the French have a higher Opinion of his Generoſity, than to apprehend ſuch an Ingrateful Return of the Royal Uſage he finds in this Court.

As for Mahmut, he has not as yet made himſelf known to this Brave Captive. But if the Miniſters of the Divan ſhall think it the Intereſt or Honour of the Sublime Port to engage in this Affair, I want but a Commiſſion to ſet Mirammud ſafe aſhore in Africk.

I will not hazard any thing in an Affair of this Importance, without an Order from my Superiours. When their Pleaſure is once known, the Execution ſhall be ſwift. I wait for thy Commands, as for a Decree of Deſtiny, which cannot be repeal'd.

The God of our Fathers, who multiply'd the Seed of Iſmael as the Graſs of the Field, and gave them the Sovereignty over many Nations; grant that the Sublime Port, which is the Nurſery of the Faithful, may always always take ſuch Meaſures as ſhall advance the Intereſt of the Muſſulman Empire.

Paris, 14th. of the 3d. Moon, of the Year 1666.

LETTER VII.

To Hamel Muladdin, Xariph of Salle.

THY Son is no longer a Captive, but a Conquerour: His firſt Appearance before the Ladies of this Court was an Equivalent to his Ranſom. He is like to do thee greater Service by his Chains, than when he rang'd the Seas. His Beauty may do more Miſchief in France, than all thy Ships of War; ſince it has already created ſuch Rivalſhips and Factions among the Fair Sex, as engages the French Gallants on many unhappy Rencounters; and in a little time it will be difficult for the Intereſſed Sparks, to meet and part with unſheath'd Swords. Libels and Panegyricks, divide the Studies of the Wits; while one flatters, another Lampoons the Amorous Females; and Mirammud the Illuſtrious Slave, is all the Talk. In a word, he finds Royal Uſage, having the Liberty of the Court;

Court; and all are pleas'd with his graceful Deportment, and undiſguiz'd Converſation. Every one affects his Company, and he has the Fate of Princes, Never to be alone. His Skill in riding, and throwing the Lance, has enflam'd the Noble Youth with Martial Emulations: They eſteem Mirammud the moſt accompliſh'd Perſon of this Age.

Canſt thou now repine at thy Son's Glorious Thraldom? A Captivity, that loads him with ſo many Honours? That lays his Conquerours at his Feet? And ſubdues all Hearts to his Matchleſs Perfections? His Followers find Friendſhip among the Infidels for his ſake: 'Twere to be wiſh'd, that equal Humanity were ſhew'd to the Chriſtian Slaves in Barbary. I tell thee, thy Son is ſo admir'd and lov'd, that all thy Treaſure will not redeem him. The French are generous, and ſcorn to ſell the Brave for Gold. They will ſooner give thee thy Son again, expecting from his Gratitude, a Recompence ſurpaſſing the Value of Mony; that is, an Inviolable obſerving the Conditions of Peace, which they ſay, thou haſt ſo often broke. Thy Embaſſadors are expected here, to conſummate a laſting Friendſhip. When that is done, thou wilt quickly ſee thy Son return, attended by a numerous train of French, who have vow'd to follow his Fortune through the World, ſo long as he draws not his Cymetar againſt their King.

I have diſpatch'd an Account of this Adventure to the Kaimacham, that ſo the Sublime lime Port, which gives the Law to all the Kings on the Earth, may intereſs it ſelf on thy Behalf. The French ſeem to have a profound Attach to the Ottoman Empire: Whether it proceeds not more from Fear, and the Principles of Policy, than from any real Love to the Muſſulmans, I will not determine. They ſpeak reverently of the Grand Signior, covet his Friendſhip, and applaud the Victorious Enterprizes of the True Believers. Indeed they are Naturally a Martial People, and honour all Men of brave Spirits and daring Reſolutions. They have this particular Reaſon alſo to bear Friendſhip to the Invincible Oſmans, becauſe we are almoſt continually in Wars with the Houſe of Auſtria, the Old Enemy of France: The Germans are wont to ſay, That the Dragons Head and Tail are in Conjunction, when the Turks and the French invade the Empire at the ſame time. Theſe are numbred among the Conſtellations by Aſtrologers, to which the Germans allude in this Proverb; being ever Jealous of ſome private Treaty between the Sultan and the French Court.

God, who is the Wiſeſt of the Wiſeſt, inſtruct thee to adjuſt thy Differences Happily with this Noble Nation, that ſo thou mayſt ſee thy Son again in Peace at Salle.

Paris, the 14th. of the 3d. Moon,
of the Year 1666.

LET-

LETTER VIII.

To Pesteli Hali, his Brother, Master of the Customs at Constantinople.

UPon my Word, thy Letter came in a Critical Hour, to prevent, for ought I know, more Mischief than could have been repair'd again all the Days of my Life. I have but just taken my Eyes off from it, and set Pen to Paper, to express my Thanks to thee for the Care thou tak'st of thy Exil'd Brother; for the Post goes this Night, and I have appointed to meet Eliachim the Jew with some Armenians within these few Minutes. It had been an Unfortunate Meeting for me, had not thy Dispatch come so opportunely to give me Warning of our Cousin Solyman's Perfidy: For these Furr'd-Caps are his Spies and Confidents. The Back-Blows of Tagot, Negidher, and the Great Devil, be upon him and them. What have I done to that Ungrateful Villain, to merit such ill Offices from him? But upon thee be the Mercies of God, the Favours of his Prophet, and the Benedictions of all good Men and Angels: For thou art to me as one of the Watchers above, more than a Brother: Thou art the Tutelar Genius of my Life, my good Dæmon in time of Danger.

We

We had design'd this Evening for a private Banquet of Wine, which, thou knoweſt, dilates the Hearts of Mortals, unlocks Secrets, and makes the moſt reſerv'd Man in the World too Talkative and Open.

I keep as great a Guard upon my Tongue, perhaps, as another; but God knows how far I might have been tempted by ſuch good Company, to let it looſe for the ſake of Diſcourſe: For theſe Fellows are ſoft as the Air in their Addreſs and Converſation; they appear as Innocent as Santones; ſincere as Hadgi's; Loyal and Courtly as the Pages of the Seraill. They would wheedle Ninety Nine of Argus's Eyes out of his Head ſucceſſively, before he miſs'd One.

They came firſt to Paris, as Merchants; and no doubt, but Solyman had given 'em Inſtructions how to inſinuate into Eliachim's Acquaintance, and ſo by Degrees into mine. For that honeſt Jew trades with People of all Nations and Characters.

However it be, I remember, the very Words which thou inſerteſt in thy Letter, were ſpoken by me in Company with theſe Infidels. But I ſhall find a way to be even with them, and Solyman too, before they'll dream of it.

In the mean time, I pray heartily, that if ever it ſhall be thy Misfortune to be in the like Peril; Deſtiny or Chance, Providence or Fate

Fate may raiſe ſome Friend to give thee a Caution; and that thou may'ſt not with the Unhappy Cæſar, neglect to read it in time.

I'm now going to encounter theſe Giafers; perhaps I ſhall catch 'em in their own Snares. If not, I'll ſecure they ſhall not catch me.

Dear Peſteli, may thy Soul repoſe under the Protection of God.

Paris, 1ſt. of the 5th. Moon,
of the Year 1666.

LET-

LETTER IX.

To Dgnet Oglou.

TO whom ſhould I complain in my Adverſity, but to my Friend? I have been more embaraſs'd within theſe Two Moons, than through all the former Courſe of my Life. Troubles of divers kinds throng in upon me. I ſeem like a Butt or Mark whereat every Species of Misfortune, like a skilful Archer, directs the Fatal Arrows of its Malice. I am near overwhelm'd with Calamities. Heaven and Earth are ſet againſt me, and all the Elements conſpire my Ruin. Yet no Perſecution appears ſo terrible as that of Men, nor any Affliction ſo poignant as that which proceeds from the Ingratitude and Perfidy of my own Country-Men, Perſons related to me by Blood.

Age and much Sickneſs have confin'd me to my Bed for a conſiderable time, which is no ſmall Alloy to Human Happineſs. But to render mè perfectly miſerable, the Miniſters of the Port are angry with me for being Old and Infirm, and for not continuing to ſerve the Grand Signior, with the ſame Vigour and Strength as formerly: Elſe what mean the frequent Reproaches they ſend me, whilſt I am not in a Condition to anſwer them, or make an Apology for my ſelf? Would

Would they have me Immortal, and Proof againſt the ſtrokes of Deſtiny and Death, which thou know'ſt are Unavoidable? Whilſt I were in my Prime, Healthy and ſtrong as an Eagle, they encourag'd me with the faireſt Promiſes in the World, telling me I ſhould never want for Mony, or the Protection of the Grand Signior. Yet even then I receiv'd not my Penſion without Murmurs and obſcure Menaces. So hard a thing is it for Courtiers to be touch'd with any Man's Neceſſities. But now they threaten plainly to ſtop all farther Supplies, unleſs I will grow Young again, and do Buſineſs as briskly as when I'd number'd but Thirty Summers. Thus they ſerve poor Mahmut, as we uſe Oranges and Limons, whoſe vital Spirit when we have ſuck'd out, we throw the reſt away as unprofitable. Yet not one of them will contribute in the leaſt to my Recovery. Only the generous Cara Hali, our beloved Friend, hearing of my Malady, ſent me a ſtrange Chymical Liquor, with the Celebrated Confection El Razi, ſome Bezoar, and the moſt precious Balm of Gilead: All prepar'd to my Hand, with Directions, and ſeal'd with an Authentick Signet.

Theſe indeed had a marvellous Operation on me. I tried them but Yeſterday, and find my ſelf ſuddenly reſtor'd to ſome Degrees of Health, as by a Miracle. Whether it be the vaſt Eſteem I have for that Excellent Phyſician, with the Confidence I repoſe in his Skill and Judgment, has had

ſome

ſome Influence on me, or what elſe I know not; (yet, we uſe to obſerve, that the Patient's good Opinion of his Phyſicians is half a Cure:) However, theſe Sovereign Medicines have inſpir'd me with a new Energy. And had I not other Afflictions to break my Heart, I cou'd almoſt promiſe my ſelf to reach the Age of Neſtor. But my Unfortunate Stars will have it otherwiſe, and I am reſign'd to Deſtiny.

Thou know'ſt my Couſin Solyman, the Turbant-Maker, and art no Stranger to his Humours and Fortune: What an unſetled Man he has been in the whole Courſe of his Life: That no Employment cou'd ever pleaſe him, nor he be long fix'd in any Place. How he has rambl'd from Conſtantinople to Scutari, from thence to Chalcedon, &c. Always murmuring againſt Heaven, and complaining of his hard Fate, in that he was not bred a Courtier, a Student, a Soldier or any Thing but what he really is. Thou art acquainted alſo with ſome of his Religious Caprices, how he is addicted to doing the Book, making the Triple Knot, and to a Thouſand other fooliſh Superſtitions; by which whilſt he aſpires at the Character of a Sage, or a Cunning Man, he renders himſelf more Contemptible than an Ideot; forfeiting the Eſteem of all wiſe and good Men, for the Sake of a little Fame and noiſy Character among the Empty, Giddy Multitude

But,

But after all, I believe thou art wholly a Stranger to his Secret Malice, and the Rancour with which he perſecuted me, his poor Exil'd Uncle. I my ſelf was deceiv'd by the Subtle Apology he made ſome Years ago for the Slanders his Tongue had utter'd; when he transferr'd all the Guilt of that Injury on Shaſhim Iſtham, the Black Eunuch, and Ichingi Cap Oglani, Maſter of the Pages: But now I'm convinc'd he's a Traytor, a Villain, and a Fellow void of Faith or Honeſty.

I receiv'd a Letter from him within theſe ſeven Days, full of Tender and Inſinuating Expreſſions, thanking me for all the good Offices I had done him, and for my ſeaſonable Counſel in ſeveral Caſes. Profeſſing alſo at the ſame time an Inviolable Friendſhip, and that he would make it his Study to do me ſome Effectual Service. Yet the next Poſt brought me a Diſpatch from my Brother Peſteli Hali, wherein he bids me beware of Solyman; aſſuring me that he had good Reaſon to ſuſpect, that Couſin of mine had ſome ill Deſign upon me. This is certain ſays my Brother, Solyman boaſts to his Familiars not without ſome Inſult, that there is not a Word or Action eſcapes his Uncle Mahmut at Paris, but he is ſoon inform'd of it at Conſtantinople. And that which confirms me in the ſame Jealouſy with Peſteli is, That he inſerts in his Letter to me, ſome Paſſages and Diſcourſes Verbatim, which I muſt needs own to have been between tween me and Eliachim the Jew, with two or three Armenian Merchants, in our moſt private Meetings at Eliachim's Houſe or my Chamber. Theſe he learnt from ſome of Solyman's moſt Intimate Companions.

What can I make of all this, but that theſe Armenians are of Solyman's Council, his Privado's, his Chronee's, &c. whom having Buſineſs of their own at Paris, that perfidious Wretch has engag'd to pry into my Secrets, to give him a conſtant Account of what Diſcoveries they make, and if poſſible to trepan me into ſome Irrecoverable Error in my Conduct, that ſo he may finally ruin me.

O Mahomet! What is become of the Reverence due to thy Sacred Name, to thy Law, and to the Book penn'd in Heaven? Where is the Muſſulman Faith and Integrity? The Religious Faſtneſs of Friendſhip, with which our Fathers prop'd up one another in the Service of God and the Empire of True Believers? But there is no need of exclaiming againſt Faith and Piety on this Account: Humane Nature it ſelf is Reſponſible for the Baſeneſs and Ingratitude of my Kinſman. He no longer deſerves the Character of a Man. I adviſe thee to ſhun his Company as a Peſt, a walking Contagion among Mortals.

In a word, dear Dgnet, let not thou and I ſuffer our ſelves to be carried away by a vain Pity or Tenderneſs for any Man, tho' he be the Son of a Mother's Siſter; ſince there is no Truſt in Fleſh and Blood: But let us learn the Maxims of French Wiſdom, which teach Men to lay the Foundation of their own Happineſs, in ſmiling at the Misfortunes of others.

no

Paris, 14th. of the 6th. Moon, of the Year 1666.

LETTER X.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

BEſides the General Characters of Countries and the People Inhabiting there, it is neceſſary for thee to be inform'd of Particular Emergencies, and ſuch Events, as deſerve a Place in the Eternal Records of the Ottoman Monarchy, the Fifth and Laſt in the World. That ſo the Miniſters of the Auguſt Divan, the deſtin'd Arbitrators of the Univerſe, Judges of all Humane Affairs, and Counſellors of the Great Sultan, may in the Sacred Code, as in a Mirrour, behold whatever happens in the diſtant Climates, worthy of Remark,

After the Salutations, therefore, proceeding from profound Humility, entire Reſpect, and perfect Friendſhip, know that a devouring Peſtilence has lately made a Fatal Decimation in the Engliſh Territories, eſpecially in London, the Capital City of that Iſland, where above a Hundred Thouſand Souls, ſtruck with Inviſible Darts from God, went off the Stage of Humane Life, in leſs than Six Moons Revolution.

The dire Contagion by Degrees ſpread farther through the Adjacent Provinces, and reach'd the moſt remote and ſolitary Corners of the Land: Death ſet his Standard up, proclaiming Open War againſt the Inhabitants; with flying Troops of Mortal Plagues, he ravag'd o'er the Iſle, filling all Parts with doleful Cries and Lamentations: The Cemeteries were not large enough to hold the Carcaſſes of ſuch as fell before the dreadful Conquerour: But open Fields were turn'd to Sepulchres, and cramm'd with Spoils of Humane Race: An Univerſal Deſolation reign'd: Death celebrated Cruel Triumphs every where.

Such as pretend to Aſtrology and hidden Sciences, will have this to be an Effect of the late Comet which appear'd at the End of the Year 1664. whilſt others attribute it to nearer Natural Cauſes; and ſome conclude it is a Judgment ſent from Heaven, on that Rebellious People, who a few Years before had involv'd the Nation in a Civil War, and barbarouſly Maſſacr'd their King.

God

God only knows the Truth that is conceal'd from Man.

Thou mayſt Regiſter alſo, That the Queen-Mother of France is newly dead, and the Crook-back'd Prince of Conti. On which Account, this Court is now in Mourning, and the Churches hung with Black, whilſt Melancholy Bells, perpetually invite the Living to pray for the deceaſed Royal Souls; and deep-baſs'd Organ Pipes breath out Inceſſant doleful Aſpirations, ſounding like Inarticulate Prayers, and Funeral Sighs, for the departed. In this the Nazarenes approach near to the Faith of True Believers. They give Alms alſo, as we do, and ſettle Stipends on certain Prieſts and Derviches, to mumble over daily Maſſes for the Dead; which is an evident Sign, That they have Hopes of Immortality, and look for the Reſurrection. Doubtleſs, there's ſomething Good at the Bottom of all Religions, tho' it be overlaid with Errors and Corruptions.

God direct us through the Meanders, which Humane Frailty involves us in; and grant every Muſſulman a Particular Chart and Compaſs, whereby to ſteer his Courſe through the uncertain Tracts of Mortal Life; that he may at laſt arrive in Paradiſe. For we ſhall never find the Way thither by General Rules.

Illuſtrious Hamet, I pray that thou and I may at a deſtin'd Hour, encounter one another in the Walks of Eden, there to converſe under Immortal Shades near to ſome warbling Stream of matchleſs Wine or Water; to revolve our paſt Fatigues on Earth, and to careſs our ſelves in the Security of Endleſs Bliſs.

Paris, 15th. of the 7th. Moon, of the Year 1666.

LETTER

LETTER XI.

To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna.

THou and thy feigned Meſſias be damn'd together for Company! Muſt I be baulkt of my Money, for the Sake of your New Superſtition? How many Meſſias's have ye had, Twenty Five at leaſt, beſides the Son of Mary, who is acknowledg'd and bleſs'd for ever? Muſt all the World be bubbl'd to Eternity by the Fables of your Nation? Curſe upon your Rabbi's and Cochams, thoſe Pimps to the more Religious Debaucheries of Mortals. Nathan, I took thee for another Manner of Man. However, if thou art a Sworn Servant to Sabbati Sevi, the new Sham-King of the Jews, I have nothing to ſay to it: Do as thou wilt. But, I dare be a Prophet ſo far as to tell thee, thou wilt be curſedly left in the Lurch, with the Reſt of the Fools, thy Bigotted Brethren. Let what will be, it behoves thee as an honeſt Man to tranſmit the Bills that are entruſted to thee. Whether Sabbati Sevi, Ben Joſeph or Ben David be the Name of your expected Meſſias, I wou'd not have Ben Saddi degenerate. Continue thou Faithful: and the few others that are entruſted with the Sublime Affairs; and let all the Reſt of the Common Jews go to Gehenna, or to the Vale of Tophet, which you pleaſe. But I wou'd fain have thee in the Number of the Righteous, who ſhall poſſeſs Paradiſe. Some of thy Letters have encourag'd me to hope for this, but thy laſt makes me almoſt deſpair of ſeeing thee happy either in This World or the Next: For, thou writeſt like one in a Phrenſy, raving on Chimera's of ſtrange Honour, Glory and Power which thou ſhalt ſhortly enjoy in the Kingdom of thy Phantaſtick Meſſias; thou art already a Prince in thy own Conceit.

For God's Sake, Nathan, wean thy ſelf from theſe Religious Fondneſſes: Awaken thy Reaſon, which is the diſtinguiſhnig Character of a Man. Examine the Grounds of this New Deluſion; ſearch into the Birth and Origin of Sabbati Sevi, and thou wilt find him to deſcend of an Obſcure and Baſe Parentage; his Father being but a Kind of Mungrel Jew, and by Profeſſion an Uſurer, which is forbid by the Written Law of Moſes, and in the Great Alcoran it is accounted Execrable: His Mother a Woman of the Curds, ſuſpected for a Witch, in Regard, moſt of that Infidel Nation practiſe Magick Arts, and Diabolical Charms. And 'tis not altogether improbable, that your Counterfeit Meſſias was educated privately by her in the ſame Studies, whence he learn'd the Methods Methods of Enchantments and Illuſions, to deceive the Senſes and impoſe on the Reaſon of Mankind.

I can tell thee of a Truth, that there are more Eyes on him and his Actions, than he is aware of; and I my ſelf at this Diſtance have receiv'd a particular Relation of his Life, from ſuch as knew him a Youth at Smyrna, the Place of his Nativity. He is accus'd of many Vices and Extravagances during his early Years. His Converſation was wild and diſſolute, being a noted Inamorato or Stallion over all that City. For which and ſome other Crimes, he was expell'd the Synagogue, and baniſh'd from Smyrna, by the Mutual Conſent of the Muſſulman Cadi, and your own Rulers. He was alſo excommunicated by the Rabbi's as a Heretick, for broaching certain Doctrins repugnant to your Law, and the General Faith of the Jews. All which cannot but be a prevailing Recommendation of him to the Office of Meſſias or King of Iſrael.

From hence he rambled up and down the Morea and other Provinces of Greece, leaving a Memorial of Infamy, where-ever he ſet his Foot; continually marrying and divorcing of Wives, debauching of Virgins, and frequenting the Company of Harlots, till thoſe Countries grew weary of him, and threatn'd to chaſtiſe his Wickedneſs. Then he paſs'd over into Syria and Paleſtine, beginning to ſet up for a Reformer of your

Law, and at Jeruſalem openly profeſſing himſelf to be the Meſſias; whereby he drew a Rabble of Lunaticks and Frantick People after him. But as for the Seniors and Governours, they have rejected him as an Impoſtor.

Conſider, Nathan, the Fate that befel Ben Cochab, as he call'd himſelf, that is, the Son of a Star, who pretended to be the Meſſias in the Days of Adrian, Emperour of the Romans; Reflect on the Calamities which overwhelm'd him and his Followers, to the Number of Four Hundred Thouſand Jews; who all fell with their Falſe Prophet, Sacrifices to the juſt Revenge and Fury of that Incens'd Monarch: For they had impudently boaſted that by ſuch a prefix'd time, he ſhould be taken Captive and depos'd from his Throne by the Meſſias, who ſhould aſſume the Imperial Dignity, and all the World ſhould obey him. But when thoſe who ſurviv'd the Slaughter of their Brethren, reflected on the Author of ſo Tragical a Cataſtrophe, they chang'd his Name in Contempt and Hatred, calling him no longer Ben Cochab, the Son of a Star, but Bar Cuziba, the Son of a Lye, a Falſe Prophet, and Seducer of the Brethren.

Thou haſt all the Reaſon in the World, to have no better Opinion of Sabbati Sevi, ſince he is rejected by the Wiſer Sort of Jews, and has not perform'd one Miracle in Confirmation of his pretended Meſſias-ſhip.

ſhip. Neither has any uncommon or preternatural Appearance happen'd before or ſince he aſſum'd this Dignity. Whereas all your Rabbi's teach, that no leſs than Ten Eminent and Remarkable Prodigies ſhall precede the Coming of your Meſſias. And I remember, thou thy ſelf about Ten Years ago ſenteſt me a Letter much to the ſame Effect, telling me that certain Monſtrous Sorts of Men ſhould come from the Ends of the Earth, whoſe Eyes ſhall be as Venomous as Baſilisks, with a great many other Stories of like Nature.

Haſt thou forgot this, Nathan, or art thou ſo far infatuated with the bold Impoſtures of this Impudent Deceiver, as for his ſake, to deny thy former Faith, reverſe thy own Sentiments, and diſannul the Traditions of thy Doctors? For ſhame rowze up thy Intellectual Faculties, and ſuffer not thy Reaſon to be lull'd aſleep by the Preſtigious Umbrages and Charms of a lewd Vagrant, a Wizard, a Cheat.

Have but Patience at leaſt, till thou ſee thoſe Signs accompliſh'd which are to uſher in your Meſſias, before thou give up thy ſelf to ſo dangerous a Credulity. Let the Sun firſt emit thoſe Peſtilential Vapours, which ſhall kill a Million of the Koprim or Infidels every Day, as your Traditions threaten. Let that Luminary be alſo totally eclips'd for the ſpace of Thirty Days. In a word, let all the other Prodigies come to pass, which thou thy self didst once so passionately believe: And then I promise thee on the Word of a Mussulman, that I will be thy Proselyte, and embrace thy Law, and adore thy Messias; on condition, that otherwise thou wilt be my Convert, believe the Alcoran, and obey the Messenger of God, the Last and Seal of the Prophets.

Paris, 11th. of the 9th. Moon,
of the Year 1666.

LETTER

LETTER XII.

To the Kaimacham.

I Am afraid the Divan will be oblig'd to ſend another Agent to Vienna, to ſupply the Place of Nathan Ben Saddi, who is running mad after the New Meſſias of the Jews. There is no doubt but thou and the other Happy Miniſters, reſiding at the Auguſt Port, have heard of a certain Impoſtor at Smyrna, by Name Sabbati Sevi, of Hebrew Race, who calls himſelf the Only begotten Son of God, Meſſias and Redeemer of Iſrael; and what Multitudes of doting Credulous Jews he draws after him. So that there is a Schiſm broke out between them, and they are divided into Two contrary Factions both in Smyrna, and all over the Levant. It is impoſſible that theſe things ſhould be conceal-ed from the Reſplendent Seat of Fame, ſince they have reach'd even our Ears who dwell at this Diſtance: Nay there is hardly a Province or City in all the Weſt, which has not receiv'd Intelligence of ſo Remarkable a Novelty.

I have receiv'd a Diſpatch from Zeidi Alamanzi at Venice, wherein he informs me, that all the Jews of Italy are preparing to viſit the Holy Land, and to ſee the Face of their long expected Meſſias, who they now believe is really come on Earth, and is that Sabbati Sevi, at Smyrna. They are ſettling their Affairs, as faſt as they can, acquitting themſelves from all Worldly Engagements, and thoſe who are devout, give themſelves up to Prayer and Mortifications; whilſt others ſpend their time in Feaſting, Dancing, and all manner of Mirth. He ſays, ſome of them will ſit or ſtand up to the Noſe in Water, for Four and Twenty Hours together. And this they do in Imitation of Adam's Penance, according to their Tradition: For they are taught, that the Firſt Father of Mortals, after he was baniſh'd from Paradiſe, as a Puniſhment for his Sin, ſtood a Hundred and Thirty Years together in Water thus reaching to his Noſtrils.

believe

Others of theſe Superſtitious People, will ſit naked many Hours together on a Heap of Piſmires, till they're almoſt ſtung to Death. A third Sort dig their own Graves, and going down into them, cauſe themſelves to be covered all over with Earth, except only their Faces; and in this Condition they will lie till they are almoſt famiſh'd.

In the mean while, they ſend Circular Letters from all Parts, congratulating each others approaching Happineſs and Deliverance from the Oppreſſion of the Gentiles: For ſo they term all that are not of their own Nation. And in theſe mutual Addreſſes, they fail not to Propheſy, That their Meſſias ſhall in ſuch a Moon, go to the Great Tyrant, King of the Iſmaelites, and Lord of all the Children of

Moab

Moab and Edom; (So they blaſpheme our Glorious Sultan.) That he ſhall depoſe him from his Throne, and lead him away Captive; after which he ſhall have the Dominions of the whole Earth laid at his Feet.

With ſuch kind of wild Stuff, do theſe deluded People flatter one another and themſelves, as if in a little time they were to be Lords of all Things. So that no Trading or Commerce goes forward among them: An Univerſal Stop is put to all Buſineſs; it being eſteem'd an Inexpiable Sin, to follow their Trades in the Days of the Meſſias, who is to enrich them with the Wealth of all Nations.

Strange Rumours are ſpread abroad, of the Return of the Ten Tribes over the River Sabbation, who were carried away Captives by Salmanaſſar King of Aſſyria, and never were heard of ſince, till they now diſcourſe of their being encamp'd in the Deſart of Mount Sinai, in their March to the Holy Land. 'Tis reported alſo, that a Mighty Fleet of Ships were ſeen at Sea, whoſe Sails were of Satin, and their Streamers bore the Figure of a Lyon, with this Inſcription, The Lyon of the Tribe of Judah.

The Chriſtians ſeem aſtoniſh'd at theſe things, yet ſome look on 'em only as Dreams. As for honeſt Eliachim here, he is no more mov'd at theſe things than I; only he laughs at the Folly of the Credulous World, and curſes the Jews, for bringing ſuch Contempt on themſelves and their Poſterity. But Nathan than is like one Hag-ridden, or defil'd by the Lamiæ of the Night. He has loſt all Reaſon, and 'twill be no leſs than a Miracle that muſt reſtore it again.

Sage Miniſter, whilſt theſe Execrable People thus loſe themſelves for the Sake of their Counterfeit Meſſias, let us continue to honour the True One, even Jeſus the Son of Mary, who is now in Paradiſe, and our Holy Prophet with him.

Paris, the 21ſt. of the 9th. Moon,
of the Year 1666.

LET-

LETTER XIII.

To Murat Baſſa.

THis has been a Conſiderable Year of Actions and Events. At the Beginning of it, I ſent to the Port an Account of the Death of the Queen-Mother of France, and of the Prince of Conti: now I will farther inform thee of a War that is broke out between this Crown and that of England. The Occaſion of it was this: The Engliſh and the Hollanders trafficking in America, had ſome Miſunderſtandings and Feuds about the Limits of their ſeveral Conqueſts in thoſe Remote Parts of the World. The Hollanders being the ſtrongeſt, did many Injuries to their Neighbours the Engliſh, and domineer'd over them as their Lords. The Engliſh reſenting this very heinouſly, and grown weary of their Oppreſſions, ſent Complaints to their King. He to redreſs his Subjects order'd his Reſident at the Hague, to demand Satisfaction of the States. They refus'd to do him that Juſtice; upon which he was reſolv'd to have Recourſe to his Arms, and accordingly proclaim'd War againſt Holland; making all neceſſary Preparations to carry it on. The ſame did his Adverſaries. The French King in the mean time was oblig'd by a Treaty with the Hollanders landers concluded in the Year 1662. to eſpouſe their Quarrels; yet that he might not break with England raſhly, he firſt ſent an Embaſſador to that Court to mediate a Peace. But that proving Ineffectual, he proclaim'd a War againſt that Nation, and commanded the Engliſh Embaſſador to depart his Kingdom. The Duke of Beaufort, who is Admiral at Sea, was order'd to Equip a Gallant Fleet, and joyn the Dutch-Navy; Which he perform'd with all Imaginable Diligence and Expedition. There has been Two Combats between theſe Enemies at Sea, and in both the Dutch had the worſt of it: Neither did the French eſcape without ſome Loſs, having Two of their Greateſt Ships ſeverely ſhatter'd, and a Third taken by the Engliſh.

The Plague ſtill rages in England, and has almoſt depopulated whole Provinces. Whilſt a milder Death has robb'd France of one of her Greateſt Heroes: The Count d' Harcourt, of whom I have often made mention, is gone to celebrate the Triumphs due to his Valour and Fortune in another World.

The Emperour of Germany has at laſt married the Infanta of Spain, after abundance of Demurrs and Heſitations about that Buſineſs. Theſe Nazarenes can do nothing with Expedition. The Spiritual Courts, as they call them, have more Tricks and Cramp Words to amuze People with, than an Indian Mountebank or Juggler. Neither are Sovereign Princes more exempt from their Juriſdiction, diction. than the meaneſt of their Subjects. Eſpecially the Court of Rome, can make or annul Marriages at Pleaſure. And they are ſure to be Excommunicated, who refuſe to ſubmit to their Orders. This Holy Court can alſo bind or releaſe Sins, open or ſhut the Gates of Paradiſe, make a Devil a Saint, or a Saint a Devil. In a word, they can do every thing if there be Gold in the Caſe. But if that be wanting they can do nothing but ſhrug their Shoulders.

Thou mayſt alſo inform the Divan, that the French King has given Permiſſion to ſome of his Subjects, to undertake a Conqueſt in America, and eſtabliſh a Commerce in that Part of the World. Many Veſſels are equipped in Order to this Expedition, and they that are concern'd in the Voyage, are as merry as Jaſon and his Argonauts, when they were preparing to fetch the Golden Fleece from Colchos. That Weſtern Continent affords immenſe Riches, and tempts all the Nations in Europe, to make an Experiment of their Fortune, in gaining one Part of it or other. 'Twere to be wiſh'd it lay nearer to the Ottoman Empire. No Record can diſcover the Origin of the Inhabitants. Yet moſt Authors conjecture, that they paſs'd over from the North-Eaſt Parts of Aſia, where the Streights of Anian, are very Narrow, and would invite Sea-faring Men to ſeek New Adventures. Beſides, by their being Canibals, it appears very probable, That either they they deſcended from the Tartars, or the Tartars from them. God alone knows how to adjuſt the Differences, and reveal the Secrets of Hiſtory.

Brave Baſſa, 'Tis no matter from what Stock we are deſcended, ſo long as we have Vertue. For that alone is the only True Nobility. God regale thee with his Favours.

Paris, 30th. of the 9th. Moon,
of the Year 1666.

LET-

LETTER XIV.

To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Cuſtoms, and Superintendent of the Arſenal at Conſtantinople.

WHen I hear of thy Proſperity, my Heart is dilated like his who has found hidden Wealth. Yet I am ſorry for the Diſgrace of the good Old Man, thy Predeceſſor: But we muſt not cenſure the Conduct of our Superiours. The Juſtice of their Actions is not to be call'd in Queſtion. The Sultan cannot err. This is an Eſtabliſh'd Maxim in all Monarchies, eſpecially in that of the Renowned Oſmans.

As for what relates to thee, in this New Advance thou haſt made; thy own Experience acquir'd by many Years Travel and Obſervation in Foreign Countries, added to the Knowledge thou haſt in the Laws, Diſcipline and Cuſtoms of thy own will be a ſufficient Guide, to conduct thee in the Management of thy Buſineſs. Yet deſpiſe not the Counſel of others. A Man is never nearer to Ruin, than when he truſts too much to his own Wiſdom. Therefore the greateſt Emperours undertake nothing of Moment raſhly or without Advice. Temerity often blaſts the faireſt Deſigns.

It

It will be of particular Import to thee, to hear of a Tragical Event that has lately happen'd to Rezan, a Great City in Ruſſia, by the blowing up of the Magazine. This Gunpowder does more Miſchief than Good in the World. The Ancients fought as ſucceſſfully with Bows and Arrows, Swords, Spears and other Inſtruments of War, without running the Hazard of blowing up whole Cities into the Air, in time of Peace. And they could undermine the ſtrongeſt Caſtles, even thoſe ſituated on Rocks, without the help of this Infernal Duſt. Nature taught 'em to be Induſtrious in defeating their Enemies, and they ſpared no Labour to gain the Victory. Our Fore-Fathers were hardy and ſtrong, patient of Toils and Fatigues: They cut their Way into Mountains of Stone, if any Place of Strength were built on it, which they had Occaſion to beſiege. And as they hew'd away that Part of the Rock which ſupported the Walls, they underprop'd the Foundation with Wooden Pillars: And when they had finiſh'd their Mine, they ſet Fire to certain Combuſtible Matter, which conſuming theſe Supports, the Walls and Gates that reſted on them, ſunk down, and left the Fortreſs naked and open to the Beſiegers

It had been well for the Inhabitants of Rezan, if their City had been only thus gently diſmantl'd, by ſome Enemy againſt whom they might have afterwards employ'd their Courage to defend themſelves, or make Com-

Compoſition. But poor Unfortunate People, they have felt a ruder Shock, an unmerciful Blow of Fate, their City being in a Minute's time, without the leaſt warning, ſtormed, plunder'd, and laid in Heaps, by an Enemy which gives no Quarter.

This Accident happen'd on the 15*th.* of the laſt Moon, about the Hour of Ulanamiſi. There were Five Hundred Barrels of Powder in the Magazine; and the Force of the Blow was ſo violent, that beſides the Deſtruction of that City or at leaſt the beſt Part of it, all the Neighbouring Villages round about it, felt its Fatal Effect, ſome of their Houſes ſhaking as in an Earthquake, others falling to Pieces.

Aſſuredly, Heaven is angry with theſe Infidels, and turns the very Inſtruments of their Defence and Safety, into Scourges for their Chaſtiſement. I formerly ſent Saleh the Superintendent, an Account of the like Misfortune that befel the City of Gravelines in Flanders, and of other terrible Effects of the Wrath of Heaven in the Low-Countries. One Diſaſter follows cloſe on the back of another; yet the Infidels are inſenſible and ſtupid, as they were in the Days of Noah, when the Flood came and ſurpris'd all the Inhabitants of the Country. That Prophet gave 'em warning of the approaching Danger. He was Three whole Years in cutting down Indian Plane-Trees, and preparing Planks, Beams, Pins and other Neceſſaries, and Seven Year. more in Building that Wonderful Ship. The Infidels went by daily, and ſaw him at Work, but they derided the Patient Apoſtle, and taught their Children to mock him, ſaying, Where is the Water this Ship is to ſail in? After the Ark was finiſh'd, it lay on the Ground Seven Moons, till they had Thrice ſacrific'd ſome of Noah's Followers to their Idols.

that

It was perfected in the Moon of Rajeb, and in the Moon of Saphar was the Decree of the Chaſtiſement ſign'd, which was to be executed on all of Mortal Race, ſave Noah and the Fourſcore that were with him, with the Two Pairs of every Species, which the Four Winds, by God's Appointment, collected together, and drove into the Ark, and the Body of Adam, which was enſhrin'd and brought to Noah by Angels out of the Region of Mecca. There was alſo Philemon the Good Prieſt of Egypt, with his whole Family.

Juſt as the determined Day and Hour of the Flood was come, the Prince of the Country, ſtimulated by his Evil Deſtiny, mounted his Horſe with ſome of his Retinue; and having ſacrific'd to their Idols, rode toward the Place where Noah and his Company were ſhut up in the Ark, with a Deſign to burn it to Aſhes. He call'd out aloud to the Prophet, with Scoffs, ſaying, O Noah, where is the Water in which this Ship is to ſail? It will be with you incontinently, replied the Holy Man, before you can remove your Station. Come down, thou Deſtard, ſaid the proud Infidel, otherwiſe I will burn thee and thy Companions with Fire. O miſerable Man, ſaid Noah, Turn to God, for his Judgments are ready to burſt forth on you.

burn

The Prince Incens'd at this, commanded his Slaves to put Fire to the Ark. But while he was yet ſpeaking, he manifeſtly ſaw the Water guſhing out on all Hands round about him, and under his Feet. Then his Heart was troubl'd, and full of Anguiſh and Fear. He haſted to ſecure himſelf, with his Family and Goods, in the Caſtles which he had built, on the higheſt Mountains. But alas, the Earth open'd, and broke like a Spiders Web; ſo violent was the Force of the Waters which boyled up every where. The Clouds pour'd down vaſt Chataracts of Rain, mix'd with Dreadful and Inſupportable Thunder and Lightning. The Miſerable Infidels throng'd upon one another, curſing and blaſpheming their Gods who had deluded 'em. Great was the Confuſion and Cry every where; for ſuch a Calamity had never been known ſince the Moon gave her Light. If any were ſo nimble as to reach the Foot of a Mountain, yet he could not aſcend by Reaſon of Stones which fell on his Head, and Torrents of boyling Water that ran down upon him, as if it had come out of a Cauldron. And ſuppoſe he had reach'd the top, it had been but a ſhort Delay of his Fate; for in a word, the Waters ſwell'd Forty Cubits above the Higheſt Mountains, and all the Living Generations periſh'd.

Son of my Mother, when thou readeſt this

Memoir

Memoir, (for it is a Fragment of an Ancient Arabick Writing) think on the Day of Judgment, which ſhall ſurprize the World, even as the Deluge did. At that Hour, the greateſt Part of Men will not dream of any ſuch thing, till they ſee Flames and Rivers of Fire burſting forth from the Springs and Fountains which before yielded Water, and ſhowers of Fire deſcending from Heaven, inſtead of Rain. For the Elements will change their Courſes, to accompliſh the Decrees of him who made them, and to conſummate the Revenge of the Omnipotent againſt Unbelievers.

Paris, 2d. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year 1666.

LETTER

LETTER XV.

To Uſeph, Baſſa.

SUrely, the Gods of the Engliſh are angry with that People, and the Guardian Spirits of the Iſle, have forſook their Charge. I ſent a Diſpatch at the beginning of this Year to Murat, Baſſa; wherein I inform'd him of a Deſtructive Plague, raging at London, and in other Parts of the Nation. That Peſtilence continues ſtill, but under different Forms, to aſſault the Living, and augment the Number of the Dead.

God only knows the Origin of theſe Epidemical Contagions; whether they derive their Pedigree from Heaven or Hell; from the Earth, or any other Element. Perhaps ſome latent Poyſons in the Air, mix with the Breath of Mortals, and by their ſubtile Energy, ſoon diſſipate the vital Flame of Humane Bodies, like the Infectious Blaſts of the Wind El-Samiel in Arabia, which in a Moment's time commit a Rape upon the Lives of Travellers, ſcorching their Spirits up, and leaving on the Sands a black, ſtiff Carcaſs of Jelli'd Fleſh, as tho' they had been Thunder-ſtruck: Or, perhaps ſome Venomous Exhalations from the Minerals below, tranſpire through Chinks and Crannies in the Earth, to plunder Mortals of their Breath, like to the Fatal Vapours in the Cave of Death, not far from Virgil's Grot' in Italy: Or, who can tell, but that ſome hidden Meteors above, or ſome Malignant Stars, may ſend down whole Battalions of empoyſon'd Atomes. to invade this Region of Mortality; and in Death's Name, King of the World Inviſible, to claim and carry away a certain Number of Ghoſts, prick'd down by Deſtiny, a Tribute ſet by Fate? However it be, that whole Iſland may well be call'd at this time the Grand Infirmary of Europe, where Baneful Sickneſs makes its Publick Reſidence. The timerous Giafers run from Place to Place, thinking to eſcape from Heaven's all ſearching Purſuivants. They fly from Populous Towns to Villages; and from theſe again to unfrequented Deſarts, Woods, and Heaths, carrying their Wives and Children with 'em, and all the Subſtance of their Houſes. The Roads are cover'd with the Caravans of doubtful Paſſengers, who dread to think of going back, to the Contagious Seats they left behind, yet know not where to be receiv'd anew. So general is the Conſternation, ſo ſtrong the Fear of thoſe who yet ſurvive, leſt they ſhould alſo catch the Infection and die.

Beſides this, they have felt the ſtrokes of another ſurprizing Calamity; London, the Capital City of England, being newly conſum'd by Fire. It is not certain, whether Deſign or Chance firſt kindled the devouring Element. But it fell out at an unlucky Sea-

ſon,

ſon, when the Wind was high, and from its Eaſtern Quarter, blew the Flames full Weſt, which ſpreading North and South, demoliſh'd all before them, laying the greateſt Part of that Rich and Famous City in Aſhes.

Some aſcribe this to a Plot of the French; others term it, a Judgment of God, for their Rebellion, Pride and other crying Sins. Whilſt with equal Probability, a third Sort affirm, 'Twas contriv'd and put in Execution by a Cabal of Carpenters and Maſons, who wanting Employment, and projecting the Method of enriching themſelves, diſdaining alſo the Inartificial and Obſolete Form of Buildings, reſolved to put this City into a New Figure, and raiſe it according to the Models of Foreign Architecture. Every one gueſſes as his Affections incline him, or his Conjectures follow the Byaſs of his Intereſt. Men are always partial to themſelves and the Cauſe they have eſpous'd. God only knows the Truth.

The Superſtitious among the Roman Catholicks, take Occaſion from the timing of this Horrible Conflagration, to inſult o'er the Engliſh Proteſtants; who from ſome obſcure Paſſages in the Book of their Goſpel, uſed to foretel in a Prophetick Manner, That the Final Ruin and Cataſtrophe of Rome would happen in this Year 1666. Whereas by Fatal Experience, more ſure than vain Predictions, they find the Metropolis of their own Nation, reduc'd to Aſhes, Whoever are the Inſtruments in theſe Tragedies, 'tis certain the Deſigns of Fate are ſtill perform'd. Every Kingdom, State and Community, has its Critical Periods and Climacters, wherein it ſuffers Detriment, * — —

— — — —

LETTER XVI.

To Cara Hali, Phyſician to the Grand Signior.

I Am melancholy, beyond the Deſcription of Painters, Poets, or the lively Eloquence of Cicero. Methinks, I'm ſome Exotick Being; a perfect Foreigner on Earth; a Stranger to his Laws and Maxims. I appear to other Mortals like a Giafer or Frank in his Weſtern-Dreſs at Morocco, Babilon, or Conſtantinople. I mean not for my outward Habit, (for in that I'm Conformable enough to the Mode of the Region where I reſide) but I'm all Unfaſhionable within; Ridiculous in my Sentiments and Converſation. When others laugh, I ſigh, and find a Reaſon to be ſad, in the midſt of merry Company. Even Wine it ſelf that exhilarates all the World beſide, does but encreaſe my Melancholy, by adding Strength unto my labouring Thoughts. It ſublimates my Spirits up to Sacred Phrenſies. I am all Lunatick at ſuch a Time. Each Glaſs creates new Dreams, more wild than the ſtrange Flights and Raptures of a Santone. My heated Spleen, like Mount Gibel, belches forth horrid Clouds of Smoak and Vapours, which lay long ſmothering in its ſpongy Caverns; theſe quickly ſpread, and cover all the Horizon of my Soul, rendring it Dark and Gloomy, as the Cymmerian Solitudes, or the more dismal Valleys bordering on the River Styx, where surly Charon waits to Ferry o'er the Caravans of trembling Ghosts, and land 'em in Elyzium.

Oh! that those Fables of the Ancient Poets were but true! Or that I knew but something certain of our Future State! Whether the Soul survives or no, when Death has stopt the Circulation of our Blood? And what becomes of that Immortal Substance, after its parting from the Body? Whether it pass by Transmigration into the Embryo of some other Animal, as Pythagoras taught; or be united, swallowed up and lost in the Universal Soul of the World, as Plato did believe? Or if some other Magnet does attract its Presence; and hidden Sympathies of Nature teach it to form its self a Vehicle or Body of the Elements? Perhaps, some Souls unite with Air, whilst others mix with Water, Earth or purer Skies. This for its horrid Sins in Mortal State, may be by the Eternal Nemesis sunk down into the Fatal Caverns of Mount Ætna, Strombolo, or Vesuvius; there to Incorporate with burning Rivers and Lakes of Sulphur and other Minerals, to hear perpetually the frightful Cracking, Rumbling, and loud Thunders of those Infernal Vaults: to be without Intermission annoy'd with the Eternal Stench of melted Mines, whose poignant Vapours equally kill it and revive it every moment, that it may be confin'd to an endless Circle of Miseries: To feel the Excruciating Torments which no Tongue can utter; whilſt the Inceſſant Rapid Motion of thoſe Exalted and moſt Violent Fires, with which it is embodyed by Decree of Fate, rob it of the very Poſſibility of the leaſt eaſy Thought or quiet Minute; and at the ſame time rack it with Infinite Tortures.

the

Think not my Dear Phyſician, that it is Impoſſible a Separate Spirit, can thus be ſenſible of Pains. There's no ſuch thing as a Separate Spirit, ſave God who made all Bodies, and therefore was before them. The Angels themſelves are partly Corporeal; ſo are the Devils. Do not believe then that Mortal Man, who is in a middle State between theſe Two, ſhall by Dying, gain a Priviledge above the moſt Illuſtrious Spirits in Heaven. As ſoon as Death has diſlodg'd us from One Body; Nature, Providence or Fate, provides us Another, according to our Qualities, Inclinations and Merits. We may as well by Metempſychoſis, become the Spirit or Soul of a flaming Sulphur-Mine, or at leaſt of ſome Part of it, as of a Horſe, an Eagle, or a Dove: For ſuch, for ought we know, may be the Diſpoſition of Divine Wiſdom, Juſtice and Omnipotence.

By the very ſame Reaſon another Soul may be tranſported to the Open, Happy Skies, where it may either range in boundleſs, free, and ſerene Tracts of Bliſs; or be Enfranchis'd in the Corporations of the Stars, to dwell in Palaces of Azure, Topazes, and Diamonds; to poſſeſs Privinces more Rich than in Peru or Guinea, where the Ruſticks plow up Gold; more beautiful and pleaſant, than the famous Fields of Theſſaly. God knows what will become of us after our Diſſolution: But the Ignorance of this one Truth, occaſions all my Melancholy.

Death is not formidable of it ſelf, nor all the dolorous Circumſtances that precede it: 'Tis only what comes after, raiſes all my Terror. Were I to melt away in lingring Agues and Conſumptions; or to be ſooner poſted off in high wrought Fevers, Pleuriſies, or Peſtilence: Or if it were my Fate to die by Piſtol, Sword or Poyſon, or any other Kind of Slow or Sudden Death, allotted me from Chance or Nature, Providence or Fate: Should Heaven conſume me in a Trice by Lightning; or this Globe with equal Swiftneſs, bury me in ſome ſurprizing Earthquake: 'Twould be all one to Mahmut, were it not for the After-Claps, to which I am a Stranger. I tremble at the Hidden and Unſearchable Force of Nature: I dread the Irreverſible Unknown Decrees of Fate, the Secret Methods of Eternal Deſtiny, the Laws and Order of the Other World, in Billetting the Troops of Humane Souls, that go to Winter there, after this Life's Campagne is finiſhed.

Once in a Cold and Froſty Evening, as I was travelling o'er a bleak wide Plain, and felt the penetrating Blaſts of North-Eaſt-Winds, with chilling Sleet, which fell upon me from the Clouds; my Spirits alſo tyr'd with tedious ous Journeys, and my anxious Thoughts were wholly taken up about a Reſting-Place that Night, and how to avoid the Aſſaults of Robbers, with a Thouſand other Perils, threatning a Stranger on the Road; at length I chanc'd to think of the Untry'd and Remote Voyage I muſt One Day make to Another World. It chill'd my Blood to imagine the diſconſolate Naked Circumſtances of a Separate Soul, which for ought I knew, might be bewilder'd, loſt, and forc'd to wander up and down through untrack'd Waſtes of miſty frozen Air, where the Inhoſpitable Element affords no Guides, nor Carvanſera's to comfortleſs, poor, ſtraggling Ghoſts; unleſs they would accept a Lodging in ſome Cloud, the Ciſtern and Chariot of Rain, Hail or Snow; there to Incorporate with the unwelcome Meteors, and be whirl'd round the Globe, or elſe precipitated down to Earth again in Showers; from thence perhaps to be exhal'd by the Sun, and mix with Embryo's of Lightning, Fiery Dragons, Ignes Fatui, or other Bodies hourly Flaming in the Welkin, and thus to circulate in Endleſs Tranſmigrations. Who knows the Circumſtances of departed Souls, or Laws of a Separate State? Let him declare what Uſage we ſhall find in that Inviſible and Dark Receſs from Life: He ſhall be then eſteemed more than Apollo, by the penſive Mahmut. Not the old Delphick Oracle could receive greater Reverence from the Inquiſitive World; nor Mecca now from devout Muſſulman Pilgrims; or Medina Talnabi, where the Prophet reſts in Peace, than ſuch an one ſhould have from me, who could with unfeigned Truth diſcover how we ſhall be diſpos'd of, when we die. But I am cloy'd and nauſeated with the dull Romances of the Prieſts and Dervi-ches.

My Friend, let thou and I learn to improve the Joys of preſent Life, and not by damn'd Miſtakes deprive our ſelves of double Happineſs. But let us ſo comport our ſelves, that our Tranſmigration may be but from the Pleaſures of Earth to thoſe of Heaven; from one Paradiſe to another.

Paris, 6th. of the 1ſt. Moon,
of the Year 1667.

LETTER

LETTER XVII.

To Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa.

THE Bleſſings of God and his Prophet chear thy Heart, as thou haſt exhilarated mine by thy laſt Letter; wherein thou encourageſt me with the Hopes of being remov'd from this diſagreeable Poſt, to one more Delightful and Happy, even to a Sweet Country Retirement, either in Arabia, or any other Part of the Grand Signior's Dominions, which is the very Mark of all my Wiſhes.

I have a Natural Averſion for Great and Populous Cities. They ſeem to be ſo many Magnificent Sepulchres of the Living, where Men are ſhut up, impriſon'd, and buried from all Commerce with the Elements; or they are like Hoſpitals and Peſt-Houſes, where People crowd, infect, and ſtink one another to Death with a Thouſand Pollutions. They hive together like Bees, and build their Apartments in Darkneſs. Like Neſts of Piſmires, they trudge up and down all the Summer of their Youth, to heap up Treaſures, that they may ſpend the Winter of their Old Age, in loathſome Eaſe, and benumm'd Stupidity; not daring to veuture out of the Purlieu of their naſty, ſmoaky Habitations, and yet there ready to be ſtifled with their own Breath.

'Tis

'Tis with Pleaſure I contemplate the Face of the Infant Earth, before it was deform'd by the unneceſſary Arts of the Carpenter, Smith and Maſon: When Men had no other Houſes, ſave what they made themſelves, every one for his Family, of the Branches and Boughs of trees, interwoven with Oſiers, Reeds and Ivy; and cover'd thick with Leaves and Graſs to ſhelter them from Wind, Hail, Rain, and other Injuries of Weather. Or perhaps ſome had found out a Den or Cave in the Earth, or the Hollow of a Rock, for a Sanctuary in ſuch Caſes, where they repos'd in perfect Tranquillity, without Fear of Snares or Violence, without Apprehenſion of Robbers, or any Tragical Surprize. They went out and in, ſlept and wak'd, labour'd and reſted in ſafety and quiet. Avarice, Envy and Injuſtice had not as yet corrupted the Minds of Mortals. The Earth brought forth Corn, Herbage, and Fruits, without the Husbandman's or Gard'ners Labour: All Places abounded with Plenty of Innocent Refreſhments, and thoſe Primitive Inhabitants coveted no more. The Cattle and Bees afforded them Milk and Honey, and the Fountain-Waters were Generous as Wine. This Globe was a complete Paradiſe, and no miſtaken Zeal had taught Men Religiouſly to invade one anothers Rights, and in a pious Fury to murder their Neighbours, in hopes of meriting Heaven hereafter. There was no ſuch thing as Bigottry or Superſtition to be found among any of Humane Race. The

Law

Law of Natrue was in Univerſal Force: Every Man purſu'd the Dictates of Reaſon, without hearkning after Religious Sophiſtry, and Sacred Fables.

But when once the Lucre of Gold had corrupted Men's Manners, and they not contented with the Riches and Sweets which they daily cropt from the Surface of the Earth, had found a Way to deſcend into her Bowels, ſtung with an Inſatiable Deſire of hidden Treaſures; then began Injuſtice, Oppreſſion and Cruelty to take place. Men made Enclóſures to themſelves, and encompaſs'd a certain Portion of Land with Hedges, Ditches and Pales, to Fence them from the Invaſions of others; For the Guilt of their own vicious Inclinations, fill'd them with Fears, and made them Jealous of one another. They built themſelves ſtrong Holds, Fortreſſes, Caſtles and Cities. And their Terrors encreaſing with their Criminal Poſſeſſions, they perſwaded themſelves, that the very Elements would prove their Enemies, if not pacified by Bribes and Preſents. Hence ſprung the firſt Invention of Altars and Sacrifices, and from theſe vain Panick Fears of Mortals, the Gods deriv'd their Pedigree. For one built a Temple to the Sun, another to the Moon, a third to Jupiter, Mars or the reſt of the Planets. Some ador'd the Fire, others the Water or Wind. Every one ſet up to himſelf ſuch a God as he phanſied would be propitious to him. Thus Error being equally propagated with with Humane Nature, they created an Infinite Rabble of Imaginary Deities, paying to thoſe Idols, the Supreme and Incommunicable Honours, due only to the Eternal Eſſence, Father and Source of all things.

Beſides, they liv'd in Intolerable Pride and Luxury, in conſtant Wars and Strife, in Darkneſs, Ignorance and Confuſion. I ſpeak of ſuch as dwelt in Cities, and were incorporated together by one common Intereſt. For ſtill there remain'd ſome who obey'd the Original Laws of Nature, and the Traditions of Primitive Humanity. Theſe dwelt in Tents or other Moveable Habitations, as our Countrymen the Arabs do at this Day, with the Tartars their Brethren. They ſcorn'd to faſten themſelves to the Earth, by poſſeſſing any Part of it in Propriety: Every Field and Wood, Hill and Valley, River and Well, were with them in Common. They ſtraggled whither they pleaſed.

This is the Life ſo emulated by me, or inſtead of that at leaſt, a Retirement from Cities, that I may breath out my laſt Hours in a free Air, remote from the ſtifling Company and Contagion of Mortals. I long to range at Liberty through unfrequented Paths of Deſart Ground, o'er wild, unpoliſh'd Heaths, from thence inſenſibly to fall into ſome Venerable Solitude, where the dry, moſſy Barks of Trees, in ſilent Characters proclaim the Antiquity of the Place; and gentle Whiſpers of the Winds, inſtruct the Methods of Platonick Love; inſpire ſtrange Paſſions, which we never felt before, and teach us to converſe with Satyrs, Nymphs, and other harmleſs Tenants of the Shades. How great is the Pleaſure to be thus ſurpriz'd with ſome harmonious, warbling Stream, or Silent, ſoft, deep, Chriſtial River? To ſpeak Incognito with Dryads, Hamadryads, and the Sporting Echo's; To lie diſſolv'd in Looſe, yet Innocent Enjoyments on the Banks; to talk with Nature, with Immortal Subſtances, and with Eternity it ſelf? Oh God! Is not this raviſhing?

which

'Tis difficult to ſay, whether it would be Pleaſant or Painful to return from theſe Ineffable Parades of the Soul, to our Domeſtick Felicities, tho' even in a Rural Life, which I acknowledge to be the Happieſt on Earth. Yet there to trace the Herds and Flocks, to walk amidſt the High-grown Corn, and Graſs, to pluck the bearded Ears of Barley, to let our Eyes rowl o'er the various Figures of the Wind-blown Wheat and Millet, our Noſes to ſuck the Fragrant Airs of Marjoram, Thyme, Oranges and Limons, with Innumerable Spices; our Ears to hear the Inimitable Melody of Birds, and every Senſe to be tranſported, ſnatch'd away and loſt in Sacred Ecſtacies; muſt needs be rank'd among the Higheſt Kinds of Earthly Pleaſures.

But to deſcend from theſe Enjoyments, to the Meaneſt and moſt Common Diverſions of a Country-Life; methinks there's ſomething peculiarly charming in the very Ellenge Situation of the Houſes; whether it be on the Brow of a Hill, or the Bottom of a Valley; in the midſt of a Wood, or the Opening of a Heath; on the Side of a Road, or in ſome obſcure Corner of the Country. 'Tis agreeable, when waking in the Morning, to hear the Bleating of Sheep, Lowing of Oxen, Screaming, Quacking and Crowing of Geeſe, Ducks, Cocks, and other Home-bred Animals; to hear the lowder Winds, threatning to tear up Trees by the Roots, demoliſh Houſes, and remove the Globe it ſelf, if poſſible, from off its Baſis. This would be better Muſick to me for a Change, than a Conſort of Dulcimers, Theorbo's, Tymbrels and Viols. Humane Nature delights in Variety, and there is a certain Audacious Curioſity in the Soul, which loves to venture on Extreams. The Rain, the Dirt, the Stink of Hogs, Camels, Dromedaries, and other neceſſary Rural Beaſts, would pleaſe me better, than the conſtant tedious Eaſe, and Fulſom Sweets of Court or City. I ſweat whilſt thus ſhut up within theſe Walls: It cloys me to be daily walking in a Circle, to trample always o'er the ſame Ground, in a vaſt Labyrinth of Houſes, where my Senſes meet no new refreſhing Objects, but my Ears are hourly nauſeated, vex'd and tyr'd with Rattling Din of Coaches, Carts, Artificers, and the harſh Voices of ſuch as ſell Fleſh, Fiſh, and other things about the Streets. My Eyes can find no grateful Proſpects, but daſh'd with ſurly rugged Looks of proud and wealthy Infidels; or with the fly Satyrick rick Smiles of well-ſhap'd People, who contemn me for my Bandy-Legs, and Crooked Back.

on

In a word, my dear Baſſa, I long to feel the gentle Breezes of the Eaſt, purifying my Soul and cleanſing it from ſo many Pollutions. I languiſh for the Sight of Turbants and Creſcents, for the devout Call of the Muezins on the lofty Minarets: I die in Contemplation of the Sacred Faſts and Feaſts, the Nocturnal Joys of Ramezan, the Revels and Chearful Illuminations of Beiram, and the Imperial Dunalma's. When I think of theſe things, my Soul burſts forth in fervent Invocations, and every Faculty crys Alla, Alla.

May that Divine and Immortal One hear my Prayers, and grant me the Happineſs to ſee the Face of Noble Kerker Haſſan, in an Horizon pure and free from the Defilement of Infidels.

Paris, 14th. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1667.

LET-

LETTER XVIII.

To Iſouf, his Kinſman a Merchant at Aſtracan.

I ſent a Diſpatch to thee in the Year 1664. wherein among other things, I recommended our Couſin Solyman to thy Friendſhip and Patronage, if ever he ſhould travel to Aſtracan, as I advis'd him. For thou know'ſt he has a Roaming Genius, without the Wit to improve himſelf in any Foreign Country, unleſs he has a Friend to guide and take care of him: And then 'twill be a difficult Task to make him ſenſible, where he is. He'll always think he is within the Verge of the Grand Signior's Hunt, where he may domineer at large, under the Notion of a Retainer to the Sultan. He's a ſtrange humour'd Fellow. I know not what to make of him. He's as Changeable as Proteus, or a Chamelion: Sometimes Religiouſly dull and Flegmatick, like a Hadgi; at another Seaſon you ſhall feel his Pulſe beating to the Tune of Youthful Pride, Ambition, Luſt, and other Vices. To Day he'd be a Dervich, Santone, or any thing that bears the Form of Holineſs: But when he's ſlept upon't, the vain Young Convert would return again to the World, and be a Soldier, Courtier, Courtier, Profeſſor of the Law, or any Thing that makes a Figure in the Eyes of Men. So unwelcome are the rigid Paths of Vertue, to a Soul not well eſtabliſh'd in its Principles.

And yet our Couſin Solyman, as I am told, is the Muſſulman of the Muſſulmans, as to his Exteriour. With Hand devoutly laid to Breaſt, and humbleſt Couch o'th' Head, he gives the Salem to his Friends and Neighbours: Soft, as the Signs of Mutes in the Seraglio: Humble, as the Grecian Chapman, walking through the Streets, is forc'd to imitate, when he is hector'd by the Rampant Janizaries.

But, Oh my Couſin Iſouf, 'tis Grief to ſay, that Solyman, Partaker of our Blood, is Baſe, Ungrateful, and Perfidious: That he ſhou'd be thus Unnatural, ſtudying the utmoſt Period of our Life; inſtead of Honeſt, Juſt, and Noble Preſents, to prolong it.

I had Reaſon, long ago, to compare him to Pontius Pilate; and if I had gone on, and ſcum'd off all the moſt Enormous Crimes of Humane Race, 'twould be too little to expreſs his Enmity againſt Mahmut, the kindeſt Uncle, and the trueſt Friend, that e'er poor Solyman cou'd boaſt of.

But he is Degenerate, and that's too little, without the mournful Sighs of thee and me, to increaſe the Aggravation of his Crime.

In

In Fine, he's our Kinſman, and let us ſhew Mercy. He has been perfidious to me, and I wou'd retrench the Words I have ſpoken in his Diſgrace. If he comes to Aſtracan, do as thou pleaſeſt: Bitt have an Eye over thine own Affairs. Take not Solyman for an Angel. He is ſtill but a Turbant maker; a Frolickſom Blade; and a Merchant that makes a very ſmall Figure.

Couſin Iſouf, forget not the Maxims thou haſt learn'd in thy Travels: Be true to thy Friends, and thy ſelf. Honour the Memory of thy deceaſed Parents. Love all Men, that are good. And be not remiſs in praying for the Soul of thy deceaſed Uncle, whenever God ſhall call for it.

Paris, 26th. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1664.

The End of the Sixth Volume.

BOOKS Written by Sir Roger L'Eſtrange, and Printed for Joſeph Hindmarſh and Richard Sare.

1. FAbles of Æſop and other Eminent Mythologiſts, with Morals and Reflections, Folio.

2. Seneca's Morals, by way of Abſtract, the Fifth Edition, Octavo.

3. Select Colloquies out of Eraſmus Roterodamus; pleaſantly repreſenting ſeveral Superſtitious Levities that were crept into the Church of Rome in his Days; the Second Impreſſion corrected and amended, with the Addition of Two Colloquies to the former, Octavo.

4. Tully's Offices in Three Books, turned out of Latin into Engliſh; the Fourth Edition corrected, Twelves.

5. A Guide to Eternity, extracted out of the Writings of the Holy Fathers and Ancient Philoſophers; written ten originally in Latin, by John Bona, and now done into Engliſh; the Third Editio n.

The Genuine Epiſtles of the Apoſtolical Fathers, St. Barnabas, St. Ignatius, St. Clement, St. Polycarp, the Shepherd of Hermas, and the Martyrdoms of St. Ignatius and St. Polycarp, written by thoſe who were preſent at their Sufferings, being together with the holy Scriptures of the New Teſtament, a Compleat Collection of the moſt Primitive Antiquity for 150 Years after Chriſt; Tranſlated and Publiſhed with a Large Preliminary Diſcourſe, relating to the ſeveral Treatiſes here put together. By William Wake, D. D. Chaplain in ordinary to their Majeſties, and Preacher to the Honourable Society of Grays-Inn, Octavo. Price 5 s.

Humane Prudence, or the Art by which a Man may raiſe himſelf and Fortune to Grandeur; the Sixth Edition corrected and enlarged by the Authour. Theſe Two Laſt printed for R. Sare at Grays-Inn. Price 1 s. 6 d.

Mahmut the Turkish Spy

Ætatis suæ 72.

THE

Seventh Volume

OF

LETTERS

Writ by a

Turkish Spy,

Who liv'd Five and Forty Years, Undiscover'd at

PARIS:

Giving an Impartial Account to the Divan at Constantinople, of the most Remarkable Transactions of Europe; And discovering several Intrigues and Secrets of the Christian Courts (especially of that of France) continued from the Year 1667, to the Year 1682.

Written Originally in Arabick, Translated into Italian, and from thence into English, by the Translator of the First Volume.

The Second Edition.

LONDON: Printed by J. R. for J. Hindmarsh and R. Sare, at the Golden Ball in Cornhil, and at Grays-Inn-Gate in Holborn, 1694.

TO THE READER.

'TIS not to be expected, that the World will take it for an Excuſe of the tedious Delay has been made in publiſhing the 7th. Volume of the Turkiſh Spy, to ſay, That our Arabian now grows Old and Decrepid; is forc'd to walk with a Staff or Crutch, as he himſelf confeſſes in one of the following Letters; and is beſides worn out with Sickneſs and Care; ſo that he cannot be ſo expeditious in Buſineſs as he was in his Youth. It may be ſaid, This Apology wou'd be more proper for the Engliſh Tranſlator to make, were he in the ame Condition. But he is in his Prime, in the Flower of his Age, Vigorous and Active; and therefore might have made more Haſt, they'll ſay, to oblige the World, and gratifie the Expectations of thoſe Gentlemen who perpetually dun the Book-ſellers for the reſt of this Mahumetan's Letters.

It were eaſie to anſwer this, by only putting you in mind, That he who undertakes to lead a ſlow-footed, ſhort-winded, and weak Perſon by the Hand, and conduct him to his Journy's End; muſt of Neceſſity keep the ſame Pace with his Charge, tho' he himſelf were ſwift as a Stag when alone, and at Liberty. Beſides, that a Man is apt to attract a Contagion from the Company he keeps, and turn their ill Qualities into Habits of his own.

But

But all this is trifling, and our Engliſh Tranſlator is under none of theſe Circumſtances. To come to the Purpoſe therefore, Gentlemen, you will commend our Tranſlator's Wiſdom, for not being in ſuch Poſt-Haſt at this Juncture, when you reflect, That like a wiſe Racer, tho' he gave a Start in the Beginning, at firſt ſetting out, yet he ſoon ſlacken'd his Pace, that he might make ſure of the Goal, remembring the Old Engliſh Proverb, The more Haſt the worſe Speed. Thus he ſuffer'd Three Years to ſlide by him, before he reach'd the Second Stage. And 2d. Vol. tho' he began to take up his Heels more nimbly afterwards, ſo as to recover by Degrees his loſt Time and Ground, yet ſtill he did but moderately jogg on; now ſpringing, then halting as Occaſion offer'd, and as he found his Strength could hold. At length having but Two Stages more, wonder not, that he is a little more tedious than ordinary in this: For, he does it to refresh himself, and keep his Breath for the last Strain of all, which brings the Prize: Observing herein the Old Adage, Finis Coronat Opus.

As to the Letters contain'd in this 7th Volume, there is little to be said more particular than of those that have gone before. They in General contain a Miscellany of Historical Transactions, Moral and Philosophical Thoughts, interspers'd here and there with Mahometan Politicks and Divinity.

Only You will find our Arabian engaged with a certain Jew at Vienna, in fomenting the Discords of the German Empire, encouraging the Rebels of Hungary, Croatia, atia, and Mutinous Provinces. You will hear of the Deaths of Count Serini, Frangipani, and Nadasti, who were all boheaded for being Ring-leaders in this Rebellion.

The next and laſt Volume has this of ſingular in it, that it will preſent you with the Riſe and Preferment of Count Teckeli, who has made ſo much Noiſe in the World. It relates many of his Publick Actions, and not a few of his Secret Intrigues. In fine, it diſcovers the Train that was laid to blow up all Europe into the Flame of Open War, and Univerſal Hoſtility, which to this Day conſumes the Lives and Eſtates of ſo many Thouſand Chriſtians, impoveriſhes and lays waſt whole Nations, and 'tis to be feared will end in letting in the Turks once more upon us, to our final Ruin and Confuſion; ſince those Infidels never take greater Advantage to Invade and Conquer the Dominions of Christians, than when they find us involv'd in domestick Wars one with another.

A TA-

A TABLE OF THE LETTERS and Matters contained in this Volume.

VOL. VII.

BOOK I.

LETTER I.

MAhmut the Arabian at Paris, to Mirmadolin, Holy Santone, of the Vale of Sidon. Page 1

He complains of the Miseries and Sadnesses of his Life, and wishes himself e'en fairly out of the World.

II. To the Kaimacham. 6

Of a Peace between the English and Dutch. Of the Birth of the Young Princess of France. Of the Frolicks and Humours us'd in this Time of Universal Rejoycings.

III. To Dgnet Oglou. 10

He

He diſcourſes of the Birth, Life and Death of Jeſus the Son of Mary.

IV. To Aſis Baſſa. 19
He takes Courage at the News of the Grand Signior's beſieging of Candia.

V. To Haſnadar Baſſa, Chief Treaſurer to the Sultan. 22
He complains of the Slackneſs of the Miniſters of the Port, in anſwering his Diſpatches; and relates ſome of the Misfortunes that at this Time befel him.

VI. To Nathan Sadi, a Jew at Vienna. 27
He continues to lament the Diſaſters that the Malice of Men loaded him with. His Confinement in the Baſtile. His Reſolution of Baffling the Efforts of Spite and Envy.

VII. To the Venerable Mufti. 30
He craves his Advice, how to behave himſelf in caſe of being diſcover'd. He reflects upon the ſad and unaccountable Degeneracy of Mankind: Gives little Hints of ſome that deſign'd to Ruin his Credit at the Port.

VIII. To Cara Hali, Phyſician to the Grand Signior. 36
He diverts him with the Relation of a monſtrous Child born in the Low-Countries.

IX. To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna. 41

He

He perſuades him to foment the Diſcontents of Hungary.

X. To the moſt Sublime, and Magnificent of the Muſſulman Baſſa's, Achmat, the Vizir Azem. 46

He diſcourſes of the Advantages may be taken from the Diſtractions in Hungary.

XI. To the Selictar Aga, or Sword-Bearer to the Sultan. 49

Of the Deaths of the Queen of Poland, and Pope Alexander VII. Of the French Succeſſes in Flanders.

XII. To Dgnet Oglou. 51

Of an Encounter he had with Daria, his former Miſtreſs.

XIII. To Peſteli Haſi, his Brother, Maſter of the Cuſtoms, and Superintendant of the Royal Arſenal at Conſtantinople. 57

Several Remarks on Women, out of the Hebrew Rabbi's and others.

XIV. To the ſame. 65

Of Solyman's Treachery, and the baſe Trick he put upon Fatima, Daughter to Uſeph, Mahmut's Uncle.

XV. To the Mufti's Vicar. 71

He acquaints him that the Cardinals have elected Clement IX. to be Pope in the Room of Alexander VII. deceaſed. Compariſons between the Popes and the Ancient cient Roman Pontiffs. Of the Pope's Great Power, Strength and Authority.

XVI. To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna. 76
Of the Converſion of Sabbati Sevi to the Mahometan Faith.

XVII. To Dgnet Oglou. 85
He informs him that Daria is deceitful, and how by mere Accident he found out 'twas her Husband, who would have ſtabb'd him in the Streets one Night, whom therefore he kill'd.

XVIII. To the Kaimacham. 89
Of the Arrival of the Cardinal Duke of Vendôme at the Frenh Court, in Quality of Legat de Latere from the Pope. Of the Alterations in Portugal.

XIX. To Abdel Melec Muly Omar, Preſident of the College of Sciences at Fez. 92
He thanks him for his New Syſtem of the Heavens; extols its Accuracy; and incites him to make ſome Corrections of Geography.

XX. To Oſman Adraoeneth, Aſtrologer to the Sultan at Adrianople. 98
He diſcourſes of Ptolimy's and Copernicus's Syſtem.

XXI. To the Venerable Mufti, Principal Support of Learning, and True Science. 104

He

The TABLE.

He humbly Recommends, That a Complete History of the World, should be collected out of the most Ancient and Sincere Writers, and digested into Annals from the Beginning of Time, down to the Reign of the present Emperor.

BOOK II.

LETTER I.

TO Mehemet, an exil'd Eunuch at Alcair in Egypt. Page 113

He Sympathizes with his Sufferings, and advises him not to sink under the frightful Idea's of Melancholly

II. To Mohammed, the Illustrious Eremit of Mount Uriel in Arabia the Happy. 121

He opposes Aristotle, and the Peripateticks, who asserts, That Vertue consists in Mediocrity: He expresses his Aspirations after a Solitary and Abstinent Life.

III. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 129

Of the present State of the German Empire, with Characters of the People. The strange Epitaph of Frederick, Brother-in-Law to the Emperor Sigismund, written with his own Hand, on his Death-bed.

IV. To

IV. To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna. 134

He reproves the Methods of the Malecontents, in attempting to poyson the Emperour, and set the Palace on Fire. Exhorts him to be moderate and neutral. Of the Counts Serini, Frangipani and Tatembach.

V. To Pesteſi Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Grand Signior's Cuſtoms at Conſtantinople. 138

He acquaints him with the Marriage of Oucoumiche his Mother; and Eliachim the Jew; as alſo with her ſudden Death.

VI. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 141

Of the German Wealth and Plenty, both natural and acquired by foreign Traffick.

VII. To Hebatolla, Mir Argun, Superiour of the Convent of Derviches at Cogni, in Natolia. 145

He preſents him with a full Relation of the Life of St. John Baptiſt, and explains the Meaning of the Word Locuſt.

VIII. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 155

He gives an Account of the great Preparations the Chriſtians were making for the Relief of Candia. Of a Triple League: And of the Birth of the Infanta of Portugal tugal. With a farther Deſcription of Italy.

IX. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 159
Of Don John of Auſtria's being made Governour of the Low-countries. The Grounds of Nitard's juggling with him. His Character.

X. To Hebatolla, Mir Argun, Superior of the Convent of Dervices at Cogni in Natolia. 162
He acquaints him with the King of Poland's Religious Retreat from the World; and of his being made Abbot of the Abbey of St. Germains, near Paris.

XII. To Uſeph, Baſſa. 169
Of the Deaths of the Cardinal Duke of Vendôme, a Dutcheſs of the ſame Title, and Henrietta Maria, late Queen of Great Brittain, and Dowager of Charles I. Of the Arrival of the King of Poland, and Prince of Toſcany, at the French Court.

XIII. To the Kaimacham. 173
Of the Arrival of Solyman Iſmael Mutafaraca, with Expreſſes from the Grand Signior to the King of France. Solyman's Character, and Praiſe. Of a Plague at Soiſſons, and an Earthquake in Sicily.

BOOK

The TABLE.

BOOK III.

LETTER I.

To Mehemet, an Exil'd Eunuch, at Alcaire in Egypt. Page 181

He perſuades him not to be Melancholly: Adviſes him to travel.

II. To the Same. 186

He purſues the ſame Diſcourſe, earneſtly preſſing him to leave Egypt, and ſurvey the reſt of Africa.

III. To the Mufti, Venerable Patron of Learning and Knowledg. 190

He preſents him with an Hiſtorical Epitome of the Aſſyrian, Babylonian and Perſian Monarchies.

IV. To Mirmadolin, Santone of the Vale of Sidon. 201

He diſcourſes of the Vanity and Inſufficiency of exteriour Religion. Of Spiritual Abdication from the World.

V. To the Selictar Aga, or Sword-Bearer to the Sultan, 204

He

He entertains him with the Description of an Excellent Play acted before the King and Queen of France, during the Carnaval. Of a Peace concluded between France and Algiers. Of the Conquest of Lorrain.

VI. To Isouf, his Kinsman, a Merchant at Astracan. 208

He dissuades him from his melancholly Resolution of turning Eremit, Faquir, or Dervich. Of Ilch Read Hu, the Indian Philosopher, and his mysterious Habitation.

VII. To the Chiaux Bassa. 216

Of the Arrival of an Embassador at the French Court from the King of Arder in Africk.

VIII. To Mohammed, the Illustrious Solitary of Mount Uriel, in Arabia. 220

He asserts and endeavours to prove, That the Brutes are endu'd with a Species of Reason and Knowledg.

IX. To Zeidi Alamanzi, a Merchant at Venice. 225

Being inform'd that Zeidi is commanded to travel through Italy, he gives him good Counsel in Order thereto.

X. To Dgnet Oglou. 231

Of

Of a Strange and unaccountable Accident which happen'd to Mahmut on his Sick-Bed.

XI. To Sephat Abercromil, Vanni Effendi, Preacher to the Sultan. 236

Of the Quietists, and the General Entertainment their Doctrin finds in Europe. Mahmut seems highly to favour it; and affirms, 'twas recommended by all Religions in the World.

XII. To Cara Hali, Physician to the Grand Signior. 242

He asserts the Immortality of the Soul: From which Discourse he makes a Digression, and treats allegorically of Natural Things.

XIII. To the Mufti. 249

He presents him with a Continuation of Remarkable Passages during the Persian Monarchy. A memorable Saying of Darius on his Death-Bed.

BOOK

The TABLE.

BOOK IV.

LETTER I.

To Pesteli Hali, his Brother, Master of the Customs, and Superintendent of the Arsenal, at Constantinople. Page 261

He advises him not to be discourag'd by Reason of his Son's Amorous Temper, his keeping Company with Foreign Merchants and Travellers. And tells him a Story of a Father's extraordinary Contrivance to reclaim a Prodigal Son.

II. To Codarafrad Cheick, a Man of the Law. 286

Of a Huguenot that assassinated a Priest as he was saying Mass in the Church of Nostre Dame at Paris; and of his Punishment.

III. To Dgnet Oglou. 272

Of the Roman Casuists. Of Mahometan Hypocrites. Of Interiour Devotion and Piety.

IV. To the Kaimacham. 281

Of a League between the Kings of England and France, who both proclaim Open War against the Dutch. The Story of John de Wit. The Description of a Royal Entertainment at Chantilly, by Night.

V. To

V. To Cara Hali, Phiſician to the Grand Signior. 286

Of Magick, Phyſick, and Theology, a pleaſant Story of a Peruvian Slave. Of Famous Mathematicians. Of the Superſtition of the Female Sex.

VI. To Orchan Cabet, Student in the Sciences, and Penſioner to the Grand Signior. 292

He endeavours by Rational Arguments to convince him, that the Alcoran is of Divine Original.

VII. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 296

Of the King of France's Conqueſts in the Low-Countries. Of the Death of the Duke of Longueville.

VIII. To William Voſpel, a Recluſe of Auſtria. 301

Of the Difference and Contrariety between the Practice of the Primitive Chriſtians, and thoſe of the preſent Age.

IX. To Codarafrad Cheik, a Man of the Law.

Of the Wandring Jew at Aſtracan. His Sermons and Prophecies. How the Turks ſhall over-run and conquer the greateſt Part of Europe in the Year 1700. That England ſhall become the Sanctuary of diſtreſs'd Chriſtians. Of a certain Holy Engliſh Man, who ſhall be made Chief Patriarch of

of all the Christians, and shall have his Seat in Jerusalem, &c.

XIII. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 315
Several Memoirs of Cardinal Richlieu.

XIV. To Musu Abu'l Yahyan, Professor of Philosophy at Fez. 323
A Panegyrick on Africk.

XV. To the same.
He describes Constantinople, with an Account of its Name and Original; and the Conquest of it by Mahomet II.

XVI. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 336
Of the German Strength and Policies.

XVII. To Cara Hali, Physician to the Grand Signior. 343
Of his Grief and Melancholly; and the Pleasure he takes in writing to his Friend.

XVIII. To Musu Abu'l Yahyan, Professor of Philosophy at Fez. 348
He gives him a farther Description of Constantinople.

GELLERS

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. VII.

BOOK I.

LETTER I.

Mahmut the Arabian at Paris, to Mirmadolin, Holy Santone of the Vale of Sidon.

WHY was I made a Man, to endure theſe Cruel Agonies, of which no other Species of known Beings can poſſibly be Capable? Or why, at leaſt, was I particularly Form'd of ſuch a Conſtitution, as to attract the Evils which are ſcatter'd up and down the World, and Piece-Meal dropp'd on the Nativities of other Mortal Men; whilſt I alone am made the Common Sink of Humane Miſery? Surely my Partial Horoſcope Monopoliz'd the moſt envenom'd Aſpects of the Stars, without partaking of the leaſt Benigne and Favourable Glance. The Planets had laid up an Ancient deep Reſerve of Fatal Influences, which they pour'd out at large upon the very Moment of my Birth. Nor cou'd the Careful Midwife with all her Skill and Charms, defend my tender, ductile, reeking Body, from the Inviſible Cataracts which flow'd upon me from all the Envious Signs and Conſtellations in Heaven.

My whole Life has been but One continu'd Tragedy, wherein the Various Change of Scenes has not reliev'd me from the Leaſt Real Evil hid behind, but only amus'd my Senſe with ſome New Pageantry, ſome Fair Idea of Honour, Pleaſure or Profit; When before the ACT was done, I found my ſelf cajol'd, and over-whelm'd in Freſh Calamities; Misfortunes which I never dream't of.

Oh! that th' Omnipotent, when from Eternal ſilent Thought, he drew the Idea's of every Species, and every Individual Being, which he deſign'd for Actual Exiſtence in the World, had Form'd me for a Tree, an Herb, a Blade of Graſs, a Stone, a Muſh-room, or any Inſenſible Thing, Incapable of Pleaſure or Pain, of Grief or Joy, or other Paſſions Paſſions, which hourly thus torment our Humane Race; I had been then a Happy Neuter to all falſe Shews of Happineſs, and Real Senſe of Miſery. Oh! that I'd been an Oak, a Beech, a Palm, or Cypreſs of the Foreſt: For then, if Vegetables have any Feeling of their own State, I ſhou'd be only touch'd with ſecret Pleaſure, when the Gentle Winds ſhou'd play among my Amorous Branches, and teach my wanton Leaves, to dance the Meaſures of Young Harmleſs Love; Or when I felt the ſeaſonable Rain diſtilling on my wither'd Bark, and from thence ſliding to my thirſty Roots; Or when Great Phœbus prints warm vigorous Kiſſes on my Cheeks and Neck. But if this be too proud a Thought, I wiſh I'd been only ſome Humble Shrub, ſome Pigmy Plant, ſome Vegetable Dwarf, a Page unto the Mighty Trees, ſubſiſting on the Drops and Fragments of their large Banquets, meekly cringing at their Feet; whilſt I ſtood ſafe and free from Storms, under the Shade of their extended Boughs, in Happy low Obſcurity.

When I paſs through the Fields, and ſee the Harmleſs Sheep browzing upon the tender Graſs, and hear them bleating to their wanton Lambs, I cannot chuſe but envy them a Life ſo void of Care and Pain. They range and ſport at large in Flow'ry Meadows, near ſome Cryſtal Stream, or take the Paſtures of the Mountains: Whilſt Chearful Shepherds tune their Pipes, and ſing in Praiſe of Amaryllis, Daphne, Sylvia, or ſome other Nymph; and watchful Dogs lie ſcouting on the Plain, to give th' Alarm, and chaſe away ſly Wolves, and other Ravenous Beaſts.

After I've let my Envy fix it ſelf a while on theſe, a warbling Melody from neighbouring Groves diverts my Melancholy Thoughts, and turns 'em to new Objects. Then I lament my Fate, in that I was not made a Nightingale, a Thruſh, a Lark, or any of the Feather'd Quire, who with ſweet chearful Notes ſalute Aurora and the Riſing Sun, and chirp all Day the Praiſes of that Source of Warmth and Life, who veſts the Earth in Green Attire, who decks the Trees with Verdant Leaves, and fills the World with Light. They chirp and fly from Tree to Tree, from Bough to Bough, rejoycing in the Beams that dart and glide among the moving Shades of Branches rock'd by Winds. Their Thoughts are taken up in Building Neſts, wherein to hatch their Young, and ſhelter them from Injuries. They have no Plots nor Politick Tricks, to undermine each other; but paſs away their Time in Innocent Security, and harmleſs Pleaſures.

Methinks, the Worms and little Reptiles of the Earth are happier far than I. They crawl and creep about in Hollow Trees, in Clefts of Rocks and Crannies of the Ground, to hunt for Food and for Diverſiſement. They live at Eaſe, without being rack'd by ſupernumerary Cares and Fears. And if ſome Ruder Foot of Man or Beaſt ſhall trample them by Chance to Death, or more malicious Hand with Stone or other Weapon ſhall wilfully bereave them of their Life, 'tis done ſo ſuddainly that they've no Senſe of Pain: Whereas my Life's a conſtant Martyrdom; a long continued Series of Torments.

more

I do not complain of the Diſtempers and Maladies which afflict my Body; though thoſe are ſometimes ſo violent as to make me wiſh for Death, that ſo I might be at Eaſe: But 'tis the fretting Anguiſh of my Mind, that forces all theſe Sighs and Exclamations from me. I am embaraſs'd in the World: Snares compaſs me round about; my own Good Nature has betray'd me: Thoſe of my Blood conſpire againſt me; they hunt me up and down like a Partridge in the Wood; they cloſely purſue my Life. The Kindneſſes that I have ſown, ſpring up in Blades of bitter Ingratitude and Perfidy. My Seminaries bring forth Aconite and ſtinking Weeds, inſtead of pleaſant Flowers and wholeſome Fruits. Tagot has ſet his Foot in all my Works. That ſly interloping Spirit, hates to ſee any good Thing proſper, or come to Perfection: He ſteals behind us in all our Ways; and as faſt as we weave any Web of Vertue, he ſecretly unravels it, or deforms the Work with intermixing ſome Threads of Vice. I am weary of ſtriving againſt the Current of my Fate. Oh! That I were as though I had never been! That my Soul were drench'd in Lethe's Forgetful Waters, where all Paſt Things are buried in Eternal Oblivion! Then wou'd my Anguish be at an end; Whereas I am now rowl'd about upon a Wheel of Miseries.

Holy Santone, when thou shalt read this, pity me; and amidst thy Divine Ejaculations, dart up Mahmut's Soul to Paradise, on the Point of a strong Thought, that so at least I may have a Moments Respite from my Constant Sadness.

Paris, 27th. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1677.

LETTER II.

To the Kaimacham.

THere is now some Probability of a Peace between the English and the Dutch: Which will also reconcile this Crown to that of Great Britain; Since the King of France engag'd in this War, only on the Account of the Dutch, his Allies. The Advances toward this Accomodation, took their Rise from the Alliance lately concluded between the States of the United Provinces, the King of Denmark, the Duke of Brandenburgh, and the Princes of Brunswick. The King of England protests against the Dutch, as the First Aggressors, in that they had taken above Two Hundred of his Merchant ships, before before he offer'd the leaſt Act of Hoſtility. Which the States ſeeming to acknowledge, deſire the King to appoint ſome Neutral Place of Treaty with them and their Allies, in Order to a Peace, the Security of Navigation, and the Eſtabliſhment of Commerce for the future.

Here is great Joy for the Birth of a young Princeſs, of whom the Queen was deliver'd on the 2d. of the Moon of January. She is call'd God's New-Years Gift to France: In regard, the Firſt Day of that Moon begins the Year with the Chriſtians. And 'tis common among them to ſend mutual Gifts and Preſents to one another at that Time, which they call, New-Years Gifts. And ſo it ſeems, God Almighty has appear'd very Modiſh and Complaiſant, in thus timing the Nativity of the Royal Babe: For which they expreſs their Thanks in Revelling, Dancing, Ballads, and a Thouſand other Vanities. And theſe Divertiſements continue to this Time, it being the Nazarenes Carnaval; a Seaſon conſecrated to Sport and Mirth, to Liberty, Buffoonry, and all Manner of Comical and Ridiculous Apiſhneſs.

During this Time, you ſhall ſee an Infinite Variety of odd Humours, and mimical Actions in the open Streets, according to every Man's particular Phancy. Here you ſhall meet with one dreſs'd half i'th' French, and half i'th' Spaniſh Faſhion. On the left ſide of his Head hangs dangling down a long thick curled Peruke, which reaches to his Breaſt; whilſt on the Right you ſee nothing but his own Hair, crop'd cloſe to his Ears. A long Muſtach as black as Jet, graces the Right Side of his upper Lip; whilſt on the Left, he is Beardleſs as a Boy of Seven Years Old. And ſo from Head to Foot, he wears two contrary Garbs. One walks about with Gloves upon his Feet, and Shooes upon his Hands: Another wears his Breeches like a Mantle on his Shoulders. Here comes a ſtately Coach, jogging along with grave ſlow Pace, and drawn by Six fair Horſes, as if ſome Prince or Cardinal were in it; when behold, there's nothing but a ſilly Aſs puts forth his giddy Head, with flapping Ears, half drunk with the jolting, unaccuſtom'd Motion. Sometimes he brays aloud, and then the Rabble fall alaughing. A Thouſand other Fopperies there are, not worth thy Knowledge: for, both the Noble and the Vulgar are all upon the Frolick at this Time, and indulge their wanton Fancies to the Height. But 'tis a fatal Seaſon for the poor Cats; few of which eſcape the Multitude, whoſe peculiar Paſtime 'tis to toſs theſe Creatures in a Blanket till they are dead; or elſe to tye them Two and Two together by the Tails, and then they'll bite and ſcratch one another to Death. The Cocks alſo are generally great Martyrs during the Carnaval; the Rabble have a Hundred Cruel Ways to murder them in Sport. All their Devices are Inhumane and Bloody. They did not learn theſe prophane Courſes from Jeſus, or any of the Prophets or Apostles of God: But they are the Reliques of Gentile Vanity, in the Beginning conniv'd at by the Priests, the easier to retain their Proselites in Obedience; who wou'd rather have parted with their New Religion, than with their Old Barbarous Customs. And thus the Pagan Fooleries were handed down to the Posterity of the Primitive Christians, and were adopted into the Family of Church Traditions: And Men are not more zealous for the Gospel it self, than for these Ridiculous Prophanations of it: So dangerous a Thing is it for Governours, by a Criminal Indulgence, to permit their Subjects any Liberty which interferes with the Fundamental Principles of the Law: For, such a Dispensation once granted, passes into a Precedent, which in Process of Time, becomes of equal Force with the Law it self. And by such prepostrous Methods of winning and retaining Converts, Christianity arriv'd to the Height of Corruption it's now infected with.

of

Sage Minister, 'twas for this Reason God rais'd up our Holy Prophet, and gave him a new Law, with Power to reform and chastise the Infidels. He planted the Undefiled Faith with Scymeter in Hand; not palliating or encouraging the smallest Vicious Practice; but subduing all Things by the Dint of Reason or the Keen Edge of the Sword. God hasten his Return; for the Prevarications of this Age require it.

Paris, 27th. of the 2d. Moon of the Year 1667.

LETTER III.

To Dgnet Oglou.

I Believe thou haſt not forgot the Obſervations we us'd to make, on the Religion of the Chriſtians, when we were Slaves together in Cicily. How Ridiculous ſome of their Practices appear'd to us, and yet what a Sanctity was manifeſt in others? How much we approved the Majeſty of their Publick Worſhip, the Solemnity of their High-Maſs, the Gravity of their Proceſſions? And yet how great was our Diſguſt, when we conſider'd that all theſe Honours were perform'd to Figures and Statues of Stone, Wood, Silver, Gold, or other Materials, the Creatures of the Painter or Carver?

We ſcann'd their Doctrines alſo, which we learn'd from their Prieſts and Books, and deſcanted variouſly on them, as they were more or leſs conform to the Truth, and to the Volume brought down from Heaven. In a Word, we prais'd the Good, and cenſur'd what was Evil in their Faith and Manners, or at leaſt, what we thought to be ſo; for herein we follow'd the Dictates of our Education.

But now in our Riper Years, if we ſhou'd call over our former Thoughts, perhaps we ſhou'd be of a different Judgment, and find Matter to condemn even in our own paſt Cenſures.

ſures: For whatever we might then think of the Nazarenes; upon a maturer ſearch, I cannot find them to be altogether ſuch groſs Idolaters and Infidels, as we and all Muſſulmans are apt to believe.

That which gives me the greateſt Scandal is, That their Doctors entertain ſome Unwarrantable Speculations about Three Subſiſtences in One Eſſence, and are too venturous in their Thoughts concerning the Eternal Generation of the WORLD, and Emanation of the BREATH, by which they ſay, All Things were Created, and are conſerv'd in their Beings. They teach a Doctrine Repugnant to the Alcoran, when they ſay, That God has a Companion Equal to Himſelf.

As to the Incarnation of Jeſus the Son of Mary, the Nazarenes aſſert nothing but what is ſuitable to the Alcoran, which teaches us, That he is the WORD of God. In the Hiſtory of his Life, they indeed come ſhort of the Muſſulmans: There being not the leaſt mention made, in the whole Book of the Goſpel, of many Paſſages in his Infancy, and tender Years, wherewith the Alcoran, with other Holy Books and Traditions of the Ancients, acquaints the True Believers. The Meſſenger of God tells us, That Jeſus ſpoke in his Cradle, reſolv'd Doubts, clear'd up Miſtakes, and preach'd the Unity of the Divine Eſſence. Other Writings alſo inform us, That while he was Young, he formed the Figures of divers Birds and Beaſts, of Clay and his own Spittle, and having ving breath'd on them, they became Living Creatures, and prostrated themselves at his Feet. They relate also, That he made a Pigeon, which flew up and down through divers Regions, and brought him News of whatever was done in the Courts of Foreign Princes; and that from the Day of his Birth, to that of his Translation, Twelve Angels waited on him, and brought him down Food from Paradise. Of these Things the Christians are ignorant, and of many other Passages. So that in the whole, it is Evident, that the Mussulmans have a more Particular Relation of the Life of Jesus, than the Christians themselves have, since we recount those Miracles and other Actions of his, whereof the Gospel is silent.

But then, on the other Side, they believe Things concerning his Death, whereof neither the Alcoran, nor any other of our Writings or Traditions make any Mention, unless it be to confute the Error of the Nazarenes in that Point. I have heard the Arguments of their Learned Doctors, and comparing them with our Objections, I know not well what to conclude.

They insist much on the Publick Signs and Wonders, that fell out at the Time of the suppos'd Crucifixion of the Messiah; The Rending of Rocks, Opening of Graves, Resurrection of many Dead, and the Preternatural Eclipse of the Sun, when the Moon was in Sight in the other Part of the Horizon at the same Moment: Which made a great Philosopher then in Egypt, cry out, Either the Frame of the World is dissolv'd, or the God of Nature suffers.

a great

They tell a Story also of a certain Ship, that was on that very Day sailing in the Archipelago; and that as they pass'd by certain Rocks, the Mariners heard a Voice calling, Thamus, Thamus, very often and loud. Now there being one of that Name on Board the Vessel, he answer'd to his Name: Upon which the Voice said, When thou comest to the Island of the Palodes, proclaim it aloud, That the Great Pan is Dead. Which he did accordingly, and there follow'd a horrible howling and roaring from the Shoar of that Island. This Passage was afterwards made known to the Senate of Rome, who thereupon, at the Instance of some Noble Romans, sent to enquire in the Provinces, Whether any Remarkable Person had died on that Day; and they were informed, That the Jews had on the same Day put to Death Jesus the Son of Mary. And Tiberius the Emperor, on the Credit of this Passage, being also inform'd of the Miracles which Jesus wrought among the Jews, conceiving an immediate Veneration for so Divine a Person, caus'd his Statue to be set up in the Capitol, and would have had him number'd among the Gods; but in this he was oppos'd by the Senate, because they had before decreed, That no new Deities shou'd be added to the Kalendar.

In these Things I rely on the Account which the Christians give of the Death of

Jesus,

Jesus, though they bring Authorities also and Testimonies of their very Enemies, and inveterate Persecutors, the Gentiles; who therefore one wou'd think, cannot be suspected of Partiality. In a word, I know not what to think of these Things. For, if it be true, that Jesus died on the Cross for the Sins of the World, as the Christians believe, and that there is no other Way to be saved, but by believing this; then in what a sad Condition are all the Jews and Mussulmans, the One glorying in having murder'd the Saviour of the World, and the Other not believing that he was murder'd? The First seem to merit most of Men; since though the Act was Cruel in it self, yet according to this Doctrine, it brought Salvation to all our Race: And therefore there were a sort of Christians, in Former Times, who worshipp'd the Serpent that tempted Eve, because according to their Faith, that Temptation was the first Step to Mankind's Happiness, after Adam's Fall; And they plac'd Judas (who betray'd Jesus to the Jews) among the Saints, for having been so particular an Instrument in the World's Redemption.

If Jesus be the Saviour of Men, it is absolutely necessary to believe in him. But whether he be, or be not, the Faith of the Christians in that Point cannot hurt them, since our Holy Prophet himself has taught us, That Christians shall be sav'd, as well as the Mussulmans: Whereas the Christians say, it is impossible for any to be saved, who follow the Law of Mahomet, So that they have our own Grant for their Salvation, which they deny to us. This is a great Advantage on their Side, in the Controverſy betwixt us.

the

For my Part, I tell thee ingenuouſly, were I convinc'd that Jeſus was the Son of God, and that he ſuffer'd Death for the Sake of Men I cou'd readily embrace moſt of the other Tenets of Chriſtianity without Scruple. I ſhou'd not be frighted at their Invocation of Saints, ſince 'tis the ſame as we our ſelves practiſe; nor wou'd their Images and Pictures ſtartle my Faith; I ſhou'd look upon theſe and a Thouſand more, as things indifferent in themſelves, and onely made Lawful or Unlawful, by the Sanction of Divine Authority.

I ſhou'd be moſt puzzl'd to know what Church to fix in, among ſo many, all pretending to the Right Way. I have examin'd their Different Opinions, and find Reaſon or ſomething very like it, on all Sides. I admire the Abſtinence of the Greeks, Armenians, and generally of all the Eaſtern Chriſtians; yet their Ignorance diſtaſtes me. I honour the Learning and Politeneſs of the Roman Church, and cou'd almoſt vail to their pretenſions of Antiquity, Univerſality, and Incorrupt Doctrine; but I am highly ſcandalized at their Licentiouſneſs, Pride, and Cruelty. There is much to be argu'd for the Cophti's Abyſſians, Melchites, the Chriſtians of St. John, and other Churches; but more to be said against them. In fine, if I were to turn Christian, I shou'd be in a Wilderness, not knowing which Path to take, for Fear of missing the Right.

to

In the State therefore wherein I am, I will think Honourably of Jesus, as also of Mary his Mother, who at her daily Return from the Temple, found a Thousand Sorts of Flowers in her Oratory. I will not speak Evil of any Person that has the Character of a Saint; but in general will desire the Intercession of all that are near to God: 'Tis ten to one, if some of them do not vouchsafe to pray for me. But whether they do, or not, God hears me, and observes my Devotion; and if he please, my Petitions shall be granted. As for the Rest, I will endeavour, in all Things, to do as I would be done to, keeping my Conscience free from Stain, that so I may die in Peace; and what becomes of me afterwards, 'tis in vain to be sollicitous, since the Decrees of Fate are Irreversible.

Tell me now, my Friend, whether these Thoughts and Resolves be not more agreeable to Humanity, than to be a Furious Bigot, for I know not what? Is that a commendable Zeal for Religion, which under Pretence of defending the Truth, sticks not to assert a Thousand Lyes? Or that a laudable Charity for Souls, which in Order to their Salvation, takes infinite Pains to set the World together by the Ears, and embroil Mankind in perpetual Wars? What else do those Disturbers of Humane Race, who not content with the Limits which the Fortune of their Birth has set them, invade the Peaceable Possessions of their Neighbours, commit all Sorts of Violences, Rapines, and Outrages; and all this under Pretext of Reforming the Manners of Men, introducing Purity of Religion, and fulfilling the Will of Heaven? As if it were a Mark of a Divine Commission, to be barbarously Unjust, Perfidious and Salvage; and that the Height of Piety, consisted in shedding Humane Blood!

those

For my Part, I cannot approve of these Practices, and therefore think it safer to stand aloof from all Religions thus Cruelly established, than by entring into their Inhumane Secrets, and swearing to their Sanguine Articles, incorporate my self with profess'd Murderers, under the Notion of being a Good Man.

Happy are those Innocent Nations in the East, who from their First Progenitors, have kept Inviolate the Law of Nature: Who never have defiled themselves with the Blood of Men or Beasts; but every one contenting himself with his Native Home-stall, and the Fruits of his own Land, makes no Encroachments on those that dwell near him, nor butchers the Harmless Animals, to gratify his Ill-nurtur'd Appetite. These sit under the Shade of their own Trees, and bathe themselves in the adjoining Streams: They go in Peace to the Houses of their Rural-Gods, and and preſent e'm with Flowers, Rice, Fruits, and ſuch as the Ground brings forth: They never dream of Foreign Conqueſts, nor are troubled with Domeſtick Broils, but lead their Lives in a perpetual Tranquility, and Innocence. All that they deſire of Heaven, is the Continuance of thoſe harmleſs Delights they at preſent enjoy. As for the tumultuary Pleaſures of other Mortals, they have 'em in Contempt. This is an Umbrage of the Felicity we are promis'd in Paradiſe, where the Sound of the Drum and the Trumpet ſhall not be heard, and the Inſtruments of War ſhall be of no Uſe.

If thou chargeſt me with Inconſtancy in my Opinions, I neither deny it nor am aſham'd: It being better to change ones Thoughts every Day, than to be fix'd in Error all ones Life. This to a Friend.

Paris, 18th. of the 3d, Moon,
of the Year 1667.

LETTER

LETTER IV.

To Asis, Bassa.

THE Warriours and Mechanicks, Statesmen and Fidlers, Courtiers and Husbandmen, Students and Chimney-Sweepers, are all taken up in discoursing of the mighty Preparations the Grand Signior is making to besiege Candia. They talk of Fifteen Thousand Pioneers, who are at work in Order to this grand Undertaking; and that the City is block'd up by an Army of Sixty Thousand Men; That they have been raising Batteries round about it ever since the Moon of December; and that the Sultan is resolv'd to win this Important Place, though he hazard half the Ottoman Empire.

This is refreshing News to Mahmut, who has heard Nothing but Improsperous Stories of the Mussulman Arms these many Years. Now I begin to lift up my Head, and take Courage, when the Empire of True Believers makes some Noise and Figure in the World: Whereas, my heart perpetually droop'd before. I was like one among the Dead.

It was but last Year, when the Nazarenes cou'd boast, that notwithstanding all the Menaces and Preparations of the Grand Signior, yet the Venetians were the First in Field by Land, and appear'd Earliest with their Fleet

Fleet at Sea, doing wonderful Things in Dalmatia, and blocking up Canea in the Isle of Candy: Now, 'tis to be hop'd, they'll change their Note, and begin to consider what a formidable Force they have provok'd against them, even the Puissance of all Asia, Men of War from their Nativities, an Army of Select and chosen Souldiers Undaunted Hero's, Sons of Thunder, Magnanimous, Invincible, and destin'd to vanquish the Uncircumcis'd Nations.

My Heart is reviv'd within me, at the Contemplation of sure and certain Victories attending this glorious Expedition. My Spirits are dilated with Joy; I celebrate a Dunalma in my Breast. I am like an Arabian Horse, that foams, curvetts, and paws the Ground in Fiercenels, when he hears the Sound of the Trumpet warning to Battel. His Eyes sparkle with Martial Fury, a Smoak goes out of his Nostrils, he lifts up the Voice of his Courage, his Rider can hardly restrain him. So am I all in Transport at these good Tidings: I can hardly contain my self within the Compass of Moderation. As Old as I am, I feel a Youthful Vigour stirring in my Veins. Methinks, I long to be in the Heat of the Sacred Combat, in the thickest Clouds of Gunpowder-Smoak, to stand the Shock of Showers of Bullets, or with my Scymeter in hand to hew my Way to Immortal Honour and Felicity: For, those who die in this Cause go streight to Paradise. But, I must be contented with this this tame, humble Poſt, and ſerve the Grand Signior in the Manner preſcrib'd by my Superiours. I tell thee, 'tis no ſmall Mortification for an Active Spirit to be thus confined. But, Reſignation becomes every good Muſſulman; and I willingly Sacrifice my Paſſions to the Pleaſure of the Grandees of the Port, and the Intereſt of the Ottoman Empire.

Here I ſit, like a Fox in his Den, watching the Motions of the Infidels: If any thing occurs worthy of Notice, out I bolt upon it, and make it my Prey, and ſend it as a Preſent to the Auguſt Miniſters. I write to all by Turns, and therefore none has Reaſon to take Exceptions.

If thou wou'dſt know what they are doing here in the Court of France; They are muſtering the King's Troops; they are revelling and feaſting at Verſailles, the King's new Palace, where the Princes exerciſe themſelves with the Noble Diſcipline, which they call, Running in Squadrons. Whilſt Thouſands of People flock dayly to Verſailles, from Paris and all the Adjacent Countries round about, partly to be Spectators of theſe Royal Paſtimes, and partly to behold that Gorgeous Fabrick, which is eſteemed the Faireſt and moſt Magnificent in the World.

Serene Baſſa, this Monarch has a vaſt Genius: Whatſoever he undertakes, he accompliſhes; and all his Performances are ſurprifingly Great. He has a deep Forecaſt, and ſeldom fails in his Judgment of what will probably come to paſs. He is happily made, born, and brought up. A Prince, one wou'd think, deſign'd by Fate for the Empire of the Weſt.

ſeldom

Renowned Aſis, I kiſs the Hem of thy Illuſtrious Robe, and with a profound Obeiſance bid thee Adieu.

Paris, 20th. of the 4th. Moon,
of the Year 1667.

LETTER V.

To Haſnadar Baſſi, Chief Treaſurer to the Sultan.

I AM convinc'd, 'tis now Time for me to be reſolute, bold and aſſur'd in my own Conduct: For 'tis in vain to ask Counſel of the Sublime Miniſters. I have addreſs'd my ſelf at certain Seaſons to them on that Account, ever ſince I came firſt to Paris: But not one of them has vouchſaf'd me an Anſwer, or given me any particular Inſtructions how to deport my ſelf in an Emergent Peril of Diſcovery: Whether I ſhou'd own my ſelf an Agent for the Grand Signior, or deny it: Whether I ſhould boldly ſtand the Brunt of all Events, or fly to Artifices and Evaſions:

Evaſions; Whether I ſhou'd perſiſt in acting the Moldavian, and continue to perſonate a Chriſtian Student, an Eccleſiaſtick Candidate under the feign'd Name of Titus; or frankly tell them, I'm a Muſſulman, an Arab, and ſecret Slave of the Sultan.

I ought to have been certify'd in theſe Caſes; and not left at Random to gueſs, at this vaſt Diſtance, the Pleaſure of my Superiours. But ſince it is their Will thus to make Tryal of my Fidelity, Prudence and Skill, in warding off the Aſſaults of Common Chance, Misfortune, and the Attempts of ſly deſigning Men; I'll be as cunning as I can, without embaraſſing my Peace with conſtant Panick Fears and Apprehenſions of I know not what. No vain Endeavours to avoid the fix'd Decree of Fate, ſhall make me change my Lodging, or fly from every menacing Contingency. I'll rather truſt to Providence and preſent Courage, the Juſtice of my Cauſe and Native Innocence, leaving the Event to Deſtiny.

By what I have ſaid, thou wilt perceive I am in ſome Trouble; and I can aſſure thee, thou art not miſtaken. I'm hatter'd, hunted up and down, and perſecuted worſe than the Foxes, Hares and Hinds near Adrianople. I'm an Old Man, and yet they envy me the Happineſs of a Natural Death; they would not have me go down to the Grave in Peace. I have been impriſon'd, threatned, dogg'd up and down the Streets, aſſaſſinated in the Dark, had my Chamber ſearch'd, my Letters ters in Danger of being seiz'd with those of the Supreme Ministers. I have run the Risque of a Discovery, by meeting casually an Infidel, whose Slave I once was at Palermo in Sicily. I have been undermin'd by Mussulmans as well as Nazarens; by Strangers, and by Solyman my Cousin. Yet in all these Perils I have acquitted my self Faithfully, come off with Success, and saved the Honour of my Sovereign; which is the only Thing for which I am sollicitous. But for ought I know, my Care may prove in Vain, and the Evils which I have so long fortunately escap'd, may now surprize and ruine me. As to my self, I care not what becomes of me; and if the Secrets of my Commission be reveal'd, let the Ministers of the Port answer for that, who wou'd never give me the least Direction.

About Two or Three Years ago, I was forced to remove from my Old Lodgings, where I had resided ever since my first coming to Paris. The Dangers that then assaulted me, drove me to this House, where I still am, in a very obscure Place, by the Wall of the City. Yet even hither am I pursu'd by watchful Enemies: New Hazards threaten me on all Hands. But I'm resolved to fly no more, unless it be into the City-Ditch, where I can find Admittance through my Landlord's Cellar. There is a private Passage, dug perhaps in Elder Times, during some Siege, to serve the streight Necessities of those who then possess'd this House. It is so cunningly contriv'd, that Human Wit can ne'er discover it, unless by Chance, or by Direction of those that know it. The Ditch is dry, the Door of the House always lock'd; and my Trusty Host swears no body shall come in by Day or Night, till I have made a safe Retreat. So that if all the Officers in Paris shou'd come to search, I shou'd have Time to pack up my Papers, and slink away into my lurking Hole. And if they shou'd by monstrous Accident find the conceal'd Avenue, I cou'd soon slip into the Fields, through the Last Postern in the Wall, and lock them in beyond the possibility of Pursuit: whilst I took Care to hide my self afresh, or leave the Country.

is

This is my Final Resolution, if ever I am put to an Extremity again. In the mean Time, I desire thee to make it part of thy Care, that Mahmut shall not want for Money to carry on the Sultan's Private Affairs without a Baulk. I do not demand unreasonable Things: Let me but live, and have enough to defray the Necessary Expences of my Service, and that's all I crave. But let my Supplies be well tim'd and proportion'd, that I may husband my Pension to the best Advantage: Or else I must always press, and that's a Thing I hate. I have writ to all the Treasurers that went before thee on the same Account, and with equal Boldness. Therefore take not in ill Part what comes from Blunt Sincerity, and Constant, Full Desires to serve effectually the Grand Signior. It will be very eaſie for thee to anticipate Mahmut's Expectations, without exceeding the Orders thou haſt receiv'd. Money be damn'd, if we cou'd breath and ſerve our Friends, and carry on the Affairs of Human Life without it. I am an Arab, and cou'd as freely paſs away my Time in harmleſs Rambles o'er the Provinces of Aſia; as thus to be confin'd to Narrow Fretting Circumſtances, the only Effects of too Unſhaken, Unregarded and Incorruptible Loyalty.

Wealthy Diſpenſer of the Ottoman Gold, I ask no Alms, but my appointed Salary, In ſending of which, I deſire thee to remember the Old Roman Proverb, which ſays, That he gives Twice, who gives in Seaſon.

Paris, 9th. of the 6th. Moon,
of the Year 1667.

LETTER

LETTER VI.

To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna.

I Know not whether I ſhall live to hear from thee again, or to ſend thee another Letter, Age, Sickneſs, Misfortune, together with the Malice of Men, have laid a Thouſand Snares for my Life; I am, as it were, hunted by Nature, Providence, Deſtiny, and Chance, into the very Toils of Death; From whence it will be very difficult for me to eſcape. Not to amuſe thee, I am in danger of being diſcover'd, ſeiz'd, impriſon'd; and then thou know'ſt, I can expect no leſs than to be put to the Torture, and rack'd with a Thouſand Inventions of Cruelty, That ſo they may force me to confeſs, what I am, and what my Buſineſs is in this Kingdom and City, where I have reſided ſo many Years.

I was ſuſpected by Cardinal Richlieu, for a Muſſulman, as I have Reaſon to believe from ſeveral convincing Circumſtances of that Miniſter's Carriage to me, ever ſince his firſt Acquaintance with me at Paris. And the ſame Jealouſie cauſed his Succeſſor, Cardinal Mazarini, to put me into the Baſtile, where I was cloſely confin'd, for the Space of Six Moons. And I might have lain there till this Time, for ought I know, had it not been for the good Conduct and honeſt Fidelity of Eliachim. In fine, though I have hitherto eſcap'd Diſcovery, yet I cannot flatter my ſelf that I ſhall always do ſo. If they once lay Hold on me again, they will certainly ſearch me for the Scar of Circumciſion; and then, all the Arguments the Wit of Man can find, will not be of Force to blind them any longer, or ſave me from the Vengeance of the State. They will certainly put me to a cruel Death.

However, I'll baffle 'em if I can; and if I once eſcape, I'll bid Adieu to Paris, if not to the whole Kingdom: Being reſolv'd not to truſt any more to the deceitful Security of new Lodgings in this City, and a vain Removal from one Precinct and Houſe to another: For, the very Air of Paris is fatal to me. I am never free from Terror, whilſt within theſe Melancholy Walls. The Genius of the Place, is at Enmity with Mine. Every Thing I caſt my Eyes on, ſeems to low'r and frown upon me; I ſtart at the Voices of Men, going along the Streets, and diſcourſing about their own Affairs: And if any one knocks at the Door, I'm preſently upon my Guard, my anxious Soul ſtill labouring with ſad Preſages of ſome Calamity at hand, ready to ruſh upon me unawares.

Perhaps, I may go to Lyons, where a Stranger may live an Age conceal'd, and void of Peril, as in this City. Or, I may take a farther Journey to Marſeilles, Toulon, or any other other Sea-Port Town. Where I will expect new Orders from my Superiors.

In the mean Time, thou may'ſt continue to addreſs thy Letters as before: For that Courſe can never fail, let me be where it pleaſes Heaven. Eliachim will take Care of all Things. I writ to the Haſnadar Baſſi on the ſame Account, deſiring freſh Supplies of Money; which I ſuppoſe will come by the Way of Vienna. If ſo, I truſt to thy Prudence, in ordering my Bills with Speed, and the uſual Cautiouſneſs.

Nathan, Adieu: And whate'er becomes of me, live thou long and happily to ſerve the Grand Signior.

Paris, 9th. of the 6th. Moon,
of the Year 1667.

LETTER VII.

To the Venerable Mufti.

AS the poor injur'd Labourer, or Slave oppreſs'd by Cruel and Obdurate Maſters; as the Deſpairing Client, who can find no Juſtice from the Cheicks, Cadi's, or Cadileſquers; fly immediately to the Serail, to make their laſt Appeal, and ſeek Redreſs from the Great Arbiter of Humane Feuds: So falls poor Mahmut proſtrate at thy Feet, O Sacred Oracle of Muſſulmans; begging from thy Authority, whom no Believer dares to diſobey, what I cou'd never yet obtain from any Miniſter of State, or Baſſa of the Bench: That is, how I muſt act in Caſe I am diſcovered, or barely ſuſpected, examin'd, and put to my Oath, concerning my Buſineſs at Paris? Lay thy ſpeedy Commands on thoſe whoſe Care it ought to be, that no Intelligence, Advice or Counſel, be wanting to me, the Faithful Agent of the Port, reſiding here Incognito, a Spy upon the Infidels. Or, at leaſt, vouchſafe to ſend me thy Inſtructions, Rules infallible, Orders of perfect Wiſdom, and Divine Sagacity.

I cannot for the future ſtand the Brunt of long ſuſpected Caſualties; Events which glimmer from afar, like diſtant Ignes Fatui, or other Vagrant Meteors of the Night: For, ſo Contingencies appear, which are to come, uncertain, uncertain, and remote; tho' ſometimes near at Hand; yet with deceitful ſhew, they ſtill miſlead bewilder'd Mortals in the Dark. So, the tyr'd Traveller in Libyan Waſtes, is tantaliz'd by mocking Rays of Sands, in drifted Heaps, or flying Bodies, looſely wafted by the Winds; on which the Moon and Stars caſting their Beams, create Refractions like Domeſtick Lamps or Tapers; and encourage the diſconſolate Man to hope for Neighbouring Villages or Towns, where he may reſt his weary Limbs, and find an Hoſpitable Entertainment; ſecure from Dragons, Lyons, Tygers, or the more Fierce and Cruel Race of Men, who lurk in ſecret Places of the affrighting Deſart, to rob unwary Strangers, as they paſs.

'Tis ſad, moſt Holy Patriarch of the Faithful, That Men are thus degenerate, and tranſcend the Horrid Nature of the Wildeſt Beaſts! But, ſadder ſtill, That Cities, firſt deſign'd for Sanctuaries of the Diſtreſs'd, ſhou'd become worſe than Deſarts, and more Inhoſpitable than the Purlieu of Dragons, or the dreadful Haunts of Lynxes, Crocodiles, and other Animals of Prey. That Men pretending to be Civiliz'd, to live in Community, and Reciprocal Participation of all Good Offices; Incorporated by the ſame Laws, for no other End, but to help, aſſiſt and defend one another, againſt all foreign Enemies; ſhou'd, inſtead of this, prove more Barbarous than Salvages, and more Voracious than Cannibals, whilſt every Citizen preys on his Neighbour, and devours him, whom he has ſworn to protect. They all live by Robbery and Spoil. The Rich and Potent fleece thoſe whoſe Wealth is not ſufficient to defend them from Oppreſſion. Thus are Towns and Cities, from celebrated Refuges of Men, become the Dens of Thieves, and Cruel Murderers. The whole Earth is ſtain'd with the Blood of the Poor: The Cries of Widows and Orphans pierce the Heavens: The Generations of Men are corrupted with Fraud, Avarice, Perfidy, Ambition, Envy, and a Thouſand other Vices. Brother cannot truſt the Son of his own Mother. Fathers are Unnatural to their Genuine Off-ſpring. Children think the Days tedious which prolong their Parents Lives. Self-Love teaches a Man to betray his beloved Friend, for whom he rather ought to loſe his Life. An Univerſal Defection from Juſtice, and ſound Morality, reigns every where.

But, what is moſt ſurprizing, is, That even among thoſe who bear the Glorious Title and Character of the True Faithful Muſſulmans, there ſhou'd be found a Crew of Miſcreants, Villains, and Traitors to God, his Prophet and their Sovereign. I ſpeak not of ſuch, whoſe Genial Inclinations tempt them to commit vulgar Sins, which injure no Man but themſelves. I tax not Drunkards, Gameſters, and thoſe Amorous Perſons, who waſte their Bodies, Time, Eſtates, and ſacrifice their Reputation to Voluptuouſneſs. Theſe are but Venial Sins, and ſoon waſh'd off, off, by the appointed Purifications, and Penances. A little Water, Duſt, or Sand, with Faſting and devout Invocation of the Eternal Allah, cancels theſe Peccadillo's; they are all put to the Account of Humane Frailty: Such is the Pleaſure of Eternal Goodneſs. But I accuſe the blacker Crimes of thoſe, whom fretting Envy ſtimulates to perſecute their harmleſs Neighbour; or baſe Ingratitude prompts to betray their Friends; or Native Malice teaches to ſeek out all Occaſions of doing Miſchief in the World. A buſie, reſtleſs ſort of Men, buzzing about like Waſps or Hornets, ſtinging every one they faſten on: Or like the Puces of Paris, a troubleſome Kind of Inſects, which interrupt the ſweet Repoſe of Men, creeping upon them in their Beds and Slumbers, and ſlyly biting them, to ſuck their Blood.

Such are the Men of whom I now complain; who hatter me from Stratagem to Stratagem, from one Retrenchment to another. Whoſe Crime is double, in that they are Perſons of my own Religion; Profeſſors of the Genuine Faith, brought down from Heaven; Followers of the Prophet, who cou'd neither Write nor Read; and Subjects to the Grand Signior.

'Tis a long Time, ſince I had firſt Occaſion to accuſe ſome at the Seraglio, of private, ſly Attempts, to undermine and ruin me, that they might gain my Poſt. 'Twill ſeem Invidious, even in my own Defence, after ſo many Addreſſes to the Miniſters of the Port, now to repeat their Names; and diſcompoſe thy Sacred Thoughts with Black Memoirs of Human Malice. 'Tis not Revenge I ſeek, but for the future, how to eſcape, if not prevent, the like Conſpiracies. Nor, is it for my ſelf alone, I cheriſh this Unuſual Zeal and Care; but for my Maſter's Intereſt and Honour.

I've ſerv'd near Thirty Years in this Precarious Station, and never made the leaſt falſe Step; or, if I have, 'twas not diſcern'd; which is the ſame Thing in Effect. And, I am very unwilling to miſcarry at laſt, through the Treachery of my pretended Friends at Conſtantinople, or for want of full Inſtructions from the Imperial Divan.

'Tis for this Reaſon, I preſume to addreſs to the Duſt of thy Feet, Supreme Judge of the Faithful, begging the Interpoſition of thy Paternal Authority, on my Behalf.

There is one Thing more, which in all Humility I recommend to thy Wiſdom and Sanctity. I have often writ to thy Predeceſſor on the ſame Account, beſeeching him to promote the Tranſlation of Hiſtories and other Learned Books out of Foreign Languages into Turkiſh or Arabick: That ſo Knowledge might flouriſh among the Muſſulmans, and the Infidels might have no more Ground to call us Barbarous. Let Men skilful in Languages and Sciences be ſought for. There are not wanting ſuch at Conſtantinople, and in other Parts of the Empire. Let them be employ'd in compiling an Univerſal Hiſtory of of the World, in Turkiſh; more ample, true, and correct than any that has gone before it in Greek, Latin, or any other Language. This will bring Eternal Honour to the Ottoman Empire; and prove no hard Task to them that ſhall undertake it; ſince it will be onely a Choice Collection out of other Authors; a Garland of Flowers cull'd from the various Fields of Hiſtory, and compos'd together with an Order full of Luſtre and Beauty, the whole Work being interwoven with a Chain of Chronological Years; which will not onely give it a Singular Grace, but alſo be of great Advantage to the Muſſulman Readers.

Succeſſor of the Apoſtles, remember, That though our Holy Lawgiver could neither write nor read, yet the ſucceeding Caliphs encouraged Learning. Benediction on the Souls of them and their Poſterity. So will future Ages bleſs thy Memory, if thou vouchſafeſt to encourage this Glorious Work. And Ithuriel, the Angel of Science, will make thee his Aſſociate in Paradiſe.

With profound Submiſſions I retire from thy Sacred Preſence, begging thy Abſolution and Bleſſing.

Paris, 9th. of the 6th. Moon,
of the Year 1667.

LETTER

LETTER VIII.

To Cara Hali, Physician to the Grand Signior.

AMongst other Dispatches, I could not forget what I owe to the long continued Friendship which has been between us. Having Leisure therefore before the Post goes, I will inform thee of a Birth, which has occasion'd little Joy to the Parents, but much Admiration among all that hear of it, and rais'd learned Disputes between the Professors of Physick and Surgery.

In the Town of Weerted near Ardenburgh in the Low Countries, a Woman was lately deliver'd of a Monstrous Child with Two Heads, Two Necks, Four Arms, and proportionably all Parts both outward and inward double to the Navil, which sem'd to be the Center of Union between the Two Bodies: For from thence downwards, there appear'd only the Proportion and Shape of One Body, with Two Thighs, Legs and Feet. The Faces were different; One Squalid and Irregular, without a Nose or Mouth, except a Kind of Orifice under the Chin; for the Eyes possess'd the Place of the Mouth, and a perfect Masculine Genital took up the Room of the Nose: The other was fair and made with Symetry, having nothing extraordinary, saving ving Two Teeth grown out of the Gums.

This Irregular Production has been curiously diſſected by a Famous Anatomiſt, who found Two Hearts, Two Stomachs, and the other Vitals all ſingle. What I have ſaid is atteſted by Five profeſs'd Phyſicians, who opened this Wonderful Creature.

There have been many Examples of extraordinary Births, eſpecially in theſe Parts of the World. And I have read in a French Author, a Man of Credit, That in the Year 1592 of the Chriſtian Hegira, a Woman of Alſatia, brought forth at once an Hundred and Fifty Children, each but Three Inches long.

But what I now ſhall tell thee, though it be not Remarkable for the Number of Children, yet has ſomething ſingular in the Circumſtances that attended it.

Irmentrude, the Counteſs of Altorfe, accus'd one of her Neighbours of Adultery, becauſe ſhe had Three Children at a Birth, ſaying, She deſerved to be tied up in a Sack, and thrown into the Sea. Next Year the Counteſs her ſelf was delivered of Twelve Sons all at a Birth. And touch'd with Remorſe for the Sentence which ſhe had pronounc'd againſt the other Woman; concluding it now a Juſt Puniſhment for her ſelf, ſent a Maid with Eleven of theſe New-born Infants, commanding her to drown them in the next River, reſerving only one to be the Heir of his Father's Eſtate,

Fate

Fate had ſo determin'd, that her Husband the Earl met the Maid as ſhe was going to commit this Execrable Villany: and aſking her what ſhe had got in her Lap, ſhe anſwer'd, I am going to drown a few Young Whelps. The Earl being a great Hunter, and conſequeutly a Lover of Dogs, had a Mind to ſee whether any of theſe Whelps were of a promiſing Aſpect: When to his Aſtoniſhment he found Eleven of Human Shape, all Living and Perfect, but very ſmall. He preſs'd the Maid ſo far, that ſhe confeſs'd the whole Truth. Whereupon enjoyning her Silence, and Aſſurance of a good Reward, he caus'd her to carry them to one of his Tenants; where being all cheriſh'd and laid warm, he diſpos'd of them afterwards in convenient Places, to be nurs'd and brought up till they came of Age, Then he ſent for them privately to his Houſe, having firſt apparelled them in the ſame Faſhion as their Brother was in who dwelt at Home.

As ſoon as the Counteſs caſt her Eye on them, and obſerv'd their Number and Faces, ſo exactly reſembling him who had been always with her, ſhe wept in a Paſſion betwixt Shame and Joy, confeſſing her former Cruel Intention; and falling at the Feet of her Lord, he pardon'd her. From theſe Eleven deſcend the Family of the Welphs or Guelphs, ſo Renowned in Germany, and bearing this Name from the Maid's Anſwer to the Earl, when ſhe had them in her Lap.

Such

Such ſtrange Productions as theſe, occaſion various Enquiries among the Philoſophers here in the Weſt: Whether Human Souls be Generated like the Bodies to which they are united, or whether they are Created by the Immediate Power of God. Aſſuredly theſe Infidels are much in the Dark, and ſhut their Eyes againſt the Light of the Oriental Sages. If the Prophets ſhould riſe from the Dead, they would not be able to convince theſe Uncircumcis'd, That all Things Viſible and Inviſible are from Eternity, and that there is Nothing New in the Syſtem of the Univerſe, except the Various Outward Forms, which change indeed, according to the Laws of Endleſs Tranſmigration, and ſometimes according to the Frolicks of Nature, who loves to mix her Interludes and Antiques, with the eſtabliſh'd Senſes of every Age.

What I have writ, is to divert thee; But when ſhall I have an Anſwer as from an Old Friend? Let not the Honours of the Serail make thee forget thoſe with whom thou haſt once been familiar. My Dear Hali, be not too much a Courtier. Thy long Silence and Reſervedneſs forces this Language from me. Shall Conſtantinople blot out thy Remembrance of Arabia? Or, the Blaſt of a Monarch's Favour, be more Valuable than the Durable Integrity of a Country-man, a Friend? If the Sultan truſts his Life in thy Hands, doſt thou not know that a Fit of Gripes, the Stone, Gout, or any Violent Diſtemper, will turn all his Confidence into Jea-Jealouſie? I tell thee, he will ſuſpect Poyſon in thy very Looks.

Therefore, continue to be the ſame Man as thou wert formerly; and let not thy Improvements in Phyſick, make thee go backward in Morality.

Paris, 23d. of the 6th. Moon,
of the Year 1667.

LETTER IX.

To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna.

NOW I ſee thou art a Man of Buſineſs: Thy Mind is cur'd of its Religious Itch, and reſtor'd to a ſound Complexion. Perſevere, and be Happy.

Let no vain Scruples of Conſcience moleſt thy Soul, concerning the Peace that was lately made between the Grand Signior and the Germans. Cares of this Nature belong to thoſe who ſit at the Helm, and direct the Steerage of the State. As for thee and me, our Part is only to Obey, without enquiring, whether it be Right or Wrong that we are commanded. Every Thing is Lawful to us, that is enjoin'd by our Superiours. And the Publick Reaſon ought to ſuperſede our Private narrow Sentiments. Whatever Præmunire's we incurr by our Obedience, the Conſcience of the State will be our Bail, our Advocate, and our Ranſom. Therefore, once more, Go on and proſper.

Thou cou'dſt not have done the Grand Signior a greater Piece of Service, than by thus happily inſinuating thy ſelf with the Hungarian Faction at Vienna: For, by that Means, thou becomeſt Maſter of the Secrets on both Sides; the Janus that over-looks

Two

Two oppoſite Cabals at once: And ſo may not only form thy own Intrigues the bet but alſo give a clearer Light to the Miniſt of the Sublime Port.

I am diſpleas'd to hear of the frequent C ſpiracies that have been made againſt the E perour's Perſon. Not for any Love that bear to him or the Houſe of Auſtria: For, wiſh there was not a Branch of that Inceſ ous Stem left alive on Earth: But, I ne knew ſuch Kind of Plots, if once diſcover and prevented, to take Effect again. Beſid they many Times ſpoil the main Deſig For, what ſignifies it, if this Emperour w ſeiz'd and put to Death, ſo long as there any one of that Tyrannical Race ſurvivi They are all of the ſame Blood and Intere Educated alſo in the ſame Principles a Maxims. In a Word, they have all but o Game to play; which is, to aggrandize them ſelves, and their Poſterity for ever. A therefore theſe Clandeſtine Methods of Po ſon or Aſſaſſine, will but make them mo watchful, to prevent all Deſigns of the ki Nature, for the Future.

Remember Nathan, that the Mark whi thou art to aim at, is to cheriſh the Diſco tents of Hungary, by all the Arts of a cu ning Stateſman. Count Peter de Serini, is fit Subject to work upon. The Death of h Brother, and his own Diſgrace at the Imp rial Court, with the riſing Fortune of Mo tecuculi, have fill'd him with Sentiments Revenge and Envy. He cannot behol

Coun

Count d'Averſperg in Poſſeſſion of Carleſtadt, without much Reſentment, having with ſo great Paſſion, begg'd that Government for himſelf.

If this Prince can but be induc'd to revolt, many Thouſands of the Croats, Dalmatians, and Sclavonians, will take up Arms under him, which will at once weaken both the German Empire, and the State of Venice. Beſides, the Marriage of his Daughter with Prince Ragotski, may engage the Tranſylvanians in his Party. Count Nadaſti alſo, they ſay, is not well pleaſed with the Court, aiming to be Palatine of Hungary; which has been refus'd him. This News comes to me but by Report. If it be true, thou art in the fairer Way to ſucceed. Such great Malecontents as theſe, will puzzle the Miniſters of State, and exerciſe the Policy of Prince Lobkovitz.

Beſides, if Things ſhou'd not proceed to an open Rupture; yet, thou know'ſt, the Hungarians are offended at the late Peace, which will not fail to put them upon committing perpetual Acts of Hoſtility. They ſtomach it extreamly, That the Town of Neuhauſel is in the Grand Signior's Hands. And they will be always on their Guard in the Neighbouring Parts, Patroling about, and skirmiſhing with our Foragers: Which will afford a good Occaſion at any Time for our Sovereign to break the Peace, whenever it is for his Intereſt. There are Abundance of Conſequences in ſuch a Caſe, more than we can think of, or foreſee, ye all to our Advantage. As long as we go the right Way to work, all Things will ſucceed well. Make no falſe Steps, and there's no Danger of ſtumbling.

more

Remember ſtill, That thy particular Charge is, To foment a Civil War between the Court of Vienna, and the Hungarians. 'Tis no Matter who gets the better on't. Let 'em quarrel to Eternity, and deſtroy one another in God's Name. Then ſhall the Muſſulman Empire thrive.

Before God, you have a fine Opportunity ye Factious Comrades: But, beware of the Interlopers. Damn the Eaſineſs, and good Nature (falſly ſo called) of thoſe who will admit any Man into their Cabal, provided he puts on a fair Guiſe, of one of the Party. Ye can't be too reſerv'd and cloſe. D'ye think, the Emperour has not his Spies about in every Corner? A Pox of your Stupidity, if you ſuffer this brave Deſign to miſcarry for want of looking ſharp. Damn ye for a parcel of Old Thread-bare Fools, if after ſo many Experiences, you don't furbiſh up your Wits, and look to your ſelves. There's Gottendorf, Railliwits, Skus, the Knight, Baron Leipſem, Elnard the Hereditary Pretender to the Marquiſate of Thann, with many others, whom I will not name in this Letter. By Moſes and Mahomet, they're all Rogues; and if you truſt 'em too far, they ſurely betray you.

Nathan,

Nathan, believe me, I wou'd not write so passionately, were my Life at all precious. But, I have no other End in protracting the Minute of my Transmigration, than to exalt, as much as in me lies, the Majesty of the Ottoman Lineage, and to guard it from Dangers. I am plac'd here on Purpose, by Fate: And I'll do my Duty, though the whole World shou'd sputter their Venom against me.

O Israelite, both thou and I, must shortly leave this Earth; or at least, we must change the Form of our Earth. We shall never cease to be something; God knows what.

In the mean Time, be what thou seemest to be.

Paris, 23d. of the 6th. Moon, of the Year 1667.

LETTER

LETTER X.

To the Moſt Sublime, and Magnif cent of the Muſſulman Baſſa Achmet, the Vizir Azem.

MAY Chaplets of Immortal Flowe crown thy Noble Head, Illuſtrio Cuperli, ſtrong Prop of the Houſe of Ertogru main Buttreſs of the Tower of the Selzucc Tribe, the Lineage of Ottoman, Heir of t Heirs to Iſmael, the Eldeſt Son of our F ther Abrahim, the Glory of Men and the B loved of God.

Not the Unmatch'd Perfumes of Arabi nor the ſurprizing Odours of the Perſian I cenſe, which they offer'd to the Sun; not t the moſt skilful Compoſitions of Eaſtern Ar maticks put together, are half ſo ſweet, as thy Glorious Name, among the Muſſulma

I received thy Orders with a Reverence ſe cond only to that which is due to the Gra Signior; and will perform them, with Loyal Alacrity. I perfectly comprehend th Deſign, and the Drift of the Sublime Por For thou haſt ſtated the Caſe like an Oracl 'Twill not be difficult, I believe, to ſugge under-hand to the French Court, the Adva tage they may make of the preſent Diſtr ctions in Hungary: For, they are already be come the Subject of common Diſcourſe

Lett

Lewis XIV. by encouraging thoſe Male-contents, and ſupporting their Cauſe with private Diſburſements of Money, will doubtleſs facilitate his own deſigned Conqueſts on the Neighbourhooods of the Rhine. For, if the Hungarian Lords proceed to an open Revolt, and throw themſelves under the Sultan's Protection; the Emperor of Germany will be obliged to turn all his Forces that Way: Which yet will not be able to withſtand the United Armies of the Hungarians, Croatians, Heydukes, Tartars, and the moſt Invincible Oſmans. So that by this Means, the Empire will be weaken'd on both Sides, and in Fatal Danger of its final Diſſolution: Whilſt the Strength and Power of the Grand Signior, and the King of France, his Noble Allie, will daily encreaſe.

Beſides, this will put all Europe into Diviſions and Parties, according as their Intereſts and Affections incline them; ſome ſiding with the Emperor, others with the French King; whilſt the Generality will ſtand Neuters, and contemplate the Iſſue of theſe Wars, without aſſiſting one Side or t'other. Than which, nothing can fall out more Happy or Propitious for the Sacred Monarchy of the Oſmans.

In Obedience to thy Commands, I have written to Nathan Ben Saddi on this Account: Altogether as from my ſelf, not giving him the leaſt Ground to conjecture, that I had receiv'd an Order from the Port. I frequently take the Liberty to counſel that honeſt honeſt Jew in many Cares; inviting him to Projects in General Terms, and to do ſome Extraordinary Service for the Grand Signior: that he will imagine my writing now is only of Courſe, without ſuſpecting any Thing else.

I beſeech thee to ſend me all the Inſtructions that are Needful for me, not only to carry on this Affair proſperouſly, but all others relating to the Port. I will be careful to tranſmit thy Commands to Nathan Ben Saddi, in ſuch a Diſguiſe, as he ſhall not dream they are any other than my own Propoſals: Since thou doſt not think it fit that the Majeſty of the Port, ſhould appear to be concern'd in a Buſineſs of this Nature; eſpecially, ſo ſoon after the late Peace, concluded with the Emperour.

'Tis an invaluable Honour thou haſt done me; in truſting to my Conduct an Intrigue whoſe Effects, for ought I know, may reach all the Nations of Europe, and laſt till the Day of Doom. Queſtion not my Fideſity, for 'tis of Proof: Beſides, it many Times tempts a Man to be falſe, when he knows he is ſuſpected to be ſo.

I am Slave of the Slaves of thoſe who ſtand near the Sultan's Perſon, and confeſs Mahomet to be the Apoſtle of God. More particularly, I am devoted to thoſe who have the Honour to ſerve thee, the Grand Pillar of the Oſman Empire. God perpetuate thy Felicity.

Paris, 23d. of the 7th. Moon,
of the Year 1667.

LETTER

LETTER XI.

To the Selictar Aga, or Sword-Bearer to the Sultan.

THese Parts abound in Action at this Time. Couriers run up and down from Court to Court, with secret Dispatches, and Matters of deep Import. The Death of the Queen of Poland, and of Pope Alexander VII. occasion this new stirring and bustling in Europe. She died on the 10th. of the 5th. Moon. He on the 22d. Every Kingdom and State in the West, have some Interest to make or preserve; some Design to form, or to carry on; the Success of which many Times depends on the well managing the Consequences of these great and Fatal Breaches which Death makes in the Families of Mighty Potentates, Houses of Royal Descent.

The French Court were all dissolv'd in Joy, for the Marriage of the Duke of Guize with Madamoiselle d'Alencon. They were in the midst of the Nuptial Triumphs, and Festival Solemnities, when the Black Expresses came, which soon turn'd all their Mirth to Mourning, at least in outward Appearance. For it was not decent for the Sons to continue longer revelling, when the Great Father lay Embalm'd in Order to his Sepulture. Therefore, to prevent Idleness, the King thought fit to change the Paſtimes of the Court, for more Neceſſary Buſineſs; and the ſoft Entertainments of Hymen, for the Rugged Toils of War. He caus'd his Armies to march into Flanders, to give his Queen Poſſeſſion of certain Eſtates fallen to her in thoſe Parts. This ſurpriz'd the Low Countries, who began to demoliſh ſeveral Places of Strength, that had not ſufficient Garriſons to defend them.

The King was himſelf in Perſon at the Head of his Army, which gave immenſe Courage to his Soldiers. So that Tournay quickly Surrender'd to him, on the 24th of the 6th Moon; and Douay not many Days after. In the mean while, the Mareſchal D'Aumont, with another Army, takes Bergues and Furnes near Dunkirk. Then he beſieges Liſle, which was taken alſo after Seventeen Days; but not without the King's Preſence, who appear'd indefatigable, always on Horſe-back, or in his Coach, going the Rounds, and ſurveying all the Works. He ſlept in his Coach, that Night the Town was taken, near a Bridge not far from Gaunt. They have alſo taken Courtray, Oudenarde and Aloſt. They have defeated the Prince de Ligne, and the Count de Marcin. In a Word, they have done ſo many Great Things this Campaign, That all Flanders is ſtupified, as at a Miracle.

Illuſtrious Aga, I have in a Sort of Miniature preſented thee with the true Effigies of Weſtern Affairs at this Juncture. Let not my Abruptneſs diſpleaſe thee; ſince this Epitome deſcribes describes the Truth as lively, as if I'd fill'd an Ell of Parchment up with Words.

Paris, 2d. of the 8th. Moon, of the Year 1667.

LETTER XII.

To Dgnet Oglou.

I Know not whether I have Reason to rejoice or be sad, in my present Circumstances; so Ambiguous are the Events of Human Life. Even the most blandishing Gifts of Fortune, and such as we are extremely taken with, many Times prove like the Trojan Horse, only Fair and Gay in outward Appearance; whilst like that deceitful Engine of the Grecian Craft, they carry an Army of Hidden Calamities within, which in the midst of our secure Repose, when we least dream of any Evil, rush upon us from their concealed and unsuspected Ambuscades, putting us all in Terror and Confusion.

However, since I have had a sufficient Share of Trouble, Grief, and Melancholy; now let other sprightly, chearful Passions take their Turn, be the Event how it will. I cannot always bear the Burden of a loaded Spleen, cramm'd and puffed up with Melancholy Winds, the Embryo's or Vehicles at leaſt, of horrid Thoughts, perplexing Cares, and black Deſpair. Beſides, methinks, I have a fit Occaſion to be merry; being by a very pleaſant Accident, at once rid of a great many vain Doubts and Anxieties, (which have diſturb'd my Peace for theſe Three or Four Years) and reſtor'd to the charming Converſation of Daria, whom thou may'ſt remember, I ſo paſſionately lov'd, in the Days of my Youth.

Know then, that one Day as I was walking in the Streets, I met that lovely Greek in Mourning. Surpriz'd above Meaſure at the Sight of a Perſon, for whom I had formerly cheriſh'd ſo great an Eſteem; I ſtood ſtill at Firſt, like one Thunderſtruck. I cou'd not forbear queſtioning my own Senſes, and giving the Lye to my Eyes, which aſſur'd me 'twas ſhe. Neither Age nor Abſence had effac'd her lov'd Idea from my Memory, or ſo much chang'd her Face, but that I eaſily call'd to mind the Object of my Amorous Deſires. Yet, my Aſtoniſhment was ſuch at this unthought of Interview, that I had not Reſolution enough to believe my ſelf. And her Amazement ſeem'd no leſs than mine: Whilſt neither of us had Power to ſpeak, but ſtood like Fools: Till I aſham'd longer to loſe my ſelf in ſuch an effeminate Confuſion of Spirit, firſt broke Silence, not without ſome Rapture and Emotion, crying out, "Is it Daria, or her Ghoſt, I ſee? Has For- "tune bleſs'd, or mock'd me at this Fatal
"Hour? Or do deluding Nymphs and Fai- "ries,

"ries, haunt the Streets of Populous Cities, walking about in borrow'd Forms, and mixing with the Throng of Mortals, to "tantalize our softest Hopes, with a false "Shew of some dear Lover, Friend or Per-"son highly wish'd for, ne'er to be enjoy'd? "It may be true, That Cythera left her "Heaven, (as Virgil does relate) and in "a Tyrian Dress, met the Heroick Off-"spring of Anchyses in the Fields, amu-"sing him with a disguized Semblance of "Mortality and Human Race, until her "Heavenly Voice discover'd that she was a "Goddess. So us'd Diana to descend in dead "of Night, and mix the Slumbers of Endy-"mion with Immortal Dreams; stealing soft "Kisses from the lovely Youth, and whispe-"ring Celestial Words into his Ears, more "forcible than the Songs of Orpheus, "when he mov'd the Trees and Rocks to "Passions of Platonick Love. At other "Times they wou'd come down and take "the Air of cool Mount Hemus, or the lofty "Ida. Thus Melpomene, Clio, and the rest "o'th' Sacred Nine, wou'd often visit the "Refreshing Heights of their belov'd Par-"nassus, from whence descending to the "Shady Banks of Helicon, with more than "Mortal Voices, wou'd awake and tempt "the wanton Eccho's to strike up, like Uni-"sons, and joyn in Consort with 'em, whilst "they chant the Praises of some Demi God or "Hero whom they love. But that a Goddess "Nymph, or Muse did e'er frequent the " Common Crowd of Mortals in a City, is not " to be credited. Therefore, unleſs I dream,

" it is Daria I behold.

My Dgnet, I was running on in higher Extaſies, at mentioning of her Name, but that ſhe ſmil'd, and interrupted me with an obliging Reſervedneſs, and ſaid; " Malmet, if " you are the Man I take you for, and would " have my Eſteem, be leſs paſſionate, and " leave off this wild Way of Raillery. We " both are paſt the Vanities of Youth. Our " Years ſhou'd now retain no Remnant From
" of early boiling Blood, and Young, Green
" Fooliſh Paſſions.

I took this only for a Female Banter, an Eſſay of women's Craft, to try the Senſe and Humour of a Man. For, thou knoweſt, the greateſt Princeſs loves a truly paſſionate Addreſs, though not a puling, whining one. Beſides, 'tis the Faſhion here in France, to uſe Romantick Forms of Speech, when they make Love. However, in Regard it was Inconvenient to loſe more Time, in the open Street, by this Sort of Diſcourſe, I invited her to a Houſe, where we might converſe with more Freedom. She accepted the Motion, and I conducted her to the Houſe of Eliachim the Jew. 'Tis pleaſantly ſeated on the Banks of the River Seine, and has a fair Garden belonging to it. Eliachim happen'd to be abroad, which gave us a better Opportunity of improving our Time, without the neceſſary Interruption of Salutes, Compliments, &c. uſual in ſuch a Caſe. And I had the Command of his Houſe, as though he had been there himſelf.

had

It being in the Heat of Summer, I led Daria into a little Shady Green Retreat, in the midſt of the Garden, out of the Reach of curious Ears; where, under the cool refreſhing Shelter of a wide-ſpread Beech, we ſat down, and call'd to Mind our former Acquaintance and Friendſhip. Daria ſtill retain'd her Native Modeſty and Prudence. Neither had the external Beauty of her Face ſuffer'd any greater Detriment, than what befalls the faireſt Roſes, Violets, or other Flowers, which even in their moſt decayed Eſtate, merit the Character of Amiable Sweetneſs. However, the Luſtre of her Wit, and Goodneſs of her Humour, ſupply'd all other Defects.

I proteſt, my Dguet, it was Impoſſible for me to ſee, and not to love again, a Perſon whoſe Idea once was ſo Domeſtick and Familiar to my Soul. And I was the more animated to make my Court, when ſhe told me, that ſhe was a Widow. 'Twas eaſy to forget, or baniſh from my Thoughts, her former Faithful Treachery, in acquainting her Husband with my Amour. Love ſoon removes all puny Obſtacles; 'tis ready, prompt, and dextrous to find Excuſes for the greateſt Faults a Friend can e'er commit: Much more ingenious to palliate the Peccadillo's of a Miſtreſs. This Generous Paſſion by a peculiar Force extirpates all Revenge, and blots out the Memoirs of paſt Unkindneſſes. It ever ſprings and blooms with freſh Deſires, young vigorous Inclinations. Like to the Palm oppreſs'd with Weights, it higher grows. 'Twou'd fain encreale, dilate, and ſtretch it ſelf to Immortality. There's no Conſideration, but that of Honour, can pretend to match, or ſtand in Competition with the Divine Regards of Love. And yet, the moſt exalted Human Glory often vails to this ſoft Paſſion. The Conquerours of the World, ſuffer themſelves to be overcome by Women.

Wonder not therefore, That I who am Fleſh and Blood as well as other Men, could not now defend my ſelf from fair Daria's Charms.

Excuſe me in that I cannot now give thee any farther Account of this Adventure; being interrupted by a Meſſenger from Eliachim the Jew, who brings me Word, my Mother is very Sick, and wants my Company, Expect another Diſpatch ſpeedily.

Paris, the 15th. of the 10th. Moon, of the Year 1667.

LET TER

LETTER XIII.

To Pesteli Hali, his Brother, Master of the Customs, and Superintendent of the Arsenal at Constantinople.

'TIS written in the Fates, That Man shou'd once at least, be vanquish'd by a Woman in his Life. But, 'tis my Chance to be twice subdued by one of that fair Sex. I know not whether I acquainted thee with the Love I formerly bore to Daria a Beautiful Greek Lady sojourning in Paris. Neither have I at this Instant an Opportunity to look over the File of my Letters, they being in my Lodgings, and I at Eliachim's House, where I write this Letter, for the sake of a Convenience, which offers it self, of sending thee a small Present of Watches and Oriental Stones, by a Jew, a Merchant who is just departing for Constantinople.

However, if thou art curious to know the Circumstances of this Amour I speak of; Our Friend Oglou can inform thee of it. In the mean Time, suffer me to vent some of my Thoughts concerning Women, and the Love of them, rooted so deeply in our Hearts by Nature. None of our Sex cou'd e'er escape this gentle Passion, it being mixed and blended in our very Original Embrys's, and after cheriſh'd with our Mothers Milk. It was the peculiar Myſtery of our Nurſes, by a Thouſand Female Tricks and Arts of neceſſary Tenderneſs, to blow and kindle up the little Sparks of this Immortal Fire within our Infant Souls; whilſt from their Breaſts we ſuck'd and guzzl'd down inebriating Philters and Love-Potions, more forcible and durable than thoſe the Grecian Maids compound by Magick Rules, when they wou'd captivate ſome Lovely Youth within their Snares. Our Blood thus fed with early Sympathetick Draughts, becomes the Seminary of a Thouſand Amorous Inclinations; General, unform'd, and volatile Affections, to that Sex: Till Time and Opportunity fix our looſe Deſires, on ſome particular Maid, whom Fate or Chance has brought into our View. At the Firſt Glance, ſhe darts from her enchanting Eyes the perfect Image of her Soul, which penetrates, like Lightning, our moſt Interiour Faculties. The ſwift Idea ſoon transforms us into its own Similitude; like melted Wax we take the Momentary Impreſſion of a Figure, which may laſt as long as we. Or, if we melt again, 'tis but to receive ſome other Stamp of Love. Thus our whole Life paſſes away in an Enchanted Circle of Amours.

However, 'tis the Part of a Wiſe Man to regulate this Paſſion, and not ſuffer it to degenerate into Dotage. There is much to be ſaid in Praiſe of Women, and not a little in their Diſparagement. As we are Riddles to our ſelves, ſo that Sex is in a higher Degree, Myſterious, and a Paradox.

to

'Twou'd be a kind of Sacrilegious Envy to conceal their Excellencies, and the Advantages they have of us, in many Regards, whilſt our partial Pen ſhall only publiſh their Defects and Infirmities. Some Hebrew Doctors from the Different Names of Adam and Eve, draw Arguments to prove the Dignity and Perfection of the Female Sex, in that Adam ſignifies [Earth] but Eve expreſſes [Life.] For, they affirm, that every Name which God impos'd on any Thing, deſcribes its Nature and Qualities, as a Picture repreſents the Original. Therefore, by how much Life is more to be eſteem'd than Earth, by ſo much more Excellent, in the Opinion of theſe Rabbi's, is Woman than Man.

They go farther alſo, and from the Affinity between Eve's Name and the Sacred Name of God, the Ineffable Tetragrammaton, the Cabbaliſts borrow Proofs in Confirmation of their Doctrine.

I know not, whether ſuch Critical Obſervations be of any Moment, or no, in this Caſe; Yet, thou know'ſt, that all the Eaſtern Languages are full of hidden Myſteries; each Word and Letter being impregnated with ſome Divine or Natural Secret, beſide the common obvious Senſe. Thus Al Zerbi, the Holy Muſſulman Doctor ſays, There's Magick in the Sacred Name of Jeſus, and that whene'er it ſhall be once pronounced through the Great Tube or Trump of Michael, it

ſhall

ſhall cauſe all the Powers in Heaven, in Earth, and Hell, to bow the Knee. This Globe, whereon we tread, ſhall tremble, and all the Elements melt away; the Firmament ſhall be ſnatch'd up, like to the Motion of an Eaſtern Antiport, Veil, or Curtain. The wide-ſtretch'd Orbs Above, ſhall warp and rowl together, as a ſcorched Skin, or Piece of Parchment does before a Fire. So forcible will be the Energy of that Tremendous WORD by which the Univerſe was made, when God deſigns to rend this Viſible World of ours in Pieces, that he may reveal his Nobler Works, the Worlds Inviſible and Eternal. This mighty Frame, on every Side will bow, and yeild, and vaniſh; not able to ſupport the crowding Train and Luſtre of Immortal Glories, Radiant, Bright Eſſences, deſcending in a Body from the High Palaces of God, the Infinite Solitudes and Receſſes of the Omnipotent.

Thou haſt no Reaſon to be ſcandaliz'd at what I write, as if I were a Chriſtian. Thou ſeeſt I have a Doctor of the Arabs for my Author: A True Biliever, and reputed Saint. Beſides, if I am worthy to adviſe thee, let not the Common Practice of Muſſulman Profeſſors in the Imperial City, tempt thee to deſpiſe the Bleſſed Son of Mary, of whom our Holy Prophet ſpeaks ſo honourably. How many Chapters in the Alcoran do celebrate his Praiſe? I rather counſel thee to imitate the honeſt Turcoman, who are eſteemed the beſt of True Believers. Theſe honour both Jesus and his matchless Virgin-Mother. So do the Chupmessiasi, and all good Mussulmans. As for the Rest, they're either Superstitious and Morose Fanaticks, Profligate Renegades, or Loose, Wild Libertines, who fear neither God or Man.

honour

And now I've mention'd that Incomparable Mary, Mother of the Messias, of whom the Mighty Alcoran speaks such Venerable Things; it is a fit Occasion to return from my Digression, and proceed in relating what the Jewish Rabbi's say farther in Commendation of the Female Sex.

They consider the Order which God, according to the Writing of Moyses, observed in the Creation; viz. That among his Works some are Incorruptible, and Immortal; others subject to Corruption and Change; and that as he began in the Noblest Species of the Former, to wit, pure separate Spirits, so he ended in the Most Illustrious of the latter, that is, Woman; the last of all his Works, and the most Perfect of Compound Beings; for in her are center'd and consummated the Nature of the Heavens, the Earth, Air, Fire, and Water, with Minerals, Plants, and Animals, and whatsoever else was made before her. This is the Opinion of some Hebrew Writers, who believe, that God having made Eve, and then survey'd the System of his Works, found nothing more Excellent or Divinely fram'd than Woman. Therefore in her he rested and commenc'd the Sabbath, as if his Power and Wisdom now were tir'd and foil'd, foil'd, and that he cou'd not ſtart the Idea of another Creature, more perfect than her. Or, as if he did not eſteem the Univerſe it ſelf compleat without the laſt and moſt accompliſh'd of his Works. For, they hold, it is abſurd to believe, that God wou'd finiſh ſuch a prodigious and admirable Task, in any mean or abject Thing. They alſo illuſtrate this by a Similitude, aſſerting, That the World being as it were an intire Circle, it follows by a Neceſſary Conſequence, that it was finiſh'd in that Part, which by the moſt Intimate Union, couples the Firſt Atome to the Laſt.

They endeavour to ſtrengthen this by the Common Principle of Philoſophy, which teaches, That the End is always Firſt in the Intention, and laſt in Execution. Woman therefore being the Laſt Work of the Creation, it is evident, ſay they, that ſhe was the Chief Deſign and Aim, the Almighty had in building this Immenſe Fabrick, which he firſt furniſhed and adorned with infinite Riches and Delights, and then introduc'd her, as into her own Native, Proper Palace, there to reign as Abſolute Queen over all his Works.

Beſides, they take Advantage from the particular Place of her Creation, to exalt her, in that ſhe was form'd in Paradiſe, among the Angels, whereas Man was made in the Common Waſte among the Brutes. And therefore they ſay, Women have this peculiar Privilege, That when they look down from any Eminent Height or Precipice, they feel no Dizziness or giddy Symptoms in their Head, no Mist or Dimness in their Eyes, being, as it were, nearer their Proper Element, or lofty Birth-Place. Whereas it is common for Men to be troubled with these Accidents in such a Case.

But the most prevailing Argument they use, is taken from the Stupendous Beauty of that Sex, which, like the finer Sort of Clouds in Summer, seems to engross the Splendors of Immortal Light, and so reflect them on the World. How matchless is a Woman's Form? What dazzling Majesty environs her, from Head to Foot? Gaze on her lovely Countenance without Astonishment; or fix your Eyes on her's without an Ecstasie; Those Lights which do mislead the Morning Stars, and cause the Gods to ramble from their Heaven, if what the Ancient Poets say, be true. So did Apollo for his Daphne, and Jupiter for others of that charming Sex. Neither need we wonder at this, since the Written Law it self records, that Angels fell in Love with Admirable Maids of Human Race, and took 'em for their Wives, or Concubines, from whom the Progeny of Giants came. Thus more Modern Writers testify, that Incorporeal Spirits and Daemons of all Ranks and Qualities, both Good and Bad, have been enflamed with Ardent Passions for some Mortal Virgin. Which is no false or vain Opinion, as the Incredulous Part of Men would fain insinuate, but a known Truth, confirm'd by many Experiences. Indeed, Indeed, so admirable is the Figure, Voice and Mien, of a Fair Woman, that he is wilfully blind, who does not see, whatsoever Beauties the whole World is capable of, concenter'd in that Sex. And for this Reason 'tis, that not only Man, with Angels, Dæmons, Genii, Satyrs, and the whole Series of Rational Beings, admire a Fair Woman; but even the very Brutes are struck with a profound Amazement at her Sight: With Sighs and Silent Vows, the Animal Generations pay Homage to her, and adore the ſtately Idol. Every thing in Nature is enamour'd, and lies proſtrate at her Feet. She alone commands the Univerſe.

Yet after all, my Brother, they have their dark ſide too, like the reſt of Mixed Beings. They are the Frontier Paſſes of the World Above, and that Below: The Gates of Life and Death, the very Avenues to Heaven or Hell, according as they're us'd. Like Fire they'll warm and refreſh a Man, if he keep at a due diſtance; but, if he approach too near, they'll ſcorch and bliſter him, if not conſume him quite. Or, like that other Element of Water, they're very good and ſerviceable, whilſt kept within their Bounds; but let them once break down the Banks of Modeſty, they'll threaten all with Ruine. In a Word, 'tis neither ſafe to vex 'em in the leaſt, or humour 'em too much. The Exceſs of Fondneſs, as well as the Defect of Natural Love, may equally undoe us. Prudent Generoſity is the only Method of making our selves happy in the Enjoyment of this Secret.

king

Dear Pesteli, let us Reverence our selves and then we cannot fail of due Respect from our Wives and Concubines. For, they love a Man that's truly Masculine and Brave.

Paris, the 15th. of the 10th. Moon, of the Year 1667.

LETTER XIV.

To the Same.

JUst as I'd finish'd t'other Letter, I was alarm'd afresh with new Discoveries of Sohnum's Treachery. That Barbarous Dog, is certainly an Imp of Hell, a Devil in Human Flesh; an Adventitious Plant, pluck't from the Drery Banks of Phlegeton, or Cocytus, and engrafted in our Noble Stock, on Purpose to ruine and destroy us. The whole Tribe is bound to curse him with immortal Execrations. He industriously seeks and studies all Occasions to do Mischief. His Veins sure stream with fiercest Venoms, rather than with Human Blood. The Poyson of Dragons and Asps is under his Tongue, and the Gall of Crocodiles within his Lips. His Lungs breath nothing but Infernal Smokes; the Spirit Negider times the Systole and Di- alone of his Heart; and his whole Body is a Den of Fiends, as Foul and Black, as those which guard the Throne of the Great Prince of Darkness.

I cou'd have eaſily forgiven his ſly malicious Attempts upon my Life and Honour; his Interloping Tricks and Plots, his Calumnies and Slanders, with all the Train of his Perfidious Actions: But, that he ſhou'd abuſe the Vertuous Fatima, Daughter to our Uncle Uſeph, is an Injury I cann't put up, or pardon. That Innocent Lady ne'er deſerv'd ſuch Cruel Unmanly Uſage at his Hands. The Dregs of a Thouſand bitter Curſes be his Portion to drink in Hell, unleſs he repent of this prodigious Baſeneſs, and make Honourable Satisfaction.

Thou wilt wonder perhaps, what is Soliman's Crime, that fills me with ſuch implacable Reſentments. Know then, that Fatima's Husband, being call'd to the Grand Signior's Service in the Wars of Dalmatia, and for that Reaſon, forced to tarry from her above theſe Fourteen Moons; ſhe entruſted Soliman with an Affair of grand Importance, a Matter which concern'd her Life, Honour and Welfare in the World. It ſeems ſhe had a Quarrel with an old Grecian Hag, who ſought to proſtitute her to the Great Cadi in Smyrna, where ſhe lives. This Grandee has by a ſtrange Accident, ſeen Fatima in a Bath frequented only by Women of Quality. However, through ſome Neglect of the Servants, he was not ſpy'd himſelf, but went away deeply deeply in Love. That Passion, thou know'st, makes every Body restless, that is tormented with it. He knew not how to ease himself, but by communicating his Thoughts to the fore-mention'd Grecian Widow, whom he had often made the Confident of his Amours. The double-pac'd Bawd soon promis'd him Relief, and that she wou'd accomplish his Desires. However she fail'd and found her self mistaken, when she came to tempt the Inviolate Chastity of Fatima. For, all her glittering Promises, her softest Rhetorick, cou'd never corrupt a Heart establish'd firm in Vertue.

Mad at her Repulse, she studies how to be reveng'd, conceiving it not impossible to bring her Designs about by Violence, since Fair Perswasions wou'd not do. She frames a Formal Accusation against Fatima before the Cadi, taxing her with Witchcraft and other Crimes, upon Oath. The Cadi having learn'd his Lesson, wou'd not hear the Cause in open Divan; but pretending Indisposition of Body, caus'd her to be brought before him in his private Bed-chamber. The Greek had ready by her, several suborn'd Witnesses, to depose most horrid Things against the Innocent Woman. When the Cadi professing an intire Respect to Fatima's Husband, seem'd to take Pity on her Circumstances, and wav'd the further Prosecution of the Cause till another Time, keeping Fatima Prisoner in the mean while in his own Palace.

All

All this was manag'd so privately, that no Body in the Town took Notice of it, save an Acquaintance or Two of the Grecian Widow and Solyman our worthy Cousin, who happen'd to be at Smyrna in this very Juncture among his other Rambles.

Persons in Trouble are willing to fly for Refuge to any Friend, desiring their Assistance. Fatima, all in Tears at such an unexpected Change of her Condition, had Leisure and Opportunity to speak to Solyman, conjuring him to go to certain intimate Friends of our Family, living in Aleppo, and tell them her Circumstances. Instead of this the Faithless Villain goes to her Husband's Friends at Tripoli, telling them the utmost shameful and Scandalous Things of Fatima his Malice cou'd invent; and that by her lewd Courses she had well-nigh ruin'd her Husband; producing at the same Time forged Bills and Letters as from him, whereby he rais'd a Thousand Zequins, with which the perjur'd Villain's gone no Body knows whither, to make his broken Fortunes once again, and lay a Foundation for new Cheats. Whilst the poor injur'd Fatima, is forc'd to bear the Reproach and Infamy of Things whereof she ne'er was guilty. But, Time, I hope will clear her Innocence, and bring that Curs'd Vagabond to Shame.

I counsell'd him indeed long ago to travel and see the various Regions of the Earth. But I ne'er advis'd him to load his Soul in such long Voyages with the Guilt of base Ingratitude,

rude, barbarous Malice, Perfidy and other Vices of the blackeſt Hue. The ſmaller Frailties, Stains, and Blemiſhes of Human Life, are too great a Burden for a generous Heart to bear without Complaints and Sighs. He that has but a Spark of Vertue in him, bluſhes for every Peccadillo he commits. If, tempted by good Company, or in Hopes to baniſh Melancholy Thoughts, he indulge himſelf a larger Draught of Wine, than what is Ordinary, and ſo inſenſibly boil up his Blood to Irregular Heights and Superfluities; he's all this while no Body's Foe but his own: He plots no Miſchief againſt his Friend, Relation, Harmleſs Neighbour, or Acquaintance. All the Enmity he ſhews is to himſelf, and in his Cups he is not aware of that. For which Reaſon afterwards, to expiate the Criminal Advances he made to ſelf-Murder; he willingly ſcums off the groſſer Ebullition of his heated Veins, in penitent weeping: A Flood of Tears runs from his Eyes, like generous Libations at the Foot of the Altar, to pacify the Wrath of God; whilſt the lighter Part evaporates in pious Sighs and Vows. Thus this Pollution vaniſhes like Smoak, and he is ſoon made Clean again. And ſo in other Vices 'tis the ſame, with Men diſpos'd to Vertue. They endeavour to root out the Evil Habits they're accuſtom'd to. They try all Ways, and Stratagems to reform themſelves. But wicked Men by Inclination, ſin on without Remorſe. They never ſtudy to retrench the Evils they commit. Ever propenſe to Vice, they they chuse its ways, and court the Opportunities of doing Impious Things. They're naturively Unjust, and cannot live at Ease without premeditated Crimes. It is their Element, to be projecting Mischief. And such one is Solyman our Cousin.

God inspire him with more Grateful Sentiments towards his Friends, more Natural and Affectionate to those of his Blood, and a more just Deportment to all Men: Or else may he be like Cain, who for murdering his Brother was condemn'd to be a Vagabond on Earth; and like Zeuli Bazar the Persian, who falsely accus'd Hosain the Prophet, and for that Reason was troubled with a Palsy in his Head as long as he liv'd.

Paris, 15th. of the 10th. Moon,
of the Year 1664.

LETTER

LETTER XV.

To the Mufti's Vicar.

I Sent an Account to the Port of the Death of the late Rumbeg, or Pope, who is the Great Patriarch of the Nazarenes. Now the Cardinals have choſen another to ſucceed him, whom they call Clement IX. A Man of a great Character for Learning and Piety, and one from whom the Franks expect Glorious Things to be done for the Publick Good of Chriſtendom.

Theſe Popes ſeem to inherit the Authority and Honour of the Ancient Pontifex Maximus, or High-Prieſt of the Romans in the Time of Paganiſm. Nay, they aſſume a far more Ample and Uncontroulable Power. For, thoſe Gentile Prelates always ſubmitted to the Imperial Authority, from which they receiv'd Protection and Maintenance. But, theſe Chriſtian Fathers acknowledge no Superiour on Earth. Kings and Emperours do Homage to them, and perform the meaneſt Services; as, to hold the Baſon whilſt the Pope waſhes his hands; to hold the Stirrop, whilſt he mounts, or alights from off his Mule. Sometimes Great Princes lead his Horſe by the Bridle; whilſt at another Seaſon, they carry him on their Shoulders. 'Tis Recorded, that Eumenes, King of Pergamus, came to Rome, and pulling off his Turbant, humbly laid laid it on the Ground before the Senate, confessing he receiv'd his Liberty from them. And Prusias, King of Bithynia, us'd to style himself the Roman Senate's Slave, and bow down to the Earth before them. But, this is nothing to the Reverence which Great Monarchs pay the Pope, when crawling on their Hands and Knees, they kiss the Sandal on his Foot.

He can make and depose Kings at Pleasure, absolve Subjects from their Allegiance, bind and remit Sins, open and shut the Gates of Paradise, Purgatory, and Hell, or at least he endeavours to make the World believe so.

He has Seventy Cardinals for his Assistants and Counsellors, all equal to Princes: A Hundred and Thirty Archbishops under his Obedience: A Thousand and Seventeen Bishops: A Hundred and Forty Four Thousand Monasteries and Religious Houses: Three Hundred Thousand Parishes obeying his Will, and yielding Homage to him. So that if he were resolv'd to carry on some lasting War, he need only lay an Impost of Six Crowns a Year on every Monastery; and Fifty Two on every Parish, and it would amount to Sixteen Millions of Crowns yearly Income. And if out of every Monastery, he chose out Ten Men, he would have an Army of Fourteen Hundred and Forty Thousand Men. Which is more than any Potentate in the World can do beside.

Thou wilt say, 'tis a Wonder then he does not put this in Practice, and so wage War with with the Grand Signior, who has fleec'd him of so many flourishing Countries formerly under his Obedience.

O Sacred Oracle of the Mussulmans, God has tied up his Hand; he cannot do it. These are his Empty Speculations, Impracticable Projects, Phantastick Chimeras. The mighty Train of his Archbishops, Bishops, Parish-Priests, with Jesuits, Monks and Friars, though never so willing to obey his Orders in such a Case, yet cannot stir a Foot without the leave of their Respective Sovereigns. For, they are dispers'd through divers Kingdoms, States and Principalities, where they are subject to the Laws and Government in Force. So that unless he cou'd unite the Hearts of all the Christian Princes one with another, and with his own, to undertake so grand an Expedition, it is impossible ever to effect his Will. Each Nation has an Interest of its own to pursue, which makes 'em deaf to such Proposals as may embarass, if not ruine them. No Peter of the Desart, rambling up and down from Court to Court, with his Religious Harangue, will e'er again prevail to raise another Crusade. That Zeal is out of Fashion now in Christendom. Kings in these later Ages, have not half the Attach and Veneration for the Pope, they had in former Times. When Pope Boniface VIII. claimed a Temporal Jurisdiction in France; Philip the Fair, being then King, sent him this short Answer; Let thy Great Sottishness know, That in Temporals we are subject to none but God alone. And a French Embassador at Rome, speaking something boldly to the Pope, the Prelate reproach'd him, That his Father was burnt for a Heretick; whereupon the Embassador gave him such a Box o'th Ear, that he fell down as Dead. But it was a tart Message indeed, which the Eastern Bishops sent to Pope John III. who claimed an Universal Authority over all the Churches in the World. For said they, We firmly believe thy Absolute Authority over thy own Subjects; but we who are not subject to thee, cannot bear thy Pride, nor are we able to satiate thy Avarice. The Devil be with thee, and God with us.

In a Word, All Denmark, Swedeland, Norway, Holland, England, Scotland, Geneva, Ireland, half the Empire, and half Suisserland are fallen off from their Obedience to the Pope within these Two Hundred Years. And those Kingdoms and States which yet continue under the Yoke, are ready to shake it off at every Turn, when they are never so little gaul'd and vex'd. France, Spain and Venice often huff the Pope into Compliance with their Demands. Nor dares he to resist, but winks and puts up all, like an old decrepid Father, for whom his Sons are grown too strong.

Holy Successor of the Prophet and Messengers of God; Thou art th' Infallible Interpreter of the Law, and Judge of Equity, yet dost not arrogate a Power above thy Commission. The Grand Signior honours thy Wisdom and Sanctity; sanctity; and thou obey'st with humble submission the Imperial Edicts, He is thy Lord, and thou his Guide and Tutor in the Way to Paradise. May God increase thy Illuminations with thy Years, and inspire me and all the True Faithful with sincere Loyalty to our Sovereign, and devout Obedience to thee, without the least Alloy of Treachery or Superstition.

Paris, 2d. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year 1667.

LETTER XVI.

To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna.

NOW thou ſeeſt, I am a truer Prophet than thy New Meſſias, that Impoſtor Sabbati Sevi: And yet, though I'm ſo in Effect, I do not aſpire at the Title. I claim no Character above that of a Mortal, who has not quite forfeited his Senſe and Reaſon. However, if thou wilt yet retain ſome Veneration for his Perſon, ſhew it by imitating his Example, and embrace the Muſſulman Faith as he has done. At leaſt he outwardly profeſſes it; and had the Honour to do ſo firſt, in Preſence of the Sultan. I know not whether thou haſt heard of this or no. Thy Brethren perhaps may be unwilling to diſperſe the News of a Converſion bringing ſo much Infamy to all your Race. 'Tis poſſible they are aſham'd to own or publiſh to the World, the Tidings of their own Egregious Folly, in giving up their Faith to ſuch a Cheat as this; a Cheat as one would think grown ſtale and fetid enough, to make a Man that had the ſmalleſt Grain of Senſe recoil, conſidering how oft your Fathers have been bubbl'd before by ſuch Upſtart Meſſiaſſes, ſuch Spurious Prophets as this.

I commend the Wit of Sabbati Sevi, in that he

he would not ſtand the Brunt of the Grand Signior's Archers, or by a vain Preſumption hope for Miracles from Heaven to skreen his Naked Body from a Shower of Fatal Shafts. Had he been ſo raſh, I ſhould eſteem him the greateſt Miracle of Stupidity that e'er was extant on the Earth. If thou haſt not been yet informed of theſe Paſſages, Fame will quickly bring them to thy Ears; and then my Letter will not ſeem obſcure. In the mean time, aſſure thy ſelf, he deny'd his Apoſtleſhip, to ſave his Life, and this before the Grand Signior, with the chief Grandees of the Court; Where, at the ſame time, he confeſs'd One God and Mahomet his Meſſenger. If thou art his Diſciple therefore, thou oughteſt to be ſtedfaſt, and tread in his Steps, giving Glory to the Eternal One who has ſent Prophets into all Nations, to lead Men in the right way, as he ſent Moſes to the Houſe of Iſrael.

Nathan, ſuffer no narrow Principles, no Partial Prejudices to ſhut up thy Soul from the bright Splendors of Immortal Truth, which ſhine on every Man. The Light of Heaven is not confin'd to One particular Lineage. 'Tis Copious, large and infinite; ſpreading abroad its Univerſal Rays, enlightning all the Families and Nations on Earth.

'Tis true, I grant, the Omnipotent firſt ſent Moſes with the Written Law to the Poſterity of Iſaac. Had they obey'd the Sacred Inſtitutions, 'tis poſſible your Race had now been bleſs'd above the reſt of Men. Perhaps your Fathers would have ſtretch'd their Conqueſts far and wide to the utmoſt Limits of the Land; from India to the Weſtern Shores of Africk, and from the Remote Borders of the South to Nova Zembla in the Artick Circle. Then devout Princes wou'd have travell'd from the Four Angles of the World, and made long Pilgrimages to Jeruſalem, there to perform their Vows, and offer Sacrifices to the King of Heaven.

But alas your Anceſtors turn'd Infidels and Idolaters, even at the very Foot of Mount Sinai, whilſt the Tremendous Eccho's of the Thunders yet were in their Ears. They made themſelves a Calf of Gold, and Ador'd the Idol of their own Workmanſhip: So did their Children worſhip Adonis, Venus, Diana, and almoſt all the Rabble of the Gentile Gods, and Godeſſes. For which Reaſon, the Wrath of Heaven was kindled againſt that Generation: God rowz'd the Mighty Monarchs of the Eaſt to take up Arms and puniſh ſuch a Wicked Race of Men. How often was fair Jeruſalem ſack'd, and all the Jews deſtroy'd or carried away Captives by Perſians, Medes, Aſſyrians, or the Kings of Babylon? How many Prophets were ſent to tell 'em of their Errours and reclaim 'em? But the Obdurate Sons of Jacob ſtop'd their Ears, being reſolutely bent on Wickedneſs; the Meaſure of which being once complete, Fate ſign'd the Edict of your Utter Ruine. For then came Jeſus the Son of Mary, the True Meſſias, who foretold the Irrevocable Caſtrophe of Jeruſalem, which came to paſs accordingly accordingly in that very Age; When the Victorious Roman Army laid it all in Ashes, not so much as sparing the Glorious Temple of Solomon. Ever since which, the Jews have been dispers'd abroad through all the Earth. Each Nation, City, or Province where ye live, account ye Execrable Fugitives and Vagabonds.

In the mean while, the Fame of Jesus spread abroad; his Heavenly Doctrine, perfect Life, and Mighty Miracles, subdu'd the Hearts of Men. Christianity took Root i'th' World: It grew, and branch'd it self throughout the Continent. The Roman and the Grecian Empires tamely sat down under the Church's Shade within Three Hundred Years; and quickly after, other Nations fled unto the Sacred Shelter. But in process of Time this Religion also, like to yours, degenerated into Error, Superstition, and Idolatry. And then God rais'd up Mahomet, our Holy Lawgiver. He sent him down the Book of Glory by the Hand of Gabriel; And commanded him to teach it to the House of Ismael first, and then to all Men that were willing to embrace the Undefiled Faith; but to chastise with Fire and Sword, the Infidels who shou'd oppose his Mission, and resist the Truth.

How soon the Mussulman Law took Place, and gained Ground in Arabia, Persia, Syria, and the Adjacent Regions of the East? Nothing was able to stand before the Warlike Troops of True Believers. How Bold and Matchless were the Actions of the Valiant Hali? How Wise the Counsels of Sage Omar, and Abu-Bacre? How Eloquent and Forcible the Words of the Chast and Generous Osman? The Prophet was happy in the Company of all the Holy Cailiphs. They fought and conquered all before them.

Whenever the Heavenly Banner was display'd, Trembling and Horrour seiz'd the Infidels. Showers of successful Arrows streight were sent, against which the Uncircumcised could not stand; much less could they sustain the near Approach and dreadful Shock of our Invincible Cavalry. Their faint Battalions quickly shrunk and posted from the Field; whilst Ours unmindful of the Spoil, pursu'd the Chace, and strewed the Ground with slaughtered Carcases of flying Miscreants. Conquest attended the True Faithful, wherever they drew their Swords. Thus for above these Thousand Years has our Religion made its fortunate Advances on the Earth: And if another Law should be revealed, and some New Prophet rise to check the farther Growth of Mussulman Faith, and undermine the Empire of the Faithful; we ought not to reflect on Mahomet for this, as though he were an Impious Seducer, any more than we do on Moses for your Calamities; or on Jesus the Son of Mary, for the declining State of Christendom.

'Tis not impossible, but that the Omnipotent may have hidden Reserves of Precepts, yet to be divulged. He has had his various

Methods

Methods and Diſpenſations in all Ages and Parts of the World. Neither is it fit for Mortal Man to limit the Eternal One, or ſet him Rules. His Methods are to us Incomprehenſible. He ſent Moſes, a Man bred up in all the Sciences and Wiſdom of the Egyptians. To Jeſus he committed his hidden Power and Knowledge; and the Apoſtles ſpake all Languages. But Mahomet cou'd neither Write nor Read, and yet thou ſeeſt his Law has proſelyted many Mighty Kingdoms, States, and Empires. Who knows, but that in Future Times he will convert the Apoſtate World by ſome Dumb Perſon, who can neither Hear nor Speak? Or by ſome Blind Man who cou'd never ſee? Or it is not Impoſſible, but that he may employ ſome Maid of Admirable Beauty, Gifts and Learning, in the Myſterious Work. So were the Sybils of Old inſpir'd with Sacred Wiſdom and Fore-knowledge of Things to come. All filld with Inward Blaſts of ſome Immortal Wind, the pregnant Virgins ſoon conceiv'd deep Myſteries of Fate, which they writ down on Leaves of Trees: For they were Eremits, and Twelve in Number, as Ancient Records ſay. One of them liv'd at Cuma in Italy, where her Cave is ſhewn to Travellers at this Day. They foretold what ſhould happen in After-Times, particularly the Birth of Jeſus the Son of Mary. But they never ſaid a Word of Sabbati Sevi, or of any other Meſſias, to come after the Firſt. Theſe Holy Maids were had in great Veneration by the Gentiles, who gather'd up the ſcatter'd Leaves whereon they writ their Prophecies, and tranſcrib'd them carefully on Paper; that ſo the Sacred Memoirs might be deliver'd ſafe down to Poſterity.

By what I have ſaid, Nathan, thou may'ſt perceive, That I aim at nothing elſe, but to wean thee from the Superſtitious, fond Conceit of your Nation; and to make thee ſenſible, That though God once favoured the Jews with Oracles of Light and Reaſon, yet they have for many Ages forfeited this Privilege. Since which he gave the Goſpel to Jeſus the Son of Mary, the Alcoran to Mahomet, and at all Times has ſent Meſſengers and Prophets to every Nation and People on Earth.

There are no Partial Byaſſes in the Divinity which made the Worlds. He is an Inexhauſtible Abyſs of Love, of Light, and Life; Where every Creature drinks its Fill of Natural Happineſs, according to the different Ranks, Capacities and Deſires of Things. He Veſts the Sun with an Immortal Robe of Light, the Train of which is born up by the Moon and Stars.

When Phœbus is upon the Wing by Day, his Garment covers all the Sky; the Golden Fringes of it dangle to this Globe, and trail along in the Miry Soil, yet never gather the leaſt Speck of Dirt: They're dipt and plung'd in Rivers, Lakes, and Seas, without being wet; and yet they drink up all the Ocean by Succeſſive Draughts. This Lower World rejoices in the glittering Shew; the Elements with with every Being compounded of them, bask in the welcome Rays. So do the Planets Above, who take a ſingular to fold ſome Part of the Illuſtrious Dreſs about them. They wrap themſelves half up in borrow'd Light, and then, like Weſtern Franks, they foot it to and fro, in their beloved Walks Above; giving the neceſſary Salutes and Conges to each other, en Paſſant, and to the Sedentary Signs and Fixed Stars, to ſee if any of them mind their Courtly Garb and Mien: For they are the Sun's Domeſtick Pages, the Favourites of his Serail. At other Seaſons they ſtand ſtill, perhaps to gaze upon themſelves, in Contemplation of the Majeſtick Figure they make.

So have I ſeen a proud, conceited Spaniſh Trumpeter, after he had blown a Levet pretty well, lay down the Silver Inſtrument with a Diſdainful Gravity. His Cheeks all ſwoln with incloſ'd Air, and Soul puff'd up with Arrogance, he ſtruts, and curls his Black Muſtaches. Then, with big Looks, ſurveys himſelf from Head to Foot; caſting an Eye of Scorn upon the ſilent Tube, conſcious that he alone can make it ſound ſo well.

Thou wilt ſay, I wander in my Diſcourſe, as much as thoſe Heavenly Bodies I am ſpeaking of. 'Tis true, Nathan, our Thoughts are free, and not confin'd to Rules and Forms. We eaſily ſlip from one Imagination to another. And ſince I have made this Planetary Digreſſion, ſuffer me now, like them, to run Retrograde, and come to the Point from which I rov'd.

Doubtleſs,

Doubtleſs, each Individual Being is fill'd with its Eſſential Bliſs. The Fire has its Specifick Happineſs; ſo has the Air, the Water, and the Earth, with all the Living Generations on it. And when the Moſt High diſtributed the Sons of Humane Race through all the Various Climates, Zones, and Provinces, he furniſh'd every Region of the Globe with Gifts and Products, Riches and Delights, Agreeable to the Inhabitants: With this Proviſo, That they ſhould live in Innocence, Juſtice, and according to Reaſon. From which Eternal Law if any People ſwerv'd, they ſhould forfeit theſe Privileges, and be ſubdu'd, if not extirpated, by ſome more Vertuous Nation.

From hence ſprung all the Revolutions of Mighty Kingdoms and Empires; one ſucceſſively ſupplanting another to this Day. And the Sins of your Nation being greater, it ſeems, than thoſe of any other, God has diſpers'd you over all the Earth, without ſuffering you to inherit or poſſeſs a Foot of Ground.

If ever therefore Fate deſigns to reſtore the Jews again to the Holy Land, wherein their Fathers liv'd; never expect it, till your Erroneous Minds, and Vicious Manners are reform'd. For, Paleſtine was never ſeated ſo deliciouſly, for Bloody Zealots, Hypocrites, and Cruel Uſurers to enjoy.

Paris, 2d. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year 1667.

LETTER

LETTER XVII.

To Dgnet Oglou.

Daria's a Queen, a Jilt; and I am once more cur'd of my Dotage. There is no Truſt in Woman's Beauty, Faith, or Wit. They are deceitful as the Fruit of Aſphaltites: They are perfect Riddles and Paradoxes; and have more Unlucky Tricks, than Croſs-grain'd Elfes or Fairies. When a Man, over-heated by his Amorous Paſſion, thinks to embrace a Goddeſs, he meets with Ixion's Fate, and only hugs a gaudy Cloud, or Meteor.

I will not make thee ſick with a particular Rehearſal of my Second Folly, in being ſo fond of one who had betray'd me formerly. I will not repeat the Vain Addreſſes I made, the Kind Obliging Things I ſpoke, nor her Deceitful Anſwers. I will not tell thee, how ſhe drill'd me on into her Snares, and led me Captive in an Amorous Circle. Content thy ſelf to know, that I have been Twice her Cully; and if ever I am the Third Time, 'twill be my own Fault, as the Italian ſays. No, my Dgnet, I have done with that Falſe Sex. Henceforth, for ever, I abjure all Amorous Regards of Women. I will ſhun them, as I would a Peſtilence. I will either ſhut my Eyes, or turn them another Way, at leaſt, when-ever I meet a Female. I will not think of them, but with Diſdain and Hatred. Finally, I am off from them to all Intents and Purpoſes.

of

However, as the Arabian Proverb ſays, That Wind blows from an Unlucky Point of the Compaſs, which wafts no Good to Somebody: ſo from Daria's Falſe and Feigned Smiles, I reap ſome Benefit. I have learn'd a Secret, which has rid my Spirit of a Thouſand Cares, Diſquiets, and Agonies.

In the Year 1664. of the Chriſtians Hegira, I ſent a Letter to the Noble Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa, our Country-man; Wherein I inform'd him of an Affine made upon me in the Dark, as I was going to my Lodgings; and how I kill'd the Ruffian that attempted on my Life. I told that Generous Grandee, all my Jealouſies, and Conjectures on that Subject; how I ſuſpected ſome of my Enemies at the Port, to have a Hand in the Deſign; or elſe, that my Sicilian Maſter was concern'd in it. I knew not well what to conclude. But, now I am ſatisfied 'twas Daria's Husband, who reſenting deeply my former Amour with her, which ſhe diſcover'd to him at large, cou'd never be at Reſt, till he ſaw Paris, where he deſign'd to be the Executioner of his own Revenge, and lay in wait accordingly for my late Returning Home: For he was not ignorant of my Lodging. His Wife knew nothing of his Deſign, he having pretended other Buſineſs at the City. And 'twas from Accidental Words in her Diſcourſe, that I collected this great Secret. For, when I ask'd her of her Husband's Health, she told me, he was kill'd at such a Time, by Night, in an Alley of Paris, by whom she never yet could learn. But, I streight blush'd with Consciousness, and took the Hint. I drop'd some Necessary, Careless Queries by Degrees: And all her Answers still confirm'd me, as to Time and Place, with other Circumstances, that he must be the Man I murder'd in my own Defence, so long ago.

great

I kept this Secret lock'd up in my Breast; nor cou'd my doting Fondness melt me into such a soft and easie Temper, as to betray my self to her. But I took Inward Pleasure at the Thoughts of my Deliverance from that Sudden Violent Death, and from my After-Cares and Fears, by this Discovery. Henceforward I'll suspect no Mussulman, tho' my Enemy. Nor shall I be so fearful of my Sicilian Master. No Pannick Terrours shall confine me to my Chamber, and make me spend my Days in Fretting and Consuming Melancholy. I will not be surpriz'd when Strangers knock at the Gate, or when I hear the Blustering Voices of the Parish-Officers below, or the Collectors of the King's Revenues. Yet, these before were dreadful as the Sultan's Atteschériff, or Fatal Warrant, when he demands a Bassa's Head. So forcible is Jealousie, and suspended Thoughtfulness; so black the Influence, even of mis-ground Apprehension, and mistaken Guilt.

My

My Dgnet, This Mortal Life is a dark Labyrinth of croſs Events. Bewilder'd Man gropes up and down; he often trips and ſtumbles at Contingencies; he ſtrays about in Thorny, Rugged Paths, not knowing where he is, or which Way to turn himſelf. Sometimes an Ignis Fatuus, with its deceitful Light, miſ-guides him into Miry Places, Fens and Bogs, where he is in danger of being ſwallow'd up; or leads him to the Brink of an high Precipice, where if he advance but one Step more, he is gone beyond Recovery. He falls, and daſhes himſelf to pieces, on tender-growing Rocks.

Reaſon is the only Clew that can conduct us ſafe, through all the Windings of the perillous Maze. Heaven grant that thou and I may never let go our Hold of this ſo neceſſary Faculty, until it has conducted us to Paradiſe.

Paris, the 15th. of the 12th. Moon, of the Year 1667.

LETTER

LETTER XVIII.

To the Kaimacham.

LAst Year I gave thee an Account of the Birth of a young Princess of France. Now I shall inform thee, That she was baptized on the 21st. of this Moon. Baptism with the Nazarenes, is Equivalent to our Circumcision: Nay, 'tis something more Divine, if we may believe them. They call it the Sacrament of Initiation, the First Mystery of Christian Faith. But, when 'tis apply'd to Children of Royal Extraction, the Sons or Daughters of Kings, it looks more like a Ceremony of State, than a Mystery of Religion. However, be it what it will, 'tis perform'd with abundance of Pomp and Magnificence. And at this Ceremony it is, that every Christian receives his Name, which is given by the Godfathers and Godmothers, that is, Persons who stand Sureties for the Child's Education in the Christian Religion. This Princess was nam'd Maria Theresa, by the Dutchess Dowager of Orleans, and by the Duke of Enguien.

On the same Day the Cardinal Duke of Vendosme had Audience of the King and Queen, in Quality of Legate de Latere from the Pope. It seems the King of France had desir'd the Pope to stand Godfather to the Dauphin; which the good Prelate accepting, ſent this Cardinal as his Deputy and Repreſentative, to perform the Charge. He is to give the Dauphin his Name. In the mean while, he ſtands much upon Punctilio's, requires vaſt Reſpects and ſubmiſſions from the French Biſhops; and carries himſelf with as much State, as if he were a God or an Angel; looking as big, as if he were the Emperour of the Univerſe. And well he may, ſince during his Legation, he has as much Power as the Pope himſelf; that Sovereign Prelate, having inveſted him with all his own Paternal full Authority; Which he wou'd make the World believe, is greater than that of Earthly Kings and Emperours. And yet he ſtyles himſelf the Servant of the Servants of God. A fine Piece of Eccleſiaſtick Hypocriſie! The Ways of theſe Infidels are double. Their Practiſe runs counter to their Profeſſion. They wou'd fain appear as Saints, when in Effect they are little better than Devils.

sent

There has been a great Alteration lately made in Portugal; the Eſtates of that Nation having compell'd their King to renounce his Government, and conferr it on Dom Pedro, his Brother. The Spaniard laughs at this privately, hoping from their Inteſtine Animoſities to draw Occaſions of advancing his own Intereſt, and of recovering that Crown again.

Accompliſh'd Miniſter, There is Nothing New under the Moon; but a perpetual Circle of the ſame Events. What we admire at in this Age, as a Novelty, has been acted over and o'er in former Times. Peace follows War, and War treads close upon the Heels of Peace. Faith, Perfidy, Sedition, Obedience, Vertue and Vice, are the Reciprocal Off-spring of each other. There's nothing fix'd or stable; but the World turns round upon Eternal Vicissitudes.

Paris, 30th. of the 1st. Moon,
of the Year 1668.

LET-

LETTER XIX.

To Abdel Melec Muli Omar, President of the College of Sciences at Fez.

I Received thy Invaluable Dispatch, containing Marvellous Things, Revelations of a Sublime Rank, Mysteries heretofore undiscover'd. Yet I was not much surpriz'd having all along presag'd some vast Improvement of Learning from thy accomplish'd Spirit. O thou Terrestrial Star of the First Magnitude, Chief in the Constellations of the South.

Glory be to God, who from Infinite Darkness started the Eternal Bright Idea's of the Universe; and on the Womb of Everlasting Silence, begat the WORD by which he formed all Things. Doubtless, there is no Blemish in his Works: No Botches, Knots or disproportionable Unevennesses. The World's a perfect Beauty.

Were Ptolomy alive, thy System of the Heavens wou'd put him to the Blush. And Tycho Brahe wou'd sneak out of his Planetary Frame, by some wild and more than Eccentrick Motion, asham'd that he had been such a Botcher in Astronomy. Copernicus himself wou'd sink under the Burden of the Mass which the overloaded Earth wou'd in Revenge venge let fall upon him, for his Unnatural Cruelty to his Aged Mother, in burdening her so long. And all the World wou'd celebrate thy Praise, who hast thus happily resc'd Heaven and Earth from their Embaraſsments.

Thy Thoughts are high and elevated to the Heaven of Heavens; yet thy Humility stoops to the Center of the Earth. But all Mankind wou'd be oblig'd to thee afresh, if thou wou'd'st vouchsafe to take the Middle Path, and survey with thy accustom'd Accuracy the Surface of this Globe, whereon we Mortals tread. Geography being already sensible of her Elder Sister's Happiness, in thy Correction and Amendments of the former Astronomick Schemes; languishes also for thy Supervisal of her own Defects and Blemishes.

Those that have measur'd the Earth, cannot agree in stating her Circumference. And there were few in former Times who did believe th' Antipodes. The Mussulmans of India do assert, that the Earth's supported by Eight Mighty Elephants: And those of Turky, say, it rests upon the Horns of a great Bull. If either of these Opinions were to be taken in the Literal Sense, 'twould put the dullest Philosopher to Subsannation, or at least a Fit of Laughter. But, doubtless they are Allegories, under which are veil'd some True and Natural Secrets.

However, let the Globe rest where it will, on Bulls, or Bears, or Elephants, or Camels, Dromedaries, Dromedaries, Horſes, or the Back of Aelus, as the Gentiles did affirm; I wou'd fain know, methinks, how large a Space of Land we have to tread upon, and what Proportion is allotted to the Sea.

'Tis true, we have a common Notion of Four Quarters of Dry Land, Aſia, Africa, Europe and America. Yet this is quarrell'd at by thoſe of Later Times, who add a Fifth, which they call Magellanica, or the Southern Unknown Earth. From Immemorial Times, our Fathers were acquainted with the Three Firſt Diviſions or Precincts of the Globe: But the Two laſt were but of late diſcover'd, ſince the Improvement of Navigation, and the Invention of the Compaſs.

There is a Vulgar Tradition, every where in Vogue, That after Noah's Flood, Aſia fell to the ſhare of Sem and his Poſterity, Afrique to Cham, and Europe to Japhet. Whether this be true or no, cannot be proved, but is wholly owing to Conjecture. However, this is certain, That if it were ſo, there have been mighty Changes in the Inheritance of Noah's Off-ſpring; and Alterations of their ſeveral Limits: Inſomuch, as now they ſeem to be in Part blended and mix'd together, or at leaſt, ſhuffl'd from one to another.

Thoſe who lived in the Middle Age made but Two Diviſions of the Globe; Viz. Aſia and Europe: And in this they alſo differ'd: For, ſome made Africk only a

Provinc

Peninsula or Part of the Former, perſwading themſelves that they were Anciently joined together, tho afterwards ſeparated by a violent Irruption of the Atlantick Sea, by the Straights of Gibralter, which before was a Narrow Iſthmus or Neck of Land; but from the Time that Bank was waſhed away, the Mediterranean Sea deriv'd its Origin. Others made Africk a Part of Aſia, they being not abſolutely parted by any Sea; though ſome Egyptian Kings, and Roman Emperors attempted to make a Canal between the Mediteranean and Red Sea.

A Third ſort divided the Known Part of the World into Aſia, Europe, Africk, and Egypt. Whilſt a Fourth plac'd Egypt to the Account of Aſia, making the River Nile the Boundary between it and Africk. But this was Incommodious, in regard it left that of Egypt on the Weſt of Nile, to Africa. Such was the Confuſion of the Ancient Greek and Roman Geographers.

As for America, it takes its Name from Americus Veſputius, a Florentine, who made the Second Voyage to diſcover it. For it was Firſt deſcry'd by Chriſtopher Columbus, a Genueſe, in the Year of the Chriſtian Hegira, 1492. by the Order and at the Charge of Ferdinand, King of Arragon and Caſtile. This Part of the World is divided into Two Mighty Empires; the Northern, or that of Mexico; and the Southern, or that of Peru.

Magellanica,

Magellanica, or the Southern Unknown Land, derives its Name from Ferdinand Magellan the First that e'er discover'd it, in the Year 1520, when he sail'd quite round the Globe. About Five and Forty Years afterwards Francis Drake an Englishman, touch'd upon the same Coasts; and Twelve Years after him, Thomas Candish, one of his Countrymen. Likewise Oliver van Noord, a Hollander, undertook the same Voyage. But none made such Advances in this new Discovery, as a certain Spaniard, call'd Ferdinand de Quer.

God knows what strange and unexpected Novelties this Country might afford, if Men were once acquainted with it. This may be the Sanctuary of the Ten Tribes of Israelites, which were led away Captives by Salmanasser, King of Assyria. Or, perhaps the Inhabitants of this Country, are of another Race than that of Noah and Adam. We may from them, 'tis possible, derive new Lights, as to the Pre-existence of Human Souls. Who knows, but they have Records more Exact and Ancient, than the Indians and Chinese? Be it how it will, I am clearly for new Discoveries. There is a certain Specifick Boldness in my Spirit, which prompts me to invade the pretended Modesty of Nature: I long to furle the Veil, which hides so many Secrets, and with a Philosophick Confidence, were I in Power, I'd rumple up the Envious Coverings of such Desirable Wonders.

Oh

Oh! that ſome God-like Monarch in this Age, wou'd in Royal Bounty equip a Navy, and Man them with the moſt Expert and Reſolute Mariners on Earth, with Veſſels to tranſport an Army of Land-Soldiers; with Tenders to carry Meat, Drink, Apparel, and other Neceſſaries for ſo vaſt an Expedition. Surely, the Event would anſwer Expectation; the Gains wou'd far tranſcend the Coſt; the Honour infinitely ſurpaſs the Peril; and all the Known Familiar World would be obliged by ſuch a fortunate Undertaking.

Sage Omar, it depends on thee to bring this thing to paſs. Start but the Propoſal to ſome Mighty Sovereign; Thy Recommendation will be of Force. Thou wilt be more than a Columbus, Magellan, or Pizarro. In fine, thou wilt wind up the Searches of this Inquiſitive Age, and put a Stop to future Scrutinies.

I only hint the Thing; do thou purſue it, and all Generations ſhall celebrate thy Fame. God inſpire thee with freſh Ardours.

Paris, 7th. of the 3d. Moon, of the Year 1668.

LETTER XX.

To Osman Adrooneth, Astrologer to the Sultan, at Adrianople.

OLD Ptolomy was much out of his Reckoning, his wild irregular Fancy, drunk with the Lees of Aristotle's Dark Opinion and Conceit, stumbled and fell asleep upon the Thought of the Earth's being Center of the Universe, and then the Rest of the Heavens seem'd to run round his giddy Head. He often strove to list his Heavy Noddle up, to see whether it were so or not. But the soaking Load of Prepossession weigh'd him down again. He slumber'd, dream'd and snorted loud, stretch'd out at large upon the fair Chimera.

The studious Candidates of Truth in Science, by his Example fell to the same Riot in Philosophy, and continu'd the Debauch for many Ages: Till, too much satisfeited and cloy'd with such a sulsome Entertainment; bold Tycho Brahe rubs up his Eyes, and wakes the Company with a new Systeм of the Mighty Frame. Then all began to start, and rouze, as at some Prodigy. His Heavenly Gim-cracks pleas'd the Palate of the Age. His Epicycles, Eccentricks, Perigæ's, and Apogæ's, with all the rest of his gay Whim-whams, were re-ved with General Applause. 'Till the more Excellent Copernicus appear'd with something Newer still. And then the Blundering Dane, abash'd, slip'd off the Stage without so much as Taking his Leave.

The Astronomers soon fell in Love, and pay'd Implicite Adoration to the Idol which Copernicus set up; and it was but Reason, since they had never seen a fairer or a juster Scheme of the World before.

Yet every Age improves it self in Knowledge, on the Ruins of the Former. And thus, what Ptolomy never found out, nor Tycho Brahe or Copernicus cou'd mend or match, if now they were alive; is very lately discovered by the Incomparable Abdel Matec Musi Omar, President of the College of Sciences at Fez.

The Happy Musu Abu'l Yahyan, Professor of Philosophy there, first started the Proposal of a Mathematical Experiment. And, laying Heads together, the Primate of Mexico Doctors, Father of all the African Alfaqui's living, found a true Demonstration in it.

I have lately receiv'd a Dispatch from that Renown'd Prelate, with an inclos'd Model of this Planetary Machine. A Copy of which I send thee, drawn by my own Hand. It represents the Original to a Point. Examine it well, and thou wilt find, 'tis much more Regular and Exact, than any of those antiquated Schemes; and Answers all the Questions of Astronomy, without the least apparent Blunder. Beſides, It has a perfect Symmetry and Proportion in every Part: It makes the World appear a Compleat Beauty. Whereas the Frame which Tycho Brahe made, was all deform'd with Wild Unevenneſſes. Nor was the Syſtem of Copernicus without a Manifeſt Botch, in making the Small Orb of the Moon alone, to interfere with that of the Earth: Whilſt all the other Planets circulate in their own Entire and Solitary Spheres, without an Interloper to diſturb them.

Beſides, he makes the Earth an Atlas to the Moon, whilſt this poor weary Globe is forc'd, in his Opinion, to drudge yearly round the Zodiack, with the Vaſt Burden of Diana on its Shoulders.

If it be ſo, 'tis no Wonder that the Earth ſo often faints and trembles under the mighty Load. Henceforth we need not lay the Blame of Earthquakes to Enceladus; as if the drowzy, ſnoring Gyant, turning his Monſtrous Bulky Corps from one Side to the other, were the ſole Cauſe of theſe Convulſions: When Mortals reel and ſtagger as they walk upon the Surface; when Trees and Mountains rock as in a Cradle, and whole Cities are ſometimes ſwallow'd up.

No; let poor Enceladus ſleep on, and take what Reſt he can in his Infernal Priſon. There was no Danger of his ever ſtirring again, after he had once been thorowly ſoaked in Lethe's All-benumming Streams. Copernicus is only in the Fault: When-ever we feel the fatal Heavings of the Globe, 'twas too unmerciful a Task he impos'd upon it, especially in its Old Age.

Faſh

It wou'd have grumbled in its early Days and sturdy Youth, had it been thus severely us'd by Orpheus, Homer, Hermes, Trismegistus, or any other of the Primitive Sages. But now to be thus roughly handl'd by an Upstart Infidel in its declining Years, when Three Parts of its Marrow's decay'd, and its once potent Nerves and Sinews are shrunk, its Liver wasted, and every Vital dwindling away; almost broke its Heart.

Therefore these African Sages, in Duty to their aged Mother the Earth, have found a Way to free her from the burden of the Moon in her decrepid State; and yet to make the Sun the Center of the World; adjusting at the same Time, with accurate Laws, and an Unblemish'd Order, the Motions, Stations, and various Postures of the Planets.

This Happy Revelation in Astronomy, is not to be divulg'd in Publick Writings; lest some Inquisitive Curious Traveller, Ambitious Nazarene or Envious Jew, shou'd chance to light upon the Sacred Scheme, and boast himself the Inventer of it.

Let it be only communicated to Learned, Faithful Mussulmans, of the First Rank: For, such Celestial Mysteries, ought not to be prostituted to the Vulgar. Tell not the little Jasmir Sgire Rugial of it. For, if thou dost, all the Frank Merchants at Aleppo, soon shall be made privy to the matchless Secret. Be it a perpetual Arcanum in the Breasts of Sublime Men, exalted Souls; Friends of God, and little less than Prophets. And be it so, till all the Sages of the East and South, are first made sensible of it, and able to defend it, against the vain Attempts of the Uncircumcised Nation. Then let it be promulg'd in Allah's Name throughout the Globe, to the Eternal Honour of God and Glory of his Prophet, who cou'd neither write nor read, yet has Disciples to whom alone the purest Reformation of the Universe is owing.

Do but survey with an Indifferent Eye the last and loveliest Portraiture of the World that ever was made by Man. Fix thine admiring Eyes on the Magnifick Sun and Palace of the Sun. Consider at the same Time the True and equal Forms, Dimensions, Distances, and mutual Intersections of the Ambient Orbs, without the smallest Blur or Blot in all the Eternal Frame. Then tell me thy Opinion; whether thou canst not Calculate Nativities, erect all manner of Schemes, make Almanacks, tell credulous Men their future Fortune, appoint the Eclipses of the Sun and Moon, set Venus and Mercury together by the Ears, or stir up furious Mars to make a Hurly-Burly in the Heavens and Elements. Or if thou canst not wheadle the sowr Curmudgeon Saturn, into a soft obliging Humour: Or fret the Noble Jupiter to Madness, by a damn'd Conjunction, with his Mortal Enemy.

my: And a Thousand more Astrological Enterprizes. Tell me, I say, whether thou can'st not perform all this and more, as well by the enclos'd Effigies of the World; as by the old Thread-bare, Weather-beaten, Worm-eaten Italian Clock-work of Ptolomy; or the later Inventions of Tycho Brahe, and Copernicus.

It will now no longer be a Secret, how those Birds dispose themselves, which at a certain Time o'th' Year, are seen to gather in mighty Troops, and fly directly upward out of Humane Sight; not one of the whole Species being left behind, or found on any Part o'th' Earth, until the Moon has rowl'd full 28 Times round the Zodiack: When they return again in equal Companies unto this Globe, each Species to its Native Region. For th' Intelligent Fowls exactly know the Hour in which the Earth does in its Yearly Circulation intersect the Neighbouring Orb o'th' Moon, and then they snatch the Opportunity to quit th' Attractive Atmosphere, and take the Air of that Adjacent Planet.

I have a great deal more to say on this Subject, which I will reserve for another Letter. In the mean Time, thou Venerable Star-gazer, adieu, and remember to be private.

Paris, 7th. of the 3d. Moon,
of the Year 1668.

LETTER XXI.

To the Venerable Mufti, Principal Support of Learning and Science.

THE Orders of thy Sanctity, came like a Meſſage from Heaven, ſurprizing me at once, with equal Pleaſure and Aſtoniſhment. Every Line encreas'd my Rapture. And now I thought, I had no more to wiſh for in the World, ſince the Great Patriarch of the Faithful, had condeſcended to imbrace the Advice of ſo mean a Slave as Mahmut. It has been my paſſionate Deſire, to ſee Knowledge flouriſh in the Renowned Ottoman Empire, that the Infidels may no longer reproach us with Ignorance and Barbariſm. This was the Reaſon, that I ſo often importuned thy Predeceſſor to encourage the Tranſlation of Hiſtories into the Turkiſh Language. Now thou art pleas'd to begin this Glorious Work, and to honour me, by requiring my Inſtructions in the Management of it. Nay, thou haſt commanded me, to lay the Foundation of ſo Illuſtrious an Enterprize, in preſenting thee a Pattern or Model of this Great Work, containing an Hiſtorical Epitome of the Four

Great

Great Monarchies, with a brief Series of the most Remarkable and Famous Transactions, Changes, and other Events in the World, with Reference to the Nation and Age wherein they happen'd.

As to the Advice thou demandedst of me, I think it wou'd be for the Honour and Benefit of the Muſſulmans, That a Complete History of the World, ſhould be collected out of the moſt Ancient and Sincere Writers, and digeſted into Annals, from the very Beginning of Time, down to the Reign of our preſent Emperour, the Auguſt Sovereign of the Whole Earth: That ſo, whatſoever has been done on Earth worthy of Memory, may be rank'd in its proper Time and Place; and we may not grope any longer in the Dark, when we would know in what Year or Age any Famous Warriour or Monarch liv'd or died; or, when any renowned City was built, beſieg'd, taken, and deſtroy'd, and by whom all theſe Things were done: With many other uſeful Memoirs, in which the Ottomans are now wanting.

In the Beginning of this Work, it will be abſolutely neceſſary to have Recourſe to the Chronicles of the Indians, Perſians and Egyptians, and to the Writings of Orpheus, Homer, Thales, Zeno, and others of Greece, Phœnicia and Thrace. For, though the Nazarenes of the Weſt, deſpiſe the Authority of theſe Authors, and calumniate all for Fables and Romances which was deliver'd before the First Olympiad; yet the more Impartial Inhabitants of the East, whether Christians or Mussulmans, reject Nothing which has the undoubted Stamp of Antiquity; but rather seek to unriddle the Mysterious Expressions of the Poets and Philosophers, who strove industriously to cover all their Knowledge and Traditions under dark Enigma's, Figures, and Parables, that so the Divine Secrets of Antiquity might not be prophaned, by the Rude and Unpolished Vulgar.

It was ever the Maxim of some Ancient Sages and Politicians, thus to keep the People in Ignorance of past Times; the better to assure their Dominion and Authority over them. They only reveal'd what was obvious to every Mans Sense, the manifest and visible Influences of the Heavenly Bodies, the Course of the Sun, Moon and Stars, the Natures of Plants and Animals, with whatsoever else was liable to any Mans Eye and Apprehension. But as to the more obstruse and less Conspicuous Works of Nature, they were like the Secrets of State, kept under Veil.

Yet, there wanted not Men of Wisdom in other Parts of the World, who strove to unfold all Things, and render Mankind familiar with whatsoever fell under Humane Intellect. Among these, the Indians and Chineses deserve the first Place, who were never covetous of the Gifts of Nature, but sought to improve all that of their Nations in the Knowledge of the Arts and Sciences; and especially, in the Syſtem of Ancient Hiſtory. These People ſhut up themſelves from the Reſt of the World for many Ages; fearing, leſt Commerce might corrupt the Simplicity of their Primitive Laws and Inſtitutions. Only Alexander the Great, and before him; Semiramis Queen of the Aſſyrians, had ever Acceſs to the Indies in Old Time. And China was never open till of late, when their too potent Neighbours, the Tartars, broke through their famous Wall, and ſubdu'd the whole Empire. And their Buſineſs was not with Books, but with Men.

of

For theſe Reaſons we need not wonder, that the Indian Brachmans, and the Bonzi's of China, deliver an Account of the Origin of the World, and the next Succeeding Ages, ſo far beyond the Epocha's of all other Hiſtorians, eſpecially theſe in the Weſt.

For Events of Later Date, the Compilers of this Work may make Uſe of ſuch Hiſtorians as have written the Annals of ſeveral Nations, ſince the Firſt Olympiad.

If thou know'ſt not what an Olympiad means, 'tis the Form of Computation us'd in the Ancient Grecian Hegira, every Olympiad containing Four Years. And the Firſt of theſe Olympiads began in the Year of the World 3228. At which Time Chorœbus of Elis ſignaliz'd himſelf, by winning the Firſt Race that ever was run at the Olympick Games. These Games were celebrated every Olympiad; and all the Youth of Greece flock'd to them, to try their Skill in Running, Wreſtling, and other Manly Exerciſes.

About this Time Hiſtorians began to write Partially; and the Truth cou'd hardly be diſcern'd from the Fabulous Errours with which it was Adulterated. Yet this rather proceeded from a National Emulation, than from a Deſign to corrupt the Ancient Belief. However, thou may'ſt give Credit to Thucidydes, who, in the 86th Olympiad, began to write his Hiſtory of the War in Peloponneſus, between the Lacedæmonians and thoſe of Athens; which War continu'd One and Twenty Years, as that Author teſtifies, who wrote Annals of it, from the Beginning to the End. And, among other Remarkable Paſſages, which he is very exact in re-counting, he mentions a famous Eclipſe of the Sun, that happen'd in the Firſt Year of that War; and was ſo great, that the Stars appear'd at Noon-day in the Sky. Plutarch alſo ſpeaks of this Eclipſe, telling us, that Pericles, Prince of the Athenians, being at Sea when the Sun was thus darkned, and perceiving the Maſter of the Veſſel in a Great Fright, as at ſome Prodigy, threw his Cloak over the Man's Face, and ask'd him, If he was afraid of that, or look'd upon it as a bad Omen? And when the Maſter anſwerd, No; Pericles reply'd,

What

What Difference is there between this Eclipse of the Sun, and that, since both are caus'd by the Interpoſition of a Veil between the Sun and thine Eyes; only that Veil is larger than my Cloak, it being the Moon which covers that Glorious Lamp from our Sight?

Much about the ſame Time liv'd Herodotus and Hellanicus, two famous Hiſtorians, Men of Integrity and Credit; and Hypocrates, the Renown'd Phyſician of Athens. Theſe are worthy to be Tranſlated into the Turkiſh Language; as are alſo Xenophon and Polybius, who wrote after them. They all, except the Laſt, liv'd in the Time of the Perſian Monarchy, and therefore are moſt likely to deliver down a True Account of the Memorable Events that happen'd during that Formidable Empire.

As for the Macedonian Monarchy, the moſt Eminent Writers were, Curtius, Arrianus, and Diodorus Siculus; but this laſt is frequently miſtaken in his Chronology, and therefore ought to be corrected by the Others. Plutarch alſo muſt be conſulted, and Joſephus the Jew; with Strabo, Appian, Livy, Juſtin and Pauſanias. For they either ſerve to illuſtrate one another, where they treat of the ſame Matters; or elſe the one carries on the Thread of Hiſtory where the other left off. And therefore thou needeſt not wonder that I name ſo many Authors, ſince ſince they are worthy of Credit, and abſolutely neceſſary to the Compleating an Entire Hiſtory of the World: Whereas there are a Rabble of other Writers, who are ſcarce worth the Naming; much leſs their Authority to be truſted to, in Compiling an Univerſal Hiſtory, which is to give a new Luſtre to the Ottoman Empire, and raiſe its Credit in the Learned World.

As for the Roman Empire, it will be neceſſary to make Uſe of Joſephus, Tacitus, Suetonius, Philo, Xiphilus, Zonaras, Ammianus Marcellinus, Velleius Paterculus, Seneca, Florus, Livy and Suidas.

Theſe will be ſufficient Materials, with which the Tranſlators, Scribes and Compilers may accompliſh the Illuſtrious Undertaking; the Encouragement whereof I again earneſtly recommend to thy Liberality and Munificence.

What concerns the Injunction thou haſt laid on me, to draw a Pattern or Model of this Great Work, in preſenting thee with a Brief Abſtract of the Riſe and Fall of the Four Monarchies, with ſuch Memorable Events as will be proper to direct the Undertakers in the Method of digeſting this Univerſal Hiſtory; I will reſerve it for another Letter, not having thoſe Books by me which are requiſite to aſſiſt me in this Affair.

In the mean Time, I pray Heaven proſper this Noble Enterprize, and grant that thou may'ſt live the Space of many Olympiads, pindy, to see the Effect of thy Bounty; When this Universal History being finish'd, shall instruct the Mussulmans, and defeat the Calumnies of the Uncircumcised.

Paris, 2d. of the 5th. Moon, of the Year 1668.

The End of the First Book.

LETTER

LETTERS

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. VII.

BOOK II.

LETTER I.

To Mehemet, an Exil'd Eunuch, at Alcair in Egypt.

THY Sufferings pierce my Heart. I owe thee Pity on the Score of Humane Nature; and a more Compaſſion as thou art a Muſſulman: But, where's the Tongue or Pen, that can deſcribe the Sympathy of Friends? Canſt thou in a deſponding Manner caſt thy ſelf upon thy Bed, there to exhale, in Melancholy lancholy Sighs, that pungent Sorrow, which can find no other Vent, unleſs thoſe Vapours of the Spleen condenſe to Show'rs of Tears. Canſt thou do this, and I remain Inſenſible all the while? No! I'm in a perfect Eccho to thy ſaddeſt Groans. And when thou weep'ſt my Heart is not a Stone, that ſpatters back again the Drops that fall on it; but 'tis like Clay, that ſoftens with the Gentle Solemn Diſtillation. Believe that I ſweat Blood, when thou diſſolv'ſt in Tears. I am not capable of Moderation toward my Friend. My Love, my Joy, my Grief, and Anger, are all Exceſſive, when ſuch a one as thou occaſion'ſt them. 'Tis equal Pleaſure to live or die, in this Magnetick Point: For Souls of Friends are perfect Uniſons. Then, if thou haſt a Spark of Love for Mahmut, do not kill me with thy ſad Complaints. For whilſt I hear, that thou art thus abandon'd to Misfortune and Deſpair, how can I live without perpetual Deaths, more Terrible than what we all muſt undergo, by the Courſe of Nature? Doſt thou delight to make a Conſtant Martyr of me?

Thou'rt bred a Courtier, and ſo was I. Our Infant Blood was ſeaſon'd with the Grand Signior's Bread and Salt: We equally imbib'd the Manners, Habits, Cuſtoms, Maxims, and the Pride of the Seraill; with the Pillow, the Milk, Sorbets, and other Nouriſhment of our Early Years. Since which, we have ſeen the various Revolutions of Mighty Kingdoms, States and Empires.

given. We have beheld the Invincible Emperour of China fall a Victim to the Perfidy of his Slaves, and to the more propitious Fortune of the Tartars. After another Manner was the Glory of the British Monarchy eclips'd. But, no foreign Story can match the Barbarous Maſſacres of our Majeſtick Sultans, Muſtapha, Oſman, and Ibrahim, all within our Memory.

Oh! Mehemet, we have lived too long, after theſe Spoils of Royal Blood. How can we repine at our own Private Loſſes and Afflictions, whilſt we do but ſip the Flat Inſipid Reliques of thoſe Tragical, ſprightly Potions, brew'd for the Palates of the Great Princes. Henceforth, let us live, as if we were among the Dead. Let us hear, and ſee, feel, taſte and ſmell theſe Outward Objects en Paſſant, without being ſenſible what we do or ſuffer. Let us Anticipate, by a wiſe Prevention, the laſt Stroke of Death, in dying every Moment.

Go to the Pyramids, my Mehemet, or would to God I cou'd go thither for thee; there to Contemplate the Fate of Humane Glory, the Mock-Grandeur of this World. Conſider all the Race of the Egyptian Kings, who built theſe Coſtly and Magnificent Structures, or their Fathers for 'em: Who fill'd the Hollow Piles with Silver, Gold and Precious Stones: Whilſt, with their Magick Laws, they liſted Legions of Spirits, dwelling in the Air, Fire, Earth and Water, obliging them to guard the Wealthy Sepulchers:

chers: And tell me then, what thou can'ſt find in thoſe ſuperannuated Vaults? Nothing, but Stench and Darkneſs. Old Time has filch'd away the ſlighter Glories of the Place; and his Younger Brother Avarice has plunder'd all the Reſt, which was the more Subſtantial Part. He cou'd have done no leſs in Common good Manners, than take the Leavings of the Heir; the Elder of the Two. The Great Al-Maimun thought to have the Gleanings of their Harveſt; but he found, the Gain wou'd never exceed the Coſt.

But, what's become of all the Founders of theſe Aſtoniſhing Fabricks? Look in the Tomb of Cheops, who is ſuppos'd to build the Greateſt of the Pyramids; and thou wilt find, not the leaſt Relique of his Aſhes. Or, if thou ſhould'ſt 'twill be Impoſſible to diſtinguiſh them, from the Common Duſt of other Mortals, tho' his Meaneſt Slaves: So Mutable is Human Glory; So Inconſtant all the Smiles of Fortune.

Do but reflect on all the Glorious Conqueſts of Alexander the Great, and on the Triumphant Entry he made in Babylon, when the Chariot which carried him, was an Epitome of all the Riches which the Indies cou'd afford; and yet that Chariot ought to be eſteem'd but one Degree before his Hearſe, which in a very few Days, with an Obſcurity beneath the Merits of ſo great a Victor, convey'd him to his Grave.

Conſider Cæſar, who after Four and Twenty Twenty Battels, wherein he always got the Day, was drawn in a triumphant Chariot to the Capitol, by Forty Elephants; yet now his Name is hardly thought of.

So Epaminondas thought to outvye the World in his Magnificent Inſults; yet all this Glorious Pageantry ended in Duſt and Aſhes. Aurelian led the Graces Captive with Zenobia; yet he himſelf at laſt became the Priſoner of Death. The Pompous Galley of Cleopatra, when ſhe Celebrated the Cilician Triumph, ſerv'd but to mend the Poop of Charon's Boat, when ſhe was to be ferry'd to Elizium. So the proud Seſoſtris, whoſe Coach was drawn by Four Vanquiſh'd Kings, at laſt was fain to owe his Uncouth Funeral to Four Sordid Slaves, who ſtole his Naked Corps away from the Deſign'd Revenge of Ridiculous Eunuchs, and buried it in a Heap of Camel's Dung.

But, where's the Pen or Pencil that will to the Life deſcribe the Unmatch'd Cavalcade of Pompey, when by a proſperous Chymiſtry he had extracted all the Richeſt Spirits and Eſſences of Eaſtern Wealth, to grace his Entry into Rome?

The Front of the Proceſſion dazl'd every Eye, with the ſtrange Luſtre of Diamonds and Carbuncles mix'd in Chequer-wiſe: An Orient Figure, or rather the Subſtance of all Aſia, in Epitome. Then follow'd the Image of the Creſcent Moon in maſſy Gold, with a Train of Mountains of the ſame Metal, whereon were Woods of Jet, Vines whoſe whose Grapes were entire Saphires, and Animals all of Porphyry, Grazing on Fields of verdant Amethysts.

To sanctifie this Glorious Shew, the Golden Images of Jupiter, Mars, and Pallas came next in Sight, with Thirty Crowns of Gold, born up by the Chief Captains of the Army, as if so many Kingdoms were design'd for their Rewards. And because Gods and Goddesses should not want a Temple, an Hundred Slaves bore up a Turret, built all of Massy Silver, washed with Gold. And on the Back of this, appear'd the Statue of the Conqueror, on which no Eye could look, being crusted over with Hyacinths and Pearls.

Behold, my Mahmet, an Exuberance of Humane Glory: Yet wonder not to see a Man come after all; a Mortal Man, thus made Radiant as the Sun, with borrow'd Jewels. And to complete his fading Triumph, read these Letters, all pure Jasper, on his Chariot-Wheels: Armenia, Cappadocia, Paphlagonia, Media, Colchis, Syria, Cilicia, Mesopotamia, Phœnicia, Palestine, India, and the Deserts of Arabia. All these were the Conquests of this Triumphant Warriour, and yet his Destiny insulted over him. Poor Empey thou art gone, and all thy Mighty Territories in the East are now possessed by Sultan Mahomet our Glorious Sovereign.

And what need thou and I repine, after we have seen all this? Let Asdrubal triumph Carthage with the Glory of Four Tri-lick Triumphs: Yet that Theatre of his Honour quickly proves the Stage whereon he was degraded, ſtrip'd ſtark naked, and in Triumph led away by Death. So Marius, after he had been exalted to the Top of Human Felicity on Earth, was ſeen all naked, lying in a ſtinking Ditch.

lict

What is become of Nero's Silver Gallery in the Capitol? Or the pendant Gardens of Semiramis, which coſt no leſs than Twenty Millions of Gold? Where is now the Glittering Hall of Atabalipa, King of Peru, whoſe Pavement was of Saphires? Or the Gardens of Cyrus, fenced round with Pales of Gold? Or Caſar's Fountains garniſh'd with Dryads of the ſame Metal? Where is the Ivory Palace of Melaus, or the Cryſtal Louvre of Druſus? All theſe Things are vaniſh'd with their Founders.

How Wiſe and Happy then was Saladine, the Great and moſt Invincible Conquerour of Aſia, who Triumph'd over himſelf; and in his Victorious Return, cauſed a Shirt to be carried before him on the Point of a Spear, with this Proclamation; That after all his Glories, he ſhould carry nothing to the Grave but that poor Shirt? So Adrian a Roman Emperour, to qualifie the exceſſive Joys of his High Fortune, Celebrated his own Funeral, and caus'd his Coffin to be born before him, when he was to make a Publick Cavalcade through Rome. This was a ſacred Triumph, an Heroick Inſult over Himſelf and Death.

Let

Let thou and I, my Friend, imitate these sage Examples, and ever have the Image of Death before our Eyes. Then we shall never mourn for the vain Trifles we have lost, or covet what we ne'er enjoyed: But being ever content with what our Destiny allots us, shall pass our Time away in a Divine Tranquility.

Mehemet, thou'lt find this to be a Profitable and True Experiment. Try it, and its Issue will convince thee more than a Thousand Counsellors.

Paris, the 12th. of the 5th. Moon,
of the Year 1668.

LETTER II.

To Mohamm,ed, the Illuſtrious Eremit of Mount Uriel in Arabia the Happy.

I Lodge in a Houſe near the Wall of Paris which gives me a daily Opportunity of ſurveying out of my Window, the Adjacent Fields: Theſe extend themſelves in a Plain, for the Space of a League, or thereabouts; And then the Eye is arreſted by a long Ridge of Riſing Ground, a Row of Hills or Hillocks, not meriting the Lofty Name of Mountains, yet high enough to put a Valley out of ſhape, and make th'Horizon crump-back'd.

Thoſe Hills are cover'd thick with Woods and Groves; amongſt whoſe verdant, ſhady Tops, ſome Stately Palaces lift up their glittering Creſts, and make a Sociable pleaſant Figure in thoſe Solitudes.

This Proſpect repreſents ſo much to th' Life, the Valley of Admoim in Arabia, the Place of my Nativity, that I cou'd as well graſp Coals of Fire with naked Hand, and not be burnt; as caſt my Eye out of my Window, on this lovely Landskip, and not be inflam'd with ſecret paſſions for my Native Soil, the Place where I firſt drew the Vital Air. It is a perfect Magnet to my Spirit, whereſoever I am attracting all my Wiſhes, Inclinations, and Deſires. Methinks, the Eaſtern VVinds at certain Hours, waft to my raviſh'd Ears, the Whiſpers of my Countreymen. Methinks, ſometimes I ſee the Faces of my Kindred, and their Rural Train; I hear their Voices, and converſe familiarly with them, as tho' they were preſent: Such is the Magick of ſtrong deſire and Sympathy. It ſteals the Soul away from it ſelf, and with ſweet Violence unites it to the belov'd Object, tho' at never ſo great a Diſtance. Thus when my wandring Thoughts have taken up their Reſidence for a while in that delicious Vale where I was born, a far more powerful Magnet, draws 'em to thy Cave; Myſterious Solitary, Mirrour of Virtues, Exemplary Guide of ſuch as conſecrate themſelves to God.

Glory to Him that was before All Time, the Father of Eternal Ages. He changes not, yet is the Source of Indefagitable and unwearied Revolutions. He is the only Independent, True, and ſelf-Exiſtent Being; The Increated Eſſence from whom all other Beings derive their Origin and Conſervation. He is the Prop and Baſis of the Univerſe. He is but One, the Primitive Unity, and cannot be divided into Fractions; yet every Species, and Individual Being i'th World participates a Share of his Divinity. Immortal Praiſes exhale from all his Creatures, and aſcend like Clouds of Incenſe before the Throne of his Adorable Majeſty; or like Vapours which the grateful Earth returns in a hot Summers Day, by way of acknowledgment, for the Benefits perpetually flowing on her from the Sun.

So

So all the Elements reſpire their Thanks to Him that made 'em. The Firmament expands its ſelf, and bows down to the Brims of this low Globe: Sun Moon and Stars, do ſtoop and kiſs the Floor o'th' Earth in token of profound Humility and Devotion, to the Immortal Source of Light. Only Ungrateful Man repays, the Bounty of th' Omnipotent with Neglects, Contempts, Affronts, and Blaſphemies. I mean the General Part of Human Race; excepting always from this Charge, the Juſt, the Innocent and Pious. were it not for ſuch as theſe, the Divine Patience wou'd be tir'd with the continual Prophanations of vain Mortals.

Oh! Venerable Sylvan, thou art the only Pacifick Victim of this ſinful Age. Thy conſtant Self-denials, Mortifications, Abſtinences, and the whole Syſtem of thy Accompliſh'd Sanctity, ſtop the Wrath of Heaven from falling, in large Cataracts, on Mankind. When the Eternal Eye beholds thy Virtues, it drops down Tears of Love and Mercy on the Earth, glad that a Son of Adam yet ſurvives, not ſtain'd with Vice. Thou art the effectual Propitiation, for the Sinful World. When Storms and Tempeſts of Impetuous Winds; when Lightning, Thunder, Hail or Rain diſturb the Air, or Earthquakes menace more effectual Tragedies to the Earth, I think of thee the Favourite of Heaven and then repoſe in full Security: Thy very Idea is my ſhelter from all evils: I ſhroud my ſelf under the Shade of thy Inviolated Beard, o'er which the Razor never paſs'd. I take Sanctuary in the Umbrella of thy Arms, when ſtreteh'd in fervent Oraiſons. Thy remembrance is my certain Refuge in Calamity.

I am Impregnated with Sacred Emulations of thy Vertue; I burn with fervent, paſſionate Deſires to become thy Diſciple. I languiſh to withdraw my ſelf from this vain World; and from the Contagious Society of Mortals. How Happy is the Life that's led in quiet Solitude? Where the Soul can feel her ſelf, and being awaken'd to a Senſe of her Immortal Strength, rouzes and vigorouſly ſhakes off the heavy Clogs of Sleep and Death: Whilſt the Divine Afflatus gently breathing on the Intellect, and fanning the Oppreſſed Sparks of Reaſon, which lay ſmothering under a Heap of Errours, Luſts, Affections, and unlimited Deſires; kindles the Mind into a perfect Flame of Light, which ſoon conſumes the Rubbiſh of Bodily Pleaſures, diſſipates the Smoak and Miſts of Pamper'd Fleſh and Blood, and then a Man becomes all Radiant within, ſhining with Unclouded Splendors.

We Mortals ſeem to be rank'd in a Middle State between the Separate Spirits and Beaſts: Our Vertues make us like the Former; our Vices, like the Latter. For, when a Man has quite ſubdu'd his Appetites, and Reaſon ſits Triumphant in her Throne, he's like an Angel, living above the Rate of his Mortality. He does not with the Stagyrite place Vertue in a Medium, or rank the Exceſs ceſs of Goodneſs in the Predicament of Vice; But makes direct and ſwift Advances to the Zenith of Heroick Generoſity; ſcorning to halt or make lame mungrel Capitulations with himſelf, as if he were afraid of being too Good.

I wou'd ask a Peripatetick, Whether it be a Vertue or a Vice, in him that ſtomaching the Enormous Villanies of Wicked Men, boyls up with an Exceſſive Vehement Anger? Or, Whether a Man, can err in loving God too much, or in conceiving too Violent a Sorrow for his paſt Offences? Or who can be too Thankful for the Favours of Heaven? No: the farther Diſtance Vertue keeps from this Cold, Earthly Mediocrity, the brighter is its Splendor. And ſo on the other Side, the Greater is the Barbariſm, Brutality and Infernal Stamp of Vice, by how much more Remote it is from this Indifference. In a Word, Vertue and Vice, are Two Contrary Extremes: So Piety is diametrically oppoſite to Prophaneneſs: Intemperance to Sobriety: Fortitude to Cowardiſe: Incontinence to Chaſtity: Avarice to Bounty: Modeſty to Impudence: Pride to Humility: Enmity to Friendſhip, &c.

Now the Mediums between theſe Extremes, are Hppocriſy, between Vertue and Vice: Superſtition between Piety and Prophaneneſs: Baſhfulneſs between Modeſty and Impudence, and ſo of the Reſt.

Yet, after all, 'tis Neceſſary to obſerve a Medium in thoſe Things which pertain to Mortal Life, and to the Perpetuation of Mankind: Such are Meats, Drinks, Natural Paſſions of the Body and Mind, proceeding from the alternate Senſe of Pleaſure and Pain. So when we are preſs'd with Hunger and Thirſt, we ought not preſently to covet the Plentiful Tables and Superfluous Banquets of the Great; But rather ſuch a Diet as being eaſily prepar'd, may ſatisfie the Cravings of our Nature, without nauſeating and giving us a Surfeit. To this End the Divine Providence has ſcatter'd up and down the Surface of this Globe, an Infinite Variety of Roots, Herbs, Fruits, Seeds, with all Sorts of Corn and Pulſe: The Cattle afford us Plenty of Milk; the Bees are no Niggards of their Honey: the Fountains, Rivers, and Lakes, abound with ever-ſpringing freſh Supplies of ſweet refreſhing Water. We alſo have the Uſe of Salt, Oyl, Wine and other exhilarating Beverages; That being content with ſo many Benefits, and Enjoyments, we might prolong our Lives in this VVorld by Sobriety, as in a moſt pleaſant Garden or Paradiſe of Health.

But alas, inſtead of gratefully acknowledging the Bounty of Heaven, and pregnant Fertility of the Earth; Inſtead of ſitting mannerly down at the Table which God has ſpread and cover'd for us, with ſuch a Train of Feſtival Dainties; we break the Rules of Hoſpitality; and ruſhing violently on the Creatures under his Protection, we kill and ſlay at Pleaſure, turning the Banquet to a Cruel Maſſacre: being transform'd into a Temper wholly Brutal and Voracious, we glut our ſelves with Fleſh and Blood of Slaughter'd Animals. Oh! happy he that can content himſelf with Herbs and other Genuine Products of the Earth; That ſleeps as well in a Solitary Cave, upon a Bed of Moſs or Leaves, as in a Palace on a Couch of Down. He never wants, becauſe he ne'er deſires what is not in his Power. He is not burden'd with a Crowd of Servants and Flattering Retainers; nor his Repoſe diſturb'd with early and late Addreſſes of pretended Friends, Officious Sycophants, Importunate Petitioners, and other fretting Buſineſs of the World.

Cruel

Why ſhou'd I longer then demurr or heſitate; what hinders me from preſently embracing a Courſe of Life, that promiſes ſo much Happineſs? A Diſcipline that will at once free me from a Thouſand Tyrannies of Imperious Luſts and Hoſtile Paſſions? I ſhall then have no Need of Money, or the help of croſs-grain'd Servants. I ſhall not want a Multitude of Goods, the Needleſs Pageantry of ſuperfluous Ornaments, to make a dazling Figure, and draw the Eyes of People to a Reverend Admiration. I ſhall be free from Sottiſh Drowſineſs, and turbulent Dreams. My Lungs will in my Sleep reſpire the Air with Eaſe: whilſt gentle Slumbers, mix'd with happy Viſions, ſhall tranſport my Soul to Unknown Worlds. No Fevers, Gouts or Dyſente-ries ſhall invade my Health: Nor magiſterial Menaces of Empericks beſpeak my certain Death; unleſs I'll patiently ſubmit to all the needleſs Tortures they'r contriving for me, and tamely ſwallow down their new-invented Poiſons, and be rack'd to Death in Hopes of Eaſe and Life. From all which horrid Circumſtances, a ſlender, innocent Diet, not ſtain'd with Blood of any Animal, will ſet me free.

Holy Eremite, the Idea I have of this Manner of Life makes a profound and durable Impreſſion on my Soul. I am raviſh'd with the Sentiments of Plato and Pythagoras, and reſolutely bent to undergoe the Diſcipline of their Philoſophy. I'l firſt endeavour to rid my ſelf of vain Affections, Habits, and prophane Negotiations of the Earth: I'll gradually die to all Concupiſcence and Bodily Pleaſure; that ſo I may by Equal Steps revive to the Contemplation of Celeſtial Things. Then being free from every Spot and Stain contracted in the Days of my Security and Careleſneſs; my Thoughts and Works will be Acceptable to God: Who in Return, will certainly infuſe into my defecate Mind, a Secret Virtue, the Magick of this Viſible World; which purifying my Soul yet farther, will prepare it for the laſt and higheſt Gift of the Eternal Bounty to our Race whilſt in this Life: To wit, a Power of doing Supernatural Things, and of Foretelling Events to come.

Do thou but pray it may be ſo, and all the Powers of Hell can ne'er prevail againſt me.

me: For thou haſt the Ear of the Omnipotent,

Paris, 3d. of the 8th. Moon,
of the Year 1668.

LETTER. III.

To Hamet Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

IN this time of Wars with Nazarenes, when the Ottoman Fury is rowz'd and provok'd by Infidels: It will not be amiſs to expoſe the Nakedneſs of Europe, to the Supreme Divan, which is on Earth the Cloſe Committee of the Court Above.

I choſe to addreſs my Letter to thee in Compliance with thy former Orders, wherein thou ſeemedſt paſſionately deſirous to know the Preſent State of Chriſtendom. God give thee a perpetual Serenity, Scribe of the Scribes: May'ſt thou never be troubled with a Running Eye, a ſhaking Hand, or the Tooth-ach. As for me, I'm a perfect Magazine of Diſeaſes; a walking Hoſpital; The School of Æſculapius, Where the Neceſſary God has Scope to vent his Skill on all the various kinds of Maladies, which afflict our mortal Race: Gouts, Fevers, Cramps, and Horrid Dyſenteries, are as Common with me as my daily Diet.

However, amidſt all theſe Afflictions, I ſerve the Grand Signior and my Friends with a cordial Alacrity; Never grudging to Sacrifice my Eaſe and Health to the Intereſt of True Believers.

The Face of Europe is much chang'd ſince the Decline of the Roman Empire, and the Uſurpations of the Popes. That once Mighty Monarchy, is now ſhrunk into a very narrow Compaſs, being ſhut up within the Confines of Germany, which formerly was but a Province of the Ancient Empire. All Italy is revolted. So are the Suiſſes, and the United States of the Low Countries. The Hans-Towns which in Times paſt paid Homage to the Emperour, have now ſhaken off the Yoke, and are become Independent Commonwealths. Tranſylvania plays faſt and looſe with him, according as their Intereſt requires. Livonia laughs at his Menaces, as appears by the Anſwer they ſent to Charles V. when he demanded their Submiſſions, and that they wou'd return to their Native Allegiance, otherwiſe threatning them with Fire and Sword. For, all the Reply they made, was, That they knew the Emperour's Horſe wou'd be founder'd, before he cou'd reach the Frontiers of their Country.

'Tis a General Obſervation, that ſince the Reign of Rodolph I. above Two Hundred Principalities and States have fall'n off from the Empire. And thoſe that yet continue in their Obedience, I mean, the Electoral Princes, claim ſo many Priviledges; ſtand ſo much upon, upon Punctilio's and Prerogatives, that there remains now little more of the Imperial Majeſty and Power, ſave the bare Title and Outward Pomp. It is Remarkable, That within theſe Three Hundred Years, no leſs than Nine German Emperours have been Murder'd, and many more have been depos'd and baniſh'd. To ſum up all in a few Words, If we ſurvey the preſent State of the German Empire accurately, if we pry narrowly into its true Circumſtances, we ſhall find, that after all the Clatter of his Noiſy Titles, the Emperour can call nothing properly his own, but his Hereditary Eſtate in Auſtria, which is hardly equivalent to the Territories of ſome Lords whom he calls his Vaſſals.

The Germans in general are a Rude Unpoliſh'd People, greedy of Novelties; Inconſtant, Raſh, Perfidious, and very Phlegmatick; much addicted to unnatural Luſts and Inceſtuous Copulations. It is recorded of Barbara, the Empreſs, Wife to Sigiſmund, another Meſſalina, that after her Husbands Death, her Confeſſor adviſing her to reform her Manners, and live more chaſtly like the Turtle, ſhe anſwer'd, If I muſt imitate the Life of Birds, why not of a Sparrow, as well as a Turtle? Her Brother Frederick was much ſuch another: For at Ninety Years of Age, he murder'd his Wife for the Sake of a Strumpet: And being adviſed to repent and think of his Grave; He ſaid, I am now ſtudying my Epitaph, which I deſign ſhall be compriz'd in theſe Words: This

This is my Way to Hell; I know not what I ſhall find there: What I have left behind me I know. I abounded in all Delights, whereof I carry nothing with me: Neither my dainty Meats or pleaſant Wines, or whatſoever my Inſatiable Luxury exhauſted.

Drunkenneſs is ſaid to be the Original Sin of Germany, from whence it ſpread it ſelf into other Countries. They give this Character of a German, "That he is an Animal "which drinks more than he can carry: A Tun "that contains more than he can vent: And "that he underſtands more than he can expreſs. They tell a ſtory of Four Old Saxons, who at one Sitting, drank as many Healths as they could make up Years amongſt them, which amounted to Three Hundred. And 'tis Recorded of a certain German Count, That he us'd to make his Children, whilſt yet Infants, drink luſtily, to prove whether they were of his own begetting or no: For, if they grew Sick after it, he preſently concluded them to be Baſtards: But if they cou'd bear the Debauch well, he cheriſh'd 'em as his own True Off-ſpring. In a Word, thou mayſt have the ſame Idea of the Germans at this Day, as Solyman the Magnificent had had in his Time, who us'd to ſay, "I ſlight "the Germans above all other People of "Europe, becauſe they are always at diſcord "among themſelves, nor can they ever be "united any more than my Fingers and "Toes. They cannot endure Labour; and "are the Exceſſiv'ſt Gluttons and Drunkards "in the World; They always maintain a "Regiment of Whores in their Camp. Their "Generals take more Pride in their Feathers, "than in their Military Arms.

In a Word, the German is ſo over-run with all Kinds of Vice, that he wants nothing to make him a Complete Devil, but only a little Tincture of the Italian Qualities, according to the Proverb, Tudeſco Italianato, e un Diabolo Incarnato; A German Italianiz'd, is a Devil Incarnate.

'Tis certain, the French have ſo weaken'd 'em on one Hand, and the Swedes on the other; that conſidering the frequent Troubles they meet with from the Hungarians, Bohemians, and other Tributary Nations, beſides the Inteſtine Feuds of the Electoral Princes; we need not fear the blunted Talons of the Eagle, which are ſcarce ſtrong enough to ſupport her tottering State, or prop her from falling into Ruine: So far is ſhe from being able to offend her Neighbours, that ſhe never makes War her Choice, or takes the Field but by Compulſion, in her own Defence.

Illuſtrious Hamet, I pray God inſpire the Victorious Oſmans with Prophetick Courage and Reſolution; and the Final Conqueſt queſt of Germany will ſoon be the Prize of True Believers.

Paris, 5th of the 10th. Moon,
of the Year 1668.

LETTER IV.

To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna.

THE Friendſhip that has been contracted between thee and me, ever ſince it was thy Fortune to ſerve the Grand Signior in that Station, obliges us both to mutual Sincerity. Beſides, the Duty and Allegiance we owe our Sovereign, requires Plain dealing between us. We ought to ſhun Flattery, as the Bane of all Friendly Engagements, the Peſt of the Courts of Princes; and the General Contagion which infects chiefly the moſt Effeminate Part of Mankind. Such as are theſe Weſtern Nazarenes; who abound in a Thouſand little Complaiſances, and falſe Civilities; thus ſuffering their own Integrity to be corrupted; their Vertue and Faſtneſs of Spirit, to be ſurpriz'd and debauch'd; whilſt their Friends, by theſe means, not ſeldom run on Precipices, and fall into Inevitable Ruine. In a Word, they betray one another and themſelves, out of pretended Good Nature. By

By what I have ſaid, thou wilt comprehend, That I do not reprove thee out of Spight, Envy, Malice or an affected Gravity; when I tell thee, that you took wrong Meaſures, in endeavouring to ſet the Emperour's Palace on Fire: Or to poiſon him at his Dinner. I told thee once before, that theſe prepoſterous Methods, will never take Effect. Beſides, they will do the Grand Signior no Service.

Tho' thou art ſeemingly engag'd in the Cauſe of the Malecontents, remember, that thy Buſineſs is different from theirs. What ſignifies it to thee, whether the Hungarians have their Liberties, Rights and Priviledges, granted them, or no? Or what Reaſon haſt thou to eſpouſe the Intereſt of the Evangelicks, rather than that of the Catholicks, any farther than as an Umbrage to cover the greater Deſigns thou haſt in Hand, as an Agent Incognito for the Grand Signior. Let the Jeſuits purſue their own Game, and the Proteſtants theirs. Stand thou Neuter in the Main, and rather endeavour to keep both Parties in a Counterpoiſe, than to turn the Scales for either. For, the Sultan will gain by the Diviſions of the Nazarenes, let the Caſe go how it will between themſelves. Beſides, there are Catholicks engag'd in the Faction, as well as Proteſtants. 'Tis rather a Civil Quarrel, than a Religious one. The Nobles and Gentry of Hungarin and Tranſylvania, are concern'd for their Eſtates, more than for their Churches. They ſee, the Imperial Court wants Money, and

'tis

'tis a Crime for an Hungarian to be Rich. Thoſe that have the Supreme Power, in theſe Caſes, will find Reaſon enough to condemn a Wealthy Lord, whether he be guilty or not.

'Tis this puts them upon Caballing and entring into Confederacies, that ſo they may conſult the Means of their own Safety, and be in a Poſture to defend themſelves.

I perceive the Count de Serini has made another Addreſs, for the Government of Caroſtadt, and been repuls'd: Joſeph, Earl of Haberſtein, and Knight of Malta, being appointed to ſucceed the Count d' Averſperg in that Honour. Which is an evident Sign, That the Emperour has no good Opinion of Serini, notwithſtanding all his former good Services. And this is enough to alienate a a Man of his great Courage and Merits.

Count Frangipani alſo has his particular Diſcontents: So has Tatembach, with many other Potent Lords of Hungary and Croatia. Indeed, the whole Body of thoſe Nations are diſoblig'd, and almoſt wearied out with the continual Oppreſſions of the Germans.

Nathan, thou wilt find it no hard Matter, to bring 'em to a Neceſſity of putting themſelves under the Grand Signior's Protection. 'Tis thy part to cheriſh their Diſcontents. As for the Imperial Court, thou mayeſt perceive, they are reſolv'd to mortify theſe People, and to take from them all Opportunities and the very Capacity of Rebelling, by not ſuffering the Natives of Hungary and and Croatia, to poſſeſs any Office of Command.

Every Party purſues its own Intereſt, and ſomuch we ours. Self.-preſervation is the Root of all Mutual Society and Juſtice. Take Care of thy ſelf, thy Friends, and the Cauſe thou art engag'd in, and then thou need'ſt not fear any Qualms of Conſcience. In fine, I counſel thee to put in Practice the Advice of one of thy own Rabbi's Jeſus Ben Syrach; Be not over juſt.

Paris, 17th, of the 11th. Moon, of the Year 1668.

LETTER

LETTER V.

To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Grand Signior's Cuſtoms at Conſtantinople.

PRepare thy ſelf for ſurprizing News, and receive it with a Moderation becoming a Man. Oucoumiche our Mother is dead. One and the ſame Night lodg'd her in the Apartments of Hymen, and the Chambers of death. Before the Days of the Nuptial Solemnities were over, the Mournful Rights of her Funeral Commenc'd: She made but one Remove from her Marriage-Bed, to the Grave.

If thou wondereſt, that a Woman of her Age, being Seventy Five Years Old, and having already had Two Husbands, ſhould marry a Third; Know, that it was not Dotage, but Diſcretion which prompted her to take this Courſe. The Integrity, Wiſdom, and prudent Conduct of Eliachim the Jew, had charm'd her Affections long ago, and improv'd her Acquaintance with him, into a ſtrict and vertuous Friendſhip. As a Mother, ſhe ow'd him Reſpect and Love, for his conſtant Fidelity to me: And on her own Account, ſhe cou'd not but entertain Sentiments of Eſteem and Gratitude for a Man, who had been ſo nicely careful to preſerve her

Perſon

Perſon and Honour from Injury and Violence, ever ſince ſhe came to Paris. For, he alone, among the many Myriads of People inhabiting this City, was the only Confident, both of her Secrets and mine. In a Word, theſe Regards, with ſome others of Piety, Zeal, and Good Nature, made her willing to become his Wife, who in all Things had perform'd the Part of a Friend, and a Perſon of Honour.

Beſides all this, it was really her Intereſt, thus to diſpoſe of her later Days in a Foreign Country, where ſhe knew no body but Eliachim and me. As for me, ſhe conſider'd that my Life was not only ſubject to the ſame Caſualties with other Mortals, and that I might be ſnatch'd away by a Thouſand Deaths; but that my Station here was very Precarious, and I might be ſuddenly recall'd by my Superiours to Conſtantinople, or at leaſt be remov'd to ſome other Poſt, whither ſhe cou'd not accompany me, being Incapable of bearing, at theſe Years, the Hardſhips and Fatigues of Travel: That after my Departure, ſhe ſhou'd be neglected, contemn'd, and abandon'd by all, but thoſe who wou'd deſire her Death, for the Sake of her Money and Jewels.

In theſe Circumſtances, to remain a Widow, profeſſing the Faith of Mahomet, and believing the Alcoran, in a Region and City ſwarming with Infidels; wou'd have been but an uncomfortable as well as a dangerous Condition. Wherefore having had Experience

ence of Eliachim's Vertue, and incorrupt Manners, he alſo making Addreſſes of Love to her, and giving her Encouragement to hope, that he wou'd become a Muſſulman; ſhe yielded at laſt to the Thoughts of taking him for her Husband, and they were married on the 7th. of this Moon, in a private Synagogue of the Jews: For, they are not allow'd a Publick One in this City, as they are in many other Cities of Europe.

My Mother appear'd neither too dejectedly ſad, nor profuſely merry, during the Nuptial Feaſt. But comporting her ſelf with a chearful Reſervedneſs, ſeem'd to have her Thoughts rather fix'd on ſomething elſe, than the vain Ceremonies, Noiſe, and Mirth of the Company. It looks as if her Prophetick Soul was ſenſible of its approaching Releaſe: For to be Brief, ſhe was found Dead in her Bed next Morning.

Brother, ſhe is now in her Sepulchre, at Reſt from all the Toils of Humane Life. Let not this News affect thee with fruitleſs Melancholy; ſince Death is the Common Fate of all Mortals. Rather advance the Bliſs of our deceas'd Parent, with devout Oraiſons for her Soul; Remembring, that e'er long we ſhall be in the ſame Condition. For tho' Man, like a Moth, be paſſionately enamour'd with the Light of this World; tho, he flutter and dance about it for a while, basking in the Splendor and Warmth of his good Fortune; yet at length he is conſum'd by the very Flame, which gave him Nouriſhment riſhment, and falls a Victim to his own Pleaſure.

Paris, 9th. of the 1ſt. Moon, of the Year 1669.

LETTER VI.

To Hamet Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

I Sent thee a Letter ſome Days agoe, wherein I expos'd the General Nakedneſs, Imbecillity, and languiſhing State of the German Empire in this Age. My Diſpatch abounded with Characters of their Vices: It deſcrib'd exactly the preſent Eclipſe of Ancient Imperial Majeſty, Power and Strength, the Revolt of many Principalities and States, the Feuds and Diſcord of thoſe that yet remain in Obedience, and pay a ſeeming Homage to Cæſar; with many other Things, which being well conſider'd, may for the Future prevent, or at leaſt, diminiſh that Conſternation and Panick Terror, which uſes to ſeize the Hearts of Muſſulmans, when we are in War with the Emperour.

Now as a farther Incentive and Encouragement to take up Arms againſt the Infidels; as a Spur to certain Victory and Conqueſt, I will unlock the Treaſures of

ence of Eliachim's Vertue, and incorrupt Manners, he alſo making Addreſſes of Love to her, and giving her Encouragement to hope, that he wou'd become a Muſſulman; ſhe yielded at laſt to the Thoughts of taking him for her Husband, and they were married on the 7th. of this Moon, in a private Synagogue of the Jews: For, they are not allow'd a Publick One in this City, as they are in many other Cities of Europe.

My Mother appear'd neither too dejectedly ſad, nor profuſely merry, during the Nuptial Feaſt. But comporting her ſelf with a chearful Reſervedneſs, ſeem'd to have her Thoughts rather fix'd on ſomething elſe, than the vain Ceremonies, Noiſe, and Mirth of the Company. It looks as if her Prophetick Soul was ſenſible of its approaching Releaſe: For to be Brief, ſhe was found Dead in her Bed next Morning.

Brother, ſhe is now in her Sepulchre, at Reſt from all the Toils of Humane Life. Let not this News affect thee with fruitleſs Melancholy; ſince Death is the Common Fate of all Mortals. Rather advance the Bliſs of our deceas'd Parent, with devout Oraiſons for her Soul; Remembring, that e'er long we ſhall be in the ſame Condition. For tho' Man, like a Moth, be paſſionately enamour'd with the Light of this World; tho, he flutter and dance about it for a while, basking in the Splendor and Warmth of his good Fortune; yet at length he is conſum'd by the very Flame, which gave him Nouriſhment nishment, and falls a Victim to his own Pleasure.

Paris, 9th. of the 1st. Moon, of the Year 1669.

LETTER VI.

To Hamet Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

I Sent thee a Letter some Days agoe, wherein I expos'd the General Nakedness, Imbecillity, and languishing State of the German Empire in this Age. My Dispatch abounded with Characters of their Vices: It describ'd exactly the present Eclipse of Ancient Imperial Majesty, Power and Strength, the Revolt of many Principalities and States, the Feuds and Discord of those that yet remain in Obedience, and pay a seeming Homage to Cæsar; with many other Things, which being well consider'd, may for the Future prevent, or at least, diminish that Consternation and Panick Terror, which uses to seize the Hearts of Mussulmans, when we are in War with the Emperour.

Now as a farther Incentive and Encouragement to take up Arms against the Infidels; as a Spur to certain Victory and Conquest, I will unlock the Treasures of of the Country, without taking Notice of the Inhabitants. And, ſince nothing more excites the Reſolution and Valour of Military Men, than the Hopes of Plunder, and paſſing away a Campaign in Plenty of all neceſſary Comforts: I will give thee a true Account of the Natural Dowry of theſe Regions, the Riches of the Soil, and the Wealth, which Commerce with other Nations, together with the Spoils of former Wars, the Induſtry of the People, and the Benevolence of Fortune have added to their Store.

Germany abounds in Generous Wines, and thoſe more laſting than any other in Europe. The Rheniſh Wines will keep above Fifty Years. The Wines of the Necker are wholeſome, and clear as Water from the Rock: Thoſe of Franconia are ſtrong and operative; The Auſtrian Grape is ſweet and luſcious. Several Roman Emperours have peferr'd the Fruits of the German Vintage, to thoſe of Italy and Greece. And ſuch is the ſuperabundant Plenty of Vineyards, that at a Place call'd Stutgard, there is a Proverb currant, That they have more Wine than Water. If our Janizaries knew this, they wou'd be for an Expedition into Germany. Nay they temper their Mortar with Wine in ſome Places, and ſlack their Lime with it.

They have ſtrong Beverages alſo made of Barley, VVheat, and other Grain, which they tranſport from Brunſwick, Breſlaw, Delph, Dantzick, Lubeck, and other Places, to moſt Countries in the North and Weſt of Europe.

Europe. They likewiſe make a Sort of Wine of Honey, as ſtrong and Sweet as the Wine of Candy.

There is abundance of Frankincenſe and Myrrh in Moravia, of Saffron in Auſtria, of Licorice in Franconia, of Madder for Dyers in Sileſia, of Amber in Thuringia.

There are Innumerable Orchards full of all delectable Fruits, the Fields ſtand thick with Corn, the Paſtures are throng'd with Cattel, and they have a Breed of the ſtouteſt Horſes in the VVorld. They have Timber enough to ſerve all the Nations in the World for Shipping. But that which is moſt inviting is the Variety of Mines of Gold, Silver, Copper, Lead, Tin and Iron. Before America was diſcover'd, Germany was the Peru and Potoſi of all Europe. They have alſo Plenty of Marble as bright as Cryſtal.

Beſides their Native and Domeſtick Riches, they have mightily improv'd their Stock, by Foreign Commerce; exchanging their Superfluities for things more precious and of greater Value: VVhich in a conſtant Courſe of Bartering, brings into the German Coffers many Hundred Millions of Crowns in a Year. In a Word, their Cities are ſo Rich, that when they have been pillag'd by an Enemy, the booty of one City, has been valu'd at Two Millions of Crowns, in ready Money, beſides Plate and Jewels. The Common Souldiers have made Hilts for their Swords and Daggers of Gold and Silver; nay, ſome would have their very Helmets of the ſame Metals.

Publick

Publick Gaming Tables have been ſet up in the Streets, and it has been Common for a private Trooper to win or loſe Five or Ten Thouſand Crowns at a Time. This would be rare Sport for our Janizaries and Spahi's.

I tell thee, Serene Miniſter, conſidering the Immenſe Wealth of Germany, and the Degeneracy of its Inhabitants; Providence ſeems to invite our Arms to make a Conqueſt of thoſe Fertile Regions, and take from the Uncircumcis'd the Goods which ſurfeit them. They abuſe the Gifts of Nature, and Fortune, by employing them to the Ends of Vice; whereas the True Believers were they once poſſeſs'd of them, wou'd turn them to Vertuous Purpoſes, the Publick Advantage, the Encreaſe of the Empire, Glory of God, and Propagation of the Faith Undefiled.

Paris, 13th. of the 4th. Moon,
of the Year 1669.

LETTER

LETTER VII.

To Hebatolla Mir Argun, Superiour of the Convent of Derviches at Cogni in Natolia.

'TWas with a Specifick Kind of Joy, not eaſie to be defin'd, that I receiv'd thy Venerable Diſpatch. I perus'd the Welcome Orders therein contain'd with a Delight not in the leaſt Inferiour to his, who being abandon'd to Diſtreſs and miſerable Poverty, has, by good Luck, diſcover'd a hidden Wealthy Treaſure: For ſo my Spirit is raviſh'd, to find in this degenerate Age, a Rich Reſerve of Piety and Devotion to the Ancient Prophets of God.

I'm glad to hear the Character of John the Baptiſt, which I ſent thee formerly, was ſo well accepted by thee, and all the Religions under thy Charge, That thou vouchſafeſt only to accuſe the ſhortneſs of the Relation, deſiring a more particular account of that Prophet's Manner of living, eſpecially of his Abſtinences, and what may be the moſt proper Interpretation of the Grecian Word ἀκρίδας, mention'd in the Hiſtory of his Life?

Praiſe be to God, who has inſpir'd thee with this Critical Regard to one of his moſt

Holy Meſſengers. I revere thy Learned Soul, and that accompliſh'd Intellect, which is ever buſie, prying into VVeighty and Important Matters. I honour thy Impartial Mind, which ſcruples not to pay th' Attach that due to a Saint, tho' of the Chriſtian Calender. If we ſhould reject all that the Followers of Jeſus do, we ſhould neither Fast, Pray, give Alms, or perform any other Good VVorks. Therefore in this, thou art an Exemplary Pattern to the Rigid, Superſtitious Sort of Muſſulman Phanaticks, who bear an endleſs Grudge againſt all thoſe that are not of their Narrow Faith, and Dark Opinion.

Glory be to God, with whom the WORD was preſent from the Dawning of Eternal Light, before the Morning of his Works had peep'd o'er the Mountains of the Ancient Chaos, or penetrated the Dark Abyſs, and Miſty Vale of Nothing, and painted the Tops of the Creation, the Higheſt Ranks of Beings, with Splendors of the Early Day. Before the Sun had drank th' Immortal Halo in, and ſpong'd up all the Viſible Beams to ſqueeze them out again upon the Moon, the Stars, and on this Lower World. The WORD remains for Ever, and at a determin'd Hour became Incarnate, in the Perſon of Jeſus the Son of Mary, as the Holy Alcoran informs us.

In thoſe Days John the Baptiſt went into the VVilderneſs, and preach'd Repentance to the Jews foretelling the near Approach of the the Messias. The Sacred Hero made a Cave his Residence; and at first, to wean his Body from all Softness, he wore a Vest or Shirt of Camel's Hair, which was girt about him with a Belt made of that Painful and Religious Creatures Skin, to put him in Mind, that he was born for Holy Labours, Toils, and Mortifications. He had no Table spread with far-fetch'd costly Dainties; no Dishes cramm'd with bloody and large Inventories of Birds, Four-footed Beasts, and Fish. His Diet was Simple, Cheap, and Innocent; ease to be got in every Wood or Field, without the Detriment of his Fellow-Animals. For he either contented himself with a Repast on Honey, which he found in Hollow Trees; or on a Kind of Manna, a sweet Dew falling on their Leaves, and there condens'd by Heavenly Influence: Or else it was a kind of luscious Moisture, which he suck'd from certain Plants, perhaps not much unlike our Sugar-Canes: For thus Interpreters do differ about the Words τὸ μέλι ἄγριον. Whatever it was, we may conclude it to be some slender, light and easie Nourishment, And when this Diet fail'd him, or his Stomach requir'd a little more Variety, he banqueted on what the Græcians call ἀκρίδες Some will have these to be a Kind of Locusts or Gras-hoppers, a Meat indulg'd the Jews by Moses in the Law. The Syrians also counted them a Dainty; so did the Ancient Parthinians, as Aristotle and Pliny tell us. And my Country-men, the Arabians, eat of them to this day. Others are of Opinion, that these ἀκρίδες were a sort of little Shell-Fish, such as Crabs, Crawfish, or Shrimps, which Nature has generally lodg'd in Holes along the banks of Rivers. A pleasant, temperate Sort of Diet, commended for their Virtues in expelling Poyson, and being Remedies for the Strangury, and Antidotes to cure the Biting of Mad Dogs.

The Divine Prophet therefore oft frequenting the Waters of the River Jordan, wherein he us'd to wash his Converts and Disciples; these Men suppose, he took Occasion to allay his Hunger with these little Shell-fish, which he might easily take in mighty Numbers from their watry Nests. And they endeavour to strengthen this Opinion, by asserting, That the Food which the Waters afford us, is much more Pure and Holy than what the Earth brings forth; in regard the Earth lies under the Malediction of God, ever since Noah's Flood, whereas the Waters never were Curs'd. Hence, say they, it is very probable, That the consecrated Hero, would not defile his Spotless Life with curs'd Banquets from the Earth, but rather chose to appease his Hunger with the harmless, bless'd, and wholsome Product of the Waters.

If thou wilt have my Opinion after all; I'm apt to think these ἀκρίδες were nothing else but the tender Tops of Plants, such as we call Asparagus, or perhaps they were wild Apples of the Wood; and then we may suppose ſuppoſe there's ſome Miſtake in the Greek Copy, Ἀκρίδες for ἄκρυδες. Or, it may be the Holy Prophet, in the proper Seaſon of the Year, did uſe to crop and eat the Ears of Barly, and then the Word ſhou'd be ἀκρυδες For, what cou'd be more ſweet and pleaſant to an Abſtemious Man, than to ſuſtain his Life with Fruits, Grain, Herbs, or Roots? Nor did the Malediction reach the Vegetables, but only the Animal Generarions, from which a perfect Man abſtains.

Certainly, thoſe, who out of an Averſion for Purity, Prayer, and Faſting, turn themſelves from Humane Bodies to Swine; and from Religious Abſtinence to Salvage Gurmundizing on Fleſh, ſeem to derive their Pedigree from a Race of Devils: Eſpecially ſuch as after the manner of Spiders, gathering Poiſon from the Flowers of Piety, Blaſpheme this Sacred Virtue of Abſtinence, and call it by the Infamous Name of Superſtition.

For, if the Veneration we pay to God conſiſt in the Knowledge, Love and Fear of his Divine Majeſty, with Adoration and Praiſe of his Eternal Attributes; it follws. That we ought to worſhip him with the moſt Fervent Application of our Spirits. But this Religious Ardour cannot ſubſiſt in any Soul, whoſe Body is not mortified; nor can the Body be mortified without Auſterity, which always is accompany'd with Rigorous Faſting and Abſtinence from Fleſh. Wherefore if we aſcend to God, by the very ſame Degrees as we fall from him, it follows, That Abſtinence is the Firſt Step to Immortality and Supreme Happineſs.

I do not mean by Abſtinence, that Natural Averſion which ſome Men have for Fleſh, who never durſt to taſte of any in their Lives, compell'd to this by ſome Occult Antipathy in their Stomachs. For ſuch a Neceſſity cannot make a Vertue, it being common to Men and Brutes; there being many Animals, who faſt from all Provender at certain Seaſons of the Year, and others that taſte not ſome Kinds of Food, during their Lives. So there are ſome Men, to whom Wine, Fleſh, Cheeſe, Apples, Herbs and other Things, are an Abomination from their Cradles. There have been others, who, by a Præternatural Neceſſity, have liv'd ſome Days, Weeks, Months and Years without either Meat or Drink. So Plato records, That Herus Pamplylius lay Ten whole Days among the Dead Carcaſes of Soldiers ſlain in Battel; and, when he was taken up to be laid on the Funeral Pile, they perceiv'd him to be alive. Laertius tells us, That Pythagoras faſted Forty Days and Forty Nights from Meat and Drink. From whom Apollonius Thyaneus learn'd the Art of keeping almoſt a perpetual Faſt. And theſe Modern Times afford us the Example of a Spaniard, whom they call Alcantaro, who every Month us'd to Faſt for Seven or Eight Days together. So a famous German Maid was diligently obſerv'd and watch'd, whilſt ſhe paſs'd away full

full Seven Years Time without Meat, Drink, Sleep or Excrements. France alſo boaſts another Virgin, who faſted above Three Years together.

Such Abſtinencies as theſe, are not to be put to the Account of Vertue, in regard they were not the Effects of Humane Choice, but the Decrees of Fate. So wou'd our Abſtinence be deprav'd, if we ſhou'd only practiſe it, as the old Gentiles did, who forbore to kill or eat ſome certain Beaſts, becauſe they held them conſecrated to their Gods. As the Dog to Diana; the Tyger to Bacchus; the Horſe to Neptune; the Woolf to Mars; the Eagle to Jupiter; the Peacock to Juno; the Swan to Apollo; the Dove to Venus; the Owl to Minerva. Nor need we abſtain on the Account of the Soul's Tranſmigration; for, ſo we ought to forbear the Vegetable Products of the Earth, as well as Animals, ſince the Soul is Indifferent to all Bodies, in its ſeparate State.

But our Reaſon in this Point, ought to take its Riſe from the Fundamental Law of Nature, the Original Juſtice of the World, which teaches us, Not to do that to another, which we wou'd not have another do to us. Now, ſince 'tis evident, That no Man wou'd willingly become the Food of Beaſts; therefore, by the ſame Rule, he ought not to prey on them. Next to this Foundation of our Abſtinence, we ought to build our Aims a the Perfection of our Nature, which cannot be acquir'd but by Degrees: We muſt ent deavour to abate the Aliment of our Concupiſcences, by exhaling the ſuperfluous and groſſer Vapours of our Blood in Sacred Faſts and Oraiſons. Then we ſhou'd refreſh our fainting Bodies, with Food affording little Nouriſhment and Pleaſure. That ſo our vain Affections, Appetites and Luſts may gradually die: Whilſt the pure Mind revives, and being free from the groſs Vapours ariſing from too much, and too fatning Meats and Drinks, the Films which darken'd her Sight, fall off; and ſhe can better now diſcern the Naked Forms of Things, by her own ſimple Inſtitution, than before ſhe cou'd through all the borrow'd Spectacles and other Opticks of Book-Philoſophy. Alſo ſhe will more eaſily raiſe her ſelf to the Contemplation and Science of Divine Eternal Things. He therefore that in Earneſt will apply himſelf to the Study of accompliſh'd Sanctity, muſt firſt by Faſting exhauſt the Marrow from his Bones, the Fatneſs from his Fleſh, the Wild and Rampant Spirits from his Nerves, and then he muſt purge the Words and Actions of his Life from Vice. When this is done, the Soul becoming a pure Tabula Raſa, is fit for the Impreſſions of Celeſtial Vertue.

Thoſe who labour under acute Diſeaſes, run great Hazard of their Lives, according to Hipocrates, unleſs their Diet be accommodated with proportionate Regard to the Quality and Time of the Critical Fits or Paroxiſms. But, thoſe who are entangled with with Vice, do labour under far more dangerous Diſtempers, than ſuch as afflict the Body. Wherefore the Prophet, our Holy Law-giver, like a Wiſe Phyſician, appointed certain Seaſons of the Year, for Sacred Abſtinences, Faſtings, Pilgrimages, Vigils, and other Holy Exerciſes, eſpecially the Mighty Faſt and Vigil of Ramazen, wherein, tho' it be not forbid to eat of Fleſh after the Stars appear at Night, yet none but looſe and indevout Believers, take that Liberty; whereas the better Sort content themſelves with an Aſcetick Diet. The Hebrews faſted with Unleaven'd Bread, and a little Salad; the Chriſtians alſo taſte no Fleſh, on their prohibited Days: And ſhall the Muſſulmans be greater Libertines than theſe Infidels?

O Hebatolla! how radiant is the Luſtre of a Lamp, when ſhining through a clean, and fine, defæcate Chryſtal? So does the Soul diſplay the Rays of her Immortal Vertue round about, when ſhe inhabits in a well purifi'd, chaſt, and almoſt pervious Body. Wherefore, it is abſolutely neceſſary for him to attenuate his Body with perpetual Temperance and Abſtinence, who conſecrates himſelf to Vertue and Devotion. He will not be enſnar'd or catch'd by any Baits of Luxury or Voluptuouſneſs; nor yet affrighted from his conſtant, ſober Courſe of Life, by any Pain, or thwarting Accident. No Frowns or Menaces ſhall divert him from his Noble Purpoſe: But he will ſo nouriſh his Body all his Life, that it ſhall never be Surfeited, or over-fill'd with Meats. And ſuch is the Magick of this Sacred Vertue, that it can never be hurt, much leſs ſubverted by all the Machinations of Evil Dæmons; or the Malicious Attempts of Men. But it proceeds from Strength to Strength, and fights the Combat valiantly, till having overcome at laſt, it Triumphs for ever, and receives the Palm, the Crown and Chaplet of Divine Reward in Paradiſe, Holy Preſident, pray that I may practice what I ſo admire, and not be ſelf-condemn'd for living contrary to my Knowledge. For God neither loves a double Tongue or Heart, neither delights he in Feet or Hands that are ſwift and nimble to do Miſchief.

Paris, 13th. of the 4th. Moon,
of the Year 1669.

LETTER

LETTER VIII.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

NOw the Chriſtians are in a general Conſternation for Candy: The Pope has ſent Letters to all the Princes that are in his Communion; inviting and preſſing them to ſuccour that Diſtreſs'd Iſland. Levies are making every where; and the King of France, who ſeeks all Occaſions of Glory, appears the moſt forward of any to aſſiſt the Republick in this Fatal Juncture. The Duke of Beauford and the Chevalier de Vendoſm, are appointed to lead the Forces deſign'd for that Service. They are gone to Toulon, in Order to embarque. The Pope has ſent the Duke of Beauford a Breve, declaring him General of the Troops Eccleſiaſtick that are to ſerve in Candy; and for his greater Encouragement, he has ſent him the Pontifical Standard.

In the mean while, there is a Triple League concluded between the Emperour, the King of Spain, the King of England, the King of Swedeland, and the States of Holland.

There is great Joy in Portugal for the Birth of the Infanta, who is call'd Elizabetha-Maria-Louiſa. She was Born the 6th. of of the 1st. Moon; and on the 18th the Empress of Germany was also deliver'd of a Daughter. These Western Queens are very pregnant. Not a Year passes without the Birth, or Baptism, of some Royal Infant.

This is all the News at present; but to oblige thee I will say something of Italy, which is esteem'd the Garden of Europe. Nay, Constantine Paleologus, Emperor of Greece, was wont to say, Unless I had been assur'd by very Learned and Holy Men, that Paradise was seated in Asia, I shou'd have sworn that Italy had been the Place.

It is most certain Italy is a delectable Country, abounding in Riches and Pleasures. The Eye is not satisfi'd with seeing the infinite Variety of Beauties, which grace this happy Region. Such is the lovely Intermixture of Hills and Valleys, Groves and Plains, Palaces and Gardens, that a Traveller is ravish'd as he passes on the Road. But this is not all: She is as rich as fair. No Country in the World can match Italy for the Plenty and Variety of excellent Wines; only they are of no long Continuance. Above all the rest, Travellers commend that Sort which they call Lachryme Christi, or, the Tears of Christ, for its delicious Taste. Which when a Dutch-man once tasted, he burst forth into this Exclamation; O Christ! why didst thou not weep in my Country? At Papia, there are a Kind of Aromatick Grapes, which leave a fragrant Odour in the Mouth of him that eats them.

It

It is recorded of a certain Roman Lord, That when he was in Priſon half dead with Melancholy, he drank a Glaſs or two of this generous Wine, which ſo reviv'd his Spirits, that inſtead of Deſpairing, as he was ready to do before, he wrote a Treatiſe entituled [de Conſolatione.]

Beſides, Italy abounds in Cattle, Sheep, Fowls, Mines, Rock of Alabaſter, Marble, Porphyry, Coral, Ophits, Agats, Chalcedonies, Azures, and innumerable other precious Stones. Hence it comes, that in this Country are ſeen the moſt Glorious and Magnificent Temples of the World.

But, this ſo fair and wealthy a Spot of Ground is Inhabited by a very wicked Sort of People. They are quite degenerated from the Vertues of their Anceſtors. They are a Baſe, Effeminate, Sly, Sodomitical Raſe of Men, Covetous, Revengeful, and Inexorable. I have heard a Story of Two Italian Brothers that were walking one Night in the Fields, it being a very ſerene Sky; when one of them looking ſteadfaſtly on the Heavens, wiſh'd, he had as many Oxen as there were Stars. The other wiſh'd, he had a Field as large as the Firmament. What wou'd you do with it? Said the Firſt. Let your Oxen graze there, reply'd he. But, as they proceeded in this Kind of fooliſh, looſe Diſcourſe, they kindled each others Anger; and at length, falling from VVords to Blows, kill'd one another on the Spot. Behold, the Conſequence of their Covetous Deſires. They are extremely addicted to Revenge, and are as dextrous at poyſoning as the Indian Princes. A certain French Author gives us a very Compendious Account of the Benefits a Stranger gets by travelling into Italy, in theſe words. We go into Italy, ſays he, with Incredible Charges, only to purchaſe the mere Shadow of Civility, and we bring back from thence the whole Syſtem of Vices. The Milaneſe teach us how to Cheat. From the Venetians we learn Hypocriſie. Rome tranſforms us into perfect Atheiſts and Libertines. Naples turns us to Satyres, Florence inſtructs us in the Artificial Methods of Poyſoning. There is not one City, which does not tincture us with ſome Specifick Ill Qualities.

are

Sage Hamet, In all my Letters to thee, I ſtudiouſly inſert ſome Remarks on theſe Weſtern Nations, that ſo I may gratifie thy Wiſhes. Pardon the want of Order, For, I write Things as they preſent themſelves to my Memory. Accept all in good Part from Mahmut, who obeys thy Commands chearfully, and honours thee without Flattery.

Paris the 12th. of the 5th Moon,
of the Year 1669.

LET-

LETTER IX.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

THou may'ſt Regiſter in the Archives of the Sacred Empire; That Dom John of Auſtria, is made perpetual Governour of the Low-Countries, under the Spaniſh King's Obedience. He is alſo Viceroy, and Vicar-General of Arragon, Catalonia, and Valencia. But it is fit for thee to know alſo, That this is ſo far from being eſteem'd by that Prince a Happineſs, that he counts it his Greateſt Misfortune, in Regard 'tis no better than an Honourable and Irrevocable Baniſhment from the Court of Spain; where his Royal Blood and Merits, are out-maſter'd by the Genius of a certain Prieſt, whom they call Father Nitard. This Man is very Ambitious, always aiming at High Matters, yet admir'd by no body for his Learning, Beauty, or any other good Qualities. Only the Queen of Spain, is pleas'd to make him her Favourite.

He cou'd never buckle to the Humour of Dom John; and hence aroſe a ſecret Envy between 'em; which afterwards burſt forth into open Animoſities, Feuds and Quarrels. So that at laſt, the Favourite got the Day, and Dom John was forc'd to quit the Field.

It is impoſſible to trace the Sovereigns of the Earth in the Foot-ſteps of their Royal Conduct: Or elſe, one wou'd of Courſe conclude, conclude, That tho' ſo great a Prince as this, of the ſame Lineage as the Queen her ſelf, ſhou'd have eaſily eclips'd the borrow'd Luſtre of an Upſtart Minion. But Monarchs have Specifick Reaſons to themſelves, which others cannot penetrate.

Perhaps this cunning Prieſt uſed a Trick like that of a Souldier in the Army of Alexander the Great: VVho being of an Ambitious Spirit, and coveting to make ſome greater Figure than that of a Private Sentinel, conſider'd Alexander's Humour, and how to hit it. He knew, that his Heroick Maſter took delight in any Thing was bold and brave. But how to come into his Preſence, he was Ignorant. At length, he pitch't upon this Method. One Day, as Alexander was debauching with his beloved Parmenio, Hæpheſtion, Lyſimachus, and other Officers. This Fellow (whoſe Name was Clytus) put himſelf into a Mimick Dreſs of War, counterfeiting himſelf Mad, and dancing the Pyrrhick Meaſures, with his brandiſh'd Sword, kill'd Five new-liſted Soldiers lately come from Colchis. The Guards ſoon ſeiz'd upon him; and it being a Tragical Novelty, the News was carried to the King; who caus'd the Fellow to be brought before him. And examining him on the Point, Clytus anſwer'd, "Great King, "thoſe Five Men whom I have kill'd, had "conſpir'd to take away thy Life this Day, "being hir'd thereto by the King of Colchis, "and therefore ſent into thy Army. Their

"Tent

"Tent being next to mine, I had an Acci"dental Opportunity laſt Night, of over"hearing their Diſcourſe, when they were "plotting together the Time, the Place,
"and Manner of thy Death. I kept a "Watch upon them, and obſerv'd their "Motions from that Moment. For, tho'
"I knew the Hour appointed by them for
"this Execrable Regicide, yet I was ſolli-"citous, leſt ſome ill Fate ſhou'd prompt
"the Ruffians to antedate their own Re-
"ſolves, and haſten a Murder, whoſe De"lay might elſe diſcover their Deſigns, or "at leaſt prevent 'em. Therefore I took
"this mad Diſguiſe, to execute the Sober-
"eſt and moſt Important Purpoſe that e're
"I fram'd in all my Days; which was at "once to ſave the Life of the World's Con- "queror, and get my ſelf Immortal Honour
"by the Happy Deed.

After profound Deliberation of the Drunken Cabinet-Council, Alexander approv'd the Fact, and order'd Publick Honours to be done to his Deliverer. According to the Macedonian Cuſtom, he veſted him with Purple Robes, and gave him a Chain of Gold, admitting him to the latter End o'th Banquet, and afterwards eſteeming him above his moſt Familiar Friends. Till ſuch another Debauch as this, but more Unfortunate to Clytus, at once depriv'd him of the King's Favour and his own Life: So Inconſtant is the State of Humane Greatneſs.

Sage

Sage Hamet, the Favour of Princes is like a Reed of Egypt, which either tranſpierces him that leans upon it; or flinches from the Burthen, and ſo gives him a Fall, which moſt Times plunges him o'er Head and Ears, in the choaking Mire of Popular Hatred.

God grant thou may'ſt never be cruſh'd to Death from Above, by the Weight of the Sultan's Diſpleaſure, or undermin'd from Beneath, and ſwallow'd up in an Earthquake rais'd by the Multitude.

Paris, 18th. of the 7th. Moon,
of the Year 1669.

LETTER X.

To Hebatolla Mir Argun, Superior of the Convent of Derviches at Cogni in Natolia.

THou wilt not be diſpleas'd to hear of a Mighty King, that laying aſide his Diadem and Scepter, and abandoning the Height of Humane Glory, has conſecrated himſelf to a Private Religious Life, vowing Perpetual Poverty, Chaſtity, and Obedience.

Yet this is true of John Caſimir, late King of Poland, who from a Sovereign Monarch is become an Humble Subject, and having forſaken the Pleaſures and Magnificences of his his Royal Palace, voluntarily confines himſelf to the Narrow Circumſtances and Auſterities of a Monaſtick Life.

He choſe France for the Place of his Retreat from his own Kingdom; and the Abby of St. Germains near Paris, as his Sanctuary from all Worldly Affairs. He was magnificently receiv'd and entertain'd in every City through which he paſs'd. And on the 4th. of the 11th. Moon, he made his firſt Entry into the Moſque or Church of the Convent, where he made his vows, in Quality of Abbot, or Superior of that Houſe: For which they ſolemnly ſung their Te Deum, or a Song of Praiſe to God. And the Court of France ſeems to be proud of the Honour this Prince has done it, in retiring hither, and making it the Theatre of ſuch Pious Reſolves, the laſt Stage of his Pilgrimage on Earth, where he will bid Adieu to the vain Pageantries of Honour, Wealth and Empire; and having ſhaken of the Glittering Burden of a Crown, with all the other Clogs of elevated Mortality, he will the eaſier climb to Paradiſe.

Abſtracting from the Particular Superſtitions of the Nazarenes, I cannot but commend the Sage Undertaking of King Caſimir; who, in this, ſeems to outgoe the noiſie oſtentous Action of Adrian, one of the Roman Emperors: For he only once celebrated in outward Pomp his own Funerals, by way of Type or Figure; making a ſplendid Cavalcade, before which his Coffin was carried carried in a kind of Mock-Triumph: As if after all his other Victories, at laſt he had lead Death himſelf Captive: Whereas this hinder'd not, but that he return'd again to the Vanities which in this Publick Emblem he ſeem'd to deſpiſe; And from a Dramatick Conqueror, he became a real Slave. His perſonated Mortification in the Streets, ended in his ordinary Paſſions at Home. And he had a ſtronger Inclination to the Bed of Voluptuouſneſs at Night, than he ſeem'd to have by Day to his Grave.

But this Heroick King of the Poles, is really gone into his Sepulchre. (For no better is a Monaſtery in my Opinion.) He has tranſlated the Seat and Throne of his Kingdom, to a Tomb; not for Three or Four Hours, to make a ſhew, but there really to lead a dying Life, or living Death; and reign in Funeral Majeſty all the Reſt of his Days. For, to be thus Recluſe from the World, is to be buried alive.

O Venerable and Benign Dervich, pardon the Favourable Opinion I have of this Chriſtian Monarch, I do not patronize his Errors in applauding his Vertue. Beſides, it is the General Faith of Muſſulmans, That, let a Man be a Chriſtian, a Jew, or Pagan, provided he lives up to the beſt Light he has, he ſhall be ſaved. And the Holy Prophet himſelf gave us Encouragement to believe ſo.

Thou wilt at leaſt conclude this King to be more Pious and worthy of Praiſe, than one one of his Predeceſſors, who uſurp'd the Poliſh Crown. This was Uladiſlaus V. who having enter'd into a ſolemn Leauge with one of our Former Sultans, living in his Time, and taken an Oath thereupon, giving alſo the Euchariſt (or, that which they eſteem the Body of Chriſt) in Hoſtage; yet ſoon after broke the Articles that he had Sign'd, Seal'd, and Sworn to, and for the Performance of which he had pawn'd his God.

This ſo provok'd the Grand Signior, that he had recourſe to his Arms for Juſtice, and invaded Poland with a Mighty Force: To repell which, Uladiſlaus alſo levied an Army, and met him in the Field. But, juſt as they were going to give Battel, the Sultan took out of his Boſom, the pawned Euchariſt, with the Capitulations agreed upon, and ſworn to between 'em. Then holding the Wafer in One Hand, and the Articles in the Other, he cryed out, in the Hearing of both Armies; "O thou Crucify'd God of the Chriſtians, behold thy Perfidious Adorers, who have given thee to me as a Pledge of their Faith and Truth in what they have ſworn; yet in a moſt Impious Manner they have violated their Oath. If thou art a God chaſtiſe them now by my means, for their Abominable Periury, and Prophanation of thy Name. His Prayer was heard of Heaven: For the Victorious Oſmans gave a Total Overthrow to the Infidels; and that Blaſphemous Prince was himſelf kill'd in the Battel.

VVhat

Whatever various Forms of Religion there be in the World; we know there is but One True God, Creator of Heaven and Earth, Conservator and Governour of Men. He connives at the Invincible Ignorances, Frailties and Infirmities of our Mortal Race. He accepts the Good Works and Sincere Vows of Pagans, and the Uncircumcised, as well as those of the True Believers, and Followers of the Prophet. But he abhors and punishes all Injustice, Perjury, Treason, both in the One and the Other. For he has no Partial Regards for This Nation or Person more than That. They are all equally the Works of his Hands; and his Care is alike over them.

The Sun runs from the East to the West: In his daily Circuit he Illuminates and Warms this Hemisphere; and by Night, our Antipodes enjoy his Favours, and welcome Influence. At one Time of the Year he comforts the North, at another he revives the South. There is no Part of the Globe, which in due Season does not rejoyce in his all-chearing Beams.

The Moon never slacks or deviates from her wonted Course; but from the Crescent to the Wane, observes the Laws of him that made her. She is exact in timing the Flux and Reflux of the Sea. And she guides the wandring Mariners by Night. The Inhabitants of the Artick and Antartick Circles, wait for her Light, when the Sun absents himself for Half the Year. As soon as they see the

Charior

Chariot of Diana appear on the Road of their Heaven. every Man claps his Hands for Joy. They rouze from their Domeſtick Dulneſs and Melancholy; they come out of their Dens and Caves. With Dances and Songs, they welcom the Approach of the Beautiful Goddeſs; Knowing that She is but a Second Remove from the Eternal Light: The Mirrour of the Sun, in which that Glorious Planet may ſee his Face; in whoſe, by Reflection, we ſee the Face of God.

So do the Stars keep on their various Traverſes through the Heavens. Each Conſtellation faithfully maintaining its Poſt; each Planet purſuing its Road. Whilſt all together, at ſo vaſt a Diſtance, appear a flying Camp, ne'er ſeting up their bright Pavilions but by Night, and in the Morning taking 'em down again. This may be call'd the Army of Heaven, the Hoſt of God, embattel'd in the Firmament, to guard his Friends on Earth, and to chaſtiſe his Enemies.

To deſend lower yet into our Sublunary Elements; we find the Rain, Hail, Snow, Winds, Thunder, Lightning and other Meteors, are impartially ſcatter'd up and down the Climates of the Earth; I do not mean by Chance, but by the Univerſal Providence which governs all Things. As the Alcoran expreſſes it: "'Tis he directs "the Seminal and Prolifick Showers, to "Barren and Deſart Places: Doubtleſs, this "is a Sign of his Divine Unity.

In

In fine, all Provinces and Corners of the Earth bring forth their proper Fruits in Season. And the Negro's of Africk, and America, tho' groſs Idolaters, and ſome of them worſhipping Infernal Dæmons, yet enjoy God's Bleſſings; and live as Plentifully, with as much Content and Joy, as we that Adore his Eternal Unity.

Every Nation takes up their Religion on the Credit of their Prieſts; and ſo long as they obſerve the Natural and Moral Law imprinted in their Hearts: The Indulgent Judge and Father of Men, will diſpence with thoſe that Err, in Obedience to the Poſitive Laws of their Nation: for Sedition is like Magick, odious to God and Man, and equally liable to Univerſal Puniſhment.

Once more, O Pious Father of the Dervichs, I beg of thee to pardon the Freedom I take, in diſcourſing of Religious Matters in thy Preſence, who art a Light to the Blind, a Guide to thoſe that Err; a Reſolver of Doubts, an Arbitrator of difficult Queſtions; The Onely Oracle of thy Province.

I endeavour not to inform thee, but to diſ-entangle my ſelf from Error; and teſtifie, that tho' I Honour God and his Prophet; yet I think there is no need of a Falſehood to defend the Truth.

Paris. 7th of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year, 1670.

LETTER

LETTER XII.

To Uſeph, Baſſa.

DEath has of late Celebrated a Triple Triumph in the Court of France; having lead away Captives to the Inviſible World, The Cardinal Duke of Vendome, a Dutcheſs of the ſame Title, and Henrietta Maria, late Queen of Great Britain, being the Relict of King Charles I. and Youngeſt Daughter to Henry IV. of France.

Thou may'ſt alſo report to the Divan, that Caſimir, late King of Poland, is now at this Court; Having left Poland, as ſoon as he ſaw Prince Wieſnowiski elected his Succeſſor. The Dukes of Lorrain and Newburgh had ſeverally laid Claim to that Crown, and levied Armies a-part, in order to make good their Pretentions. But the Polanders, being aware of it, were reſolv'd not to bring themſelves under the Juriſdiction of any Foreigner, ſo long as there was a Prince of their own Nation capable of the Dignity, and one who being the Son of King Caſimir, ſeems to have the beſt Title to his Father's Throne, whoſe Vertues he inherits.

Here is alſo arriv'd the Prince of Tuſcany, who has travell'd through all Europe, and

In fine, all Provinces and Corners of the Earth bring forth their proper Fruits in Season. And the Negro's of Africk, and America, tho' groſs Idolaters, and ſome of them worſhipping Infernal Dæmons, yet enjoy God's Bleſſings; and live as Plentifully, with as much Content and Joy, as we that Adore his Eternal Unity.

Every Nation takes up their Religion on the Credit of their Prieſts; and ſo long as they obſerve the Natural and Moral Law imprinted in their Hearts: The Indulgent Judge and Father of Men, will diſpence with thoſe that Err, in Obedience to the Poſitive Laws of their Nation: for Sedition is like Magick, odious to God and Man, and equally liable to Univerſal Puniſhment.

Once more, O Pious Father of the Dervicheſ, I beg of thee to pardon the Freedom I take, in diſcourſing of Religious Matters in thy Preſence, who art a Light to the Blind, a Guide to thoſe that Err; a Reſolver of Doubts, an Arbitrator of difficult Queſtions; The Onely Oracle of thy Province.

I endeavour not to inform thee, but to diſ-entangle my ſelf from Error; and teſtifie, that tho' I Honour God and his Prophet; yet I think there is no need of a Falſehood to defend the Truth.

Paris. 7th of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year, 1670.

LETTER

LETTER XII.

To Uſeph, Baſſa.

DEath has of late Celebrated a Triple Triumph in the Court of France; having lead away Captives to the Inviſible World, The Cardinal Duke of Vendome, a Dutcheſs of the ſame Title, and Henrietta Maria, late Queen of Great Britain, being the Relict of King Charles I. and Youngeſt Daughter to Henry IV. of France.

Thou may'ſt alſo report to the Divan, that Caſimir, late King of Poland, is now at this Court; Having left Poland, as ſoon as he ſaw Prince Wieſnowiski elected his Succeſſor. The Dukes of Lorrain and Newburgh had ſeverally laid Claim to that Crown, and levied Armies a-part, in order to make good their Pretentions. But the Polanders, being aware of it, were reſolv'd not to bring themſelves under the Juriſdiction of any Foreigner, ſo long as there was a Prince of their own Nation capable of the Dignity, and one who being the Son of King Caſimir, ſeems to have the beſt Title to his Father's Throne, whoſe Vertues he inherits.

Here is alſo arriv'd the Prince of Tuſcany, who has travell'd through all Europe, and takes France, as the laſt Kingdom, in his Return Homewards: Proteſting, That he does this in good Manners, as preferring France to all the Nations in Chriſtendom. Indeed, he cou'd, do no leſs in Good Manners, than make this Apology, which yet ſounds very Flat to a Court ſo refin'd as this; which might have expected his Firſt Viſit as a Token of his Regard; ſince, tho' in Domeſtick Proceſſions, Entries, and Cavalcades, thoſe of higheſt Dignity take the laſt Place; yet in Foreign Embaſſies, and Voyages, it is uſual for Princes to addreſs to thoſe firſt, for whom they have the Greateſt Eſteem.

The Politicians here keep very ſecret the News that comes from Candy, which makes all men conclude, 'tis none of the moſt Proſperous. 'Tis generally reported for a Truth, That Admiral Beauford is either Kill'd, or taken Priſoner by the Ottomans; and that the French have loſt near Two thouſand Men in this Undertaking.

I wonder why the Painters always deſcribe Death in the Form of a Naked Skeleton, a Starv'd Syſtem of dry Bones: Where as one would think, he ought to be pourtray'd as a Monſter, a Miracle of Fatneſs; ſince he is the greateſt Glutton in the World, hourly gurmundizing on all manner of Fleſh, and is the very Original, Univerſal Cannibal of Nature, who from the Beginning of the World has feaſted himſelf with

Humane

Humane Bodies. But, perhaps, he has a bad Digestion, and none of all his raw and bloody Diet, will afford Neutriment enough to form so much as a poor Skin to cover his Nakedness. And therefore 'tis he's always drawn in this lean Figure.

Courteous Bassa, suffer me from this vain Jest, to fall into a serious Reflection on our Mortality, and the frail Estate of Humane Race.

Man's but a fetid Vapour, first exhal'd from the Earth, and afterwards advancing, condens'd to a Cloud. that so his Filthiness may be conceal'd under the Covert of a Skin, there in Secret to engender a Thousand Meteors of Fiery Passions, Lusts, Concupiscences, and Extravagant Thoughts. Which in time burst forth, and trouble all the World: Yet end at last in empty Smoak, Rain, Hail, or Wind, and are extinct almost as soon as they were form'd.

The Elements of which we are compounded, may serve as Mirrours to represent the constant Mutability of our Nature. So the devouring Fire, when all its Fuel is spent, decays and dies. Earth, Air, and Water, all are subject to Corruption, and from thence our Generation takes its Rise: likewise thither we return again. This is the Eternal Circle of Natural Products. The Trees, the Flowers, with all the Vegetable Race; the Birds, the Beasts, and Fishes, with every Species of Animals, are so many Remembrancers of our Mortality. Which way ſoe're we turn our Eyes, they are preſented with freſh Images of Humane Weakneſs. And the very Breath, which does prolong our Life, helps equally to ſhorten it, ſince every Reſpiration carries away ſome Portion of our Subſtance. Our finer Particles gradually vaniſh into Smoak, and Air, whilſt the more groſs Remainder ſcums off in noiſome Excrements. And if there appear a Shew of any thing ſolid in us at our Death, 'tis ſoon reduc'd to Aſhes, Dirt, or Worms. Our Bodies, of which we make ſo great Account whilſt living, are loſt in the Abyſs of Univerſal Maſſe, ſoon after Death.

What were the greateſt Prince the happier, tho' he poſſeſs'd the whole Circumference of this Globe? 'Tis but a Mighty Heap of Dirt, or Dung, perpetually exhaling or crumbling away. 'Tis one of the Diſhes which compoſe the Banquet of All-devouring Time. And whilſt the inſulting Monarchs of the Earth trample on it in Diſdain, ſpreading their Armies far and wide, and boaſting that their Empires have no Bounds; each do's but haſten to be ſhut up himſelf within a little, obſcure and putrid Hole, not much ſurpaſſing the Limits of a Mole-hill.

Great Baſſa, Let not the Honours and Dignities thou poſſeſſeſt, make thee forget the the Miseries to which thou art liable each Hour; But, remember thou art a Man.

Paris, 6th. of the 11th. Moon, of the Year 1669.

LETTER XIII.

To the Kaimacham.

HEre is arriv'd a Muta-faraca, call'd Solyman Ismael, with Expresses from the Grand Signior. 'Twas no small Refreshment to see his publick Entry, which appear'd like a little Epitome of the Mussulman Grandeur and Magnificence. The Young Rabble were as curious to be Spectators of this Eastern Cavalcade, as the Romans were fond of beholding the Secular Plays, which were exhibited but once in an Age. Nay, People of all Ranks, Ages, and Qualities, fill'd the Streets, the Windows, and Battlements of their Houses: Some, because they never saw such a sight before; others, despairing that they should live long enough to be Witnesses of such another.

Yet with all their Curiosity, none but the Ministers of State are able to dive into the least Secret of his Instructions. These wil-ingly communicate the Titles which that Great Arbiter of the Earth, gives the French King. That ſo not only his Subjects, but Neighbouring Nations may conceive the profounder Veneration for him, without penetrating the Meaſures he takes. This is an Artifice common to all States, to turn the beſt Side outermoſt; only the Hollanders excepted, who, in the Days of their Revolt from the King of Spain, cou'd not ſo much as put a good Face on a bad Matter: But were forc'd to expoſe their Poverty and Nakedneſs, as well as ſuffer under it; addreſſing themſelves to Elizabeth, then Queen of England, in the Character of, The Poor Diſtreſſed States of Holland, and ſo begging her Aſſiſtance.

However, Solyman has faithfully imparted to me his Affairs; as I have reaſon to believe. He's too well born, and bred, poſſeſſes more Reaſon and Wit, than to amuſe the Old Man in the Caſſock, (ſo they call me here in the Streets, who know me not by any other Character; ſo Private is Mahmut in Paris, at this Hour, notwithſtanding all his publick Sufferings.)

I eſteem Iſmael as one fit to preſent the Grand Signior's Perſon among better People than Infidels: Yet, I tell thee, the French are the moſt refin'd of all the Weſtern Giafers.

Iſmael underſtands the Force of the Civil Laws, which he learn'd from Juſtinian's Code, Code, and other Books: For he is perfect in Greek and Latin, and has beſtow'd ſome Years in reading their Books, both Prints and Manuſcripts.

He makes a very Perſonable Figure, being Tall, Full-body'd, Well-ſhap'd, and not of an ugly Face which is enough to be ſaid of a Man, deſign'd for Buſineſs, and not only for Love. He's never in danger of falling under Cato's Cenſure, who ſeeing Two Embaſſadors ſent from Rome to a Foreign State, one of which had his Head ſo little, that it could hardly be diſtinguiſh'd from that of an Owl; and the other ſuch a Cripple, that he cou'd not walk without Stilts; cry'd out, Here's an Embaſſy which has neither Head nor Tail.

And then, our Muta-faraca is rich: He ſupports the Charges of his Commiſſion, with extraordinary Munificence. His Houſe is already become the Sanctuary of all the diſtreſs'd Levantines, whether Greeks, Armenians, or Followers of the Prophet: and he ſpeaks French as readily as a Native. Yet he Diſſembles his Expertneſs in that Language, to keep up the State and Reſervedneſs of the Ottoman Empire, which diſdains to condeſcend to any other Speech, than Turkiſh, or Arabick. Beſides, he has the Advantage, by thus artificially ſhutting his Ears, that he can at one time both hear and be deaf; underſtand and be ignorant of whatſoever is ſaid by the Spies of the French King. And this is no ſmall Gift in a Man of his Character and Truſt. For he had need of an Angel, or a Devil at's Elbow, that thinks to over-reach this Court.

Above all, I believe our Solyman will never be guilty of the Error committed by the Embaſſadors ſent from Tenedos to one of the Roman Emperors. I'm ſure he is not yet. For, thoſe Gentlemen had ſeen the Death of the Emperor's Son, Eleven Moons, and Fourteen Days, as the Story ſays, before they knew 'twas their Duty to make an Addreſs of Condolence: Or, at leaſt, before they call'd it to mind; for, they were drown'd in the Roman Luxury. So that, when they came to perform that Devoir, the Emperor cou'd not forbear to Scoff at them in theſe Terms: I much lament, ſaid he, the Fate of the Renowned Hector, your Country-Man, and Champion, whom Achilles the Grecian kill'd above a Thouſand Years agoe.

I ſpeak this in a particular Regard to Solyman's Deportment here. For, when he firſt came to this Court, he found them all in Mourning for the Death of the King's Aunt, the late Queen of England, and of other High Perſonages (particularly thoſe that were ſlain in the late Action at Candia) whereof I have already given an Account to the Sublime Port, in another Letter. Without Inſtructions he very demurely accoſted the King,

King, and told him, "There cou'd be no "Dunalma in the Ottoman Empire, for the "late Succeſs at Candia, ſo long as the French "Court were Mourners.

This was a ſenſible Touch to thoſe that underſtood it; and from that Moment the Grandees and Miniſters of State have made a Difference in their Entertainment of this ingenious Muta-faraca, and that which they us'd to give to the Chiauſes formerly ſent from the Port.

I can aſſure thee, he is, at the ſame time, very Blunt, and very Elegant, in his Diſcourſe. There's Fire in every word he utters, to warm and refreſh, if they take it at a due Diſtance; but, if they approach too near, he ſcorches their Spirits, and puts them into a Choler, they dare not ſhew. They conſume inwardly in their own Deſpight: yet cannot help themſelves.

Doubtleſs, the King of France is the Greateſt Monarch, the moſt Powerful and Victorious Prince in Chriſtendom, the only Invincible Emperor of the Weſtern Franks. Yet he veils to our Majeſtick Sovereign, Lord of the whole Earth. And our Eunuch will not part with a Title of his Maſter's Honour, or give any Advantage by an Eaſineſs worthy of Blame, in a caſe that may be turn'd to a Precedent. He is very happy in his Repartees, as thou wilt perceive by the Anſwer he gave to a French Lord yeſterday, when he ask'd him, Whether he thought it not a Violation of the Civil Law, for Embaſſadors to be Impriſon'd, as they often are at the Ottoman Port? No, (ſays Solyman) it is not, where the Embaſſador is guilty of Treaſon, or Crimen læſæ Majeſtatis. But, if it were, you French-men have the leaſt Reaſon to accuſe us of it, ſince we firſt learn'd this Maxim from the Back-ſide of your Salick Law, where 'tis Endors'd. And then he produc'd Twenty ſeveral Inſtances of this Kind in the Court of France.

In a word, Solyman has hitherto acquitted himſelf with Marvellous Succeſs, in every thing; tho' the French Grandees often ſet upon him to try what Metal he is made of, having generally a mean Opinion of Muſſulman's, becauſe Learning is ſo little countenanc'd among us.

I have no Matter of News to acquaint thee with, ſave that a violent Plague broke forth not long ago at Soiſſons; and a terrible Earthquake in Sicily, frighted the Inhabitants of Catanea, and the adjacent Towns, from their Habitations; After one whole Village had been ſwallow'd up.

Thoſe who were curious to pry into the Cauſe of theſe particular Convulſions, and that affrighting Overthrow, perceiv'd, after diligent Search, that it proceeded from a new Eruption, or Breach in Mount Gibel, about Two Miles from Catanea: Where the Horrid Chaſm vomited forth Floods of Fire, with Flaming Stones; which being carryed violently through the Air, for the space of near a League round about, at last fell down in Flaming Showers, or Cataracts, producing sad, and Calamitous Effects in the Neighbouring Country.

which

Serene Minister, it is evident that the Judgments of God are upon these Infidels: Yet, they will not be converted from their Errors, and Vices. They have felt the same Tempest of Fire which overwhelm'd the Nine Cities of the Lake Asphaltites. Yet, they remain Insensible and Obdurate. Surely, they will be exterminated from the Earth.

Paris, 4th, of the 12th. Moon, of the Year 1669.

The End of the Second Book.

LET-

LETTERS

Writ by

A SPY at PARIS.

VOL. VII.

BOOK III.

LETTER I.

To Mahomet, an Exil'd Eunuch, at Algiers in Egypt.

BE no longer Melancholy, my Friend, nor link under the Burthen of thy Misfortunes. Give not thy Enemies an Occasion of double Triumph in that they have driven thee from thy Self, as well as from the Envy'd Habit of Happy Fortune. Thou hast Money and Jewels enough left to purchase thee a competent Felicity

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. VII.

BOOK III.

LETTER I.

To Mehemet, an Exil'd Eunuch, at Alcaire in Egypt.

BE no longer Melancholly, my Friend, nor ſink under the Burthen of thy Misfortunes. Give not thy Enemies an Occaſion of double Triumph in that they have driven thee from thy Self, as well as from the Grand Signior's Happy Preſence. Thou haſt Money and Jewels enough left to purchaſe thee a competent Felicity any any where. Or, at leaſt, thou haſt Vertue, which renders every Place a Paradiſe. Aſſociate thy ſelf with the other Exiles in that City, Victims to a Royal Caprice; ſuffer'd with all their Immence Riches, to make a Pompous and Magnificent Entry into that Metropolis of Egypt, but ſoon after ſtript of all their Wealth, and Sacrific'd to the Court-Avarice. So were the Conſecrated Bulls of old, dreſs'd up in ſtately Equipage, their Horns and Hoofs all gilded o're with Gold, ador'nd with Ribbons of coſtly Silks, their Bodies cover'd or'e with Mantles of Brocade and Tiſſue, embroider'd with Pearls and Precious Stones; and trailing on the Pavements af Apillo's Temple: Whilſt the Prieſts ſtood ready at the Altar to diſpatch whole Hecatombs of theſe gay Sacrifices.

Your Caſe is not ſo bad at Caire, in that your Lives are ſpar'd, and you at Liberty to carve new Fortunes to your ſelves, where e'er you pleaſe. You ought to aid and counſel one another in your Misfortunes. It is a Comfort to the Miſerable, to have Companions in their ſad Eſtate. Inſinuate thy ſelf into the Baſſa's Favour. He may do ſomething to Allevate thy Grief. He'll meaſure thy Circumſtances by his own; conſidering that he has but Three Years to enjoy his preſent Wealth and Grandeur.

Go to the baniſh'd Mufti, if he be living at Caire; deſire his Spiritual Advice: Perhaps thou may'ſt receive in to the Bargain Some Temporal Advantage from it. He has a greater Influence on ſome of the Egyptian Bey, than the Grand Signior has himſelf. You're all alike embark'd in one Affliction, whoſe Eſſence do's conſiſt in being degraded from your former Honours, (tho' in different Degrees) and being ſeparated from your Friends, that bask in the immediate Luſtre of Imperial Dignity. It is your Buſineſs therefore now, to find out ſome new Source of Happineſs: To make New Friends, ſince you have loſt the Old; or, at leaſt, to prop up one another by a mutual Friendſhip, not to be Broke or Diſſipated, but by a Deſtiny equal to the former. And then you have no more to do, but proſecute your ſeveral Intereſts, and be reſign'd to Fate.

a greater

As for thee, I am particularly ſollicitous; being engag'd together from our Youth, by a Reciprocal Participation of Good Offices, which was the Effect of a deep rooted and ſtrong Sympathy. The Agreeableneſs of Humour, united firſt our Souls, and taught us the Myſterious Leſſons of Platonick Love. We ſaw each other, and were ſtraight inſpir'd with ſacred Inclinations. My Eye no ſooner fix'd on thine, but through that Perſpective I could ſee the inward Vertue of thy Soul, which immediately produc'd a Veneration in my Breaſt: And I ſoon found our Hearts beat Time to one another. This generous Paſſion afterwards encreas'd as we grew up; and what it loſt of its Firſt Violence, it gain'd by acquiring a more laſting Strength, more durable Integrity, and conſtant Faithfulneſs.

fulneſs. Our Joys and Griefs were ſtill the ſame. No Proſperous or Adverſe Fortune cou'd ever change our Minds, to warp us either to Flattery or Contempt: But with an even Mind we ſtill ſuſtain'd the different Accidents of Humane Life, and propp'd up one another with tight Affection; till 'twas the Will of Fate to ſeparate us, I being made a Slave in Sicily, whilſt thou enjoy'dſt the Smiles and Favours of thy Infant-Fortune, which introduc'd thee firſt to the Seraïl. Afterwards I gain'd my Freedom, and return'd to the Imperial City, and to the Palace of the Sultan. But was not ſuffer'd long to enjoy that Happineſs, being appointed for this hazardous Poſt in Paris.

I tell thee, Mehemet, I reckon my Caſe far worſe than thine, in that I am forc'd to take my conſtant Reſidence up among theſe Infidels. Cou'd my propitious Stars encourage me but with the ſmalleſt Hopes to change my preſent Courſe of Life, I'd ne'er repine at what is paſt, but pleaſe my ſelf with flattering Proſpects of ſome future and unknown Felicity. But, to be irrevocably chain'd down to the Oar, without a Glimpſe of any Sign that I ſhall ever be reliev'd, is worſe than Death it ſelf.

Whereas, on the other ſide, thou art diſpos'd of in the happieſt Region of the Earth; Egypt, the Mother of Sciences, the Midwife of Celeſtial Secrets; the Nurſe of Sages, Saints, and Prophets; the Granary of the Muſſulman Empire; and the Refuge of of Distressed Mortals. Oh! Mehemet, prize the vast Advantage thou hast of me, and others of thy Fellow-Slaves. Improve thy Privilege, and Opportunity of ranging where thou list. Go, visit all the Antiquities of Egypt, and trace her Borders to the West and South. If this will not divert thy Melancholy, go farther yet, and search the mighty Cataracts of the Nile, which deafen Mortals with their Fall. Go view the Mountains of the Moon in Æthiopia: Or, see the Desolation of the Smoaky Vale, and of the Cities, whose Inhabitants were in a Minute Metamorphos'd into Stones, as a Memorial of Eternal Vengeance against crying Sins.

But, after all, my Mehemet, depart not from thy Reason, Loyalty and Faith. For these are Armour-Proof against the Assaults of Chance and Destiny, of Men and Devils, of Earth and Hell. And when thy Travels are finish'd here on Earth, those Vertues will not fail to carry thee to Heaven.

Paris, 5th. of the 4th. Moon, of the Year 1670.

LETTER

LETTER II.

To the ſame.

I Cannot forbear giving thee the Trouble of another Letter by this Poſt; that I may yet more encourage thee to a Vertuous Reſignation to the VVill of Fate, which, thou know'ſt, is inexorable.

There is an Eternal Law fix't in the Univerſe, which admits of no Repeal. No Prayers, or Tears of Paſſionate Mortals; no Vows, Alms, Pilgrimages, or any Supererrogating VVorks can move the Deſtinies. They're more Inflexible than the Judges of the old Athenian Areopagus. And the Unchangeable Edicts of the Median Empire might ſooner be revers'd than the Decrees of Fate.

If thou cou'dſt make Corban with a Hundren Thouſand Sheep, and feed the Poor of all the Eaſt, according to the Muſſulman Practice; or Sacrifice as many Bulls, after the Faſhion of the Ancient Gentiles: could'ſt thou monopolize all the Aromaticks of the Orient, to compound the moſt exalted Incenſe, and make a Pyramid of Odoriferous Smoak aſcend, high as the Shadow of the Earth at Midnight, whereby the Heaven of Heavens ſhou'd be all perfum'd, and every ſleeping Deity ſhou'd be awaken'd by the Fragrant Smell; could'ſt thou bribe the Quires above, to tune the Spheres anew, and raiſe raiſe the ſweeteſt Harmony, that ever reach'd the Eternal Senſe; yet all wou'd not prevail, to alter the Reſolves of Heaven, or re-inſtate thee in thy former Honour. No! My Mehmet, thou art loſt for ever at the Serail: The Face of Things is chang'd, ſince thou haſt been in Egypt. Thy Friends are all diſpers'd abroad i'th' World, or Dead; which is but another kind of Separation. There are no Hopes now left thee, of e're returning again to that Proud City, which inherits the Character of ancient Rome, The Lady of the Earth. I wiſh the Roman Luxury be not alike entail'd.

Rouze up, my Friend, and look not on thy State, through the deceitful Opticks of thy Paſſion; but let Reaſon light the Proſpect. Thou wert before a Slave; now thou art free, and Maſter of thy Self. However, to rid thee of the very Idea or phanſy'd Miſery, I counſel thee once again, to travel.

Go, make the ſpeedieſt Retreat thou can'ſt, out of the Limits of the Ottoman Empire, that thou may'ſt forget thy Cares and Fears. Take not thy Way by Barbary, nor covet to ſee the Place where ancient Carthage was ſituated; be not curious to enquire after Queen Dido, Æneas, or Hannibal, or to hear ſome Stories of the Famous Scipio. Nor wou'd I counſel thee to paſs the Kingdoms of Morocco and Fez. For, tho' thoſe Realms pay no Obedience to the Sultan: Yet, they are his Allies; and that Reflection will always keep thee in Pain. Beſides, the

ſight

ſight of Muſſulmans will terrifie thy Mind and fill thee with a Thouſand Apprehenſions.

Go rather the directeſt Way thou canſt, unto the Kingdoms of the Negro's or Black People, inhabiting the Torrid Zone. But, take this Rule: Be ſure to Coaſt along the River Nile, as near as the Roads of Africk will permit: That ſo thou may'ſt avoid the Horrible and Affrighting Deſarts of Libya, Nubia, and Zanfar, with other Inhoſpitable Mountainous Parts between the Tropick of Cancer and the Equinox. For, thou wilt not find it very pleaſant to encounter and converſe with none but Dragons, Baſiliſks, and other Monſters of thoſe Regions. And yet, for ought I know, 'tis better, than to fall into the Hands of Humane Salvages.

I know not how to give a General Character of the Southern Blacks; ſince every Province varies in its particular Principles, Cuſtoms, Laws, and Inſtitutions. The Abyſſines are Chriſtians; ſo are the Inhabitants of Congo, Songo, Angola, and other Countries bordering on the Upper Æthiopia. Thoſe that dwell along the Red Sea, are generally Mahometans. They diſcourſe alſo of a very Populous Country thereabouts, poſſeſs'd by Jews alone. And there are Authors who aſſert a Female Kingdom; a Nation of Amazons. 'Tis certain, on the Weſtern Side thye're all Pagans.

It will be worth thy Labour, to obſerve the different Humours of theſe People, and make Compariſon between the Ancient and this this Modern Gentiliſm: to abſtract their Morals from their Superſtitions? And tell me then, whether they do not better deſerve the Title of True Believers, than we Muſſulmans, ſince they act according to their Faith, whereas we go by a quite contrary Method. They believe no other Gods but their Domeſtick Prieſts, and theſe they never willingly offend. Whereas, whilſt we profeſs the Eternal Unity, we ſcruple not to ſin againſt Him every Hour. They Circumciſe, Waſh, Pray, Abſtain from Meats, give Alms as well as we. Their Juſtice is as ſtrict, their Mercy ſoft as ours. In fine, they're Men differing from us, only in Colour, Education, and the peculiar Maxims of their Country, which they rigorouſly obſerve, and hope for Happineſs thereby, as we do by Obeying the Law brought down from Heaven.

Mehemet, Our Holy Prophet has ſaid, "That whoſoever lives innocently and does "Juſtice, whether he be a Chriſtian, Jew, or "Pagan, ſhall be ſav'd as well as his Diſci"ples. Therefore in all thy Travels, deſpiſe not any Man for his Religion, be it never ſo ridiculous in Appearance; provided he be Good and Honeſt in his Converſation: Much leſs contemn thoſe Africans for their Colour; ſince Black and White are all alike to him who firſt gave Man the Power to know the Difference.

Mehemet

Mehemet, if thou acceptest my Advice, take also my Wishes for thy good Voyage and Prosperity.

Paris, 5th. of the 4th. Moon, of the Year 1670.

LETTER III.

To the Mufti, Venerable Patron of Learning and Knowledge.

FRom thy Clemency I will not fear a Charge of Negligence, in that I have delay'd to perform the Task thou enjoinedst me. Thou know'st my Circumstances, and wilt consider, That tho' I have read Books, yet I have not a Library of my own. 'Tis true, I often frequent those of this City, but my Seasons are limited, either to those Hours when the Libraries are open'd, or to those I can spare from the Affairs of my Commission. I cannot serve the Grand Signior, and follow my Studies both at once. Yet I have out-pass'd Frugality, and turn'd a Niggard of my time, that I might obey the great Oracle of True Believers, and promote a Work, for which I have so passionate a Regard.

The Enclos'd Paper contains the Size of the Volume, which I conceive will be most proper proper for so great a Work, with the Contrivance of the Pages, which I have divided into Columns, that so the Years of the World, the Date of the Olympiads, with other Remarkable Æra's, may be rank'd in Order, each Parallel with the rest, and all with the Matter treated of at such a Time.

This I have done in the enclos'd Paper, not thinking it proper to interrupt the Series of my Letter, with a blank Scheme, which is for the Use of the Compilers; but to present thee with a transient View of the Four Monarchies, which have made such a noise in the World; wherein thou need'st not fear the Fatigue of a tedious continued History; for I design only to cull out such Passages as are most Diverting, and worthy of Perusal.

To begin then with the Assyrian Monarchy, which was the First of the Four: This Nation was, for a great while, contented with its own Bounds, without seeking to encroach on the Territories of others. And Ninus was the First of the Assyrian Kings, who enlarg'd his Dominions by Conquest. He subdu'd the greatest part of Asia, and rais'd Assyria to the Title of an Empire.

After his Death, Semiramis his Wife, took upon her the Government, counterfeiting the Person of Ninyas, his Son, who was as yet but a Child. She wore the Habit of a Man, and being like her Son, pass'd for him, as the lawful Succeſſor, unſuſpected. This Virago enlarg'd the Conqueſts of her Husband, and ſpread her Empire from India to Æthiopia; and to lay the Foundation of an immortal Fame, ſhe built Babylon.

so

To her, ſucceeded Ninyas her Son, of whom nothing is Remarkable but his Effeminacy. For neglecting the Affairs of War, he ſpent all his Time among his Concubines. And the ſame Stain is faſten'd on his Succeſſors, even to to Sardanapalus; in whoſe Death the Aſſyrian Monarchy ſuffer'd an Interruption, being Cantoniz'd into Petty Royalties, by the Governours of Provinces. Among whom, thoſe who aſſum'd the Crown of Babylon, were of moſt Note, in regard they firſt recover'd the broken Empire to its Old Grandeur and Unity.

By a Succeſſion therefore of many Kings, in Reference to whoſe Actions Hiſtory is ſilent, the Monarchy deſcended to Merodach Baladan: In whoſe Days happen'd that wonderful Retrogradation of the Sun, mention'd by Hebrew Writers and others, which occaſion'd thoſe Famous Controverſies among the Philoſophers, and Aſtronomers of that Age, mention'd in the Perſian Chronicles. For they obſerving, that not only the Sun, but the whole Planetary Syſtem, and all the Fixed Stars went back at the ſame Time, or at leaſt ſeem'd to do ſo, began to revive that curious Queſtion, about the Motion of the Earth, which the Chaldeans, Arabs, and Gymnosophists of India had started before, when the Sun and Moon stood still at the burning of Ida. And it was concluded by some of 'em, That the Motion of the Earth being granted, its standing still, or going back at these extraordinary Times, would solve all the Astronomical Appearances better, and in a more Natural Way, than by supposing such a Prodigious Stop to be put to the whole Cœlestial Frame at one time, or that the Everlasting Spheres shou'd be Rowl'd backwards at the other.

This Dispute was the Occasion of that famous Confiux of the Eastern Sages to Babylon, mention'd in the Persian Poets, and Historians. For Baladan being very Inquisitive after Knowledge, and particularly desirous to be inform'd in the Grounds of this Preternatural Appearance, sent Messengers in o India, Egypt, Persia, and all Kingdoms, where Learning flourish'd; inviting the Astrologers, Priests, Magicians, Prophets, and all that had the Character of Wise Men, to come to his Court at Babylon, where they were magnificently entertain'd; and when they had fully satisfied all the King's Demands, he sent them away laden with Gifts and Presents, every Man to his own Country.

Arkianus succeeded Baladan in the Kingdom of Babylon, in whose time Ecbatane was built. To him succeeded Belithus, Apronadius, Rigibelus, Mesessimordacus; after whom the Kingdom was again transla-ted to the Aſſyrians, in the Reign of Eſcharhaddon, in the 3323d. Year of the World, and the 24th. Olympiad. During the Empire of this Eſcharhaddon the Aſſyrian Monarch, Chalcedon that lies over againſt the Imperial City, was built by the Thracians, in the 25th. Olympiad, and 3329th. Year of the World.

To Eſcharhaddon ſucceeded Saoſduchinus, Chyladanus, Nabopolaſſar; in the Reign of which laſt, Necho King of Egypt, attempt-ted to cut a Canel from the Nile to the Red-Sea, wherein he employed an Hundred and Twenty Thouſand Egyptians; but diſcou-rag'd by the ſlow Progreſs they made, and the vaſt Expences he was at, he gave it o ver.

This Nabobolaſſar, once more rais'd the Kingdom of Babylon to an Univerſal Monar-chy; for before his Time it had been for ſome Years in the Hands of the Aſſyrians; but he ſubdu'd all Syria, Phœnicia, Judæa, and Egypt, and expell'd the Scythians out of Aſia.

To hi n ſucceeded his Son Nebuchadnezzar, who dream't of the Four Univerſal Monar-chies, that were to ſucceed one another. In his Reign was born the Grand Cyrus, who rais'd the Perſian Monarchy. Of him it is Recorded, That one Night he dreamed, The Sun ſtood at his Feet, whom when Cyrus thrice attempted to lay hold on, the Sun as often diſ-appear'd: Which the Magi interpreted, as a ſure ſure Sign that he ſhould Reign Thirty Years, which came to paſs accordingly.

During this Reign, there was a Notable Duel fought between Pittacus, one of the Seven Wiſe Men of Greece, and Phrynon the moſt Renowned Combatant of thoſe Days; for he always won the Prize at the Olympick Games. He was General of the Athenians, and being puff'd up with his conſtant Succeſſes, he defy'd any Man to a ſingle Combat. Pittacus the Sage, accepted the Challenge; and when they were hotly engag'd in the Field, he ſuddenly threw a ſilken Net over Phrynon's Head, and having thus entangled him, thruſt him through with his Lance.

This was that great Nebuchadnezzar, who having beſieg'd and taken Jeruſalem, burnt it down to the Ground, raz'd the Walls, and carry'd away all the Jews with their Riches into Captivity to Babylon.

Afterwards having Conquer'd all the Neighbouring Nations, he new-built Babylon, and enclos'd it with Three Walls: He alſo built thoſe Pendulous Gardens, Renowned throughout the Earth; and made thoſe Brazen Gates which were reckoned among the Wonders of the World. But at length, being puff'd up with the Thought of his Magnificent Works, he was Metamorphos'd into a Satyr or Silvan, and dwelt Seven Years in the Deſarts of Arabia, being a Companion of the Brutes. My Country-men ſhew the Places of his wild Haunt, to this Day; having receiv'd it by Tradition from their Fa- thers. They ſay alſo, that Paremiel, the Angel of the Woods, when the Term of Seven Years was expir'd, interceeded with God for Nebuchadnezzer, who thereupon turn'd him into a Man again, and reſtor'd him to his Empire. He dyed peaceably in the 3442d Year of the World, and the 43d of his Reign.

To him ſucceeded Evil-Merodach, Neriglisſor, Laboroſoarched, and Labynitus, in whoſe Time there was War between the Babylonians and Perſians, when Cyrus after many Victorious Campaigns, at laſt laid Siege to Babylon, took the City, and tranſlated the Empire to the Perſians; and having ſubdu'd all the Weſt of Aſia, even to the Red Sea, he died at Seventy Years of Age; Commanding his Servants not to Embalm his Body, nor uſe any coſtly Pomp at his Funeral, but burying him decently like a Man, ſhou'd cauſe this Epitaph to be writ on his Tomb.

O Mortals, I am Cyrus who laid the Foundation of the Perſian Monarchy, and was Emperour of all Aſia: Therefore envy me not a Grave.

To him ſucceeded Cambyſes his Eldeſt Son, who marching with his Army into Egypt, Egypt, and laying Siege to Peluſium, caus'd a great Number of Cows, Apes, Birds and other Animals to be plac'd in the Front of his Army; knowing, that the Egyptians worſhip'd ſuch for Gods, and conſequently wou'd forbear to ſhoot their Arrows that way: By which Stratagem he took the City, and afterward Conquer'd all Egypt, carrying away many Thouſands of the Egyptians, with Foreigners reſiding there, into Captivity, among whom was Pythagoras the Philoſopher.

After this, Cambyſes ſent Spies under the Notion of Embaſſadors to the King of Æthiopia, with Rich Preſents. But the King ſuſpecting what was their Buſineſs, took a Bow in his Hand and bent it, as tho' he wou'd ſhoot; and giving it to the Spies, he bid them carry it to their Maſter, and tell him, That when he and his Perſians had learn'd to lend Bows of that Strength, he might think of invading Æthiopia, and not before, for that the Æthiopians were Gyants in Vigor. And when the Spies return'd to Cambyſes, there was no Man found among his Soldiers which was able to bend that Bow. Yet he march'd directly towards Æthiopia with a great Army; Part of which was overwhelm'd in the Sands of the Deſarts, to the Number of Fifty Thouſand, and the Reſt being reduc'd, for Want of Proviſions, to a Neceſſity of eating one another, he returned in a great Rage to Memphis, where he ſlew Apis the God of the Egyptians, and caus'd his Prieſts to be Maſſacred. He alſo ſlew his own Brother, and kill'd his Wife becauſe ſhe mourn'd for him. He ſhot Prexaſpes through with an Arrow, and commanded Twelve Perſian Nobles to be bury'd Alive: He ſet Fire to the Temples, blaſphem'd the Gods, and at laſt kill'd himſelf by an Accident with his own Sword.

After his Death, the Magi Crown'd one of their own Order, and ſet him on the Throne of Perſia, giving out that he was Smerdes the Younger Son of Cyrus, who had been murder'd by the Command of his Brother Cambyſes. And it was eaſy to carry on the Fraud, in regard the Perſian Kings rarely ſuffer themſelves to be ſeen; which is a Cuſtom, thou know'ſt, obſerv'd by all the Monarchs in the Eaſt.

One Oſtan, a Perſian Prince, firſt diſcover'd the Cheat by Means of his Daughter, a Concubine of the King's: For ſhe, by his Inſtruction, found out, that the King had no Ears: Which was a convincing Argument that he was one of the Magi, whoſe Ears Cambyſes had commanded to be cut off.

This Oſtan drawing Six other Princes into a Conſpiracy, they ruſh'd into the Palace, and kill'd all the Magi, and ſingl'd out of their own Number, one Darius, the Son of Hyſtaſpes, to ſucceed in the Throne. This was not done by Election, but by Lot: For they agreed to meet all together, one Morning, before the Palace Gates on Horſeback; and that he whoſe Horſe firſt Neigh'd after the Sun was up, ſhou'd be King. This fell to Darius's Share, by the Stratagem of his

Squire,

Squire, or Maſter of the Horſe. Then the other Princes, Crown'd him, and made him ſwear by the Sun and the Fire, that he wou'd never put them to Death or deny them his Preſence.

But Darius finding himſelf curb'd by theſe Princes, was reſolv'd to rid himſelf of ſuch dangerous Companions. Wherefore he cauſed a Stove to be built on purpoſe for a Banquetting-Houſe, and ſo artificially contriv'd that the Fire-place being under the Banquetting-Chamber, ſhould in ſo many Hours burn aſunder the Pillars that ſupported the ſaid Chamber, and cauſe the Floor to fall down into the Fire. Then he invited theſe Princes to a Feaſt, which he held in his Banquetting-Houſe, and was merry with them till the Signal was given for him to depart: At which Time he left them in the midſt of their Mirth; and within a while after he was gone, the Floor of the Chamber fell down, with all that were in it, into the Fire underneath, where the Princes were ſoon conſum'd to Aſhes.

After this, Darius manag'd all the Affairs of his Empire without Controul. He rul'd over all the Provinces of Aſia, from India to Æthiopia, containing above a Hundred Kingdoms. He extended his Conqueſts to the Provinces of Greece; and ſetting forth a prodigious Fleet, he ſail'd into the Mediterranean and Archipelago: He conquer'd the Iſlands of the Ægean Sea, reduced Chalcedon, and all the Cities along the Helleſpont and Propontis, even Byzantium it ſelf, the preſent Seat of our Auguſt Emperours. At length, having Reigned proſperouſly Thirty ſix Years, he died, and left Xerxes his Son to ſucceed him in the Throne.

Thou ſeeſt Great Guide of the Faithful, that I have not yet reach'd to the End of the Perſian Monarchy; whereas I thought to have comprehended all the Four in one Letter; For I have only touch'd upon the moſt Remarkable Paſſages, omitting the main Body of the Hiſtory, which it wou'd be too tedious for thee to peruſe.

If thou approveſt what I have written, I will continue thus to abbreviate the Hiſtory of the Perſian, Macedonian, and Roman Empires in other Letters: But if thou thinkeſt what I have already writ, to be a ſufficient Model for the Compilers of an Univerſal Hiſtory, I ſubmit to thy Oraculous Appointment.

In the mean time, I pray the King Eternal, who Eſtabliſhes and Diſſolves all the Empires in the World, and has put into the Poſſeſſion of the Grand Signior thoſe Ample Tracts of the Earth which formerly belong'd to the Succeſſive Monarchies; to extend the Limits of the Muſſulman Empire through the Five Zones.

Paris, 17th, of the 6th. Moon,
of the Year 1670.

LET-

LETTER IV.

To Mirmadolin, Santone of the Vale of Sidon.

'TWas a long time before I could find out the True Secret of Humane Happineſs. I have for many Years grop'd after it in the Dark; and when I thought I enjoy'd a Proſpect of it, as clear as of Things we diſcern in the Light of a Mid-day Sun, that Sun was little better than the Sol Mortuorum of the Ancient Romans, whoſe Beams ſerv'd only to give a faint Mock-Glimmering to the Ghoſts that wander on this ſide Charon's Ferry, and like an Ignis fatuus to miſlead 'em up and down in the dark Suburbs of Elizium, the Fens and Marſhes of the Stygian Lake. So have I ſtraggl'd, all my Life, through unknown Ways, ſeeking the Road to Heaven, yet finding nothing but the Paradiſe of Fools.

Sometimes, I thought, by outward Works of Vertue, to purifie my Self and gain Perfection. I was punctual in obſerving every Precept of the Law; and perform'd not a few Acts of Supererogation. Confiding too much in the Fidelity, and inviolable Faſtneſs of my Wings, the Force of my Religious Paſſions, firſt form'd by Nature, afterwards improv'd by Pious Tutors; I ſtrove to make Heroick Flights, and ſoar above my Guide. But alas! they were mere borrowed Feathers which bore me up ſo long; dead Artificial Wings, cemented to my Soul only by Education, Cuſtom, and the Practice of my Fathers; a Compoſition of Spiritual Wax, or Glew, which could not ſtand the Brunt of hot and fiery Tryals, but ſoon diſſolv'd in my Unwarrantable, Bold Approaches to the Sun. So that, in fine, my Wings dropt piecemeal off, and I'd the Fate of Icarus, to fall a Victim to my own obſtinate Zeal, and Raſhneſs.

Surely our Souls are like the Augæan Stable, which no Human Power, Art, or Induſtry, can ever cleanſe, did not the Meſſengers and Favourites of God, like Hercules, teach us the Method of opening a Canal from Heaven, and letting in the Torrent of the River of Purification from Paradiſe.

Our Vices, Hydra-like, ſtill ſtart Young Infant-Heads, as faſt as we cut off the Old. Whereas our Vertues are like the Venetian Treaſure, which being once ſhew'd to the Spaniſh Embaſſador in many Coffers of Silver, Gold, and Jewels; the Wiſe Caſtilian deſiring to ſee the Bottoms of thoſe Wealthy Cheſts turn'd up; when it was done, made this Remark, Your Riches have no Roots, nor grow, like thoſe my Maſter does poſſeſs i'th Indies. So are all the boaſted Excellencies acquir'd by Humane Diſcipline more inanimate and dead than the Artificial

Pro-

Productions of Minerals, Metals and Stones. No traditional Chimiſtry of Men, can e're revive a Soul, that's dead to God. Perhaps, ſome Theological Paracelſus, Helmont, or Arabian Ifriqui, may, from the Aſhes, of an Original, Flower, raiſe the Phantaſtick Form of it again; I mean the Colour and Contexture of the Leaves: But none of them is able to beſtow the Vital Sap, the Seminal Juice, the Inward Vertue of the once proſperous and flouriſhing Vegetable. No Mortal can repair what Adam once deſtroy'd. That Protoplaſt has ruin'd us All.

Well then! Muſt we deſpair of Remedy? Shall we decamp, and ſneakingly retire to Hell, becauſe we can't take Heaven by ſtorm, nor undermine it; nor have recourſe to Stratagems; nor Bribe the Garriſon; or make a Party amongſt the Cæleſtial Burghers? No: Let's rather lie entrench'd within our Selves, till Heaven ſhall voluntarily open its Gates, and Sally forth in Love, to invite and lead us in.

Oh! Thrice-Happy Santone, thou haſt experienc'd what I ſay. My reſolution is to follow thee, by ſuffering my ſelf to be gradually abdicated from the World, and from my own Will. Vouchſafe to inſtruct me in the Method, leſt Self-Love miſguide me to my Ruine.

In

In the mean while, repoſe thou in the Boſom of God, which is the Bed-Chamber of Holy Souls.

Paris, 1ſt. of the 8th. Moon,
of the Year 1670.

LETTER V.

To the Selictar Aga, or Sword bearer to the Sultan.

I Shall entertain thee now with a Medly of Relations, ſome containing News of the freſheſt Date, others only informing thee of things done many Moons ago, yet pleaſant enough in the Rehearſal. However, I beg of thee to accept this as a Teſtimony of my Devoir and Regard; in that I have abundance of Letters to write, many Friends to gratifie, and cannot ſend the ſame Matter to All. I am forc'd to parcel out my Intelligence, and ſuit every Letter to the Genius and Station of him to whom I Addreſs. Knowing therefore thy particular Inclinations, I ſhall preſent thee with ſomething very Agreeable.

No doubt but thou art acquainted with the Chriſtians Carnaval, which is a Time of publick Joy, Licentiouſneſs, and Sport. This

This Year the King and Queen of France obſerv'd it with wonderful Magnificence.

Among their other Divertiſements, they were preſented with a Play, wherein Two Rival Princes, by an Ingenious Emulation, ſtrove to out-vy each other in regaling a Princeſs, equally belov'd by both. The Repreſentation was very fair, and full of Majeſty. On the Right-hand of the Theatre appear'd Apollo in the Air, returning to his Heaven, after he had chas'd and routed all the Cyclops, with the Serpent Python. On the Left was ſeen the ſame God on the Top of Parnaſſus, in the mid'ſt of the Nine Muſes, ſcattering Flowers on the Arts and Sciences which were at the Foot of the Mountain. Then a Veil being drawn a-ſide, diſcover'd a Sea, ſurprizingly natural and fine: In the midſt of which, the Gods of many famous Rivers appear'd ſeated on Rocks, with Tritons, and Cupids rang'd on each ſide, upon the Backs of Dolphin's. Then from above, amidſt the Clouds, King Æolus appear'd, laying his ſtraight Commands upon the Winds, that they immediately retire into their Caverns, excepting only Zephyr, who, for his ſoft and gentle Breezes, was permitted to be preſent at this Feaſt. After which, came Neptune riding in his Cockle-Chariot, drawn by Four Sea-Horſes, attended by a Train of Gods that dwell within the Deep.

Immediately the Scenes chang'd into a Champain, repreſenting the Delicious Fields of of Tempe; where a moſt excellent and agreeable Comedy was acted, to the Satisfaction of all the Court. I leave the Dances, Interludes, and other Novelties to thy Imagination; aſſuring thee, that all was Aſtoniſhing and Magnifick.

But not to entertain thee longer with theſe empty Trifles, I ſhall now acquaint thee with ſomething of Importance; which is a Peace concluded between this King, atd the State of Algiers. On the 2d. of the 3d. Moon, the Count de Guiche brought the Articles of the Treaty to the King; from the Hands of the Marquis del Martel, Lieutenant-General of the French Fleet in the Mediterranean.

If thou wouldſt know the Particulars of this Agreement, read the enclos'd Paper: As for Matter of Fact, all the French Slaves at Algiers, were immediately releas'd upon the Signing and Sealing the Treaty, and delivered up to the French Commander; with ſome French Veſſels alſo which they had ſeiz'd. And ſo diſhonourable are their Capitulations, That at the ſame Time they have yielded up a Ship of theirs, which the French had taken from them, for ever quitting all Claim to it.

In the Beginning of May, the King took his Journey to Flanders, to viſit his New Conqueſts there. This put his Enemies into a great Conſternation, fearing that he had ſome Deſign upononon them. They began to be upon their Guard, and prepare for a

ſudden

ſudden Surprize. But the King perceiving their Alarm by his Spies; ſent them Aſſurance, on his Royal Wotd, That he would do them no Violence at this Time.

However, he ſoon after ſent the Mareſchal de Crequi into Lorrain, with a force conſiderable enough to reduce that Prince to Reaſon, who had not kept his Parole with him in ſeveral Inſtances. The Effect of this Expedition, was the Reducing Pont-a-Mouſſon, Eſpinal, Chaſte, Longwy, and all the Principality of Lorrain, to the French King's Obedience: So that the poor Duke is forc'd to ſeek his Refuge in Foreign Courts.

Noble Aga, this Duke is not to be Pitied, being very Ungrateful, and a perfect Madman. He owes his Liberty and Life to the King of France, yet could not forbear Plotting againſt him. Now he is deſervedly Chaſtis'd for his Folly. So may all thoſe ſuffer, who abuſe their Benefactors. But, upon the Benign and Good, may the Favours of Heaven reſt till the Splitting of all Things.

Paris the 13th. of the 9th Moon,
of the Year 1670.

LET-

LETTER VI.

To Iſouf, his Kinſman, a Merchant at Aſtracan.

I Receiv'd thy Letter, and perus'd it with much Complacency, finding thy Sentiments very agreeable to Reaſon. Yet give me leave to warn thee of an Exceſs which thou art running into. For I have had Experience of its ill Conſequence.

Thy Loſſes have made thee Melancholy, and the Fraudulent Dealing of thy Correſpondents, Factors, and ſuppoſed Friends, has taught thee to declaim againſt Friendſhip, Men, and Buſineſs: And not only ſo, but it ſeems thou haſt taken a Reſolution to abandon all Worldly Affairs, Pleaſures, and Engagements whatſoever, and turn Faquir, Eremit, or Dervich at leaſt: For, thou art diſguſted at Humane Society, and weary of all Things but Solitude.

I muſt confeſs, Iſouf, theſe are very Generous Thoughts, and Pious Reſolves. But, they are not eaſily put in Practice. They are Undertakings, fit only for perfect Saints, Men of unblemiſh'd Lives, and free from all Sorts of Vice; Perſons who have a Stock of Temperance, Chaſtity, Prudence, Juſtice, Fortitude, Patience, Humility, and all the other Vertues, a Fund of Magnanimity, which which can never be exhausted by any Temptations, Difficulties, or Perils, that usually assault and environ such as enter into so austere a Course of Life.

Wilt thou be able to endure the unrelenting, rigid Cold of Winter in the Desart, where there are no Chimneys, Hearths, or Stoves, nor any other Method of keeping Fire to warm thee by? Canst thou sustain the raging Blasts of Boreas at that Season, or the killing Tempests of North-Eastern Winds, which blow from far, and fill the Air, the Earth, and Sea, with baneful Mists, Frosts, Ice, Snow, Sleet, and other chilling Meteors, out of their Eternal Magazines, within the Artick Circle, which Ovid calls the Frigid Zone.

There are many other Extremities to which a Man's expos'd in such a Solitary State. Nor wilt thou be less liable to Inconveniences and Hardships, if thou should'st ramble as a Faquir, up and down the World. Much less could'st thou endure the sad Restraints, and Mortifications of a Convent. Thou'dst hardly live out thy Novitiate with Patience. It goes against the Grain of Nature to obey another's Will, in every trifling Matter that he commands. Thou must not Eat or Drink, but thy Superiour will set the Place, the Time, and Manner of thy Diet; which will be irksome to thy Free-born Soul. And then thou must forsake thy Amorous Pleasures; for ever Forswearing also, the very Thoughts of Money, or of being Rich. I tell thee, thou muſt reſolve to become a Religious Drone, fit for nothing but to mumble o're thy Beads, or turn the Superſtitious Round, till thou art Giddy, or Dance an Hour together to the Muſick of a Thouſand Hue's and Hei's, hoarſly croak'd out in Frantick Tones, by thee, and all thy Brethren Dervices, till ye are ſick, and foam at Mouth: Then your Devotions are thought Meritorious. Canſt thou digeſt theſe ſacred Fooleries? Or grant this to be a Rational Service of the Divinity, as ſome will plead; who ſay, We ought to employ each Member, and all our Faculties, in Praiſing him that made 'em; yet canſt thou brook a Confinement all thy Days, to this Religious State?

tell

I tell thee Iſouf, I have been often tempted in this Manner, to forſake the Sultan's Service, with all other Engagements of the World, and throw my ſelf into a Convent, or ſpend the Reſidue of my Days in ſome obſcure and ſolitary Corner of a Deſart: Yet, I found at length, that this was nothing but Deluſion, and the ſubtle Sophiſtry of that Malicious Dæmon, who envies Man his Happineſs. 'Tis he that whiſpers Arguments of Diſcontent and Murmuring into our Souls, watching his Opportunities when any thing gives us exquiſite Pain or Grief, to drive us to Deſpair.

So have I ſometimes labour'd under an Intolerable Anguiſh of Mind, beſides the fretting Maladies of Fleſh, and Blood, with outward Croſſes in my Fortune. Then have have I wish'd my self in some dark Cavern of the Earth, or on the solitary Top of Teneriff, where I should converse with none but Spirits and Dæmons dwelling above the Clouds. Or else I coveted the Melancholy Retirements of the Lybian Desart, which affords no other Society than that of Lyons, Tygers, Dragons, and other Beasts of Prey.

When these Wishes have appear'd too Extravagant and Wild, I then retrench'd my Thoughts, and pitch'd upon some other Manner of Life, equally promising Comfort, yet less threatning and Dangerous. I gave my self up wholly to Prayer and Fasting for a while, thinking to hold out thus for ever. So sensible a Pleasure attends these Exercises, That at certain Moments a Man's all Rapture, Ecstacy, and I know not what. He is apt to think himself in some New World. A Sacred Pride invests his Soul. He seems all Majesty within; an inseparable Companion of the Immortals, and the Darling Friend of God. Whereas all this results but from the Ventilation of his Blood, by Vocal Oraisons; and is no more than a meer Natural Operation, whereby his Lungs are artificially breath'd, and gently forc'd to Disembogue their over-heated Airs, their thick caliginous Vapours, which fill the Heart and all the rest of the Vitals with Seeds of Melancholy, Fear, Suspicion, Grief, and other doleful Passions.

But,

But, mark the Zealot, when his Prayers are over, his Faſt is done; and all his Fervent Pious Diſcipline is accompliſh'd; how like a Hypocrite he looks and acts: How formal is his Carriage, or at leaſt, how vain and light? He either heaves out fulſom Hypochondriack Sighs, with Supercilious Looks, and Chaps, ſet like the Furrows of a ſowr-fac'd Hadgi; or elſe he's tickl'd into a loud ungovernable Laughter, and all his Carriage is ridiculous and wanton. Either his Hunger, Thirſt, and Faintneſs, the uſual Effect of ſuch Exceſſive Devotion, makes him Peeviſh, Cholerick, and Unmortified; or elſe he is as Apiſh as a Cat.

Humane Nature cannot abide long in the ſame Humour, and thoſe that ſeem to be always Even Temper'd People, like the Caſpian Sea without Ebb, or Flow, are only Counterfeits, and Politicians. There is an Art to conceal ones Paſſions, but there is none that can annihilate them. We change from one Affection, Appetite, and Deſire to another. Our Inclinations circulate with our Blood. They are transform'd each Minute, Hour, and Day; they vary like the Wind and Weather. Therefore never think of taking an Eternal Pleaſure, or Diſtaſte, in any Thing here Below. Prayer is good in its Turn, I mean, the Vocal Aſpirations. So are Faſting, Abſtinence, and other Religious Severities. But if all Men ſhou'd be perpetually at theſe Exerciſes, God in a little Time, wou'd have but few Adorers on Earth. The Ground must be left Untill'd; the Fields would quickly bring forth Crops of Briars and Weeds, instead of Corn. The Gardens then must turn to Wildernesses. There would be then no need of Millers, Bakers, and the other Trades, whose Livelyhood depends upon the Husbandman. And so for want of proper Sustenance, Mankind must quickly perish.

Adorers

I do not argue against those who seem to be Constellated to a Solitary Life; or by some special Grace of God, are strengthned to endure the constant Hardships of an Hermitage: Such as the Illustrious and Great Mohammed, of Mount Uriel in Arabia, who is our Holy Prophet's Tenant and Successor, in the Cave of Wonders. Such also is Ilch Rend Hu, the Celebrated Bramin of Cachemire in India, who lives on the Top of an High Mountain, is a Hundred and Twenty-Three Years old, foretells Things to come, resolves all Doubts, gives Infallible Counsel, heals divers Diseases works some Miracles; and in fine, says and does all Things by a Spirit worthy of Admiration.

The Mountain whereon this Philosopher, or Prophet dwells, seems to be the Landmark between Summer and Winter. For one side of it is always cover'd with Snow, the other with Blossoms, Flowers, Herbage, and Fruits. This over-looking a spacious Valley, which they call the Paradise of the East; That affording a Prospect little more agreeable or fair, than what the Poets ſpeak of the Riphæan Hill.

what

Ilch Rend Hu, has his Habitation in a Cave or Grot, which paſſes through the Rock, as Virgil's does near Naples in Italy, which thou haſt ſeen.

In this Myſterious Station, he appears like Æolus, Lord of the Weather: For 'tis certain, he commands the Winds to blow or ceaſe, at the leaſt word, within the Verge of his accuſtom'd Walks. If any Perſon dare prophane the Silence of the Place, with Words, or other ruder Noiſe, they are immediately ſurpriz'd with dreadful Storms of Thunder, Lightning, Wind, and Rain: ſuch as ſeem to threaten the Diſſolution of all Things: Which makes all Men in thoſe Parts, hold Ilch Rend Hu in great Veneration. He is the only Oracle of the Indies. They reſort to him from the Neighbouring Provinces, and Kingdoms, in all their Difficulties. The Grandees of Perſia, Tibet, and Cathay, ſend to him Honourable Preſents, deſiring his Counſel in Matters of Peace, and War. Nay they make devout Pilgrimages to him from the Kingdoms of Tunquin, and China. He is the Apollo of the Eaſt.

Iſouf, it would be ſome Encouragement for Thee and Me, to embrace a Solitary Life, if we might ever hope to attain ſuch wonderful Perfections. But as We have hitherto liv'd in the World, and ſtain'd

Our

Our Selves with the Common Vices of Mortals, We cannot presume to merit these extraordinary Favours: Our Old Habits are rooted in Us, and if We have Time and Strength to plant New ones in their Stead, yet they will not grow up to Maturity, but with many Years: For, believe Me, Cousin, no Body becomes a Devil, or a Saint all at once.

Paris, 6th. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year 1670.

LETTER

LETTER VII.

To the Chiaux Bassa.

IT appears, That the King of France's Fortune not only procures him constant Victories and Triumphs in Europe, but such a Renown and Character in foreign Countries, as stimulates the most Remote Princes, and Puissant Monarchs of the Earth, to court his Alliance and Friendship.

Here is at this present, an Embassador come from the Coasts of Guinea, in Africk, being sent by the King of Arder, one of the Greatest Sovereigns in those Parts, possessing an Absolute and Uncontroulable Authority over his Subjects, as the Grand Signior does over the Faithful Osmans. But we will not compare the narrow Limits of his Dominion, with the vast and unbounded Extent of the Mussulman Empire, the Inheritance of our Sublime Sultan, the Lord of the Globe at large. Suffice it, that this Black Prince is a Wise Man, descended of a Race of Sages; and, that Policy of State is as natural to him, as common Craft or Cunning to the meanest of the Vulgar. He knows how to make War or Peace abroad, and to keep his Subjects in Awe at Home.

Surely,

Surely, there is a Force and Charm in the Derivative Blood of Heroick and VVise Ancestors, which secretly inspires their Offspring with Maxims, and Principles, agreeable to the Inclinations, Aims, and Purposes of the Family from whence they descend. And where 'tis experienc'd otherwise, it may be suppos'd That change of Climates, unhappy Marriages, or some over-ruling Misfortunes in the VVorld, have caus'd the Degeneracy. For so some Noble Vegetables of Asia, and other Quarters of the Earth, lying near the Sun, will not prosper, if once transplanted into the Cold and Barren Soils of Northern Europe. Thus Poverty, Disgrace, and other abject Circumstances, chill the Greatest Spirits, and spoil their Growth. Yet there is an Inborn Excellency in some Natures, which with Evenness supports the Stroaks of Fortune, and pushes through all Difficulties to attain its End.

So this great African King, informing himself, not only by French Vessels Trading in his Ports, but also by other Ships of Christendom, of the Grandeur of the French King, his VVealth and Puissance by Sea and Land, with the vast Interest and Traffick he has in both the Indies, thought it high time to seek his Friendship, whose Enmity, would, in all Probability, be very Fatal to him: For he had heard of his Conquests far and wide. 'Tis no matter, whether by Valour, or good Conduct, we make our Selves Happy. One is as laudable as the other, in the unequal War we are engag'd in with Fate, Providence, and Chance; with Angels, Men, and Devils; with Heaven, Earth, and Hell.

I ſpeak this in reference to the Celebrated Proweſs, Magnanimity, Riches, and Strength of this Negro King; who need not yield to the King of Benin, his next Neighbour, and the moſt Potent of all the South-Weſtern Maritime Princes of Africk, nor to any of his other Neighbours beſides; yet could not think himſelf ſafe, or be at reſt, till he had ſent his Embaſſy to the King of France, offering his Lands, his Heavens, his Seas, and whatſoever was within his Juriſdiction, to this Great Monarch.

The Addreſs which his Embaſſador made to the French King, deſerves Remark. For after the uſual Obeyſances at the Foot of the Throne, he went up Three Steps, and then proſtrating himſelf Three times on his Face and Belly; he clapt his Hands in token of Reverence, and put his Fingers on his Eyes, to ſhew that he was not able to behold the Luſtre of ſo much Majeſty. This is the French Interpretation of his Carriage: But I tell thee, 'twas rather deſign'd as a Precedent to the French Embaſſadors, if any ſhould be ſent to Guinea, where 'tis the Cuſtom of the Country for all Foreign Miniſters, to obſerve the ſame Ceremonies to the King of Arder, and other Princes his Neighbours.

These Europeans, because they first found out the Art of Navigation; or at least, first improv'd it to the Discovery of many Remote Countries, value themselves too high; imagining, That all the Nations, formerly Unknown, are Fools, and know not themselves, and their own Strength. They thought 'twas impossible to find in Africk or America, Empires, Kingdoms, and Commonwealth, as strong and well Govern'd, as those in the Heritage of Japhet: But, 'tis a damn'd Mistake. For, the most High is Impartial, in the Distribution of his Gifts and Favours. Those despicable Blacks, whom all the Princes, and Nobles of Europe and Asia, buy as Slaves, being born of the Vulgar, are, nevertheless, come out of Regions, where Power, Riches, and Wisdom, are as much in their Zenith, as in these Western Countries.

They are all outwardly Flesh and Blood, as we are, notwithstanding the Contrariety of our Colours. And as for their Souls, they are even just as Capable of Knowledge and Ignorance, Reason and Folly, Vice and Vertue, Piety and Prophaneſs, Superstition and Atheism, as we are, who pretend to be Lords of the World, and all Things.

May Thou and I, practise Moderation, and not contemn any of Humane Race, though they be the Caphars of Mosambique. But let us always remember the old Turkish Proverb, That 'tis not good or safe, to point in Mockery behind the Grand Signiors Back. Adieu.

Paris, 3d. of the 12th. Moon,
of the Year 1670.

LETTER VIII.

To Mohammed, the Illustrious Solitary of Mount Uriel, in Arabia.

THE Grand Root of the Common Injustice which Men are guilty of, in reference to the Beasts, and of the Intemperance with which they corrupt themselves, I perceive, is a false Principle which they have establish'd, denying the Capacity and Use of Reason to all Living Creatures but themselves.

This Error was first publickly maintain'd by the Peripateticks, Stoicks, and Epicureans; and afterwards by Claudius of Naples, out of a particular Aversion they had for the Doctrins of Pythagoras and Empedocles, Two famous Patrons of Abstinence.

Heraclides Ponticus undertook to explain the Sentiments of the former Sects; and Hermachus those of the Latter. But, both of them seem to confide more in the little Tricks and Arts of Sophistry, than to use true Reason. For at the first Essay of their Skil, they strive to cast a Mist in the Readers

Eyes

Eyes, by dividing the Generations of Living Creatures, into such as are endu'd with the Faculty of Reason, and such as want it. Whereas, thou knowest, it is an indubitable Maxim in the Eastern Philosophy, That every Thing which partakes of Sense, has also Reason. For, 'tis the Mind alone, which sees, hears, &c, the Body of it self being deaf, blind, and void of all Sense. It is evident therefore, that since the Beasts do see, hear and perform all other Actions of Sense, they have also what the Greeks call νοῦς or the Mind in them, which is the very Seminary, or Native Seat of Reason.

'Tis true, indeed, we cannot affirm, That they possess a Reason so perfect as ours, since that Perfection is acquir'd by Discipline, which the Generality of the Brutes want. They have no Colleges or Schools, where the Arts and Sciences are profess'd, and taught by Rules. Nature is their only School-Mistress, and they learn her Instructions with abundance of Promptness, and Sagacity. They are Educated in the open Elements, as in an Academy, or University founded by the Creator of all Things; where every Thing they encounter, serves as a Book to teach them all the Knowledge which is necessary to their Well-being on Earth. And they need no more.

'Tis manifest also, That some Species, and Individuals, are more capable of Learning what is taught 'em, than others; even as we discern the same Difference among the various Nations, Families, and Persons of Men. But we do not use to say of Inanimate Things, That this piece of Wood is more apt to Learn than another, as a Dog is more Tractable and Docile than a Hog: Nor of Immoveable Things, That this is slower than that: Nor of Things which want Sense, That a Stone is duller of Apprehension than a piece of Iron. So could we not properly affirm of Animals, That one is more Crafty and Sagacious than another; more provident, chaste, Temperate, cleanly, and the like Epithets; if they were not by Nature, capable of Knowledge and Vertue. And yet we daily see all this true, in comparing one Species of Living Creatures with another; nay, and one Individual of the same Kind, with some of its Fellows.

When Antipater accus'd Asses, and Hogs of Nastiness, he did not consider how accurately Nice and Curious the Lynxes and Cats are, which, with so much Diligence and Care, hide their Excrements, that they can never be seen, or smelt again. So the Swallows teach their Young to mute over the Brims of the Nest. All which are Arguments of their Prudence and Discretion. Doubtless, every Animal has its peculiar Gift, and Excellency. One is more quick-sighted than another; This has better Ears than That; a Third surpasses in the goodness of his Smell, or the swiftness of his Feet. Let not vain Man therefore Boast, and Insult, as if he were the sole Engrosser of all Wisdom and Vertue; since the Beasts of the Field, the Birds of the Air, the Fish of the Sea, with all the Generations of Reptiles, Insects, and whatsoever is endu'd with Life and Sense, possess their Shares as well as he.

and

It is manifest also, That there are various Principles of Folly, Injustice, and all Manner of Ignorance, Error, and Vice in Humane Nature, equal to what we can possibly find in the rest of Animals, whom we so much despise. And 'tis a Question, Whether even the very Sea-Horse, who murders his Father, and for that Reason, was by the Ancient Egyptians, made the Hieroglyphick of Impiety; may not justly exchange his Character with Some of Humane Race, who make their Parents the continual Martyrs to their Ambition, Pride, Envy, Avarice, and other Vices.

I would fain know, Whether any Man would not take it ill, to be told, he is Blind and Deaf, because he cannot see and hear so quick as some of the Beasts? Or, that he is a Cripple, because he cannot out-run a Hart? Certainly, a strong Man deserves that Character, tho' he cannot pretend to match the Strength of a Camel, or an Elephant. And shall we then say, That the Beasts have no Reason, or Vertue, because they cannot discover those Qualities so Artificially as Men?

Beſides, Do not all Privations ſuppoſe ſome Habits? And is not Madneſs a Privation of the Habits of Reaſon and Prudence? If therefore Dogs, Bulls, Foxes, and other Animals are known to be ſometimes Mad, Shall we think it leſs fit to ſay of them, That they are out of their Minds, or Wits, than, to affirm the ſame of Men? And if Compos or, Non Compos Mentis are proper Expreſſions of any Beaſt, when it is Sober, or Mad; Who, that is not depriv'd of Reaſon himſelf, can deny, that they have the Poſſeſſion of that Faculty by Nature, as well as he?

As oft as I trouble thee with Letters on this Subject, thou may'ſh conclude, I am newly awaken'd to a Senſe of my Error, in not Religiouſly obſerving the Sacred Inſtitution of Abſtinence; which ought to be the Natural Conſequence of theſe Thoughts: For, in a word, if it be lawful to kill the Animals for the ſake of Food, I think we may as well turn Canibals, and eat the Fleſh of our purchas'd Slaves, or of our Captive Enemies, over whom we have, by the Law of Nations, an equal Right as to their Life and Death, as over our Beaſts.

Abſtemious Sage, I leave thee to the Divine Inſpirations of the Genius, which poſſeſſes that Holy Cave: I leave thee to the ſacred Whiſpers of Winds from Eden, and to the Sweets of an innocent Solitude, which which admits no other Society than that of Angels, or Beasts.

Paris, 26th. of the 2d. Moon, of the Year 1671.

LETTER IX.

To Zeidi Alamanzi, a Merchant at Venice.

I Receiv'd thy Dispatch, which informs me, that thou art commanded to remove from Venice, with all speed possible, and to visit Naples, Genoua, Rome, Padua, Milan, Florence, with the other Chief Cities of Italy: In fine, that thou art not to make a long Residence, or take up thy Abode any where; but after the Manner of a Traveller, to be always in a moving Posture from Place to Place, from one Province and Principality to another; that thou may'st take a just Estimate of the Strength and Riches of each State, through which thou shalt pass: That thou may'st dive into their Counsels, observe their Motions, watch their Designs, and transmit thy Remarks to the Ministers of the August Divan, the Mysterious Cabinet of the Earth's Great Sovereign.

There may be leſs of Profit in ſuch a Peregrination, for the Preſent, than in thy conſtant Reſidence at Venice, where thou art eſtabliſh'd in a ſettled way of Merchandice. But, thou wilt find abundance more Pleaſure: And if thou acquitteſt thy ſelf Succeſsfully, the Grand Signior will reward thy Merit. Beſides, thou may'ſt meet with a Thouſand Opportunities of Traffick, even in thy Travels. An Active and Diligent Spirit, cannot fail of Means to advance its own Intereſt in any Part of the World; and thou doſt not want a Stock of Mony to ſupport thy honeſt Undertakings.

Thou wilt meet with a New Sort of Italians, where-ever thou ſhalt ſet thy Foot: That People being ſtrangely mix'd, and deſcending from ſeveral Nations. Every City has a different Genius; which is ſo Remarkable and Conſpicuous, that they have all got peculiar Epithets: As Rome the Holy, Naples the Gentile, Florence the Fair, Bolonia the Fat, Milan the Large, Ferrara the Civil, Bergamo the Subtle, Genoua the Proud, Padua the Strong, Sienna the Studious, Mantua the Glorious, Lucca the Induſtrious, Ravenna the Mild, Capua the Amorous, Urbin the Loyal, Verona the Worthy, Breſcia the Fortified, Furli the Wanton, Rimini the Good; and ſo of the Reſt.

Beware of contracting Friendſhip with any Italian: And if thou doſt engage, be cautious how thou giveſt a juſt Offence.

Thou

Thou can'ſt not be too tender in this Point: For, as the Italians are very Conſtant where they have once pitch't their Affection, ſo they are Inexorable in their Revenge, where they apprehend their Love abus'd; and they are the moſt Jealous People in the World. If thou haſt made Two falſe Steps, never ſeek to repair thy Fault by After-Submiſſions, but Fly; for thou haſt wounded his Soul, and he will never Pardon thee, or let thee live to be Guilty of another Affront. They have a Common Maxim in this Caſe, 'He that Wrongs me Twice, 'tis his Fault; 'but if I let him Injure me the Third Time, 'the Blame's my own.

The wiſeſt Courſe is to be Civil and Modeſtly reſerv'd; not to be too frank and open in Diſcourſe, or looſe in Carriage. For this lays a Man naked, and expoſes him to the Contempt and Cenſure of ſuch as are more compos'd and recollected: And this is the peculiar Character of the Italians, That 'they think more than they ſpeak, and are 'many times diſguſted at the Perſon on whom they Smile.

When thou art on the Roads in Apulia and Campania, when thou beholdeſt the Beauties of that Luxuriant Soyl, and thy Smell is raviſh'd with the Fragrant Odors of the Hedges, and adjoyning Groves; think on Elyzium, Paradiſe, or whatſoever Place Nature has made Delightful; and ſay, It muſt be in this Country, or in ſome Region very like it.

As

As thou ſojourneſt at Naples, remember with what Pleaſure Virgil paſs'd away his Time there. 'Twas in that happy Air, that Horace penn'd his Admirable Poems. There Livy wrote the Roman Hiſtory, and Seneca his Morals. From thence we have the Works of Statius, Claudian, Laurentius Valla, and many other Learned Writers.

Forget not, when thou art at Genoua, the former Glory of that Commonwealth; how once ſhe did poſſeſs Sardinia, Cyprus, Lesbos, Chios, and did extend her Conqueſts to Pera, near Conſtantinople: How ſhe entred the Black Sea, planted a Colony of Genoueſe at Caffa, and ſtretch'd her Dominion to the River Tanais.

Thou wilt find Matter of Contemplation in Piſa, Milan, Padua, and all the Cities of Italy. But when thou art at Rome, 'twould be a kind of Sacrilege not to caſt back thy Eyes, and view her Antient Glory, when ſhe was the Miſtreſs of the World: When ſhe had Three Millions of Men within her Walls, and a Hundred and fifty Millions of Gold in Yearly Revenue: When ſhe kept in Conſtant Pay, at Home and Abroad, Six hundred, Five and forty thouſand Men. Her Foreign Conqueſts may be numbr'd by her Domeſtick Triumphs; which from Romulus, her Founder, to Auguſtus Cæſar, were no leſs than Three hundred. Julius Cæſar, augmented the Publick Treaſury, with Forty Millions of Gold. In the Reign of Aurelianus this City was Fifty Miles in Comaſs, and and the Number of her Inhabitants, encreas'd to Four Millions: And they were prodigiously enrich'd with the Spoils of their Enemies. Seneca when he died, left Seven Millions, and Five hundred thousand Crowns behind him. Claudius Isidorus, tho' much exhausted by the Civil Wars, yet left Four thousand One hundred and seventeen Slaves, Three thousand and sixty Yoak of Oxen; and of other Cattel, Two hundred and fifty seven thousand. There were commonly kept in Rome, Five hundred Gladiators, a Thousand Bears, and a Hundred Lyons. There were always Five hundred Men employ'd in looking after the Aqueducts, and Bathes of Rome.

When Cynias, the Embassador of Pyrrhus had view'd the City round, and was ask'd what he thought of Rome; He answer'd, I think all Rome is but One Temple; (for there were above Four hundred in the City) Her Senate is an Assembly of Kings; She is the Beauty of the whole Earth: The Flower of Mankind dwell within her Walls.

Zeidi, this was the State, this the Grandeur and Magnificence of Pagan Rome. But since the Incursions of the Goths and Vandals, the Lombards, Huns, and other Barbarous Nations of the North, Rome's Glory is Eclips'd, her Honour laid i'th' Dust. Whereas before, she lifted up her stately Crest on Seven High Hills, now she is fain to stoop, being humbly seated in the Plain of Campus Martyus, being not by a Fifth Part so large as formerly, nor yet so populous.

All

All over Italy, thou'lt meet with Reliques of the Antient Roman Majesty and Greatness. And in some Places, thou may'st encounter Persons of great Extraction, but very Poor, who may not unfitly be call'd the Ruines of Antient Nobility: Such as the Marquisses of Ceva, the Earls of Piacenza, and the Knights of Bologna, who are become the Proverb of Illustrious Poverty. Such also are the Counts of Lusigniani, Three of whom were once seen upon a Fig-Tree, eating the Figs to keep 'em from Starving. And many Italian Lords get their Livelihoods by selling of Ptisans, Limonades, Essences, Powders, and other Refreshments, to the Gentry. Yet they are Proud, and when any one Addresses to them, he must entitle them, Most Excellent, Most Illustrious, or else they'll Frown and be Affronted.

Zeidi, If ever it be thy Fortune to be made a Lord, I pray Heaven give thee an Estate answerable to the Title: For a Lord without Riches, is like a Soldier without Arms, very Ridiculous.

Paris, 15th of the 4th Moon,
of the Year, 1671.

LETTER

LETTER X.

To Dgnet Oglou.

THis Day, ſomething has happen'd to me very Prodigious, and I know not what to make of it. About the Hour of Quindinamaſi, I was ſuddenly taken with ſtrange Fits of Vomiting: My Stomach was in a Prodigal, or rather a Philoſophical Humour; reſolving to caſt off all Superfluities, and only retain what was neceſſary to its Eaſe and Welfare in this Life. I labour'd under a Thouſand Horrid Agonies, which made me fear, that either an Impoſthume was the Cauſe of ſuch violent Convulſions; or at leaſt, that they would end in opening the inward Sluces of my Blood, by too much forcing of the Pectoral Veins.

Whilſt I was buſied thus with ſad Preſages of a ſudden Death, (for I dread to be ſo unawares thruſt out o'th' World) I long'd and paſſionately languiſh'd for an Arabian Orange.

It happen'd at the ſame Time, my Mother Oucoumiche, Daria and Eliachim the Jew, were with me in my Chamber, and had been there an Hour. They all ſtood at the Window to ſee a Proceſſion that was going by. But when they heard the ſtraining Noiſe I made, immediately they ran to my my Bed-ſide, as Human Nature, Curioſity, or Paſſion, uſes to prompt in ſuch like Caſes.

VVith a faint broken Voice I told 'em what I wiſh'd for. Eliachim forthwith gives Order to his Boy that waited in an Anti-Chamber, to run with ſpeed, and buy the beſt Arabian Oranges he could find.

The arch Young Lad was gone full Thirteen Minutes by my VVatch, and then return'd with Half a Dozen Oranges of Spain, (for he could get no other.) But Heaven, as I have Reaſon to think, ſupply'd his Negligence, and unſucceſsful Mercating. For long before he came with that ſowre crabbed Fruit, Daria ſpy'd an Orange of Arabia on the Table.

No body knew from whence it came, or what kind Hand had laid it there. They were all equal VVitneſſes, That there was no ſuch Thing upon the Table, when they came to the Bed-ſide, nor a conſiderable Time afterward: And when it was ſuggeſted, that ſome one of the Company had privately convey'd it thither, whilſt the reſt were looking another way; Eliachim with ſolemn Vows and Imprecations clear'd himſelf; ſo did Daria, and my Mother. As for my ſelf, they all were ſenſible, it was impoſſible for me to do it, as I lay in my Bed. A General Aſtoniſhment poſſeſs'd us all; and the VVomen would needs have it to be a Miracle, whilſt I greedily eat the Delicious Fruit, not troubling my Thoughts with making endleſs Scrutinies, or ſo much as caring which way it came there, so long as I had the Enjoyment of it.

way

Yet I ceas'd to be thus Indifferent, when I perceiv'd my Malady on a sudden remov'd by eating of this wondrous Orange. And whereas I had lain for Six whole Days and Nights in a continual faint and languishing Condition, not able to get down a Morsel of Bread, now my Spirits grew brisk and fresh; I seem'd like one transform'd, or in another World. My Stomach reviv'd, my almost dissipated Vigor rally'd, and I rose chearfully to eat a hearty Supper. These Things, I must confess, put me, as well as the rest of the Company, upon thinking.

I tell thee, upon the strictest Examination possible, I am very well satisfied, that there cou'd be no Design, or Trick i'th' Case: For if there were, no body would be guilty of so many repeated horrid Perjuries in denying it: But every one rather would have been forward to own themselves the Instruments of thus happily and unexpectedly rescuing a poor sick Man, from the very Jaws of Death: For I was just then ready to expire.

Whether there be Magick in the strength of a Man's Fancy at such Times; and that through the Intense Agitation of his exalted Spirits, he moves the Soul of the Universe by Sympathy to exert some of its hidden and uncommon Faculties, and gratifie his necessary Desires: Or whether there be an Order of Officious Beings Invisible about us,

us; who have the Charge of Mortals committed to them, and are bound by the Laws of their conceal'd Kingdom, to assist us in Extremities, even to the Height of a seeming Miracle, where it cannot be done without, I know not. But 'tis certain, any observing Man may take notice of some extraordinary Passages in the Course of his Life, of which he can give no Rational Account, but must be forc'd to put 'em on the Score of Præternatural Causes. Such is our Ignorance of the Secret Operations of Nature.

All the Company were ready to list me among the Prophets; or in the Catalogue of Saints, for this stupendous Occurrence. But I had other Thoughts of my Self: For comparing this with some former Occurrences of my Life, I presently concluded, 'twas the Fore-runner of some grand, but short Affliction: And so I told them All.

I believe, my Dgnet, that God will hedge me in with diverse Kinds of Adverse Circumstances: He'll rush upon me on a suddain, like a Troop of Tartar Horse, who swiftly spread themselves all round the affrighted Country, and take Possession of the Roads and Passes. They hunt the Conscious Infidels from Dens and Caves, and other lurking Places in the Woods and Mountains. None can escape their Chastisement and Revenge: So my presaging Soul foretells some sad surprizing Inrodes from the Omnipotent.

That

That which I have to do in this Case, is to make speedy Expiations for my past Security and Presumption, to repair the ruin'd Fastnesses of Vertue, and build new Ones where they are wanting; to keep strong Guards, and lastly, to retire my self into a most profound Humility, and Complyance with the Will of God; which is the strongest Fortress, in time of a Divine Invasion.

Paris, 23d. of the 6th. Moon,
of the Year 1671.

LET-

LETTER XI.

To Sephat Abercromil, Vanni Effendi, Preacher to the Sultan.

THE Character and Fame of thy Exemplary Life, and profound Doctrin, tho' ſtudiouſly conceal'd and ſuppreſs'd by thy ſelf, have yet made a forcible Eruption, and fill'd the Muſſulman Kingdoms with the fragrant Odour of thy Incomparable Piety, and Vertue. Even theſe Remote and Infidel Regions of the Weſt, are edify'd by thy ſacred Rules and Inſtitutions of a Spiritual Life. The Nazarene Prieſts and Doctors, begin to harbour Emulations of thy Sanctity ſince they have ſeen no fairer Draught of true Acceptable Religion, than what the Chaplains to the French Embaſſadors at the Port, have copied from thy Principles, and recommended to their Friends among the Clergy of France. Inſomuch as Francis Malevella, a Blind Eccleſiaſtick, but an Argus in the Sciences, has publickly eſpous'd thy Theorems and practices; having in Print, now lately, undertaken the Patronage of a Contemplative Life, ſo much inſiſted on by thee; to which the College of Sorbonne have alſo given their Approbation.

That

That Excellent Man, tho' he has loſt the Uſe of his Corporeal Eyes, yet has a Soul transform'd all over into Light, by which he clearly can ſurvey the vaſt Myſterious Horizon of the Inviſible World, and penetrate the moſt recluſe and hidden Secrets of Eternity. The Age is raviſh'd with the Book he publiſh'd: He has Ten thouſand Proſelytes among the Roman Prieſts and Dervicheſ. None but the Jeſuits and Dominicans oppoſe him.

The former of theſe Orders is grown odious throughout Chriſtendom, for the Impious Doctrins they maintain, and the Enormous Crimes they have committed: being notorious Boutefeu's, Traytors, Hypocrites, and Secret Libertines. Their Colleges are eſteem'd, the Shops and Forges of Sedition, Faction, Publick Animoſities, Broils, and Wars, with all the Miſchief that is done in Europe. The Latter are not lov'd in France, becauſe they are generally choſen Officers of the Inquiſition: Which inhumane Judicature, was firſt projected by St. Dominick, their Founder, in order to exterminate the Moors from Spain. There is a Natural and Irreconcilable Antipathy between the French and Spaniards. They mutually abhorr each others Cuſtoms, Laws, and Humours: But, above all, the French can ne'er be reconcil'd to that Infernal Court, which tyrannizes o'er the Souls of Men, and puniſhes them for Thoughts. It is an equal Crime to ſpeak, or to be ſilent; to pray, or not; to go to Church, or ſtay at Home, Home, provided you are Rich. 'Tis Wealth the Inquisitors aim at, not the pretended Safety and Deliverance of the Church from Enemies and Rebels.

Therefore the Dominicans and Jesuits being look'd upon as Favourers and Patrons of the Inquisition, and for that Reason hated by the French; in vain they argu'd against Malevella's New reform'd Model of Interior Religion, which is but a Translation of the Original Dogmata, laid down by them. Thy refin'd Sentiments are Prolifick, as the Solar Beams, which by Ineffable Encreases propagate themselves without diminishing the Illustrious Fountain. Each bright and fertile Atom, by a miraculous Emanation, begets another; they multiply by an Admirable Progressive Issue and Expansion from every Point of the Refulgent Center, till every splendid Particle becomes a Ray of equal Length, and all together produce an entire Orb of Light. Thus thy serene Ideas of Religion, dilate themselves through the dark Side o'th' World, as fast as they Illuminate the Moselman Hemisphere. The Honester Sort of Western Franks, are already, by a Demi-Metamorphosis, grown half Mahometans, capitulating with thir Pre-possessions, Prejudices, and the Force of Education, for the rest.

They go to Church, but not to babble o'er a Thousand vain Tautologies, which are taught 'em by their Priests, and to ensure their Memory, are printed in their Pocket-Manuals, Manuals, or Books of Prayer: Nor do they number a long Series of the same repeated Oraisons on Beads, or use any other Exterior Form of blind and lame Devotion: But with inward Recollection, Silence, Purity, and fervent Application of the Spirit, they address themselves to God; or rather by a certain gradual Passiveness, Oblivion of Outward Things, and dying to themselves, they prepare and fit their Souls for the Divine Approaches: Thus having barricado'd up their Senses, and made Retrenchments round the Center of the Mind, to secure it from the last Invasion, and Assault of Mundane Objects; thither they retire, desiring Death, rather than to take Quarter by a faint Cowardise, or timorous Apostacy, and surrender to the World.

These People undergoe at certain Times, strange Drynesses, Desertions, and Sterilities of Spirit, which are the Torments that compose the most severe and painful Martyrdoms. A common Death, or any violent Dissolution of the Body, is but the Recreation, Sport, or Play of Nature, when compar'd with these Tremendous, Tragical and Dark Annihilations of the Soul. A Man at such a Season, seems to be reduc'd to an Eternal Catastrophe. His Spirit descends, and is engulph'd in the Abyss of Hell; or Hell comes up to him, and yawning with its horrid Dragons-Jaws, Murders the Soul with Baneful and Infernal Breath. Yet this they find to be the only near directest Way to Heaven.

Heaven. This is the Myſtick Fence, the Ditch, Baſtion, and Counterſcarp of Paradiſe. He that would ſcale the Walls or enter by the Gates of Eden, muſt firſt paſs through theſe terrible Out-works. This is the ſtreight and narrow Bridge o'er which each Soul muſt paſs, that would attain Immortal Life. Moſes, Jeſus, Mahomet, and all the Meſſengers of God, have pointed at this as the only Way to our ſupreme Felicity. Neither was it unknown to the Ancient Poets and Philoſophers, among the Gentiles. Orpheus, and Heſiod, recommended it in their Myſterious Verſe. Empedocles, Theophraſtus, Plato, Plotinus, Porphyry, Jamblichus, with many others, improv'd the Sacred Revelation, adding new Lights unto the Bleſt Diſcovery: And if we take the Hiſtory in a right Senſe, unleſs I am deceiv'd, Socrates died a Martyr to this Important Truth. Many of the Learned Hebrew Rabbi's have aſſerted it. The Perſian and Arabian Doctors, before and ſince the Holy Flight, have been its Advocates: And let not Envy refuſe to give ſome of the Chriſtian Prieſts their due Acknowledgment, who preach'd this Doctrin, in the Primitive Aſſemblies, taught it in the Publick Schools, and enſur'd it to Poſterity in Learned Manuſcripts. Such were Origen and Ammonius, Clemens of Alexandria, Simplicius, Chryſoſtom, Tertullian, Auguſtine: and in more modern Times, Thomas of Aquin, Marſilius Ficinus, Bonadventure, with many others:

And

And 'tis esteem'd the Height of Indian Religion to this Day; the Bramins delivering it as an Hereditary Article of Faith, and Point of Practice, from Immemorable Ages. Since therefore all Religions in the World agree in this, notwithstanding their other Ceremonial and Speculative Differences; Doubtless it is the Voice and Will of God, not the Contrivance or Innovation of Man.

Reverend Effendi, It is a common Proverb among the Christians, That wheresoever God has a Temple, the Devil has a Chappel. That cunning Spirit, like a Serpent, winds himself into outward Forms and Ceremonies of Devotion. But he that builds a Mosque in the Center of his Soul, may bid Defiance to Satan. For that's the Throne of God, near which the Dæmon cannot approach.

May thou and I, live always skreen'd behind our Selves; for in that Dark Recess from Visible Things, the Eternal loves to manifest his otherwise Invisible Light. Adieu.

Paris, the 17th. of the 6th. Moon, of the Year 1670.

M LET-

LETTER XII.

To Cara Hali, Physician to the Grand Signior.

AFter all my Scepticisms, I am this Hour to believe, there is Something of us that remains Immortal, and Incorruptible, when our Grosser Bodies are dissolv'd. Call it what you will; an Astral Body, a Ghost, a Spirit, or any thing else, I am sensible some Part of us will never die. What signifies the Noise of Disputes of Words, the Dark Resolves of Plato's Cave? Let it be Substance or Accident, Matter or Form, or a Result of all: There is still a certain Portion of our Nature, against which the Stroak of Death, nor of Ten Hundred Thousand Deaths, can never prevail. We may be Chang'd, indeed, and Masquerade it up and down, perhaps through Infinite Worlds, in so many different Disguises: But we can never be Annihilated, or made Nothing. We cannot be excluded from the Eternal List of Atomes. The Loss or Absence of the least Particle from the Universe, wou'd either cause the Loudest Never-ending Thunders and Lightnings, or an Everlasting Silence, Sullenness, and Darkness. This mighty Aggregate, and Stupendous Heap of Beings wou'd fall to Ruin, if there were the least Vacuum, smallest Mite missing. Steal but the most Indivisible Atom from the rest, and down comes all the Fabrick: For one supports another by an Inseparable Adhesion, Reciprocal Contiguity, and Mathematical Fitness. They are so cunningly hitch'd and knit together, so closely fasten'd and indented each with other, by the Original Art, or Chance which form'd the World, that all the Motions of the Grand Machine would at an instant stop, in such a Case; as does a Watch, when the least Tooth is missing from any one of the contiguous Wheels. Every Thing in Nature, is full and pregnant. Neither is there be any other Emptiness, save what we think we see in Bottles, or other Hollow Vessels, which when they are void of Water, Wine, or other Liquors, it is but to be cramm'd brim-full of Air, which Element insinuates and crowds it self into each Diminutive Crany, Chink, and Pore of grosser Substances: So if the Airy Atomes have any Hollownesses in them, the smallest Vacuum possible is still supply'd with its full Measure of the purer Æther, and that again, with some Matter more refin'd, if any such there be, or else it drinks full Draughts of Immaterial Essences: And by such a Subordinate Gradation, Humane Souls, though in themselves, perhaps, pure Incorporeal Spirits, are yet fasten'd and cemented to our Bodies. Thus is one Being successively, and Eternally either a Syringe, or a Sponge to another, as the Elements inebriate one another by Turns;

an Universal Epicurism and Drunken Reigns.

So the Hot Stomach of the Earth, par with Inward Mineral Fires, greedily gu down the very salt unpalatable Lees o
Sea, rather than be adry: With a Thou
Thousand gaping Throats, it gulps Beverage which Neptune's Deep and Cellar runs withal. It pants, and eternally, the thick ropy Settlements the Ocean's Bottom. These are distill'd in hidden Limbecks, Cylinders, and Chymical Vessels below, that so the Channels on the Superficies, may be con ly supply'd, with more refined Liq through the Springs and Fountains: And the Globe not having quench'd its Thirst this perpetual Draught, continually sup the Rain, a Liquor more sublime and than all the rest. But this is only on tain Holy-days of Fate, when the Celes Powers, the Planets, Stars, and Constella order a Dunalma for the Vegetable R
Below, to refresh the Herbs, the Corn, Trees, with Banquets from the Clouds.
the Big-belly'd Tuns above are rowl'd o their hidden Store-houses, and broach the Conduits of the Upper Region spout run with plentiful Showers and Cataracts Nature's Seminal Juice, the Radical chearing Nectar of Heaven. The gree Soil imbibes the sacred strong Cascade; joyful Turf is frolicksome, and swallo down large Bumpers of the Elemen

Whilst the least dry and crumbling ...p of the late fainting Glebe, has Drops ... Supernaculum's enough to revel on; till ...-colour'd Iris, the Major-Domo in these ...y Festivals, perceiving the tender Seeds ... Roots are well nigh fuddl'd with what ...econd Hand they have exhausted from ...ver-laden Ground, makes her Appearance ... Clouds, inviting all the Guests to a ...did Collation of warm Beams and Rays, ... which the Sun is minded to regale ...

... grateful, soft and chearful Noise was ... throughout the Room before. The ... and Air were in a merry Humour. ... pleas'd with the Debauch, they would ... sat till Morning at it, being loth to ... their Liquor behind 'em, or change it ... dry Meat. But at the sight of Iris, eve- ... one chang'd Countenance; an universal ... ran throughout the Hall; they ... sorry thus to be baulk'd i'the midst of ... Mirth. Till courtly Zephyrs come ... their soft Compliments, and tell 'em, ... necessary for their Ease and Health: ... are the Tuns, and Bottles remov'd; ... all the drunken Tackle. The Table ... is spread, and cover'd with a Rich ... of glittering Chargers, sent from ...

That Sponging Planet only lives by Bantee ... and Wheedles. The Illustrious Figure ... makes i'th' World, is always borrow'd. ... never wore a Fashionable Dress in's Life, but what he took up by Tally from the Source of Lights: For which he's bound pay so vast an Interest, that he would necessarily become a Bankrupt, did he not his broken Fortune, by plying Tricks the Earth. Thus whilst he mocks the lunary World, with his pretended he makes it pay for all with costly lations. He plunders the Elements the Pockers of the Earth, and robs the furies of the Sea: Nor can he forbear ing something from the Air; and he has stollen enough, he slinks away Dark, and flies to the other side of the there to commence New Shams and upon the Antipodes. And all the while Stars are full as bad as he: For, Brave High-way-man, that Luminary quents the Publick Road of Heaven he robs in open sight of all the World leaves a generous Viaticum, where borrows any Thing. But the Stars little Bullies of the Sky, are perfect Pads, Shoplifts, and Sharpers; they about i'th' Dark, through all the Alleys of the Firmament, and commit Thousand Murders, Rapes, and other lences. Some of their Aspects are as mous as the Fatal Eyes of Basilisks; carry divers Kinds of Mortal Poysons in Looks, which they disperse at Random this lower World. They strew the Earth Hemlocks, Aconites, and other baneful They also scatter up and down, the contagious Seeds of Envy, Avarice, and a Thousand black Infernal Vices, which take Root in Humane Souls, at our Nativities; and growing up with us, in time bring forth the fatal Fruits of Death. The ugly Race of Dragons, Serpents, Crocodiles, and all the Reptile Generations, with every Thing that's Hideous, Cruel, and Destructive on the Globe, derive their Natures, Qualities, Forms, and Dispositions from some Malignant Stars or Constellations, if Astrologers say true. So do the Scaly Monsters of the Vast Abyss; and every Bird of Horrible Figure flying in the Air. They're all the Brood, the Emissaries, Spies, and Agents of the Powers Above, sent down on Thievish Errands, to prey on other Animals, more innocent than themselves.

There is an Eternal Chase in Nature, whilst every thing is either on the Hunt or Flight. Thus Heaven purloins from Earth, and that from Heaven again. When we are first conceiv'd, our wandring Souls are catch'd, as in a well-baited Trap. And when we dye, 'tis but the Soul's Escape from One Snare to be soon trapann'd into Another. Perhaps a Humane Body may be our Prison again, or we may be attracted by some more agreeable Embrio. This Magnetick Star may draw us up to Heaven, or the wide Jaws of all-devouring Orcus may swallow us down into the Hungry Paunch of Hell; which God avert.

Learned Hali, let not thou and I be too ſollicitous about theſe Things: For all our Timorous Forecaſts are in vain. But, conſidering the ſecret Magnetiſms diſperſ'd throughout the Univerſe, and that every Thing attracts its Like, let us take care to qualifie our ſelves with Celeſtial Habits and Diſpoſitions; and then we cannot fail of being drawn up to Paradiſe.

Paris, 2d. of the 9th. Moon,
of the Year 1671.

LETTER

LETTER XIII.

To the Musti.

IN Obedience to thy Commands, I shall now proceed in relating the most Memorable Transactions of Former Ages, during the Four Great Monarchies; observing thy Instructions, not to be prolix, or over-curious in Tracing down the Particular Successions of Kings and Princes; but rather, to relate the Actions of Famous Men, the Wise Sayings of the Ancients, with such other Remarks, as may be at once Delightful and Instructive.

'Twill be no Breach of this Rule, to begin where I left off in my Former Letter, with the Death of Darius, and Succession of Xerxes, his Younger Son; there being something of Nicety in the Plea between him and his Elder Brother Artabazanes for the Crown: For this laid Claim to it on the Account of his Primogeniture: But in regard he was born before Darius was made King, the Succession was determin'd in Favour of Xerxes, who had a Double Advantage, in being begot by a Crown'd King, and born of Atossa, the Daughter of Cyrus, who first Establish'd this Monarchy.

As soon as Xerxes was setled in the Throne, he led an Army into Egypt, and suppressed the Insurrections in that Country. Then he fitted out a Fleet of 4200 Ships, on Board of which were above Five Hundred Thousand Men. He had a Land Army also consisting of Two Millions, and Five Hundred Thousand Soldiers of several Nations. With this vast Multitude he march'd against the Grecians; and to facilitate the Voyage of his Fleet, he caused one Part of his Army to cut a Passage through Mount Athos, whereby the Sea was let in, and the Ships might sail Two a-breast; whilst another part of the Soldiers, were employ'd in building a Bridge of Boats over the Hellespont. No sooner was this done, but there arose a vehement Tempest; which so discomposed those Northern Seas, that between the Winds and Waves, the Boats which made this Bridge, were all dispers'd, broken, and cast away.

This so incens'd Xerxes, that he commanded the Sea to be scourg'd with Whips, and a Chain to be thrown into it, as a Mark of its future Subjection. He also Beheaded those who built the Bridge, and caused others to make a new One.

Here one of Xerxes's Eunuchs, and a Particular Favourite of the King, sent for a Grecian of the Isle of Chios, who had formerly depriv'd him of the Evidences of his Riches. And the Old Man coming with his Sons to wait on this great Courtier, the Eunuch caus'd him first to Castrate his own Sons, and afterwards forced them to do the same by their Father, in revenge of his own Loss and Disgrace.

From

From hence Xerxes, marching with his Army by the Place where once stood the Famous Town of Troy, went in Pilgrimage to the Tomb of King Priamus, where he sacrificed Ten Hecatombs of Oxen to the Ghosts of the Ancient Heroes, and to the Divinity of the River Scamander, which his Soldiers drank dry, and yet half of them had not quench'd their Thirst.

After this, he came to the Hellespont, where taking a Survey of all his Land and Sea-Forces, which cover'd the Hellespont, and all the Neighbouring Shores; and Contemplating the Shortness of Man's Life, and that of so Innumerable a Multitude, not one should be alive at an Hundred Years End, he wept bitterly.

Then having sacrific'd to the Sun, for the good Success of his Expedition, he caus'd all his Army to pass over the Hellespont by his Bridge of Boats; after which, they drunk their Way through another River, which had not Water enough to satisfie half his Men and Cattle: For his Army increas'd all the Way, by the Accession of Soldiers out of every Nation through which he pass'd. Yet Leonidas, King of Sparta, with a small Body of 4000 Lacedemonians, gave Battle to the whole Army of Xerxes. And in a Sea-Fight at Salamis, the Persians lost 500 Ships, with a Considerable Part of their Army; which, with other Disasters, or Sickness, Famine, &c. so terrified this Great Monarch, that he posted back again, as fast as he could, by the Way of the Hellespont, which he crossed in a poor Fisher-Boat all alone, leaving Mardonius to pursue the Wars in Greece. But an ill Fate attended their Arms; for at Plataea the Grecians set upon them under Pausanias their General, and routed the whole Army, Killing above Two Hundred Thousand of them upon the Spot, and Burning their Camp and Navy.

that

Xerxes hearing these ill Tydings, fled towards his own Country, and by the Way set Fire to the Temples of the Gods at Babylon, and other Parts of Asia, sparing none but that Magnificent Fane at Ephesus, which was renowned throughout the whole World.

About this Time died Pagapates, the faithful Eunuch of Darius, who had passed Seven whole Years Mourning at the Tomb of his Master.

I must not omit the Treachery of Pausanias, the Lacedæmonian General, who held a Private Correspondence with Xerxes. And having been Twice accused of Treason, and as often acquitted, was the Third time discovered by a Boy whom he kept as his Minion; and, by the Sentence of the Ephori, was starved to Death.

Thou hast forbidden me to augment the Bulk of these Historical Letters, with Glosses, or Remarks of my own, or else it were a proper Occasion to put thy Holiness in Mind,

Mind, how great a Value ought to be set on a Faithful Man, and let Nature it self plead my Excuse for entrenching on thy Orders; whilst I vindicate my self from the Calumnies of the Envious, and beg of thee to rest assured, That no Man on Earth can be truer to his Trust, than the Arabian Slave Mahmut.

But to return to Xerxes, He was Unfaithfully dealt with by the Captain of his Guard; who, by the Assistance of Spamitres the King's Chamberlain, and Seven other Conspirators, kill'd him in his Bed with his Eldest Son Darius, and crowned Artaxerxes in his stead.

To him fled Themistocles the Athenian, who was suspected a Partner in the Treason of Pausanias. The King received him into his Favour, and made him Governour of a Province, adding the Gift of Five Great Cities, to furnish him with Money for the Expences of his Table and Wardrobe. And this the King did, not as a Reward or Encouragement of Treason, (from which he knew Themistocles was free, being falsly accused by the Athenians,) but he heaped those Honours on him, as a Debt to the Merits of that once Illustrious Enemy, now become a Friend, and seeking shelter in the Persian Kingdom, from the Barbarous Ingratitude of his own Country-men; who for all his Eminent Services to Greece, could think of no better Acknowledgment, than to put to death death as a Traytor, the Bravest and Wisest Captain of that Age.

Not long after this, the Persians lost 200 Ships in a Sea-Fight with the Grecians, and were routed at Land by a Stratagem of Cimon the Grecian General, who, after the Naval Victory, put his Men aboard the Persian Vessels which he had taken, and apparelling them in the Garments of the Persian Captives, landed them near the Enemies Camp in Pamphylia; who taking them for Friends, suffer'd them to enter their Trenches without Jealousie, and so were all slaughtered, except a few who escaped by the swiftness of their Horses.

About that Time, Pericles was made Prince of Athens, of whom I made mention in my former Letters. And Themistocles being made General of the Persian Army, and sent against the Grecians; rather than fight against his Country, or betray the Cause of his new Master, became a Voluntary Victim to his own Integrity and Honour: For, Sacrificing a Bull in his March, he drank off a Bowl of the Blood, and fell down dead at the Foot of the Altar.

The next War the Persians were engag'd in, was with Egypt; where, in a Battel near Memphis, they lost an Hundred Thousand Men. But sending fresh Recruits, they dryed up the River Nile, where the Athenian Fleet, Confederate with the Egyptians, lay at Anchor. Which so amazed the Egyptians, that they made their Peace with them; And and the Athenians set their own Ships on Fire, in Number 200, and returned Home with Disgrace, when they had been Six Years in Egypt. After this a Peace was concluded between the Persians and those of Greece. And in the First Year of the 84*th*. Olympiad, which soon followed, there was an Universal Peace throughout the World, which continued till the First Year of the 87*th*. Olympiad, at what time began the Peloponnesian War.

In the 4*th*. Year of the 88*th*. Olympiad, Artaxerxes died, and his Son Xerxes was invested with the Crown. But at 2 Years End, being overcome with Wine, and falling asleep in a Place where no Guard was kept, his Brother Secundianus, with the Help of an Eunuch, murdered him, and took the Government on himself. He also, was soon after dispatched by his Brother Darius.

I over-run whole Olympiads, without mentioning any Thing, save the Transactions which made most Noise in those Times. But I am unwilling to slip the Reign of any King, tho I speak but Two Words of it, that so thou mayest have a perfect Idea of their Succession.

During the whole Series of Darius's Reign, History mentions nothing Remarkable, but is taken up in relating the little Quarrels, and Reconciliations of several Provinces

Provinces in Greece, some Private Treaties between the Persian Governours of Lesser Asia and those of Peloponnesus, and the Overtures of Peace between the Lacedæmonians and Persians, the End of the Peloponnesian War, with such other Passages, as would be too tedious for a Letter.

I will only rehearse a Memorable Saying of Darius, on his Death-Bed, to his Eldest Son Artaxerxes, who was to succeed him in the Throne. The Prince being assured by the Royal Physicians, That his Father's End drew near, thus addressed Darius: 'My Father, since it is the Will of the Gods to take 'you from Earth, into their own Blessed 'Society, and that you have been pleased, 'with the Consent of the Nobles, to declare me your Successor in the Kingdom; 'tell me, I beseech you, by what Methods 'of Policy you have Govern'd this Empire 'these Nineteen Years, that so I may follow your Example. To whom the King Reply'd; 'My Son, be assured, That if 'my Reign has been blessed with greater Success and Peace than those of my Predecessors, 'tis because in all Things I have Honoured 'the Immortal Gods, and done Justice to every Man.

As soon as Artaxerxes was possessed of the Crown, he sent for his Brother Cyrus, and put him in Manacles of Gold, with Design to make him privately away; but at the Intercession of his Mother, he released him him again, and restor'd him to his Government of Lydia.

About this time, Plato the Philosopher being very Young, gave an early Specimen of a ripe Wit, in Comforting Antimachus the Poet, who lost the Garland in a Contest with Niceratus, at the Lysandrian Feast. For when he beheld the Poet extremely vex'd at the Ignorance and Partiality of Lysander, who knew not how to distinguish between his lofty Measures, and the flat Rhimes of his Antagonist, Plato bid him be of good Courage: For, said he, his Ignorance no more diminishes thy Knowledge, than a Blind Man's mistaking thee for another, would deprive thee of thy Sight.

When Cyrus was returned to his Government, he plotted to depose his Brother: And to win Lysander to his Party, he presented him with a Ship built all of Gold and Ivory. Alcibiades, the Famous Athenian Captain perceiving this, designed to give Artaxerxes notice of his Brother's Treason; but by the Way he was murdered himself by some Soldiers, hired for that Purpose by Lysander, who yet durst not set upon him in the Day-time, when he was armed in his own Defence, but in the Night set his House on Fire; and as he was escaping through the Flames and Smoak, they lying in Ambush, shot him dead with Arrows.

However, Artaxerxes quickly became sensible of his Brothers Designs; and raising an

an Army of Nine hundred thousand Men, gave him Battel not far from Babylon. In the Fight he was wounded by Cyrus; but after a hot Dispute, Cyrus was killed, and Artaxerxes got the Victory.

Parisatis, the Mother of Cyrus, to revenge the Death of her Son, caused those that wounded him, to be killed with lingring Torment: And inviting Queen Statyra, the Wife of Artaxerxes, to a Feast, she divided the Bird Rhindaces asunder with a Knife poisoned on one side, and gave the envenomed Part to Statyra, eating the other her self. Upon which, the Queen died in horrible Anguish and Torture.

The famous Deeds of many Heroes, are also Recorded, during the Reign of this Artaxerxes; as of Agesilaus, King of the Spartans; Iphicrates, Pharnabazus, Tissaphenes, and Tiribazus, Persians; with Conon the Athenian. But fearing to entrench on thy Patience, I content my self with only mentioning their Names, and so finish my Letter with the Conclusion of Artaxerxes his Life, who died of Grief for the Death of his Son Arsames, whom Ochus his Brother had caused to be Murdered out of Envy and Jealousie, because his Father doted on him.

If I have not answered thy Expectation in this Letter, blame not me, but the Historians, from whom I have collected these Passages, or accuse the Men of that Age, that they did not perform Greater Actions.

How-

However, in the next thou shalt hear of the Birth and Life of a Great Prophet, even Alexander, the Conqueror of all Asia. In the mean time, I plunge my Self in the Idea's of the Dust thou treadest on, and shrinking into an Abstract of Humility, I bid thee Adieu.

Paris, 2d. of the 9th. Moon, of the Year 1671.

The End of the Third Book.

LETTERS

LETTERS

A SPY at PARIS.

VOL. VII.

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. VII.

BOOK IV.

LETTER I.

To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Cuſtoms, and Superintendant of the Arſenal at Conſtantinople.

I Know not well, whether it is my Part to be ſorry or glad, when I hear thy Son is Wild and Prodigal: That he is Amorous, and very much addicted to Frolick with Women, Wine and Muſick: That he frequents the Baths and Play-Houſes, on purpoſe to make ſome Intereſt for his Love, that that he may ſometimes get a Sight of Beautiful Ladies, and have the Pleaſure of being admitted into their Company; That he hunts the Society of Foreign Merchants, the Houſes of Chriſtian Embaſſadors, and inſinuates himſelf into the Acquaintance and Familiarity of all Travellers who make any Figure in the Imperial City.

I proteſt, it ſeems difficult in my Opinion, to determine whether thou thy ſelf haſt Reaſon to be griev'd at all this, or not rather to rejoice, as at a Preſage of his Future Good Fortune, ſince it is a Manifeſt Argument of the Greatneſs of his Soul: And, let that alone to work out its own Way to Happineſs. Never check a Generous Spirit; For ſuch are full of the Divinity. They are the Eagles, the Lyons, the Kings and Princes of the Earth. Their Veins flow with Sacred Blood; their Nerves ſtrut with the Milk of Paradiſe. A Thouſand Excellencies poſſeſs their Hearts, and Ten Thouſand Perfections take Root in their Brains. Whatever of Precious is ſcatter'd up and down in the Elements, meets in their Accompliſh'd Nature, as in an Epitome, or Rich Compendium of the Brighteſt Eſſences; an Extract of all that's Valuable, Good and Lovely in the Univerſe.

Be not diſcourag'd to ſee thy Son Amorous of Women: 'Tis a Sign of a Good Nature. And he is look'd upon as a Monſter, or Degenerate Perſon, who feels no Warmths or Paſſions for that Lovely Sex. Women are ſent into the World on purpoſe to blow up thoſe

Gentle

Gentle Flames within our Breasts, which sublimate our Grosser Mold, and make us more refin'd. Love is a Sacred Frensie of the Soul, a Divine Madness, Elevating a Man up to the Pitch of a Santone, and rendring him the Care of the Benigner Daemons. He is every where safe; having the Favour of Gods and Men, as the Roman Poet expresses it:

Quisquis amore tenetur, eat tutusque sacerque.

And had it not been for thy own Experience of this Noble Passion, thou hadst not had a Son to complain of.

Perhaps it makes him Expensive and Costly in his Manner of Living. He wou'd, no doubt, appear Gay and Polite in the Eyes of his Mistresses: He wou'd be Generous and Magnificent in his Entertainments, Liberal to his Friends and Acquaintance, Charitable to all Persons in Distress. And canst thou really blame him for putting in Practice so many Amiable Vertues? Is not this better than to see him of a Sneaking, Sordid Temper, addicted to Avarice, and other Ignoble Vices? Remember thy own Genius, when thou wert Young; what a Passionate Delight thou took'st in Travelling: Yet, this cou'd not be maintain'd without great Charges. Consider therefore, that it is thy own Blood, running in the Veins of thy Son, which prompts him to a Noble Way of Living. And do not thou imitate those Fathers, who by their Severity, teach their Children to degenerate, instead of making

making them better, or more reform'd. They frighten them from the Paths of Innate Vertue, for the Lucre of their Gold, and Take Abundance of Pains to inſtruct them in the Methods of Covetouſneſs; as if that alone were the Zenith of Wiſdom and Vertue, whereas it is, in Truth, the very Sink and Seminary of all Vice.

I will relate to thee a Story which I have heard in Paris, which has ſomething in it very Singular and Remarkable, concerning the Affection and Care of a Father toward his Extravagant and Prodigal Son. This Old Gentleman had a Fair Seat, about Ten Leagues from this City, which had belong'd to his Family for the Space of Five Hundred Years. His Yearly Revenue was very conſiderable; and having only one Son, he gave him the Liberty of managing Half his Eſtate, when he came to the Age of One and Twenty Years.

This young Spark being of a High Spirit, was ſo far from harbouring any Thoughts of Frugality, that he cou'd hardly brook the Neceſſity of Living within the Compaſs of his Allowance. He addicted himſelf to Gaming, Drinking, and other Lewd Courſes, which in a ſhort Time conſum'd his Means, and reduc'd him to great Streights.

About the ſame Time his Father died, and left him the Remainder of his Eſtate, giving him all the Inſtructions that are uſual in ſuch Caſes; and, among the reſt of his Sage Counſels, he charg'd him, If it ſhou'd be his Misfortune to become a Bankrupt again, so as to be forc'd to sell his Estate, that he wou'd at least not part with that House which had been so long in the Possession of their Family: Especially he conjur'd him to reserve one particular Chamber for himself as long as he liv'd, which was the same where he then lay a dying. For this, said he, will be a Sanctuary for you, when you have no other Place of Refuge in the World.

his

After the Old Mans Decease, his Son fell to his former Course of Life; and, to make short of it, in a few Years spent all his Patrimony; even that very House it self, which he was forc'd to sell at last for an under-price, to supply his present Necessities. However, he obey'd his Father's last Injunction; and in the Sale of the House, made Articles for the perpetual Claim and Use of that Chamber to himself.

It was not long before he had consum'd the Money which he receiv'd for the House: So that now his last Support was gone. He try'd to borrow some of his Friends and Acquaintance: And in Charity they supply'd him at first with small Sums: But when he often press'd them, they grew weary of him and deny'd to part with any more.

The Disconsolate Gentleman, over-whelm'd with Grief and Melancholy, returns to his Chamber, hoping to find some Ease in that private Recess; where he might at least have the Privilege of venting his Sorrow in Sighs and Tears.

He pass'd away some time in this dejected Condition, when at length he cast his Eye on an old Trunk which stood in a corner of the Chamber, and which he had scarce ever regarded before. An odd Curiosity prompted him to rise and look into this Trunk, perhaps not so much in Hopes of finding any Relief there, as to divert himself and pass away the tedious Minutes. And yet 'tis Natural for People in great Calamities and Misfortunes, to flatter themselves with the Imagination of unexpected Reliefs, and to catch at every the least Glimpse or Shadow, that seems to presage any Good. Be it how it will, he fell to rifling the Trunk, but found nothing, save a Parcel of Old Rags and Papers, with other Remnants and Fragments of Silk, Linnen, and Velvet, the Reliques and Spoils of his Fathers Wardrobe. This was no Booty for him: However, he ceas'd not his Scrutiny, till he had quite empty'd the Trunk. When to his no small Astonishment he found these Words on the Bottom: Ah Prodigal! hast thou spent All, and sold thy House? Now go and hang thy self. There's a Rope ready provided for thee in the Beam of the Chamber.

The Young Gentleman looking up to the Cieling, and seeing a Halter hang there, being fasten'd to an Iron Ring, was struck with such a Damp, that concluding it was the Will of Fate, that he should fulfil the Words he found on the Bottom of the Trunk; he immediately took a Chair, or Stool, and placing it just under the Rope, got up and rais'd himself upon it, that so he might the better reach the design'd Instrument of his Death.

VVords

He stood not long musing: For Life appear'd now Insupportable to him. Wherefore putting the Halter about his Neck, in the Height of Despair, he kick'd the Stool away. When behold, instead of hanging there, he fell to the Ground, the weighty Swing of his Body having pull'd out a Piece of Square Timber from the Beam, being that Part to which the Ring was fasten'd. Immediately he was like to be overwhelm'd, and buried alive in a great Heap of Gold, which came showring down upon him out of the Hollow Place, which his Father had contriv'd on Purpose in the Beam, to put this Kind Saracism on his Son, now sufficiently mortified by so many Sorrows.

In a word, this made so deep an Impression on him that he grew reform'd, buying all his Estate back again with Part of the Money; and employing the Rest in Merchandising, grew to be a Richer Man than his Father, or any of his Progenitors.

Dear Pesteli, thy Son is Generous and Witty: It is thy Part to reclaim him by Methods agreeable to his Nature. For Ruggedness and Austerity, will make him but the worse.

Paris, 5th. of the 11th. Moon, of the Year 1671.

LETTER II.

To Codorafrad Cheick, a Man of the Law.

HEre has happen'd an Accident of late, which testifies the Zeal of the French for their Religion, as well as it discovers the Rash and Unwarrantable Fury of a Bigotted Desperado. This Person was one of that Sect they call Huguenots, of whom there are great Multitudes in France; and they are Diametrically Opposite to those of the Roman Faith in their Principles, and the Manner of Worshipping God; yet are tolerated by the State, to prevent the Inconveniencies of a Civil War, and the Effusion of Humane Blood. The King chusing rather by Clemency to win them to his Party, than by a severe Execution of the Laws in Force against againſt them, to compel their Conſciences in Matter relating to God.

Yet many Men are of Opinion, That this Royal Condeſcenſion will not have its deſir'd Effect, upon a Stubborn and Ungrateful ſort of People; who inſtead of being oblig'd to Fidelity and Obedience by ſuch Indulgent Favours, are apt to interpret them as Arguments of the King's Importance and Diſability to puniſh thoſe that reſiſt his Authority, and to harden themſelves the more in their Factious Inſolence: As it will appear by what I am going to relate of a certain Religious Furioſo, a Huguenot by Profeſſion. This Fellow coming one Day into the Great Temple in Paris, which they call Noſtre Dame, makes up directly toward the Prieſt who was celebrating the Maſs; and waiting a convenient Seaſon to execute his Purpoſe, juſt as the Prieſt was elevating that which they eſteem the Sacramental Body of Jeſus, the Meſſias, above his Head, according to Cuſtom, that it might be Ador'd by all the Congregation; this Ruffian ſtept to him, and ſtriking the Wafer out of his Hand, trampl'd it under Foot, and then aſſaſſinated the Prieſt with his Dagger.

The whole Aſſembly were aſtoniſh'd at ſuch an unexampl'd Attempt. They ſtood ſtill like Statues for a while, and ſuffer'd the Villain to paſs through the Throng, till he came to the very Gate of the Temple: When beginning to rouze out of their Stupefaction, ſome run after him, and ſo he was ſiez'd, and carried before the next Cádi, or Judge of Criminal Cauſes, who condemn'd him to have his Right Hand firſt cut off before the Gate of the ſame Temple, where he had been guilty of this Aſſaſſine and Prophanation, and his Body preſently afterwards to be burnt alive. Which was accordingly executed.

But not thinking this a ſufficient Expiation of the Diſhonour done to God, the Archbiſhop of Paris commanded Publick Prayers to be made which they call the Oraiſons of Forty Hours. He appointed alſo a Solemn Proceſſion of all the Clergy to the Temple of Noſtre Dame, to cleanſe it from the Defilement (which, according to their Belief) it had contracted by this Impious Action. The Soveraign Companies of the City likewiſe, attended theſe Ceremonies in their Robes of Honour, to teſtifie their Devotion.

Thou wilt not conclude me an Infidel, or ſay that I undertake the Patronage of the Roman Religion, if I condemn this Fellow as a Martyr to his own Preſumption and Arrogance. The Romans and Huguenots are all alike to me, ſo long as they are equally Enemies to the Meſſenger of God. But it is not decent or wiſe, neither Good Manners nor Policy to affront the Eſtabliſh'd Religion of the Country where a Man lives. 'Twas ſufficient that this Ruffian, and all his Brethren, had the Liberty of ſerving God after their own Way. It was an unpardonable ble Immortality to disturb the lawful Priests of the Nation, especially in so barbarous a Manner, in the very Height of their Mysteries, the midst of their Daily Sacrifice at the Altar of their God, where they profess to immolate after a transcendent Manner, no less than the Body and Blood of the Messias.

Doubtless all Nations are Zealous for their Religion, and we Mussulmans shou'd not scruple to put to Death a Head-strong Giaser, who wou'd presume but to pollute our Sacred Mosques by his Uncircumcised Presence; much less should we spare him, if he attempted to offer any Violence to a True Believer, as he was Adoring the Eternal Unity, after the way observed by our Fathers, and commanded by the Prophet. And tho' these Nazarenes are Worshippers of Images and Pictures; tho' they Adore that, which to all outward Appearance is but a Piece of Bread; yet the Precept of Moses ought to be regarded, which says, Ye shall not Blaspheme the Gods of the Nations whither ye go to dwell.

Venerable Successor of Moses and the Prophets, vouchsafe to pray for Mahmut, that whilst he dwells among these Infidels, he may neither make Shipwreck of his Faith, by embracing their Vanities, nor yet forfeit his Discretion by any Rude, Unseemly, or Violent Carriage against them.

Paris the 23d. of the 12th Moon,
of the Year 1671.

LETTER III.

To Dgnet Oglou.

THere are a ſort of Men among the Nazarene Eccleſiaſticks whom they call Caſuiſts. Theſe are profoundly Vers'd in the Learning of the Schools, which (if thou remembreſt) Honeſt Father Antonio, the Old Sicilian Prieſt, our Friend, us'd to term The Science of Husks. A dry, chaffy Sort of Knowledge, conſiſting only of empty, vapid Notions, windy Idea's, Diſtinctions made in Sand, which may be effac'd, alter'd, or form'd at Pleaſure. The very Contemplation of theſe Metaphyſical Trifles, is enough to put one in a Fever; ſo ſubtle is the Poyſon they contain: a ſpiritual Venom, which darts like Lightning through ones Thoughts, and ſoon ferments the Soul, boiling our Reaſon up, to Scum and Froth it ſelf away in Divine Jargon, and Religious Nonſence.

Theſe Men will ſplit a Hair in Divinity to make a Scruple, or to diſannul it. They raiſe a Duſt in the Eyes of thoſe that give Heed to them, and play faſt and looſe with Human Reaſon, as it ſerves a Turn. They'll make a Hog of a Cuſhion, and turn an Elephant into a Coffee-Diſh, with their enchanting Hæceities, Identities, Quatenus's, and and the Reſt of their Learned Legerdemain, the perfect Hocus-Pocus of the Sorbonne, by which they juggle Men out of their Senſes, and frame Chimæra's far more Monſtrous than thoſe in the Fictions of Ovid, or the more Early and Myſterious Poems of Muſæus, Orpheus, and Heſiod. They teach Men to ſtumble at a Feather in the way of a Religious Life, yet not to boggle at a Millſtone or a Mountain, where Intereſt calls for Reſolution and Speed. They ſtart more Difficulties than themſelves can anſwer in the Caſes of the Poor: But where Plenty of Gold appears, every Thing is made eaſie and plain. Mere Higglers in Religion; Quacks and Empiricks in Matters of Conſcience; murdering a Thouſand Diſtemper'd Souls, for one they Cure: Pretending to be Guides to Paradiſe, they lead Men through uncouth Paths, and intricate Windings, till they are loſt in Labyrinths of Error, bordering on the Confines of Hell. And then they leave 'em to themſelves; where, if they make One falſe Step, they go out of their Bounds, treſpaſs on the Devil's Frontiers, and ſo are either in Danger of a Precipice, or at leaſt of being taken Captives, by the out-lying Scouts of the Infernal Kingdom, from whom 'tis difficult to eſcape.

There were ſuch as theſe alſo among the Jews and Gentiles of Old, and ſo there are at this Day, in all Religions, Men who are ſevere in Punctilio's, and neglect the more Important Precepts of the Law. Nor can the Muſſulmans themſelves be free from this Embaraſsment of the Faith and Truth brought down from Heaven.

If thou obſerveſt the grave and ſupercilious Looks of our Imaum's Mollah's, Cadi's, &c. Thou'lt take 'em for the Juſteſt Men, the Holyeſt Saints on Earth. Mark but their Diſcourſe, 'tis an Abridgment of the Alcoran. They're ſeen each Morning at the Firſt Hour of Publick Prayer, walking before the Moſques, or ſiting in the Royal Cæmeteries, under ſome Melancholly Cypreſs, reading the Book of Aſſonah, or ſome other Spiritual Treatiſe. With Eyes caſt up to Heaven, or humbly fix'd upon the Ground, and Miniek Poſtures of their Hands, they act Devotion to the Life: Yet, in their Hearts, perhaps, are ſtudying how to Circumvent their Neighbour.

Go to theſe Perſons for Inſtruction in any doubtful Caſe: They'll hamper thee with far-fetch'd Terms and crabbed Problems: with formal Aſpects, and tedious Circumlocutions, ſtroaking their Beards, and ſighing from Deceitful Breaſts, they'll Induſtriouſly amuſe thy Soul with Dark Ænigma's, and trapan thy Senſe in Snares of Inſignificant and Untelligible Words; ſtriving to make thee believe, they are the Pick-Locks of the Eternal Cabinet, if not the Priny-Counſellors of Heaven: Whereas, the way of Piety is plain, and circumſcrib'd with certain noted Boundaries. 'Tis hard indeed for a bewil-

der'd

der'd Traveller, to find the Narrow Gate and First Avenue of this Sacred Path, amongst so many Gorgeous, Glittering Portals, ever standing open, and inviting Men into the spacious Fields of Vice. But when he has once enter'd the obscurer Pass, he has nothing else to do, but go directly on, without turning to the Right Hand or the Left; only regarding the fix'd Landmarks of Eternal Truth, invariable Reason, and sound Morality. To speak plainly, A Man's Duty is comprehended in a few easie Rules. And he that goes to render 'em difficult, by knotty, thorny Glosses, throws Stumbling-Blocks before the Feet of True Believers, and interrupts their Pilgrimage to Heaven.

My Friend, if any Pious Scruples trouble thee or me, let us henceforth be our own Casuists; and not by blind implicite Faith, enslave our Souls to Men perhaps more Ignorant than our Selves. The Law is plain and positive, in necessary Matters. What need we seek to entangle our selves with more?

If we perform our Oraisons at the appointed Hours, What matter is it whether we observe the Six Traditionary Postures, or no? We that are Illuminated, I only speak of such. As for the Phlegmatick, Dull Multitude, 'tis fit they shou'd be curb'd with Discipline, and made to observe the nice Punctilio's of Obedience. What signifies the old Versatile Turn of th' Head, from one ſide to th' other, as if we thought to catch the Prophet peeping o'er our Shoulders? Or, Where's the Senſe of the profounder Myſtery, of poring on our Fingers with extended Palms, as if we were at School, and learning our Alphabet; or imitated the clowniſh Ruſticks of Armenia, who as they work i'th' Fields and Vineyards, will make a Dyal of their Hand, a Gnomon of a Straw, and loſe an Hour in ſtedfaſt gazing on their dirty Fiſts, to know what Time of Day 'tis? Then the Myſterious Reſting of our Hands upon our Knees, with other Formal Ceremonies; What are they all, but an External Diſcipline, confirm'd by Ancient Cuſtom, and obſer'vd for Order's Sake? This need not trouble thee or me, when e're we have Occaſion to retrench ſuch Indifferent Niceties.

from

Nay, to go farther; if we ſhould neglect the ſtated Periods of Solemn Adoration, compell'd thereto by Sickneſs, Travelling, or any other Neceſſity; Be not diſconſolate, as if thou hadſt been guilty of a Mortal Sin. Some ſuperogating Work of Charity, will cancel Ten ſuch Faults as that: Or at leaſt, thou may'ſt look boldly in the Face of God, when at another Seaſon, on thy Knees, thou makeſt ample Compenſation; Or by ſacred Abſtinence and Faſting, diſperſeſt all the Miſts and Clouds of Guilt, that fate ſo heavy on thy Soul. The Times are all alike to him who is Eternal. There's no Diſtinction of Day or Night, with that Immortal Essence, who made the Sun and Stars, and is himself th' unchangeable Source of Light.

tal

So, if we shou'd address our Selves to Heaven, without the usual Forms of Prayer, or any words at all; we have no Reason to be sad, as if our Oraisons were Ineffectual and Unheard. In the Eternal High Recess, our silent Vows and softest Whispers of the Soul, Eccho as loud as the most bold and noisy Clamour of the Tongue. There is a Rank of Spirits among the Rest Above, on purpose made to waft the Secret Thoughts of Mortal Men to Heaven. We cannot fail of Audience there, when e're we send the least Ejaculation up, with firm Credentials from the Heart.

In a word, believe my Dgnet, That the Supremely Intelligent and Wise, chiefly regards the Intention and Fervour of our Minds, the Habitual Bent of our Souls, with the Innocent and Pious Actions of our Lives. He is not to be mov'd (unless to Indignation) by the vain Tautologies of our Verbal Oraisons, the nauseating Crambe of devouteſt Words, common to Hypocrites and Persons of Sincerity, to the most Incorrigible Sinners, and the Greateſt Saints: The humble Silence of a Heart resign'd to Destiny, is a Pacifick Sacrifice, attoning for the greateſt Sins, attracting choiceſt Favours, Smiles and Benedictions from the Eternal. This is the Discipline of Sacred Love; the Rule of perfect Life, the Secret Chart of the

Elect,

Elect, whereby they steer their Course to Paradise.

Which of the Prophets was a formal Beadsman, to number out his Oraisons at Finger's End, and offer up to God a short and vain Retail of Words, in Recompence of Infinite Bounties Past, and in Hopes of more to Come?

When Mahomet was pursu'd by cruel Infidels, and forc'd to make the Wilderness his Sanctuary, and hid himself within the Hollow of an Aged Oak, He did not seek to amuse th' Eternal with studied Forms of Speech and Humane Eloquence, or tire th' Immortal Ears with a Religious long Harangue; as if he thought to ensnare the General Mercy of the Holy One, in Trains of Artificial and Elaborate Language, or catch his more particular Indulgence, in a Trap of Subtile Rhetorick. The harmless Saint, with Heart and Face, compos'd with Self-denying Thoughts and Looks, stood like a Statue in the Bless'd Asylum: While gentle Rivolets of Compassionate Tears trill'd down his Cheeks, His Soul was pierc'd with Sacred Pity to his Enemies. He sigh'd, and wish'd, in short, whatever Blameless Piety cou'd suggest for him and them. Angels immediately carried the Prophetick Vows to Heaven. His silent passionate Prayer was heard. The Cruel Persecutors, blinded with Impious Fury, rush'd into the Desart; they spread themselves abroad and rode at large: One Traytor spurr'd his Horse through thickest thickest VVebs of low entangl'd Thorns and Underwoods, greedy of the Royal and Majestick Prey; whilst others took the open Paths, hoping to overtake the Prophet on the Flight. They seem'd to swim or fly, rather than ride, such was the Swiftness of their Course, Fierce was the Cry, re-eccho'd from the Hollows of the Rocks, and Valleys, [Mecca, for the Head of Mahomet.] Some stumbled at the out-creeping Roots of Trees, and broke a Leg or Arm, by a Precipitate Fall from off their Beasts; whilst others had their Eyes struck Blind by Interfering Twigs. One had his Turbant rudely brush'd off, and Scalp severely shav'd, by broken Stumps of Boughs, and Rows of Knotty Branches, plac'd and bent down by Fate, on Purpose to revenge th' Apostle's Cause on such a Miscreant as this. Another could not curb his Horse from jumping down into a deep blind Quarrey, dugg i'th' midst oth' VVood, where the proud Heretick dash'd his Skull and Brains upon the Marble Pavement at the Bottom. So Sensible and Vindictive are Inanimate Creatures, when a Good Man, a Saint, a Friend of God is wrong'd. The very Stocks and Stones, and all the Elements are touch'd with Sacred Sympathies at such a Time. The Frame of Nature feels strange tender Passions, Fits, and Qualms of Amorous Regard: And God himself, if I may so express my self, is rowz'd as from a Trance, and snatching up the VVeapons of his Power and Wrath, runs like a Champion to defend the Cauſe of injur'd Innocence.

and

But, I forget that I am writing a Letter, and therefore ought to be Brief. Beſides, what I have ſaid, is ſufficient to convince thee, That I have an Idea of Religion, far different from that which the Caſuiſts, whether Muſſulmans or Chriſtians, would Imprint in Men's Minds.

If thou canſt not think as I do, I condemn thee not. Uſe thy Native Freedom; but remember, That tho' Men's Reaſons and Opinions vary as do their Faces; yet Truth is Homogeneous, Uniform, and ever of the ſame Complexion, in all Ages and Nations.

Paris, 1ſt. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1672.

LETTER

LETTER IV.

To the Kaimacham.

THE King of France has lately made a League with the King of England. Whereupon the People, by way of Proverb, ſay, That Mars and Jupiter are now in Conjunction: Reflecting thereby on the different Tempers of theſe Two Princes. The One, Debonaire and Jovial, Exceſſively addicted to Women and Wine, yet not forgetting or declining Martial Affairs, when his Honour or Intereſt invites him to take up Arms: The Other ſeeming wholly taken up with the Thoughts of Conqueſt, and enlarging his Dominions; yet ſparing ſome Time for the Enjoyment of himſelf, and Proſecution of his Amours.

However, both of them now have proclaim'd Open War againſt the Hollanders, by Sea and Land. The King of Sweden, who was before an Allie of the Dutch, has of late declar'd himſelf a Neuter. And the Biſhop of Munſter, who is one of the Electors of the German Empire, is engag'd in the French Intereſt.

Thus are ſome of the Princes and States in Europe divided already; and God knows how far the Breach may extend in Time.

'Tis not altogether unworthy of Remark, what different Factions there were of Late amongſt amongſt the Hollanders themſelves, tho' a Republick pretending to greater and faſter Union of Intereſts, than what can be found in any Monarchy. Yet this Common-wealth was rent into Three ſeveral Parties: VVhereof One was headed by the Prince of Orange: the Other by John De-Wit; and the Third was compos'd of the Commons, without any Chief of Note.

I will not trouble thee with a Character of the Prince of Orange. He is already known by Fame at the Sublime Port. As to John De-Wit, I can give no other Account at preſent, but that he was a Perſon whom Fortune had rais'd to ſuch an Eminence in the Common-wealth, as made him the Prince of Orange's Rival, and Competitor for the Supremacy. Therefore he ſought to exclude him from all Employments and Offices of Truſt, that he might eſtabliſh himſelf in his Place.

The Third Party, whom we may call Republicans, were of Opinion, That it was not for the Honour of the Common-wealth to acknowledge any Head; judging that the Eſtabliſhment or Excluſion, the Riſe or Fall of the Prince or De-Wit, ought to be a Thing Indifferent to the States. In regard the Common-wealth appear'd in their ſight ſufficiently to flouriſh, under the Protection of her own Arms and Riches, without having any Need of either the Prince of Orange's Aſſiſtance, or De-Wit's.

However,

However, notwithstanding these Animosities of the Hollanders among themselves; as soon as they found themselves engag'd in a War with Two such Potent Monarchs, They all Unanimously chose the Prince of Orange, as General of their Army; Remembring the Famous Actions of his Fathers, the Princes of the House of Nassaw; by whose Valour and Conduct, they had gain'd and conserv'd their Liberties. On the other side, De-Witt having rendred himself Odious to the Vulgar, was by them torn in pieces: Such a Destiny oft happening to those who aspire to rise themselves by Unlawful Methods, and who are Ambitious to be the Ringleaders of a Faction.

The French call the Prince of Orange, a General without an Army; In Regard, the Hollanders being as yet only upon the Defensive, and their Towns wanting strong Garrisons; their Souldiers are all dispos'd of this Way, so that there is little or no Appearance of a Field-Army.

This is Certain, the King of France is the most Gallant Prince in Europe. He passes from Divertisements to the Toils of War; and from the Champaign returns to his Pleasures again. Thus, 'tis difficult to distinguish between his Labours and Recreations; his Pleasures and his Business. They seem to be near of Kin, that he takes equal Pleasure in both.

'Twas but a little before the first Appearances of this War, That he and his Queen were

were revelling in the Gardens of Chantilly, where a Royal Entertainment was prepar'd for them by Night. The Court attended them thither; and there the Roman Luxury was ſeen in Royal Miniature. As ſoon as the Gates were open'd, there appear'd an Artificial Day; ſo light was the Place made with Flambeau's and Lamps: Which being well plac'd among the Trees, with other refin'd Illuminations, adorn'd with Chaplets of Flowers, which preſented the Eye with a pleaſing Medly of Colours, interſpers'd with Oranges, Citrons, and other agreeable Fruits, tranſported the Company with exquiſite Delight. All together pretty well reſembl'd a Foreſt in a Chamber: For the Walls not being far from the Place where the King ſate, were hung with Arras, with a Multitude of Lights burning near the Hangings: And there was a Spring of Water in the Middle of the Garden, raiſing it ſelf after a wonderful Manner into the Form of a High Pyramid; and falling again into Three Baſons of Marble ſucceſſively from one to the other, made a pleaſant Spectacle to the Courtiers.

Then a moſt Magnificent Collation was ſerv'd up with Vocal and Inſtrumental Muſick, ſo ſoft and fine, with a ſudden Dew cooling the Air, which had a Smell like Sweet-Bryars, as render'd the Place a perfect Paradiſe. After which followed the King's Supper, far ſurpaſſing the other Banquet in all Manner of Delicacy and Politeneſs, neſs, as well as the ſtupendious Abundance of Diſhes. When Supper was ended, they were entertain'd with a Show of Something Admirable and New in Fire-Works. But, tho' it be ſo to them, I will not trouble thee with a Deſcription of it, ſince thou haſt ſeen far Finer and more Coſty at Conſtantinople, or where-ever the Great Sultan kept his Reſidence at the Time of a Dunahma.

After this, the King went to ſee the New Fortifications of Dunkirk, which he had order'd not long before. And in a little time, follow'd this Declaration of War againſt Holland.

So things go in a Circle; from War to Peace; from Peace to War again. However, thou wilt the better know by what I have ſaid, how to comport thy ſelf, in Caſe of any Difference between the Engliſh, French, and Hollanders at the Sublime Port. God inſpire thee with Climacterical Wiſdom, to adjuſt all Difficulties in their Stated Periods.

Paris, 26th, of the 3d. Moon, of the Year 1672.

LETTER

LETTER V.

To Cara Hali, Physician to the Grand Signior.

THou haſt born with a Thouſand Impertinencies in my Letters; and I know not, whether what I'm now going to write, will deſerve a better Character. However, I feel a Spirit within me, checking my Stupid Mind, in that I was not before ſenſible of my Error, but muſt make ſo late a Recantation. It is impoſſible for me to reflect on the vain and trifling Subjects I have all along entertain'd thee with, and not to bluſh at ſo grand an Overſight; Since I then ſeem'd not ſo much as to regard thy Knowledge and Practice in Medicines, which has exalted thee to the Honour of being plac'd in the Front of thoſe who take Care of the Grand Signior's Health. Much leſs did I preſent thee with Matters ſuitable to thy more Interiour Knowledge, and that hidden Wiſdom, which deſervedly ranks thee among the moſt Perfect and Accompliſh'd Mortals.

In Ancient Times, Theology and Phyſick were counted Sciences of ſuch a near Relation and mutual Dependance, that one cou'd not ſubſiſt without the other. By Phyſick they meant the General Science of Nature, Nature, otherwiſe termed Magick: Which comprehended under it the Knowledge of the Heavens, the Elements, and every Being within their vaſt Circumference; The Motions of Sun, Moon, and Stars, their various Aſpects, Influences, and Dominions in this Lower World: The Nature of the Winds and Meteors, with their Effects; The Virtues of all Plants, and Living Creatures; as alſo of Inſenſible Things, the Metals, Minerals, and other Subſtances found both on the Surface of the Earth, within its Concave, and in the Sea.

Such as theſe of Old, were Apollonius Tyanæus, with the Magi of Perſia and Chaldæa. Such was Hierarchas among the Brachmans; Teſpion the Gymnoſophiſt; Budda the Babylonian; Numa Pompilius at Rome; Zamolxides of Thrace; Abbaris the Hyperborian; Hermes Triſmegiſtus of Egypt; Zoroaſter the Son of Oromaſes, King of Bactria; Evantes, an Arabian King; Zacharias a Babylonian; Joſeph a Hebrew: With many others of different Nations; as, Zenotenus, Kirannides, Almadal, Thetel, Alchind, Abel, Ptolomy, Geber, Zahel, Nazabarub, Tebiti Aerith, Salomon, Aſtrophon, Hipparchus, Alcmeon, &c. And of later Date, Albertus, Surnam'd the Great, Arnoldus de Villa Nova, Cardan, Raymund Lullius: With a few more, not worth the Naming.

Theſe contemplated the Secret Force and Virtue of Celeſtial and Sublunary Things; the the hidden Sympathy between them, and the Myſterious Powers of Nature. Then having by a curious and painful Scrutiny trac'd out the true Genealogies of Things, caſt their Nativities; and diſcover'd all their Kindred, Allies, Friends and Enemies; knew by applying in due Seaſons, Actives to proper Paſſives, how to produce Effects appearing ſtupendious Prodigies to the Vulgar, and no leſs then Miracles: Whereas, all this is but a pure Reſult of Nature, help'd by Humane Art. So Watches, Dyals, Clocks, and Mirrours, appear'd at firſt to th' Ignorant World, the Effects of Magick: Eſpecially the Simple Natives of America, ſhew'd little more Wit than Apes or Cats, which look behind the Glaſs, to find the Active Figure of themſelves, that they ſaw in it.

And now I'm got amongſt thoſe poor Barbarians, I can't forget a Paſſage of a Peruvian Slave, who being ſent by his Spaniſh Maſter with a Basket of choice Fruit and a Letter to his Friend; The ſilly Ignoramus being faint, by Reaſon of the exceſſive Heat; his Journey being alſo tedious, from the Town of Lima to a Village near the Mountains of Potoſi, eat up the Fruit by the way, to Allay his Hungry Thirſt. However, not having ſo good a Stomach to the Letter, he deliver'd it ſafe to the Perſon to whom it was addreſs'd; never once dreaming, that an Inſenſible Piece of Paper cou'd tell Tales. But, that diſcovering his Crime when he came home, his Maſter order'd him to the Baſtinado, Baſtinado, to make him ſenſible of it. Then he was ſent again one the ſame Errand with Oranges and a Letter, and meeting with the ſame Temptation, he knew not what to do. At laſt, he hid the Letter under a Heap of Sand; wiſely concluding, That if it ſaw him not, it cou'd ne'er betray his Fact. However to ſecure it from all Means of peeping, he ſpread his Mantle o'er the Place; and then fell roundly to his Banquet; thinking he ſhou'd now have no Accuſer. In fine, he eat up all the Oranges, and was worſe bang'd for his Pains than the time before.

Generous Hali, thou ſeeſt I'm fall'n into the ſame Error for which I made Apology at the Beginning of this Letter: But thou canſt eaſily forgive ſuch Crimes as theſe. Suffer me only to relapſe thus far, That I may mention the Mathematical Magicians; ſuch as Archytas, who made a Wooden Pigeon to fly; and Albert the Great, who taught a Brazen Head to ſpeak: not forgetting him unknown by Name, who gave to the Statues of Mercury, Voluble Tongues, and Elegant Language; by whoſe Mechanick Art, a Brazen Serpent learnt to hiſs; and Birds of the ſame Metal, with other Helps, outvy'd the Nightingales and Thruſhes in their Melody.

I will not omit the Execrable Practices of Necromancers, or ſuch as Invocate the Dead, and with nefandous Ceremonies, Rites and Sacrifice, call to their Aid Infernal Spirits; bind them in Cryſtals, or ſome other Vehicle; and then Adore them, as the Ancient Romans did their Lares and Penates. These are their Oracles which they consult in all Emergencies; and by their Help, work Wonders in the World, foretel Things Future, and reveal the most remote and hidden Secrets, whether Past or Present. Nor is this a Fable or an Old Wives Tale; for, unless the experienc'd Nations of the Earth had found some real Evils, from Wizards, Magicians and Witches; they wou'd not have made so severe Laws against them, as to aim at their Extermination from the Earth.

Neither need we admire, that Women are as much addicted to these curs'd Vanities as Men; since they are naturally more inquisitive into Secrets, and less cautious of being impos'd upon: They're prone to Superstition; and, from their Infancy, bred up to observe their Dreams, their Moles, and other Marks upon their Bodies. They cover all the Depth of Palmistry and Physiognomy; besides a thousand other little Follies.

If they meet a Man i'th' street at first going out, they are encourag'd, and take it for a Sign of their good Fortune: but, if one of their own Sex encounters them, they curse the undesigning Female, and return home again. They observe Fatal Days, and Nights, and certain Critical Hours, wherein they try Experiments to know their Future Husbands. They brew Enchanting Philters for their Lovers, and Intoxicate them with Liquors, wherein young Human Cupids have been boil'd, with Herbs as powerful to effect their Wish, as those that Circe or Medea knew. In short, there is no Species of Sortilegy, or Divination, which vain young Maidens are not practis'd in. Which is a fair Disposition, or Introduction, to the Blackest kind of Magick.

their

But blessed are they, O Pious and most learned Hali, who being profoundly skill'd, and daily conversant in the Science of Nature, have never yet tainted themselves by any unlawful Commerce with Spirits Unclean, Infernal, and Enemies to God. They are Divine Magicians, having Celestial Characters, the Hidden Name of God imprinted on their Souls; whereby they are able to attract the Angels, and make the Highest Spirits obey him.

Hali, God grant that thou may'st be one of this Venerable and Happy Number. Farewell.

Paris, the 5th. of the 4th. Moon, of the Year 1672.

LETTER VI.

To Orchan Cabet, Student of the Sciences, and Penſioner to the Grand Signior.

IT has been a long time ſince the Chriſtians have openly publiſh'd Libels againſt our Holy Lawgiver, and the Book which he received from the Hands of Gabriel, one of the Chief Princes of Heaven: They affirm, for an undoubted Truth, That Mahomet himſelf compos'd that Volume of Light, by the Help of Neſtorius a Chriſtian Monk, and Abdalla, a Jew: And that it is but an Artificial Medly, a Hotch-potch, or Gallimaufry of Pagan, Jewiſh and Chriſtian Principles; cunningly ſuited and blended together, in order to gain Proſelytes of all Religions.

I proteſt by the Veneration I owe to the Eternal God of Heaven, That I really believe the Alcoran to be of Divine Original. Such is the inimitable Elegance of the Style, the Brightneſs and Force of its Reaſons and Arguments the wonderful and charming Contexture of Things Hiſtorical, Moral and Divine; That all the Writings in the World beſide, ſeem to me flat and inſipid, compar'd with this Sacred and Stupendous Pandect of Wiſdom. Yet, I muſt confeſs, I know not how to anſwer swer the Accusation of the Nazarenes, because I have never read any Mussulman Treatise, that undertook to refute these Calumnies: Which makes me apt to think, there is none such extant. For, I have made diligent Enquiry, discours'd with several Learned Doctors of our Law; but can gain no Satisfaction in that Point.

Perhaps, our Fathers in former Ages, were ignorant how the Messenger of God had been traduc'd by the Christians: or if they knew it, yet they disdain'd to answer such Malicious Lyes. And as for these Modern Times, the Zeal of Religion is grown too Cold among the True Believers. Every one is carryed away with Self-Love, whilst no Man will be at the Pains to defend the Truth, or manifest the Errors of our Enemies. Besides, it is now impossible to disprove what they say concerning Nestorius and Abdalla; unless we cou'd produce Authors of unquestionable Authority, who liv'd in Mahomet's Time, and so could give a more exact Account of his Life, than those that came after them.

However, if we consult common Reason we shall find it very improbable, That Three Men of such Contrary Principles, as a Jew, a Christian and a Pagan, should all voluntarily agree and jump in one Design of brewing their several Religions together, and drawing such an Extract from them as could suit with neither of their Parties singly, and was like to have all of them together for its Enemies and Perſecutors: There was no Ground for them to expect the Converſion of any Jews, ſo long as the Alcoran aſſerts Jeſus the Son of Mary to be the True Meſſias, the Word and Breath of God, Worker of Miracles, Healer of Diſeaſes, Preacher of Heavenly Doctrin, and Exemplary Pattern of a perfect Life; denying that he was Crucify'd, but affirming that he Aſcended into Paradiſe. Whereas the Jews call him an Execrable Impoſtor, Magician, Seducer of the Nations; and finally, by way of extreme Deriſion, they term him the Man that was hang'd on a Tree.

Neither was the Alcoran like to find any better Entertainment among the Chriſtians, for this laſt Reaſon; In that it denies the Crucifixion of the Meſſias, which is the Baſis whereon all the Superſtructure of their Religion is built: 'tis the Angular Stone of Chriſtianity. Beſides, they cou'd never be reconcil'd to Polygamy, Circumciſion, aboliſhing of Images and Pictures, nor to a great many other Things which the Muſſulman Law enjoyns. Eſpecially, they could never brook the Denial of the Trinity.

And for the ſame Reaſon, this ſuppos'd patch'd Form of Religion would have been as little welcom to the Gentiles, in that it took from them the Multitude of their Gods, and aſſerted the Unity of the Divine Eſſence. So that all Circumſtances being weigh'd, it appears that the Alcoran, ſince it has had ſuch Succeſs in the World, could not be forg'd by thoſe Three, nor compos'd by any Humane Pen;

Pen; but is of Divine Original. Besides had there been such a Triumvirate known in the Case, the Coraï's of Mecca, and other Mortal Enemies of Mahomet and his Doctrin, would not have spar'd to upbraid him with it: And if they were not known to the Arabians who were conversant with him, how came the Christians to be inform'd of this private Cabal, who were altogether Strangers to Mahomet at that Time?

Consider well these Things, and thou wilt have no Reason to give Credit to the Calumnies and lying Aspersions cast on the Apostle of God, by Unbelievers; but being more and more confirm'd in the Undefiled Faith, wilt glorifie God, who has guided thee into the Right Way, and not into the Way of Infidels, and those with whom he is displeased.

Orchan, as thou art endu'd with great Learning, I counsel thee to employ it in defending the Cause of the Prophet, who cou'd neither Write nor Read.

Paris, 15th. of the 6th. Moon,
of the Year 1692.

LETTER VII.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

HEre has been hot VVork this Summer in the West. The King of France has made such swift and large Conquests on the Hollanders, that they have hardly had Time to consider their Losses, and the Number of their Towns fallen into their Enemies Hands.

It always falls out so, when this Monarch goes in Person to the Campaign as he did this Year. In a very little Time he took Burich, Orsoy, Rimberg, Vezel, Rees, Emmerick, and many other Places. Yet this Success was allay'd with the Death of the Duke of Longueville, who fell a Victim, either to his Dullness or Temerity, in not hearing or not receiving the Cries of the Enemy, who demanded Quarter as the French were passing the Rhine. He was shot with a Musket-Bullet: And the Duke of Enguien, his Cousin, very narrowly escap'd; for they were both jointly engag'd in the same Action.

The Death of this Prince is much lamented, not only by those of his Family, but by the whole Court and City, as being the Flower Flower of his Time; having ſignaliz'd his Valour at the Siege of Candie, the Conqueſt of the Franche-Compte, and other VVarlike Expeditions. And they diſcourſe, as if he had been deſign'd to ſtand Candidate for the Poliſh Crown.

I am the more particular in this Relation, becauſe the Enterprize of the French King in paſſing the Rhine, is look'd upon as one of the moſt hardy and bold, that ever was taken in Hand. In all the Hiſtories of theſe Parts, there is not one Example of ſo ſurprizing an Expedition. And the Succeſs anſwer'd their Expectations: For the Hollanders were extreamly daunted and diſheartned by the News of theſe Exploits. In a little Time Arnheim and Nimeghen, were reduc'd to the King's Obedience; with the Fort of Skin, and Towns of D' Oesburg, Bomel, Zuthen; Deventer, the Metropolis of a Province; with Weifet, Tougres, Maſeick Dortemein; Elbourgh, Woerden, Arnham, another Capital City, with many more Places, too tedious to be rehears'd.

In a Word, ſuch are his Expeditions, Marches, his Sage Counſels, his Never-failing Succeſs, That the People think it no Flattery to call him a Second Alexander the Great, Timurleng, Scanderbeg, Scipio, Hannibal, and all the Great Heroick Names in the World.

To ſpeak the Truth, the King of France hath all along made an Illuſtrious Figure in the World. And their Famous Exploits in VVar, with their Heroick Actions in Time of Peace, afford ſufficient Matter for the higheſt Panegyricks, without an occaſion of Hyperbole's. Which made one of the Roman Muſti's in a Letter to the King of France, thus expreſs himſelf: "By how much the "Royal Dignity tranſcends the State of "other Men, ſo far is the Monarchy of "France exalted above all the Kingdoms in "the World. Pope Urban IV. ſaid, That the King of France was as the Morning Star in the Firmament of Princes; brighter than all other Kings, a perfect God on Earth. 'Tis aſſerted by another Author, That by the King of France's Shadow, the whole VVorld is ruled. And ſuch was the Eſteem which Pope Clement had for this Monarchy, that he granted a Hundred Days Indulgence to every one that pray'd for the King of France; to which Pope Innocent IV. added Ten Days more.

'Tis a Maxim in the Salick-Law, That the King of France never dies. But this indeed is altogether as True in Spain, Great-Brittain, and other Hereditary Kingdoms, till the Succeſſion fails. For then it degenerates to an Elective Monarchy, or otherwiſe into Ariſtocracy; or laſt of all into Democracy, or a Republick.

But France is yet free from theſe painted Forms of Slavery. Her Kings are Maſculine and Vigorous; her Queens Chaſt and Fruitfull. There never wants an Heir apparent to the Crown. And this ſecures the Nation from from a Thouſand Calamities, which attend Elective Monarchies, and more Popular Forms of Government.

What Injuſtices, Cruelties, Maſſacres, and all manner of Publick Grievances were complain'd of in Rome, after Claudius Cæſar had brought the Empire of his Souldiers? What Bickerings between the Senate, the People, and the Armies? Each Party would have an Emperor of their own chuſing, one Province was Emulous of another: So that ſometimes there have been Twenty or Thirty Emperors together, all claiming the Sovereignty. And when there were but Two, ſuch was the Obſtinate and Strong Diſpute between them, That they have been forc'd to ſhare the Empire equally, as the only Means to prevent its utter Diſſolution. Hence ſprung the Firſt Inſtitution of Colleagues in the Empire. And this was the Root of thoſe Factions and Diviſions, which encreaſing and growing up with Time, branch'd forth into ſmaller Schiſms; till at length, by the Ambition of ſome, the Misfortune or Careleſsneſs of others, or at leaſt their want of Power and Courage; that Mighty Empire was Cantoniz'd, rent in Pieces, and dwindl'd into that narrow Dominion which it now poſſeſſes under the Tutelage of the Houſe of Auſtria. And there appear no hopes of its ever being reſtor'd again to its priſtine Grandeur, unleſs the Bourbons, with their growing Fortune, ſhall Crown the Eagle with a Chaplet of Flower-de-Lys's, and change the Seat of the Western Monarchy, from Improsperous Vienna, to All-conquering Paris.

and

In a VVord, Henry IV. began the Design; Lewis XIII. carried it on; and this present King has so far improv'd it, by his Matchless Fortune and Courage, that in all Probability, this or the next Age will see it brought to Perfection.

Accomplish'd Minister, I bow my self with Abundance of Interior Veneration, to the Dust of thy Feet: I affectionately kiss the Border of thy Robe, and bid thee a devout Adieu.

Paris, 14th. of the 8th. Moon, of the Year, 1672.

LETTER

LETTER VIII.

To William Voſpel, a Recluſe of Auſtria.

THY Letters make me very reſtleſs and inquiſitive; They awaken New Doubts and Scruples in my Breaſt, inſtead of removing or ſatisfying the Old Ones. Freſh Queries ſtart in my Mind; and the more thou laboureſt to faſten me in thy narrow Superſtition, and bigotted Zeal for the Infallibility of the Pope and the Roman Church, the looſer I grow. My Soul is like a VVild Colt of the VVilderneſs, that toſſes up his Head, ſnuffs the Air in Indignation, and ſcorning the Bridle of Servitude, neighs for Joy at his Native Liberty, ſcampering at large through the ſolitary VVaſte; nor can he be wheeld'd by Humane Craft, to loſe his beloved Freedom, or change it for a Tame Captivity.

I have revolv'd in my Mind the Ages that are Paſt, and the Years of Untraceable Origin. I have examin'd the Times and Seaſons of the VVorld, recorded in Hiſtory; from Adam to Moſes, from Moſes to Jeſus, and from Jeſus to theſe preſent Days wherein we live. After all, I find that the Memoirs of Former Tranſactions are cover'd with great Darkneſs; yet there are not wanting ſome Glimmerings of Light, to direct a dilia diligent Mind, an Impartial Lover of Truth.

Jesus the Son of Mary, was of the Stock of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. He was educated in the Law of Moses, which he observ'd in all Things to a Tittle: And in his Life time he said, Think not that I come to destroy the Law, but to perfect it. His Apostles observ'd the same Rule, and in all Things were strict Observers of the Stated Precepts. So were the Primitive Christians, even to the keeping of the Jewish Sabbath; besides the First Day of the Week, appointed for the Publick Celebration of their own Mysteries. They abstain'd from Blood, and from Things strangl'd, and from all Unclean Meats, and such as were Sacrific'd to Idols. They had no Images or Pictures in their Churches, Chapels, or Oratories. In fine, they observ'd all the Necessary Purifications, and Ador'd One God with Unity of Heart, and Lively Faith, and Good Works. Whereas thou seest, the present Roman Church follows quite contrary Maxims. They give the Lye to our Lord's own Declaration; and positively say, That he came on purpose to Abolish the Law, and introduce an Universal Liberty; That we may now as freely banquet on the Blood of slain Beasts, as on the Milk of the Living; and Eat of Swines Flesh, and other Abominable Food; with as little Detriment to our Souls, as on the Flesh of Lambs, or other clean Creatures allow'd by the Law of God.

How

How can this hang together, or be credited by any Rational Man? 'Tis no wonder there are so many Libertines and Atheists in the World, when they find Christianity to be a mere Head of palpable Contradictions.

To this thou wilt answer, according to the common Rule of Divines, That during the Primitive Times, the Apostles and all other Christians observ'd the Law of Moses, for fear of giving Scandal to the Jews, of whom great Numbers were converted to the Christian Faith, when they saw that the Followers of Jesus did not deviate from the Institutions of the Seniors, the Statutes of the House of Jacob: But that afterwards, when the Gospel was preach'd far and wide on the Face of the Earth, and that many of the Gentile Nations were brought over to the Church; it was no longer necessary, for the sake of so Contemptible a People as the Jews, to scandalize all the Rest of the World, and impose on them a Yoke which they were not accustom'd to bear, and which wou'd tempt them to shake off Christianity it self, rather than submit to so Intolerable a Burden. Therefore the Church, to facilitate as much as in her lay, the Conversion of the Roman Empire, which then extended it self over the Greatest Part of the Earth; accommodated her Injunctions, Precepts, Manners, and Ceremonies of Religion, to the present Humour and Mode of those Times. And whereas the Gentiles eat of all Meats Indifferent; ſo they were taught, that this was agreeable to the Will of our Lord Jeſus, who came to reſcue Men from the Slavery and Bondage of Moſaick Superſtitions.

of

By the very ſame Rule, they introduc'd the Uſage of Images and Pictures in their Churches: And the Veſtments of the Prieſts, the Ornaments of the Altar, the Tapers, Lamps, Incenſe, Flower-pots, and other Religious Gayeties; were faſhion'd according to the Patterns they receiv'd from the Prieſts of Jupiter, Apollo, Venus, Diana, and the reſt of the Heathen Deities. Hence the Feſtivals of the Gods and Goddeſſes, were turn'd to Holy-days of Saints; and Temples before Conſecrated to the Sun, Moon, and Stars, were a-freſh Dedicated to the Apoſtles and Martyrs. Thus the very Pantheon it ſelf in Rome, or Temple of All the Gods, in Proceſs of Time, by an Eccleſiaſtick Dexterity, was Converted to the Church of All-Saints. In a word, Chriſtianity in all Things ſeem'd no other than Gentiliſm in Diſguiſe. And it muſt be thought a Pious Fraud, thus to wheedle ſo many Millions of Sinners into the Boſom of the Church, whether they wou'd or no.

Oh! Father William, doſt thou not bluſh at theſe Trivial Excuſes, for the manifeſt Violation of the Laws of God? Can Man be wiſer than the Omnipotent? Or will he preſume to correct the Ways of Him that is Perfect in Knowledg? Is the True Religion to be propagated by imitating the Idolatrous

Rites

Rites of Infidels? Or by proſtituting the Sacred Injunctions of Heaven, to the Caprices of Humane Policy? Did ever any wiſe Law-giver condeſcend to alter and new-model his Laws, to humour a peeviſh captious Subject? VVou'd he add or diminiſh any Thing for the Sake of gaining a Faction or Party? And can we think, that God ever deſign'd, or can be pleas'd to have his Divine Laws garbl'd and mix'd with prophane Indulgences, Diſpenſations and Amendments of Mortals? As if he had been Ignorant what he did, when he divulg'd his Statutes, and wanted the Counſel of his Creatures to help him out at a dead Lift.

VVas that Tenderneſs to be only ſhew'd to the Jews for a Time? And were they for ever afterwards to be ſcandaliz'd? In vain do's the Church daily pray for the Converſion of that People, whilſt by her Doctrines and daily Practices, ſhe hardens them more in their Infidelity. The Ethiopian Church is a ſtanding VVitneſs againſt her to this Day, where the Chriſtians from all Antiquity, even from the Times of the Apoſtles, have kept that Part of the Law of Moſes, which relates to Cleanneſs and Uncleanneſs, and preſcribes the Choice we are to make of Meats allow'd to be Eaten, forbidding thoſe that are Execrable, and an Abomination. Hence it is, that there are more Jews Converted to the Chriſtian Belief in that Country, than in any other Part of the VVorld beſide.

It

It was, in my Opinion, to begin at the wrong End, thus to neglect the Salvation of the Jews, our Elder Brethren, from whom we receiv'd the Oracles of God, and run to proselyte the Gentiles by such preposterous Methods, as render'd us in a manner as much Their Converts, as them Ours: Since we shuffl'd our Religions together at Random, and made a Lottery of Divine and Humane Institutions; exchanging one Species of Superstition and Idolatry for another; bartering Jupiter for Peter; and Mars for Paul; Venus and her Cupid, for the Virgin Mary, and her Child Jesus: A God for an Apostle; and a Demy-God for a Martyr: VVhilst the Law it self, which is the Foundation and Main Prop of True Religion, lies neglected and trampled under Foot.

The Christians of the East, seem more Excusable than we: For, tho' they are not so punctual in observing all the Niceties of Cleanness and Uncleanness, Meats and Drinks, &c. as those of Ethiopia: Yet they will not taste of Blood, or any Thing Strangl'd. And their *Ecclesiastick*s abstain from all Manner of Flesh, during the whole Course of their Lives. They observe also many Purifications, and wholsome Rules of Life. VVhereas we of the Latin Church, wallow in all Manner of Filthiness like Swine, and bless our selves, as if we were the Only True Catholicks, the Elect of God, in the High Road to Heaven. I am at a Loss what to think of these Things, Neither can I ever hope to see the Jews converted, till these Offences are remov'd.

can

There is a Rumour spread up and down, of the Wandring Jew. I suppose thou hast heard of such a Man. He is now at Astracan, and Preaches every where that there will be a Reformation of Christianity, after the Year 1700. That the Jews shall be Converted, and all this to be perform'd by the Admiral Gifts of an English Man, who shall restore Truth to its Primitive Lustre and Integrity. They say, He will cause the Images and Pictures to be utterly destroy'd, and the Law of Moses to be kept, so far as relates to Cleanness and Uncleanness, &c. That in his Days, the Temple of Solomon, shall be rebuilt, and the World shall put on a new Face.

Father William, I wou'd not have thee despise these Things, since they have been long foretold by Joachim the Abbot, by St. Methodius, by Nostredamus the French Prophet, and by many other Eminent Persons, whose Writings are extant, and many of their Predictions are already come to pass. The Roman Church manifestly stands in Need of a Reformation: And since the Governours of it cannot be prevail'd on to set their Hands to so Pious a Work, we know not but God may effect it by the means of a Stranger, some Obscure Person at present, but whose Light may shine hereafter through all Generations.

Father

Father William, thou wilt pardon the Liberty I take in discoursing about these Things, and remember, that 'tis a Work of Charity to bear with the Impertinencies of others. However, I thank God I'm out of the Parlies of the Spanish Inquisition.

Paris, 1st. of the 10th. Moon,
of the Year 1672.

LETTER IX.

To Codabafrad Cheik, a Man of the Law.

I Have a Kinsman by Blood, residing at Astracan, in the Parts of Moscovy. His Name is Isouf, a Man of an ardent Spirit; and active Wit; a great Traveller, and one who makes good that Character by the solid Remarks he has made on the most Important Things in his Way; through Asia, Africk, and Europe. For he is not in the Number of those who come home from Foreign Countries, only laden with Vanities and Trifles.

From him I receive frequent Dispatches, since his being setled at Astracan, in Quality of a Merchant; where he improves his Estate to great Advantage, enjoys the Innocent Pleasures of Humane Life, without suffering himself to be tainted with the Vices which are unprofitable, troublesome, and bring Scandal to a Man's Reputation. For some Vices, thou know'st, pass into the Predicament of Vertues, when Interest or Necessity give an Indulgence.

cent

There is a mutual Intercourse between my Cousin and me: And among other Letters which he sends me, I receiv'd one lately; wherein he informs me, that he whom they call the Wandring Jew, of whom I made mention formerly in one of my Dispaches to the Sublime Port, is now at Astracan; That he preaches openly in the Markets, and at the Bourse or Exchange; not refusing private Conversation with any that desire it.

There is a great Conflux of People from all Nations, and of all Religions to that City. He carries himself with an equal Indifference to every various Sect, and they all seem mightily taken with his Doctrines. The Chief Thing he aims at in all his Discourses, is, That there will e'er long be an Universal Change of Religion over all the Earth; and that every Nation on the Globe shall worship One God, obey the Law of Jesus the Son of Mary, and embrace One Faith. When he insists on this, he seems to be void of all Doubts and Hesitations; speaks Magisterially, like a Prophet, who has receiv'd a sure and certain Revelation of the Thing he foretells. But when any

Dispute

Diſpute with him, not in a Spirit of Captiouſneſs, but to ſift the Truth; he freely condeſcends to anſwer all their Objections with ſolid Reaſons, and to convince them by their own Principles, that it muſt be ſo.

He ſays, That about the Year 1700 of the Chriſtians Hegira, the Invincible Oſmani ſhall break down the Fences of Europe, and ſhall overflow all Chriſtendom like a mighty Torrent, that has over-top'd its Banks. In thoſe Days there ſhall be great Deſolation in Hungary, Poland, Germany, France, and other Regions of the Weſt. Only Denmark, Sweden, Muſcovy, and other Countries of the North ſhall remain untouch'd. But above all other Nations, he ſays, Italy will be made a perfect Wilderneſs, her Cities laid in Aſhes, her Immenſe Wealth plunder'd and carried away by the greedy Tartars, Arabians and Turks; who will ſpare neither Age nor Sex, putting all to the Sword, eſpecially the Eccleſiaſticks, none of which ſhall eſcape the Publick Vengeance, ſave Three Cardinals, ſincere and Holy Perſons, who ſhall fly into England for Sanctuary by the way of the Sea.

That Iſland, he ſays, ſhall become the Refuge of all ſuch who can eſcape the Calamities involving the adjacent Countries. Thither they ſhall flock with their Wives and Children and all their Wealth, when they ſhall hear of the approaching Terrors, the preſent Devaſtation of Italy, and the Univerſal Universal Conquests of the Ottomans. The King of the Country shall receive those distress'd Fugitives with open Arms, and shall assign them certain Portions of Land, where they may build Houses and Habitations for themselves and their Families; there being Abundance of waste Ground in that Island, which they may manure and improve to their Own and the Publick Advantage.

After this, says he, shall arise a certain Man in England from his Obscure Center; a Person fill'd with all Manner of Divine Knowledge and Wisdom, endu'd with the Spirit of Prophecy, of a Graceful Aspect, and Elegant Speech, of a Compos'd Gravity, and Calm Address, a Man Mild, Innocent, Temperate, Chaste and Merciful above the Rest of Humane Race. People shall let their Eyes fall on the Ground, when they meet him in the Streets, even before they know what he is; overcome by the Lustre of Modesty, Grace and Vertue which shines in his Countenance. A Person highly beloved of God and Man.

This Man shall meet the Three Fugitive Cardinals in an Hour of Destiny. Then that which lay long smothering, shall suddenly burst forth into a Flame. The Light of God shall be diffus'd through his Soul; his Heart shall be like a Lamp, and his Tongue shall utter marvellous Things. When he opens his Mouth in divulging the Mysteries of God, his Words shall be like the Sparks of an Eternal Fire, kindling Flames of Love in the Breasts of the Hearers. The Cardinals shall rise from their Places and run to embrace him. A Council of the Chief Bishops and Priests of the Land shall be assembled by the Kings Order, where the Three Cardinals also shall be present; and after mature Deliberation, with Unanimous Consent, they shall call for the Holy Oyl of Consecration, and shall anoint him: They shall proclaim him the Great Father, and Patriarch of the Faithful; The Director of such as would go to Paradise.

the

He shall shew them a new Pattern of the Law of Jesus the Son of Mary; or rather the Old and True One, freed from the Corruptions and Errors which have been superinduc'd for many Ages. Their Hearts shall yield as to an Oracle, and the King of the Country shall approve of their Council. So shall all those of the Noble and the Vulgar, whose good Fate is written in their Foreheads. As for the Rest, they shall remain in their Incredulity.

This Holy Person shall reform the Errors of all the Christian Churches, utterly abolish the Use of Images and Pictures, convince the Jews of their Infidelity, and chase away the Darkness of Superstition from Earth. He shall argue with Reasons so forcible and cogent, so clear and demonstrative, that none but the wilfully obstinate, will resist the Truth which he divulges, or oppose

oppose his Authentick Missions. Thousands shall be converted by the Dint of his Word, and Ten Thousands by his Exemplary Life. For he shall go up and down preaching and doing Good Works throughout Great Britain, till the Number of his Proselytes is compleat. Then he shall send Apostles and Messengers into Swedeland, Denmark, Moscovy, and other Parts of Europe, who shall likewise convert an Innumerable Multitude to his Law. Foreign Princes shall send their Embassadors to the King of Great Britain and to him; for he shall be at the King's Right Hand. They shall enter into Leagues and Covenants, and all the Christian Princes shall be at Unity. Mighty Armies shall be rais'd in the North, who shall come down and give new Courage to the oppress'd Nazarenes of the West. They shall all take up Arms, and chase the Osmans back again to their own Country, recovering the Wealth which they had taken from them.

After this, by an Universal Agreement of the Christians, this Holy Person shall be proclaim'd the Great Pastor of the Church. A prodigious Army shall be gather'd together out of all the Christian Nations, to conduct him to the Holy Land, and to crown him in Jerusalem. They shall vanquish and exterminate the Osmans out of Palestine, and all the adjacent Regions. Then shall Jerusalem be re-built Gloriously, and the Temple of Solomon with Saphires and Emeralds. That City shall be the Seat of the Christian Mufti's, this New Patriarch, and his Successors, to the Day of Doom. Then shall the Eyes of the Jews be open'd: They shall acknowledge Jesus the Son of Mary to be the True Messias, whom they have so frequently Curs'ed. In a word, he says, Both Jews and Gentiles, People of all Nations, shall resort to Jerusalem, or send thither their Gifts and Presents. It shall become the Mistress of the whole Earth.

Sage Cheik, This is the Substance of what my Cousin Iosef acquaints me with concerning the Wandring Jew, and his New Doctrine. The Censure of which I leave to thee, who hast a discerning Spirit, and art able to distinguish Truth from an Imposture. God only knows what is hid in the Womb of Futurity. Every Age is pregnant, and brings forth strange Events. Yet when 'tis over, all sounds like a Dream. The World it self is no better; and I that write this, am but methinks the Shadow of a Vision or Trance. I hardly know whether I'm asleep or awake whilst my Pen seems to move. Therefore, it being very late, I lay it aside, and bid thee adieu: Praying that thou and I may have the Happiness, even in this Life, to taste the Sweet Slumbers of Paradise.

Paris, the 7th. of the 12th. Moon, of the Year 1672.

LETTER XIII.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

I Think all the ſenſible World are inquiſitive into the Life of Cardinal Richlieu. He was the Pole-Star of Stateſmen, whilſt living; and now he is dead, his Memoirs and Maxims ſerve as a Chart and Compaſs, by which the Politicians ſteer their Courſe, to avoid the Rocks and Shelves which threaten a Kingdom, or Commonwealth, both in the Tempeſts of War, and the Serene Calms of Peace.

Thou haſt formerly received ſome Remarks from me on the Life of this Great Miniſter: Yet I am not ſurprized at the Contents of thy laſt Diſpatch, which require a farther Account of him. No body can know too much of a Man who was the Miracle of his Time; and not only ſtartled the wiſeſt of Contemporaries, by his Prodigious Actions; but has puzzled all that ſurvive him, to trace his Footſteps.

Undoubtedly, France owes to his Conduct, all her preſent Grandeur, with the Hopes ſhe has of encreaſing it. To him ſhe is indebted for her Conqueſts in Flan- ders, Sicily, Catalonia, Piedmont, and the German Frontiers. 'Twas he firſt taught Her the compleat Way to Humble Her Inſolent Neighbours, and to ſuppreſs her Rebellious Domeſticks. He much abated the troubleſome Weight of a Crown, and made it ſit Lighter on the Head of Lewis XIII. Whilſt Cardinal Mazarini, his Succeſſor in the Prime Miniſtry, acting by the ſame Principles, render'd it as ſoft and eaſie to the preſent King, as the Grand Signior's Turbant. In a Word, through the Efficacy of Richlieu's Politicks, Lewis XIV. is become the moſt Abſolute Monarch in Chriſtendom. For he either undermines, or over-reaches his Enemies, by ſpecious Treaties of Peace, where he is ſure to have the better on it; or he runs them down with the Force of War. To conclude, he has a long Head, and a longer Sword, which all will confeſs that have to do with him. And this is the pure Reſult of Richlieu's Memoirs.

Yet after all, that Miniſter had his blind ſide too, as well as other Mortals. Publick Vertues, and Private Vices; State-Perfections, and Perſonal Frailties. He ſerved his Maſter, with a Zeal and Fidelity, with a Wiſdom and Courage, difficult to be matched; but he ſerved himſelf after the Common Manner of Men. He indulged his Favourite Paſſions, which were Love, Jealouſie, and Revenge.

There

There is a Letter of mine, Regiſter'd in the Archives of the Sacred Port, wherein I mention'd a Particular Amour of this Great Prelate. Beſides that, he had ſeveral Intrigues with the Dutcheſs of Elbeuf, the Counteſs of Soiſſons, and other Ladies of Prime Quality. Nay, there are not wanting ſuch as confidently report, That he had Two Children by one of his own Nieces. And Verſes were ſpread about on that Subject.

As he cheriſh'd this Soft Inclination to Women, ſo he was naturally jealous of all Rivals, whether of his Love or Intereſt. He would never ſuffer any Man to live, whom he once ſuſpected to be in a Capacity, and to make the ſmalleſt Advances to thwart his Deſigns.

For this Reaſon, he gave the moſt Conſiderable Military Offices, both by Sea and Land, to Eccleſiaſticks who depended on him: Which occaſion'd a certain Waggiſh Poet to paſs this Jeſt on the Publick Adminiſtration:

Un Archevêque eſt Admiral,
Un Gros Evêque eſt Corporal,
Un Prelât Preſident aux Frontieres,
Un Autre a des Troupes guerrieres,
Un Capuchin penſe au Combat,
Un Cardinal a des Soldat,
Un autre eſt Generaliſſime;
France je croy qu'icy bas,

Ton Egliſe ſi Magnanime,
Milite & ne triomphe pas.

Reflecting hereby on the Archbiſhop of Bourdeaux, the Biſhop of Chartres, the Biſhop of Nantes, the Biſhop of Maude, Father Joſeph, a Friar, Cardinal de Valette, and Cardinal Richlieu; theſe being the Chief Commanders of the Land and Sea Forces.

It will make thee ſmile, perhaps, to read an Epitaph that was made on that Father Joſeph above-named; who being eſteem'd a very Infamous Man, and lying interr'd in the ſame Tomb with another Friar, named Father Angel, provok'd ſome Satyrical Wit to put this Sarcaſm on him:

Paſſant, neſt ce pas choſe étrange,
De voir un Diable auprès d'un Ange?

I believe Father Joſeph was the worſe belov'd for being Cardinal Richlieu's Confeſſor. It was obſerv'd that he died ſuddenly, without Confeſſing himſelf; which occaſion'd another Epitaph to be made on him:

Sous ce Tombeau gît un bon Pere,
Qui eut tant de Diſcretions
Que pour être bon Secrétaire,
Il mourut ſans Confeſſion.

Every

Every body ſuſpected the Cardinal had a Hand in his precipitate Death, to prevent his telling of Tales: For he knew all his Secrets; And the Cardinal was known to be with him when he died. It was during the Siege of Briſac, a City on the Rhine, which was then upon the Point of ſurrendring to the French: And the News coming to the Cardinal, juſt as Father Joſeph was in his laſt Agonies, he came to his Bed-ſide, and laying his Mouth cloſe to the poor Friar's Ear, cryed out as loud as he could, Courage, Courage, mon Pere, Nous avons pris Briſac. A ſtrange Cordial for a dying Man; and ſome body made theſe Verſes on it:

Ite Cucullati, vobis ſi Purpura ridet, Fungitur Inferni Munere Pontificis.

There is another Inſtance of the Cardinal's Revengeful Temper and his Cruelty. One Day the Duke of Orleans, who hated him mortally, went to his Palace, under Pretence of giving him a Viſit, but really with a Deſign to Stab him. However, as ſoon as he came into the Cardinal's Preſence, his Noſe fell a-bleeding. Which appearing to him as an Ominous Preſage of what he was going about, he was ſtruck with ſome Remorſe; and frankly confeſſing his Deſign to the Cardinal, begg'd his Pardon. That cunning Miniſter diſſembled his Reſentments, knowing the Duke was not a Man of Reſolution enough to undertake ſo bold an Action, unleſs he had been extremely animated by ſome body near him; he preſently reflected on Monſieur Puylaurent, the Duke's Chief Favourite. Immediately he decreed his Ruine; and to effect it with more Eaſe, he pretended an extraordinary Friendſhip to him, offering him one of his Nieces in Marriage. Monſieur Puylaurent who ſuſpected not the Train which was laid for him, embraced the Propoſal with much Joy, as hoping thereby to raiſe and eſtabliſh his Fortune under the Protection of his Potent Uncle. In fine, he marryed the Cardinal's Niece, but lived not to enjoy her; for on the very Nuptial Day, the Cardinal cauſed him to be arreſted and ſent Priſoner to the Baſtile; where he was poyſoned by a Friar, in a Glaſs of Wine. As ſoon as he had ſwallowed the Fatal Potion, the Friar told him, It was neceſſary for him to confeſs his Sins that very Moment, in Regard he had but a few Minutes to live. Monſieur Puylaurent threw the Glaſs at the Friar's Head, giving him Two or Three ſwinging Curſes, and then fell on his Knees, to Confeſſion; which being performed, he expired.

Sometimes the Cardinal was very ſingular and Ingenious in the Execution of his Revenge, as if he endeavoured to perſwade the World, That he fulfilled the Law of the Talio, which requires an Eye for an Eye, and puniſhes by an exact Kind of Proportion. As it happen'd in the Caſe of the Dukes of Guize, Montmorency, and Monſieur de Baſſompierre. Theſe were the Heads of a Faction, which Diametrically oppos'd the Cardinal and his Party. He was the Grand Eye-ſore, the Chief Obſtacle of their deſign'd Prevalence at the Court. Wherefore, if they cou'd but once remove him out of the Way, they thought themſelves ſure of the King's Ear in all Things. To effect this, they conſulted together, how to diſpoſe of him. The Duke of Guize was of Opinion, he ſhou'd not be kill'd, in regard he was a Prince of the Holy Church; but that he ſhou'd be ſent to Rome, there to attend the Proper Affairs of his Eccleſiaſtick Function, among the Reſt of his Purpl'd Brethren. The Duke of Monmorency was clearly for Taking off his Head. But Monſieur de Baſſompierre was againſt both theſe Methods: For, ſaid he, if he be ſent to Rome, he will be always plotting of Miſchief againſt us. And it would be an Eternal Blemiſh to France, if the Purple of the Holy Church ſhould be ſtain'd with Blood. Let us ſend him Cloſe Priſoner to the Baſtile, where he may ſpend the Remainder of his Days in writing Learned Books.

Dukes

The Cardinal, who had his Agents buſie about in all Parts, ſoon was inform'd of this Conſult: and he retalliated every Man's Sentence upon its own Author. For he baniſh'd the Duke of Guize, confining him to Rome; he beheaded the Duke of Montmorency; and impriſon'd Monſieur de Baſſompierre in the Baſtile, where he lay till the Cardinal's Death.

I cou'd inſert a great many more Remarks concerning Cardinal Richlieu: But I am afraid of Offending by Tediouſneſs. If thou commandeſt me, another Letter ſhall preſent thee with more Varieties.

In the mean Time, with humbleſt Obeyſance and Reſpect, I deſiſt, and take my Conge; wiſhing thee a long Life on Earth, full of Honour; and a Fame without Blemiſh when thou art tranſlated to Heaven.

Paris, 15th. of the 1ſt. Moon, of the Year 1673.

LET-TER

LETTER XIV.

To Musu Abu'l Yahyan, Professor of Philosophy at Fez.

THou hast laid a Grand Obligation on me by thy last Dispatch, whose Learned Contents have opened my Eyes; or rather drawn back the Veil which covered the Interiours of Africk, from the View of Strangers. Now I stand as it were on the Top of a high Mountain, from whence I take a clear Prospect of those fair Regions, Inhabited by Blacks. I survey the Paradises of the Torrid Zone, a most fertile and populous Climate; though blind Antiquity could not discern a Blade of Grass growing there, nor any of Humane Race fetching their Breath.

My Mind revels in perfect Voluptuousness, and all the Faculties of my Soul banquet on the Contemplation of that most Delectable Precinct of the World. Oh Africk! Thou may'st be called the Bazar or Mercat, where Nature exhibits all her choicest Wonders. Thy Mountains are higher than the Clouds; their Tops are inaccessible. They approach the Borders of Paradise. On them fall the Rivers of Eden in mighty Cataracts. The Noise of the Precipitate

Waters

Waters is heard afar off, like the Sound of Remote Thunders. It deafens the Ears, and aſtoniſhes the Minds of Mortals. The Ambitious undergrowing Rocks are proud of the Glorious Caſcade; and envy thoſe that ſhoot up above them which receive the Sacred Flood at the Firſt Hand, from the very Wings of Gabriel.

Happy are the Valleys which lie beneath, and are Yearly impregnated by the Heavenly Deluge. The grateful Fields and Plains in humble Acknowledgment, make their Returns of Corn and Fruits in due Seaſon. The Marſhes of Egypt, are as the Gardens of Aſia; the Banks of the Nile, as the Fenced Seminaries of Babylon, fragrant and abounding in all Sorts of Vegetable Delicacies.

My Heart is raviſh'd with the Speculation of theſe Things. I am full as the Moon, and cannot utter my Sentiments in Order. Viſions of Æthiopia, Morocco, Fez, and the Land of Archers invade my Eyes. I behold the Beautiful Provinces of the South in a Trance: I ſtand gazing in Extaſie on the ſhady Groves of Benin and Arder, the Haunts of lovely Dæmons, the Genii of the Upper Element; who daily deſcend to thoſe Refreſhing Solitudes, and converſe with their Younger Brethren, Incarnate Mortal Dæmons, the Sons of Men.

I conſider with Admiration the Monſters of Africk, the Creatures of the Sun and Slime.

Slime. With Contemplative Horror, I draw near the Dens of Dragons; the Purlieu of Crocodiles, and other Amphibious Animals, which lurk among the Reeds of Nile and Niger, to trapan with feigned Cries the Unwary Traveller.

In fine, I am mov'd with ſuperlative Devotion and Joy, when I peruſe thy accurate Deſcription of the Principal Moſque at Fez. Methinks I ſee the Stupendous Fabrick making its lofty Advances toward Heaven. My Eyes revere the Holy and Magnifick Structure, on the out-ſide adorn'd with ſtately Towers and Minarets, and covering Fifteen Hundred Paces in its Circuit. But when my Fancy enters in by any of the One and Thirty Gates by Night, I am dazl'd with the Inſupportable Splendor of ſo many Thouſand Lamps, as burn within that moſt Illuſtrious Temple. I admire with proportionate Veneration, the Character thou giveſt of all the other Magnificences in that Ancient and Noble City; with whatſoever elſe thou ſay'ſt of the whole Kingdom, and the Adjacent Regions.

In Anſwer to thy Requeſt, I will in another Letter ſend thee a ſhort Pourtraicture and Hiſtory of Conſtantinople; but now I am interrupted by Company. Beſides, my Letter would be too long.

I beſeech thee to cheriſh that Friendſhip which thou haſt hitherto ſhew'd me; and let me have the Honour of thy frequent

Con-

Converſation by Letters. For though I live in a Populous City, yet my Life ſeems like that of an Owl or a Pelican of the Deſart, or ſtream Solitary and Dejected.

Paris, 19th. of the 3d. Moon, of the Year 1673.

LETTER XV.

To the Same.

SUch is the Zeal I have to demonſtrate how highly I value thy Friendſhip, that I would not ſuffer this Poſt to eſcape without gratifying thy Expectations. I juſt now diſmiſs'd my Company, and having Time enough, will entertain thee with an Abſtract of what I know to be moſt Remarkable in the State of Conſtantinople, both at preſent and in Ancient Times.

In the firſt Place, it will be convenient for thee to know, That this City was formerly called Byzantium, from one Byzas, Admiral of the Spartan Fleet, under Pauſanias the King of Sparta, who laid the firſt Foundations of it. The Story is this:

In Old Time the Græcians having a Mind to build a New City in ſome Part of Thrace, and and being at Odds about the Choice of a Spot of Ground ſuitable to ſo Great and Important an Undertaking, they at laſt agreed to conſult the Oracle of Apollo. They did ſo, and were anſwer'd, That they ſhould lay the Foundations of the City right over againſt the Blind Men: For ſo the Inhabitants of Chalcedon were call'd, becauſe when they were upon the ſame Deſign of Founding a New City, they cou'd not diſcern between the Fertility of the Soil on that Side the Propontis, where Conſtantinople now ſtands; and the Barrenneſs and Deſart-State of the Ground where they built, on the other Side.

Pauſanias therefore buſying his Mind about theſe Things, and pitching right upon the Senſe of the Oracle, caus'd the Foundations of the City to be laid exactly over againſt Chalcedon: And when it was finiſh'd it was call'd Byzantium, as I have ſaid, from Byzas, who had the Over-ſight of the Work.

It retain'd this Name many Years and Ages, flouriſhing in a high Degree among the other Cities of Greece and Thrace, being eſteem'd the Gate of Europe and Aſia, by which the Mutual Commerce of both thoſe Quarters of the Earth was interchangeably held up.

But after the Days of the Meſſias, there aroſe an Emperor of Rome, whoſe Name was Conſtantine. This Prince, as it is Recorded in Roman Hiſtories, ſaw a Viſion in the Air, when when he was at the Head of his Army, marching againſt Licinius, and preparing to give Battle. He and all his Soldiers beheld the Figure of a Croſs, with theſe Words plainly engraven in the Firmament: In hoc Signo vinces. Conſtantine took this for a Good Omen, and caus'd a Standard of Silver to be made exactly after the ſame Form: To which he appointed Fifty Standard-bearers, to carry it by Turns, and to guard it: For it was exceeding Rich, being emboſs'd all over with Rubies, Diamonds, Pearls, and other Precious Jewels of the Orient. He built a Pavilion alſo for the Glorious Idol; and being inſtructed in the Chriſtian Law by Euſebius Pamphilus, and other Learned Mollah's, he was at laſt Baptiz'd by Sylveſter the Pope.

This Great Monarch, as the Story goes, being very Pious, and having conceiv'd a Profound Veneration for Pope Sylveſter, left him the Dominion of Rome, and a Great Part of Italy, whilſt he remov'd the Imperial Court to the Eaſt, and took up his Reſidence at Byzantium, which he augmented with Innumerable Stately Edifices; ſtriving, if poſſible, to equal it with the Majeſty and Grandeur of Rome. He collected whatſoever was Precious and Beautiful in all the Eaſt, to adorn the City withal: Witneſs the Palaces of Superb Architecture, the Admirable Heighth and Form of Diverſe Obelisks and Pillars, all made of Marble, Porphyry, Porphyry, or Jaſper. Not to inſiſt on the Prodigious Strength and Firmneſs of the Walls, the Coſtly Aqueducts, with other Serviceable Things. At laſt, that he might conſecrate himſelf to Immortal Renown, he call'd this City by his own Name, Conſtantinople, or, the City of Conſtantine: By which Name it is known even to this Day. It was alſo called New Rome, after it once became the Seat of the Chriſtian Emperours: In whoſe Poſſeſſion it remain'd, till it was taken by Mahomet II. Invincible Emperour of the Ottomans, in the Year 1453, according to the Epocha of the Nazarenes; on the Third Day of the Week which they call Pentecoſt.

It had been a Grand Neglect and Overſight in any Prince ſo Potent and Politick as Mahomet was, to ſuffer ſuch an Opportunity to eſcape as Fortune offer'd him, of taking the moſt Opulent and Glorious City in the World: For there was an Irreconcilable Schiſm broke forth between the Churches of the Eaſt and Weſt. There were Two or Three Popes at the ſame time, quarrelling in Rome for the Supremacy; there was a War of Fifty Years ſtanding between the French and the Engliſh, which unhing'd all the Courts in Europe. The Chriſtians had long before, by dear-bought Experience, (the Loſs of many Hundred Thouſand Men, and Infinite Sums of Money, conſum'd in thoſe vain and raſh Expeditions, which they Sanctified with the ſpecious cious Title of the Holy War;) found, that it was not eaſie to wreſt one Town of Strength out of the Hands of the Tenacious Muſſulmans; much leſs to defend it long, or ſave their moſt important Cities from the Fury of a Turkiſh Reprizal. They were ſick and ſurfeited with the Viſionary Stuff of Peter the Hermit; and all Illuminato's like him, grew out of Faſhion. Every Prince and State in Weſtern Chriſtendom, began to mind their own Intereſt. No more Enthuſiaſtick Tales of that Kind wou'd go down: The Great Ones had open'd their Eyes.

Beſides, he that was then Emperor of Greece, Conſtantinus Paleologus, was look'd upon by the Chriſtians, as a Tyrant, the Off-ſpring of Tyrants and Uſurpers. The Grecians ſtill retain'd the Black Memoirs of thoſe horrid and nefandous Tragedies, acted by Michael Andronicus, John, and Manuel, the Predeceſſors and Anceſtors of this Conſtantine. And they had ſuch a particular Averſion for his Government, that though there were Infinite Treaſures of Gold and Silver in the Hands of the Rich Citizens of Conſtantinople, when that City was beſieg'd by Mahomet II. yet no Man wou'd part with the leaſt Sum of Money, to ſupport the Publick Cauſe: But choſe rather in a kind of revengeful and deſperate Sullenneſs, to fall into the Hands of the Victorious Oſmans, than to afford their Hated Sovereign any Relief.

Thus

Thus fell that Queen of Cities, the Glory of all the East, under the Power of our Puissant Emperours, in whose Possession it remains to this Day; and may it so remain, till the Moon shall be in her last Wane, and the Sun shall cease to shine on the World.

In the mean Time, I will entertain thee en Passant, as the French call it, with a short View of the Chief Magnificences in Constantinople.

That which first draws the Admiration of Travellers, is the Glorious Structure of Santa Sophia, a Temple consecrated to the Eternal WISDOM, by which the Worlds were made: Built by the Emperour Justinian with inimitable Magnificence; though afterwards Spoil'd and Plunder'd of its chiefest Ornaments, by the greedy Soldiers of Mahomet II. whom I have so often mention'd; and Six Parts of it entirely subverted by succeeding Emperours.

Pity it was, if furious and ill-grounded Superstition was the Cause of such deplorable Ruines. What can be said of those who demolish'd the Sub-Fana of the Third Temple, celebrated in the Universal History of the World? That of Diana at Ephesus, 'tis true, was the Pattern; yet 'twas not much beyond it. Schelomo's boasted Fane at Jerusalem, without Iron Pins or Nails, or other Work of the Hammer, excell'd but a little in the Artifice and Symmetry. Indeed, the Lustre of Sion's Moschi was more Radiant and Glorious in Workmanship of Gold, the Walls and Floor being over-over-laid with that Metal, and the Roof on the out-side was, as it were, ſtudded with Spikes of Beaten Gold ſo thick, that there was not Room for a Bird to perch between them. And this was done to prevent the Prophanation of the Temple by their muting on it.

When the Sun ſhone in his full ſtrength, the covering of the Temple thus adorn'd, look'd like a Firmament glittering with innumerable Stars.

But to return to the Moſch of Santa Sophia, let us conſider it in its Primitive State, and we ſhall find ſome Excellent Curioſities. Among the Reſt, there was a Candleſtick or Sconce of Beaten Gold, ſo admirably contriv'd, That it ſpontaneouſly fed the Bowls of Seven Branches with a conſtant Stream of Oil, which by equal Meaſures flow'd into them, from the Hollow of the Shaft. So that if the Flame but of one ſingle One, had wanted Aliment, all the Reſt muſt have been extinguiſh'd at the ſame Time.

The Walls of this Glorious Moſch, within and without, preſent the Eye with nothing but White Marble, Porphyry, and other Precious Stones. The Roof is of a Prodigious Height, cover'd with Lead without, but proudly Oſtentous of its inward Cieling, which is divided into Vaults and Arches richly adorn'd with Golden Fret-work; and ſupported by Pillars of Cyprian Jaſper, pureſt White Marble, and Porphyry. There is a Marble Stone in the Moſque, had in great Reverence by the True Faithful, becauſe the Tradition goes, That on it Mary, the Mother of Jeſus, waſh'd the Infant-Prophet's Linen.

is

There are alſo under the Moſque, Innumerable Vaults or Oratories, full of Altars and Sepulchres: But there is no Acceſs to them, in Regard the Doors are walled up.

In a Place not far from theſe, you find Ten huge Veſſels full of Oyl, reſerv'd there ever ſince the Days of Conſtantine the Great, yet remains Uncorrupted, being of Colour White like Milk. It is an Inexpiable Crime for any, but the Grand Signior's Phyſicans or Surgeons, to uſe or touch it. And they compound certain Medicaments with it, for the Service of him and his Serail.

Now I remember what I have read in a very Authentick Hiſtorian, concerning an Oyl made by certain Holy Perſons who only had the Secret of it. As the Story goes, it was extracted from the Leaves and Chips of Wood which are found floating in the Rivers that deſcend out of Paradiſe. This Oyl they compounded with other Ingredients, and performed Cures therewith, which were eſteemed Miraculous. It was ſent from one Prince to another, as a Sacred and Invaluable Treaſure. Till at laſt it came into the Hands of the Eaſtern Patriarchs, who preſided over the Chriſtians of the Greek, Armenian, and Egyptian Churches: Who pretend to the only true Myſtery ftery and Power of making it at this very Day. And that though the Ancient Popes of Rome, were formerly presented with a Yearly Portion of it so long as they remained in Communion with the Patriarchs of the East; yet after Victor had once made the Fatal Schism, which never could be healed since, the Holy Favour was denyed to his Successors: Who instead of the Original Genuine Oil, were forc'd to counterfeit it using a Spurious Unguent, to preserve the Authority of their Religious Sacraments. And hence, they say, it comes to pass, that few or none are ever healed by the Extreme Unction of the Latin Church.

T

God knows, whether this be Truth or no. But I am apt to think, That the Ten Jarrs of Oil before-mentioned, which lie under the Mosch of Aja-Sophian, are Reliques of the Ancient Patriarchs of Constantinople; who had the Secret of compounding the Mysterious Extract.

From the Place where these Vessels are kept, you descend into the Dormitories of Royal Ottoman Carcasses, the Sons of our Renowned Emperors. From thence you pass into Two Caverns; One leading directly to the Seraglio, the Other extending it self under the Buildings of the City, by a vast long Tract of Ground. I know no Use there is at present of the Former Cave: But the Latter serves for a Work-Room, to certain poor Silk-Spinsters.

This

This Letter wou'd be too tedious, if I should describe all the other Mosches, and Buildings of Note in Constantinople. Wherefore not to tire thee, I will reserve what remains to be said of that Glorious City, for other Dispatches.

In the mean Time, with an Affectionate Congé of my Soul I bid thee Adieu: Praying God to let thee crop the choicest Flowers of Humane Happiness.

Paris, 14th. of the 5th. Moon, of the Year 1673.

LETTER

LETTER XVI.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

NOW I will perform the Promise I made thee long ago; which was, to present thee with an Idea of the different Strength and Policies of these Nazarene Kingdoms and States: Wherein, I will begin with Germany, which is, as it were, the last Retrenchment of the Declining Roman Empire.

The Annals affirm, That in the Reign of Charles V. when the Musſulmans Invaded Austria with Innumerable Forces, that Emperor oppos'd them with an Army of 90000 Foot, and 30000 Horse. Maximilian II. went beyond him, and rais'd 100000 Foot, and 35000 Horse. Neither was Corn dear in so vast an Army. It is certain, That the German Emperour can, upon Occasion, send into the Field 200000 expert Soldiers. It is moreover observ'd, That from the Year 1560 of the Christians Hegyra, even to these present Times, there has been no War between France, Spain, and the Netherlands, wherein many Thousands of Germans have not serv'd.

Their

Their Best Infantry is gather'd out of Bavaria, Austria and Westphalia: And their Choicest Cavalry come out of Brunswick, Hesse and Franconia. Both Foot and Horse fight better, and more successfully, in an Open Plain, or Field, than in Narrow, Close Places; such as Lanes, and Woods, &c. For they are not good at Taking Advantages of Ground, or at Politick Skirmishes, and Cunning Ambuscades. They have not Patience to lie long waiting the Enemy's Motions, neither care they to divide their Main Body into Fragments, or Detachments; but they love to wedge themselves all together, in form of a Triangle, and so march with Grave and Slow Pace, that so they may break through their Enemies, and confound their Order, which they esteem a certain Step to Victory. They fight better also under a Foreign Commander, than a General of their own Nation. They cannot endure the Hardships and Afflictions of a Long Siege; but when once they begin to smart for Want of Provisions, they soon Capitulate, and Surrender. Neither have they more Patience in a Camp, to bear the Injuries of Weather: But they make haste to set upon the Enemy, and decide the Quarrel in a Pitch'd Combat: Wherein, if their First On-set fail, they seem like Men Stupified, Astonish'd, or in a Trance; not knowing whether they had best to renew the Assault, or to fly: And, if they once fly, there is no Rallying them again. Yet these Armies are not rais'd without a vast Expence, nor maintain'd without a greater, being cumber'd with a Train of Women, Children, and Servants; who consume the Provision of the Soldiers, so that many Times they starve for want of Common Artificial Bread.

Their Horses may be call'd rather Strong than Sprightly, and Bold; being, for the most part, taken from the Plough, or other Rural Drudgeries. In a Word, they are like their Riders, Phlegmatick and Dull; having this also peculiar in their Constitution, that at the Sight of Blood, they faint, and are ready to faint: Whereas, the Spanish Horse gather fresh Courage from this Spectacle.

The Germans also have considerable Forces by Sea; but they seldom make use of them, unless it be against the Dane and Swede. Besides all this, their Auxiliary Armies are not to be forgot, which they receive from Italian Princes, from the Dukes of Savoy and Lorrain, and sometimes from the Trusty Suisses.

But there are Two Things chiefly wanting in this Empire, amidst all its Numerous Forces: One is, Unity and Concord among the Subjects; Another is, a Fix'd Resolution and Readiness to enterprize any Thing of Moment. Their Hans-Towns are always Jealous of the Neighbouring Princes. And these again give 'em Occasion to suspect their Power, and hate their Interest, which they so often employ against them, by Increasing

ing

ing on their Privileges. Then the Catholicks, and Protestants are always quarrelling: And one Sect of Protestants, perpetually Persecuting another. Hence it falls out, That the Princes go so unwillingly and rarely to the Diets: And when they come there, they spin out so much Time in adjusting their private Pretensions, Claims, and Privileges; in performing of State-Ceremonies; and in deliberating concerning the Publick Good, whilst every one contradicts his Neighbour, and labours with all his Might to establish his own Opinion, and get it pass'd into a Decree, by the Sanction of the Diet; that before they come to any Resolves, an Expeditious and Potent Enemy might rush into the Heart of the Country, and even take all these Northern Blockheads Prisoners.

The German Empire is Elective; and the Power of chusing Cæsar is in the Hands of Seven Princes. These are First, the Archbishop of Mentz, Grand Chancellor of the Empire; in whose Custody are the Archives and Decrees of the German Diets. The Second is, the Archbishop of Triers or Treves, Great Chancellor of the Empire for France. The Third is, the Archbishop of Colen, Great Chancellor of the Empire for Italy. The Fourth is, the King of Bohemia, Cup-Bearer to the Emperor. The Fifth is, the County Palatine of the Rhine, Master of the Imperial Palace. The Sixth is, the Duke of Saxony, Marshal or Sword-bearer to the Emperor. The Seventh and last is, the Mar- quis of Brandenburg, Great Chamberlain & Treasurer of the Empire.

There are reckon'd 25 Politick Princes, 9 Dukes in the Empire, 6 Marquisses, 9 Landgraves, 9 Archbishops, and Bishops 47, who enjoy the Title and Dignity of Princes, 22 Abbots of a Lower Degree 52, With innumerable Others, too tedious to be nam'd. They reckon also 82 Counts of Princely Note, besides many of a Meaner Figure. They number 49 Barons and Free Lords, 90 Hans-Towns, and 10 Circles of the Empire.

In the German Diets, this Order is observ'd: When the Emperor is plac'd in the Throne, the Archbishop of Triers takes his Place just over against him: He of Mentz sits next to the Emperor, on his Right Hand; the Second Place belongs to the King of Bohemia; and the Third to the Count Palatine of the Rhine. On the Emperor's Left Hand, the Archbishop of Colen takes the First Place; the Duke of Saxony the Next; and the Marquis of Brandenburg the Third.

The Hans-Towns, which acknowledge no other Lord but the Emperor, are govern'd by their own Municipal Laws and Privileges. In some of them, the Common People bear Rule; in others, a Mixture of the Commons and Nobles; and many of them wholly obey the Nobility.

No Man salutes by the Title of Emperor, him whom the Princes have Elected to that Dignity, till he be Crown'd by the Pope, or

Mufti

Majesty of Rome. They call him Cæsar, or King of the Romans, or King of Germany; but not Emperor, 'till the Coronation is finish'd. Nor does the Emperor, even after he is Crown'd, and Establish'd in the Throne, exercise an Absolute Power in all Things; Affairs of Importance being generally refer'd to the Publick Diets or Divans of the Empire; where the Electoral Princes deliberate all Things: On whom the very Power of the the Emperor himself depends.

These Diets are very confus'd and tedious, in Regard the Princes seldom appear there in their own Persons, but send their Embassadors and Deputies, who yet have not Full Power to conclude any Thing without Particular Orders from their Respective Masters. So that a Prodigious Deal of Time is taken up in sending Couriers to inform the Princes of all Emergent Counsels and Transactions, and in waiting for their Express Instructions, and Answers again.

In a Word, Considering the Diversity of Interests carried on by the Electoral Princes, their Mutual Feuds and Dissentions, Domestick Animosities, and Foreign Engagements, both on Religious and Politick Accounts; 'tis a Miracle that this Tottering Empire stands so long, and does not fall to Ruin; Especially being environ'd and almost continually assaulted by Three Potent Enemies; the King of Sueden, the King of France, and our Invincible Monarch. Not to mention the Frequent Incursions of the Moscovites and Tartars; the Revolts of the Hungarians, Transilvanians, Bosnians, Croats, and other Nations which are counted Members of the German Empire. But he abounds in Men and Money, with all other Neceſſaries to ſupport his Wars: There not being a more Rich and Populous Region on Earth than Germany.

Sage Humet, when the determined Period is come, God will abaſe the Pride of theſe Infidels by the Hands of the True Believers: The Riches of the Weſt ſhall become the Spoil of Eaſtern Hero's; and the Poſterity of Shem ſhall take Root in the Cities of Japhet.

May'ſt thou live till that Time, to triumph in the Glory of the Houſe of Iſmael, when they ſhall be exalted more than in the Ages that are paſt.

Paris, 9th. of the 7th. Moon, of the Year 1673.

LETTER

LETTER XVII.

To Cara Hali, Physician to the Grand Signior.

THY Memory is like the Smell of Incoule, refreshing as Wine of Tenedos in a Goblet of pure Gold. When my Heart is almost dead with Melancholy; when I can find no Pleasure in Company abroad, and the very Elements of which I am made, Frown upon me; when the Time of Night forces me to come home Sighing as to a Prison, and the Hangings of my Bed-Chamber look dull, and seem to be painted with horrid Tragedies. In a Word, when every Thing in Nature appears in an angry threatning Fit, then I think of thee, my Friend, and that Thought relieves me. Thy beloved Idea is a perfect Talisman, working Wonders in my Soul. It Charms or Countercharms, as my Occasions do require. No Fears, or Griefs, or other Melancholy Passions dare abide its Energy: As soon as it appears, each baneful Thought is gone; the Troops of sad Chimera's vanish like the Morning Mists before the Sun. Thou art as a strong Tower or Fortress, where I can take Sanctuary from my Enemies: An Impregnable Citradel seated on the Top of a high Rock: From whence

I can look down with Scorn on my Persecutors beneath? possessing my self in perfect Security.

I dare not so much as vent my Thoughts to another, tho' a Mussulman, for fear of some untoward Consequence; So Industrious is the Malice of most Men; so vigilant and studious for an Opportunity of doing Mischief. And as for these Infidels, my Conversation is, for the most part, Hysterick, I am constrain'd to act to the Life, a very Zealous Christian, and a Catholick: When, God knows, my Heart keeps not time with my Exterior Actions and Words. Not but that there are Scepticks among the Christians, as well as among the True-Believers: But they are generally very private and reserv'd: For open Blasphemy, or what is reputed so here, is certainly punish'd with Death.

I sometimes meet with Ingenious and Candid Souls, with whom I can discourse freely, and like a Man that doubts of many Things, which others currantly believe. Yet we dare not trust each other too far, nor the very Air into which our Words vanish, after it has help'd to form 'em; lest some sly envious Dæmon shou'd catch the transient sound, and reverbrate the yet articulated Body of Particles which made it, into some Inquisitive Ear, to ruin us. For there are certain busie Gossiping Ecchoes, scatter'd up and down the Elements, which are always listning to the Words of Mortals:

And

And if the Spightful Elves can but take Hold of any Syllable, to do a Man an Injury, they are big 'till they have vented it. Yet they make no Shew or Noise, but whisper out their Tales in Secret; sometimes in Dead of Night, when Men are fast asleep; at other Times when they are deeply musing on the hidden Things of Nature. For, 'tis only to the Wise, the Sage, the Noble, and the Great, that they reveal these Passages, because 'tis such alone have Ears to hear them. They haunt the Bed-Chambers of Kings and Princes, to tell them News in Dreams. They are the swiftest Couriers in the World: For they have Wings, and fly from Court to Court, and from one Climate to another, in a Moments Time. They are always buzzing in the Ears of Statesmen and great Politicians, to whom they shew the Dark Intrigues of Foreign and Domestick Enemies. Thus are Conspiracies and Plots of Rebels oft discover'd, though manag'd never so secretly. They visit now and then, the Closets of Philosophers, and such as love the Sciences: Men of abstracted Souls; whose Thoughts are volatile and pure, their fancies lively and vegete. To these they unfold the covert Mysteries of Nature, and shew them Things to come. They frame the Ieda's of remote unknown Event, which they imprint upon the Ductile Minds of Prophets and Holy Men: Inspiring them with strange and unaccountable Presages of what shall shortly happen to themselves or others, whether it be Good or Evil. For these Busie-Bodies are the Daughters of the World's great Soul; and they inherit an Universal Sense and Feeling of whatsoever happens in the Elements. 'Tis true, some Knowledge they acquire by Study and Observation, even as we Mortals do; but at a far swifter Rate. Their Airy Bodies do not so oppress their Intellectual Faculties, as our gross Hulks of Flesh do ours. We're forc'd to Dig and Plough, to Sow and Harrow for small Returns of Science. Our Soil is barren, it must be manur'd and cultivated with Art and Cost, before it yields a tolerable Harvest of what deserves the Name of Solid Knowledge. But these defecate Tenants of the Air, have no more to do, but to be meerly passive, and they streight learn every thing: For the Eternal Sapience wanders through the Universe, to seek out such as will or can imbibe her free Impression. She voluntarily slides into receptive Souls, and fills them with her Rays. Thus the Sublimer Genii of the Air, bask in an open Orb of Intellectual Light, because they are embodied in the most refined and purest Matter: Whereas we Mortals must be thankful for her Illuminations by Retail. She only shines on us through Chincks and Cranies of our Dungeon Flesh: and yet but seldom so in direct Beams. Few Men can boast that Privilege. The greatest Part walk only in the Uncertain Twilight of Opinion; or at best in the faint languid Glimmerings merings of Humane Reason, which like the Moon, conveys the Original Light of Science to us by Reflection, and at Second Hand. We're fain to learn from Books, from Conversation and Experience.

Courteous Hali, thou wilt pardon the Confusedness and want of Order in this Letter, when thou shalt consider the Force of Melancholy which first prompted me to write it. For, being very sad, and overcast with Clouds of dark and gloomy Thoughts, which different Passions caus'd to justle one against another in my troubl'd Mind; I knew not how to escape the Tempest better than by writing to thee, my Learned Friend, the only to express my Circumstances. For when I began, I knew not what to say; but 'twas an Ease to write at random, any Thing to breath my Heart, and ventilate my Spleen. But the Specifick Remedy of my Grief, consisted in addressing to thee, my Dear Physician, whose very Remembrance is a Catholicon, proof against all my Maladies.

Adieu, thou Æsculapius of the Ottomans, and live for ever.

Paris, the 15th. of the 8th. Moon, of the Year 1673.

LETTER

LETTER XVIII.

To Musu Abu'l Yahyan, Professor of Philosophy at Fez.

THou shalt see, That I am a Man of my Word, and will keep my Promise: For this Dispatch contains a farther Description of Constantinople, which I engag'd to present thee with in my last.

This Famous City is Sixteen Miles in Circuit, and contains Nine Hundred Thousand Inhabitants. 'Tis divided into Three Parts, by the Intercourse of certain Arms of the Sea; and almost forms the Figure of a Triangle. The Walls are of an Incredible Height, and encompass Seven Hills within their Extent. One is near the Grand Signior's Serail: Another is in the Opposite Corner of the City, which leads to Adrianople. Between Two others, there lies a Plain, which is call'd the Great Valley. In this is to be seen an Aqueduct of Admirable Contrivance and Structure, the Work of Constantine the Great, who by this convey'd Water to the City from Seven Miles distance. Solyman II. augmented it, by opening a Current of Waters Two Miles beyond the Source of Constantinople, which run through through Seven Hundred and Forty Pipes into the City; besides those which serve the Mosques, the Baths, and Houses of Purification.

At the Extremity of the Town is seen the Antique Building of a Fortress, which is call'd, the Castle of the Seven Towers; a Work of Inimitable Architecture. There is a Garrison in it of Two Hundred and Fifty Soldiers, not one of which dares to set his Foot out of the Castle-Gates, without the Leave of the Kizir Agasi, unless it be on Two certain Days in the Year; That is, the First of Beiram, and Ramazan.

In this Place formerly the Ottoman Emperours us'd to lay their Treasures of Gold and Silver, their Arms and Ammunition, their Books, and whatsoever they esteem'd Precious. But Amurat the Son of Selymus II. translated all these Things into the Serrail; where they have been kept ever since: And this Castle is turn'd into a Prison for Kings and Princes taken Captives by the True Faithful; as also for Rebellious Bassa's, and other Persons of Quality. Here Gregory Voyvod of Moldavia, was shut up in the Year 1617. of the Christians Æra. And in the Year 1622. of the same Date, the Rebellious Janizaries Imprisoned their Sovereign Lord, Sultan Osman, whom afterwards they strangl'd in the same Place.

There are above Two Thousand Mosques, Oratories and Sepulchres within the Walls of of Constantinople. I have already described that of Aia Sophia, in my last; it remains now, that I speak of Four others, built by some of our former Emperors. The First and Chiefest, was built by Sultan Mahomet II. to express his Gratitude to God for the Taking of Constantinople. It is a Magnificent Structure, Frain'd according to the Pattern of Santta Sophia. He caus'd a Hundred stately Chambers to be built round about it, both for the Service of the Imaum's and Mollah's who belong to the Mesch; and for the Entertainment of Strangers, let them be of what Nation or Religion soever. He caus'd also Fifty other Chambers without these, for the Use of the Poor: And endowed the Mosque with Sixty Thousand Duckats of Yearly Revenue.

The Second Mosque was built by Bajazet II. the Son of this Mahomet. The Third was built by Selymus I. The Fourth by Solyman the Magnificent. The Three last of these Princes lie buried each in his own Mosch, under Monuments of a Superb Figure: Innumerable Lamps burning over them and round about them, Night and Day, whilst certain Mollah's pray by Turns, without ceasing, for the Health of the Departed Royal Souls.

But the last of these Moschs which was built, as I have said, by Sultan Solyman, far exceeds all the rest, and comes not short of Santta Sophia, in the Richness of Marble,

Por-

Porphyry, and other excellent Materials.

The Greeks have Forty Churches and Chapels in Constantinople, where they perform the Nazarene Worship. The Armenians have Four. Those of the Latin Communion have with a College annexed to it for a certain Number of Jesuits. This is seated in Pera, which is a kind of Suburb to Constantinople.

The Jews have great Liberty in the Imperial City. Their Habitations are Contiguous, taking up Nine Principal Streets, and they have Eight and Thirty Synagogues.

The Walls of the City remain very entire, and are double toward the Land. There are Nineteen Gates in them; one of which is call'd the Holy Gate, in respect of a vast Multitude of Christian Saints who lie buried in a Chapel hard by it. It was through this Gate that Mahomet II. made his Triumphant Entry into Constantinople, on Purpose, as it were, to prophane the reputed Sanctity of the Place, and insult o'er their False Gods; whilst he came to establish the Law and Worship of the Only True God, Creator of Heaven and Earth.

There are Abundance of Antique Monuments in the City, as Pyramids and Obelisks of Admirable Figure and Contrivance. In one Place, there are Three Serpents of Marble, stretching themselves to the Height of Two Men, and mutually twisting about each each other. The Report goes, That they were erected by a Magician, at a Time when the Citizens were much infested with Living Serpents, and that by this Enchantment they were freed.

One of these has a Wound in the Neck, which was given it by Mahomet II. when he rode into the Vanquish'd City, Pale, beholding the Horrid Idol, and guessing right, that it was the Work of some Magician, was mov'd with Holy Zeal and Indignation. Wherefore, couching his Spear, and giving Spurs to his Horse, he ran full Tilt against it, and wounded one of the Serpents in the Neck, which is seen to this Day.

In the same Pavement there stands a very Elegant Column of Rustick Workmanship, as they call it: The Marbles of which it consists, being fastned together without the Intervention of Mortar, Bitumen, or any other Cement. It has within, a winding Stair-Case, by which one may go up to the Top.

In this Place, which is call'd the Hippodrome, the Ottoman Grandees exercise themselves on Horseback, and sometimes the Grand Signior himself: Especially on great Festivals.

Round about it, there are above Two Thousand little Shops of Taylors or Botchers, for the Use of those who would have their Garments mended, scowr'd and polish'd at a small Price. And yet out of this

so

so contemptible a Trade, the Grand Signior receives a Yearly Custom of Eleven Thousand Zequins. By this thou may'st take an Estimate of his other Revenues, which flow into his Coffers from all Parts of so vast an Empire.

There are above Fourty thousand Ware-Houses and Shops of Merchants, Brokers, Pedlers, Huckstars, and such like Callings; Each Trade having their proper Bazar, or Market, according to the Quality of the Goods they sell. But there is one more Eminent than all the rest, which is called Bestin; where be Goldsmiths, Jewellers and such as deal in any manner of fine and costly Things. This place is environ'd with very strong Walls, Six Foot Thick, and is shut up every Night by Four double Gates, and at other Times, as Occasion requires. So that it looks like a Little well fortified Town.

In this wealthy Market, there is a Gallery or Piazza neatly arch'd and supported by Twenty Four Pillars. Under this, there are abundance of little Shops, Six Foot long, and Four in Breadth. Here all these precious Commodities are expos'd to Sale on Tables or Counters, and with their Lustre dazle the Eyes of such as pass by.

Thou may'st also conjecture at the vast Gains of these Merchants, by the Rents which they pay to the Grand Signior, only for their License to sell in this Place. I have known one Man, that was my particular cular Acquaintance, give Yearly Two Thousand Franks for this Liberty; and the Reason is, That no Man could enjoy the Freedom of the Place under that Price, unless he had great Favour shewn him, which is very rare, and even then it would not be much abated.

As one passes from this Market one meets there arises a stately Column of Porphyry, girt in many Places with Iron Hoops; and a little distant you see another more lofty than this. It is call'd the Historical Column, being engraven all over with the Figures of Men. In this also, there is a Stair-Case to the Top, but much broken, and in Danger of falling, if it were not strengthen'd and held together with vast Hoops of Iron.

The next Thing worth to be seen, is the Old Palace of Constantine the Great: Worthy I say to be seen, only for its Antiquity; for it is no very Elegant Building; yet it has this Commendation, That it stands in the purest and most wholsome Air of the whole City.

There is another Market also wall'd in, besides that of the Goldsmiths, &c. Which has a Piazza supported by Sixteen Pillars. In this are sold all manner of Silks. And a little way off from this, is the Bezar, where they sell Slaves. So great are the Gains of this Traffick, that those who use it, pay to the Grand Signior, by way of Custom, the Yearly Sum of Sixteen Thousand Zequins.

The

The Victuallers, Victualling and Sutling who sell Wine to the Christians and Jews, and privately to the Mussulmans, pay Yearly Fifty Eight Thousand, Seven Hundred and Eighty Eight Zequins. The very Fishermen of Constantinople who live along the Streights, pay the Yearly Sum of Twenty Nine Thousand Three Hundred Ninety Four Zequins. The Corn-Market, where all Sorts of Grain, Pulse, Meal and Flower are sold, pays Yearly into the Treasury 14 Purses of Money, each Purse being worth a Thousand, Six Hundred, Thirty and Three Zequins. The Egyptian Merchants, who bring their Goods from Alexandria to sell them at Constantinople, pay 24 Purses. The Fraught of all Foreign Merchant Ships, makes up 180 Purses of Gold. I have mention'd the Value of each Purse before. The Great Shambles without the City, pays 32 Purses. There serve in this Place 200 Butchers, over whom there is a Prefect or Master, without whose Consent no Man can kill any Beast, unless it be in the Case of Corban. Nay, so great is the Authority of this Prefect, that the Jews themselves are forc'd to ask his Leave to kill their Beasts after their own Fashion. The Reason why the Shambles is without the City is for Purity sake, lest the City be polluted with Blood.

It is Impossible to cast up the prodigious Revenue which arises to the Grand Signior from the Sale of Hungarian Sheep and Oxen in the 10th. and 11th. Moons. But thou

may'st

Grand Signior, that it is very Customary sometimes in one Day's Time there are Sold 2000 Oxen, and 40000 Sheep.

Neither is it more ease to reckon up all Incomes from the Sale of Houses, Skiffs, Gallays, Saicks, and bigger Vessels. Besides, it would be too tedious for one to count what shall arise of the Tributes which the Jews and Christians pay, amounting Yearly to a Prodigious Sum of Money: Time, Paper, Ink, and Human Patience it self would fail, in rehearsing so many Particularities.

But thou mayest frame a Regular Judgment of the Immense Riches which the Grand Signior is possessed of; when thou shalt know, that there is a Mint in the Imperial City where Four Hundred Men perpetually labour in coining new Money, having a President or Overseer who supervises the Work, who must be a Grecian, by a special Privilege granted to that Nation by our Munificent Emperors; because the Mines of Silver and Gold, are within the Limits of the Grecian Empire. So that none but Greeks are admitted to assist at this curious Artifice.

The President is oblig'd every New Moon to send into the Serail Ten Thousand Zequins of Gold, and Twenty Thousand in Silver. For such is the Pleasure of the Great Sultan, that the Royal Palace should always abound with fair New Money.

Sage

assure thy self, that Confusion reigns in the Grand Treasury, Exchequer, or Bank of the whole Earth: where all the Riches of the East, West, North and South, and of the Seven Climates, are refunded, and laid up like in their proper Centre. But I have more to say in another Letter concerning this Glorious City: Only Time just now gave me a Prick with the End of his Scythe, to put me in mind of an Urgent Affair, not to be neglected this Moment, Wherefore, in Haste, Adieu.

Paris, the [illegible] of the Moon, of the Year 1679.

THE END.

BOOKS Written by Sir Roger L'Estrange, and Printed for J. Hindmarsh and R. Sare.

1. FAbles of Æsop and other Eminent Mythologists, with Morals and Reflections, Folio.

2. Seneca's Morals, by way of Abstract, the Fifth Edition, Octavo.

3. Select Colloquies out of Erasmus Roterodamus; pleasantly representing several Superstitious Levities that were crept into the Church of Rome in his Days. The Second Impression corrected and amended, with the Addition of Two Colloquies to the former, Octavo.

4. Tully's Offices in Three Books; turned out of Latin into English. The Fourth Edition corrected, Twelves.

5. A Guide to Eternity, extracted out of the Writings of the Holy Fathers and Ancient Philosophers: Written originally in Latin, by John Bona, and now done into English, The Third Edition.

The

The Genuine Epiſtles of the Apoſtolical Fathers, St. Barnabas, St. Ignatius, St. Clement, St. Polycarp, the Shepherd of Hermas, and the Martyrdoms of St. Ignatius and St. Polycarp: Written by thoſe who were preſent at their Sufferings. Being together with the holy Scriptures of the New Teſtament, a Compleat Collection of the moſt Primitive Antiquity for 150 Years after Chriſt; Tranſlated and Publiſhed with a Large Preliminary Diſcourſe, relating to the ſeveral Treatiſes here put together. By William Wake, D. D. Chaplain in Ordinary to their Majeſties, and Preacher to the Honourable Society of Grays-Inn, Octavo. Price 5 s.

Humane Prudence, or the Art by which a Man may raiſe himſelf and Fortune to Grandeur. The Sixth Edition, corrected and enlarged by the Author. Price 1 s. 6 d. Theſe Two Laſt printed for R. Sare at Grays-Inn-Gate in Holborn.

Mahmut the Turkish Spy

Ætatis suæ 72.

The EIGHTH and

LAST Volume

OF

LETTERS

Writ by a

Turkish Spy,

Who liv'd Five and Forty Years, Undiscover'd at

PARIS:

Giving an Impartial Account to the Divan at Constantinople, of the most Remarkable Transactions of Europe; And discovering several Intrigues and Secrets of the Christian Courts (especially of that of France) continued from the Year 1673, to the Year 1682.

Written Originally in Arabick, Translated into Italian, and from thence into English, by the Translator of the First Volume.

LONDON: Printed by J. K. for J. Hindmarsh and R. Bare, at the Golden Ball in Cornhil, and at Grays-Inn-Gate in Holborn, 1694.

Where Perfect Sets may be had.

TO THE READER.

AT Length, after tedious Expectation, you have this long wish'd-for Work brought to an End. There remains nothing now, but to answer a few Objections, which may be made against the Contents of some Letters in all these Volumes, and particularly in the Two Last: As also, to give you an Account of what this Last Volume contains of Remarkable, more than was mention'd in the Preface to the Seventh: Some Things being therein omitted through Haste and Forgetfulness.

As to the Objections; Some People, more precise than they need to be, find Fault with our Arabian, for the seeming Lewdness of his Sentiments, and profane Expreſſions of God and his Works; ſaying, That he writes more like a Diſciple of Carneades and Epicurus, than of Mahomet; who taught his Followers to Think and Speak with profound Veneration of the God-Head, and of all Saints and Prophets. They add, That in ſome of his Letters he ſeems to Banter all Religion; whilſt in others, he appears like a Hypocrite, extravagantly Devout and Zealous, even to the Heighth of Enthuſiaſm and Divine Madneſs.

In Anſwer to this; 'Tis deſir'd, That theſe Gentlemen will pleaſe to conſider, That our Author, tho a profeſs'd Mahometan, yet is a Man endu'd with Senſe and Reaſon, which he had much improv'd by Reading of Hiſtories, by the Studies of Natural, Moral, and Political Things, and by his own Experimental Obſervations in the World. That therefore, when he ſeems to deſcant with an unwarrantable Libertiniſm, profanely Glancing with a Religious Kind of Wantonneſs on Divine Matters; it ought not to be taken ſo much for his own proper direct Thoughts, as the Reſult of other Mens

Mens Errors, and the Epidemical Miſtakes and Superſtitions which have infected the World. So that he rather hints at what may be ſaid by Way of Inference from the Groundleſs Opinions of Men; than to aſſert any Thing poſitively himſelf in Diſhonour of the Deity, or True Religion. And he banters the Abuſes that are every where found in the Service of God, not the Service it ſelf. In a Word, he appears, in all his Letters, a Deiſt rather than an Atheiſt; as ſome would repreſent him. And it is well enough known, to thoſe who Travel in Turkey, and Converſe with Men of Senſe there, That there are Abundance of Deiſts among the Mahometans, as well as among us Chriſtians: And our Arabian demonſtrates, that he is one of theſe, in thoſe very Letters, or Periods of Letters, where they tax him with Hypocriſie and Extravagant Devotion. For, being as it were, abſorp'd and ſwallow'd up in the profound Contemplation of the Divine Majeſty, it is no wonder, that he breaks forth into Raptures of Love, and Extaſies of Admiration; his Thoughts being all over irradiated with the Incomprehenſible and Eternal Splendors. And 'tis theſe tranſcendent Elevations of the Soul, which are the Cauſe of that Contempt and low Eſteem he ſhews toward the flat and inſipid Notions and Idea's which the Generality of Men have of the Creator of All Things. 'Tis this provokes him to mock and deride the Vanity of Human Traditions and Ceremonies, the ridiculous Pomp and Pageantry of External Religion, which is apt to exhauſt the Vitals of true Genuine Piety, Devotion, and Virtue.

Others are, or may be offended, at his Hiſtorical Letters of the Four Monarchies; alledging, that theſe are foreign to his Buſineſs, as an Agent incognito for the Grand Signior. The ſame Fault they find with his Deſcriptions, Characters, and Hiſtories of the preſent Commonwealths in Europe: His Province being to watch the Motions, Counſels, and Tranſactions of the Living, and not to rehearſe the Facts and Exploits of the Dead.

In Anſwer to this; It ought to be conſider'd, That tho the Primary Deſign

ſign of the Ottoman Port in ſending this Arabian to Paris, was, to penetrate into the Secrets of our Chriſtian Princes and States, and to return conſtant Intelligence thereof to the Divan; yet this did not hinder, but that he might hold a Correſpondence with his Private Friends in Turkey, and ſend them frequent Letters on what Subjects he pleas'd, or as he thought would moſt oblige them. Much leſs cou'd he be excus'd from obeying the Orders he expreſly receiv'd from the Mufti, or any other Principal Miniſter of State, who ſhould require him, at his Hours of Leiſure, to tranſcribe either Ancient or Modern Hiſtories; or to draw Collections out of the moſt Eminent Greek and Roman Authors; knowing him to be skill'd in thoſe Obſolete Languages; and that ſuch Books were rare among the Turks, by reaſon that Printing is forbid throughout the Ottoman Empire. Therefore he cou'd do no leſs, in Duty and Common Civility, than Oblige the Mufti with an Abſtract of the Four Monarchies, which he himſelf had offer'd of his own Accord; and likewiſe gratifie the Expectations of Hamet the Secretary of State, who desir'd to be informed of the Governments, Laws, Religion, Customs, Manners, and Characters of us Europeans; which our Arabian perform'd as well as he could, during his Life: And had he liv'd longer, there is no Doubt but he would have proceeded in Describing England, Denmark, Swedeland, Russia, Poland, Hungary, and all the other Countries which he had not touch'd upon. But it seems, he was snatch'd away by some sudden and surprising Fate, tho not altogether unforeseen. For he all along intimates, that he had some Presages of being made a Sacrifice; especially, when he heard of the sudden Death, or Disappearance at least, of his Correspondent, Nathan Ben Saddi, the Jew at Vienna. For then he plainly tells his Friend Ogloo in a Letter, that he suspected he was made a-way by an Order from the Port, and that he expected to be served so himself in a little Time. And it is possible it might be so; it being usual with the Turkish Court, thus to reward the Merits of their most faith-faithful Miniſters, and crown all their Services with Martyrdom to the State.

As to what this laſt Volume contains more than was expreſs'd in the Preface to the Seventh. Here you have an Account of the horrid Poyſoning Trade that was practis'd in France, in the Year 1681 and 1682; as alſo ſome Remarks on our Popiſh Plot; on the Great Comet that appear'd about that Time; with a particular Abſtract of the Life, and an Account of the Barbarous Murder of Dr. Sharp, Archbiſhop of St. Andrews, and Primate of Scotland. He alſo touches upon the Perſecution of the Huguenots in France.

But that which ought to be moſt taken notice of, is, a Letter of his to Nathan Ben Saddi; wherein he highly extols the Journal of Garcoa, Nathan's Predeceſſor in that Poſt: Which Journal, the Tranſlator of theſe Volumes underſtanding to be in the Hands of the Italian who firſt found our Arabian's Papers, and with whom he has ſince contracted a Correſpondence; he has endeavour'd to prevail with him to communicate it to the Publiſher hereof. Wherein if he ſhall be ſo Happy as to ſucceed, he will in due Time tranſmit it to the World in our Mother-Tongue, to the Satisfaction and Benefit of the Publick.

to

Reader, Farewel; and envy not the Induſtrious.

A TA-

A TABLE OF THE LETTERS and Matters contained in this Volume.

VOL. VIII.

BOOK I.

LETTER I.

MAhmut the Arabian at Paris, to Mehemet an Exil'd Eunuch, at Grand Caire in Egypt. Page 1

He diſcovers to him his Exceſſive Melancholy on the Account of a Woman.

II. To the Selictar Aga, or Sword-Bearer to the Sultan. 4

Of the French Conqueſts in Lorrain, Alſace, Brabant, Flanders, Catalonia, and other Parts,

Parts. With an Account of a famous Victory obtain'd by Mareſchal Turenne over the Imperialiſts near Strasburgh.

III. To Mirmadolin, Santone of the Vale of Sidon. 7

A Philoſophical Diſcourſe of Purity, Abſtinence from Pleaſures, Vigilance, &c.

IV. To Ali, Baſſa. 13

Of the Spaniſh War; the Taking of divers Towns by the French. The Treaſon of the Chevalier de Rohan and others detected and puniſhed; and by that Means the Dutch Invaſion prevented.

V. To Cara Hali, Phyſician to the Grand Signior. 18

Of the Univerſal and Platonick Love, with which Mahmut always finds Himſelf affected.

VI. To Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa. 23

He complains of Infirmities and Old Age, deſiring to be recall'd from his Poſt at Paris.

VII. To Ali Ruſtan Begh, Seraſquier in Dalmatia. 28

Of a Challenge ſent from the Prince Palatine of the Rhine to Mareſchal Turenne, and the Mareſchal's Anſwer. Of private Duels.

VIII. To the ſame. 33

Of the famous Battel of Senef.

IX. To

The TABLE.

IX. To Mehemet, an exil'd Eunuch at Alcaire in Egypt.
A Melancholy Letter, on the Score of Human Ignorance and Errors.

X. To the Kaimacham. 42
Of the Arrival of Deputies from the Senate of Meſſina in Sicily to the French King, requeſting his Protection. Of the Affairs of that Iſland. Of the Duke of Vivonne, Mareſch. Feuillade, and Prince of Conde.

XI. To the Vizir Baſſa, at Conſtantinople. 48
He acquaints him with the Remarkable Juſtice of Muſtapha Zari, a Turk, to Monſieur Vaubrun, a Frenchman, and his Partner.

XII. To Ibrahim Eli Zeid, Hadgi, Effendi, Preacher to the Seraglio. 53
Of a reputed Miracle wrought publickly at Paris, by St. Genevieve, Patroneſs of that City. Of the Force of Religious Myſteries and Ceremonies.

BOOK II.

LETTER I.

TO Dgnet Oglou. 61
Of the Darkneſs of Human Knowledge in this Life.

The TABLE.

II. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 64
He acquaints him with the Death of Mareſch. Turenne; with ſome Remarkable Paſſages of his Life, and a few of his Sayings.

III. To the Kaimacham. 70
He re-capitulates ſeveral Events omitted in his former Letters of that Year. A remarkable Story of the Loſs of Treves. Of the French King's Inclination to Peace.

IV. To Abdel Melec Muly Omar, Preſident of the College of Sciences at Fez. 75
He entertains him with a Panegyrick of the Eternal Wiſdom; in a ſingular Stile.

V. To the Captain Baſſa. 81
He informs him of Two or Three Sea-Fights between the French, Hollanders, and Spaniards; in one of which, the Dutch Admiral De Ruiter was kill'd.

VI. To the Sage of Sages, the Myſterious Eremite, the Great Mohammed of Mount Uriel, in Arabia. 80
He acquaints him of the Change of his Opinion concerning the Eternity of the World, as to its preſent Form.

VII. To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Cuſtoms, and Superintendent of the Arſenal, at Conſtantinople. 90
Of the Taking of Philipsburgh from the French

French by the Confederate Princes and States: With a ſhort Hiſtory of that Town.

VIII. To Sephat Abercromil, Vanni, Effendi, Preacher to the Sultan. 92
Of the Progreſs which the Moloniſts or Quietiſts had then made in Europe.

IX. To Mirmadolin, Santone of the Vale of Sidon. 97
This Letter is a Kind of Rhapſody, in Praiſe of God, of Mahomet, Hali, Mecca, Medina, and the Alcoran.

X. To the Kaimacham. 103
Of the Taking of Valenciennes, Cambray, and St. Omers by the French. An Abſtract of Hiſtory concerning Cambray.

XI. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 108
Of the Love of Women; and the different Manner this Paſſion diſcovers it ſelf in People of various Nations, Ages, Qualities, Fortunes, and Conſtitutions.

XII. To the Captain Baſſa. 116
Of a Victory obtain'd at Sea by the French. Of the Taking the Iſle of Tabago from the Hollanders in America. From whence he takes Occaſion to diſcourſe of Magellanica, or the Southern Unknown World.

XIII. To Dgnet Oglou. 120

Of

The TABLE.

Of the General Superſtition, and Religious Eaſineſs of Mankind.

XIV. To Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa. 125

Of the Surrender of Friburg to the French.

BOOK III.

LETTER I.

To the Wiſeſt of the Wiſe, the moſt Venerable Mufti. 127

He preſents him with a ſhort Abſtract of the Macedonian Empire, and ſome particular Paſſages in the Life of Alexander the Great.

II. To Muſu Abu'l Yahyan, Profeſſor of Philoſophy at Fez. 142

He proceeds in the Deſcription of Conſtantinople, which he begun in a former Letter.

III. To Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa. 149

Of the Taking of Ghaunt, Ypres, Puicerda, and other Places, by the French. Of ſeveral Victories obtained by them in Germany.

IV. To Dalimalched, the Widow of Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Cuſtoms, &c. 152

He

He condoles the Death of her Husband, in a Triumphant Style, being assured that he is gone to Paradise: And expostulates with her about her Carriage to him in his Life.

V. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 156
He describes the Netherlands.

VI. To the Same. 163
He gives him an Account of Switzerland.

VII. To Dgnet Ogiou, at Damascus. 170
He rallies him for the Choice of that City; yet congratulates his Happiness, in being a Husbandman. Several Examples of Great Men, who have abandon'd all their Honours for that Manner of Life.

VIII. To Achmet Cupriogli, the most Exalted and Sage Vizir Azem. 176
Of a general Peace in Christendom.

IX. To Mehemet, an Exil'd Eunuch, at Alcaire in Egypt. 180
He relates a strange Thing that happened to him one Night in his Chamber; viz. An Apparition, or Spectre, on which he makes Remarks.

X. To the Cadilesquer of Romeli. 189
He informs him of the Murder of the Archbishop of St. Andrews in Scotland. With some Historical Remarks on the Scotch Privileges in France. XI.

The TABLE.

XI. To Hebatolla Mir Argun, Superior of the Derviches at Cogni in Natolia. 197
A Panegyrick on the Meſſias.

XII. To Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa. 202
He gives him a Character of Charles II. King of England. Glances upon the Popiſh Plot; And proves that ſome part of America was Planted by the Welſh.

XIII. To the moſt Magnanimous and Invincible Vizir Azem. 207
Of a Match between the King of Spain, and the Daughter of France; alſo of another in Agitation between the Dauphin of France and the Duke of Bavaria's Siſter.

XIV. To the Venerable Mufti. 212
He begins his Epitome of the Roman Hiſtory, which he formerly promiſed.

XV. To William Voſpel, a Recluſe of Auſtria. 219
He gives him a ſhort Account of his Religion.

XVI. To Murat, Baſſa. 224
Of the Marriage of the Dauphin of France with the Princeſs Anne Marie Victoire, Siſter to the Duke of Bavaria.

BOOK

The TABLE.

BOOK IV.

LETTER I.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 227
He gives him an Account of Geneva; with a ſhort Hiſtory of the War of this Republick with the Dukes of Savoy.

II. To Achmet, Baſſa. 234
Of the French Huguenots, and the Methods which the King took at that Time to Convert them.

III. To the Venerable Mufti. 240
He proceeds in the Roman Hiſtory, to the Aboliſhing the Kingly Government.

IV. To Orchan Cabet, Student in the Sciences, and Penſioner to the Sultan. 248
He entertains him with a Diſcourſe of the Soul, and its Separate State after Death. From whence he falls into a pleaſant Vein of Bantering.

V. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 257
He gives him an Account of the Republick of Venice; with the Manner of Electing their Doge or Duke, To

VI. To Osman Adrooneth. 268
He informs him of a New Comet appearing in Europe: From whence he Discourses of Comets in General, and of the great Uncertainty there is among Astronomers.

VII. To the Venerable Mufti. 278
He continues the Roman History to the Decline of that Empire.

VIII. To Dgnet Oglou. 288
He acquaints him with a Quarrel he had in the Midst of Wine and Mirth, with a French Priest, on the Account of Astrology and Comets.

IX. To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire. 293
He discourses of Candia and Genoua.

X. To Dgnet Oglou. 302
Of the Vanity and Deceitfulness of Astrology.

XI. To Ibro Kalphaser, Effendi, a Man of Letters at Constantinople. 313
He congratulates his Honour, in being chosen by the Mufti, to oversee the design'd Universal History of the World, sends him a Box of Manuscripts, with a Model of the whole Work.

XII. To the Wisest of the Wise, the Key of the Treasures of Knowledge, the Venerable Mufti. 323

He

He accuses the Chronology of the Jews and Christians: Discourses of the Egyptian, Assyrian, Indian, and Chinese Records; asserting, That the Deluge of Noah was not Universal.

XIII. To Cara Hali, Physician in Ordinary to the Grand Signior. 330

He acquaints him with his Maladies and Infirmities, begging his Advice and Help.

XIV. To Abdel Melec Muli Omar, President of the College of Sciences at Fez. 336

Of the Causes of the different Colour in Blacks and Whites: He proves, that they cannot both be the Descendants of Adam, but of a different Species. Of a Ship found in a Mine in Switzerland, fifty Fathom deep; and of a Whirl-Pool in Moscovy forty Miles in Compass, which swallows up Ships, and whatever else comes near it.

XV. To the Kaimacham. 342

Of the Discovery of a vast Number of Sorcerers and Magicians in France; with the Diabolical Arts practised by them in poysoning, bewitching, &c. With the King of France's Method of punishing them.

XVI. To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna. 348

Of the Apprehensions he is in, because of a Letter from him writ by another Hand. Of Count Tecli, and the Hungarian League League. He highly extols Carcoa's Journal.

XVII. To the Kaimacham. 352
He tells him, that he sent a particular Messenger to Vienna with a Letter to Nathan Ben Saddi, and that he was not to be found: With his Jealousies thereupon.

XVIII. To Dgnet Oglou. 355
He tells him plainly, that he fears Nathan Ben Saddi is made away by some Order from the Port; and that if so, he himself is likely to be made a Sacrifice after the same Manner: And therefore desires him to be Watchful on his Account, and Pry into the Secrets of the Divan.

LET-

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. VIII.

BOOK I.

LETTER I.

Mahmut the Arabian at Paris; to Mehemet, an Exil'd Eunuch, at Grand Caire in Egypt.

WHether it be an Effect of thy Melancholy Letter, or of my own ugly Constitution, I know not; but I am lately grown very Desperate, and resolv'd upon Death. I am tir'd with whatsoever I have yet enjoy'd in this World; and I expect no greater ſatisfaction, ſhould I live a Thouſand Years. Every Pleaſure appears but the ſame in different Forms; and they all agree, in leaving us afflicted with the ſame or greater Pain than they found us in: Which is a ſufficient Argument to a Man of Spirit, that he ought to die, in purſuit of his own Eaſe.

We walk here on Earth in an Enchanted Circle of Shadows and Mockeries: Our whole Life is full of Vanity and Miſtake. Every Man's Fortune is but a Repetition of Ixion's: We court Clouds inſtead of Divinities; and our moſt charming Fruitions conſiſt in Emptineſs.

Indeed, all this Viſible World is but a Mighty Pageant, a Pompous Emblem, a Gaudy Type of that Inviſible Region which is the Mother of Spirits. Oh! that it were lawful for a Mortal, to releaſe his Soul from its long irkſom Exile here Below, and ſend it Home to its Native Country, the Kingdom of Divine Ideas! Then wou'd I ſoon launch forth into the unknown Abyſs. But we muſt be reſign'd, and not think much to bear our ſeveral Deſtinies; and patiently wait for the appointed Hour of Tranſmigration: For it is in vain to think of haſtning or delaying our Fate. Beſides, for ought we know, the next Station may be worſe than this: Every thing is full of Myſterious Darkneſs. And therefore, prithee Mahomet, let thou and I lay aſide all fruitleſs Care and Sadneſs; be as

merry

merry as will consist with the Wisdom of a Man; and when thou findest this black Distemper approaching thee, run away from it, and shelter thy self in good Company. Arm thy self with Wine and Musick against the sullen Dæmon of Melancholy. But I counsel thee, to avoid Women, for they'l but encrease thy Malady.

'Tis one of that Sex has given me this fit of Grief, a Woman that I have loved too much: But she's Ingrateful, False and Cruel; she takes a singular delight in cheating me with false shews of Love and Friendship; and then in undeceiving me again. The same Tongue which at some times will drop soft kind obliging Words, at another Season shall utter nothing but Contempts, Defiances and Scorns.

Thou wilt wonder that a Man of my Age should be concern'd with any Passion for Women. I tell thee, My Friend, it is impossible for me to banish from my Heart, an Affection which has possessed it for above these Thirty Years. The Love of that Sex is riveted in our Nature, and our Blood must first grow Cold and be congeal'd by Death, before this Flame can be extinguish'd: Nay, many times it is more fervent, though of a short duration in our Latest Hours than in our Prime. As when the Oyl which feeds a Lamp is almost spent, the startled Flame begins to rouze it self, and burn afresh, as if 'twou'd fain subsist a little longer, tho on the very Dregs of its accustomed Fuel; it crackles and flashes with greater Noiſe and Luſtre than before; but preſently expires. So does this Amorous Fire, when we are neareſt to our Diſſolution, begin to trouble us moſt, and makes our Soul to blaze with Fevers of Deſire and Grief, knowing its Period is near.

Mehemet, Let thou and I keep our Affections for the Beautiful and Conſtant Daughters of Paradiſe, who will never caſt an Eye on any Man beſide their own. Doubtleſs, this is part of Supream Felicity.

Paris, 14th. of the 10th. Moon,
of the Year 1673.

LETTER II.

To the Selictar Aga, or Sword-Bearer to the Sultan.

THis has been a Terrible Campagne to the Germans and their Confederates: For when they firſt took the Field in the Spring, their Forces amounted to Sixty Thouſand Men, but now at the breaking up, and going to their Winter Quarters, they could not number above Twenty Thouſand. So that they have loſt Two Parts in Three of their Army. Whilſt the French proſper and are victorious; taking their Towns and Caſtles, ſubduing whole Provinces to the Obedience

of

of this Invincible Monarch, and extending his Conqueſts far and wide through the Franche-Comptè, Lorrain, Alſace, Brabant, Flanders, Catalonia, and even to the Iſles of the Sea.

I have formerly given an Account to the Miniſters of the Port, of all the moſt Remarkable Actions perform'd in theſe ſeveral Quarters; there remains only a late famous Victory gain'd by the Mareſchal de Turenne, near Strasbourg, of which I cannot give thee the Particulars, neither is it very Material. But, in brief I ſhall acquaint thee, that through the Connivance of the Elector of Mayence, and the Citizens of Strasbourg, the Confederate Forces, amounting to Forty Thouſand Men, got paſſage over the Rhine, and had like to have ſurpriz'd the French, who were not above Twenty Five Thouſand ſtrong. But the Vigilance and good Conduct of Monſieur Turenne, prevented their Deſign, and turn'd the Fortune of War to his own ſide. This Wiſe General conſidering the unequal Numbers of his Enemies, did not think it fit to engage his whole Army at once with theirs, leſt he ſhould be oppreſſed with their Multitude, being almoſt double in number to his. But he fought them by Detachments, ſetting upon them in their March: And this ſucceeded very fortunately, for he was in poſſeſſion of the moſt advantagious Poſts and Paſſes of the Country. He lined the Hedges with ſome of his Men, who gall'd the Enemies as they marched along the Roads. He planted others on the Declive of Hills, under the Covert of Thickets which grew on each ſide of deep Ways, through which the Enemy muſt paſs; theſe annoy'd them ſorely from their ſhady Heights, whilſt ſome attack'd them in the Front. Thus by gradual Skirmiſhes, he cut off many Thouſands, and ſtraw'd the Roads with Dead Bodies: 'Till the Confederates perceiving how they were embaraſs'd on all Hands, took the Advantage of a certain Wood, where they retrench'd themſelves, and ſtood in their own defence a long time. But the French at length forc'd them from this ſhelter, and then began a formal Battel, which prov'd bloody to the Imperialiſts: For they had above Three Thouſand of their Men killed upon the Spot, beſides thoſe that were wounded and taken Priſoners. They loſt alſo Ten Pieces of their Cannon, and the Ground was cover'd with Cuiraſſes, Halberds, Pikes, Muskets, Swords, and all ſorts of Arms, which the Confederates left behind in their precipitate Retreat by Night. For ſo general a Conſternation had ſeiz'd the Minds of the Souldiery, that all the Rhetorick of the Officers was not ſufficient to ſtop their Flight. In this Battel the Mareſchal de Turenne had his Horſe kill'd under him by a Musket Shot, but he receiv'd no Hurt himſelf.

He is a Fortunate and Wiſe General, knowing how to ſerve himſelf of all Opportunities and Advantages of Time, Place, and other Circumſtances which offer themſelves to a Man's Conſideration in time of War.

He

He never attacques an Enemy, without being sure of getting the Victory, or at least of retiring securely and honourably from the Combat. The French use to say, That if the Prince of Conde had an Alloy of Turenne's Earth in his Temper, and Turenne had the Prince of Conde's Fire, there would not be Two such other Generals in the whole World.

Sereno Aga, Nature has dispens'd her Gifts in thrifty Parcels: Every Man has his Genial Excellency; and 'tis rare to find one whose Faults do not counterpoise his Perfections. May Heaven turn the right Scale for thee and me.

Paris, 2d. of the 1st. Moon,
of the Year 1674.

LETTER III.

To Mirmadolin, Santone of the Vale of Sidon.

NOW I will indulge sacred Thoughts, and follow the Motions of Wisdom; I will obey the Inspirations of my better Genius, and discourse of things not fit for Vulgar Ears. I will not cast my Holy things to Dogs, nor expose that which is precious to the Feet of Swine. Let the Smith labour at his Anvil, and Hammer the Mettal into what Form he pleaſes; his Eye is waſted with the perpetual Vapour of the Fire; and as to Intellectual things, he is ſtark Blind. So is the Carpenter who works in Timber, and hews away the Knobs and Roughneſſes with his Axe; he ſaws it into Planks, and afterwards ſmooths it with his Plane; he marks out his Work with Line and Plummet, and meaſures it with Rule and Compaſs; he fits one Piece to another, and when all is poliſh'd and prepar'd to his Mind, he joyns them together in a Frame, and rejoyces in the ſucceſs of his Induſtry and Skill.

Theſe and all other Mechanicks bend their Mind to their Work; that is the ſcope of their Ambition; and when they have done, they eat and drink the fruit of their Labours. They ſtudy not the Sayings of Famous Men, nor penetrate into the Miſteries of Dark Parables; they have no Inclination to ſeek out the wiſdom of the Ancients, or to meditate on the Inſtructions of Sages. Therefore with ſuch as theſe I will not converſe, or talk of the way of Perfection: Nor yet with Wreſtlers, Fencers or Soldiers: I have as little hopes to prevail on Mariners, Lawyers and Courtiers, or on any that are entangled in Worldly Affairs. But I addreſs my ſelf to a Good and knowing Man, who underſtands himſelf, and what his Buſineſs is in this World; who comprehends the force of the Chains which intangle his Soul in this Mortal Life, and is inſtructed in the Method of diſingaging himſelf. To ſuch an one I ſpeak, and not to others, who

lye

lye snoring in their Lethargy, and will not be wak'd.

Certainly 'tis as impossible, that one and the same Rule of Life, should fit the various Tempers and Conditions of Men, as that one and the same course should be taken, effectually to dispose a Man to Sleep, and violently to keep him Awake. For he that would sleep out his whole Life, if any be so sottish, it behoves him to procure a constant supply of things which create Sleep. Whereas he that designs to be Vigilant and Active, must furnish himself with such things as chase away Sleep, and incline to Watchfulness. The former therefore ought to give himself up to Gluttony, Drunkenness and Surfeiting: He should have a dark House, a soft and large Bed: And should use all manner of Applications that cause Drowsiness; as Soporiferous Perfumes, Potions, &c. Whereas the latter ought to be always Sober, to Drink moderately, and Eat a slender Diet; to have a light House, a serene Air, a sense of Pain, a streight and hard Bed, little fitted for Mans Repose.

But whether we Mortals are in a Place where we ought perpetually to be upon our Watch; or whether our whole Life ought to be but one Night of Sleep, is known only to such as thee, who hast discover'd the Prestigious Magick of the Body, and how the Soul is enchanted in this World; who hast found out the Native Activity of the Mind, and how it comes to be stupified by the hidden Opiates that lie lurking in the Flesh.

Holy Santone, whilst we are in this World of Shadows, we are perfect Exiles, banish'd from our Native Country, which is the World of Real Substances: The more we are drench'd in Matter, the farther do we straggle from Home, wandring in foreign Desarts of Enchanted Ground, where we converse with none but empty Spectres, Fairies, Dæmons, Elfs, and cheating Apparitions. For all that's in this Outward World, is but a false Delusion, the Mimickry of Nature; a heap of Shadows revers'd and tinctur'd with a faint Projection from the World of Light.

Knowing therefore these things, let us make haste to return to our Native Seats again; let us divest our selves of the strange Habits we have taken up by Imitation in this our Pilgrimage, and Purge our Minds of all the Ill Qualities we have Imbib'd on Earth: Let us cast off corrupt Affections, Appetites and Inclinations, with every vain and false Opinion. When we are free'd from all these Weights, our Souls will easily mount aloft, their Wings never flagging, 'till they perch upon the Trees of Paradise. What is more Generous than the Mind of Man, when once awaken'd from the Slumbers of this Mortal Life? How it despises these Terrene Enjoyments, and only pants and thirsts for the Supream Delights Above! As Iron turns it self, and makes its Amorous Approaches to the Magnet; so is the Soul attracted by the Original Essence which is its Source and Center.

There

There are Two Species of Chains which tye the Soul down to this Earth, and cause her to grow dull and torpid, as if she were inebriated with deadly Poison, forgetting her very Native Faculty of Contemplation. These are Pleasure and Pain, of which our Sense is the Author, with the Prepossessions, Phantasies, Opinions, Memories and Appetites which accompany our Sense. These hurry and precipitate the Soul down from her proper Mansion, and alienate her from the Love of the only true Substantial Being: Therefore we ought to abstain from Sensible Things as much as in us lies; and shun all Objects that stir up Irregular Appetites, and produce Absurdities in our Reason.

How many strange Affections flow from our Taste, binding fast the Soul with a double Cord; whilst the high Relish and Gust of Savoury Meats, ensnare her in the Palate as in a Net. and the load of indigested Crudities weighs and sinks her down into the Belly, where she's kept as in a Dungeon, till Sacred Abstinence releases her again?

The Sense of Touch does often draw the Unwary Soul forth from her Fastnesses within, trepanning her with soft Allurements and sly Promises of Pleasure to take the Air o'th' Body. Thus having got her into the open Field, an Ambuscade of Lusts, Concupiscences, Perturbations, Fears, Cares, Love, Joy, Grief, and other Passions rush upon her on a sudden, and take her Captive. How necessary therefore is it to be always on our

Guard,

Guard, and not to lull our ſelves in dangerous Security? Nor ought we to be raſh and fool-hardy, in venturing on a Combat; where 'tis better to decline it, leſt inſtead of victory, we betray the Weakneſs of our Arms, and Want of Proper Conduct.

O Perfect Man! Thou ſeeſt theſe things in clearer Light than I; 'tis not to inform thee, that I write, but to confirm my ſelf, whilſt I collect my ſcatter'd Thoughts and put 'em into Order. If thou ſhalt vouchſafe to ſend me thy Conceptions on this Subject, I will revere the bleſſed Diſpatch, as tho it were an Oracle.

In the mean while, may Heaven regard thy Innocent Life, and ſtill protect thee from the Caſualties that threaten all of Mortal Race. May thy Prayers be heard, and thy Good Works rewarded. Finally, may thy End be like that of Enoch, who never ſaw Death, but was tranſlated alive to Paradiſe.

Paris, 9th. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1674.

LET-

LETTER IV.

To Ali, Baſſa.

IT is evident, That the French Arms are deſtin'd not to ruſt: One Provocation or other always keeps them in Action. The Neighbouring Princes and States take their Turns to affront and injure this Monarch, and ſometimes they ſet upon him all together. Surely, they Envy and Fear the riſing Fortune of France, and therefore ſtrive by Stratagems and Force to check its Growth.

There having been ſeveral Acts of Hoſtility done by the Governour of the Spaniſh Netherlands, without any Hopes of a fair Redreſs, this King found himſelf oblig'd to declare open War againſt Spain.

This was done very lately, and at the ſame time the Duke de Navailles was ſent with an Army into Flanders; where he ſoon took the Town and Caſtle of Aubeſpine; the Towns of Peſme and Mornais; the Caſtle of Oigny, with the Towns of Gray and Vezont.

This laſt is a Place of conſiderable Importance, being called the Gate of Lorrain, and the Poſtern of the Franche Comté. Whereby this Monarch is become actual Maſter of the Baillage of Amont, which comprehends above Five Hundred Villages.

The Spaniards ſeeing him thus Succeſsful, and that they could not by open Reſiſtance

ſtop

ſtop the courſe of his Victories, took another Method, and ſought to undermine him by Plots, and Confederacies with ſome of his Subjects.

They had agreed with the Chevalier de Rohan, to ſettle on him a Penſion of Eight Thouſand Livres a Year, and to preſent him out of Hand, with Five Thouſand Piſtoles, if he would put them in Poſſeſſion of Quillebeuf, a ſtrong Place in the Province of Normandy.

The Chevalier de Rohan had made himſelf and them believe, that it was in his Power with much Eaſe to perform this: But he was miſtaken. Some of his Friends ſay, he never thought of accompliſhing his Bargain, his Credit being too ſmall in that Place; and that he only aim'd to repair his Fortune, by cheating the Spaniards of their Five Thouſand Piſtoles. However, the Plot was diſcover'd to the French King, who has his Spies in all Corners of the Kingdom. The unfortunate Chevalier was ſeiz'd, and brought to the Baſtille, and being convicted of Treaſon, was condemn'd to loſe his Head, which was accordingly Executed.

The Marquis of Villars, and the Sieur de Pereau, ſuffer'd the ſame Puniſhment, as Accomplices in the Treaſon. Another French Lord of the Party, was Kill'd in defending himſelf againſt thoſe who were order'd to arreſt him. Theſe had undertaken to deliver other Places of Strength into the Hands of the Hollanders who firſt begun the War.

Had

Had their Conſpiracy taken Effect; it would have been no difficult matter to corrupt other Grandees with the Spaniſh Gold, and ſo a Third Part of France might have been ſold for a Price not allowable in the Mercats of Kings. For it ſeems the Hollanders and Spaniards, were upon the Point of making their Deſcents in Normandy and Bretagne, being invited thereto by the large Promiſes of the Perſons before-named, and their Confederates, who made them believe, that a great Part of the Nobility and Gentry of thoſe Provinces wou'd come over to them, as ſoon as they ſaw them Landed; and there was no need to fear any oppoſition from the Vulgar, who are bound to follow the Fortune of their Lords. Beſides they are always deſirous of Novelty and Change.

There is nothing ſo Abject, Poor and Contemptible, as the Peaſantry of France, who labour only for others, whilſt they can hardly get Bread for themſelves out of all their Toil. In a word, they are abſolute Slaves to them whoſe Tenants they are, and whoſe Lands they farm. They are not more oppreſſed by the Publick Taxes and Gabels, than they are by the Private Impoſitions of their Country Lords, beſide the unreaſonable Demands of the Prieſts. Theſe Sufferings diſpoſe them to wiſh for any Revolution in the Government, from which they might hope to receive gentler Uſage.

'Twas this partly which encourag'd the Hollanders and Spaniards to think of invading France:

France: Otherwiſe, they had only been upon the Defenſive. This King has to do with a great many Potent Enemies. The Emperor holds him play on the Rhine; the Duke of Lorrain gives him Diverſion in his New Conqueſts on that ſide. The King of Spain puts him to a great Expence of Men and Mony in Flanders. The Hollanders infeſt him by Sea, and would do by Land, if they knew which way. Yet this Monarch copes with 'em all; baffles their Plots and Intrigues, foils their Arms, daily gains Ground; and by a continued Series of Conqueſts, makes it apparent, that his is the only flouriſhing Fortune in the Weſt.

The King of Sweden had made certain Propoſals of Peace between the Emperor, the King of France, the King of Spain, the States of Holland, and ſome of the Electoral Princes. In order to which, he offer'd himſelf to become a Mediator between them. He ſent his Embaſſadors accordingly, to a Place agreed upon by all Parties, as the moſt convenient for Conferences of this Nature. So did all the other Princes and States concern'd in the War. But it ſeems there was a groſs Affront put upon Guillaume de Furſtemberg, Plenipotentiary to the Elector of Cologne, by the Marquis de Grana, Embaſſador to the Emperor.

This was deeply reſented at the French Court, as being a Notorious Breach of the Law of Nations; and the King publiſhed a Manifeſto, wherein he charg'd the Emperor with with giving Order for this Insult; declaring also, that unless due Satisfaction were made, he would withdraw his Embassadors from the Place of Conference, and seek Justice with Sword in Hand.

He complain'd to the King of Swedeland of this Violence, and enter'd into a close and strict League with him. Gustavus presently recalls his Embassadors from the publick Meeting, commanding them to protest against the Action of the Marquis de Grana, as a Violation of the Civil Laws. The French King has done the same, and all Things seem to portend a general Distraction in Europe.

Those of the Roman Church fight against one another, as well as they combine against the Protestants, whom they esteem as the Common Enemy, and have little beter Regard for them, than we Moselmans have for the Persian Kyzilbaschi, whom we execrate as abominable Hereticks. One sort of Protestants also cabal against another; the Lutherans hate and persecute the Calvinists; which the Latter return with equal Animosity. These Infidels are caught in the Devil's Snare, where they bite and devour one another. They are in egregious Darkness, tos'd about in the Tempest of Errors. They are surrounded with Enchantments: Their Guides are Sorcerers and Magicians: Hell has a Hand in all their Devices.

O ye True Believers, lift up your Heads! For the Hour is approaching, wherein the Ancient Ancient Prophecies must be fulfilled; That the Dragon of the East, shall wage War with the Eagle of the West, and shall devour him Whole with all his Feathers. Woe be to thee O Land of Japhet, in the Year 1700 of the Christians Style.

Mighty Bassa, thou who hast not number'd half my Years, mayst live to see these Things come to pass. As for me, I am hastning to the Spirits of my Fathers, to a Region of Silence, and Eternal Retirement, to a Place where all the Vanities of this Earth shall be forgotten.

In the Mean Time, live thou to be a Witness of the Grand Revolution which will astonish all the World.

Paris, 7th. of the 3d. Moon, of the Year 1674.

LETTER V.

To Cara Hali, Physician to the Grand Signior.

PRaise be to God, from whom alone proceed Health, Long Life, and Immortal Happiness: In the whole Family of Fevers, I never was much subject to any, except it were that of Love. This indeed is become Habitual to me; 'tis grown a perfect Hectick; sure-ſurely 'tis more than Second Nature. I feel ſomething in the very Roots of my Eſſence, prompting me to Eternal Softneſſes, wild melting Fits of freſh Platonick tender Paſſions. Nothing can provoke my Hatred, but an Obdurate Surly-temper'd Fellow, who being the Offſpring of ſome Bloody Butcher, Poulterer, or Greaſy Cook, his very Face portends a preſent Maſſacre; and all his Words breath nothing elſe but a continued Train of Cruel Wrongs, and Violences againſt the Innocent. Pity to him, ſounds like the News of Famine, to a Starving Man. But if you'd make him ſmile, and put him in good Humour, tell him how he may get an Eſtate, by oppreſſing the Fatherleſs and Widows; or encreaſe his Wealth, by ruining whole Families. Tell him how he may overreach ſome Silly Credulous Young Heir, or outwit his Neighbour in a Bargain. He cheriſhes a Spider in his Brain, and his Heart is full of Webs. To ſuch a Temper as this, I cannot be reconciled; there is an Innate Antipathy, an Immortal Contrariety in our Souls. My Spirit is daunted, and retreats within me at the ſight of ſuch an one: A Languor and Faintneſs ſeizes my Limbs. I am like one that has touch'd a Torpedo.

Surely, there is no Species of Four-footed Beaſts, of Birds, of Fiſh, of Inſects, Reptiles or any other living Things, whoſe Nature is not found in Man. How exactly agreeable to the Fox are ſome Mens Tempers? Whilſt others are perfect Bears in Human Shape.

Shape. Here you ſhall meet a Crocodile, who ſeeks with feigned Tears to entrap you to your Ruin: There a ſly Serpent creeps and winds himſelf into your Affections; and when he is well-warm'd with Favours, on a ſudden he will bite and ſting you to Death. Tygers, Lions, Leopards, Panthers, Wolves, and all the Monſtrous Generations of Africk, may be ſeen Maſquerading in the Forms of Men. And 'tis not hard for an obſerving Mind to ſee their Natural Complexion, through the borrow'd Vizard. The Phyſiognomy of Vice and Vertue, are eaſily diſtinguiſh'd. There are ſome ſecret Characters in every Face, which ſpeak the Nature of the Perſon. So does Platonick Love, with Eagle Eyes ſoon trace the Signatures of what is Amiable in the Soul. We read the hidden Qualities of Men at the firſt Glance; and hence are laſting Friendſhips often contracted. I love my Friends without Reſerve; and becauſe thoſe are very few among our Mortal Race, I contract Familiarities with the Harmleſs Animals: I ſtudy like a Lover to oblige and win their Hearts, by all the tender Offices I can perform. I bear with Patience their wild froward Tricks, till conſtant Perſeverance vanquiſhes their ſtubborn Humours: Then when we once begin to underſtand each other aright, they make me a Thouſand ſweet Returns of Gratitude according to their Kind. When I am Melancholy, they'll ſoon divert me with one pretty Trick or other, as if they were ſenſible of my Pain.

one

But becauſe my Love is large and ſtrong, ſtill ſeeking to dilate it ſelf, though ſtill recoyling from the degenerate Race of Men; I go into the Fields and Woods, and make my ſilent Court unto the Trees and Flowers, and ſometimes I converſe in Raillery with Eccho's. I languiſh on the Banks of Chryſtal Streams, and pine away for an old Moſſy Rock. The Oak enflames me with a Sacred Paſſion, when I behold her Venerable Bulk and Shade. I could almoſt turn Druid for her ſake, and take my Reſidence up for ever in her hollow Trunk; where the Kind Genii of the Air wou'd viſit me, and tell me Things to come, inſtructing me in all the Myſteries of Nature; for I'm in Love ev'n with thoſe Inviſible Beings; and often tell my Paſſion to 'em in the Woods, or on ſome Mountain, where the Courteous Winds tranſport my Words, and waft their ſecret Anſwers back again. Then is my Soul ſnatch'd up in Sacred Ecſtaſies, becauſe th'Immortals condeſcend to talk with me. I often fall into a Trance, and wake not till the Sun is got half way into t'other Hemiſphere. Then I reſolve to paſs away the Night in this ſweet Solitude.

Had I the Tongues, or Pens of Cicero and Demoſthenes, I could not to the Life expreſs the Pleaſures that I feel at ſuch a Time, when free and undiſturb'd I can for ſeveral Hours behold the Motions of the Moon and

Stars,

Stars. Oh God! What Thoughts, what Contemplations riſe within my Breaſt? My Raviſh'd Soul is ready to break Priſon for Joy, when 'tis inſpir'd with certain Demonſtrations of the World's Eternity. Methinks at ſuch a Time, I hear the Noiſe and Buſtle of the Worlds Above: Methinks I ſee the Active, Buſie Tenants of the Moon and Stars, trudging about their daily Buſineſs, even like us Mortals here Below. Then 'tis I nauſeate the narrow Principles of Ignorant, Superſtitious Men; I hate to think of e'er returning to the City again, there to prophane my Reaſon with the vain Diſcourſe of Self-conceited Fools and Idiots. I am cloy'd with Life, and wiſh to die amidſt theſe charming Speculations. Thus do I paſs the Time away, till fair Aurora uſhers in the Roſy-finger'd Morn. Then I begin to reflect on my Duty as a Moſelman, and Slave to the Grand Signior. I haſte to waſh my ſelf in the next Stream, and chearfully proſtrate my ſelf upon the Ground, adoring the Eternal Source of all Things. After which, abundantly ſatisfied with theſe Nocturnal Pleaſures, I return to the City and to my Buſineſs; conſidering, That I were not wholly born for Contemplation.

Learned Hali, I wiſh thee conſummate Happineſs in this Life, and fortunate Tranſmigrations after Death; praying alſo, that I may merit one Day to enjoy thy Company in Paradiſe, where we may diſcourſe theſe Things Things more at large, and in a clearer Light than what this Earth affords. Adieu.

Paris, 2d. of the 5th. Moon, of the Year 1674.

LETTER VI.

To Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa.

TO what Purpoſe am I kept longer in Paris? Why do the Miniſters of the Port, put the Grand Signior to a needleſs Expence, in maintaining here an Old Superannuated Slave, not worth his daily Bread? And yet, God knows, I eat not much, neither can I taſte any Pleaſure in that little I eat. My Refections are like the Entertainments of Magical Tables, where the Eye is deluded with a fair ſhew of various Delicacies, but the Stomach is not ſatisfied with any real Food, nor the Body ſtrengthened by any ſubſtantial Nouriſhment. Only the languiſhing Imagination feeds on Phantaſtick Diſhes, mere Shadows, and Enchanted Reſemblances of Solid Meat; while the Man is ready to faint for Hunger. So I ſeem to my ſelf to Eat and Drink, but 'tis with ſo little guſt at preſent, and I receive ſo little benefit from it afterwards, that all appears no more than a Viſionary Feaſt, or a Collation in a Dream.

I have now pass'd the Grand Climacter of Human Life, being enter'd into the Sixty Fourth Year of my Age. My Senses droop, and all the Faculties of my Soul and Body decay apace. My Bones are weary of supporting their accustomed Burden. My Sinews and Muscles refuse to perform the Offices of Motion, at least their Vigor is much slacken'd and impair'd. In a Word, the Infirmities of my Body have rank'd me under a new Predicament; I am become a Three-footed Animal, being forced to walk with a Staff, to prevent the necessity of Metamorphosing my Hands to Feet, and crawling on all Four.

Judge now, Illustrious Arab, after what I have said, whether I am fitting to do the Grand Signior service in this Station. As for the Intrigues of the Court, I am quite tyr'd of them. Besides here are now no more Richlieu's and Mazarini's in Being, with whom I might insinuate on the score of Skill in translating Greek, Sclavonick, Arabick, and other Eastern Languages. Osmin the Dwarf is also Dead, from whom I us'd to learn many Secrets. Fate has also snatch'd away several Courtiers with whom I had intimate Converse. Add to this, that Eliachim grows Old and Crazy, who was once as my Right Hand: So prompt and dextrous in any Business of Difficulty; Faithful also as my own Heart, which never was tainted with the least Symptom of Disloyalty. So that all things consider'd, I cannot see what the Sublime Ministers can propose in retaining me at Paris.

Sublime

I do not desire as formerly, to travel into India, or any other Region of the East: I do not so much as Covet to see my own Native Country, for which I have had such passionate Longings. No, every Place will be Arabia to me, where I may rest from Businesses of State, and shut up my latter Days in Quietness. It is Time for me to bid Adieu to the Active Life, and betake my self wholly to Contemplation. I would fain abandon not only the actual Vanities of this fading World, but the very remembrance and thoughts of them. My Mind is nauseated with the Idea's of past Folly, which Men falsly call Pleasure: And I find no gust in any thing but the Meditation of Death, and the unknown State of departed Souls. All other Things are uncertain Toys, and empty Trifles. But that great change, which no Mortal hath ever yet escap'd, is stable, permanent, and fix'd by Destiny. Fate has set the Period, which winds up the Epocha of every Mans Life in this visible State, and begins a new Hejira, whereof we have no Computation; in regard we have no Correspondence with that unknown World: Neither are there any certain Histories extant, which can rightly inform us. The Flight of the Soul from the Body begins the Mysterious Date; but where or when it will end, is not known to us that stay behind. This therefore alone is worthy of an Old Man's Thoughts, how to prepare himself for Death, since he cannot protract the Term of his Life, beyond the Moment allotted by Heaven. Neither can he be assur'd what will become of him afterwards.

Think not, Serene Bassa, that I am going to lay a Train for the Reputation of a Saint, or wou'd set up all on a sudden for an extraordinary Pious Man. No, there's nothing of that in't. I hate the rigid Hypocrisie of forc'd Penance; and the Religious Lunacy of those, who never think they do enough to atone for their Sins, unless they outdo Humanity it self in their cruel Mortifications. These are Monsters in all good Divinity, and their Example is not to be followed.

What I aim at in this Discourse is, That as according to the Order of Nature, and Will of Destiny, we are born Men, so we should take care to Live and Die. And if we have suffer'd the former part of our Life to elapse without due Reflection on so important a Truth; 'tis but Reason, that when we approach near the Grave; when all our Senses, Faculties and Members do the part of King Philip's Page, putting us daily and hourly in Mind of our Mortality: 'Tis but Reason, I say, that then we should begin to recollect our selves, and to think whereabouts we are; that we may not be surprized by the Inevitable Decree of Fate, when it comes to be put in Execution; nor die less than our selves.

Besides,

Beſides there is another advantage in being thus prepar'd for the laſt things; ſince it equally arms us againſt all intermediate Calamities, ſuppoſing we ſhou'd live longer than we reckon. He that can boldly ſtare Death in the Face, will not eaſily turn his Back upon any Misfortune of this Inconſtant Life. But receiving all things with an even Temper, renders himſelf happy in the midſt of Troubles, Loſſes, Diſgraces, Pains, Sickneſſes, and other Caſualties which aſſault all that live on Earth.

Magnificent Baſſa, all that I have ſaid, is but a Prologue to my main purpoſe, which is to deſire thy Mediation with the Firſt Vizier, that I may be recall'd from an Employment wherein I cannot be ſo ſerviceable as I have been; and which at the ſame Time, by impoſing on me a Thouſand Cares, takes from me the poſſibility of preparing as I ought to do, for that Tranſmigration, which in a little Time I muſt paſs through.

In a Word, Right Noble Kerker, I deſire the Privilege to end my Days in Conſtantinople, among the Moſelmans, under the Venerable Shade of Moſks and Minarets, conſecrated to the Service and Honour of the Eternal Unity. Let me not have worſe Uſage than the ancient Roman Souldiers had, who when they had ſerved in the Wars ſuch a certain number of Years, were diſcharg'd with an Honourable Penſion.

This is all the Favour I requeſt, who have ſerv'd the Grand Signior faithfully and with Succeſs theſe Eight and Thirty Years, in a Country of Infidels. But if my Superiors ſhall determine otherwiſe, I am reſign'd to their Pleaſure, and to the Will of Deſtiny.

Paris, 22d. of the 6th. Moon, of the Year 1674.

LETTER VII.

To Ali Ruſtan Begh, Seraſquier in Dalmatia.

THou ſhalt hear how a famous Chriſtian General, the Mareſchal de Turenne, deported himſelf, when he was lately challeng'd to a ſingle Combat, by the Prince Palatine of the Rhine.

It ſeems, this later has been a great Sufferer by the preſent War between France and the Confederate Princes; for his Country lying near the Rhine was expos'd to both Parties, and the French firſt enter'd it.

There were ſome Engliſh Troops in the French Army, who had conceiv'd an Implacable Revenge againſt the Subjects of the Palatine, in regard many of their Comrades had been barbarouſly handled by them. Wherefore they made great Devaſtation where-where-ever they came; burnt Five and Twenty great Villages to the Ground, and Five ſmall Cities. In a word, they quite ruin'd in Fifteen Days Time, the whole Country, which is eſteem'd the moſt pleaſant and agreeable Part of Europe.

This put the Elector all in Choler, and he wrote a ſharp Letter to the Mareſchal Turenne, threatning him in a furious Manner, and bidding him chuſe the Place, where he might fight with him in ſingle Duel. But the Sage Mareſchal retaining his uſual Moderation, and not at all mov'd at the Palatines, Letter, anſwer'd it in theſe or the like Terms; That the Proceedings of the Engliſh Regiments were without his Order or Approbation; That he was infinitely troubled at the Violences which had been committed; and that the chief Authors had been puniſh'd: Nevertheleſs, he could not but Declare, That the cruel Treatment which the Engliſh had met with, had ſo exaſperated their Companions, that it was no wonder to ſee them execute their Revenge even on the very Inanimate Things. And that in the firſt heat and tranſport of their Fury, they had not leiſure to examine who were guilty and who not. He added likewiſe, That if the Poſt which the King his Maſter had appointed him, would permit him to accept of his Challenge, he would not refuſe it, counting it an Honour to meaſure his Arms with thoſe of ſo Illuſtrious a Prince: But that as things were, he deſir'd to be excus'd.

In former Days ſuch an Anſwer as this, would have been taken for an Argument of Cowardiſe, in a Man profeſſing Arms. There was nothing more common among theſe Infidels, than to decide their private Controverſies, Grudges and Quarrels by the Sword; and their Laws allow'd it. If any Man had accus'd another wrongfully, or had done him any other injury, he did not run preſently to the Cadi's or Lawyers for Redreſs, but had Recourſe to his Arms: And whoſoever got the Victory, his Cauſe was pronounc'd juſt. But ſince the Commerce which has been eſtabliſh'd between the Moſelmans and the Nazarens, theſe later have learned to forſake ſo impious a Practice, being aſham'd that the Followers of Mahomet, whom they call Infidels, ſhou'd outſtrip them in the Peaceableneſs of their Temper, a Vertue ſo earneſtly recommended to the Practice of all Chriſtians by Jeſus the Son of Mary. Beſides, they have found the inconvenience of theſe private Combats, and they are generally forbidden now in moſt Countries of Europe. This is owing to the Examples of the Moſelmans, whoſe Anger againſt each other ſcarce ever proceeds to contumelious Words, much leſs to Blows, or any Attempt upon Life. For when a Diſpute ariſes between Two True Believers, and they become never ſo little paſſionate thereupon, 'tis but for a Third Perſon, one of the Faithful, to interpoſe himſelf, and reproach them with violating the Laws of the Prophet, and the Honour of their Profeſſion, and they immediately are made Friends again. Such Magick there is in the Force of theſe Words; Fie, Fie! What? Moſelmans, and Quarrel? The uſual Reprimand of the By-Standers. Which is an evident Argument, That our Holy Religion has a greater Influence on the Hearts and Conſciences of thoſe that profeſs it, than has that of the Nazarens. For whilſt theſe pretend to believe and honour the Meſſias as their Lawgiver, they diſobey him in their daily Practice, and ſo give the Lye to their Faith, diſcovering that it has no Efficacy on their Morals. Doubtleſs, the Meſſias was Holy, Chaſt, Peaceable, Humble and Harmleſs. But it is rare to find any of theſe Virtues among his Followers. He bid them return Good for Evil, Bleſſings for Curſes, and to ſuffer all Injuries patiently, after his Example; but they invert the Order of his Precepts, and read them backward, as they ſay Witches do the Paſter-noſter.

their

When Judas came to Seize him in the Garden of Gethſemani, with a Train of Officers and Ruffians, one of Jeſus's Retinue drew his Whinnier, and cut off an Ear from the Servant of the High Prieſt. But the Son of Mary was ſo far from commending his Zeal in this, that he bid him put up his Sword, telling him withal, That whoſoever draws the Sword, ſhall periſh by the Sword. At the ſame Time, he reſtor'd the Fellows Ear again by a Miracle.

Magnanimous Seraſquier, what I have ſaid, entrenches not on the Right of Lawful War in Defence of ones Country, or of the Volume brought down from Heaven. The Sacred Combat was ever allowed of by God and Man.

Thou art now engag'd in this Cauſe againſt Infidels: Fight generouſly, and Vanquiſh. But enter not into private Duels with any Man, though he be a Prince, without the Grand Signior's Conſent. For the Safety of his Royal Perſon depends upon the Preſervation of his Faithful, Valiant, and Wiſe Generals.

Paris, 25th. of the 8th. Moon, of the Year 1674.

LETTER

LETTER VIII.

To the ſame.

I Will now give thee a brief Account of the Famous Battel of Senef, which makes a great noiſe in Europe, and is reckon'd one of the moſt terrible that has been fought in theſe Parts for many Ages. For it will not be amiſs to let thee know the Particular Circumſtances of this Combat, the good Conduct of the French Generals, as alſo their Overſights and Errors: That thou mayſt make a right uſe of ſuch Examples, in the Difficulties which may environ thee through the Chance of War.

On the Ninth of this Inſtant Moon, the Confederate Forces amounting to Sixty Thouſand Men, march'd with their Left Wing to a Place call'd Arken, and their Right to the Foreſt of Buſſeray, where they encamp'd, having before them a Village call'd Senef, ſituated in Brabant. They tarried there on the Tenth Day, and next Morning parted from thence, Marching in Three Lines, counting the Baggage for One. Whilſt the Prince de Vaudemont commanded a Body of Six Thouſand Spaniſh Horſe, to cover their March, and to skirmiſh with the French, if there ſhou'd be occaſion, 'till the whole Army were in Order.

As ſoon as the Prince of Conde was advertis'd of theſe Motions, he was reſolv'd to take Advantage of their neceſſity, and to attack them, before they could poſſibly get together into a Body capable of ſuſtaining the Shock of the French Army, which was cloſely embattel'd. To this End he caus'd one Part of the Army with Four Pieces of Cannon, to paſs the River of Pilton, where unſuſpected, they might obſerve the Enemies Motions. Another part he poſted in a deep Valley, where the Confederates could not perceive them: And that nothing might be wanting to his full Information of their Advances, he caus'd the Mareſchal of the Camp, with a conſiderable Detachment, to gain a certain Hill, from whence lying under the Covert of thick Woods, he might attend every Step of the Enemy, without being diſcovered himſelf.

When the Prince had made all thoſe Preparations, he ſent the Marquiſs de Rannes, and the Chevalier de Tillades, with the Dragoons under their Command, to aſſault the Confederates not far from Seuef. This was perform'd with ſo much Vigor, that they drove them into the Village, with no little Slaughter of the Spaniards: But not ſatisfied with this, they attacqu'd them in the Village it ſelf; and after a long and bloody Conflict, the French beat 'em thence alſo, purſuing them into the Plain; till at laſt both the whole Armies were engag'd pell-mell. Then was the Fight Cruel and Fierce, the Officers of both ſides behaving themſelves with ſurpaſſing Bravery, and the Souldiers not ſhrinking from their Valiant Leaders. But Fortune favour'd the French, who before they quitted the Plain, became Maſters of all the Hollanders Baggage, Ammunition, Powder and Mony which they brought with them to pay the Army. Then the Prince of Conde chac'd them into the Village of Dufay, where the Confederates retrench'd themſelves under the Covert of a Caſtle, and a ſtrong Church. But that Active General would not ſuffer them to reſt long there; he ſet upon them on all Hands ſo furiouſly, that they were forced to abandon the Place, and enter the Plain the Second Time. The Battel had now laſted Five Hours, and great was the Slaughter on both Sides. The French took almoſt Four Thouſand Priſoners, and kill'd as many upon the Spot, beſides thoſe that they left wounded. Which ſo weaken'd and diſcourag'd the Confederates, That the next Day they retir'd, and left the French Maſters of the Field.

of

Now I will tell thee, That had the Prince of Conde been contented with his Firſt Victory at Senef, he had ſav'd abundance of French Blood. For, in that Fight, the Confederates loſt above Two Thouſand Men, and the French ſcarce a Hundred. But the Fieryneſs of his Temper, carried him beyond his Judgment, to purſue them into difficult Places. So that in the winding up of the Matter, though the Victory was his, it coſt him him above Fifteen Hundred Lives of his Souldiers, which might have been as well ſpar'd, and his Honour remain'd the ſame.

Valiant Seraſquier, I ſend thee this Narrative, as a Chart by which to ſteer thy Courſe in the like Emergencies; adviſing thee to temper thy Courage with ſage Conduct and Prudence, and not to ſacrifice thy Men to a Raſh Caprice of Martial Phrenſy.

Paris, 12th. of the 9th. Moon,
of the Year 1674.

LETTER

LETTER IX.

To Mehemet, an Exil'd Eunuch, at Al-Cairo in Egypt.

HOw changeable is the ſtate of Mortals; how inconſtant our Thoughts, Paſſions, Words and Actions! We are never fix'd long on any thing. If we are invited to caſt Anchor a while in ſome calm and ſerene Seaſon, whilſt we furl the Sails of Human Care and Anxiety; if we are permitted to careen and recruit our Weather-beaten Spirits, enjoying ſome ſhort interval of Reſt and Eaſe; the Indulgence ſoon expires, and we are forc'd to weigh and hoiſt with double Diligence, leſt we incur a Wreck. The Tempeſts rais'd by our Evil Stars, blow hard upon us; we run adrift, and are toſs'd up and down on the Billows of Human Miſery, without any approv'd Pilot, Chart or Compaſs to direct us in the uncertain Road of Life. We float at Random, in a Sea of perpetual Hazards and Difficulties.

O Mehemet! I will not now, as once formerly I did, wiſh my ſelf in one of the Egyptian Pyramids, or court the Society of Ghoſts and Dæmons: I will not take Sanctuary in thoſe Superannuated Priſons of Royal Souls; nor ſeek Diverſion among the Dead. Not the black Maſquerades of Cheop's Sepul-

Sepulcher, danc'd each Night by Antique Shadows, or wildeſt Meaſures of Hobgoblins in the Galleries of that horrid Pile, cou'd now relieve my Melancholy, or eaſe my Phrentick Pain: Becauſe the Entertainment is too narrow, cloſe and ſtale for ſuch a Soul as mine. I wou'd fain ramble through an Infinite Space, planted each Stage with Seminaries of new Idea's, uncouth Forms, and ſtrange Chimeras. I wou'd ſee the Eſſence of all Beings that I have already ſeen, revers'd, turn'd upſide down, or inſide out, or any way transform'd, ſo as I might not know 'em again. I wou'd have all the Elements change their Qualities; the Fire to loſe its Innate Heat, and Water to expunge its Moiſture; the Earth take Fire, and blow it ſelf up into the Ninth Sphere, whilſt the Air ſhall condenſe and cruſh it ſelf into a Solid Globe, producing a new Race of Minerals, Vegetables, and Living Creatures, which our Old Purblind World ne'er ſaw before. I wou'd have flying Trees, and Birds whoſe outſpread Claws take Rooting in the Air, and grow like Baucis and Philemon; their Wings to Branches turn'd, their Feathers into Leaves. Beſides a Thouſand Kinds of Monſters more than ever Ovid ſpoke of in his Metamorphoſis.

After all this, I would go up and view the Orbs above, reſtore the Rotten Corruptible Heavens, pull all the Bulls and Bears, the Scorpions, Lions, Centaurs, and other antiquated Beaſts out of the Sky; make the New

Star

Star of Caſſiopeia pay a Swinging Fine, for her damn'd late unmannerly Appearance in the Senate of the Stars.

Then wou'd I ſet up an Inquiſition for the Comets, to know from whence they are, and what their Buſineſs is, among the Orbs above. I wou'd examine all the Conſtellations, and know the meaning of their Names, and ill-ſhap'd Figures. And then I'd trace the Milky Way, mounting directly to the Holieſt Heavens of all.

There perhaps I ſhou'd begin to be Modeſt and Sober, conſidering that it is the Preſence-Chamber of the Omnipotent. I wou'd not broach Sedition, nor talk Factiouſly before the King of all Things. But behaving my ſelf like a Courtier during the Publick Audience, I wou'd afterwards retire, and ſcamper through the Endleſs Fields, beyond the Cælum Empyræum; where I wou'd either find out new Worlds, or Room for them. Nothing ſhou'd confine my Search, leſs than Infinity. Is not our Senſe, Fanſy and Reaſon without Bounds? Are not theſe Parts of the Univerſe? And has God made any Part greater than the Whole? This is a Contradiction in Nature. He has given us Faculties, which, if rightly us'd, cannot err. Our Conceptions are ſquar'd to his Eternal Model of the World, if we do not debauch our own Thoughts, or ſuffer 'em to be corrupted by others. He is the Primitive and Original Reaſon, the Everlaſting Common

Sen-

Senſorium of Nature, in whom, and by whom we all ſee that we have Eyes; hear that we have Ears; ſmell that we have Noſes; taſte that we have a Tongue; and feel that we are all over full of Senſible Spirits.

Oh God! thy Praiſes are without Beginning or End: Thou art an Eternal Circle of Wonders and Miracles. Thou ſurpaſſeſt all our Sublimeſt Thoughts; no Words can decypher the Skirts of thy Garment. On thee Infinite Worlds have reſted from Eternal Ages. Thou art no Niggard of thy Gifts. Why ſhou'd Infinite Goodneſs and Bounty be traduc'd by Infidels? They ſay the World is but ſo many Thouſand Years Old, perhaps Five or Six. It is a damn'd Blaſphemy, thus ſlily to Calumniate the Omnipotent, and to ſay by Craft he was not ſo early Gracious as he might have been. What ſhould ail the Eternal, that he was not in a Condition to produce the World before? Or was he in a ſullen Humour, that he ſhould ſuffer a lapſe of Indeterminate Ages, before he wou'd diſplay his Attributes?

Oh, No! Suffer not this Doctrin to take Root in thy Soul, My Dear Mehmet, but Remember, there is no Envy in the Deity. Doubtleſs he was as Good, Powerful, Juſt, and Wiſe, from all Eternity, as at Moſes's Hour of the Creation, or as he is now, and ever will be World without End; Amen:

Amen: As the Nazareens have in their Prayers.

My Mehmet, let us ſhake off the Prejudices of Education, with all the Prepoſſeſſions and Falſe Dogma's of our Early Years, and adhere to firm Reaſon, and the Inſpirations that are from beyond the Viſible Frame.

Take this as my laſt Adieu, for I am juſt Equipping for the Unknown Eternal Voyage.

Paris, 5th. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year 1674.

LET-

LETTER X.

To the Kaimacham.

THe Affairs of France ſeem to be in a very flouriſhing Condition. This Invincible Monarch not only conquers Cities and Provinces by Force, but ſome yield to him voluntarily, courting his Protection.

Here are arriv'd Deputies from the Senate of Meſſina in Sicily, to deſire the King to free that City and People from the Yoke of Spaniſh Tyranny, and to number them among his Subjects. They are receiv'd without much Ceremony on the part of this Court; which affects to appear Stately and Reſerv'd at ſuch a Juncture. However, there is no point of Humanity or Hoſpitable Uſage neglected toward theſe Strangers. In a word, they are entertain'd as Friends of a lower Degree; and they eſteem this a ſufficient Happineſs,

It ſeems the Spaniſh Government was very Severe and Cruel; laying inſupportable Taxes on the Inhabitants, and fleecing them of their Silver and Gold by a Thouſand Tricks and Inventions of State. It was a Crime to grow Rich, and no leſs to be ſo Poor as to deny the Payment of the Gabels. The one put a Man in danger of the Inquiſition; the other expos'd him to the Galleys or ſome worſe Slavery in the Mines of Peru. On whomſoever the Viceroy or his Officers caſt an ill Eye, that Perſon was ſure to be ruin'd, if he did not make his Eſcape, or preſent his Enemy with the Value perhaps of half his Wealth; and he muſt take it as a Favour too, that they wou'd compound at ſuch eaſie Rates. For, theſe greedy Harpies are ſeldom contented with leſs than all a Man has.

leys,

Infinite other Oppreſſions the People ſuffer'd under, which at laſt ſo wearied their Patience, that they began to Cabal and form Conſpiracies againſt the Viceroy: And it was not only the Vulgar that thus ſought after Liberty, but the chief of the Citizens, and ſome of the Senators.

Theſe all unanimouſly agreed to treat underhand with the French King, to repreſent to him their Grievances, with the preſent ſtate of the whole Iſland: For they had heard the Fame and Character of his Perſon and Government: And they were well ſatisfied they could not ſubmit to a better or more generous Maſter than him. The King undertakes to reſcue them from the Spaniſh Bondage, provided they wou'd aſſiſt him with what Succours they could ſpare, and inſtruct his Officers in thoſe Things which would facilitate the Reduction of the Iſle.

He ſent Forces accordingly at the Beginning of the Year, under the Command of the Chevalier de Valbelle, who acquitted himſelf very very ſucceſsfully, having perform'd many Conſiderable Exploits, and taken ſeveral Towns, Caſtles, and other ſtrong Places from the Spaniards.

The Senate of Meſſina being encouraged by theſe proſperous Beginnings, thought it high Time actually to ſurrender themſelves up to the French King: And 'tis on this Errand the Deputies are come.

The King being inform'd that the Chevalier de Valbelle wanted greater Forces to Conquer the Places which remain in the Spaniards Hands, immediately gave Orders for a certain Number of Veſſels to be Fitted and Mann'd under the Command of the Duke of Vivonne. He gave a Commiſſion alſo to the Marquis de Velavoir, with a conſiderable Army of Men; ordering him to make all ſpeed for Sicily, and to joyn the Chevalier de Valbelle, or to act ſeparately as occaſion offer'd.

They ſay, the Duke of Vivonne will ſet Sail with his Fleet about the Beginning of the Firſt Moon: He is eſteem'd a good Souldier, though ſome of the Grandees and Peers of the Realm envy him, in regard he was rais'd to the High Dignities he poſſeſſes, through the Mediation of his Siſter, Madam de Monteſpan, one of the King's Concubines: For, he was before only Count of Vivonne; but now he is Duke, Peer and Mareſchal of France, as alſo Admiral of the Mediterranean Gallies.

The Prince of Conde, once in Company with ſome of the Grandees, and making a Com-

Compariſon between the Mareſchals Feuillade and Vivonne, he ſaid, that Feuillade got his Honour by the Sword, and Vivonne by the Scabbard, reflecting thereby on his Siſter.

It was not the Firſt Time that Prince us'd the Liberty of his Tongue in affronting People; he was always daring and bold in ſuch Caſes. When he was Young, and travelling through Picardy, he was to paſs by a certain Convent or Religious Houſe on the Road, where the Superiour with all his Derviches came out to meet him, and to pay him the Ceremonies and Acknowledgments due to his Quality. The Superiour was making a long Elaborate Harangue, in Compliment to the Prince, when he all in Frolick call'd aloud to know what a Clock it was. The poor Derviches ſtriving who ſhould moſt readily ſatisfie him, cry'd out all together, It is Mid-day, My Lord; when he made them this wild Anſwer, Then get you all gone, and make an end of your Speech to the Devil by Midnight; for I'll hear no more of your Long-winded Flattery.

Thou wilt ſay, This was an odd ſort of Expreſſion in a Prince: But it muſt be imputed to the Fieryneſs of his Conſtitution, which in his Youth ſpurr'd him on to a Thouſand Extravagancies. He corrected theſe in Time, and inſtead of ſuch vain Pranks and Flaſhes of his Sparkling Nature, he grew inflam'd with Noble Ardours for his King and Country. He was commonly call'd the French Lion and Mars, being eſteemed

the

the Boldeſt Man in the Kingdom. Mareſchal Turenne, who was no Stranger to his Genius, us'd to ſay, That ſince the Brave Horatius Curtius, there never was a Man born of Woman ſo full of Fire and Spirit as the Prince of Conde.

Yet, which is more to be admir'd, that Two ſuch Qualities ſhould meet in the ſame Genius, he is a great Stateſman, as well as a Valiant Souldier. He has a prodigious Aim at the Good or Ill Succeſs of Enterprizes, And his Counſels are generally Fortunate.

As theſe Accompliſhments have render'd him beloved by the Generality of the French Nation; ſo his Inconſtancy and ſiding with different Factions, have made him ſuſpected both by the Court and the Parliaments. All Sides are ſhy of him, and reſerv'd in their Addreſſes. Tho he has done Services enough one would think, to efface the Memory of his former Failings; yet the Civilities he receives from the King, are only the faint Sprinklings of Court-Holy-Water. So hard a thing it is for an Eminent Perſon to recover the eſteem which he has once loſt by making falſe ſteps.

This Monarch is obſerv'd to be very Conſtant to thoſe he Loves, never putting to Death any of his Favourites, tho he has often caus'd them to be Arreſted. He is very Affable, and of no difficult Acceſs: Civil and Courteous to the Pooreſt People, returning the Salutes of his Subjects with much Condeſcenſion. He is Amorous alſo, and indulges that ſoft Paſſion in the midſt of all his glorious Enterprizes. He had once Three Miſtreſſes together, one whereof was of Vulgar Parentage, the other was a Noble-Woman, and the Third a Nun. Which occaſion'd this Jeſt to be put on him; That he went about to unite the Three Eſtates, and faſten them to the Intereſt of the Crown.

that

Among the other Diverſions of this great Prince, he takes a particular Pleaſure in Magnificent Buildings. And his new Palace at Verſailles is eſteem'd one of the Wonders of the World, for Beauty and Art. As ſoon as it was finiſh'd, a certain Poet preſented the King with this Diſtich,

Non Orbis Gentem, non Urbem Gens habet ulla
Urbſve Domum, Dominum nec Domus ulla parem.

Sage Miniſter, theſe Infidels flatter themſelves with a wrong Idea of their own Grandeur; not conſidering the Invincible Oſmans are by Deſtiny exalted above all other Nations; and that no City is comparable to Conſtantinople for Beauty and Riches; nor any Palace ſo Magnificent as the Seraglio, which is the Seat of the Great Sultan, Lord of Aſia, Africa, and Europe; Arbitrator of the whole Earth.

Paris, 17th. of the 12th. Moon,
of the Year 1674.

LETTER

LETTER XI.

To the Vizir Baſſa, at Conſtantinople.

I am Acquainted with a French Merchant in this City, who often trades to Conſtantinople, Smyrna, Aleppo, and other Cities of the Levant. He knows nothing of me or my Buſineſs at Paris, farther than other People, who take me for a Native of Moldavia, and one whom the Deſire of Knowledge has brought hither, where the Sciences have taken up their Reſidence. Beſides, they may imagin, that the Hopes of Preferment in the Church, were one Inducement to my Travelling thus far from the Place of my Nativity. Since I have all along profeſs'd my ſelf a Student and Candidate of the Prieſthood; and it is generally known how familiar I have been with Cardinal Richlieu, and his Succeſſor Mazarini. Whatever their Thoughts be, thou may'ſt aſſure thy ſelf, that in the Main, I have taken Care to conceal my True Circumſtances, and the Affairs of the Grand Signior entruſted to my Charge. But to come to the Buſineſs.

The Merchant of whom I ſpeak, is call'd Monſieur de Vaubrun; a Man of Generous Extraction, and by his Induſtry he has acquir'd a conſiderable Wealth. This Perſon not not long since, came from Constantinople, and has made it his Business, ever since his Return, to extol the singular Morality and Justice of the Mussulmans. In all Companies where-ever he comes, 'tis usual with him to say, The Turks are perfect Saints in Comparison with us. And to confirm his Assertion, he relates many pretty Passages of Things happening whilst he resided at the Imperial City; all in Honour of the True Believers. Which has drawn upon him no small Hatred, Envy and Persecution from the Priests, and their more bigotted Followers. However, he shrinks not from his Word, but stoutly Maintains the Truth of his Assertions. And some Men of Sense who have heard the Stories he tells, and the Elegant Account he gives of our Religion and Morals, cannot forbear crying out, They are almost proselyted to the Mahometan Faith.

Among the rest, he recounts an Extraordinary Occurrence, which happen'd to himself at his parting from Constantinople; which I thought it worth while to acquaint thee with, in regard it is much taken notice of in Paris by all that hear it; and conduces not a little to raise in the French, an higher Esteem of the Mussulmans and our Holy Faith, than they were wont to have.

It seems Monsieur de Vaubrun had enter'd into a strict Partnership with Mustapha Zari, a Native of Turcomania, dwelling at Constantinople, and trading in Silks. Their mutual Traffick and Correspondence held for the ſpace of Four Years; at the end of which, the French-Man being call'd Home to his Native Country, by Letters from ſome of his Friends, to take Poſſeſſion of an Eſtate newly fallen to him by the Death of an Uncle, he gave his Partner notice of it, telling him his Reſolution was fix'd to depart very ſpeedily from the Port, and take his Voyage for France; at the ſame Time deſiring, that the Accounts between them might be ſettled. Which was done accordingly; and in caſting them up, it was agreed upon by both, that this Monſieur Vaubrun remain'd indebted Nine Hundred Zequins to Muſtapha Zari. There was no Contention in the Caſe: Monſieur very readily gave him Five Bags Seal'd, and deſir'd him to tell the Money. No, replied Muſtapha, We have dealt together thus long, and I have found you an honeſt Man; God forbid that I ſhould miſtruſt my Friend at our laſt parting.

This was done the Day before Monſieur de Vaubrun was to take his Leave of Conſtantinople; for he had Hired Horſes to Travel by Land to Smyrna, his Buſineſs ſo requiring. Therefore both Parties being well ſatisfied, they bid Adieu to each other, wiſhing mutual Happineſs. The next Day Monſieur de Vaubrun took Horſe for Smyrna, having diſpatched all his Affairs at the Imperial Port.

It ſo happen'd, That as ſoon as he was gone, Muſtapha had occaſion to pay a Thouſand Five Hundred Zequins to a Merchant of Holland. Wherefore having newly received those Five Bags from his Partner, he with them, made up the Sum due to the Dutchman, saying withal, That he had not told the Money in those Five Bags, in regard he took them on the Credit of a very worthy and honest Man, who had been his Partner. But the Jealous Christian would not shew so much Generosity; for he presently broke up the Seals in the presence of Mustapha; and having told over the Money, said 'twas all right, and was very fairly putting it up again. But Mustapha, who had a quick Eye, and being well vers'd in telling of Money, perceiv'd there was a great Overplus above Nine Hundred Zequins. Wherefore he bid the Dutchman hold his Hand, till he had told the Bags over himself; for he suspected there was some mistake. The Nazarene durst not deny a True Believer this Priviledge, under the Grand Signior's Protection, whatever he wou'd have done in his own Country. So that when Mustapha had run the Money over, he found Eleven Hundred and Fifty Zequins in Bags by themselves, and gave the rest to the Hollander. In a word, having dispatch'd that Payment, he sent an Express away immediately with the Two Hundred and Fifty Zequins to Monsieur de Vaubrun, who he knew was to tarry some Days at a Town on the Road, about Twenty Leagues from Constantinople, commanding the Courier to deliver him this Message in writing. My Friend, God forbid that I shou'd detain any Thing beyond my Right, or deal with thee as a certain Frank would have done by me? For, thou know'st that I took the Money on thy Credit without telling it, but being to pay it away this Day to a Dutch Merchant, he not having the same Faith, would tell it; and finding these Two Hundred and Fifty Zequins over and above the Sum supposed to be in the Bags, he would have smuggl'd them in his Dutch Conscience, had not I discern'd his Fraud, and prevented him. I send them to thee as thy Right, supposing 'twas some oversight. God prohibits all Injustice.

thoſe

This Relation I had from Monsieur de Vantrin's own Mouth: And I tell thee, it makes a great noise in Paris. I leave it to thy Mature Resolves, whether that honest Mussulman deserves not some particular and publick Honour to be done him, who by such a rare Action of Justice, has rais'd a Noble Character of the Mussulmans among the Infidels.

Most Illustrious and Serene Bassa, I pray the Almighty and All-good God, to have thee in his Holy Protection, and augment thy Vertues and Felicities.

Paris, 11th. of the 3d. Moon, of the Year 1675.

LETTER

LETTER XII.

To Ibrahim Eli Zeid, Hadgi, Effendi, Preacher to the Seraglio.

HEre has happen'd something of Late, which the Priests magnify as an Apparent Miracle; whilst, for ought I know, 'tis only a pure Effect of Nature. Thou art not to learn, that the Nazarens have their Saints in great Veneration: That they invoke them in their Necessities, set up their Images and Pictures in Temples to be ador'd: That they preserve their Bones, Ashes, Hair, Garments, or any Thing that deserves the Name of a Sacred Relique: That they enshrine these in Coffins, Urns, Chests, and other Vessels of Gold and Silver, adorn'd with Precious Stones: That they place them in their Mosques, as in Sanctuaries; sometimes under their Altars, at other Times upon them: Some in Particular Oratories or Chapels, others in the Choirs: That they carry them in Procession in Times of Publick Calamity, and on certain Festivals; thinking by this means to pacify the Wrath of Heaven, and draw down the Divine Benediction. Thou art not ignorant also, That they believe the Saints are Guardians of certain Kingdoms, Provinces, Cities, ties, Families, and even of Private Persons.

Hence St. Denis is esteem'd the Patron of France; St. James of Spain; St. George of England; and so of other Nations. Each City also has its peculiar Guardian Saint. Hence St. Anthony is accounted the Patron of Padua; St. Mark of Venice; and, to come to the Purpose, St. Geneviéve is ador'd by the Citizens of Paris, as the Patroness of this Place.

There is a Beautiful Temple built in Honour of her, on the Highest Ground in the City, which also is call'd by her Name, the Mountain of St. Geneviéve. On the Decline of this, there is a Fountain of Delicate Water, which is called, the Fountain of St. Geneviéve.

They attribute many Miracles to this Female Saint, some of which she perform'd in her Life-time, others after her Death, if we may believe what the Priests affirm, and what is Recorded in the History of her Life, in the Annals of Paris, and the Archives of the Convent belonging to her Temple. For there is a certain number of Dervishes, of the chief Nobility in Paris, who consecrate themselves for ever to a Religious Life, in Honour of this Virgin.

They meet Twice a Day in the Choire of the Church, all array'd in long Robes of white Linnen, where they chant aloud the Praises of St. Geneviéve. As oft they assemble, at different Hours in a private Chappel in their Cloysters, to perform the like Devotions. Those who are chosen into this Order, are all Persons of Sweet and Lovely Countenances, graceful Demeanour, and learned Education. One shall not see so much Regularity, Order, and devout Modesty, in any Church in Paris, as appears in this, at the Time of Celebrating their Divine Mysteries. Yet, for ought I know, all this may be but Hypocrisie and pious Artifice, to attract the greatest Reverence from the People, who are present at their Ceremonies. I my self was astonished once, when being there, I saw a Beautiful Youth approach the Altar with a Golden Censer, hanging at a Chain which he held in one Hand; whilst with the other he wafted the Rich Perfume toward the Statues, which stood on high behind the Altar. He had the very Signature of Vertue in his Face. Besides, a certain Lustre that seem'd to spring all on a sudden into his Eyes and Cheeks, discovering some inward Rapture of his Soul. Methought he look'd like one of the Pages of Eden, as they are described in the Holy Alcoran.

I protest it was impossible for me to fix my Eyes upon him, and not to feel the Passions of Platonick Love. He deported himself with a Grace which cannot be expressed.

Afterwards I contracted an intimate Familiarity with him on the account of Arabick, which he learns of me. He is a Person of excellent natural Abilities, and well vers'd in Languages, and all manner of Divine and Human Learning.

Pardon this Digression, Venerable Hadji, in regard I could not forbear mentioning a Person of whom I have a great deal more to say, than can well be comprised in one Letter. Hereafter I will communicate a further Account of him, while I now return to the Church of St. Geneviève. In the upper part of the Choire, Four Pillars of Jasper, with Four Golden Images of Angels on the Tops, support the Shrine of this Saint, wherein lyes enclosed all that remains of her Body. Several Wax Tapers burn before it Day and Night. The Devouter sort of People kneel and kiss the Pillars which sustain the admirable Reliques. They bring their Linnen and other Vestments to the Priest, who is appointed for this Office. He fastens them in the Cleft of a long Pole, and then raises that End up to the Shrine, which is very near as high as the Roof of the Church. He touches the Shrine with the Linnen, &c. and having done so, he takes it down again; when pronouncing a Benediction on it, in the Name of the Saint, he restores it to the Party whose it is.

They believe that Linnen or any Thing else belonging to the Body, being so touch'd and bless'd, has Power to chase away Maladies, to preserve them from Dangers, to ease Women in Childbirth, and to make them prosper in all Things. So profound is the Attach which they have for this famous Saint.

Saint. But whether there be any Thing more in it than Superstition and Bigotry, God only knows. However the Inhabitants of Paris, esteem this Shrine, as the Trojans did their Palladium, and the Romans their Ancile, which fell from Heaven, as Numa Pompilius made them believe.

When the City is threaten'd with any Publick Calamity, this Shrine is taken down with Abundance of Pomp and Solemnity, and carry'd in Procession through the Streets; thinking thereby to divert the Vengeance of Heaven, and appease the Anger of the Omnipotent.

Such was the Case here lately: There having fallen such an Overplus of continual Rains, as threaten'd to destroy all the Corn and Herbage, with the Fruits of the Earth; besides the Damage had been already done to Innumerable Persons in their Houses and Goods by the vast Inundations.

This occasion'd a Decree to come out for the taking down the Body of St. Genevieve, and carrying it in Solemn Procession to the Temple of Nostre Dame: Which was accordingly performed on the 17th. of this Moon. In the Procession were seen all the Religious Orders in this City, both of Men and Women; the Parliament of Paris, the Chamber of Accompts; the Court of Aydes; the Court of Moneys, with the whole Body of the Citizens.

But no sooner was the Shrine of St. Genevieve brought into the open Air, when the Rain ceas'd, the Clouds dispers'd, and the Sky became Serene and Clear. And so it has continued ever since.

The Priests will have this to be an Effect of St. Genevieve's Intercession with God for the Province and City committed to her Patronage. And the People are willing enough to believe it. If this Shrine be as efficacious in causing Rain, when there is a Drought, as the Inhabitants of Paris affirm, it may not unfitly be compared to the Lapis Manalis of the Ancient Romans. This was a certain great Stone, which in Time of Excessive Dryness, the Romans us'd to draw into the City with vast Ropes, by the Gate Capena, whilst the Priests of the God Mars, danc'd before it, and all the Vestals left the Sacred Fire, to follow the Procession. They drew the Stone to the Temple of the Goddess Ceres, where they strew'd upon it a Handful of wither'd Flowers and Herbs. Then immediately it began to Rain, and they let the Stone lye there, as a Memorial before the Temple of the Goddess, till they had enough of that sort of Weather, to secure the Growth and Maturity of the Vegetables; and then they drew it back again in the same manner as before, only each Vestal now carried some of the Sacred Fire in an Earthen Vessel, whereas before they carried none.

Whether there be any real Efficacy in those Religious Ceremonies, or no, is not in my Power to determine: But 'tis certain, that every Nation confides much in the Invite-ries taught them by their Prieſts. The Force of Education prevails on moſt Men even to old Age; in regard they think it an Impiety to examine or queſtion the Traditions of their Fathers, eſpecially when Heaven it ſelf confirms their Implicite Faith, by ſeeming to regard and anſwer their Religous Addreſſes, in ſo peculiar a Manner as theſe foremention'd Inſtances deſcribe.

Sage Effendi, Tell me whether it be Hereſie to affirm, That God has ſent Prophets into all Nations, each furniſh'd with Inſtructions and Doctrines agreeable to the Genius of the People whom they were to teach? And that he is not diſpleas'd at the various Rites and Ceremonies by which every diſtinct Region and Climate adore his Divine Unity?

Satisfy me in this, and then thou ſhalt be more than Apollo in my Eſteem; for, I am full of Doubts.

Paris, 10th. of the 6th. Moon,
of the Year 1675.

LET-

Paris, 10th of the 6th Moon
of the Year 1671.

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. VIII.

BOOK II.

LETTER I.

To Daniel Ogilvy.

SOmetimes I could wish my self without Spleen, or rather without deep Melancholies: Yet when I consider the same Vitals is a necessary Instrument of Mirth and Laughter, I reverse that Wish again. Not that I am fond of a Reply

vity which makes us resemble Apes, rather than Men; tho the Philosophers say the contrary. But I correct my Partial Thoughts, which would lay the fault on my Body, when my Mind is chiefly to Blame. For, he that is Master of his Reason, need not fall into either Extreme, to be always a grinning like Democritus, or howling with Heraclitus. Resignation and Tranquility are the Golden Mean. And he that steps over this Line, on one side or other, falls into the same Vanity which he condemns or ridicules in the rest of Mortals.

I have studied to know this World, and the Nature of all Things, but am never the Wiser, after so many Years of search. I have perus'd many Books, and convers'd with more Men, yet none of them all can inform me of a certainty, what I am my self. How then should I be able to comprehend the Essences of Other Things? Henceforth, I'll lay aside this Inquisitive Folly, and be careless, till Death shall either quite extinguish so troublesome a Passion, or fully satisfy it with new Discoveries.

In that separate State, I hope to see in open Light, the Naked Forms of Things, without the Interposition of a Veil or Glass, to thicken and dusk the Prospect. Whereas in this Life, we are fain to peep into the World through the close Windows of our Senses, which are so cloy'd and darken'd with the Dust our Passions raise, besides their Natural Dullness of their Composition. That we are fain to run from Pannel to Pannel, and use the Opticks of Philosophy to help our Sight. Met, after all, we still are purblind, and so are like to be during this Mortal Life. But when once this Prison of ours shall be demolish'd by a Tempest of Misfortune, or by some sudden Disaster; or it shall moulder away through Sickness, Age, and Native Weakness, thus crumbling to its primitive Dust; then shall the Soul expand itself, and fly at large in the open Firmament of Wisdom, Light, and Science.

we

My Dearest, Let thou and I be content to bear the Inconveniences of these Earthly Cages for a while; and in a little Time we shall be consign'd over to Eternal Liberty. I design'd to have said more; but I tell thee, I'm too Melancholy. Therefore, Adieu for the Present.

Paris, 19th. of the 8th. Moon,
of the Year 1675.

LETTER

LETTER II.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

IT is above Ten Years ago since I gave thee an Account of the Renowned Mareschal de Turenne: Wherein I did not pretend his compleat History, or present thee with his full Character; but only to inform thee of some remarkable Passages in his Life, and to draw an imperfect Idea of his Vertues. Which though they were very great, yet were not sufficient to skreen him from the Chance of War, and the Stroke of a Violent Death.

On the Six and Twentieth of the Moon of July, this great General, having given all necessary Orders for a Battel, with the Imperialists in Alsatia, was surveying a certain rais'd Ground near Strasbourg, on which he design'd to plant a Battery; when a Cannon Shot from the Town, guided by Fate more than by the Gunners Aim or Skill, came grazing along on the Earth, and in its Career gave this Heroe a Mortal Blow on the Breast, of which he instantly died, without speaking a Word.

There was an Officer of the Artillery in his Company, who spied the Course of the Bullet Bullet at a Distance, and happily started out of the Way. He reports, that Monsieur Turenne saw the same, but whether out of the Greatness of his Spirit, which would not suffer him to appear timerous of Death, or whether his extream Thoughtfulness on the approaching Battel, kept him from providing for his own Safety; his certain he stood Immoveable, and sustain'd the Fatal Stroke which cost him his Life.

The Court of France laments his Death, with extraordinary Demonstrations of Sorrow: And so does all the Kingdom. Indeed they have Reason: France having never sent into the Field a Man more accomplished with all the Vertues and Heroick Qualities requisite in a great General.

They relate Two or Three remarkable Passages of his Life, which either happen'd since I wrote my former Letter to thee about him; or at least they came not to my knowledge at that Time.

One was a little after his Brother the Duke of Bouillon's Death, when he was seen to weep very affectionately, tho he endeavour'd to hide his Passion from the Observation of others. Which was taken notice of as an Argument of his Compassionate Temper; and that all the Blood which had been spilt in his sight, and under his Conduct, had not diminish'd his Natural Tenderness and Humanity.

He was sincerely Modest, without giving the World any occasion to judge, that he only only affected to appear ſo. For when any of his Friends or Creatures would run into Hyperboles, in extolling his Actions, he would not by a feigned Humility, and denying all they ſaid, lay a Train for greater Flatteries; but he ſo diſcreetly moderated his Anſwers, that at the ſame Time he appeared ſenſible of his True Merit, without the leaſt Symptom of Arrogance or Vain-Glory.

So when ſome Lords came to condole the Loſs of his Brother, that they might comfort him, they turn'd the Diſcourſe to a Panegyrick on himſelf, highly extolling the whole Series of his Heroick Performances. But looking on them with a ſtedfaſt Gravity, and fetching a deep Sigh, he reply'd, It is the Opinion of the World, that I am ſomething verſed in the Affairs of War: It would be an Ingrateful Preſumption to oppoſe the Publick Sentiment. But, I can aſſure you, there is nothing more certain, than that much of my Knowledge in this kind, is owing to my Deceas'd Brother, who by Rules taught me many advantagious Improvements of Martial Diſcipline. And I learned not a little from his own Exemplary Conduct.

Another Remark they make, is on the Liberality of this General, and his Contempt of Riches: For he really impoveriſh'd himſelf to reward and gratify his Friends, It being a Word very common in his Mouth, That he would love on the King's Pay, and his Friends ſhould live on his Eſtate. Yet he was but a Younger Brother. Which made his Wife often say, That were it not for the King's Mony, her Husband entertain'd such a Retinue of Noble Beggars about him, That she fear'd both he and she must in a little Time, take up the same Trade, and turn Mendicants themselves.

a

It is credibly reported of this great Man, that he set his Heart so little on Mony, as not to know one Piece of Coin from another, nor their different Value in Exchange.

Once he was heard to say these words, to some of the Nobles who were discoursing on Wealth, I wonder, said he, what pleasure Men can take in hoarding up great Heaps of Mony: For my Part if, at the End of the Year, I should find in my Coffers, a great Treasure of Gold left, it would Nauseate me as much, as if just when I had made a full Dinner, I should be forc'd to sit still, and glut my self by eating of the same Dishes over again.

And that which is most to be admir'd is, That even in his Old Age, to which Avarice is so Natural, his Purse was always open, and he gave away his Mony as Liberally as in his Youth. So that when he was Dead, they could find no more than Five Hundred Crowns in his Keeping. Besides, he died much in Debt, which he Contracted on the Armies Account, that they should not want their pay in due Season. But, 'tis said the King either has discharg'd these Debts, or will do it in a little Time.

He

He was a Man of no great Presence either for Tallness or graceful Features; being of an ordinary Size, and heavy Countenance. With a Mein and Air more like a Citizen or Mechanick, than a Souldier. Which justifies the old Proverb, That the Face is not always the True Index of the Heart. For all the World knows, that he was a Man of Great Resolution and Bravery.

They attribute many of his Victories to his Regular and Sage Conduct; others to his Fortune; whilst they cannot deny, That some were owing entirely to the Force of his Invincible Courage.

It were easie to relate many Instances of this kind. But, I will not tire thy Patience. My Letter is already stretch'd beyond its design'd Limits; yet it comes far short of reaching the Character of this Prince. However it would be Invidious not to inform thee of all I know concerning him, worth Observation.

In the Time of the Civil Wars, after he had abandon'd the Party of the Malecontents, and was made General of one of the King's Armies, he gave an admirable proof of his undaunted Valour. For, when he had but Three Thousand Five Hundred Men with him, and those in a manner hemm'd in by Fourteen Thousand of the Rebels; so that there was but one Pass left, whereby he might escape, and he was strongly press'd to make use of that advantage: No, says he, I will not any longer live to see my Soveraign shut out of his his own Cities; Orleans barr'd her Gates against him, even whilst the King's Forces were entire, before they had receiv'd any Loss or Defeat, and can we expect they will any where be more favourable to him, when they shall behold us flying from our Victorious Enemies? No: This Fatal Day shall either put a Check to their Success, or give a Period to my Life. And the Event answer'd his Expectation. For he enter'd into Battel with the Prince of Conde, and routed all his Forces. Ever since which, he has done the French King so many eminent Services, as Amply made Amends for his Two Years Revolt.

He is now gone to the other World, not as to a Campagne, but to Celebrate an Eternal Triumph among the Famous Heroes of the Earth. The King has in Honour of his Merits, caus'd his Body to be buried in the Temple of St. Denis, where all the Blood Royal of France is repolited. Shewing in this, how little difference he makes between him that sits on the Throne, and him that well supports it.

Illustrious Hamet, I pray Heaven inspire the Sultan to reward thee and all his Faithful Ministers, and Valiant Generals, with particular Honours, proportionate to every Mans distinct Merits, and Services. Adieu.

Paris, 4th. of the 9th. Moon,
of the Year 1675.

LET-

LETTER VIII.

To the Kaimacham.

THere happen many remarkable Events in a year, which I cannot presently transmit an Account of, for want of Timely Intelligence. My Letters are often finish'd and seal'd, and sometimes sent away before I hear of the Taking of such a City, or Strong Hold; of this Victory on the French side, or that Success on the Part of their Enemies, the Germans, Spaniards, and Hollanders. And I do not think it worth while to trouble the Ministers of the Port with an After-Dispatch, only to inform them of some Siege, Battel, or other petty Occurrence, as oft as they come to my knowledge. Chusing rather to recapitulate in one Letter, at the end of the year, all such Passages as were omitted before, That so my Intelligence, however disjoynted and parcel'd out into Fragments, may yet at last be set together again, and made entire.

Thus the taking of Bellegand in Roussillon from the Spaniards, by the Mareschal de Schomberg, was not a matter of that Importance as to deserve a particular Letter on Purpose to keep Time with the Action. Yet it is convenient to insert it in this Summary of Transactions omitted in my former Letters; That so the Ottoman Register may not be imperfect and defective. This Fortress was taken about Midsummer, Midſummer, after an Entrenchment of Seven Days.

But Fortune though ſhe ſeems to have declar'd in Favour of the French Arms, yet to ſhew her Inconſtancy, ſometimes turns her Smiles to Frowns, and ſeems for a While to leave them in the Lurch.

On the 11*th.* of the 8*th. Moon*, there happen'd an Accident at Treves, which occaſion'd the Loſs of that Town to the Confederate Enemies of France, and a little clouded the Glory of the Mareſchal de Crequi's Arms, who had hitherto Fought Succeſsfully, and gain'd the Reputation of a very Wiſe and Prudent General.

It ſeems the Governour of Treves, whom they call the Sieur Vignory had Orders to come out of the Town that very Day, and joyn the Mareſchal de Crequi with Five Thouſand Men of the Garriſon, to put in Execution ſome Deſign they had upon the Confederate Forces, which lay not far off. The Governour in Complyance with the Order, was Marching his Men over a Bridge, when his Horſe ſuddenly ſtarting at the Diſcharge of a Piſtol fell with his Rider into the Ditch, where they both periſh'd. Now this unfortunate Gentleman not having diſcover'd his Secret Order to any Perſon Living; his Lieutenant being ignorant of the Deſign, and troubl'd at this unhappy Accident, caus'd the Five Thouſand Men to March back again into the Town. In the mean time the Mareſchal de Crequi in vain expected the coming of theſe Recruits, and and finding himself too weak, to resist the more numerous Troops of his Enemies, was forc'd to give Way, whilst they advanc'd to besiege the Town, the main Thing which he aim'd to prevent. In this Streight he had nothing else to do but to throw himself with his Forces into the Town, that so his Presence might supply the Dead Governours Place, till the King's Pleasure were known. He defended the Place with much Resolution and Bravery: But by the Treachery of a certain Captain belonging to the Garrison, it was at length taken, after Abundance of Bloodshed. This Traitors Name was Besejourdan; he held a private Correspondence with the Enemy, inform'd them of the Disadvantages the Town lay under; corrupted several of the Garrison, and did all Things that might facilitate the Reduction of the Place. For which he was deservedly hang'd, having been deliver'd into the Hands of the French, by those; who, though they made use of the Treason, yet could not but abhor the Traytor.

The Imperialists took Courage upon this Success, and began to think, That since the Death of Mareschal Turenne, Fortune had abandon'd the Interest of France, and enter'd into the Confederacy with them. Hereupon Count Montecuculi on the 20th of the 8th. Moon invested Haguenau, a strong Place in the Hands of the French. But the Approach of the Prince of Conde soon made him raise the Siege. Since which there has been little of Action on either Side, ſave the taking of Thuin, a Town ſituated on the Sambre, and which commands all the Country between that River and the Meuſe. It was ſurrender'd to the French about the Beginning of the 11th. Moon, on Condition that the Priviledges of the Inhabitants ſhould be preſerv'd, and that they ſhould not be forc'd to maintain the King's Garriſon.

tle

There have been lately ſome Seditions in the Provinces of Bretagne and Guienne, ſaid to be ſecretly abetted by the Parliaments of Bourdeaux and Rennes. For which the King has ſignifyed his Diſpleaſure by removing thoſe Aſſemblies to other Places, after having inflicted ſevere and exemplary Puniſhments on the Ring-leaders of the Tumults.

And now this Monarch ſeems to be weary of the Fatigues of War, having publiſh'd a Manifeſto, wherein he complains of the Injury done to Prince William of Furſtemberg, Plenipotentiary from the Biſhop of Cologne; Declares that he had reaſon to ſhew his Reſentments of an Affront given to his Allie, contrary to the Law of Nature; that nevertheleſs he had labour'd for the general Peace of Chriſtendom: And was now in the ſame Inclination. On which Account he ſent the Sieur Colbert Maſter of the Requeſts, and the Count d' Avaux to Nimeguen there to aſſiſt at the Conferences of Peace.

Some ſay this Propenſion to Peace is the Effect of a Vow the King made, when he was lately afflicted with a violent Fever.

Be it how it will, the Captains and Soldiers on all Sides are agreed to ceaſe from Acts of Hoſtility, during this cold Seaſon: finding it much more comfortable to wallow in Beds of Down, than to lie abroad in the Snow; and to lay cloſe Siege to a good Fire, than to campagne it in Trenches full of Water and Ice.

Illuſtrious Miniſter, I pray God make thee happy all the Four Seaſons of the Year; but eſpecially to give thee his Winters Bleſſing, a Warm Houſe, an agreeable Bedfellow; Plenty of the Gifts of Ceres and Bacchus, a Merry Heart, and a Good Stomach.

Paris, 7th. of the 12th. Moon,
of the Year 1675.

LETTER

LETTER IV.

To Abdel Melec Muli Omar, Preſident of the Coll. of Sciences at Fez.

THY Pacquet came juſt now to my Hands, in an Hour of Felicities, under a Noble and Propitious Aſterism. The Conſtellations Above ſmile on Mahmut at this Seaſon. A Thouſand ſoft and Serene Pleaſures diſtill upon my Soul; a Pearl of Heavenly Dew lits on every blooming Thought. My Heart is like a Garden in the Mornings of an Autumn-Solſtice, freſh and fragrant, though drooping for Age.

I have ſpent the Spring and Summer of my Life, in Error, Ignorance and Vanity. 'Tis Time that I ſhould provide for the Winter of my Age, a Stock of Solid Wiſdom and Vertue. And Heaven to ſhew its Love and Care of Mortals, inſpir'd thee with the Generous Thoughts of aſſiſting me once more by thy ſage Inſtructions. Thy Diſpatch contains ſuch a Scheme of Philoſophy and Reaſon, as never can be refuted. Thou art the Apollo of the Age.

Glory be to God, Majeſtick, Living and Strong, Eternal Father and Sourſe of Lights, Fountain of Intellectual Perfections, Original Treaſury of Reaſon; with whom remain from Everlaſting Ages, the Idea's of all Things paſt, prepreſent and to come; the Patterns of Things viſible and inviſible, the Exemplars of every Thing that has had, ſhall, or can have Exiſtence in the Univerſe. Bleſſed be the Word and Breath of God, the Spirit of Life and Underſtanding, which in the determined Periods of Time, enters into Holy Souls, making them the Favourites of the Moſt High, and Prophets.

That Spirit deſcends ſometimes and on ſome Perſons, like a gentle Shower in Harveſt; but on thee it pours down like the Rivers from Paradiſe, in Vaſt and Mighty Cataracts. Wiſdom overflows thy Soul, as the Nile: The Streams thereof are ſtrong and rapid as the Currents of Tygris and Euphrates; Rich, and inebriating as the Waters of Jordan; thy Mind is cover'd with a Deluge of Science.

O! Immarceſſible Wiſdom! Bleſſed is the Man that has thee for his Portion in this Life. The Gold has no Value or Beauty when compar'd with thee: The Diamond and Saphir fade and look dull; and the choiceſt Pearls of the Orient loſe their Luſtre in thy Preſence. Doubtleſs, Wiſdom ſhines for ever, and is incorruptible. It is a pure reſplendent Eſſence flowing from the Eternal Glory; a ſincere Emanation from the Divine Nature; The Spotleſs Mirrour of God, wherein he beholds his own Immortal Excellencies. It is Ten Thouſand Times more ſerene than the Light it ſelf, brighter than the Sun, purer than the Sky, and more more ſparkling than all the Hoſt of the Stars. The Glittering Crowd of Angels are eclips'd in her Preſence, and all the Radiant Orders of the Bleſſed Above, ſerve but as Foils to ſet forth her Superlative and all-penetrating Coruſcations.

God brought her forth from the Womb of his Unfathomable Depths, ſhe ſprang from the Treaſures which cannot be exhauſted. In the Morning of the World, ſhe rouz'd the benumm'd Chaos with her efficacious Beams. Her Energy gave Life and Form to the confus'd and dark Abyſs. She ſhines from one Extremity of the Univerſe to another, illuminating Infinite Spaces. She is a reſulgent Circle of Light, whoſe Center is every where, but whoſe Circumference is not to be found.

Ask thoſe who pitch their Pavilions above all Worlds, the outlying Camps of the Omnipotent, who guard the Frontiers of the Bliſful Regions, and walk the Rounds of our Remoteſt Heaven, the Cœlum Empyræum; to fire its Beacons on the Diſcovery of any foreign Invaſion threatn'd by ſome New Upſtart Republick of Beings, hatch'd in the cold and frozen Climates of the Endleſs Expanſe: Ask thoſe, I ſay, whether they e'er cou'd trace the Eternal Wiſdom in her Flights? Or find the Solitary Haunts of Everlaſting Reaſon? They may purſue the glorious Chace, o'er the Untrack'd Waſtes of the Unlimitted, Unform'd Firſt Matter, as well as through the Fenced Fields and Parks, the enclos'd Land-mark'd Grounds of this known World: But all in vain. There is no catching what is Infinite. The Wings of all created Fancies are too short and weak. The Cherubims themselves and Seraphims are far too slow, to seize so swift a Prey. Wisdom is wild as Chance, conceal'd as Nature, yet fix'd as Destiny.

She dwells beyond the Highest Heavens; her Throne is inaccessible; yet she fills all Things with her Presence. She sought for a Place of Repose on Earth among the Sons of Men. She travers'd the Nations by Land, and visited the Isles of the Sea. She descended into the Abysses below, and made her Scrutiny in the Horrid Caverns of the Globe. At length she found Rest in Abraham; and pitch'd her Habitation in Ismael: Because it was so determin'd of old, from Sempiternal Ages, and recorded in the Archives of Fate. She was establish'd in Mecca, the Birth-place of the Prophet, and her Power is rooted in Medina Telnabi, the place of his Burial. The Holy Cities are ennobl'd by her Presence, and she shines in the midst of an Honourable Race, an Offspring born to Glory, a Renowned People, a Sanctify'd Progeny; a Generation of Worthies; a Family of Hero's, a Lineage whereon rest the Favours and Smiles of the Omnipotent.

Oh Arabia! Well may'st thou be call'd the Happy, since in thee is the Seat of the Eternal Sapience. Go Mourn, ye Mountains of Judæa! and all ye desolated Valleys of Palestine:

For

For the Dew and the Rain have forſaken you. Your Soil languiſhes for want of Moyſture, and your Glebe is dried up. Your Trees wither and fade; neither does the Ground bring forth any Graſs or Flowers. The Paſtures are become like a Wilderneſs, overrun with Bryars and Thorns, and your Arable Fields, are as the Lybian Waſtes, barren and unprofitable. The Land that was once call'd Holy, is now become Execrable, a Habitation of Satyrs and Demons: Becauſe Wiſdom has tranſlated her Reſidence from Sion, and the Angels have Decamp'd from the Climate of Jeruſalem.

Rejoyce, O Regions bordering on the Eaſt of the Red Sea! For with you is a Great Light, even the Law brought down from Heaven, and the Glory of the Moſt High overſhadows you.

Wiſdom is exalted in Arabia; ſhe lifts up her Head above the Top of Mount of Uriel: She flouriſhes like the Palm-Tree, and ſpreads her Boughs as the Terebinth: Many Nations reſt under the Shadow of her wide-ſpread Branches: Her Ways are Uniform and Beautiful, like an Alley of Cypreſſes; and all her Paths are ſweet as a Garden of Cinnamon, Myrrh, and Roſes. Her Fruit feeds the Eaſt and the South; her Saluti-ferous Leaves are ſcattered from India, to the Land of the Moors, where thou dwelleſt. Her fragrant Odour is diffus'd from Pole to Pole.

She is the Mother of Science and Virtue; in her Cuſtody are the Springs of Life and Health, of Honour and Riches: She has in her Treaſures lock'd up Innumerable Kinds of Felicities, which ſhe plentifully pours forth on them that obey her Inſpirations. She appears chearfully to them that wait upon her; and no Man ever departed from her Preſence, but he fell into Sadneſs. For, a certain enlivening Influence flows from her Countenance; a Man is raviſh'd with her Converſation. Her Breath is ſweeter than Ambroſia, or the Vapour of Eaſtern Incenſe. Her Thoughts are fragrant, as the Aromatick Exhalations of Nardus, Onyx, and Staëte. All Words are too ſhort to expreſs her Praiſes, neither is there any Style or Language that can deſcribe her Incomparable Worth. Therefore with Reverence I deſiſt from ſaying any more at this Time, on ſo ſublime a Subject; leſt whilſt I am prolonging the Panegyrick of Wiſdom, I proclaim my own Folly, to a Sage who is familiar with her, and beſt knows her Character.

In the mean Time, Vouchſafe to accept of theſe Lines, as a Teſtimony of the profound Veneration I have for thee who art known through all Africk, and other Parts of the World, to be One of the Firſt Rank among Wiſdom's Favourites.

Adieu, Great Lamp of Mauritania, and believe, That Mahmut is no Flatterer.

Paris, 19th. of the 3d. Moon, of the Year 1676.

LETTER

LETTER V.

To the Captain Baſſa.

IF I write often to the Baſſa's of the Land, I do not forget the Duty I owe to him of the Sea. Only that Element has not been the Stage of ſo many Remarkable Actions as the other: There are no Forts, Caſtles, or ſtrong Ciries, built upon the Waves: No ſettled Camps, or formal Sieges, unleſs it be upon the Frozen Seas, within or near the Artick Circle. And there they only imitate the Trade of War to exerciſe their Youth.

However, on the other Parts of the Ocean, there are flying Campagnes, Battels en Paſſant; and this Year has afforded ſome Marine Engagements between the French, Hollanders, and Spaniards, not altogether unworthy of thy Knowledge.

On the 8th. of the 1ſt. Moon, there happened a Naval Fight between the Sieur de Queſne, Lieutenant General of the French Fleets, and de Ruiter Vice-Admiral of the Dutch. Wherein the later ſuffer'd conſiderable Damage. But far greater was their Loſs on the 22d. of the 4th. Moon following; when the famous de Ruiter was kill'd, and ſeveral of the Dutch Ships Sunk, Burnt, and taken, Yet, that which makes the greateſt Noiſe, was a Battel fought on the 2d. of this preſent Moon, between the Mareſchal de Vivonne, Commander of the French Fleet, on the Coaſt of Sicily, and the United Naval Forces of Spain and Holland.

I have a Particular Account of this Combat; and becauſe I know thou delighteſt in Relations of this Nature, I will acquaint thee in ſhort, how they firſt encounter'd each other, and what Methods the French us'd to gain a glorious Victory over Two Fleets, much more numerous in Ships than their own.

It was not far from the Old dangerous Streight between Charybdis and Scylla, where the Duke de Vivonne deſcry'd the Hoſtile Navies making toward the Place where he lay with his Fleet at Anchor. The Alarm was quickly giv'n, and all Hands to the Cable: As ſoon as they had weigh'd, they made all the Sail they could toward the Enemy. The Spaniards and Hollanders had Twenty Seven Ships of War, Nineteen Gallies, and Four Fire Ships. The French had but Nineteen Ships of War, Seven Gallies, and Five Fire Ships. Theſe got the Wind of their Enemies, and attacqu'd them ſo fiercely, that they drove ſeveral of their Capital Veſſels on thoſe dangerous Rocks and Sands, where they were loſt; and they burnt Thirteen more of their Beſt Ships, among which were the Admiral of Spain, and the Vice-Admiral of Holland.

I ceaſe to ſay more of this remarkable Fight, ſave that it is eſteem'd only Second to the Famous Battel of Lepanto.

Prince of the Sea, I wiſh thee equal Succeſs, when ever thou fighteſt againſt the Enemies of God and his Prophet.

Paris, 14th. of the 6th. Moon,
of the Year 1676.

LETTER VI.

To the Sage of Sages, the Myſterious Eremite, the Great Mohammed, of Mount Uriel, in Arabia.

THere is no Man in this Mortal Life, who has not chang'd his Opinions one Time or other. And whether it be an Argument of Wiſdom or Folly, Knowledge or Ignorance, to be thus Mutable in our Thoughts; we find few tenacious in their Old Age, of the Notions they entertain'd in their Youth.

We have ſome Natural and Proleptick Ideas born with us; others impos'd upon us by our Parents, Nurſes and Tutors. Our Infant Fancies are tender, flexible, and receptive of any Impreſſions; like Gold that yields yeilds to every Stamp and Coin, of a new Sovereign. So in the Mint of Human Converſation, our Thoughts are molded and form'd, by each prevailing Genius that keeps us Company. Nay, a New Book that we have an Inclination for, ſhall quite obliterate all that before was current Reaſon with us, and transform our Faculties into another Figure. So true it is, That Mankind delights in Novelty.

Whether it be an Effect of this General Weakneſs in Human Nature, or of my own particular Inconſtancy; or in fine, of more correct and mature Conſideration, I will not determine. But this I am ſure of, That I cannot think now of ſeveral things, as I have done formerly, without offering great Violence to my preſent Reaſon. I am as apt now to ſuſpect my ſelf of Dotage at theſe Years, as other Men are inclin'd to flatter themſelves into a Conceit of their own Wiſdom, and to boaſt of it to others at the ſame Age. However, it appears evident to me, That every Man's Experience perfects his Speculations: And he who trafficks in the Mart of Philoſophy on the Stock of his own Diſcoveries, is in a fairer Way to improve himſelf, than a Man that trades altogether on the Credit of other Mens Conceptions.

The latter is but Wiſdom's Factor, or he may be call'd, a Brother in the Sciences, or a Banquier of other Mens Imaginations; He frequents the Common Exchange or Burſe of of Learning; reads the Books of the Ancients; converſes with the Wits, and moſt accompliſh'd Spirits of the preſent Age. Yet after all, he has but a Retail Profit. Nor ſhall he ever have better, ſo long as he dares not venture ſomething of his own

Whereas the former is a Rich Subſtantial Merchant, dealing on his own Bottom. He ventures on the wide Ocean of the Worlds peeviſh cenſorious Humour; runs the Hazard of Shipwreck, and Corſairs. The Winds and Storms of human Malice do not fright him; nor all the Rocks of Superſtition eſtabliſh'd by the Laws of Nations. No Sands or Shelves, or any undermining private Intereſt, can baulk his Courage; whilſt he has the Gales of Truth, and Tide of Primitive Reaſon on his ſide. For then he knows the Common Fortune will be his Pilot, and ſteer him ſafe through all.

From what I have ſaid, thou wilt expect ſome new refin'd Theſis to drop from my Pen, ſome very ſolid Dogma to be broach'd, after ſuch a tedious Prælude. But I tell thee plainly, I hardly know what I'm to write next, ſave only that I have ſome general Notions different from what I had before, concerning the Eternity of the World.

It was formerly my Opinion, and I paſs'd it upon all my Friends; That not only the Matter of the World is everlaſting, but its preſent Form alſo. But now I believe the contrary, on more rational Grounds. It is not ſo perfect as I eſteem'd it. Every Year of my Life convinces me of its Decaying State. It manifeſtly droops and crumbles away. Therefore by proportion of Argument, we ought to conclude, It is corruptible in its firſt Principles, and conſequently had a Beginning, and ſhall have an End.

of

I do not believe it ſhall be annihilated, or reduc'd to nothing; Nature abhors that Thought: But it ſhall be chang'd, metamorphos'd, and transform'd. Una dies dabit exitio, One Day ſhall conſign it to Ruin, as Lucretius ſays; and the ſame ſhall give it a brighter Form than ever it had; when the Earth ſhall become pure Cryſtal, and the Stars ſhall outſhine the Sun; and the Sun himſelf ſhall be diſſolv'd into his Eternal Principles of Light. The Philoſophers who have ſpoke of the Laſt Day, agree that the World ſhall be calcin'd by Fire; eſpecially thoſe of the Eaſt and South: for they poſitively aſſert, That when the moiſture of the Univerſe ſhall be exhauſted and ſpent [The Elements will pour forth Flames] ſays Hermes Triſmegiſtus, [a Treaſury of Fire] ſays Sophocles. And Ovid aſſerts, That the Seas ſhall be dried up, and all the Firmament ſhall appear like a Furnace. Heaven and Earth ſhall be mingled Pell-mell together. The Greeks ſay, The World ſhall boil up and ſcum off its Impurities, ροιζηδὸν, with a Noiſe like that of a Tempeſt, or a Whirlwind. The Italians expreſs it otherwiſe, by the Sound a Clock makes juſt before it ſtrikes the Hour; for it moves in an

Πυρὸς ἔκπυσιν. Scribitur in Fatis, &c.

an even and regular Courſe, and has a ſteady Pulſe till then; but when the laſt Minute is expir'd, the Wheels ruſh all together with a louder Noiſe: So ſhall the Orbs above, and theſe inferiour Elements, when their Courſe is done, break all their Harmony, and with confuſed Cracks and Ratlings diſgorge their Eſſences into the Lap of their eternal Chaos, there to be renew'd and chang'd again into far nobler Forms, although the original Subſtance ſtill remains the ſame; for I believe the firſt Matter to be unchangeable and eternal, without Beginning or End. But there have paſs'd many Millions of Ages, in the Production of ſuch an infinite Variety of Forms. Perhaps the Grounds of Aſtrology are true, and that there were of old certain Periods of Time affix'd, firſt for the Product of the Heavenly Signs and Conſtellations, then for the Planets, and afterwards for the Nativity of all the other Beings below the Moon. But Moyſes, the Law-giver and chief Philoſopher of the Jews, is of a contrary Judgment; for he ſays, The Vegetables had Exiſtence before the Stars. And ſo one does not know what to think among 'em all. For ought I know, any Man's Reaſon might be received with as much Applauſe as that of Moyſes, who ſhould aſſert, That there are certain Horſes formed of the pureſt Light, galloping up and down the infinite Expanſe for an indeterminate Series of Ages, the Duſt of whoſe Feet firſt raiſed the Elements out of Nothing, and then their Hoofs ſtriking againſt the original Flints of Nature, begat gat the Sparks which ſhall ſet the World a-fire at laſt. And God knows whether the late Conflagration at the Imperial City was not owing to a Scratch of one of thoſe Horſes Nails, though they are pleaſed to lay it on the Giaurs and Kyſilbaſchi.

By my Soul, I believe all Things proceed from eternal Chance. All that we admire ſo much in the World, is a mere Higgle-de-Piggledy of Things which may be or may not be, only they are; and ſo we muſt not quarrel with any Thing that has Exiſtence. We behold the Sun, Moon, and Stars, over our Heads; they give us their ſucceſſive Light by Night and Day. We trample upon the Earth under our Feet, and ſail on the open Sea, to which we can give no great Truſt. At the ſame time we know not the Natures of theſe different Beings: The Sun may be but an eternal Carbuncle for ought we know, and the Moon but a creſted Saphir; the reſt of the Planets but the Refractions of theſe bright Eſſences, and all the Fixed Stars but ſo many Splinters of the eternal Torch which lights the World. And after all the reſt, this Earth whereon we tread, may be but a Wart or Mole, a little ſilly Excreſcence, or ſuperfluous Tumour of the Elements, if not a Gangrene in Nature.

Oh Mohammed! I have ſaid too much to a Man of thy abſtruſe Speculations; but thou wilt pardon one that ſpeaks with Faith and Sincerity.

Let

Let me put in one Word more with thee, Oh Chief of the Solitaries, Prince of the Sylvans, Glory of Arabia, Thou Hidden one of the East, Thou Phœnix of all Generations! No Body was born for himself, No Body is Wise at all Times. And this is a particular Seaſon wherein the Grand Signior's Service requires me to be, as it were, a little fooliſhly merry. Therefore, begging thy Pardon and Prayers, I bid thee Adieu.

Paris, 13th. of the 8th. Moon, of the Year 1676.

LET-

LETTER VII.

To Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Cuſtoms, and Superintendent of the Arſenal at Conſtantinople.

IT will do thee no hurt to carry the following News to Hamet Reis Effendi. I entrench on the Poſt's Time, and my own Health, it being very late in the Night, on purpoſe that the Miniſters of the Port may have the earlieſt Account of the Taking of Philipsbourg from the French by the Confederate Princes and States.

This is a Town of great Importance, and very ſtrong. The Spaniards became Maſters of it in the Year 1633, through the Treachery of the Governour. Next Year following the Suedes put it again in the French King's Hands: but that Monarch not being able to repair its Fortifications, by reaſon of the Winter, it was ſurpris'd by the Imperialiſts on the 23d of the firſt Moon 1635; in whoſe Hands it remained till the Year 1644; when in the 9th Moon it was taken by the Duke Enguyen, now Prince of Conde, after he had routed the Duke of Bavaria at Friburgh. The French have had it in Poſſeſſion ever ſince that time, till about four Days ago it was Surren-

Surrendred, upon Conditions, to the Imperialists, who had block'd it up above a Year, and formally Besieg'd it four Moons.

It is a Loss which this Court resents with no small Grief, Philipsbourg being a Town of more Value than twenty others in those Parts. The French have taken Conde, Bouchain, and Aire, but they do not think these an equivalent Reprizal; neither can this Campaign last long enough to give them an Opportunity of seeking farther Satisfaction.

Brother, I must conclude abruptly, because the Post tarries. God have thee in his Keeping, and preserve thee from the Snares and malicious Ambuscades of Devils, who are let loose from their Infernal Dens to range above ground, from this Hour, to the Crowing of the Cocks.

Paris, 12th of the 9th Moon of the Year 1676.

LET-

LETTER VIII.

To Sephat Abercromil, Vanni, Effendi, Preacher to the Sultan.

ABout five Years ago I ſent thee a Diſpatch, containing an Account of the kind Reception thy Doctrins found in Europe, and of the ſwift Progreſs they made in Converting the honeſter ſort of Nazarenes. I alſo acquainted thee with the Oppoſition that was made againſt the Writings of Francis Malevella, by the Jeſuits and Dominicans. Now I ſhall inform thee farther of the prodigious Advances this Sacred Inſtitution of Life has made in Italy, France, and Spain, with Germany, and other Regions in the Weſt.

There is an eminent Man in Rome, whom they call Father Petrucci, a Perſon of great Learning, and conſpicuous Knowledge. His Piety indeed has been by him induſtriouſly concealed, as much as lay in's Power: But yet his moſt recluſe good Works took Air, and all Men of Integrity conceive a Veneration for him. He having read the Works of Malevella, grew enamour'd of ſo ſublime a Syſtem of ſpiritual Rules; and wrote to all his Friends by way of Recommendation of the Author and his Subject. Thoſe Letters afterwards were put in Print, and 'tis not to be expreſt, what powerful Influence they had on all impartial Readers. He publiſhed alſo many learned Treatiſes, in the Defence and Praiſe of a Contemplative Life. And the Reputation of this refin'd Theology daily encreas'd, and ſpread abroad in every Corner of the Chriſtian World.

on

Among the reſt of learned Proſelytes, a certain Spaniſh Prieſt, and Doctor of the Chriſtian Law, whom they call Michael de Molino, appear'd upon the Stage; and the laſt Year publiſh'd a comprehenſive Treatiſe of Myſtical Religion. The Book was approv'd and Licens'd by the Archbiſhop of Rheggio, by the General of the Franciſcans, an Officer of the Inquiſition, and by Martin de Eſparſa, an eminent Jeſuit belonging to the ſame Court, and Profeſſor of Theology at Rome. The Preſs had no ſooner deliver'd this myſterious Treatiſe to the World, but every body catch'd it up. So that the firſt Edition being ſoon diſperſed in Rome, Ferrara, Naples, and other Cities of Italy, it was neceſſary to ſtart a new Impreſſion of ſo acceptable a Thing, that the remaining Provinces, States, and Principalities, might not want their ſhare of ſo divine a Copy; That Spain might be reformed by one of her own Natives; and Generous France forgetting her Averſions, might not diſdain the ſage Inſtructions of a hated Spaniard. In a word, Molino's Book is had in ſecond Veneration with the Goſpel. His Friendſhip is coveted by the greateſt Men in Rome; eſpecially the Secular Clergy are ambitious to confirm the Honours, Dignities, and Benefices they they already poſſeſs i'th' Church, by gaining the Favour of his Acquaintance. They conſult him as an Oracle in knotty Problems of Divinity; and many Cardinals court his Correſpondence, not valuing their Rank in the Red Liſt of Eccleſiaſtical Princes, unleſs they are alſo enrolled in the happy Number of Molino's Friends; ſuch are Carpegna, Azolini, Caſſanta, Odeſcalchi, and the French Cardinal D'Eſtrees.

This laſt is famous for his Learning and Accompliſhments, being Educated in the Sorbonne, and a Familiar of Monſieur De Launay a great Reformer of Errors in the Doctrin and Diſcipline of the Roman Church. Being thus prediſpos'd to favor any one who wou'd expoſe himſelf to ſtem the Torrent of Corruptions, the Tide of vain and ſuperſtitious Practices, advancing daily higher and higher, and threatning to overflow the Banks of ſolid Piety, ſincere Devotion, and all Moral Virtue, the Generous Cardinal appeared the publick Patron of Molino, and in private they had many Conferences. The Spaniard laid aſide his Native Jealouſie of Foreigners, and the Frenchman mortified his Pique againſt that Nation. They both convers'd with openneſs of Heart, and unreſerved Freedom.

The Cardinal alſo, after this, brought him acquainted with ſeveral Eminent Men in France, between whom and Molino was held a ſtrict Intelligence. The new Pope, who was before called Cardinal Odeſcalchi, has given him an Apartment in his own Palace, and done him many other Honours. In a word, he is grown so considerable, that the greatest part of Nazarenes look upon him as a Prophet sent from God.

done

I take Complacency to see Mahometanism thus masquerade it in the Heart of Christendom; and the most refined Draught of our Religion copied in the Lives and Practices of the most Excellent among the Nazarenes. 'Tis a fair Sign, methinks, that by degrees they will enquire a little farther, and with more Humility, into our Sacred Law; that they will not stumble at Circumcision, Washing, and other Purifications and Ceremonies appointed by the Prophet; since they are all performed in Honour of the eternal Unity, and not to Images or Pictures. However at least, such pious and contemplative Men as these, will, by a necessary Consequence, raise up a secret Faction for us, and qualifie the bitter Zeal and Spight which Christians generally bear against the True Believers. For the Followers of Malevella, Petrucci, and Molino, are already branded, and distinguish'd from the rest of the Nazarenes, by the odious Names of Hereticks, which is next door to the more opprobrious Title of Infidels, the best and kindest Epithet they can afford the faithful Mussulmans.

To sum up all in brief, they reckon a hundred thousand of this new Sect in Italy, as many more in France and Spain, and not much fewer in Germany; besides Poland, Hungary, and other Regions. So that if an Army my of Muſſulmans ſhould appear on the Italian Shore with Vami Effendi at the Head of them, and Declarations ſhould be ſpread about, containing that you aim at nothing but to propagate the Truth, and to protect the injur'd Moliniſts or Quietiſts, (for ſo they Nick-name this contemplative Sect) they would all riſe, and fly to the Mahometan Standard, as formerly the Malecontents of Italy did to the Aſylum of Romulus. God's Will be done.

Paris, 2d of the 12th Moon,
of the Year 1676.

LET-

LETTER IX.

To Mirmadolin, Santone of the Vale of Sidon.

BLeſſed are they who honour the Virtues of Holy Men, and ſtrive to imitate their Examples. The Infidels count them mad, whom the great Lord of all things has inſpired with his Love, which is the Spirit or Breath of the Omnipotent, giving Life to all Things. Their Souls are ſnatch'd away in ſacred Extaſies; they are carried to the bright ſhining Worlds, born up on the Wings of a Wind from Paradiſe. They behold marvellous Things, and the Wonders of the Sky: Waſted from Star to Star, they are raviſh'd with the Sight of ſo many radiant Splendors, and expire in Tranſports of Divine Pleaſure, when they conſider the beautiful Oeconomy of the Univerſe.

O Ariel! Chief of the Choirs above; who ſetteſt the Tunes of the Spheres, and art Maſter of the eternal Muſick; who taughteſt Sultan David to play on the Harp, and learned'ſt him the Songs of Paradiſe: Send down ſome Azur'd Meſſenger, ſome purpl'd Poſt from Eden, to inſpire my Soul with divine Harmonies, whilſt I celebrate the Praiſes of Alla, the Firſt and the Laſt, whoſe Glory is expanded through the infinite Abyſs, and enlightens endleſs Spaces. The whole Universe is full of his Majesty, but the Place of his Retirement is above the Heaven of Heavens. There he keeps his Court, guarded by seventy times seven Millions of Angels; who always stand on their Watch, to prevent the Invasions of Orosmades, the Prince of Darkness, the Root and Source of all Evil.

God came from Heaven in the Days of Moses, with an Army not to be number'd: Michael was his Standard-Bearer, whose Chariot was a Carbuncle of Paradise. They march'd through the Milky Way, and made their Descent on the Rock of the Desart Sina. The Artillery of the Celestial Host was Thunder and Lightning: They were encompassed with thick Clouds of Smoak. The World was affrighted at the dreadful Noise, and Orosmades durst not appear, to abide the Battel, but fled into the Caverns of the Earth with all his Legions, where they are barr'd up to the Day of Judgment. They often strive to break loose, which occasions horrid Earthquakes: But the Chain which binds them is fasten'd to the Throne of God. He keeps the Keys of those Infernal Prisons, and bars up all the Avenues of Hell. There Darkness, Horror, and Pain, have taken up their Residence for ever. One Abyss supplies another with eternal Floods of Confusion and Misery. But above the Surface of the Earth, he has establish'd Light, Liberty, Joy and Peace to them that revolt not from his Love and Obedience.

God came from Arval, and the Holy One was ſeen to fly from the Thickets of Schair in the Eaſt. He bent his Courſe toward the Red Sea, and pitch'd his Tents in the Meridian of Mecca. On that Day the Kebla was turned toward the South; and the Faces of the Faithful, in time of Prayer, regarded the Houſe of Abrahim, the ſquare Temple, and the Place appointed by Deſtiny for the Tomb of the Prophet. Then Medina Telnabi became bright and illuſtrious: The Glory of Jeruſalem faded and was eclipſ'd at the Dawning Splendor of this New Sanctuary, a City ennobled by the Preſence of Deputies from Heaven, even Gabriel and Iſraphiel, who came down to viſit the determined Place of the Prophet's Reſt.

They brought with them, Rules and Models of Divine Architecture, that the Dormitory of the Meſſenger of God might be majeſtick and glorious. They diſcloſed their Errand to Zaphid and Al Kepher, two cunning Artificers in the City, and ſhew'd them the Celeſtial Pattern of the Sepulchre. Theſe kept ſecret the Matter, till the Time was accompliſh'd which the Angels enjoin'd them. Then they declared themſelves, and undertook the Building of a Fabrick, which has render'd Medina famous throughout the World.

Oh, Medina Telnabi! how ſweet is thy Name among the Muſſulmans? The Roads of Aſia and Africk are covered with the Caravans of ſuch as bring Preſents unto thee; the Devout Pilgrims who travel from far to kiss the Pavement of the Temple, where the Bones of our divine Lawgiver is reposited.

I saw the Elephants and Dromodaries of the East, with Joy bow down and crouch to the Earth, whilst Sacred Burdens were laid on their Backs; the Camels also of the South; of Egypt, and the Land of Moors. They performed the Sacred Pilgrimage with Humility and Resignation: They Fasted 4, 5, 10, or 14 Days, each as they were able, in Token of their Devotion and Thankfulness; in that they were permitted the Honour of visiting the Holy Region, and the Sepulchre of him who taught the Dumb Beasts the Discipline of Wisdom, and the Way to Paradise.

Ever since that Time, the Animal Generations have instructed each other in the Precepts of the Prophet who could neither Write nor Read. In their Mute-Language they perform, Morning and Evening, the appointed Oraisons, and Preach to their Young Ones by Inarticulate Sounds, the Doctrins of Faith, clear and intelligible.

Oh Mahomed! Every Letter of thy mysterious Name is full of Benediction and Praise. Each Syllable is compounded of Secrets not to be reveal'd till the Consummation of all Things. Thou art a Treasury of Wonders which cannot be exhausted or valued.

I heard the Eastern Wind record thy Praise on a Flute, whilst gentle Zephyrs blew soft Vocal Harmonies, wherein were often celebrated the glorious Names of Mahomet and

Hali

Hali. To these, Great Boreas join'd in Consort with his Deep-lung'd-Organ; sweeten'd in Counter-Tenor by the Southern Wind. They Whistled, Sung, and Play'd in Parts, till all the Younger Sons of Æolus came in to fill the Choir. Then was the Musick loud and shrill: It awaken'd all the Woods and Forests on the Earth. The Trees and all the Vegetable Race, struck up in Union with the Winds; the Birds put in their cheatful Notes; the Streams and Rivers murmur'd grateful Airs: the Sea rais'd up her Billows to the Clouds, whilst Jovial Tritons sounded high Levets of the Marine, answer'd in Verse by rumbling Timbrels of the Sky. There was an universal Joy and Rant: Nature her self was in a Frolick, and kept Holiday.

Why did the most High decamp from Arval, and the Eternal remove his Residence from Schair in the East? Why did he cause his Armies to lie down in the South, and his Pavilions to cover the Regions of Mecca? Doubtless, he did all this in Honour of the Law which he sent from Heaven, and of the Birth-Place of his Favourite, that all Nations might know and confess, That there is but one God, and Mahomet his Apostle. The Beasts of the Earth acknowledge this; the Fowls also of the Air, and the Fish of the Sea. The Elements and Inanimate Beings are sensible of a Joy which they cannot express, and the Universe is all dissolv'd in Rapture, whilst it lies stretch'd out at large, unfolded into endless Skirts, and rests for ever on the All-propping Unity.

Mirmadolin, I am part of the Universe, and therefore cannot but be touch'd with a Sense of the Bliss which at certain Seasons transports the Whole. Thou who art always in a Divine Extasie, wilt not wonder at the short Enthusiasms of thy Slave Mahmut, who covets nothing more ambitiously, than to imitate thy blameless Life.

Farewel, in God; for we cannot be out of him, so long as we are in our selves.

Paris, 17th. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1677.

LETTER

LETTER X.

To the Kaimacham.

THE French are resolv'd to make bold Efforts this Campaign, to repair the Loss of Philipsburg, which was taken from them last Year. The King is impatient of any Check given to the Progress of his Arms, and spares neither Men nor Mony to keep up the Reputation and Fame of a Conqueror. And if this Character (grown familiar to him, as it were by Prescription, after a long and almost uninterrupted Series of Victories) happen'd at any Time to be lessens by some unsuccessful Attempt upon the Enemy, he cannot be at Rest till he has recover'd it again by such renown'd Exploits, as may be answerable to the Greatness of his Soul, and the Formidable Puissance of his Sword, known to all Europe.

He has many and great Armies in Pay; and whether it be an Effect of his Fortune, or his Judgment, 'tis observ'd, that he is always bless'd with the Ablest Generals in Christendom.

The First Thing he enterpriz'd was the Siege of Valenciennes, a City seated on the Frontiers of the Spanish Netherlands; a very important Place, and considerable for its Commerce; inhabited also by a Stout, Warlike People; and of very difficult Access, by reaſon of a certain River, with whoſe Waters they can at Pleaſure drown all the Country round about. It was inveſted by the Duke of Luxemburg on the 28th of the 2d Moon, and formally beſieg'd on the 4th of the 3d. On the 17th there was a General Aſſault given, and the French enter'd the Town; which ſo terrified the Inhabitants, that they threw themſelves upon the King's Mercy. He accepted their Submiſſions, and ſo put a Stop to the common Violence in ſuch Caſes.

Another Time this had been enough to have Crown'd a whole Campaign, and ſatisfy'd the Ambition of the French Generals; but now, the Remembrance of laſt Year's Loſs and Diſgrace, ſpurs them on to New Revenges: And to convince the World that this Monarch is not eaſily to be daunted, but that he is jealous of his Glory, he has, ſince the Taking of Valenciennes, beſieg'd two Strong Cities, Cambray and St. Omers.

The Former of theſe, is eſteem'd one of the ſtrongeſt Places in all Flanders; it is ſituated on the River Eſcaut, and was the Ancient Patrimony of the French Crown, ever ſince the Reign of Clodion II. King of France, who made himſelf Maſter of it in the Year 445 of the Chriſtians Hegira. Afterwards it fell to the Share of Charles the Bald, in the Year 843; and in the Year 870, it became the Occaſion of a War between the Kings of France, the Emperors, and the Counts of Flanders. In which Conteſt, one of the Baldwins got it, and left it to his Son. But Charles V. over-over-reach'd him; and, by Means of the Biſhop's Correſpondence, took Poſſeſſion of the Place. He put a ſtrong Garriſon in it, and built a Citradel which render'd the Town almoſt Impregnable. In proceſs of Time it fell into the Hands of the Duke of Alanſon, Brother to Henry III. when he was made Count of Flanders, in the Year 1582. But in the Year 1595. the Spaniards took it, and have held it ever ſince, till the 6th of the 4th Moon of this preſent Year; when the Gates were ſet open, to let in the French Troops; and the 17th, the Citradel was ſurrender'd upon Articles.

As for St. Omers, it is a Great City, and well fortified; having on One Side the River Aa, with its Mariſhes; and on the Other, being defended by a Caſtle, flank'd with good Baſtions, and encompaſs'd with an extream broad and deep Ditch. About the Beginning of this Moon it was inveſted by the French King's Forces, and within three or four Days it was formally Beſieg'd, but not gain'd without a Bloody Combat, fought between the French and the Prince of Orange, who came with a Conſiderable Army, deſigning to throw Succours into the Place. I will not trouble thee, by Reciting all the Particulars of the Fight; only be aſſur'd, that the French got the Victory, put the Others to Flight, remain'd Maſters of the Field, took Thirteen Pieces of Cannon, Seventeen Standards, all the Enemy's Baggage, and almoſt Three Thouſand Priſoners.

The Stage of this great Action was a Place call'd Mont-Caſſel, not far from St. Omers: A Spot of Ground obſerv'd to have once before been Propitious to the French Arms, when Philip of Valois fought there with the Spaniards, and gave 'em an entire Defeat. He was reckon'd the Valianteſt Prince of that Age.

The Inhabitants of St. Omers hearing of the Defeat that was given to the Prince of Orange, were in ſo great a Conſternation, that in few Days they voluntarily ſurrender'd to the French King.

Illuſtrious Kaimacham, this Puiſſant Monarch takes ſuch Wiſe Methods, as thou wilt ſay, cannot fail in the Ordinary Courſe of War, to bring him Succeſs. He is an Excellent Pay-maſter; and never gives Occaſion for his Soldiers to Repine or Murmur for want of their Daily Allowance, nor puts them upon impatient Expectations of their Arrears. On the Contrary, He is very Munificent and Liberal to all Men of Merit: And the meaneſt Soldier, who ſignalizes himſelf by any Notable Exploit, or Action of Bravery, is ſure to be diſtinguiſh'd from the Reſt by ſome Royal Reward in Mony, if he be not advanc'd to the Dignity of a Commander: And ſometimes they are honour'd with both. This Conduct makes his Men fight like Lyons, each being Emulous of his Fellows, and all freely hazarding their Lives, to gain their Maſter's Eſteem; counting that the moſt Glorious Poſt, which is moſt expos'd to Danger.

He

He is ſevere to thoſe Provinces and Towns which refuſe to ſubmit to his Arms, and full of Clemency to ſuch as willingly embrace his Government.

In a Word, His Donatives and Largeſſes to his own; his Condeſcenſions, and the Immunities he gives to others; together with the Exactneſs of his Juſtice to all, to facilitate the Progreſs of his Arms; increaſe his Conqueſts, and render him the Greateſt Prince in the Weſtern Parts.

Sage Miniſter, I kiſs the Hem of thy Veſt, and with Humble Obeiſances retire from thy Preſence.

Paris, 29th. of the 4th. Moon, of the Year 1679.

LET-

LETTER XI.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

THE Love of Women is Natural to our Sex; and there is no Man, who, at one Time or other, has not felt the Warmths of this Amorous Paſſion. But, it is ſtrange to obſerve, after what a different Manner this Flame diſcovers it ſelf in People of Various Nations, Ages, Qualities, Fortunes and Conſtitutions. Young Men are Laſcivious and Ardent in their Love: Old Men Ridiculous, and Formal. The Poor Man ſtudies to pleaſe his Miſtreſs by Abject Submiſſions, and Humble Obſequiouſneſs. The Rich ſtrives to win her by Munificent Gifts and Preſents. The Vulgar make their Court by Feaſting the Coy Damſel, and Regaling her with Junkets and Wine. The Noble entertain her with Plays, Maſquerades, Ballets, and other Pompous Divertiſements.

The Ingenious Italian ſets upon his Miſtreſs with a kind of Poliſh'd Wantonneſs; not making Romantick, Whining Addreſſes; but, with a Refin'd Impudence, his Eyes, his Hands, his Tongue, and all his Actions, ſoon make her ſenſible where his Pain lies. He celebrates her Praiſes in Verſe, and hires Muſick to Serenade renade her. Finally, He never leaves till he Gains her, or Revenges himſelf on his Rival, by Sending him out of the World: And on her, by Turning all his Compliments into Curſes and Slanders. But if he gets her, he ſhuts her up for ever, and makes her Chamber her Priſon.

The Headſtrong Spaniard, burning with Deſire, and impatient of Delay, ſtung with Reſtleſs Concupiſcence, behaves himſelf like a Mad-Man: He ſtamps, ſtares, and raves; walks furiouſly backward and forward, rolls his Eyes after a hideous Manner; he ſtarts, ſtands ſtill, lais his Hand upon his Sword, looks up to Heaven, invokes the Saints, talks to himſelf, threatens the Diſſolution of all Things, if he be balk'd of his Love. In this Humour he runs to his Miſtreſs, falls at her Feet, makes Doleful and Paſſionate Complaints, throws himſelf upon her Mercy, adores her, and does all Things which are proper for a Deſperate Lover. If by this Means he enjoy her, he ſoon grows weary of her, and either kills her, or proſtitutes her ſecretly for Gold. But if he cannot obtain her, then he macerates and torments himſelf, and is reſolv'd to Die.

Different from both theſe is the Wanton French-man, who courts his Miſtreſs after a Jolly Faſhion, with Songs, Dances, Muſick and Jeſts. He is all Life and Mirth when in her Company, and abounds with a Thouſand Sorts of Comical Humours. If he gets her, after a little Time the Fickle Spark is cloy'd, and Falls in Love with Another. If he fail of his Purpoſe, he is not much Concern'd; for all his Love was but Counterfeit: Yet he makes a Shew of Diſcontent, he threatens, and ſputters at her for a While; but this Tongue-Tempeſt is ſoon laid, and a new Face produces a Calm.

his

But the Flegmatick German is very hard to be kindl'd up to this Paſſion, and then needs a great deal of Art to blow him into a Flame. He is Cold and Wary, Thoughtful and Slow, Provident and Dull: Yet, when once touch'd with this Affection, he is very Liberal of his Gifts, which is the Maſter-piece of his Courtſhip. If he obtains his Miſtreſs, he ſoon returns to his Primitive Frigidity: And if he be fruſtrated, he is but where he was; far from Killing himſelf for a Peeviſh Female.

The French-man profeſſes more Love than he has: The German endeavours to hide the Fervour of his Paſſion: The Spaniard perſuades himſelf, that he is Belov'd by his Miſtreſs; Whilſt the Italian takes the neareſt Courſe to be Belov'd by her in Reality. The French-man loves a Pleaſant, Witty Maid, tho' ſhe be Deform'd: The Spaniard prefers Beauty to Wit and Good Humour: The Italian is for a Female of a Timorous Spirit: Whilſt the German adores a Virago. The French-man, by his Wandring Loves, of a Wiſe Man becomes a Fool; and exchanges his Health, for a Thouſand Maladies: The German having profuſely ſpent all in Amorous Liberalities, at length, from a Fool, tho late, becomes a Wiſe Man: The Spaniard, undertakes Heroick roick Enterprizes, to pleaſe his Miſtreſs: Whilſt the Italian deſpiſes Honour, and every Thing elſe, that he may enjoy her.

Certainly the Greateſt Men in the World have been ſubject to this Soft Paſſion: And have ſacrific'd their Reputation, Glory and Vertue, with their very Reaſon, to the Regards of Love. How enſnar'd was Mithridates, in Pontus, by a Beautiful Woman? How did Hannibal ſuffer his Courage to be Enervated with the Luxuries of Capua? So Hercules of Old, left the Glorious Toils of War, and ſuffer'd his Arms to Ruſt, for the ſake of his Iole. So Ulyſſes was Captivated by Circe; Achilles, by Briſeis; and Cæſar, by Cleopatra. And thou know'ſt, that our Annals record ſtrange Things of the Amours of our Glorious Monarchs.

There is no Nation free from the Sentiments of Love: Yet every Age and Region vary in their Conduct toward Women. Here in the Weſt, they are all for Intriguing and Gallantry. They accuſe the Muſſulmans for having more Wives than one, and for Keeping as many Concubines as they pleaſe; whilſt they themſelves have their Wives almoſt in Common, and Lie with every Wench that comes in their Way. Adultery paſſes with 'em for Good Breeding, and Fornication is eſteem'd as Innocent an Action as Eating and Drinking: Whereas thou know'ſt, among the True Believers, theſe Crimes are puniſh'd with Death. Promiſcuous Copulation was forbid by Moyſes, Jeſus, and Mahomet; and, in General,

by

by all the Prophets. It is a sufficient Indulgence, That every Man may Marry four Wives, and enjoy as many other Women as he either Takes Captives from the Enemy in Wars, or purchases with his Money. But these Infidels had rather follow the Sentiments of the Old Heathen Law-givers, and the Examples of Idolatrous Nations, than obey God and his Messengers. They applaud Solon, the Great Law-giver of the Athenians, calling him a Wise Man, as he was pronounc'd by the Delphick Oracle; and a Generous Patriot, for procuring Harlots to accompany the Youths of the City, and building a Temple to Venus out of the Money they got by Prostituting themselves.

'Tis certain, Whores were much esteem'd in those Days, among the Grecians: For the Magistrates built them Publick Houses on purpose, and free for all Comers: They also made Laws, to protect them from Injuries. And so great was the Veneration that Besotted People had for them, that when Perses invaded Greece, the Harlots of Corinth undertook to intercede for their Country, in the Temple of Venus. Nay, whatsoever Extraordinary Favour they had to ask of that Goddess, it was done by the Mediation of the Whores. And there seems some Reason on their Side, since Venus her self was Translated to Heaven, and made a Goddess, for being the Greatest Whore and Bawd that ever liv'd. She first taught the Cyprian Women to prostitute their Bodies for Gain.

What

What a Work did Aspasia make, who fill'd all Greece with Whores? For the Love of her, and her Wenches, it was, that Pericles begun the Peloponesian War, that lasted so many Years, and is so much talk'd of in Ancient History. There were also Learned Whores; as, Sappho, the Mistress of Phaon, Sempronia, Leena, and Leontium: Who wrote publickly in Vindication of their Lewd Practice, and inveigh'd against Marriage. There were also Noble Whores; as, Rhodope, who built one of the Egyptian Pyramids with the Mony given her by the King. Thais the Corinthian, who was so surpassing Beautiful, that she scorn'd to Lie with any but Kings and Princes. But Messalina, the Wife of Claudius Cæsar, exceeded them all in the Salaciousness of her Temper. I will not omit to mention Joan, Queen of Naples, who caus'd her First Husband to be hang'd because he could not satisfie her Lust. His Name was Andrew, Son to Elizabeth, Quen of Hungary. Her Second Husband, to repair the Fault of the First, so wasted his Strength in the Conjugal Embraces, that in a little Time he kill'd himself. Her Third Husband was James King of Majorca, whom she Beheaded for Lying with another Woman. Her Fourth and Last Spouse was Otho Duke of Brunswick: He liv'd to see her hang'd in the same Place where her First Husband had, by her Order, suffer'd the same Fate. This was the Revenge of Charles Prince of Dyrachium, Cousin-German to Andrew before-mention'd. This Lascivious Queen would have

the

the Company of Ten or Twelve Young Men, one after another, the ſame Night.

What ſhall I ſay of Semiramis, Empreſs of the Aſſyrians? Of Paſiphae, Wife to Minos King of Crete; or of an Hundred other Royal Whores? When it is obſervable, that the moſt Illuſtrious Heroes on Earth have ſprung from Adulterous Beds. Witneſs Hercules, Alexander, Clodoveus, King of the Franks, Theoderic the Goth, William the Norman, Raymir of Arragon; and many more, too tedious to be recited. Nay, few Kings or Princes are born of Lawful Mothers.

Doubtleſs, the Infidel-Nations live in great Corruption of Manners; they confound and blend together Divine and Profane Maxims; from whence reſult Monſtrous and Abominable Practices, and a General Uncleanneſs of Life in all Things. But the Chaſte Followers of Mahomet have all Cuſtoms in Abomination, that defile the Soul, and rob it of its Native Purity. We obey the Traditions of Abrahim, Iſmael, and the reſt of the Holy Line; who never touch'd any Women, but their own Lawful Wives and Concubines; reſting contented with this Indulgence of the Omnipotent. We put in Practice the Law brought down from Heaven, and the Precepts of the Prophet; which forbid all Adultery, Fornication and Inceſt. We preſerve in our Veins the Pure and Unpolluted Blood of our Fathers, and tranſmit the ſame to our Children, and the Poſterity to come; That the Promiſes made to Abrahim, the Glorious Patriarch of the Eaſt, may may not be disanull'd by the Sins of his Offspring; but may be verified till the Day when the Moon shall be cancell'd in the Heavens, and all the Stars be blotted out.

Oh Sage Hamet! We are of a Sacred Lineage, an Illustrious Pedigree. Our Progenitors were the Favourites of Heaven, and Lords of the Earth, by the Special Benediction of God. The Light of the Eternal shines upon the Ottoman House, and is reflected from thence on all the Empire. I pray Heaven, that we may not forfeit these Privileges by our own Folly, and cause an ill Report to be whisper'd of us among the Angels, Saints and Prophets, and throughout the Precincts of Paradise.

I consign thee to the Custody of God and thy Guardian-Genius; wishing thee all manner of Enjoyments that may consist with Purity and Innocence.

Paris, 7th. of the 5th. Moon,
of the Year 1677.

LET-

LETTER XII.

To the Captain Baſſa.

BY Ships newly arriv'd from America, Advice is brought to this Court of a ſignal Defeat given to a Squadron of Dutch Ships in thoſe Parts, and of the Taking the Iſle Tabago by the French. This Exploit was performed under the Conduct of the Count D'Eſtrées, an Admiral of riſing Fame here in the Weſt.

But, in my Opinion, the French magnifie this Enterprize beyond its true Value: for they loſt as many Ships and Men as the Hollanders; and all the Gain they can boaſt of is, a Place which will coſt them more to Defend than 'tis really worth.

I wonder this potent Monarch does not rather ſet out a Fleet of Ships well Mann'd, and provided of all Neceſſaries, to make ſome Diſcoveries in that vaſt Tract of Land, called by Geographers, the Southern Unknown World. It runs along from Eaſt to Weſt, between the Tropick of Capricorn, and the Antartick Circle; taking up the whole Southern Temperate Zone, or at leaſt the greateſt part of it. There have been many fabulous Relations of that diſtant Part of the Globe. Some of the Antients mention'd it, and modern Writers have utter'd various Conjectures about about it. One will have it to be the Original Paradise of Adam and Eve. Another ſuppoſes it to be the Place whither the Ten Tribes of Iſraelites retir'd, that were carried away Captives by Salmanaſſar, King of Aſſyria. Which has occaſion'd ſo many Diſputes and Controverſies between different Hiſtorians.

Be it how it will, the delightful Situation of that Quarter, has given perhaps Encouragement for ſuch kind of Thoughts: which I ſhould think, were alſo Invitation ſufficient to draw thither the Arms of ſome magnanimous Prince; beſides the pure Novelty of the Deſign, and the Glory of making a Deſcent and Conqueſt, where no Mortals of our known World had ever ſet Foot before: Surely they are not afraid that it is enchanted Ground, or that they ſhall encounter an Army of Devils at their firſt Landing; that they ſhall be trepann'd into hidden Snares of Magick, or be ſurpris'd by ſome Infernal Ambuſh. What fatal Timorouſneſs, what panick Suſpicion is it that renders Potentates of the Earth thus ingloriouſly prudent, and wretchedly cautious, to ſpare their Men, their Ships, and Mony, when ſo noble an Undertaking ſeems to challenge their Courage, and awaken their utmoſt Reſolution, to combat a few Difficulties, which being once vanquiſhed, Eternal Honour and Renown follow?

What Diſcouragements, Lets, and Obſtacles, did not the brave Columbus meet with, when he ſought the Aſſiſtance of ſeveral Princes and States, to ſet him out to Sea, that he might might discover the then unknown Western World? How coldly was his Project entertained at Genoua, his own Native Country? and at last, after long waiting, utterly rejected? No better Reception found he in the Court of England, though a Nation claiming the first Rank among Sea-faring People. What Fatigues did he not undergo in travelling up and down by Sea and Land from one Kingdom and Country to another? Neither rested he, till he had accomplish'd his Desire, and procur'd Vessels, Men, and Mony, from the King of Spain, to carry on his Enterprise.

Yet he had no other Ground to believe there was any Unknown Continent beyond the Atlantick Sea, save his own Conjecture, started from the Observations he had made on the Course of the Sun, and the Inequality of the known part of the Earth, compar'd with the vast Body of Waters which must be suppos'd necessary to make up an entire Globe, if there were not some Unknown Land extant to supply their Room, and prevent a Vacuum in Nature. For he consider'd, that though this unequal ballancing of the Globe might pass Mutter in the School of Natural Philosophy, yet it cou'd not answer the strict Scrutiny of the Mathematicks: But that there must be an even Counterpoise of Earth and Water, to keep this Ball fast in its Vortex, and regular in its Circulation. So that this Great Man, built all his well-pitch'd and happy Design upon a bare Geometrical Speculation:

on: whereas there is evident Matter of Fact, the Teſtimony of many Authentick Eye-witneſſes to prove, that there is ſuch a Land as what I have been ſpeaking of, and all that ever paſs'd the Megellanick Streights muſt have ſeen it if they were not blind.

I counſel thee therefore, Mighty Baſſa, to repreſent theſe Things effectually to the Grand Signior: It will be no Diſgrace if he hearken not to thy Propoſals. Shew him the Eaſineſs of the Undertaking, if a ſmall Fleet be fitted up and ſent by Way of the Red Sea, to make Diſcoveries toward the South. Let them be well Mann'd and Victuall'd; provided alſo with all ſorts of Arms and Ammunition in order to a Deſcent; with Materials and Inſtruments to raiſe a Fortreſs, if there be Occaſion. 'Tis a thouſand to one, if the Inhabitants of thoſe Unknown Regions have ever found out the Uſe of Guns; which will be a prodigious Advantage on our Side. The very Thunder of the Muſſulman Artillery, will terrifie them into Obedience. They will either Surrender, as to Gods; or fly, as from Devils, leaving all the Maritime Coaſts to the Invaders Poſſeſſion. Where Colonies of True Believers may be ſoon planted and eſtabliſhed, to the Glory of God and his Prophet, and the Eternal Exaltation of the Ottoman Empire.

Great Commander of the Marine, I deſire thee to pardon the Liberty I take in this Diſcourſe; and to eſteem what I have ſaid, only as the humble Suggeſtions of an honeſt Slave, who is zealous for his Maſter's Honour, nour, the Glory of the Osman House, and the general Good of Mankind.

Paris, 14th. of the 6th. Moon, of the Year 1677.

LETTER XIII.

To Dgnet Oglou.

I Am convinc'd by long and manifold Experience, That God and the World, and every Thing appear to Man in what Figure he pleases. We may make our own Opticks, though the Generality of Men take up with those which are prepar'd for them by their Fathers and Tutors. We use the Prejudices and Prepossessions of Education, as the Spaniards wear their Spectacles, even at Dinner Time, for Fashions sake, Young and Old, that they may appear Grave and Regular. We adhere to the Opinions we received in our Infancy, with a partial Stiffness and Pride, that we may not seem to call in question the Wisdom of our Ancestors, or appear wavering or inconstant our Selves. So the Christian Gallants swallow down whole Dozens of venomous Oysters, without saying Grace, only because 'tis the mode: Though they will not venture on a Crust of wholsome Bread, Bread, without conjuring a Bleſſing on it, by making the Sign of the Croſs, and ſquinting two or three magical Glances at Heaven, ſeconded by Hocus-Pocus-Whiſpers, to compleat the Charm.

But let thou and I be more rational in our Principles and Practice. There is no God that will be banter'd with vain Mummery, or by Muſick be melodiouſly wheadl'd out of his Eternal Reaſon; no Incenſe can be of Proof to Noſe the Senſe of the Omniſcient, nor the moſt elegant Words delude him, who is perfect in Knowledge. He takes no Delight in the pompous Addreſſes of the Great, nor is he to be mov'd by the multitude of Solemn Ceremonies. All that he requires of Man is, a Heart conform to the Divine Will, and Actions void of Offence.

But the Lawgivers and Governours of Nations obſerving, That there was a certain Religious Fear and Reverence of ſome Divine Power, as it were planted in the Natures of all Men; and conſidering that this might be improv'd, with good Management, to the Advantage and Intereſt of the Commonwealth; they invented ſet Forms of Diſcipline, and exteriour Offices of Worſhip, which they term'd Holy Rites and Myſteries. Theſe they fortified with ſevere Laws and Sanctions, inflicting grievous Penalties on the Contemners of the Publick Service perform'd to the Gods. So Hermes Triſmegiſtus firſt taught the Egyptians; Meliſſus the Foſter-Father of Jupiter, inſtructed the Inhabitants of Crete; Faunus and Janus, the Latins; Numa Pompilius, the Romans; Orpheus, the Grecians; or, as some say, Cadmus the Son of Agenor, first instructed that Nation in the Solemnities which were counted Divine, and which he himself learn'd in Phœnicia. He instituted the Consecration of Images and Statues, the Burning of Incense, the Building of Temples and Altars, with the Hymns, Sacrifices, and other magnificent Rites, by which they honour'd the Powers Above.

Now that all this Religious Pageantry was establish'd only for the Ends of Policy and State, is evident from hence, That the Chief Magistrates took the Liberty of making what Gods they pleas'd; and of encreasing or diminishing their Number at Discretion. So that in Process of Time there were reckon'd no less than Thirty Thousand Gods in the Roman Catalogue, though at first their Calendar cou'd shew but Twenty Five Divinities. But when once they had found out a way to distinguish these Divinities into several Classes or Ranks, terming some Gods of the Greater Nations, others of the Lesser; having also their Tutelar Genii, their Demigods, their Rural and Houshold Gods, &c. there was no limning the crafty Devices of the Priests and Rulers in imposing; or the Superstition of the credulous People in believing and adoring an infinite Rabble of New, Young, and Unheard-of Divinities.

They took also the same Freedom to change and alter the establish'd Rites and Cere-

Ceremonies; ſometimes aboliſhing the old and Primitive Inſtitutions, and ſuperinducing new ones in their ſtead; or at leaſt adding to the Heap of inſignificant Ceremonies, in every Age, ſome myſterious Novelty, which might pleaſe the People, and faſten them in a devouter Obedience and Veneration of their Pious Guides and Leaders.

Hence ſprung the Dedication of Temples, Fanes, Chapels, Oratories, and certain Days in the Year to the Service of particular Gods; hence aroſe the Invention and Uſe of ſo many ſorts of Veſſels of Silver and Gold, and other Materials in their Sacrifices; of Lights, Flowers, and Perfumes; of Muſick, Pictures, and other Decorations; beſides the Rich and Majeſtick Veſtments of the Prieſts, their grave and compos'd Carriage, Looks and Geſtures: All deſign'd purely to catch the rude and unpoliſh'd Multitude in the Snares of Prieſt-craft; to ſtrike their unwary Minds with an Awe and profound Attach for Religion; that ſo being once made thus flexible, they might warp them to what Bent they pleas'd, and for ever lead 'em in a blind implicite Admiration of they knew not what.

'Tis certain, that Religion has this Effect on the Vulgar, to make them more Obedient to their Governours, Juſt to one another, and Zealous for the Publick Welfare: I mean the Religion allow'd by the State: For, where the Subjects dare to make Innovations and Schiſms, to ſet up new Sects and Parties; the greater Zeal each Faction has for their own Way of Worship, the more cruel and tragical Disorders are generally committed. So fatal a Thing is it to be Opinionative in Religion, to invade the Priests Prerogative, and to disturb the quiet Stream of Tradition running in the Channel of Publick Faith from one Generation to another.

My Dear Gnet, let Thou and I shun the devout Superstition of Bigots, and the wanton Prophaneness of Libertines and Atheists, adoring One God with sincere Faith, and a Reason void of Error: Let us also keep our Lives free from all Injustice and Vice, which will be of more Comfort to us than if we had sacrific'd every Day a thousand Bulls.

Paris, 25th. of the 9th. Moon, of the Year 1677.

LET

LETTER XIV.

To Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa.

THE Subject of moſt Mens Diſcourſe at preſent in this City, is the Taking of Friburgh by the French. This is a City of Germany, whereof I made frequent mention in my Letters when I firſt came to Paris. It is ſituated on a certain Height near a ſmall River, and is encompaſs'd with two Walls. Strengthned alſo by a Citadel, four Baſtions, and other Fortifications. The Emperor has likewiſe a ſtrong Garriſon in it.

On the 10th of this Moon the Mareſchal de Crequy Beſieg'd it, and preſs'd it with ſuch vigorous Aſſaults, and continual Batteries, That the Governour found himſelf oblig'd to Surrender it on the 17th, when the Mareſchal took Poſſeſſion of it in the Name of the French King.

The Imperialiſts cannot boaſt of equal Succeſs when they Beſiege Towns or Fortreſſes in the Hands of the French. For not long before this, the Prince of Orange, General of the Confederate Armies in Flanders, undertook the Siege of Charleroy, a Place of Strength in thoſe Parts. But the Want of Proviſions, together with the ſtout Reſiſtance of the Inhabitants, and the Duke of Luxemburgh's Approach with the French Army, forced him to decamp and retire.

The Duke of Luxemburgh is a valiant and ſage General, in high Eſteem with the French: But his Enemies ſay, he is a Magician, and deals with the Devil, becauſe of the good Succeſs which generally crowns all his Enterpriſes; So impoſſible it is for a Man of extraordinary Virtues, and Heroick Endowments, to eſcape without Envy and ſcandalous Aſperſions. 'Tis as natural for the Vulgar to inveigh againſt Generous Souls, as 'tis for Dogs to bark at the Moon. Yet that Planet appears impaſſible; and not being mov'd at the Snarles of invidious Animals, keeps on her Heavenly Courſe, in Majeſty and Silence. So do Souls that are truly Noble, contemn the Cenſures of the Inferiour Part of Men, and never ſtop till they arrive at the Meridian and Zenith of Perfection.

Moſt Serene and Illuſtrious Arab, thou art a lively Example of this, and I dare ſay no more, leſt I offend thy Modeſty. May perpetual Benediction and Glory crown thy Years that are yet to come.

Paris, 29th of the 11th Moon,
of the Year 1677.

LETTER

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. VIII.

BOOK III.

LETTER I.

To the Wiſeſt of the Wiſe, the moſt Venerable Muſti.

I Obey thy Commands without the leaſt Demur: And now proceed to write of the Macedonian Empire. I remember a Diſpatch of mine to thy Venerable Predeceſſor of Sacred Memory, wherein I touch'd upon some Passages of the Life of that Heroick and Magnanimous Prophet, Alexander the Great. But now I will inform thee more at large concerning his Birth, Education, and Renowned Performances.

Alexander, as the Greeks and Latins call him, with all the Nations of the West; or Scander, Ascander, and Zulkarnek, according to the Style of the Arabians, Persians, Indians, Tartars, and other People of the East, was born in the CVIth Olympiad; 398 Years after the Building of Rome, and in the Year of the World 3628, on the 6th Day of the Moon Loo, or Hecatombæon, according to the Style of the Grecians. The same Night was the Temple of Diana at Ephesus set on Fire. And on the same Day two Eagles came and pearch'd on the Top of his Fathers House, where they sat all the Day; which was taken as an Omen of the Double Empire he was to have over Europe and Asia.

Philip King of Macedon and Husband to Olympias, was the Reputed Father of Alexander, as she was his Known Mother. But some Historians say, That a certain Magician call'd Nectanebus, by his Enchantments disguising himself in the Form of Jupiter Ammon, lay with Olympias, and begot Alexander. Others affirm, That Olympias her self confessed to Philip, That Alexander was not his Son, but that she had conceiv'd him of a prodigious great Serpent. Whence it came to pass, That Philip himself, a little before his Death, openly declar'd, That Alexander was not his Son. And for the same Reason, he divorc'd Olympias, as an Adultress, by her own Confession.

not

These Reports were so common at that Time, That Alexander afterwards hearing the Story of his suppos'd Serpentine Genealogy, and that other of Nectanebus in the Masquerade of a God: When he march'd through Egypt, took Advantage of the latter, to impose upon the Credulity and Superstition of his Soldiers. For being to pass by the Temple of Jupiter Ammon, he made a Halt to visit the Oracle. But he had privately sent before some of his Trusty Friends to acquaint the Priests with his Design, and to tell them what manner of Words and Address they should use to him as he enter'd the Temple, in the Hearing of his Followers.

Having thus prepar'd those Holy Cheats, he with much Ceremony and seeming Devotion made his Approaches to the Temple. As soon as he set his Foot within the Portico, the Seniors of the Priests met him in their Pontifical Robes, with Censers in their Hands, and thus saluted him; All Hail, Son of Jupiter Ammon. Alexander being pleas'd at this, ask'd them farther, If all his Fathers Murderers were punish'd; or, If any yet survived? To which it was answer'd, O Son of the Immortal Gods! Thy Father cannot be murder'd or dye. As for King Philip, his Blood is fully reveng'd on them that had a Hand in shedding it. Then he added another Question concerning his future Success. To which the Oracle replied, The Victory ſhall be thine in all Battels; Thou ſhalt become Lord of all the Eaſt. The ſame Mouth alſo gave in Charge to the Retinue of Alexander, That they ſhould adore him not as a King, but as a God. Returning from thence, he built Alexandria, calling it after his own Name.

I have not obſerv'd a due Method in relating this Story ſo ſoon; whilſt I was but repreſenting the New-born Hero in his Cradle. But I did it to convince thee, That the various Opinions concerning Alexander's Father, are not the Fictions of Wanton Writers, but ſuch as Employ'd the Care and Diligence of Alexander himſelf to improve them to his own Intereſt, and his Mothers Honour: For it was accounted a Glorious Thing, to be Impregnate by a God.

To return therefore to the Infant-Prophet: He grew apace, and diſcover'd early Signs of a prodigious Wit and Courage. At the Age of fifteen Years, he was committed to the Care and Tutelage of Ariſtotle, under whom he ſtudied the Sciences five Years; and then his Father Philip being murder'd, he ſucceeded in the Throne. The ſame Year alſo Darius Codomanus obtained the Empire of Perſia. Againſt whom Alexander, with the Common Conſent of almoſt all Greece, prepared to go with a well-diſciplin'd Army, that he might carry on the War which his Father had begun. Only the Lacedæmonians, Thebans, and Athenians thwarted his Deſigns being corrupted by Demoſthenes the Orator, who who for that purpose had received vast Sums of Gold from Darius. But Alexander soon reduc'd these Factious States and Kingdoms to their Duty; utterly destroying the City of Thebes, with the Slaughter of 90000 of the Citizens, besides 30000 Captives. This was executed on the 15th of the Moon Boedromion, in the 2d Year of the CXIth Olympiad. He only spar'd the Host of Philip his Father, when he was left as a Pledge in that City, whose House was left untouch'd, as also that of Pindar's Posterity.

From thence passing the Hellespont, he march'd into Asia, in the Year of the World 3650; and in the 3d Year of his Reign. He had in his Army 30000 Foot and 4500 Horse. As soon as he set Foot on the Ground of Asia, he made the Royal Corban and Vows for Victory. Then he darted a Javelin into the Earth, in Token of Defiance. After which, when he came to Troy, he perform'd certain Holy Rites and Mysteries at the Tombs of Defunct Heroes, who fell in the Trojan War. When these Ceremonies were accomplish'd, he march'd directly against the Persians, who were in Number 600000 Fighting Men. I will not tire thee with all the Particularities that happen'd in their March. Suffice it to say, That Alexander with his Handful of Macedonians, after many Victories obtained of the Persians, at length quite Routed the Army of Darius, and took Possession of that Once Formidable Empire.

But there are some remarkable Passages in this Expedition, which deserve to be remembred: As, his wonderful Continence and Humanity toward the Mother, Wife and Daughters of Darius; whom he entertain'd in his Camp after they fell into his Hands, rather as the Kindred of some Beloved Friend, than of a Profess'd Enemy. The Story also of his loosing the Gordian Knot, is not unworthy thy Knowledge.

It seems, in former Times one Gordius, as he Plough'd the Fields, was surrounded with a Flight of Birds of all Kinds. Being troubled at this, he left his Work, and hasted to the next City, there to enquire of the Augurs, what the Meaning of this should be. As he entred the Gate of the City, he met a Virgin of Incomparable Beauty, of whom he ask'd, Where he might find the most Skilful Sage, with whom he might consult about a Matter of some Importance. Then he told the Inquisitive Damsel, what had happen'd to him in the Field. As soon as she heard this, being well vers'd in these Mysterious and Prophetick Sciences, she told him, That he should be made a King. And to confirm him in the Belief of what she said, she promis'd to become his Wife, that so she might be Partner of his Future Happiness. In a Word, they were Married; and soon after, there arose a Strife among the Phrygians, which was like to prove of dangerous Consequence. Therefore the People Consulted the Oracle, What was to be done in this Case, to prevent the publick Desolation?

tion? It was answer'd, That the only Remedy for these Discords was, to chuse them a King. And when they ask'd, What Person they should chuse to this Dignity? It was answer'd again, That they should Elect that Man for their King, whom they first met with a Wagon, as they went thence to the Temple of Jupiter. Gordius prov'd the Man, and they obey'd the Oracle, saluting him as their Sovereign. Gordius, as a Memorial of this Event, set up his Wain in the Temple of Jupiter, consecrating it to the Royal Majesty.

After him his Son Midas Reign'd, who filled Phrygia with Religious Observations. Whence arose the Common Oracle, That whosoever should loose the Knot of the Thongs in the Wagon of Gordius, should obtain the Empire of all Asia.

Alexander hearing this, and being spurr'd on by Ambition, Besieges Gordia; and having taken the City, makes haste to the Temple of Jupiter, where he understood the Wagon was laid up. As soon as he saw it, he try'd to find out the Ends of the Thongs, that so he might loose the Knot. But perceiving that it was impossible to come at them without using Violence, he interpreted the Oracle in the Sense of a Soldier, and cut the outermost Foldings of the Knot with his Sword. Upon which all the Ends of the Thongs appear'd, and so he easily perform'd the Fatal Task.

Yet this Heroick Prophet, as he had Great Virtues, so had he no Less Vices. He was very cruel to his Nearest Relations and Friends;

Friends; Killing Caranus his Brother by a Step-Mother; Clitus his old dear Friend; Parmenio, Philotas, Aryntas, Attalus, Eurylochus, Pauſanias, and many other Macedonian Princes, ſome of which were of his own Blood. Add to this, his barbarous Uſage of Caliſthenes the Philoſopher, who was brought up with him under Ariſtotle. This poor Unfortunate Man refuſing to flatter the King's Pride in calling him a God; ſo diſguſted Alexander, that feigning himſelf very Angry, he charg'd him with being Acceſſary to the Plots and Conſpiracies that were formed againſt him. Then he caus'd all his Limbs to be mangl'd and chop'd, after an inhuman Faſhion. He commanded alſo his Ears, Noſe, and Lips, to be cut off; which not only gave the Poor Wretch infinite Torment, but alſo render'd him a moſt Deform'd and Miſerable Spectacle to others. And to compleat his Revenge, he caus'd him in this Doleful Plight to be ſhut up in a Cage with a Dog, and ſo to be carried about, to the Terror of others.

Then Lyſimachus, one of Alexander's Generals, and a Diſciple of Caliſthenes, taking Pity on ſo Great a Sage, who ſuffer'd all this barbarous Uſage, not for any real Crime that he had committed, but only for uſing that Freedom in his Words and Actions which becomes a Philoſopher, gave him Poyſon, to rid him at once of ſo many horrid Calamities.

But Alexander took this ſo heinouſly, That he commanded Lyſimachus to be thrown to a very very fierce Lion. As ſoon as the Furious Beaſt ſaw him, he Roar'd and Paw'd the Ground for Joy, and ran upon him with an impetuous Force. But Lyſimachus not loſing his Courage, wrap'd his Hand in his Mantle, and thruſt it down the Lion's Throat; where laying faſt hold of his Tongue, he pull'd it out by the Roots, and left the Lion for dead.

When this was told the King, he admiring the Invincible Virtue of the Man, not only forgave him this Offence, but had him in Higher Eſteem all his Life afterwards.

We muſt not omit that Memorable Action of Alexander, when ſtomaching the Surrender of Sidon to his Victorious Arms, in that it was deliver'd up by the People, againſt the Will of Strato their King; the Conqueror pronouncing Strato unworthy of the Crown, bid Hepheſtion place him in the Throne, whom the Sidonians ſhould approve as Strato's Succeſſor. Hepheſtion willing to prefer to that Dignity a Noble Young Sidonian, who was his Favourite, offer'd him the Crown. But the Generous Youth refus'd the Honour; alledging, that it was againſt the Laws of his Country, for any Man to Reign who was not of the Royal Blood. Hepheſtion admiring the Greatneſs of his Soul, ſaid, "God encreaſe your "Virtues and Graces, Illuſtrious Friend, who "are the firſt that ever underſtood how "much more Magnanimous it is to deſpiſe "than to accept a Crown. Be it therefore "in your Power to beſtow the Kingdom on "any

" any Man of the Royal Blood whom you " think fit for ſo great a Charge. Then he pitch'd upon one Abdolonymus, a poor Gardiner in the Suburbs of Sidon; who was of the Race of Sidonian Kings, but through extreme Poverty was grown obſcure, and forced to take up that Employment to get his Bread. Hepheſtion approv'd the Choice: And this Noble Youth, with ſome of his Friends, immediately went with the Royal Robes and Enſigns of Majeſty to look out Abdolonymus, whom they found Weeding his Garden in a very dirty ſqualid Condition. Saluting him therefore King in the Name of Alexander the Great, they Waſh'd and Anointed him with Precious Oyls of the Eaſt; and having put on the Robes of Soveraign Majeſty, they Conducted him to the Conqueror: Who among other Diſcourſes, ask'd him, How he was able ſo patiently to endure that extreme Poverty which had hitherto been his Lot? To which he replied, I wiſh I may endure the Burden of a Crown with the ſame Eaſe. Theſe Hands ſerved the Neceſſities of Life, and my Wants were anſwerable to my Poſſeſſions, even none at all. Alexander perceiving by this Anſwer, the Greatneſs of his Spirit, gave him all the Royal Furniture of Strato, with much of the Perſian Booty, and added all the Countries round about Sidon to his Government.

Much about the ſame Time, Alexander going to Jeruſalem, was met by Jaddus the High Prieſt in his Pontifical Habit. Who falling at the Conqueror's Feet, to implore

Favour

Favour and Mercy for his City and People; Alexander rais'd him up, and embracing him in his Arms, Bid him fear nothing, for that God had appeared to him in Macedonia, in the same Figure and Form as the High-Priest made, exhorting him, to carry on the Persian War, and promising him certain Victory. After this, the High-Priest conducted him into the City and Temple, where he Sacrific'd and made Corban. He also gave the Jews many ample Privileges.

There is one Thing more in the Life of Alexander, which because it has something very singular in it, I will insert in this Dispatch.

After the Conquest of Persia; as Alexander was marching forward, that he might extend his Empire through all the East; Thalestris, Queen of the Amazons, hearing of his Fame, took a Journey of five and twenty Days, through many populous Nations, attended only by three hundred Women, and came to his Camp, courting the Honour of his Bed. For she had conceived an insatiable Desire of having a Child by Him, whom all the East proclaimed the Greatest Hero in the World. Alexander granted her Request; and when she had enjoy'd his Company thirteen Days, she departed well satisfied to her own Country, promising, that if she brought forth a Male, she would send him to his Father, according to the manner of the Amazons; but if a Female, she wou'd keep it her self.

From

From hence Alexander march'd againſt Beſſus, who had murder'd Darius, and cauſed himſelf to be proclaimed King of Perſia by the Name of Artaxerxes. Having overcome him, and puniſh'd his Treaſons, he proceeded, and ſubdu'd all the Regions running along the Foot of Mount Caucaſus. In fine, he extended his Conqueſts to the utmoſt Borders of India, even to the Oriental Sea; where he took Shipping and return'd to Babylon, partly by Sea and partly by Land. An Aſtrologer of great Reputation met him by the way, and diſſuaded him by all the Arguments he could uſe, from enring the City; aſſuring him, that Place would be Fatal to his Perſon. But though Alexander made ſome Demur at firſt, and ſeem'd to credit the Words of the Sage; yet being over-rul'd by the Counſel of Anaxarchus the Philoſopher, he enter'd Babylon, where he died; ſome ſay of Poyſon; others affirm, that he ſurfeited himſelf with too much Wine. This was in the 33d Year of his Life, and the 12th of his Reign.

There was a deep and melancholy Silence throughout Babylon, whon once it was known, That the Conqueror of the World was dead. Every one was poſſeſs'd with various Thoughts and Cares, according to their different Affections and Intereſts. The Macedonians inwardly rejoyc'd, as if they were now rid of ſome great and formidable Enemy; curſing his Severity and reſtleſs Temper, which had expos'd them to ſo many Toils and Perils of War. Beſides, the Princes flat-

ter'd

ter'd themſelves with a proſpect of enjoying every one his Share in ſo vaſt an Empire. And the private Soldiers had their Eyes intently fix'd hn the Immenſe Treaſures of Gold, which Alexander left behind him, and which they hop'd to ſhare among them. For there were at that time Fifty Thouſand Talents in Bank; and Three Hundred Thouſand coming in yearly by way of Tribute and Cuſtom.

On the other ſide, the Conquer'd Nations would not at firſt give Credit to the Report of thoſe, who carry'd the News of Alexander's Fate. For they thought he muſt needs be Immortal, whom they had always found Invincible. But when Couriers upon Couriers had remov'd their Incredulity, bringing Freſh Expreſſes from Babylon; they Mourn'd for him, not with bare Outward Ceremonies, as for an Enemy that had ſubdu'd 'em; but with Real Sorrow, as for a Father that had protected and cheriſh'd 'em.

More eſpecially, the Grief of Darius's Mother was remarkable; who, tho ſhe had loſt Eighty of her Brethren, with their Father, all cruelly Murder'd by Ochus, tho ſhe had loſt Darius, the only ſurviving of ſeven Sons; and was her ſelf caſt down from the Height of Majeſty, to the Abject State of a Captive; yet ſhe bore all with an Even Mind, till Alexander's Death; whoſe Indulgence alone whilſt living, had ſupported her under ſo many grievous Calamities. But as ſoon as he had forſaken the Earth, ſhe grew weary of tarrying any longer on it too. Not that ſhe eſteem-

ed

ed an Enemy above her Father, Brethren and her Son; but becauſe ſhe had experienc'd in him whom ſhe dreaded as an Enemy, the Goodneſs and Piety, the Modeſty and Regard of all theſe Relations.

This Great Monarch being Dead, and not having appointed a Succeſſor, there aroſe almoſt as many Kings, as there were Governours of Provinces, and Leaders in the Army. Hence ſprang Innumerable Confuſions, Wars and Diſorders in the Empire. There were Tumults and Inſurrections in Greece, eſpecially at Athens; where the Citizens under the Conduct of Leoſthenes their Captain, invited the Reſt of the Grecians to aſſert their Liberty by taking Arms. Nor was there leſs ſtirs in Aſia and Egypt. Every where Mens Minds were unſetled, and deſirous of Novelty. Ptolomy had Egypt for his Share of the Cantoniz'd Empire. There he eſtabliſh'd himſelf and his Poſterity by the Name of Kings. Seleucus took poſſeſſion of Babylon and Syria, with the ſame Title. Caſſander Reign'd over Macedon and Greece. Antigonus govern'd Aſia, and Lyſimachus Thrace. But as Antigonus ſoon loſt his Empire, being overcome and kill'd in a Battel by Ptolomy and his Confederates: So did the reſt either in their own Perſons, or in their Poſterity, yield to the prevailing Fortune of their Enemies; Till at length all theſe ſhatter'd Remains of the Macedonian Empire, became Provinces of the Roman. Of which I will ſay ſomething in my next.

In

In the mean while, I triumph to think that the Ottoman Empire now, is become more Formidable, Large and Victorious, than all that went before it. May God encreaſe the Felicities and Honours of True Believers, till the Day of the Final Metamorphoſis.

Paris, 12th. of the 4th. Moon, of the Year 1678.

LET-

LETTER II.

To Muſu Abul Yahyan, Profeſſor of Philoſophy at Fez.

I Received thy Venerable Diſpatch with great Satisfaction, and am glad to find thou art ſo far from being tir'd with what I have already ſaid concerning Conſtantinople, that thou challengeſt me with a Promiſe I formerly made thee, of giving thee a farther Account of what I have obſerved there moſt remarkable.

In deſcribing this Imperial City, I have imitated the Painters, who when they wou'd draw a Beauty to the Life, do not go Arithmetically to work, or obſerve any Order in their rough Draughts. But following the Conduct of a wild and ſtrong Fancy, they daſh their Pencil here and there, as that Volatile Faculty inſpires 'em; regarding only the Symmetry of the Picture, without preferring one Part to another, or being curious in deſineating every little Singularity. So I in pourtraying this Queen of Cities, this ſuperlative Beauty of the whole Earth, draw my Strokes at Random; not deſigning to preſent thee with an Anatomy-Lecture over her, or to unveil all her interior Secrets: But only to give thee a tranſient View of thoſe Parts which appear moſt Eminent, and attract the Eyes Eyes of all Travellers. And this I do not perform all at once ('twere too great a Task) but even like them, by Fits and Starts, as I find my Opportunities.

I have hitherto presented thee with a Prospect of very magnificent and curious Objects; as Temples, Mosques, Aqueducts, Columns, Obelisks, Bazars, &c. Now prepare thine Eyes for an Entertainment of another Nature. I will shew thee Things, though perhaps not so illustrious to outward Appearance, or strutting with Royal Grandure, yet sufficiently Great and Splendid to perpetuate the Memory of the Founders, and to convey their Fame to all Generations. Things also of publick Use and Service; Designs of Charity, Policy, and generous Wisdom; Undertakings of a Noble and Heroick Character, as thou wilt perceive by the following Account.

No Traveller can survey the Streets of Constantinople, and not have his Eyes arrested here and there by most capacious and ample Carvansera's where all distressed Foreigners, and such as are destitute of a more convenient Lodging, may in any of these find a Shelter and Sanctuary from the Injuries of open Air, from Night-Robbers, and other Inconveniencies. These Carvansera's are in number Three Hundred and Three, built at the Expences of Ottoman Princes and Bassa's.

There are also in this City Ninety Hospitals, where the Poor are nourished, and the Sick attended with extraordinary Piety and Care.

Besides

Besides all these, there are Five Colleges, where the Sciences are publickly profess'd and taught, and where a certain Number of Young Men are educated and maintained at the Grand Signior's Cost, being constant Stipendaries to the Sultan. There are many such Colleges scatter'd up and down Caramania, Natolia, and throughout Greece and the Lesser Asia. So that the Number of Students in these Countries is computed to be above Nine Thousand; not reckoning those in Arabia, Syria, and Egypt, where flourish innumerable Seminaries of Divine and Human Wisdom.

But to return to Constantinople, the next Thing worthy of Observation is the Serayon, or House of Equipages, where are made all sorts of Trappings for Horses, especially Saddles of immense Cost, and admirable Workmanship. This Place is also environ'd with high Walls, and shut in with strong Gates. There cannot be a more agreeable Sight to such as take Pleasure in Horses and Riding, than to see Four Thousand Men here daily at Work in their Shops, each striving to excel the rest in the Curiosity of his Artifice. You shall see one busie in spangling a Saddle with great Oriental Pearls, and Unions intermix'd, for some Arabian Horse, belonging, perhaps, to the Vizir Azem. Another fitting a Curb or Bit of the purest Gold to a Bridle of most precious Russian Leather; some adorn their Trappings with choice Phrygian Work, others with Diamonds, Rubies, and the most costly Jewels of the East.

In

In a Word, there is ſo illuſtrious a Variety of theſe Accoutrements, that the Eye is aſtoniſh'd at the ſight of them: And I have heard many Travellers acknowledge, That the like is not to be ſeen in any City of the World beſide Conſtantinople. I know not what may be in your Cities of Morocco and Fez, in regard the Moors are great Cavaliers.

There are, moreover, two other Places in the City, encompaſs'd with peculiar Walls. In theſe the Janizaries are poſted, who are the Guards du Corps to the Grand Signior. They are under the Command of Decurions, without whoſe Leave no Janizary dare ſet a Foot out of the Place.

Next is the Arſenal of the City, built on the Sea-ſhore, containing a Hundred and Eighty Arches, under which are very elegant Portico's or Piazza's, where People walk. There are above Forty Thouſand Men daily at Work in this Arſenal; and Eighty great Gallies lie there always in Readineſs for any ſudden Expedition.

Beſides, there is another in the Suburbs, wherein there always lie a Hundred and Fifty great Gallies on the Stocks; and Sixty, fitted up with all Neceſſaries, conſtantly lie in the Water.

The Granaries or Store-Houſes for Corn preſent themſelves next. They are built in a Corner of the City toward Pera, where the Walls are far ſtronger than in any other Part, and the Gates are of Iron. Here is always laid up an immenſe Quantity of Wheat and Barly, as alſo of other Grain, as if it were to ſerve for many Years. Yet 'tis changed for new Corn every Three Years. They ſay, That in the Reign of Amurat III. there was an incredible Abundance of Millet found there, whoſe Vertue was much admired, in that it had lain there Eighty Years ſound and free from any Corruption.

I have purpoſely omitted to ſpeak of the two Royal Serails, ſince the leaſt of them will require a large Letter by it ſelf, to be deſcribed exactly. Only this I will ſay in ſhort, That the leaſt is a French League in Circuit, or Three Italian Miles; and the biggeſt, wherein the Grand Signior dwells is a League and two Thirds or Five Italian Miles. The former is called Eſchy Saray, or the Old Palace; the latter is nam'd Bryuch Saray, or the Great Serail. If thou deſireſt a farther and more particular Deſcription of theſe Royal Courts, I will ſend it thee in future Diſpatches. For, it will be too large for one.

In the mean Time I muſt not forget the Moſch of Jub, where our Sultans receive the Sword when they firſt come to the Crown. This is a Building of great Antiquity, ſeated in the fartheſt Angle of the City near the Haven. Over againſt it are the Sultan's Stables, having very fair Gardens adjoin'd to them. Not far from thence is the Topana, or Gun-Yard, where there lies a vaſt Number of Braſs Pieces of Ordnance without Carriages. Of which ſome are turn'd directly againſt the Haven.

As

As you pass from this Place, it is impossible to avoid the sight of a Pillar, which shoots up from the Top of a Rock at some distance from the City. This Column is all of White Marble, and was erected by Cn. Pompey as a Monument of his Victory over Mithridates the King of Pontus. On this side of the City there is nothing hardly to be seen for eight Miles together, but Houses built for Pleasure and Delight, with most beautiful Groves and Gardens.

Over against the City stands Pera, an Arm of the Sea coming between them. This Suburb or Borough is inhabited chiefly by Græcians and Western Franks.

Round about this Suburb are many pretty Country Houses, Farms, and Granges, most deliciously seated in the midst of high Tufts of Trees, with Green Fields, and Crystal Streams adjoining to them. Where the Embassadors of Foreign Princes make their Abode sometimes.

I will not carry thee from hence to Scutari, though a great and stately Village, within the Liberty also of the Imperial City. I will not detain thee with the Singularities of the Thracian Chersonesus, or drill thee along to Calipoli; though this were the first Town in Europe, which Amurat took in the Year 1363. My Design is altogether at Constantinople. Therefore having survey'd Pera, which is also call'd Galata, let us cross the Water, and return again to the Mother-City; that we may know what manner of Government there is in it, and how the Laws are executed.

The Chief Magiſtrate is called Stambol-Cadiſi, or Judge of Conſtantinople. Before him are pleaded all Cauſes, both Criminal and Civil. He has four Deputies under him, who ſeparately govern the four chief Precincts of the City. There is likewiſe an Officer, called Sabaſſi, whoſe Buſineſs is to take Cognizance of every ones Crime that is ſeiſed in the Streets or Houſes, and to refer it to the Supreme Vizir. He has alſo four Deputies under him, and all Men are bound to aſſiſt him in Caſe of Difficulty.

The Common Priſon of Conſtantinople is divided into two Parts, the Upper and the Lower. The Upper is only for Civil Offences, and has an airy Green Court in the middle of it, with a Fountain continually ſpouting up Water; which ſomething diminiſhes the Squalidneſs of the Place. The Lower is for Capital Crimes, and is a very ſink of Horror and Loathſomneſs.

Flower of Philoſophers, I pray God who gave us our Senſes, always grant 'em agreeable Objects, and defend us from all noiſome Scents, eſpecially from the Peſtilential Fumes of Hell, which, they ſay, at certain Times tranſpire through the Chinks and Crannies of the Earth, infecting this upper World with deplorable Contagions. May the Odours of Paradiſe refreſh us for ever, O Senſible Myſ-

Paris, 19th. of the 4th. Moon,
of the Year 1678. LET-

LETTER III.

To Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa.

EVery Year the French gain Ground of their Enemies: They make proſperous Campaigns, and always come off Conquerors.

In the Beginning of the 3d Moon the King cauſed Ghaunt to be Beſieged by the Mareſchal d' Humiers. This City is the Capital of all Flanders, and is divided into ſeveral Quarters or Iſles; ſo is the Country round about it, by certain Rivers and Channels, which render it of extreme difficult Acceſs, and ſpoils all Communication. It is one of the greateſt Cities in Europe, and is defended by a Counterſcarp, a large Ditch, good Ramparts, and many Baſtions. The Inhabitants boaſt that it was Founded by Julius Cæſar. They have been able to raiſe an Army of Fifty Thouſand Men among themſelves, whenever they have been inclin'd to Revolt from their Soveraign. Yet they could not hold out above Ten Days againſt the preſent Arms of France; but ſeeing the Vigor with which they were attack'd on all ſides, and deſpairing of any Succors, they Surrender'd on Articles.

Next to this, the City of Ypres was Surrender'd to them on the 25th of the ſame

Moon, after a Siege of Eight Days. This is another conſiderable City in Flanders.

Nor have the French Arms been Unſucceſsful in Catalonia under the Command of the Duke de Navailles. This General having Taken Puicerda the Capital City of that Province, and a Place of great Strength, being ſeated on the Top of the Pyrenean Mountains, and defended by a Caſtle built on a Rock. The Prince of Conde won it in the Year 1654. But it was afterwards reſtor'd to the Spaniards again by the Treaty of the Pyrene's; who Fortified it a-new with all the Modern Forms. This City has under its Command above Eighty Villages, and draws Contributions from all the Province of Cerdaigne. It ſecures the Poſſeſſion of Rouſſillon, covers the Frontiers of Languedoc, and is eſteem'd ſecond only to Barcelona, of all the Cities in theſe Parts.

From Germany and the Provinces bordering on the Rhine, Fame tranſports hither ſucceſſive Relations of Battels fought between the French and the Imperialiſts, wherein the former always get the Victory. The Mareſchal de Crequy engag'd with him firſt near Grotzingben, where the Prince of Baden and Forty Officers of Note were Wounded on the Enemies ſide: The Count of Liqueville, a Commander under the Duke of Lorrain, with many others, were Taken Priſoners: The French Took from them a great Number of Standards, Kill'd Abundance of their Men, and in fine, remain'd Maſters of the Field.

No

No leſs Advantage had they in the 7th Moon, on the Plains of Rheinfeldt, near the River Rhine. Where they Killed above 800 Imperialiſts upon the Spot; and the Bridge of Rheinfeldt was ſo cramm'd with Dead Bodies, that they ſerv'd as a Barrier to ſtop the French from purſuing their Victory to the Gates of the City.

The Mareſchal de Crequy alſo defeated a Body of 6000 Horſe and Dragoons, Commanded by the Duke of Lorrain, near to Offembourg, which was followed by the Taking of Ortambourg Caſtle, and the Fort of Kell, which the Mareſchal raz'd to the Ground. He Took alſo the Fort of Zolhauſten; and encountring the Duke of Lorrain near a Place called Lauterbourg, he ſet upon him, and Kill'd 400 of his Men as they were paſſing a Bridge of the Rhine, and Took 300 Priſoners.

If they go on at this Rate Year after Year, it will be difficult to ſet the Limits of their continually growing Empire. Only we need not fear that they will ever be able to juſtle the Faithful Oſmans out of the Patrimony appointed them by Deſtiny.

Serene Miniſter, the Creſcent out-ſhines the Croſs, the Alcoran ſuperſedes the Bible, and all Things yield to the Invincible Arms of True Believers.

Paris, 19th. of the 8th. Moon,
of the Year 1678.

LETTER IV.

To Dalimalched, the Widow of Peſteli Hali, his Brother, Maſter of the Cuſtoms, and Superintendent of the Arſenal at Conſtantinople.

THou may'ſt be aſſured 'tis no Compliment, when I tell thee I condole thy Loſs. He that is Dead was my Brother as well as thy Husband. And the Friendſhip which was between us united us more cloſely than did our Blood. We never thought any Thing too much to perform in the Service of each other, provided it did not entrench upon our Honour, but we greedily ſnatch'd every Opportunity of demonſtrating our mutual Affections.

He is gone to infinite Joys, to a Place of Refreſhment, where he banquets on the Reverſion of his Good Works in this Life: He revels at large, and without Contradiction, or murmuring of Women, in full Bowls of the Ambroſia of Paradiſe. No peeviſh Female interrupts his Joy, or turns his Smiles to Frowns by her unworthy Carriage. He lies ſtretched out at Eaſe upon the Crimſon Beds of Eden, with Pages waiting on him, whoſe Eyes are like the poliſh'd Pearl. Each bears a Golden

Goblet

Goblet cruſted with Saphires in his Hand, full charg'd with Wine, which Mortal Kings would give their Kingdoms for. Thoſe Heavenly Youths perform their Parts with admirable Grace and dutiful Exactneſs. They wait the Minute of their Lords Deſire. With humble Reſignation the fair Cupids ſtand encompaſſing his Bed, each being emulous of the reſt, all ſtriving with an agreeable Generoſity who ſhall ſerve their Maſter firſt, and with the greateſt Promptneſs.

When Peſteli pleaſes to divert himſelf with Women, 'tis but to wiſh, and one more Fair than e'er Apelles drew, preſents her ſelf, chaſte as Diana, yet as kind as Venus. No coy Demurs protract the Enjoyment of his Wiſh, nor is there the leaſt Sign of Impudence to pall it. But in perfect Love they meet each other, and unite their Hearts: And ſo they paſs their Time, in conſtant unrepented Bliſs.

He traverſes the pleaſant Walks of Eden, and ſits him down upon the Banks of her Immortal Rivers: Rivers that ſtream with Wine, and Milk, and Honey. Under the Shade of happy Trees he lies upon the Flowry Green, in the Careſſes of ſome lovely Daughter of Paradiſe. Whilſt Aromatick Winds inſpire him with Diviner Paſſions than Endymion felt in the Embraces of Diana. Oh happy State of ſeparate Souls that part from Earth in Purity! Their Pleaſures know no Bounds or End!

For, what I've ſaid is only Emblematical, deſcribing in ſenſible ſhort Figures, thoſe Raptures and tranſcendent Joys, which cannot otherwiſe be expreſs'd. Whatever elevated Fancy can conceive of Bliß, is all by infinite Odds ſurpaſs'd in the Enjoyments of the Happy Souls Above. There is no Number, Weight, or Meaſure, of their Eternal and Superlative Felicities. They paß from Joy to Joy, and ſport in endleß Circles of Beatitude. O Region ever to be deſired! O Gardens of Incomparable Beauty! where the Liberal Monarch of the Univerſe regales the wearied Souls of Mortals with Banquets of Ineſtimable Price, and Unmatch'd Delicacy, after their toilſome Pilgrimage on Earth.

If Peſteli could hear, I would congratulate his Happineſs, inſtead of Condoling thy Misfortune, in loſing ſuch a Huſband. He has eſcap'd the Shipwracks of this Lower World; this Sea of Grief and Tragedies. He's got ſafe into the Harbour of Eternal Reſt, the Port of Peace, and Landed on the Strand of the Omnipotents Serail, where Guards of Angels waited on him to the Throne of Allah, with Ten Thouſand Thouſand Flambeau's burning in the Walks of Eden.

But, tell me, Dalimalched, were not you ſomething in the Fault, that the Generous Peſteli left us both ſo ſoon? Did you not fret and teize his High-born Soul with Words which might have well been ſpar'd to a Man of ſo quick Senſe? Doubtleſs he needed not your fuming Lectures, and more ſilent Diſcipline of Powts. If he committed Faults, (as, who does not?) he ſoon was Senſible without a Reprimand. There was no Occaſion to keep him half a Moon in Paroxyſms of Melancholy and Grief. This was too hard a Penance for his Spirit to bear. But, you Women have Ways by your Selves, unintelligible to our Sex. Your Windings and Turnings are intricate as thoſe of Serpents. Dædalus himſelf, were he now alive, though once the Glory of Labyrinth-Makers, yet wou'd be puzzl'd to trace your Sex, in all your ſecret, wild, unknown Meanders. Ye are all the very changeable Things of the Earth. No body knows what to make of ye.

ſpar'd

Dalimalched, I tell thee, A Woman never commands a Man, unleſs he be a Fool, but by her Obedience; that way ſhe wins his Heart, and makes a thorough Conqueſt of his Affections. She wheadles him out of his Soveraignty by cunning Complaiſance and proper Capitulations, or at leaſt, by this Method, ſhe ſaves her ſelf. She will not thwart him in the Torrent of his Paſſion, but meekly yields to the mighty Stream, and will not ſuffer her Tongue to move but in the Eddy of his Wrath.

In a Word, A good Woman conſults her Husband's Pleaſure in all Things: And if thou haſt done ſo, the World has nothing to ſay to thee. But if otherwiſe, I adviſe thee to remain a Widow, leſt the next Man that marmarries thee, ſhould revenge the Injuries my Brother receiv'd at thy Hands: For, this is one Way of Taming Shrews.

Paris, 27th. of the 10th. Moon, of the Year 1678.

LETTER V.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

I Hope thou wilt pardon me, moſt Illuſtrious Miniſter, that I have thus long delay'd to give thee a farther Account of the States of Europe: But now I will proceed; and, according to thy Command, begin where I left off.

Having already diſcours'd of Germany, I will deſcend into the Netherlands: Which is as Natural, as for a Man that has Survey'd the Upper Town of Buda, or any other City ſeated like that, to fall into the Lower. For ſo the Netherlands ſeem to be a Kind of Outlying Borough, near the Suburb, to the German Empire.

They are call'd the Netherlands, by Reaſon of their Low Situation, near the Sea: Which makes the Country appear like a Mariſh, or Moor, Moor. They contain Seventeen Provinces; Ten whereof are under the Juriſdiction of the King of Spain: The other Seven make up a Diſtinct and Independent Republick, among themſelves.

The Circumference of the Seventeen Provinces, is a Thouſand Italian Miles: And within that Compaſs, there are Two Hundred Wall'd Towns and Cities; an Hundred and Fifty other Places, which enjoy the ſame Priviſeges and Power as the Former: And there are Six Thouſand Villages.

In the Time of Julius Cæſar, this Tract of Ground was call'd Belgick-Gaul by the Romans. It was Inhabited by a Warlike People, impatient of Servitude, and Stout Aſſertors of their Native Liberty; as the ſame Cæſar found by Experience, when he Warr'd among them. Nay, and ſince that Time, the Muſſulmans themſelves have felt their Valour. Witneſs the Famous Expedition of Godfrey of Bullen, to recover the Holy-Land, out of the Hands of the Saracens: And that other of Baldwin the Fleming. who made himſelf Maſter of Conſtantinople, and the Græcian Empire.

The Ancient Romans us'd to ſay, That the Gauls fought for their Liberty; the Germans for Booty; and the Dutch for Glory and Honour. Hence it came to paſs, that the Roman Emperors in thoſe Days, had always a Select Guard about their Perſons, choſen out of theſe Provinces. Alſo the Hollanders and Friz- landers were call'd the Friends and Associates of the Romans.

landers

But, tho' these Provinces formerly had each a distinct Sovereign, with a Peculiar Government, and Laws; yet, afterwards, they were all reduc'd under the Dominion of the Dukes of Burgundy: From whom, they devolv'd to the Arch-Dukes of Austria; and last of all, to the Kings of Spain; who claim a Title to Ten of them at this Day: But the King of France has Possession of a Great Part. As for the other Seven, they are quite Emancipated, and Free. It being an establish'd Maxim with them, That the Longest Sword gives the Best Title to a Government. And, for ought I see, this Principle is practis'd throughout the World.

The Inhabitants of the Netherlands are generally Tall, and Strong-body'd People; Comely, Civil, Open-hearted, Courteous, Prompt and Laborious: More addicted to Wine, than to Women: Equally forgetful of Benefits, and Injuries: Great Musicians, Expert Sea-men, Cunning Merchants, Accurate Painters, and very Ingenious in all Arts. They are not Jealous of their Women, as most other Nations are; but suffer them to Walk abroad openly, and Converse with Men in the Streets. Neither will any of these Females refuse an Invitation to a Bottle of Wine. As soon as you come into any House, the Daughter of the Family meets you, with a Bottle of Wine, or other Strong Beverage, in her Hand, and drinks it off to you: And if you you do not very readily answer, and pledge her, it passes for a Sign of Rudeness, and Ill Manners.

These People are very Rich, by Reason of their Merchandize and Traffick with other Nations; for they Export the Product of their Soil, and their own Manufactures; Vending or Exchanging them, at a Prodigious Advantage, in the Remotest Regions of the Earth.

They have very strong Forts and Castles up and down the Country; with Cities which are, in a Manner, Inexpugnable. As for the Religion of the Netherlanders; The Ten Provinces which are subject to the King of Spain, or France, are called Catholicks. The other Seven represent the Celebrated Tower of Babel, where the Languages were first Confounded, as Moses relates: For, such is the Hotch-potch and Gallimaufrey of Religions tolerated in Amsterdam, Leyden, and other Cities of Holland; and, in General, throughout all the Seven United States. Neither have they much more Regularity and Order in other Matters. Wonder not therefore if my Pen observes no Method in Treating of a Country, which is the very Emblem, Proverb, and Centre of Anaxy and Confusion. However, I will now begin to make more Particular Distinctions, than in the Former Part of my Letter.

Zeland has a bad Air, especially in the Summer-time, when the Sun exhales Stinking and Infectious Vapours from the Lakes and and Pools, of which there is a great Number in that Province: Yet it has an Excellent Soil, abounding with Wheat, and other Corn; alſo with good Paſturage, for Sheep and Cattel. There is little more to be ſaid of this Province.

Holland has this Obſervable in it, That frequently the Earth trembles there, under the Burden of Coaches, Wagons, Horſes, &c. Which is an Argument, that the Ground is hollow underneath, and full of Caverns. To confirm this Opinion, they ſay, That a Cow once falling into a Gap or Chaſm in the Earth, was found dead three Days afterwards in the Sea, being known to the Owner to be the ſame. Hence a Part of Holland, in the Language of the Country, is called Waterland: Which, at firſt Hearing, ſounds like a Contradiction: But they mean by it, a Land ſituated in the Waters. For, ſo, indeed, the whole Province appears to be divided into ſmall Iſlands, by Innumerable Canals, Lakes and Pools, that every where expoſe themſelves to your Eye. This Province deſerves moſt properly, of all the Reſt, the Appellation of Netherland; it being ſunk ſo very low, that, in many Places, the Sea riſes higher than it: Which compels the Hollanders to fortifie their Shores with High and Strong Banks; which, with great Coſt, they continually keep repair'd.

They have but little Corn, or Fruit, of their own Growth; being ſupply'd with thoſe Things from Germany, Poland, and other Countries. But there is an Immenſe Quantity tity of Graſs, to nouriſh Millions of Sheep, Oxen, and Horſes. And, what I have ſaid of theſe two Provinces, may be, in ſome Degree, apply'd to all the Reſt, Frizland only excepted; which is more Fertile of Corn, yields Abundance of Pulſe and Salt, and is well cloath'd with Woods.

As to the Manners of theſe People: The Zelanders are of a Ready Wit, Provident, and Subtile: Of Stature, generally very tall; as will appear by a Woman of this Province, whom William Count of Holland ſent to the Nuptials of Charles the Fair, King of France. She was of ſo vaſt an Heighth and Bulk, that the French look'd like Pigmies, or Dwarfs, in Compariſon of her. And ſuch was her Strength, that She could lift from the Ground a Beam, and carry it on her Shoulders, which Eight Labouring Men cou'd hardly ſtir.

'Tis obſerv'd of Geldres, That it was the Firſt of theſe Provinces, which ſubmitted to the Riſing Fortune of the Roman Empire: And again, The Firſt that ſhook off the Yoke, when that Empire was in its Wane.

In Utrecht there are Abundance of Nobles; who are more Soft and Polite in their Converſation, than the Reſt of the Hollanders. The Women of Quality there go Veil'd.

The Publick Affairs of all theſe Provinces, are manag'd by thoſe whom they call the States-General of the United Provinces.

Theſe

These are a Convention, or Assembly, of the Chief Nobles, Principal Magistrates, and most Eminent Citizens in every Province.

Courteous Effendi, These are the Chief Things which I know of the United Provinces, unless thou wouldst have me write their Compleat History: Which wou'd be too tedious for Letters. Accept of my Labours, which, tho' Mean, yet are Voluntary, Chearful, and done at a Jerk.

Paris, 4th. of the 12th. Moon,
of the Year 1678.

LETTER

LETTER VI.

To the ſame.

THou wilt ſay, I'm all upon the Extremes. In my laſt I dragg'd thee through the moſt Dirty, Naſty, Abject Valley of all the Earth. I mean Holland, with the reſt of the United Provinces. Now I'm going to lead thee out of thoſe Fenny Bogs, and give thee a Breathing up the Salubrious Hills and Mountains of Helvetia or Swiſſerland. 'Tis true, this cannot be done without a conſiderable Leap over many Provinces of Germany, Part of Lorrain and Alſace. But, having ſpoken formerly of the Empire, and from thence in my next, by a kind of Natural Deſcent, fallen into the Low Countries; the Conſideration of their Form of Government, put me in mind of the other Republicks in Europe. Among which, that of Switzerland lying next to the United States, I choſe to make it the Subject of this Letter, deſigning to give thee an Account of Venice, Genoua, Lucca, and the Reſt in Order.

Know then, that Helvetia or Swiſſerland was once a Province of Germany, but now 'tis a Commonwealth ſubſiſting by it ſelf, and not ſubject to any Foreign Power. It is divided into Thirteen Cantons or Provinces. I will not trouble thee with the Names of each Diſtrich, ſtrich, or with their ſeveral Characters. The whole Country in general looks like a great Bunch of Rocks and Mountains, ſeparated by ſmall but very pleaſant Valleys. And though the Mountains ſeem rough, yet their Tops and Brows flouriſh no leſs with all ſorts of Trees and Herbage, than the faireſt Plains. The Inhabitants nouriſh abundance of Sheep on them, beſides Goats, Hinds, Horſes, with many other Kinds of Beaſts. For there is great Plenty of Animals in this Country, both Wild and Tame. The Air is piercing and ſerene; the Soil though not of it ſelf fertile, yet is made ſo by Induſtry of the Inhabitants. In ſome Parts they have Vineyards which produce a Grape of wonderful Delicacy: The Wine of which is much eſteem'd in thoſe Parts. The Lakes alſo and Rivers abound with Fiſh of all ſorts. Neither is there any Scarcity of Fowls, or of any Thing elſe, which immediately ſerves the Neceſſities of Human Life. Only Things tending to Luxury, and other Kinds of Wantonneſs, are not to be found in this Happy Region. It is a ſecond Scythia or Tartary. And indeed the Inhabitants of Swiſſerland are thought to come out of thoſe more Northern Regions.

They have ever been Famous for their invincible Conſtancy and Valour in War. Julius Cæſar himſelf was afraid of them, and built a Wall to hinder them from going into France or Gaul; when he remember'd that L. Caſſius a Roman Conſul was Vanquiſh'd by them, and his whole Army routed. Some Authors affirm, that in the Times of Old, the Inhabitants of the North of Europe, were ſo prodigiouſly multiplied, that ſome of them were forced to ſeek new Seats. Wherefore ruſhing through Germany and paſſing the Rhine, they were met by the Gauls, whom they Overcame and Defeated. Upon which News the Neighbouring Nations being terrified, ſent Embaſſadors to them, deſiring Peace. The Conquerors replied, They came not to wage War, or diſturb the Peace of Mankind: That they only ſought a Place to live in quietly, where they might manure the Ground, without hurting any Body. Then Helvetia was granted to them, where their Poſterity live to this Day.

thors

As to the Manners of the Modern Swiſs, they anſwer exactly the ancient Character; being wholly addicted to War; hardy to bear all Inconveniencies of Hunger, Thirſt, Cold, and other Afflictions of Nature, Providence, Deſtiny, or Chance. A little Money ſerves their Turn to defray the Expences of eating; their Diet being very plain and ordinary, conſiſting chiefly of Milk and Cheeſe. If they are chargeable in any Thing, 'tis in Wine and other ſtrong Liquors. For you ſhall find but mean and ſqualid Houſes and contemptible Furniture; and they wear Garments anſwerable to the Reſt: But they are given to Drinking above Meaſure. They will conſume whole Days and Nights ſucceſſively, without Intermiſſion, in their drunken Debauches. Nor can any Friendſhip be contracted tracted among them, but over their Cups. For, he who drinks moſt, and is moſt Frolickſome and Debonaire, he is taken for a Man of Integrity. Whereas he that ſeems timorous of his Health, or makes any frivolous Excuſes, is look'd upon as a ſneaking Fellow, not worthy of ſuch good Company. Nay, ſometimes their Madneſs grows to that heighth, as to ſet a Dagger to his Throat, who refuſes to pledge in his Turn.

And yet after all this Reproach, it muſt be confeſs'd, That theſe People are very Prudent and Circumſpect, both in their Private and Publick Affairs. For, notwithſtanding the Pleaſure they take in liberal Compotations, yet every Man, when the Frolick is over, is intent on his Buſineſs, uſing double Induſtry and Diligence, to make good the Expences of his laſt Vanity. They Work to Drink, and Drink that they may better Work again. So in the Publick, 'tis evident, that they are not defective in Policy, ſince they have been able for ſo many Centuries of Years, to maintain their Union, and Confederated Liberties, againſt ſo many Princes, who have endeavour'd to bring them under a Foreign Yoke: And not only ſo, but ſuch is the Singularity of their Conduct, that the moſt mighty Monarchs in Europe are glad to enter into a League with them, and ſend Yearly vaſt Sums of Money.

Thou wilt not, after what I have ſaid, expect to find in Swiſſerland the Riches of Arabia and Babylon; nor the reſt of the Luxurious xurious and Magnificent Superfluities of the East. The Situation of the Country, and Nature of the Soil, denies these glittering Vanities. It is sufficient that it brings forth enough to Nourish the Inhabitants.

They fear no Foreign Invasion, both on the Account of this National Poverty, and the Inaccessible Heights of the Alpes, with which they are on all sides environ'd as by a Wall. Add to this, the invincible Resolution of the People, who abhor and fear Subjection more than Death it self. So that no Prince in Europe dares, or thinks it worth his while to carry a War into this Country; knowing, that if he shou'd conquer it, the Revenues, with all the Spoil of his new-gotten Possessions, would not counterbalance the Expences of one short Campaign. Besides their Union is so strict and close, that it is almost impossible to break or dissolve it. Then, they have some very strong Cities, Castles, Forts, and other Places of Defence, which wou'd give no small Diversion and Incumbrance to him who should undertake such an Expedition. In fine, such are their Circumstances, That all the Courts round about them, think it safer to court this untameable Nation, than to threaten or huff them.

I will relate to thee a Story by way of Instance or Example. From whence thou may'st comprehend more clearly the Humour of this People.

In former Times, as I have already ſaid, Swiſſerland was a Province of the German Empire, or at leaſt reputed ſo. And there were certain Prefects or Governours ſet over them by Cæſar, one ſucceeding another. Some of theſe, for their Inſolence, were driven out of the Nation; others were kill'd by Reaſon of their Tyrannous and cruel Practices. Among the reſt, one of theſe Governours, being diſguſted at a certain Swiß, commanded him to be Yok'd with Oxen that drew Burdens in a Cart. But when neither by fair nor foul Means they could force him to this vile Condeſcenſion, he commanded his Eyes to be put out. Which was done accordingly. This was murmur'd at: But being the firſt Eſſay of his Cruel Diſpoſition, they wink'd at it.

A while after, the ſame Governour commanded a Woman, in her Husband's Abſence, to prepare a hot Bath for him. Which when the chaſte Matron refus'd to perform, till her Husband came home, he ſtruck her dead with an Axe. This alſo, though heightning the Choler of the Swiß, was paſs'd by, in Meditation of future Revenge.

At laſt he grew ſo fooliſhly proud and imperious, that walking one Day in the Streets of the City, he ſtuck his Cane in the Ground, and plac'd his Turbant or Bonnet thereon; commanding all that paſs'd by to give Honour to it. Which when a certain honeſt Swiß refus'd to do, he commanded him to ſtrike off an Apple from his Son's Head with a Shot from his Croſs-bow. The good Father for a long Time refuſed thus to hazard his Son's Life. But being overcome by the Tyrant's importunate Menaces, he rather ventur'd to truſt to Providence the Life of his Son, than to Sacrifice both that and his own to the Implacable Malice of a Barbarian. So he ſhot, and hit the Apple off without touching his Son's Head. The Governour ſeeing this, and taking notice that he brought two Arrows with him, asked him the Reaſon of it. To whom the Swiſs anſwered, If I had ſhot amiſs and hurt my Son with the firſt Arrow, I was reſolved to have pierced thy Heart with the ſecond. Upon this, all the People gave a Shout, and running together, ſeis'd upon the Governour, and tore him to Pieces. Neither would they ever afterwards endure or admit any Man into their Cities, from the Emperor, unleſs he came in the Quality of an Embaſſador.

ther

Serene Miniſter, if theſe Memoirs are in the leaſt acceptable to thee, 'tis but to command, and thou ſhalt find I have a Stock not eaſie to be exhauſted.

Adieu, adieu, for the preſent. May the Curtains of God's Pavilion be unfurl'd about us, to skreen us from the Injuries of Dæmons who hunt by Night for Mortals: For, 'tis now their Hour.

Paris, 6th. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1679.

LETTER VII.

To Dgnet Oglou, at Damaſcus.

I Could hardly believe my own Eyes, whe
I firſt read thy Letter, and underſtood tha thou art turn'd Husbandman at laſt, and ſe led in a Place the moſt delectable on Eart the very Center and Rendezvouz of all Plea ſures, and whatſoever is agreeable to Mo tals. Thou art a wary Man, reſolved to h ſure of one Paradiſe at leaſt, though it be b Mortgaging thy Title to the other. Tho wilt not ſuffer God Almighty to go upon Tr with thee, nor truſt all his Promiſes for Hea ven in Reverſion. Yet I cannot diſcommen thy Cautiouſneſs. We know not what ſha befall us after Death; and therefore Natur prompts us to ſecure to our Selves ſom ſhare of Happineſs in this Life, and to ant date the Uncertainties of a Future Bliſs, b carving out our own Heaven on this ſide t Grave. However, I wiſh thou may'ſt n ſurfeit on thy preſent Enjoyments, and render thy Soul incapable of the Voyage Eternal Beatitude. I tell thee, My Dgn thou art a bold Man to venture on a Pla by Choice which the Meſſenger of God pr poſely ſhunn'd as the moſt dangerous Earth. But I wou'd not diſcourage the
That City was then in the Hands of Infide
a Se

a Seat of Profanation and Idolatry; now 'tis ſanctified by the Preſence of True Believers, by the Preaching of the Law brought down from Heaven, and by the Moſchs of perfect Holineſs.

As for the Manner of Life thou haſt made Choice of, I highly applaud it, as the moſt Primitive, Innocent, Delightful, and Happy above all others. Many great Princes and Kings have exchanged the Toilſome Glory and Royal Fatigues of Empire, for the ſweet Tranquility and Eaſe of a Country Farm, and wholſome Exerciſes of Agriculture. Thus Diocleſian a Roman Emperor quitted his Throne for the ſake of a Private Life; and thoſe Hands which had been accuſtomed to weild the Scepter, became at laſt voluntarily familiar with the Spade, the Plough, and the Harrow. So the Grand Cyrus, Monarch of the Perſians, uſed to boaſt of the Gardens planted and ſow'd with his own Hands. And 'tis certain, that the Fabii, the Lentuli, the Cicero's the Piſo's, with many of the Nobleſt Families in Ancient Rome, derived their Names from thoſe Kind of Vegetables which they ſignifie, and which their Fathers took Delight in Planting.

How many Great Authors have writ in Praiſe of Husbandry? Attalus and Archelaus, Two Kings, extoll'd it: Xenophon and Mago, two Generals, patroniz'd it, and Oppian the Poet celebrates it in Verſe. Beſides Cato, Varro, Pliny, Columella, Virgil, and many others, Some have plac'd Supreme Felicity in this kind of Life. Virgil pronounces Husbandmen Fortunate, and Horace calls them Bleſſed. Hence it was, that the Delphick Oracle declar'd a certain Man nam'd Aglaus to be the happieſt of all Mortals, becauſe he was buſied in Nothing but manuring and cultivating a little Farm, never moleſting himſelf with vain Cares or Paſſions, nor encreaſing the Miſeries of Human Life by tampering with ſuperfluous and unneceſſary Pleaſures, which tho' full of Blandiſhments and ſweet in the Front, yet carry a Sting in their Tail, embittering all our Joys.

Thou art ſituated in the moſt pleaſant Suburb of Damaſcus; for I have ſurvey'd the City, and all its Precincts, with no ſmall Curioſity. The Houſe is encompaſs'd with lovely Gardens and Meadows. It was formerly the Seat of Abul Mecharib the famous Shepherd, who took Sanctuary there from the Perſecution of Iſmael Beglerbegh of Diarbehir.

Thou know'ſt the Story, and I need ſay no more, than to wiſh thee as good Fortune in poſſeſſing that rich Spot of Ground, as he had, who, as 'tis recorded in the Regiſter of Damaſcus, died worth a Hundred Purſes of Gold, moſt of it got by the Encreaſe of his Cattel in thoſe Lucky Fields.

For my part, I cannot pretend to Skill in theſe Things; but it appears to me like a good Omen, that thy Predeceſſor was ſo proſperous in that Farm. I adviſe thee to take his Meaſures, and ſtock thy Ground with

Sheep

Sheep, Oxen, Camels, Horſes, and other Animals of Profit. Think no Scorn, to follow an Employment ennobled by the Examples of Romulus and Rhemus, the firſt Founders of the Roman Empire; of Paris the Son of Priamus; of Anchiſes the Father of Æneas; of Endymion the beloved of Diana, who were all Herdſmen or Shepherds. So was Polyphemus and Argus. So was Apollo, who tended the Flocks of Admetus King of Theſſaly. What ſhall I ſay of Mercury the firſt Inventer of Hautboy, and Prince of Shepherds, and of Proteus another Divinity? Was not Abrahim, the Father of Muſſulmans, a Herdſman, and Moyſes the Prophet familiar with God, and David the Prince of Poets? In a Word, my Friend, the moſt illuſtrious Heroes among the ancient Greeks, Romans, and other Nations, were all Keepers of Sheep, Goats, Oxen, &c. as the Arabians are at this Day with the Tartars, and other Nations of the Eaſt.

Doubtleſs, the Rural Life, as it is the moſt Ancient, ſo it affords the ſincereſt Pleaſures, and moſt unrepented Joys in Nature; provided a Man enjoys it with Innocence and Juſtice. But, I wou'd have thee avoid the common Temptations to which this Kind of Life is more expos'd than any other; that is, Hunting and Fowling. Theſe are really deteſtable Exerciſes, Tragical Sports, and altogether inhuman. It is a Labour unworthy of Men to watch from Day to Day, and and one Night after another, the Haunts of our Fellow-Animals, that we may deſtroy them. It is a cruel Pleaſure that muſt be maintain'd at the Expence of ſo much Innocent Blood; and a barbarous Triumph, to inſult over a poor mangled Hare, or Hind, after you have haraſs'd them up and down the Country for many Hours together, with an Army of Dogs and Men.

'Tis recorded, that the Thebans were the firſt Inventers of this unhappy Sport; a Nation infamous for Deceit, Thefts, Perjuries, Murders, and Inceſts: From whom it paſs'd to the Phrygians, a People not leſs wicked, but more fooliſh and eaſie, light and credulous; and for that Reaſon they were deſpiſed by the Athenians and Lacedemonians at firſt: However, thoſe graver Nations in a little Time learn'd the Trade of Hunting of them: So infectious is the Company and very Neighbourhood of ill Men; ſo prevalent the Examples of ſuch as are bold to lead the Way in new Paths of Vice.

By the God whom I adore, My Dgnet, it appears to me ſo fooliſh a Paſtime, an Exerciſe ſo unbecoming the Majeſty of a Rational Spirit, to run Yawling with a Parcel of Hounds, perhaps a whole Day together, after ſome Timorous Animal, that I wonder Men are not aſham'd to practiſe it, eſpecially Great Men and Princes; who ſhou'd excel others in the Juſtice and Clemency of their Nature; yet theſe are moſt guilty of Rapine, Injuries, and Spoil.

My

My Dear Friend, imitate not their pernicious Examples, but tread in the Steps of Juſt and Holy Men, whom the Birds and Beaſts would obey at a Nod, becauſe they cou'd not ſmell the leaſt Odour of Evil in them. How many Prophets have been fed by Ravens, Hinds, Cats, and other Animals? Nay, the very Serpents and Dragons of the Deſart, with the Amphibious Monſters of Egypt, have quitted their Native Venom to ſerve an Innocent Man; and when Omar the Cailiph was hard purſu'd by a Troop of Egyptian Idolaters, even to the Banks of the Nile, he commanded a Crocodile, which he ſpy'd in the River, to come and Ferry him over on his Back; and the Pious Beaſt was Obedient to his Word. Doubtleſs this was a ſingular Grace in the Dumb Creature; and he was tranſlated to Paradiſe, if our Doctors ſay true.

Dgnet, I bid thee Adieu, and wiſh thee a plentiful Harveſt; which is the moſt ſeaſonable Prayer I can make for thee at this time of the Year.

Paris, 14th. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1679.

LETTER VIII.

To Achmet Cupriogli, the Most Exalted and Sage Vizir Azem.

THE Face of Affairs here in the West is now quite changed. A General Peace is eſtabliſhed between the Nazarene Princes and States. France, which a while ago was at Mortal Jarrs with the Hollanders, Spain, and the German Empire, is lately reconcil'd to them; whilſt new Friendſhips and Alliances have baniſh'd all Thoughts of former Enmities and Feuds. This Year commences a Civil Jubilee in Europe.

There has been a Treaty of Peace in Agitation at Nimeguen, and Conferences held about it an y Time theſe Four or Five Years; whereof I formerly gave a Hint in one of my Letters to the Port. The Concluſion of it is owing to the Powerful Mediation of the King of Great Britain, who is made Guarantee of the Articles: And the Submiſſive Addreſſes of the Biſhop of Strasburg to the King of France, contributed not a little to the Univerſal Agreement. For, this Great Monarch is ſlow in his Advances toward an Accommodation with thoſe who have injur'd Him or his Allies. He affects to imitate the ſtately Reſervedneſs of the Eaſtern Princes, thinking His Majeſty would would be violated, ſhou'd he condeſcend too ſoon, and on too eaſie Terms, to the Propoſals of his Neighbours. He has learn'd this from the Maxims of the Sublime Port, the Refuge of Mankind, whoſe Arms are ever open to receive and embrace all that ſue for the Grand Signior's Friendſhip and Protection, in a Way not entrenching on the Glory of the Ottoman Houſe, a Family deſtin'd to Subdue the World.

This Temper of the French King is ſo well known and obſerved in theſe Parts, that he has got a new Character by it, both among Foreigners and thoſe of his own Nation. For they ſpare not to call him The moſt Chriſtian Turk, by way of Mockery; and this is the Satyrical Style even of his Subjects in their Seditious Cabals, when they are a little warm'd with Wine, and each Man as Great as a King himſelf, in his own Conceit.

By the ſwift Flaſhes of Lightning, which cauſe the Heart to pant, and dazle the Eyes of Mortals; by the aſtoniſhing Noiſe of Thunder, which raiſes the Vapours of the Spleen, and fills us with Hypocondriack Dread, I ſwear, the King of France is a great Hero, and deſerves the Honour which theſe Infidels have unfeignedly done him, in lik'ning him to the undoubted Arbiter of the Earth. He really determines the Differences and Quarrels of a great Part of it. And though he be a Chriſtian in Profeſſion, and ſtyl'd, The Eldeſt

Son

Son of the Church; yet he is no Enemy to the Followers of Mahomet, who vouchsafe him their Friendship. Thou know'st he is the most Primitive Allie of the Ottoman Empire, among the Western Princes of the Law of Jesus. He has establish'd a more remote Friendship, for the sake of Commerce, and spreading his Renown, with the Grand Mogul, and the King of Persia. His Fame strikes all the East with Admiration and Respect: For they have heard of his continual Victories and successful Exploits even to the utmost Borders of the Continent. Yet the same Fortune procures him only the Spight and Envy of the Princes in the West.

However, they are glad to dissemble their Malice at this Juncture, and enter into an Agreement with him, almost upon his own Terms.

The Treaty between France and Holland was publish'd in this City on the 1st of the 10th Moon, the Year precedent. Now to assure the World that there is a perfect Amity and Peace, the Dutch have sent their Embassadors Extraordinary to acknowledge, That the King has preferred the Repose of Christendom to the Glory which his Victorious Arms acquir'd him; and that the United States of the Low-Countries being the first who have felt the Effects of his Generosity, they thought themselves obliged to prevent others in the Earliness of their Application. Yesterday was also publish'd the Peace between France and the Emperor.

was

I take my Conge, most Magnanimous Vizir, and Friend of France, in the humblest Posture of Adoration; wishing thee Honour, Riches, and Pleasures, which shall have no End.

Paris, 27th. of the 4th. Moon, of the Year 1679.

LET-

LETTER IX.

To Mehmet, an Exil'd Eunuch, at Al-Caire in Egypt.

THere are certain Critical Periods in our Lives, whether ordain'd by Fate, or falling out in an Eternal Circulation of Chances, I am not able to determine. But this I perceive, That at ſuch Seaſons, ſomething very ſtrange and unuſual happens to us, above, or beſide, the Ordinary Courſe of Nature; or, at leaſt, appearing ſo to me. I will not pretend to Unravel the Web of Deſtiny; or deſcribe the Incomprehenſible Fineneſs of that Artifice, which has fram'd the Worlds. I will not undertake to diſcover the Secrets of God, the Myſteries of Nature, and thoſe Things which are, under a Seal, ſhut up from Mortals, in Inſcrutable Darkneſs. I will not, by a Vain Preſumption, and Impious Arrogance, claim to my ſelf the Right of Omniſcience, and dive into other Men's Conſtitutions and Thoughts. Suffice it, that I comprehend my own.

Thou know'ſt, My Mehmet, that I have been a Man of many Circumſtances, ſubject to Various Changes and Viciſſitudes in this Mortal State. My Life has been Alternately Checquer'd with Good and Evil. Virtue and Vice have had their Turns in the Series of

of my Actions: Prosperity and Adversity in the Course of my Years. And I would fain find out the Man that can, with Truth, boast the Contrary. Doubtless, we are all born to the Adventures which happen in the Pell-mell of Human Conversation. Fates-Errant encounter one another: Sometimes they are Agreeable, and Complaisant: At other Seasons they will Clash and Tilt, break Lances, draw Swords; and all the Weapons of Nature's Pride and Fury shall be us'd in mere Defence of Idiosyncrasies, Conceits, Antipathies, Self-Interest, Preservation; or any Thing, but what is Generous and Good.

O Horrid State of Men! A Life to be deplor'd, beyond the Salvage Course of Lyons, Tygers, Wolves, and other Beasts of Prey; who always, in Extreamest Hunger, spare their Proper Species! Yet Man, in Perfect Wantonness, devours his Brother, and glories in his Cruelty and Injustice.

As for me, I have not been guilty of any of these Black Crimes, which make a Riot in the Tranquility of the Soul, disturb its Peace, darken its Light, and cover it with a Cloud of Guilty, Desperate Thoughts. No: If I have been Enemy to any Body, it has been to my self. The very Beasts cannot challeng me with Oppression, or any Barbarous Usage: Much less wou'd I torment One Individual of our Humane Race. But I have had my Frailties, as well as other Men; and there's all can be said of it. Thou art acquainted with my Temper; and no Body knows any worse. 'Tis true, I have had to do with Abundance of People in my Life-Time. I have Bull'd it, Lyon'd, Lamb'd, and sometimes Fox'd it in the World. I have always pursu'd the Chace of Nature. Come Life, come Death, I have made no Baulks in the Appointments of Fate; or ever put the Eternal Destiny to a Stand. I never halted, boggl'd, or fram'd a Stumble, at a Generous and Noble Action, a Bold and God-like Enterprize. But, from my Cradle, I disdain'd and cherish'd Infant-Abhorrence for an Inhuman, Barbarous, Perfidious, Cowardly Thought.

knows

Indeed, I have been too great a Lover of Good Company; too easie, flexible, and free in drinking Wine, and other Inebriating Liquors; whose Use is taught from Heaven, and is the Genuine Product of Eternal Reason. But the Excess is, sure, deriv'd from Hell, the Seat of Everlasting Evil, Vanity, and Error. And yet, to whom, or to what Cause, or Principles, shall I ascribe the many Extravagances of this Kind, that I have committed? If I that have suffer'd the Thaws of a Thousand Putrid Fevers; let all my Radical, Essential, Necessary Juices and Humours, (tho' never so well and firmly Congeal'd, by the Force of an Excellent and Happy Constitution of Body) melt and dissolve away, in Horrid Fluxes, Sweats, &c. rather than baulk my Friends, or the Grand Signior's Cause; Rather than Sneak away from Boon Companions, in a Principle of Sordid Prudence!

To

To ſpeak all, I am no Starter from the Juice of the Grape, when 'tis handed to me by Men of Senſe, and a Good Humour: Eſpecially, when it is to ſerve my Sovereign. And I know not how to perform that Service better, at ſome Times, than by giving Nature an Eſcapade, as the French call it, from the too Severe Reſtraints of Conſtant Sobriety. I was not ſent to Paris, that I ſhould lead the Life of an Hadgi; But to dive into the Secrets of the Infidels: Which a Man cannot do better, than over a Glaſs of Generous Wine: For, that unlocks the Cabinets of the Heart, and reveals all Secrets.

I tell thee plainly, Mehmet; I drink Wine liberally, and frequently; finding no Devil in the Quality of it, but only in the Exceſs. And ſuch a Devil appear'd to me laſt Week, in the Night-Time. I had Carous'd it, like a German, for ſome whole Days together, in Order to the Carrying on an Intrigue of Moment: Yet I found my ſelf no Ways diſorder'd; neither cou'd any Body elſe perceive, by one falſe Step in my Carriage, that I was more than Civilly and Chearfully Elevated.

It was the Hotteſt Seaſon of all the Year; which prompted me, and Thoſe that kept me Company, to Regale our ſelves after the moſt Refreſhing Manner we could invent. Our Drink was an Artificial Mixture of the Wine, Water, the Juice of Limons, Odoriferous and Cephalick Herbs, Fruits, and whatſoever elſe could render it Cooling and

Delicious

Delicious to the Palate; Medicinal to the Brain, Heart, and Stomach.

I will not detain thee in Impatience, with any more Particularities. Only, I thought it neceſſary to acquaint thee with the Method of my Drinking; that thou may'ſt form the more Accurate Judgment on the Conſequence, which I am going to relate.

It was in the Evening of the Day dedicated to Saturn by the Gentiles, (which is the ſame as Jews Sabbath:) Our Drinking ended the Day before, and I, in a very Melancholy Humour, went to Bed. I ſlept till Mid-night profoundly; but then awaking, I was ſurpriz'd with the Apparition of an Old Man, much reſembling my ſelf. He ſeem'd to look very Studious, and full of Care; ſitting in a Chair, and leaning on the Table, in juſt ſuch an Habit as I wear, with ſuch a Beard, and every Thing that can be call'd my True Portraicture. I lay Muſing, and Gazing, for the Space of about Twenty Minutes, on this Amazing Object. I muſter'd up all that little Philoſophy I am Maſter of, to conſider the Nature of the Phantaſm. I argu'd with my ſelf, ſummon'd all my Reaſon, Sub-pœna'd my Senſes, ſate up in the Bed, took my Polvita, reach'd my Head as far as I could, without Tumbling out of the Bed; and the more I rouz'd my ſelf, the plainer did this Familiar Figure of my ſelf appear, by the Light of a Lamp, which always burns in my Chamber.

Yet

Yet, being Naturally Incredulous of the Common Stories of Ghosts, Apparitions, Hobgoblins, &c. I ſtill ſuſpected, that I was either, all this while, in a Dream; or, at leaſt, if awake, that my Imagination was Vitiated, and Impos'd upon. Wherefore, to ſatisfie my ſelf more throughly, I jump'd out of the Bed. No ſooner had my Feet touch'd the Floor of the Chamber, but a Sacred Horror poſſeſs'd my Nerves: I trembl'd at the now more Apparent Viſion. However, reſuming Courage, and reſigning my ſelf to God, I went forward, and approach'd ſo near the Uncouth Spectre, that it was within the Reach of my Hand, which I ſtretch'd forth, to touch it; thinking this Way to undeceive my ſelf. But, O my Mehmet! No Tongue, nor Pen, can e'er expreſs the Dreadful Metamorphoſis I ſaw. For, inſtead of the ſame Face which I ſaw before, my Eyes were now accoſted with the Dreadful Countenance of a Lyon, gnaſhing his Teeth, and darting perfect Sparks of Fire from his Looks; beſides the Horrid Twirling of his Head, and Manly Beard; with all the other Natural Motions of that Animal, in its Fierceneſs.

I know not what would have become of me, if a Good-natur'd Ape had not come in to my Relief; who peep'd and grinn'd upon me, over the Lyon's Shoulders. Nay, thought I, if you are ſo Merry in ſuch Company, I will not diſturb you, Good Mr. Ape! And ſo I fairly took my Leave, turn'd my Back, and went to Bed again.

It is my Nature, not to be afraid, or ſhrink from the Imagination of a Ghoſt, or Spectre, or what you pleaſe to call it. (For, I am ſatisfied, there is no more than Pure Imagination in it.) But, I retir'd in Complaiſance to my own Fancy, which, I perciev'd, was upon the Creative Frolick. Had I ſtood ſtill, perhaps a Dragon had ſtarted next, or ſome more Dreadful Animal. Or, 'tis poſſible, I had been terrify'd with an Herd of Lynxes, Leopards, Tygers, Bears, and whatſoever elſe is Salvage and Moroſe in Nature. For, I tell thee, I was then in a Condition, to paint the Walls with any Figure, which ſhould riſe within my Over-heated Brains.

At ſuch a Time, there are Emiſſions from the Eyes, forcible as the Pencils of a Limner. A Man's Fermented Optick Nerve will draw the Portraicture of Saints, or Devils, or any Thing that can be nam'd, except the Everlaſting SOURCE of All Things.

HE, indeed, is altogether Ineffable; who cannot be expreſs'd by Tongue, or Pen, or by any other Way, but Humble Negatives. There runs a Silent Fountain by the Door of his Tremendous and Inviolate Receſs: Of which the Caſtrate Angel drinks, at a certain Set, Appointed Seaſons; and then the Univerſe is all Inebriated with the Reverſion of his Cup. For, it is the Ceremony of the Court Above, that he ſhould leave no Snuffs or Supernaculums behind him; but ſcatter 'em abroad, to treat the Thirſty World below.

Bleſſed

Bleſſed is the Man, who has a Share in this Celeſtial Compotation.

Pardon me, for thus Digreſſing in Perfect Piety. For, we ought not to Name the High and Holy ONE, without Additional Reverences.

In ſhort, I lay but the Space of Half an Hour, gazing on this Odd Kind of Apparition, which had now reſum'd my Phyſiognomy again. At laſt it vaniſh'd all on a Sudden, whil'ſt my Eyes were intently fix'd upon it. It is impoſſible to expreſs exactly, the Manner how it diſappear'd. But, according to the Beſt Idea, and Propereſt Form of Words I have, it ſeem'd to be diſpers'd, juſt as a Smoak or Vapour is Reſolv'd or Rarified into the Purer Air. Or, as the Moon's Pale Light, which ſhines within your Chamber, is unawares extinguiſh'd, in Appearance, by ſome Intervening Cloud. So did this Spectre fade, and melt away.

If thou wilt have my Judgment in this Caſe, I think there was Nothing in it, but the Pure Force and Energy of my Over-agitated Spirits; which darted the Impreſſion of their own Idea's on the next Solid Body, that was within the Sphere of their Activity. The Air it ſelf, at ſuch a Time, is more than ordinarily Flexible, and Ductile: It yields by Sympathy, and is conformable to the Tranſient Image. It helps to patch up the Defects, and Ragged Forms of our Frail Fancies. Millions of Atoms run to relieve the Weaken'd, Half-ſpent Efflux of their Attractive ctive and Magnetick Kindred-Particles. Pell-mell they ruſh together, yet fall into their Proper Ranks; without Diſorder, or Confuſion. Every one ſtops a Gap, prevents a Vacuum; and ſo the Abortive Figure is compleated. Nature is ſometimes pleas'd, thus to divert her ſelf with Strange Chimæra's. Even ſo this World of Ours was form'd, if we may believe Democritus, and Epicurus.

Thou and I, my Dear Mehmet, are but Two Different Lumps of Particles; Tack'd, and Stitch'd, and Glew'd together, by the Bird-lime of Chance.

I wiſh, when that Glew ſhall be diſſolv'd, we may ſcamper at Large, in the Endleſs Element of Light.

Paris, 3d. of the 7th. Moon,
of the Year 1679.

LET-

LETTER X.

To the Cadileſquer of Romeli.

MY Mind is at this Time in an Aſtral Diſpoſition, as they call it, Tender and Receptive of any Impreſſions. I am like a young Libertine newly converted from his lewd Courſes and Impiety; whoſe Heart, a devout Compunction and Remorſe of Sin, has ſoften'd, open'd, and as it were diſſolv'd like Wax: So that it becomes equally capable of any new Stamp, whether of Vice or Virtue. Thus pliable and ductile am I at preſent, through a kind of Fatal Supineneſs or Inactivity of Spirit, which takes from me the Power of forming one ſubſtantial, lively Thought of my own, or exerting any ſtrong and laborious Act of Reaſon; yet at the ſame Time lays me open to the Invaſion of all Foreign Idea's, and expoſes me to be taken Captive by every bold Argument, or ſly Ambuſh of Human Sophiſtry. In a Word, I am of a ſudden ſo weak and unmortified, that I dare not enter the Field of Religious Controverſies, or ſo much as ſtand and behold the Battel between the different Sects that are perpetually diſputing againſt one another in the World; leſt a random Shot from one Party or other ſhould reach my unguarded Soul, and give my Intellect a Mortal Wound.

For-

Forbearing therefore to enlarge in giving thee a particular Account of all the Nice Differences that are of late Years ſprung up among theſe Weſtern Infidels, in matters of Opinion and Church-Diſcipline; I will only inform thee in ſhort, That thoſe who firſt Revolted from the Biſhop of Rome, ſtill retain'd an Inviolable Attach and Dutiful Reverence for their own National Biſhops; ſubmitting to their Conduct, and owning them as Fathers and Guides of their Reſpective Churches.

But as there is no End of Diviſions, when once the Unity of a People is broken, which is the only Cement that faſtens all Societies; ſo this firſt Separation from the Roman Epiſcopacy, ſoon begat another from all Epiſcopacy in general, through moſt of the Reform'd or Proteſtant Nations in Europe. Eſpecially in Scotland, the Theatre of many Bickerings and Animoſities on this Account, of bloody Combats and Civil Wars; and finally, now in this Year, the Stage of a Barbarous Murder committed on the Perſon of the Chief Mufti or Archbiſhop of that Nation.

He was a Man of an Accurate and Extraordinary Spirit, and in his very Youth gave early Marks of a refin'd Genius, in Sciences; to which he brought no ſmall Reputation and Honour, through the Vaſtneſs of his Abilities, his profound Judgment, and dexterous Sagacity in all Things that he undertook.

This

This is the Character given him by those of his Nation resident here in Paris, of whom there are always great Numbers; and the Kings of France were formerly never without a select Guard of Scots about their Persons: Which Custom had been observed ever since the Reigns of Charles the Great, and of Achaius King of the Scots; between whom this was agreed upon in a Solemn League, and was observed through the Reigns of One and Forty Kings of France, and Six and Forty of Scotland. The Scots also us'd to send 'em Auxiliary Forces in Time of War. Nay so great Affection and so constant the Fidelity of that People to the French, that when at one Time a War has threaten'd France, they have drawn it into their own Country, have suffer'd the Loss of Ten Thousand Men in one Battel, and seen their King taken Captive: At another Time, fighting for the French against the English, though inhabiting the same Island with themselves, they have had Fourteen Thousand of their Soldiers, with their King, kill'd upon the Spot.

And that Nothing might be wanting to confirm and establish the Friendship of Nations; it was customary to make reciprocal Marriages one with another, that so the French and Scotch Blood might be mutually mix'd in both Countries.

Thus Lewis XI. when he was Dauphin of France married Margaret the Daughter of James I. King of Scotland. At which Time, the Grandees and Courtiers of France, in Imitation

Fation of the Dauphin's Example, (ſuch is the force of French Complaiſance) married above Hundred and Forty Scotch Ladies of Illuſtrious Birth and Quality; among whom were Two Siſters of the Scotch Queen; one becoming Wife to the Duke of Little Bretagne; the other to the Count of Flanders. The Scotch Nobility on the other Hand, married many French Ladies of great Extraction, tranſporting them to Scotland, where they ſetled and bore Children.

The Kings of France being mov'd with Gratitude for the frequent Aids and Good Offices they receiv'd from the Scots; as alſo regarding the Loſſes which the Scots had ſuſtained in their Quarrels, and the ſtrict Affinities that were made between the Princes, Nobles, and other People of both Nations; reſolved to teſtifie to the World, how acceptable this Obſequiouſneſs of the Scots was to them, by Honouring them with Benefits and Privileges above all other Nations.

Therefore ſome of the Scotch Grandees were made Great Conſtables of France; which is the greateſt Office and Dignity in the Kingdom, next to that of the Soveraignty it ſelf. Others were made Marſhals, Dukes, and Peers of France, Generals of the French Armies, Vice-Roys of Tributary Provinces and Kingdoms. All the Scots in general were had in high Honour and Eſteem at the French Court, and enjoy'd the ſame Rights and Immunities as the very Natives themſelves, by the ſpecial Grant of Henry II. But with this this Condition, that they ſhould perſevere in their Fidelity and Friendſhip to the French: And that the French who dwelt in any Part of Scotland ſhould enjoy the ſame Rights and Privileges as the Natives of the Country. The Parliament of Paris ſubſcrib'd to this Grant; and it was confirm'd by Henry IV. about the year 1599.

Likewiſe Charles XI. confirmed to the Scotch Merchants all thoſe Privileges and Immunities which their Anceſtors had enjoy'd. That they ſhould be free from all Exactions, Impoſts and Cuſtoms which are uſually paid for Merchandiſes.

As to the Original Riſe of the Scotch Guards about the French King's Perſon; I will tell thee as briefly as I can.

Louis who acquir'd the Title of Saint, for Warring in Perſon againſt the Muſſulmans; when he march'd towards Paleſtine, appointed Four and Twenty Scotch Soldiers to have the Guard of his Perſon Night and Day. Charles V. augmented their Number to Seventy Six; yet ſtill reſerving this Honour for the Firſt Four and Twenty, That they ſhould have the Command of the Reſt.

Thus the Cuſtody of the King's Body remain'd with the Scots for the ſpace of Seventy Years, and upwards. But Charles VII. being willing to oblige the French, appointed a Guard of them to be about his Perſon, under one Standard; Lewis X. added another Standard; and Francis I. adjoyned a Third: Yet without entrenching on the Prerogatives of the Twenty Four Scots, which they ſtill enjoy'd by Right of Antiquity and Preſcription; as alſo by the Sanction of St. Louis, for whom the French profeſs a great Veneration. Theſe Twenty Four Scots kept the Keys of the Royal Palace after Sun-ſet. They alone guarded the King when he was in the Temple at Maſs. They alone carried the King, when the Laws of the Land, and the Ceremonies of State requir'd him to be carried on Men's Shoulders. They guarded the Ships, when the King went by Water. And to them were the Keys of every Town deliver'd, through which the King paſs'd in his Travels by Land, with many other ſingular Honours.

But after the Death of Henry II. when the Earl of Montgomery, the laſt Commander of the Scotch Guards was remov'd from his Office, and a French Officer plac'd over them in his ſtead; that Command always fell into the Hands of French-men, who by degrees ſubſtituting thoſe of their own Nation in the Room of the Scots who died, it came to paſs at length, that there remain'd but a very few Scots in the Guards, and thoſe were bereft of all their ancient Privileges.

Pardon this tedious Digreſſion, Great Patriarch of the Faithful, ſince it contains ſome curious Memoirs in it, and I naturally fell into it by ſpeaking of the Scots who are very Numerous in Paris to this Day; and from whom I learn'd the foregoing Character of that Murder'd Archbiſhop, who was the Prime Pa- triarch of all the Land; his Ordinary Title being, Archbiſhop of St. Andrews.

triarch

This great and higheſt Eccleſiaſtical Dignity was given him by the preſent King of England, at his Return from a Twelve Years Exile, as a Debt to his Great Abilities, and a Reward of his Merits and Services, in labouring might and main to effect the King's Reſtauration.

From the Moment that he acquir'd this Honour, ſuch as were equally Enemies to the Government of King's and Biſhops, perſecuted him with Slanders and Invectives. The Streets ſwarm'd with Libels againſt him, and Mens Tongues were as buſie as their Pens in Railing at him, becauſe he was reſolved to endeavour his utmoſt, that Epiſcopacy might be reſtor'd in Scotland, as it was in England; though it had been ſubverted in both Nations, during the Uſurpation of Oliver the Tyrant. 'Twas this drew upon him the Malice and Revenge of the Seditious; and they ſpar'd not in Publick to threaten his Death. Nay ſome Years before he was murder'd, one of theſe Furioſo's ſhot at him in the open Streets of Edinburgh, but miſs'd him. Then the Seditious publiſh'd Libels, wherein they gloried in the Attempt, and were only ſorry that it took not Effect. They alſo Prophecied, that he ſhould die a Violent Death; and it was eaſie for them to preſage this, which they were reſolv'd to execute themſelves.

Accordingly in the 3*d.* and 4*th. Moons* of this Year, they were ready to give the Fatal Blow, but his Watchfulneſs prevented them. However on the 3*d.* of the Moon of May, as he was Travelling with his Eldeſt Daughter in his Coach, with Two or Three Servants attending him, he was ſet upon at Mid-day by Nine of theſe Religious Ruffians; who having firſt wounded his beloved Daughter, to enhaunce his dying Grief; then hack'd and hew'd him in a Butcherly and Barbarous Manner, till at length they left him Dead on the Spot.

Venerable Cadileſquer, I pray God defend thee from Popular Envy, Malice, and Revenge; from the Wounds given by the Pens of Libellers, and the Tongues of the Spightful. But above all, I pray Heaven Guard thee from being Maſſacred by Religious Aſſaſſines, and Bloody Zealots.

Paris, 17th. of the 9th. Moon,
of the Year 1679.

LETTER

LETTER XI.

To Hebatolla Mir Argun, Superior of the Derviches at Cogni in Natolia.

DOubtleſs, there never was any Creature form'd of Fleſh and Blood, comparable to the Meſſias: No Mortal like the Son of Mary. Jeſus was repleniſh'd with all the Natural Excellencies and Perfections of the Univerſe.

I am not ſo profane or preſumptuous, as to think or ſay any Thing in Contempt of Mahomet; though I take the Liberty to Celebrate the high Praiſes of the WORD Incarnate, the Firſt-Born and moſt Illuſtrious of all Beings, on this Side the Eternal Father. The Holy Ghoſt it ſelf comes behind him.

When the Everlaſting Intellect had, from Indeterminate Ages, lain dreaming on the ſoft and downy Bed of CHAOS, or the Firſt Matter: In the Grand Cabin of uncircumciſed Darkneſs, and envelop'd with the ſhady Curtains of Old, Old NIGHT: When he had tumbl'd, toſs'd and rowl'd from ſide to ſide: When he had ſtretch'd his Endleſs Limbs for Eaſe, to ſeek one Corner of the Infinite Expanſe, where he might abate the Sempiternal Heat of Love. At laſt, he fix'd his Foot upon the cool Idea of this World of ours.

Then ſprang the WORD, from the all-fertile WOMB. The Melancholy ſad Abyſs rejoyc'd; for, in the WORD was Light and Life; which darting through the Eternal Heap of Sluggiſh and unactive MATTER, with Divine Chymiſtry firſt drew an Extract of the pureſt Parts, which form'd the Firmament. Next, roſe the Sun, the Moon and Stars; and then the groſſer Elements, with all their different Productions.

Theſe are the Generations of the Univerſe; when God made the Heavens and the Earth, and the Angels ſtarted out of the Grand Energy, like Volatile Spirits from Balneo Mariæ.

All things Viſible and Inviſible proceed from the WORD, and the moſt excellent of created Beings owe their Original to HIM that was the only Inſtrument by which the Eternal Architect contriv'd and fram'd this vaſt Machine, ſo Incomprehenſible and Glorious.

O Hebatolla! Who can enough admire this mighty Product of the Eternal MIND? And yet the greateſt and moſt Excellent Theatre of Beings, is hid from Mortal Eyes. Therefore leaving thoſe high and lofty Speculations, let us deſcend to the WORD Incarnate, or the BREATH of God walking and converſing on Earth with Men in the Humble Diſguiſe of Fleſh and Blood. The ſame was the Meſſias of the Chriſtians, as the Alcoran in ſeveral Places aſſures us, And the Chriſtian Goſpel

Goſpel of the Eagle confirms it, where it ſays, In the Beginning was the WORD, and the WORD was with God, &c. and the WORD became Fleſh, and pitch'd his Tent among us.

Doubtleſs he was conceived of the Virgin Mary, by that Smell of a Roſe which the Angel Gabriel brought to her from Paradiſe. For, he was not begot by the Will of Man, or through the Luſt of Concupiſcence; but by a ſudden Infuſion of the Divine Virtue. The Power of the Omnipotent overſhadow'd, ſurpriz'd, and raviſh'd the Holy Maid in a Tranſport of Joy; ſhe took the Flower from the Hand of Gabriel, which ſhe had no ſooner ſmelt to, but ſhe was ready to diſſolve and faint away in an Extaſie of Love. But the Angel Cheriſh'd her with comfortable Words, and ſhe became reſign'd to the Will of the All-merciful and Gracious.

At the End of Nine Months Jeſus was Born of her, not after the Manner of other Children. For, as the Book of Myſterious Secrets tells us, He came forth from between her Breaſts, wrapt up in a Mantle of Aromatick Roſes.

The Daughters of Paradiſe came down and waited on the Virgin Mother at the Hour of her unſpeakable Child-birth. They took the Holy Infant in their Arms, and over the Veſture of his Nativity, they put on Garments brought from Eden: Robes of their own Handywork. And then they fed him with the Wine and Milk of Paradiſe. After they had perform'd what was Neceſſary to the Infant-Meſſias, and his Immaculate Mother, the Heavenly Maids return'd to their Bliſsful Seats above, And ſent down Ariel with a Choir of Angels to declare the Birth of Jeſus to this World below, and to celebrate the high Praiſes of God. They were ſeen in the upper Regions of the Air, by certain Shepherds who watch'd their Flocks by Night. Their Voices were alſo heard from afar, chanting aloud the Hymns of Eden, and the Select Anthems of Paradiſe. Great was the aſtoniſhment of thoſe rude and ignorant Mortals; their Eyes were dazl'd at the Luſtre of the Heavenly Troop, and their Ears were Raviſh'd with the Superlative Sweetneſs of the Muſick. Thoſe that were upon the Roads of Judæa, the Caravans of Arabia, Syria and Egypt: The Travellers from Damaſcus, Tyre and Sidon, ſaw the Surprizing Viſion, they were equally ſeiz'd with Wonder and Joy. They heard the Harmonious Tongues of Angels, warbling forth Immortal Melodies. Then their Hearts melted within them, and they proſtrated themſelves on the Earth, and prais'd the moſt High, the King of all Things.

The Fame of ſuch extraordinary Events ſoon ſpread through the Adjacent Regions, and to the utmoſt Borders of the South. The Magi of Perſia made a Pilgrimage to Bethlehem, to Viſit the Infant-Meſſias. They fell down at the Feet of the Holy Babe, preſenting him with Gifts, Gold, Incenſe and Myrrh.

Thus Jeſus grew up, increaſing in Wiſdom, Knowledge and Virtue.

I will

I will not run over the Hiſtory of his Life, having done that already in one of my former Letters to thee. All that I aim at in this Diſpatch, is to teſtifie the Profound Veneration I have for that Moſt Holy Prophet, who was no other than the BREATH and WORD of God Incarnate. It becomes all Good Muſſulmans to ſpeak of him with Honour and Reverence; for he is ſeated on High, and in Paradiſe where are the Approaches to God.

O Hebatolla! pray for Mahmut, that the Entanglements of this Mortal Life may not hinder him from ſeeing with Jeſus and Mahomet, in the Kingdoms of Everlaſting Bliſs.

Paris, 15th. of the 10th. Moon, of the Year 1679.

LETTER XII.

To Kerker Haſſan, Baſſa.

THou requireſt an Account of the preſent State of England, with a Character of their King. In regard there are various Rumours among the Merchants at the Imperial City, of certain Commotions and Rebellious Eſſays of Malecontents in that Iſland.

The Name of the King who reigns there at preſent is Charles II. Eldeſt Son of Char. I. and Heir Apparent of the Britiſh Crowns. For, his Empire conſiſts of Three Kingdoms, which he has in actual Poſſeſſion; beſides many vaſt Territories and Dominions in America; not to inſiſt on his Titular Claim to the Realm of France.

He is a Prince of great Wit and Policy; nor of leſs Courage, where a juſt Occaſion requires the Diſcovery of that Vertue. He underwent innumerable Hardſhips and Miſfortunes, during his Twelve Years Exile from his Native Throne, forc'd to fly into Foreign Countries, by a prevailing Faction of Rebels, Tyrants, and Uſurpers. Of Humour, Debonaire and Amorous; much addicted to Wine and Women; munificent in his Gifts and Rewards to Perſons of Merit, and to thoſe who have the Happineſs to pleaſe him in his Recreations; eſpecially to his his Concubines, who are moſt of them Nobly extracted. By theſe Females he has had ſeveral Sons, who are all Dukes and Peers of the Realm. He is in Peace with all the World Abroad, except the Moors of Saily. Yet this Prince cannot be call'd Happy, in that he is haraſs'd at Home by Domeſtick Seditions, Factions, Plots, and Conſpiracies of his own Subjects.

Here is a Report, That the Roman Catholicks of that Nation have lately attempted to take away the Life of this Monarch: Whilſt others ſay, this Accuſation is forg'd by their Enemies, to render them Odious; And that to this End, they have ſuborn'd Falſe Witneſſes to Swear againſt them. One does not know what to believe among ſo many contrary Rumors. Neither does it much concern us that are Muſſulmans, whether Party of theſe Infidels be Right or Wrong.

This Prince, as I have ſaid before, has ſeveral Nations under his Dominion; and 'tis thought, he ſcarce knows the juſt Extent of his Territories in America. There is a Region in that Continent, inhabited by a People whom they call Tuſcorara's and Doegs. Their Language is the ſame as is ſpoken by the Britiſh or Welſh; A Nation that formerly poſſeſs'd all the Iſland of Great Britain, but were by Degrees driven out of it into a Mountainous Corner of the Iſland, where their Poſterity remain to this Day.

Thoſe Tuſcorara's and Doegs of America, are thought to deſcend from them, being the Poſte-

Poſterity of ſuch as follow'd the Fortune of one Madoc a Britiſh Prince; who, about Five or Six Hundred Years ago being diſcontented at Home, reſolv'd to ſeek Adventures Abroad. Wherefore being provided with Ships, Men, and all other Neceſſaries, he made a Voyage toward the Weſt, over the Atlantick Ocean, not knowing what would be the Event of his Undertaking. However, the Moon had ſcarce Twice compleated Her Voyage through the Zodiack, when an End was put to His on the Sea, by Landing in America; where he planted a Colony of Britains, and then return'd to his Native Country. But ſoon after he put to Sea again, and ſailed directly to the ſame Place. What became of him afterwards is not certainly known. But the Inhabitants of that Province have a Tradition, That he liv'd to a Great Age, and ſaw his People multiply'd to many Thouſands, before he died. For in the Second Voyage he carried over Britiſh Women with him for the Sake of Poſterity. They ſhew his Tomb to this Day; with Beads, Crucifixes, and other Reliques.

It is certain, That when the Spaniards firſt Conquer'd Mexico, they were ſurpriz'd to hear the Inhabitants diſcourſe of a Strange People that formerly came thither in Coraughs, who taught them the Knowledge of God, and of Immortality; inſtructed them alſo in Virtue and Morality, and preſcribed Holy Rites, and Ceremonies of Religion. 'Tis remarkable alſo, what an Indian King ſaid to a Spaniard; viz. "That in Foregoing Ages,

"a

" a Strange People arriv'd there by Sea, to " whom his Anceſtors gave Hoſpitable Enter- " tainment; in regard they found them Men " of Wit and Courage, endued alſo with ma- " ny other Excellencies: But he could give " no Account of their Original or Name." And Montezuma, Emperor of Mexico, told Fernando Cortez, the Spaniſh King's Ambaſſa- dor, and General in thoſe Parts, " That his " own Anceſtors Landed there as Strangers, " being Conducted by a certain Great Man, " who tarried there a while, and then de- " parted, having left a conſiderable Number " of his Followers behind him. After a Year, " he return'd again with a greater Company; " and that from Him the Emperors of Mexico " deriv'd their Pedigree, and his Subjects from " the Reſt." The Britiſh Language is ſo prevalent here, that the very Towns, Bridg- es, Beaſts, Birds, Rivers, Hills, &c. are call- ed by Britiſh or Welſh Names. And a cer- tain Inhabitant of Virginia, a Place Subject to the King of Great Britain) ſtragling not long ago into the Wilderneſs, by Chance, fell a- mongſt a People, who, according to ſome Law or Cuſtom of theirs, condemn'd him to Death: When he in the Hearing of them, made his Prayer to God in the Britiſh Tongue; upon which he was Releas'd.

Who can tell the Various Tranſmigrations of Mortals on Earth, or trace out the True Originals of any People? The whole Globe has ſuffer'd divers Changes; and every par- ticular Nation has had its Metempſychoſis.

What

What grows Obsolete and Antiquated in One Country, becomes a New Discovery in Another. The Houses of the Living are built on the Bones of the Dead. Children lay the Foundation of their Grandeur, in the Ruin of their Fathers. And the Generations to come, will practise this Chimistry on Our Reliques, that are now Living: They will extract their Fortune out of our Ashes.

By the White Stone which Adam brought with him out of Paradise, and which fell by Inheritance to Abraham, Ismael, and his Offspring for ever; That Stone which at this Day lies under the Mosch at Mecca, and grows Black by the Touch of Sinners; I swear, the Arabians are an Aboriginal People, a Nation Establish'd from all Antiquity: a stay'd Race; not canted up and down, hither and thither, by every Caprice of Fortune.

Wherefore be assured, Noble Arab, That besides my particular Obligations, I honour thee for the sake of thy Descent, thy Purify'd Blood, and Pacifick Temper. Wishing for nothing more Ardently, than the Happiness of kissing the Border of thy Vest in this Life, or at least of seeing thee in the Paradise of Perpetual Rest, from whence there are no farther Transmigrations.

Paris, 2d. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year 1682.

LETTER

LETTER XIII.

To the Moſt Magnanimous and Invincible Vizir Azem.

IN the 4th Moon of this Year I ſent thee an Account of the Treaties concluded and publiſh'd between France and the Hollanders, as alſo of a Peace eſtabliſh'd with the German Empire. Now I ſhall acquaint thee, That a like Agreement is publiſh'd with Spain. The two haughty Monarchs ſeem perfectly reconcil'd; and to convince the World that they are ſo really, the King of Spain has Married this King's Daughter.

The Marquis los Balbaſes made his Publick Entry into Paris on the 11th of the 6th Moon, in Quality of Embaſſador Extraordinary from the Catholick King; and his chief Buſineſs was, To teſtifie the ſincere Joy and Satisfaction his Maſter took in the Hopes he had of ſeeing a laſting Peace ſetled, not only between theſe two Crowns, but alſo throughout Europe; That ſo the Chriſtian Princes, whoſe Arms had been hitherto employed againſt one another, to the general Detriment of Chriſtendom, might now be United againſt the Common Enemy, by which he meant the Faithful Oſmans. In order to this, he deſired that the Daughter of France might be given to his Maſter in Marriage, as a Confirmation of the Peace between them.

This

This was ſoon granted him, and the New. was no ſooner arriv'd at Madrid, but the Spaniſh King expreſs'd a more than common Complacency, cauſing their TE DEUM to be publickly ſung to give God Thanks for ſo great a Happineſs. The Streets of Madrid were illuminated alſo with all manner of Fire-works; but the Ceremony of Betrothing was not performed till the 8th Moon. It was done at Fountainbleau, the Court being there at that Time, and the Marquis de los Balbaſes was the King of Spain's Proxy. After which Time, Madamoiſelle, as they call'd her before, held her Rank at Court as the Queen of Spain. And in that Quality She receiv'd the Complements and Addreſſes of the Archbiſhop of Paris, at the Head of His Chapter; as alſo of the Parliament, the Chamber of Accounts, the Court of Aids, the Court of Monies, the Univerſity; and ſo of the Great Council, and the French Academy. Now this Great Princeſs is gone toward Spain to take Poſſeſſion of Her New Royalty; which is no better than a ſplendid Servitude, or glorious Impriſonment during her Life. For the Laws and Cuſtoms concerning Women are as ſeverely obſerved in the Court of Spain, as in any Part of that Country; and the Queen her ſelf is no more exempted from keeping them, than the meaneſt of Her Subjects. There are certain ſet Hours, out of which ſhe cannot ſee ſo much as the King himſelf. For his Time is parcell'd out, and divided between the Service of the Publick, and of his own

Perſonal

Perſonal Neceſſities; the Affairs of State, of Religion, and of Nature. So that the Queen muſt be altogether ſhut up from the Sight of Men, unleſs it be when any Embaſſador has Audience of her, or when She goes to Church, or to ſee the Publick Sport of Bull-baiting, with ſuch like Spectacles; or laſtly, when Her Confeſſor comes to viſit Her. At other Times She is only a Companion of Women, a mere Recluſe, chamber'd up in her own Melancholy Apartment, without the Liberty of ranging the Palace. Whereas in France the Women converſe with Men, and go abroad when they pleaſe, with an unreſtrain'd Freedom. They diſcourſe of State-Matters, and of Religion; they undertake to Cenſure both Civil and Canon Laws, correct Philoſophy, and reform the Morals of the Ancients: In a Word, the French Ladies take a particular Pride in appearing very Learned and Knowing, as if they had been educated in the Academies. They alſo go a Hunting, Hawking, Fiſhing, and Fowling, even as the Men. There is hardly any Game or Exerciſe, Study or Recreation, which is not common to both Sexes. Whereas the Spaniſh Females are kept in Ignorance, and have no more Liberty than Captives. Only, as I ſaid, the Queen is permitted to ſee the Bull-baitings, but it muſt be in Company with her Husband as well as other Ladies.

This celebrated Sport of Baiting or Courſing the Bull is ſo well known to thee, who haſt been an Eye-witneſs of it at Tunis, and other other Cities of Barbary, that I need say no more of it but to observe, That the Spaniards first learn'd it from the Moors, when those Africans dwelt among them, having Conquered that Kingdom.

But to return to the Servile Life which the Queens of Spain lead; They are obliged to go to Bed at a certain precise Stroke of the Clock every Night, with this only Difference, That it is an Hour later in Summer than in Winter. Besides Her, there is no other Married Woman suffer'd to lie in the King's Palace; so that the Queen is attended only by Virgins or Widows. Neither can She her self ever Marry again after the King's Death. And so naturally Jealous are the Spaniards of their Wives, That if the Queen fall into any Disaster, by Chance or Conspiracy, as to be thrown down by her Gennet, even to the breaking of Her Limbs, and Hazard of Her Life, none of her Pages, or any other Man whatsoever, dares to lift her up, or any other Way assist her, nay, not so much as by stopping the Horse, if he should drag her in the Stirrup. Judge now, Magnificent Vizir, whether it be not a desirable Thing for a French Princess to be made Queen of Spain! A Princess bred up in a Court abounding with all sorts of Gentillesses, Gallantines, and Delightful Liberties; must needs think her self in a Monastery or some worse Place of Confinement, after she has been but a Day or Two in the Court of Spain. But Reasons of State supersede all these Inconveniences. 'Tis the the peculiar Unhappineſs of the Princes here in the Weſt, that they Marry for Intereſt more than for Love.

There is another Match going forward between the Dauphine of France, and the Princeſs Ann Marie Victoire, Siſter to the Duke of Bavaria. Theſe Infidels are Uniting their ſcatter'd Strengths and Intereſts. It looks as if they had ſome Secret Deſign againſt the True Believers.

Illuſtrious Prince of the Princes, who ſerve the Grand Signior, I pray that the Empire of the Faithful may be Exalted, and ſtand firm till the Angel of the Cave ſound his Trumpet.

Paris, 10th of the 12th Moon of the Year 1679.

LET-

LETTER XIV.

To the Venerable Mufti.

THat I may give thee a clearer Idea of Rome's Original, it is neceſſary to go farther Backward in Antiquity; and caſt our Eyes on the Ruins of Troy, ſet on Fire by the Greeks, and laid in Aſhes, after a War of Ten Years, to Revenge the Rape of Helena, Wife to Menelaus, whom Paris the Trojan Prince and Gueſt to Menelaus, carried away with him by Force.

From the deplorable Flames of Troy, Antenor and Æneas eſcap'd, and got to Sea: The Former being forced by Diſtreſs of Weather on that Part of Italy which is now under the Dominion of Venice, where he built Padua. The Latter came with a Fleet of Two and Twenty Ships to Latium, now called Campagna di Roma, and St. Peter's Patrimony, being the Eſtate of the Church.

At that Time Latinus the Son of Faunus, or as ſome ſay, of Hercules, Reign'd in Latium, before whom there had been but Four Kings in the Country. Thoſe were Janus, Saturnus, Picus, and Faunus. Whilſt Janus Reign'd, Saturn being expell'd by his Son Jupiter, fled to Italy; where being Hoſpitably receiv'd, he built a Caſtle, calling it after his own Name Saturnia. At length he obtained rained the Kingdom of Latium; which he left to his Son Picus, and he to Faunus.

In his Time Evander ſailed out of Arcadia, and came to Italy, Sixty Years before the Deſtruction of Troy. He built a Town called Pallantium, where afterwards Rome was built. Much about the ſame Time, the Pelagians went out of Theſſaly into Epirus and Dodona firſt; and then paſſing over into Italy, join'd themſelves with the Aboriginal Arcadians, who were got thither before them. Theſe united their Forces, and expell'd the Sicilians from the Country: Who paſſing over to Trinacria, or the Iſland of Three Capes, gave to it the Name of Sicilia, which it retains to this Day. When Evander had been Five Years in Italy, Hercules, with a Company of Greeks, Landing on the ſame Shore, was kindly entertained by him.

At length the Kingdom of Latium fell to Latinus, in whoſe Reign Æneas came thither; and having enter'd into a League with Latinus, marry'd his Daughter Lavinia: From whoſe Name he called a Town which he built in thoſe parts, Lavinium. Then Turnus King of the Rutuli, being angry that Latinus had given his Daughter to a Stranger rather than to him, who was a Native, and to whom ſhe was before betroth'd, invaded his Country. But the Rutuli were overcome in Battel, and both Turnus and Latinus loſt their Lives: So that the Kingdom fell to Æneas. But he enjoy'd it not long: For the Rutuli, at Three Years End came againſt him, under the Conduct duct of Mezentius, King of the Tyrrhenians, now call'd Toscans. And Æneas being kill'd in the Battel, his Son Ascanius took possession of the Kingdom. He having made Peace with Mecentius, and quell'd the Rest of his Enemies; built a City which he call'd Long Alba, the 30*th*. Year from the Building of Lavinium. In this City of Long Alba, there Reign'd after Ascanius Fourteen Kings, even to the Time of Romulus, and the Foundation of Rome. The Fourteenth of these Kings was Amulius, who over-reach'd his Brother Numitor, to whom the Kingdom belong'd by Right of Primogeniture. And to be secure of all Things, he made Sylvia, the only Daughter of Numitor, a Vestal; that he might have no Fear of Numitor's Posterity. Yet Sylvia was got with Child by Some-body, and brought forth Twins, who were called Romulus and Remus. These were expos'd to the wide World by the Command of King Amulius; and were privately Nourish'd by Faustulus, till they came of Years. Then being inform'd of their Birth and Extraction, with the true State of Things, they slew Amulius, and restor'd their Grandfather Numitor to his Kingdom. In the Second Year of whose Reign, Romulus built the City of Rome.

In the Eighteenth Year of his Age, Romulus was saluted King, when he had kill'd his Brother Remus for leaping in Contempt over the Ditch he had made round the City. Thus he Consecrated the Fortifications of the City with his own Blood. But all this while Romulus mulus had Built but the Shadow of a City, since there were no Inhabitants to People and Defend it. However, he quickly pitch'd upon a Method to supply this Defect. There was a Grove hard by, which he made a Sanctuary for all Persons in Distress, and who were willing to make their Fortunes upon Hazard. This was proclaim'd in the Neighbouring Regions: And an Innumerable Multitude of Criminals, Debtors and Malecontents flock'd thither from all Parts; besides Shepherds and other Persons, who only through a Natural Inconstancy sought a Change of Life. So that there was a Gallimaufry of Trojans who came over with Æneas; of Arcadians who follow'd Evander; and of several other Nations; besides the Natives of Tuscany and Latium. Out of these, as out of so many Elements, Romulus extracted the Body of a Commonwealth. But he consider'd withal, that this New Republick could not subsist beyond the Age and Lives of those Men who form'd it; They being without Hopes of Posterity, as having no Women among them To provide for this Inconvenience, they treated with the Bordering People about Marriages; Which being denied them, they had Recourse to Stratagems and Violence. They invited the Sabines and other Neighbours, to come and see some Plays which they promis'd to exhibit in Honour of Neptune.

The Bait took; and Multitudes of both Sexes, especially the Younger Sort, throng'd thither thither to be Spectators of the Roman Novelties. When on a ſudden a certain Signal being given, the Romans leap'd from their Places, and ruſhing among the Strangers, every Man ſeiz'd the Female that beſt pleas'd him, or that firſt came to Hand, and made her his Wife.

This was the Cauſe of ſpeedy Wars: For the Neighbouring People, who had been thus robb'd of their Women, took up Arms to revenge the Injury. But they were routed, put to Flight, and one of their Towns laid Waſte. The Romans alſo took Rich Spoils from them, which they Conſecrated to their Gods.

In the mean Time, the City of Rome was deliver'd into the Hands of the Sabines, by Tarpeia a Virgin: Who, as ſome ſay, was corrupted with Gold by Tatius, the Captain of the Sabines: Whilſt others affirm, That ſhe did it innocently, and with a Deſign to ſave the City, inſtead of betraying it. For ſhe ask'd as a Reward of her ſuppos'd Treaſon, the Shields of the Sabines; thinking that being thus in part diſarm'd, they might eaſily be overcome by the Romans. But they, ſenſible of her Stratagem, promis'd what ſhe demanded; and performed it accordingly; but in ſuch a manner, as plainly diſcover'd their Revenge of an Injury, rather than their Gratitude for a Kindneſs: For they threw their Sheilds ſo thick upon her, that they preſs'd her to Death.

Then

Then entring the City Pell-mell, there commenc'd a Furious Battle between the Romans and the Sabines. The Streets flowed with Blood, till the Wives of the Romans, for whose Sake this War began, came tearing their Hair; and running between the Two Armies, at length brought them to a Truce, and Agreement. Then a Solemn League was made between Romulus and Tatius. And, what is more Wonderful; the Sabines, leaving their Native Seats, came, with all their Wealth, to live in Rome; communicating Part of their Riches to their Sons-in-Law, by Way of Dowry.

The Forces of the Romans being thus increas'd, by the Accession of the Sabines, Romulus applied himself to the Publick Administration, with all Care and Policy. He appointed the Youth to be always in Arms, on Horseback; that they might be constantly upon their Guard, and ready equipp'd against the Surprizes of War: That the Chief Council of the Commonwealth should consist of the Seniors; who were called Fathers for their Authority, and Senators for their Age.

Affairs being thus dispos'd, One Day, when there was a Full Senate, Romulus, being present, was on a sudden taken from their Sight. Some think he was Murder'd by Conspiracy, and cut into Small Pieces by the Senators: Others say, he was Poyson'd. But the General Report was, that he was Deified. Julius Proculus was the Author of this; who taking Notice that there arose a Violent Tempest at the same Instant that Romulus disappear'd, and that the Sun was just then Eclips'd, insinuated to the People, that Romulus was become a God. Nay, he took an Oath, That he saw him in a much more August Form, than whilst he was a Mortal: And that Romulus commanded them to Adore him for a God; affirming, that he was called Quirinus in Heaven; and assuring them, that Rome should conquer the Whole Earth.

Numa Pompilius succeeded Romulus, being invited to the Kingdom by the Romans, who had a Veneration for him on the bare Fame of his Sanctity and Religion. He taught them Holy Rites and Ceremonies, with whatsoever pertain'd to the Worship of the Immortal Gods. He divided the Year into Twelve Months, and appointed the Holy-Days. He ordain'd the Pontifs, Augurs, Salii, with other Ranks of Priests. He gave them the Ancilia and Palladium, which came down from Heaven: And he instituted the Vestal Fire. In a Word, He perswaded them, that whatsoever he taught them, he receiv'd from the Goddess Ægeria. And this wrought so Efficaciously on the Minds of the Rude and Ignorant People, that they came, at Length, to Govern that Empire with Justice and Religion, which they got by Robbery and Oppression.

Prince of the Mufti's, I will reserve the Rest of the Roman History for another Dispatch.

Paris, 9th. of the 2d. Moon, of the Year 1680.

LETTER

LETTER XV.

To William Voſpel, a Recluſe of Auſtria.

THY Laſt Letter appears Magiſterial and Peremptory, like a Summons from the Inquiſition. Thou requireſt an Account of my Faith, and what Idea I have of Religion; ſuſpecting that I am inclin'd to Hereſie. This proceeds from the Freedom I formerly took, in Diſcourſing againſt the Pope's Infallibility, the Newly Canoniz'd Saints, and the Doctrine of No Salvation out of the Roman Church. I ſee, thy Zeal makes thee Peeviſh, and Moroſe. Indeed, it is a Grace that ſoon turns ſowr, if it be not kept in a Clean Heart, and a Temperate Air, free from the Vapours of Superſtition. However, I am willing to ſatisfie thy Demand, as well as I can; and tranſmit My Soul to thee in Effigie.

Tho' we cannot Pourtray Negatives, yet every Picture has its Back-ſide, whereon the Cunning Painter may draw the Reverſe of his Firſt Deſign; or, at leaſt, the Spectator's Imagination may ſupply the Painter's Office, and form Idea's quite contrary to the Original Piece. That thou may'ſt therefore the better comprehend what I am, in Point of Religion and Faith, I will firſt repreſent what I am not.

Conceive then, that I am no Narrow-Soul'd Jew, who confines Salvation to the Lineage of Jacob; and lays an Hereditary Claim to Heaven, becauſe, for the Wickedneſs of his Execrable Race, he is not allow'd to poſſeſs a Foot of Land on Earth: Who, to ſtrengthen his Title, produces the Scheme of his Genealogy; proving that he deſcended, in a Right Line, from one of thoſe Parricides, who murder'd the Meſſias: And, for that Reaſon, vouches, that Paradiſe is entail'd to him, among the reſt of his Brethren, on the Score of his Fore-fathers Merit.

Neither am I a Chriſtian-Hypocrite, who mocks himſelf, and All that ſee him, with his Empty Formalities: Who conſtantly calls upon Jeſus every Morning, to ſanctifie his Reſolution of Sinning againſt God before Night. Who tires out the Patience of the Saints and Angels, with the Crambo of his Vain Repetitions. His Ave Maria's, Ora pro Nobis's, and the reſt of his Religious Jargon. Who goes to Church, that he may get the Whip-hand of the Devil; and, meeting him on Holy Ground, may whiſper Treaſon againſt God Almighty, over his Beeds, or his Prayer-Book; as the Germans do againſt the Emperor, over their Bottles, ſub Roſa, without any Obſervators, or Tell-tales.

I am no Worſhipper of Images, Pictures, Old, Rotten, Worm-eaten Bits of Wood, or other Pretended Relicks of Chriſt, and his Saints. I cannot be perſuaded, that God is well pleas'd to ſee me make a Fool of myſelf, and Trot up and down in Pilgrimage, to Honour Five or Six Sham-Heads of St. John the Baptist; for, in so many several Places do they pretend to shew that one Sacred Relick, which cannot be Multiplied. Neither can I believe the Miraculous Vegetation, and Constant Growth of the Cross; which they pretend to shew Whole and Entire at Cæsarea, whilst it is exhibited also in Millions of Pieces, throughout Christendom. So that there is scarce a Christian Gentleman of any Quality, in Europe, Asia, Africa, or America, who does not boast his Share of this Wonderful Relick. If all which Pieces were put together, they would, probably, make a Thousand such Crosses, as that which is kept in Palestine, for the supposed True Cross whereon Jesus suffer'd Death; and yet, they are all said to be cut off from That. Indeed, Father William, I have no Great Stomach to swallow down these Great Wooden Fables: The very Chips are enough to choak me. But then comes the Milk of the Blessed Virgin to my Relief, with which I may Rinse my Unbelieving Throat, almost in every Parish, or Monastick Church, I come at. For, I dare say, there's More of this to be found in such Places, than an Hungarian Cow would give in Seven Years together. But it Curdles in my Stomach, and makes me Sick. The very Idea of these Child-Absurdities is as Operative, as the Draught of an Antimonial-Cup.

and

It would be too tedious to turn up all the Negative Side of my Religion; and explain, in an Hundred more Particulars, what I am not: Let us now therefore reverse the Tables, and see what I positively am.

And here I am at a Loss for a Compendious Title, or Name, to give my self, saving that of a Christian: For, I know not to what more Particular Predicament I belong. As for the Distinguishing Characteristicks of Papist, Protestant, Lutheran, Calvinist, Socinian, &c. I esteem 'em no otherwise, than the Brands of so many Religious Factions in the Church. And the Particular Title of Roman-Catholick, looks like a Solœcism in Common Sense. I would therefore be taken for a Christian, who neither makes Parties, nor sides with any. But, honouring Jesus as our Common Lord and Master, I endeavour to obey his Laws peaceably, and like a Loyal Subject.

I lay for a Foundation of all my Practice toward Men, this Golden Rule, which He gave us; Not to do that to Another, which I would not have done to my Self. Upon this Basis is built the whole Fabrick of Human Justice. I endeavour to regulate my own Passions, and to bear with those of Others. To be angry with my self, for the least Peccadillo; but to frame Excuses for the Errors and Offences which my Neighbour commits. Here rises the Superstructure of all Vertues, supported by Patience, Hope, and Faith; cemented by Charity, Meekness, and Temperance; and adorn'd all over with Good Works.

In

In a Word, Father William; The Sum and Substance of my Religion consists in these few Rules: To Fear God, Serve my King, Honour and Obey my Parents, Love my Friends, and To do Justice to all Men: Without troubling my self about Empty Formalities, and Needless Ceremonies: Or being concern'd, in what Nation, Climate, or Society of Christians I live; Since God regards not one Man more than another, for these Exterior Differences.

Reverend Monk, Adieu: And, from what I have said, conclude me a Catholick in the Propereſt Sense.

Paris, 26th. of the 2d. Moon, of the Year 1680.

LETTER XVI.

To Murat Baſſa.

THey are extremely Merry here in Paris. Nothing but Dancing, Singing, Roaring, Drinking, Ringing of Bells, making of Bonfires, and other Illuminations, Shooting of Guns, Flirting about Squibs, Crackers, Serpents, Rockets, and all manner of Gunpowder Compoſitions. If it ſhould hold but Two Hours longer, I believe they wou'd be in Danger of running all Mad. This is the Hour of Mid-night, and yet they are in the Height of their Jollity, which is not cuſtomary in theſe Weſtern Parts, tho no Wonder in the Eaſt. I wiſh there were an Army of Ottomans near us; I'd give 'em the Signal, and ſhew them the Way, when and how to enter the Town, and take Poſſeſſion of the Richeſt City in France: For they ſuſpect Nothing, and the very Guards themſelves are all drunk. 'Twere an eaſie Thing to Surprize 'em, and take 'em Napping. But there is a Time and a Chance for all Things under the Moon: And this is their lucky Seaſon.

Would'ſt thou know the Occaſion of all this Joy and Security? 'Tis double; On one Side the News comes rowling from Spain of the New Queen found there; and on the other Hand, they are tranſported with the Mar-

Marriage of Monſeigneur the Dauphine of France with the Princeſs Ann Marie Victoire, Siſter to the Duke of Bavaria.

I mention'd the Advances were made in Order to this Match, the latter End of the foregoing Year. The ſame was compleated in all its Ceremonies on this very Day.

The French King parted from Verſailles about the beginning of this Moon, with the Dauphin, his Son, to meet the Princeſs. Their firſt Interview was at a Place called Vitry. As ſoon as the Dauphineſs (for ſo we muſt call her now) ſaw the King alight from his Horſe, ſhe leap'd out of her Coach, and threw her ſelf upon her Knees. But he ſoon rais'd and embrac'd her with Royal Careſſes, expreſſing the mighty Joy he felt at this firſt Sight of her, on whom reſted the Hopes of France, for Heirs to the Crown. Then he preſented the Dauphin to Her, who alſo was not wanting on his Part to diſcover the Sentiments he had for a Princeſs of ſo great Birth, Merits, Wit and Vertue.

The Queen did not ſee her Daughter-in-law till they came to Chalons; and there ſhe careſſed her with all Tenderneſs imaginable, in outward Appearance. But God knows what's in the Hearts of theſe Royal Souls, or how long their Friendſhip may laſt.

The Ceremony of the Eſpouſals was performed at that Town, Yeſterday, by the Cardinal of Bouillon, Grand Almoner of France, in the Chapel of the Biſhop's Palace: And to Day, as I have ſaid, he finiſh'd the whole

Buſineſs in the Temple of the Virgin Mary, the Chief Cathedral of this City; in the Preſence of the King and Queen, with divers Lords and Ladies of the Court. There were other Biſhops to aſſiſt him, whoſe Titles I have forgot: But I think they were of Orleans and Condom. This laſt makes a conſiderable Figure in the Kingdom, and is created First Almoner to Madam the Dauphineſs. He appears very Zealous in Converting the Huguenots; and I have a great deal more to ſay of him, than I have Time to Write now.

Aſſure thy ſelf, That I cheriſh a profound Reſpect for thee; and that as I never was ſo I never will be defective or tardy in ſending thee thy Proportion of Weſtern Intelligence: For I muſt divide it among the Baſſa's and other Miniſters of the Port.

Reſt contented with thy Share, and in the Name of God Farewel.

Paris, 8th. of the 3d. Moon,
of the Year 1680.

LET.

LETTERS

Writ by

A Spy at PARIS.

VOL. VIII.

BOOK IV.

LETTER I.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

BY the Mosch of Sultan Zub, I swear, these petty Republicks of the Franks are not worth a Mussulman's Thought. However, to satisfie thy Curious and Inquisitive ſitive Genius, I will ſay ſomething of each, as briefly and compendiouſly as I can.

In my Two laſt, I diſcours'd of the United Netherlands, and the Swiß Cantons. Now I will ferry thee over the Leman Lake, and Land thee in Geneva, the Mother, Nurſe, and Center of the Calviniſts. Theſe are a ſort of Proteſtants, diſſenting from the Opinions of Luther and his Aſſociates; who was the Firſt Author of what they call the Reformation here in Europe.

The City of Geneva is very Ancient; and was not Young in the Time of Julius Cæſar, as appears by his Commentaries; where he makes mention of its being ſeated on the River Rhoſne, juſt at the Entrance of the Leman Lake. It ſtands very pleaſantly, and has a fertile Soil round about it: where Ceres ſtrives to out-do Bacchus in her Liberalities. For though there be very good Vineyards in theſe Parts, yet not in ſo great Plenty, as to match the Abundance of Corn, Pulſe, Hay, Oats, Melons, and all manner of Herbs and Fruits that the Climate uſually bears.

The Air is pure and wholſome; the Winters not ſo cold as in Germany, nor the Summers ſo hot as in ſome Parts of France.

The People are generally Corpulent, Moroſe, Inhoſpitable to Strangers, eſpecially to thoſe of the Roman Church, whom they always ſuſpect as Spies. They are very Frugal, Continent, and Sober. And above all Things they affect a ſingular Gravity in their Carriage and Garb.

As

As for Riches, they can boast but little; and were it not for their Art in making Silks, and printing Books, of which infinite Quantities and Numbers are Exported to other Nations, this Commonwealth cou'd not support its own Charges.

Indeed their Military Strength is considerable for Bigness of the Place: the City being fenc'd by Nature, as well as Art, with impregnable Fortifications. They keep an exquisite Watch on the Walls; and at the Gates: Neither can any Foreigner have Entrance or Lodging there, without undergoing a severe Scrutiny. They have a Magazine in the City, furnish'd with all sorts of Arms, and with every Thing that is necessary to sustain a long Siege. Add to this, the Friendship and Patronage of the French Kings, who have for many Years sheltered this little Republick from the Invasions and Encroachments of the Dukes of Savoy, who claim a Title to it.

There were formerly Three Forts near the Town, in the Possession of the Savoyards, which much annoy'd the Inhabitants, and threaten'd the Ruin of the City it self with the Shot of great Brass Ordnance, which were plac'd there for that Purpose. But Henry IV. of France Took it from the Duke of Savoy, and Demolish'd it, in the Year 1600. He also caus'd another to be pull'd down, which equally endamag'd the Opposite side of the City. And a Third the Inhabitants themselves laid even with the Ground, being aided by the French.

If

If thou would'ſt know, by what Title the Dukes of Savoy pretend a Right to Geneva; I'll tell thee in few Words. In former Times there was a Feud between the Counts of Geneva, and her Biſhops, about the Government, each claiming it as his Due. At length a certain Biſhop procur'd the Principality of Geneva, from Frederic I. Emperor of Germany. This occaſion'd a Civil War between him and the Count of Geneva, which laſting many Years, and conſuming the Money and Forces of the Town; the Inhabitants, with the Conſent of the Biſhop, implor'd the Protection of the Count of Savoy. He rais'd an Army, and march'd againſt the Count of Geneva; taking many Towns and Fortreſſes from him, which belong'd to the Republick. Then he advanc'd with the Army near to the Walls of Geneva, more like an Enemy than a Friend to the Biſhop and People. For not content with his new Conqueſts, he demanded as much Money as wou'd quit the Charges he had been at in this Expedition. The Biſhop repreſented to him, "That he ought "to be content with thoſe Places he had "won, and that they ſhould be acknowledg'd "Feudatories of Savoy. But this did not ſatisfie the greedy Count, who threaten'd the City, if they wou'd not reimburſe him with Money. The Inhabitants being poor, and fearing worſe Conſequences, ſhou'd they provoke this Prince too far, at laſt agreed with him, "That he ſhou'd poſſeſs as much Right "in the City, as the Counts of Geneva had

"done

" done before this War begun. And this was done by way of Pledge or Mortgage. The Savoyard therefore entring the City with his Forces, oppreſſed the Inhabitants with cruel Tyranny. So that being provok'd to deſperate Courſes, they conſpir'd together, and choſe rather to call back the Count of Geneva to his Native Poſſeſſion, from which he had been violently caſt out by the Uſurping Biſhop, than to ſubmit to a Foreign Juriſdiction, which began ſo early to afflict them with inſupportable Calamities.

But this, inſtead of a Remedy, prov'd an Aggravation of their Misfortunes. For the Count of Geneva, coming againſt him of Savoy, with ſome Forces, was overcome in Battel, and ſo Geneva was reduc'd to greater Streights than before. For the Savoyards entring the Houſes of the Citizens, drew the Conſpirators from their lurking Holes, and kill'd them, committing a Thouſand other Inſolencies againſt the Inhabitants. Nor did this ceaſe, till the whole Race of the Counts of Geneva was quite extinct. Then Amadeus, the Count of Savoy, finding that ſtill the Biſhop of Geneva gave him as much Trouble as the Counts had done before, obtain'd of the Emperor Charles IV. to be made Vicar of the Empire in his Provinces; thinking by the Greatneſs of this Title and Authority to ſuppreſs the Power of the Biſhop. But the Eccleſiaſtick Prince ſo ſtrongly oppoſed the Seculars, That he maintain'd his own Juriſdiction, and the Liberty of the People, till the Time of

Ama-

Amadeus VIII. who was his Succeſſor, and the Firſt who was created Duke of Savoy, being afterwards Elected to the Papacy, which he enjoy'd by the Name of Felix. Before his Aſſumption to this Height of Eccleſiaſtick Dignity, he had obtain'd of Pope Martin, the Juriſdiction of Geneva in Temporal Matters. But he found as much trouble in it, as his Predeceſſors had done before. And ſo have all his Succeſſors, to this very Day. For, though they boaſt of the Title, yet they have no more Authority in the Town than the King of Bantam.

This City is govern'd by a Syndick and Twenty Five Senators, who meet every Day to conſult about the Affairs of the Commonwealth, and to decide all Cauſes, whether Criminal or Civil.

It is their Chief Intereſt to hold a good Correſpondence with France, without whoſe Protection they would ſuffer many Injuries. Therefore the better ſort, as it were by way of Flattery and Complaiſance, dreſs themſelves after the French Faſhions, and make uſe of that Language, though imperfectly, in all their Letters, and Converſation. But the Vernacular is the ſame with that of Savoy.

Accompliſh'd Miniſter, in Regard thou complaineſt of the Length of my Letters, I will hereafter be more conciſe; and refreſh thee often with Brief Accounts of the States in Europe, yet remaining to be ſpoke of.

In

In the mean time, think of doing poor Mahmut ſome kind Office in the Divan: For I am macerated with Zeal, Care, Sickneſs, and Old Age. Surely I cannot live much longer, or rather, I ſhall not be much longer a dying. For this Mortal Life is but Death in Maſquerade.

Paris, 4th. of the 6th. Moon, of the Year 1680.

LET-

LETTER II.

To Achmet Baſſa.

SOme Maxims of State or Religion, which you pleaſe, for they are much one, have mov'd the King of France to publiſh a Decree, which they call a Regulation. Whereby he reſtrains the Huguenots from certain Liberties and Privileges which they enjoy'd before.

If thou would'ſt know the Character of theſe Huguenots, I will give it thee as well as I can: not perfect and full, thou may'ſt ſwear, but true as far as it goes.

In the firſt Place, therefore, it is neceſſary for thee to know, That about Two Hundred Years paſt, a certain Fryar, or Devich in our Style, nam'd Martin Luther, being offended at his Lord and Maſter the Pope, or Biſhop of Rome, ſet up for himſelf, as the only Preacher, Doctor, Reformer, and Apoſtle of that Age. He drew Abundance of People after him, and not a few Princes and Nobles. The known ſcandalous Vices of the Roman Clergy on one ſide, and the Epidemical Inclination which Mortals have for Novelty on the other, facilitated his Innovation. He grew famous in Wirtemberg, Ausburgh, and other Parts of Germany, where he liv'd. In a Word, his New Doctrines were like an Earthquake to the whole Empire. He ſtagger'd many many Wise and Honest Men, and overthrew whole Thousands of Fools and Knaves.

Among the Rest of the Last Gange, one Calvin embrac'd Luther's Tenets, a very Learned Man, and of great Abilities; but very partial, revengeful, and austere in his Humour. At first he was very Zealous and Uniform in all Things, according to the Model of his Upstart Master. But upon some Dispute between them, he takes Snuff, flings off the Yoke, and revolts from his New Director. There have been several such Hotheaded Sparks since that Time, every one aspiring at the Character of an Apostle or Prophet: Zuinglius, Oecolampadius, Melancthon, Bucer, Beza, and a Rabble of other New Lights and Saviours of the World.

Now the Huguenots, as I am inform'd, are the Disciples of Calvin; so is the Commonwealth of Geneva; with some Parts of Switzerland, Holland, and the Country of the Grisons. As for England, Swedeland, Denmark, Norway, Saxony, Brandenburg, and Hess-Cassel, they are all Lutherans. Saving that the English, whom I first mention'd, have made Twelve several Alterations in their Religion, since the Days of Luther.

It is observable of that Nation, that they are flexible, and receptive of any Foreign Impression. The French say, The English would as soon embrace Mahometanism as any other Religion, could ye but once get the length of their Foot. (This is an English Adage.) 'Tis certain they are a very Mutable, Inconstant, Rebel-Rebellious People. They ſurfeit on the Plenty which Nature has giv'n 'em. Which makes them ſtill uneaſie, diſcontented, and delicate. They ſpew out their own Happineſs, to eaſe the Stomach of that intemperate Nation, and prepare it for Foreign Sham-Banquets of Magicians. Of Old they were Brave, and ſtedfaſt to their Principles: Then their Renown was ſpread far and wide. When a Baronet of England (as 'tis recorded in the Hiſtories of France, which muſt be impartial in this Point) kill'd Five and Twenty French-men, among whom were Two Marquiſes, Four Knights, and Nine Nobles of the Leſſer Order.

But now they have quite loſt their ancient Fame and Valour. They are corrupted with a thouſand Debaucheries. They are as fickle as the Wind, and as moveable as the Duſt it raiſes in the Streets. In fine, They are nothing at all, but the Obloquy and Scorn of other Nations.

But to return to the French Huguenots, and Calvin their Maſter. I was once acquainted with a very ancient Dervich or Fryar, when I firſt came to Paris, who confidently affirm'd, That he had often heard his own Father ſay, "That Calvin, in his Preſence, once thruſt "his Right-Hand into the Fire, wiſhing it "had been burn'd to Aſhes when it directed "his Pen in writing againſt the Real Preſence "of the Body of Jeſus the Meſſias, in the Sa- "crament of the Altar. But ſince he had writ "that fatal Treatiſe, he cou'd do no leſs in "Honour than defend it to the laſt. And yet this is one of the Cardinal and moſt important Points in Controverſie between the Catholicks and the Huguenots; whereon the whole Body of Religion depends, and turn'd to the Right-Hand or to the Left. So that in the main, the Huguenots have no other Ground for their Separation from the Roman Church, than the confeſs'd Obſtinacy of their Ringleader. And I tell thee plainly, they are the Diſciples of his Humour, as well as of his Doctrins. There is not ſuch a pertinacious ſort of People living; ſo ſingular, partial, ſelf-conceited, wilful and incorrigible. We muſt always except out of this Character, ſome of the Gentry, moſt of the Nobles, and all the Beaux Eſprits of that Profeſſion, as they call 'em; that is, the Men of Senſe. For, they deſpiſe the Bigotry of their Brethren, and go to their Publick Aſſemblies, rather in Complaiſance to their Parents, Friends, and Kindred, or for the ſake of Intereſt, than out of any real Regards for a Religion of ſo young a Date, ſo mean and contemptible a Figure, and which is ſhut up within ſuch narrow Limits.

yet

They are, in ſhort, ſo bad, or at leaſt grown ſo odious at the Court, That the King is quite Angry with 'em, and reſolved to extirpate them and their New-fangl'd Hereſie, out of the Nation. In order to this, he proceeds gradually, like a Politician; being not willing to tempt them to a general Revolt, by provoking the whole Party at once, and rendring 'em deſperate. No, no, he's cunninger than to draw a Civil War upon on himself and his Kingdom, by giving so loud an Alarm, to a People who are very Rich, Potent, and whose Interest is much interwoven with that of the Catholicks. I believe, to speak modestly, they are able to keep Fifty Thousand Men of Arms in Pay, as they can contrive the Business among themselves. Therefore knowing, that though the Preachers all profess the same Religion, yet every one is not so zealous as another in defending and propagating it; he has made such a Politick Decree, as only touches those particular Mollahs (or Ministers as they call them here) who are convicted of Proselyting any Catholick to their Heresie. Whereby also is threaten'd to the Catholicks themselves who shall forsake the Religion of their Fathers; perpetual Banishment, the Loss of their Right Hand, which was lifted up in their Abjuration, and other grievous Penalties.

In the mean Time, the Bishops and inferiour Priests are very industrious to confirm the Catholicks in their Native Faith and Obedience, and to Convert the Huguenots from their supposed Errors. I call them supposed Errors, because it is much one to us that are Mussulmans and Followers of Mahomet, whether one Party of the Nazarenes be in the right of it, or t'other. Only we must regard the Interest of the Ottoman Empire. They are all equally Hereticks and Infidels, so long as they are Enemies to the Messenger of God, the Seal of the Prophets.

He

He that is the most Vigorous, and takes the greatest Pains in Converting the Huguenots, is the Bishop of Meaux; a Man of prodigious Eloquence, Sense, and Wit. This Age does not afford his Equal, in the Perfections of the Mind and Intellect: He is profoundly Learned, a Man of Universal Reading, skilful in most Languages: an Oracle in Philosophy, Astronomy, and the other Sciences of Nature. He is the Laureat among the Poets, the Crown of Orators; the very Encyclopedia of Human Knowledge.

'Tis true, he is very zealous for the Authority and infallible Veracity of the Roman Church. But, he asserts these Things with so much Grace and Moderation; with such a Masculine Reason, and with all the Symptoms of a Sincere Piety; That I who regard no one Sect of the Franks more than another, cannot but admire the Natural Abilities and Perfections of his Soul. He's Learned, as Abdel Melec, Muli Omar, at Fez; Pious, as Hebatolla Mir Argun, at Cogni in Natolia; Abstinent, as Mohammed, in Arabia; Holy, as the abstracted Mirmadoline, Santone of the Vale of Sidon. A Man every Ways accomplish'd, and inspir'd with Divine Munificences.

O Great Bassa, accuse me not for this Eulogy of a Christian. But let Thou and I, and all True Believers, profit by the best Examples, wherever, or in whatsoever Religion we find 'em, whether they be Giaurs or Mussulmans.

Paris, 13th of the 8th Moon, of the Year 1680.

LET-

LETTER III.

To the Venerable Mufti.

SO long as thou doſt not complain of my too frequent Letters, I ſhall not murmur at the Pains of writing them. 'Tis a Pleaſure thus to revolve the Hiſtories of paſt Ages. And whilſt I with my own Hand conſign them to Paper, they adhere the faſter to my Memory. I ſhou'd not be ſorry, if I were to ſpend the Remainder of my Days in Epitomizing all the Authentick Records and Memoirs that are extant in the World. Such an Exerciſe would be a conſtant Relief of Melancholy by lighting Abundance of Flambeaux and Lamps in the Soul, to diſperſe the Miſts and Darkneſs which naturally make it ſad. I ended my laſt Letter with the Reign of Numa Pompilius over the Romans. Who, as if he had made the Kingdom Hereditary only to Men of Virtue, was no ſooner dead, but the People elected Tullus Hoſtilius for their King; in Conſideration of his excellent Endowments and Merits.

He inſtructed the Romans in a more perfect Military Diſcipline, and improv'd the Art of War. So that having train'd up the Youth to a wonderful Promptneſs and Skill in Arms, he ventur'd to ſend a Defiance to the Albans, and invade their Territories, the

they

they were a ſtout People, and who had Lorded it a long Time in Italy. But when many Battels had been Fought between them, with equal Damage to both ſides; at length to put an End to the War, and make the Loſſes of the Vanquiſhed more Compendious, they mutually agreed to decide the Victory by a Combat of Three Brothers on one ſide, againſt as many on the other. Thoſe on the Roman part were call'd Horatii; the Alban Brothers, Curiatii.

The Fight was Fair and Dubious, and had an Admirable Event: For all the Three Curiatii were Wounded, and Two of the Horatii Killed. So that it ſeemed difficult to determine which had the Advantage; One ſound and untouch'd Roman, or Three faint and weaken'd Albans: However, the ſurviving Horatius not preſuming too much on his own Strength againſt ſuch an Unequal Number of Enemies, added Policy to his Courage, and made uſe of this Stratagem:

He counterfeited a Flight, that ſo he might ſeparate his Adverſaries, and Engage with them Singly, one after another, according as they overtook him. His Plot took, and he Vanquiſh'd all Three. But he ſullied his Victory with the Blood of his Siſter; whom at his return he killed, becauſe ſhe met him not with Joy and Triumph, but with Grief and Tears, for the Loſs of her Spouſe, who was one of the Three Alban-Brethren. He was call'd in queſtion for the Bloody Fact: But his Merit ſuperſeded his Crime; and the Fact which would at another time have cut him his Head, now ſerved but to Augment his Glory.

Not long after this, there broke out a War between the Romans and the Fidenates, a People of Latium, or Toſcany. The Albans, according to their late League, were obliged to Aid the Romans in their Wars. Wherefore they ſent Auxiliary Forces, under the Command of Metius Tufetius. But this Captain prov'd Treacherous: For, juſt as the Two Armies were going to enter into Battel, he withdrew his Albans to the Top of an Hill, where they ſtood Neuters, to behold the Fortune of the Fight, that ſo they might joyn the Strongeſt Party. Which, when Tullus perceiv'd, he politickly cried out, with a Loud Voice, in the Hearing of both Armies, That Metius had done this by his Command. Then the Romans took Courage, and their Enemies being ſtruck with Terrour, were ſoon Routed, and Overcome. After which, the Roman King cauſed the Traytor Metius Tufetius to be tied with Cords to Two Chariots, and torn in Pieces by Wild Horſes. He alſo ruin'd, and quite demoliſh'd Alba; not looking on that City now, as the Patent, but the Rival of Rome. However, he firſt tranſported to Rome all the Riches of Alba, with the Inhabitants; that ſo that City might not ſeem to periſh, but only to remove its Situation, and be Incorporated with Rome.

Ancus Marcius ſucceeded Tullus Hoſtilius, being the Grandchild of Numa, by his Daughter. He inherited his Qualities alſo, as well as his Blood. He encompaſs'd the City with Walls, and joyn'd the Banks of Tyber, which ran through the Middle of it, with a Bridge. He likewiſe built the Port Oſtia, juſt by the Mouth of the River, where it flows into the Sea; planting there a Colony of Romans, as if he had then Preſag'd what afterwards came to paſs; That the Merchandizes of the World ſhould be brought in thither, as into the Maritime Store-houſe of the City deſtin'd to conquer all Things.

Him ſucceeded Tarquinius, afterwards ſurnam'd Priſcus. He was of Foreign Extraction, yet obtain'd the Sovereignty by his Elegance and Wit. For, being the Son of Lucumo, a Corinthian, who abandon'd his Country, and fled into Toſcany, where he was made King; this Tarquinius, poliſhing his Greek Nature with Italian Arts, inſinuated ſo far with the Romans, that they choſe him for their King. He augmented the Number of Senators, and added Three Hundred Soldiers to the Troops that were already eſtabliſh'd: Which was all he durſt do, in Regard Attius Navius, an Augur, in High Requeſt among the Romans, had forbid any greater Number to be added. Theſe Augurs were a ſort of Diviners, who foretold Things to come, from the Chirping, Flying, Feeding, and other Actions of Birds. Tarquinius, one Day, ask'd this Attius Navius, Whether the Thing could poſſibly be done, which he had then thought upon? The Augur consulting his Art, answer'd, It might be done. Then said the King, I was considering, whether I could cut this Whet-stone with a Razor. Ye you may; replied Attius. And the King did it. From that Time, the College of Augurs, first Founded by Romulus, was had in Sacred Esteem by the Romans. I should have called them the Triumvirate of Augurs; for, there were but Three at first, one out of every Tribe. But Servius Tullius, the next King, added a Fourth. These were all Noble. But afterwards, they were increas'd to Nine, and last of all, to Fifteen, in the Dictatorship of Silla.

To return to Tarquinius: He was no less prosperous in War, than in Peace; for, he subdued Twelve Cities of the Toscans, with the Territories belonging to them. He invented Robes, and Ensigns of State; the Ivory-Seats of Chariots, wherein the Senators were carried to the Council; the Gold-Rings, and Magnificent Horse-Trappings, which were given to the Roman Knights, as Badges of Honour: Also, the Purple and Scarlet Robes; the Triumphal Chariot of Gold, the Painted Phrygian Robe, worn by a Victorious General, when he celebrated a Triumph. With many other Ornaments, and Publick Decorations, to set forth the Majesty and Grandeur of the Roman State.

Tarquinius being mortally wounded, his Wife Tanaquil persuaded the People, that all was well with him; that his Wounds were not dangerous; that he was only laid in a Slumber,

ber, and that in a little Time they ſhould ſee him Well again: In the Mean while, ſhe ſaid, it was his Will and Pleaſure, that they ſhould obey Servius Tullius, a Favourite of hers; who would adminiſter Juſtice, and govern the People wiſely, during the King's Illneſs.

This Servius Tullius was the Son of a Prince in Latium; who being kill'd in a Battel with the Romans, his Wife was carried Captive to Rome; and being preſented to Queen Tanaquil, liv'd free from Servitude, under her Protection: And, being with Child, was deliver'd of Servius Tullius, in Tanaquil's Palace. The Queen took a Singular Fancy to the Noble Infant, and gave him Royal Education; preſaging, from a Flame which ſhe ſaw environing his Head, that he would be a Famous Man in Time. 'Twas for this Reaſon, ſhe perſuaded the People to receive him as the King's Subſtitute, or Deputy, for a While: Not doubting, but that after they had taſted the Sweetneſs of his Government, and the Death of Tarquin ſhould be known, they would eaſily ſubmit to him, as Tarquin's Succeſſor. Her Stratagem had its deſir'd Effect: For, Servius Tullius improv'd his Time ſo well in pleaſing the People, that the Kingdom, which he obtain'd by Craft, was acknowledg'd by all, as due to his Merits and Vertues. He firſt brought the People of Rome under an Aſſeſſment, whereby every Man's Eſtate was valu'd: He divided them into Claſſes, Wards, and Colleges. And the Commonwealth was brought into ſuch Order, by the Exquisite Policy of this Wise King, that the Difference of every Man's Patrimony, Dignity, Age, Trade, and Office, was Regist'red in Publick Tables; Which render'd the Oeconomy of this Great State as regular and easie, as that of a Private Family, or House.

The Last of all the Kings, was Tarquinius Surnam'd The Proud, for the Morose and Disdainful Haughtiness of his Temper. He married the Daughter of Servius Tullius, in Hopes of Succeeding in the Kingdom. But he not having Patience to wait for the Natural Death of his Father-in-Law, hired Ruffians to Murder him, and then seiz'd upon the Kingdom by Violence. Neither did he govern the State with less Wickedness and Cruelty, than that by which he obtain'd it: For, he denied Burial to his Murder'd Father-in-Law; Saying, That he deserv'd not Better Usage than Romulus, who perish'd without a Sepulchre. He also slew the Chiefs of the Nobles, whom he Suspected to be of Servius's Interest. And his Wife Tullia was as bad as he: For, as soon as she had saluted her Husband by the Title of King, she caus'd her self to be driven in a Chariot, over the Dead Carcase of her Father. Both of them exercis'd Great Cruelty, and massacred many of the Senators. But the Pride of Tarquin was intolerable to all. Till at Length, when he had spent enough of his Rage at Home, he turn'd it against his Foreign Enemies Abroad; and took many Strong Towns in Latium. However, Notwithstanding ing all his Vices, he gave the World this Proof of his Piety; That out of the Spoils which he took from his Enemies, he rais'd Mony, and finish'd therewith the Temple of Jupiter in the Capitol, which his Father, Tarquinius Priscus, had begun. The Story says, That, as they were Laying the Foundations of this Temple, they found the Head of a Man; which they interpreted as a Good Omen, That Rome should be the Seat of a Vast Empire, and Mistress of the whole Earth; as it afterwards came to pass.

The People of Rome bore with the Pride of Tarquin, but would not bear with the Lust and Tyranny of his Sons; one of which ravish'd Lucretia, a Woman of Admirable Beauty and Vertue. The Chaste Matron expiated the Disgrace, by Stabbing her self: And, as she breath'd her Last, she charg'd Brutus and Collatinus, Two Princes, to revenge her Cause. Wherefore they stir'd up the People to assert their Liberty, and abrogate the Kingly Government: Which was as readily done, as mention'd. And here was an End put to the Tyranny of Kings.

In my Next I will relate the Increase and Progress of the Roman State, under the Government of Consuls, and Emperors: Which will comprehend the most Memorable Events of Peace and War, even to the Catastrophe of the Empire.

Paris, 22d of the 9th Moon,
of the Year 1680.

LETTER IV.

To Orchan Çabet, Student in the Sciences, and Penſioner to the Sultan.

ABout the Soul: That's the Thought I'm upon. That's the Word I'm going to write. Whether it ſhall, after the grand Divorce from the Body, go to Heaven or Hell (as they are commonly repreſented) or whether it ſhall not rather be more happily or miſerably diſpos'd of: Or, if leſs, yet at leaſt in a more proportionate Order of Eternal Juſtice. Methinks, I taſte and feel the Original Meaning of the Word Nemeſis: Which, though it paſs for Primitive Greek among the moſt Learned of the Weſtern Scholars, yet I can prove it to be a Phœnician Derivative from the Chineſe. And I can demonſtrate likewiſe, That it is full of Myſteries.

Every Syllable of it, is Sacred and Myſterious, as the Mene Mene, Tekel Upharſin, of Beltſchatzar. Numeravit, Numeravit, Appendit, Diviſit. That's the Senſe of it. So are Words become the Eternal Mind.

The very Letters which compoſe Words (I ſhould have ſaid the Syllables firſt, in good Manners) are all the Products of the Mathe-

maticks;

*matick*s; I mean, of the Original Science; not of thoſe paultry Fragments, Scraps, and Offals, that are taught in Schools and Academies: Such as the Elements of Euclid, the Rudiments of Algebra, Benazer, Ki-ſlud, or any other Learned Pen. There's ſomething more within the Verge of Human Science, than what has been divulg'd hitherto in the World; or at leaſt, more than what is now extant, and has eſcap'd the Ruin of Fires, Floods, Earthquakes, and the Jaws of all-devouring Time.

Learned Orchan, I will not be prolix: but anſwer me one Queſtion about the Soul. Can'ſt thou believe the Stories of the Prieſts concerning Purgatory, Hell, and the two other Limbo's? Haſt thou Faith enough to ſwallow the ridiculous Figments of the Book entitled Speculum Exemplorum; a Tract ſo highly celebrated and magnified among the Superſtitious Nazarenes of the Roman Church? Believe me, theſe Doctrins are the pure Effects of Anthropomorphiſm, or the Religion of thoſe who repreſent God under the Form of a Mortal Man. For they, poor Souls, are ſo incapable of riſing above this groſs and Earthly Thought, that they even preſume to draw and paint the Effigies of the Eternal Divinity, which has no Figure or Reſemblance. They pourtray him like a very Old Man, with Gray Hairs on his Head and Beard; and then they ſet the Idol up in Temples, to be ador'd. The rude and ignorant Vulgar dare not contradict their Guides, whom they revere as Oracles. They bow before the ſacred Vanity, paying Divine Honours to the Work of Human Art. Thus Superſtition and Error ſpread abroad, and take firm Root in the World. From hence the duller Part of Men derive their Notions of Man's Soul.

They cannot conceive how it ſhou'd ſubſiſt after Death, without juſt ſuch a Body of Flesh and Blood, as it has in this Life: And yet they contradict that very Opinion, by aſſerting, that it cannot have ſuch a Body till the General Reſurrection; whilſt at the ſame time they aſſert, That it ſhall enjoy all the Pleaſures, or ſuffer all the Pains, which none but Corporeal Beings are capable of. Doubleſs, the Infidels are involv'd in a Labyrinth of Hereſies.

We Mortals know not the State of Departed Souls; whether they go upwards, or downwards; to the Eaſt or Weſt, North or South. We are wholly ignorant of the Climates wherein the Bleſſed and the Damn'd are ſeparately diſpos'd of. Perhaps the Doctrine of Tranſmigration, taught by Pythagoras, Empedocles, and all the Eaſtern Indians, may be true: From which Belief, few Muſſulmans do diſſent. Or it may be, we ſhall, as the Gentile Poets wrote myſteriouſly, fall into Lethe's Lake, into the Region of Forgetfulneſs, where we ſhall be, as though we'd never been. This is the Souls unactive State, if any ſuch there be in Nature for an Incorporeal Spirit. And then the Millenaries or Chi-

Chiliasts among the Christians may be much i'th' Right on't, who taught the Sleep of the Soul until the Resurrection. Indeed, in my Opinion, this Life it self, wherein we think our selves so much Awake; to Hear, See, Taste, Smell, Feel, and Revel in the Pleasures of the Universe; is but a Dream or Trance: A grand Deliquium of the Soul: The Universal Apoplexy of Human Nature. For the true Genuine Life is only to be found Above, in the pure Regions of the Air, or more refined Skies: or if not there, at least and lowest Rate, in the superlative Heights beyond the Stars, remote from narrow and polluted Matter, where perfect Essences do bask Eternally in the Grand Halo of the Godhead; or shroud and cool themselves under the shady Trees of Paradise, whose Roots spring from the deep Abysses of Eternity; and are wash'd by Springs and Streams warbling along the verdant Banks of sweet Chioschi, and elegant Borders of the Groves in Eden.

Such are the Pleasures, which God, the Fountain of Munificence, is pleased to treat his Creatures with. He studies to Regale his Favourites, with infinite Beatitudes.

There are in Paradise, Rivers, broad and long as the Danube, Volga, Niger, Nilus, or any other noted Current upon Earth. Their Streams run all with Honey, Wine, and Milk, or more delicious Liquors, if any such there be.

They are not deep, that timorous Men need fear to Drown themselves; yet deep enough enough for foreign Earthly Souls to ſwim in Everlaſting Pleaſures. Moreover, thou knoweſt the Saying of the Prophet; That we ſhall have Women there, whoſe Beauty no Painters Art can e're expreſs; who ſhall not glance a Look upon another Man beſide their own. Women, whoſe Beauty ſhall exceed the Luſtre of Diamonds, Rubies, Hyacinths, and whatſoever is precious in the Eaſt.

He promiſes likewiſe, That we ſhall be ſtretch'd out at perfect Eaſe, on ſtately Beds, under Pavilions of Magnifick Structure. Where Pages fair and beautiful as Pearls, ſhall wait upon us; whilſt Gentle Zephirs fan the ambient Air, with their Immortal Breezes, making a ſoft and grateful Sound among the Leaves and Boughs of thoſe tall Verdant Copſes, Woods, and Thickets, which are planted here and there throughout the Fields of Paradiſe.

O Orchan! by all theſe Allegories we are to underſtand the Supreme Felicity of Virtuous Souls, who die in Faith and Love. This is a certain Rule; That, whatſoever is pleaſant and agreeable to any Good Man upon Earth, ſhall be either ſuperlatively augmented in Specie, or improv'd by an infinitely more pleaſant Change in Heaven. So that no Man that dies well, can poſſibly be baulk'd of his Full of Happineſs.

Shall I diſcourſe frankly and after the manner of Friends? I think, when Atropos has done her Buſineſs and ours, when ſhe has cut the Thread of Earthly Life; Our Souls will

then

then awake as from a tedious Slumber mix'd of Joys and Griefs, of Fears and Hopes, Pleasures and Pains. And we shall soon experiment the Truth of all our anxious Forecasts. Every Man shall be dispos'd of, according to his Rank in the Heraldry of Fate. I will not presume to calculate particularly, where or how: Only in general, this is my Faith, That there are Paradises of all Sorts and Degrees prepar'd with exquisite Proportion for the various Kinds of Men: And Hell's as accurately fitted and equally adjusted, for the Punishment of the Wicked, to whatsoever Class or Order. For it appears to me a grand Solœcism, a perfect Blunder in Divinity and Reason, to assert or imagine, That as soon as the Breath is out of the Body, our Souls must either swiftly post through all the Elements and Orbs Above, and in a Moments Time be seated in the Cœlum Empyræum; or else must tumble head-long, in an instant, to the lowest Hell. Methinks, if I were to go upwards, I wou'd tarry by the Way, and divert my self awhile in the upper Region of Serene and Balmy Air; there to Converse with courteous Demons, and perhaps with Souls of Gentile Old Philosophers and Poets. I wou'd enquire at least for Orpheus, Homer, Virgil, Ovid, and Lucretius; for Pindar, Epictetus, and by the bye for Sappho. I shou'd be ambitious also to see or hear of Pythagoras, Plato, Plotinus, Porphyry, and some other of the Grecian Sages. Neither wou'd I forget the Name of any renowned Wise Man of past Ages; for I think the Earth has born but few of late, that deserve to be mention'd. But above all, I shou'd be diligent and curious to find out the Thrice-great Hermes, Father of Wisdom and Science. 'Tis Ten to One, but I shou'd visit Horace, and ask for a Bottle of his Beloved Campagne Muscadine, if he has any there.

past

When I had thus refresh'd my self in the Paradises of this Sublunary World, I wou'd take my Congé, and travel to the Orb of the Moon. I wou'd kiss the Hand of Menarchus, who rules all the Inhabitants of that Planet. If I found him in a good Humour, I would humbly beg his Pardon, and intercede for the silly Arcadians, who boasted, That their Country was Older than the Moon. I wou'd represent their Case as favourably as I cou'd; putting him in Mind, That they were only a Company of poor ignorant Shepherds, who first broach'd that Blasphemous Libel; and that their Nation is quite extinct on Earth: therefore they are not worthy of his farther Revenge or Anger; since every Arcadian who had asserted this in his Life-time, has for his Penance, been forc'd to dig in the Mines of the Moon, from the Hour of his Death. Perhaps these poor Fellows might fare the better for my Apology: Who knows? But, if I found that my Request was granted, and these unfortunate Arcadians being releas'd from the Sub-Cynthian Dungeons, were permitted to return to Earth again; I would charge them to have a Care how they affronted fronted such a Potent Neighbour next Time.

Having done so good a Work, I wou'd slip through the Orb of Mercury as nimbly as I could, lest that cunning Thief shou'd steal the Teeth out of my Head. And just paying my Respects to Lady Venus en passant, I would shut my Eyes, and glide in a Trice through the scorching Sphere of the Sun. As for Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn, I have nothing to do with 'em. But what Work wou'd I make with the Beasts and Monsters of the 8th Sphere? I'd certainly fleece the * Ram, and make the † Bull run mad. If I pass'd by the ‡ Twins in Pity, I'd eat the ‖ Crab for a Viaticum. The Shell I'd throw to the * Lyon to stop his Mouth, lest he shou'd serve me in the same manner. But what a confounded Stop and Pause shou'd I make when I came to the Virgin? What Qualms of Love shou'd I have? Till weighing her in the Balance of Reason, I shou'd find her too light. And shou'd rather venture on the Scorpion: But I'd first charm him with the Mysterious Verficle of the Alcoran: And to make sure of him, I'd pray for Noah and all his Posterity, according to the Old Rule of the Arabians: And then I might safely pass by, without being stung. Had rash Phaeton been acquainted with these Secrets, when he drove the Chariot of the Sun so madly, he might have rid

* Aries.
† Taurus.
‡ Gemini.
‖ Cancer.
* Leo.
Virgo.
Libra.
Scorpio.

over

over the Scorpion, without danger of Burning the World. Neither had he been Thunderstruck by Jupiter, and Drown'd in the River Po, nor his poor Sisters been turn'd into Poplars. However, as he fell out of the Coach-Box, he drop'd his Turbant on the Frontiers of Sagitary; which I would take up to shield from the Shafts of that spightful Archer. As for Capricorn, he's a good harmless Monster; and any Body may pass by him without Danger. Then I'd quench my Thirst with Aquarius, after eating the Crab, and so prepare for another Banquet on Pisces.

Sagittarius.

Capricornus.

Aquarius.

Pisces.

If thou thinkest, I am too much in jest with the Heavenly Signs, I tell thee there is nothing in Nature more Ridiculous than these Fictitious Forms and Names assign'd them by the Ancient Poets.

However, my Soul begins to be tir'd with thus pursuing those Beasts of the Sky. So I'll put an End to the Chace, wishing thee and my self a good Repose: For it is above an Hour past Midnight. Adieu.

Paris, 17th. of the 10th. Moon, of the Year 1680.

LETTER

LETTER V.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

IF thou wilt turn over the Regiſter of the Empire, thou wilt find ſome of my Letters, wherein I have deſcrib'd the City of Venice, according to the Beſt Information I had from Adonai, a Jew, Reſiding there as a Private Agent for the Grand Signior. Therefore, avoiding all Particularities concerning the Incredible Magnificence of the Palaces, Temples, Bridges, Colleges, and other Publick Buildings; where nothing is to be ſeen, but Marble, Jaſper, Porphyry, Silver, Gold, and other Precious Ornaments, which every where dazzle the Eyes of Strangers: I will only take Notice of ſuch Things relating to this City and Republick, as I formerly omitted.

The Venetians poſſeſs ſeveral moſt Ample, Rich, and Flouriſhing Cities in Italy; beſides Abundance of Smaller Towns, Caſtles, and Fortreſſes. The Names of thoſe Cities which are of Chiefeſt Note, are, Bergamo, Crema, Brixia, Verona, Trent, Aquileia, Vicenza, Padua, and Terviſo. As for the Towns, they are too many to inſert in a Letter.

Toward

Toward the North of their City, they are Masters of almost all Friuli; with Istria, which is the Utmost Province of Italy, on that Side. They are also Lords of the Greatest Part of Dalmatia, with the Isles belonging to it. In the Mouth of the Adriatick Sea, they possess Corfu, Cephalonia, Zante, Cerigo; with many more of Less Note. Not to speak of Candia, so well known to the Mussulmans.

From all these Territories, the Republick has a Yearly Income of Two Millions in Gold: Which is not treasur'd up for any long Time, but is employ'd in the Publick Expences; as, in Maintaining Military Forces, by Sea and Land; in Building and Rigging up their Fleets; in Raising and Repairing Forts and Castles; in Paying the Stipends of Magistrates, and Publick Ministers; with other Expences too tedious to be nam'd.

They have other Ways to raise Money in Extraordinary Cases; as, in Time of War, or the like. For, then they double or treble the Taxes, Tythes, and Imposts. And All are liable to answer the Demands of the Republick; the Noble, as well as the Vulgar. Neither do they seem unwilling, when the Extream Necessities of the State require it. But, if this be not sufficient, to defray the Publick Charges; then the Magistrates, and Publick Ministers, are oblig'd to wait for their Salaries and Stipends, till the Commonwealth is in a Condition to pay them. They also, at such a Time, are used to sell the Places of Great Trust and Honour to the Nobles;

bles; who, at other Times, enjoy them Gratis, as a Reward of their Merits.

If all this will not do the Busmeſs, and they find themſelves reduc'd to great Extremities; then they borrow of Private Perſons, ſuch Sums as they want, on the Publick Faith. And if any Wealthy Citizen refuſe, or appear unwilling to lend his Mony, they uſe Force and Violence; Seizing his Goods, whether Moveable, or Immoveable, and ſell them for Ready Mony. At the ſame Time, the Republick declares her ſelf a Debtor to theſe Men; and pawns her Faith to pay them, with Intereſt, after a certain Number of Years, or when the War is finiſh'd, according as ſhe is able. And that which is moſt admirable is, that all this is done without the leaſt Tumult or Sedition, or any Exterior Symptoms of Diſcontent. Nay, This People are ſo prompt and ready to aſſiſt the State in ſuch Exigencies, that it is common for many of the Nobles, and Wealthy Citizens, to make a Voluntary Tender of their Mony to the Senate: And, Some will ſell their Plate, of their own Accord; with all their Wives Jewels, and other Ornaments; turning them into Mony, for the Service of the Commonwealth.

Beſides, Not only the Inhabitants of Venice contribute thus to the Publick Treaſury, but alſo the other Cities and Towns under their Juriſdiction; each according to their Ability. Therefore it matters not much, whether the Republick have any Bank of Mony by her, or no; no; since her Private Subjects are rich enough, and she can make use of their Wealth, without any Difficulty, or Ill Consequences, when-ever she has Occasion.

As for the Strength, and Military Forces of the Venetians, it may be said, That there is scarce a Prince in Europe, who has Better and Larger Fortifications than this Republick. To defend which, and all her other Possessions, she makes use of the Inhabitants; every Province being oblig'd to furnish so many Thousand Soldiers, as are sufficient to fill the Garisons, and guard the Country from Foreign Invasion. Thus, in the Province of Lombardy alone, there are Twenty Five Thousand Foot kept constantly in Arms. Besides these, in Time of War they raise Extraordinary Armies, both in their own Territories, and in Germany, or among the Swiss-Cantons: From which Last, they generally have an Aid of Thirty or Five and Thirty Thousand Mercenaries: Who are partly bestow'd on Board their Fleet, and partly in their Forts and Castles; whilst some of them guard the Bridges, and other Passes of the Country. As for the Cavalry of this Commonwealth, it is very small and inconsiderable for their Number: But being, most of them the Sons of Nobles, they are valued for their Blood; which inspires them with Heroick Resolution and Bravery.

When they are to wage War by Land, they usually invite some Foreign, Petty Prince, to be Generalissimo of their Armies: Him

Him they endear with moſt Ample Gifts and Honours; giving him Two Senators for his Collegues, Men who have been Signally Faithful and Serviceable to the Commonwealth. Theſe are call'd Proveditori, or Superviſors-General. Without whoſe Conſent, and Approbation, this Generaliſſimo cannot Give Battel, or do any Thing elſe of Moment, from which the Commonwealth may receive Profit, or Damage.

I forbear to ſpeak of the Arſenal of Venice which is one of the Wonders of the World; in regard I have already given a Deſcription of it to the Miniſters of the Port in one of my former Letters, which thou wilt find Regiſter'd.

Illuſtrious Scribe, I aim at Brevity in all my Diſpatches, that I may not weary out thy Patience: But ſometimes my Subject carries me beyond my Limits; otherwiſe I ſhould be forc'd to conclude ſome of my Letters in the midſt of a Relation, which in my Opinion looks like a Botch.

Therefore to avoid this Soleciſm, I muſt not cloſe up my Diſpatch till I have given thee an Account what Rites and Ceremonies are us'd in Electing the Dukes of Venice. Which take as follows:

The Day of Election being appointed, all the Venetian Senators that are Thirty Years of Age, meet together in the Palace, where the Gates being ſhut, an Urn or Cheſt is plac'd in the Middle of the Aſſembly. Into which are thrown as many little Balls, as there be Senators nators present. These Balls are of Two Colours: For, Thirty of them are Gilt, the Rest are White. Every one of the Senators takes a Ball out of the Urn. Those who get the Thirty Gilt Ones are carried into another Conclave; whilst those who have the White Ones, remain in the same Place. In the Second Conclave is also plac'd an Urn, into which Thirty Balls are cast. Among which Nine are Gilt, the Rest White. Those who get the Nine Gilt ones, name Forty Men, who are call'd, Electors of the First Election. These Forty Men, throw into the Urn Forty Balls; of which Twelve are Gilt, the Rest White. Those who get the Twelve Gilt Balls, are call'd, Electors of the Second Election: For they name Five and Twenty other Men. These Five and Twenty, throw into the Urn Five and Twenty Balls, of which Nine are Gilt, and they who get them are call'd Electors of the Third Election. For these name One and Forty Men, in whose Power it is to Create a Duke or Prince of the Republick. And they do it after this manner:

They chuse from among themselves Three Senators more Venerable than the Rest, whom they call the Chiefs of the Congregation, and Two Secretaries. Then there remain Six and Thirty, who give in their Votes after this manner:

The Three Chiefs sit in so many Seats, more eminent than the Rest: Then the Secretaries call the Six and Thirty others in Order before them, where every one Throws into

into a Box, in Presence of the Chiefs, a little piece of Wood, on which is written the Name of him whom he would have to be Duke. Then every one of the Six and Thirty, retires to his Place: Whilst the Secretaries read the Schedules before the Chiefs. And as many as they find there nam'd for Dukes, so many new Schedules do they make. These are thrown promiscuously into a Cap, or Bonnet; from whence after a shake or Two, to mingle 'em, they are drawn out, and laid in order on a Table. But before they draw 'em all out, the First Schedule is read; and he whose Name is written on it, is bid to go into the next Conclave. Then the Chiefs of the Congregation, as they're called, ask the Rest, If any Body there can object against the Election of this Man? For if they can, and he does not give a Satisfactory Answer, he is excluded from all Possibility of being Duke. But if he acquits himself well, he is acknowledged, and has the Ducal Crown put on his Head. The present Duke of Venice is the Hundred and * inclusively from Paulutius Anafestus, the First that ever had that Honour; being Elected in the City Heraclea, in the Year 697 of the Christians Hejira.

The Venetians are in all their Actions very Grave, using few Words, especially when they are at Table. If they are not so lively and inventive as some other People of Italy, yet they perform all Things with mature Deliberation and Judgment; which is the Cause,

That

That their Affairs for the most part succeed very happily.

The Italians have a Common By-word current among them; That the Venetians are Magnificent, Crafty, and Discreet; Those of Verona, are studious and faithful; Those of Padua, light and fickle; those of Vicenza, revengeful. Again they say, the Venetians bring Mony; Treviso, Swords; and Brixia, Pioneers to the Wars. And that the Venetians are good Seamen; the Paduans, good Horsemen; and those of Bergamo, excellent at an Ambush.

Of the Women they have another Proverb, That those of Crema are fraudulent; they of Vicenza, constant; they of Venice, proud and insolent; they of Verona, gracious; those of Brixia, diligent: Those of Treviso, jealous; and those of Bergamo, crafty. They say likewise, that Bergamo has many Slanderers; Padua, many good Soldiers; Vicenza many Counts; and Brixia, many obdurate Misers.

Courteous Minister, thou wilt bear, I hope, with my tediousness in discoursing of this Great Republick; Which cannot be handled in a few Words.

As to the Manner of their Government, it is admirably mild and gentle, wise and just, seeking Peace, but not refusing War, when they have a just Provocation. It is worthy of any Mans Consideration, how this Commonwealth has stood firm and unshaken for above Twelve Hundred Years, amidst so many Cruel Wars, and Potent Enemies; so that her Subjects, if they be compar'd with other, may be ſaid to enjoy the Golden Age, ſince they live in continual Eaſe and Tranquility, encreaſing daily in Riches, Honours, and every kind of Proſperity.

This is to be aſcribed in the Firſt Place, to the moſt excellent Laws and Rules of Policy left them by Men of ſingular Prudence and Wiſdom, who had they lived in the Times of the Ancient Greeks, might well have been liſted among the moſt famous Philoſophers and Law-givers.

The Duke, in the Gravity of his Port, the Splendor of his Robes, and the Magnificence of his Palace, ſeems to exhibit the Majeſty of an Emperour. And yet he has no more Authority, than any one of the Senators, who created him. For, he has but one Vote in the Senate, as all the Nobles have. Only it lies upon him to give Audience to Foreign Embaſſadors, in the Name of the Senate. He can do nothing without the Conſent of the Senate either in Peace or War. The Senate firſt decrees, and he confirms their Edicts. Which are alſo publiſhed in his Name. It is lawful for him to go into all the Courts of Juſtice, and Publick Tribunals, where he may paſs his Verdict in any dubious Caſe, yet ſo as any of the Senators may contradict him if they pleaſe.

The Form of Government therefore in this Republick appears to be an Ariſtocracy, or the Government of a Few; not the Richeſt or the moſt Powerful, but the Wiſeſt and the Beſt, ſuch as by a long Series of Faithful Services, have merited well of the Commonwealth.

These make up the College or Council of Ten, which being joyn'd with Fifteen others, and Six Counsellors, the Duke being President, has Power of Deliberating and Decreeing Things tending to the Safety of the Commonwealth; neither can these Decrees be repeal'd. This is properly the Divan or Privy-Council. There is besides this a Council or Diet of Two Hundred and Twenty Five Citizens, who are properly called Senators, and very much resemble those of Ancient Rome. For none are permitted to enter this Senate, but Nobles, or the Sons of such. They must also be above Five and Twenty Years of Age. The Third and last Senate consists of Two Thousand Five Hundred Men. But in regard a great part of these have some Offices and Honours abroad, there seldom meet above a Thousand Six Hundred, when the House is fullest.

These meet once every Week, that is, on the First Day, as also on some of their more solemn Festivals. Here Magistrates are created, and Publick Offices distributed with admirable Order. From hence are chosen the Two Hundred and Twenty Five, who make up the foregoing Senate, as being the most prudent, expert, and conversant in the Affairs of State. These decide all Controversies of greater Moment. As the Affairs of Peace and War, the Care of fortifying their Cities and Castles, of creating Generals and Captains, of sending Embassies to Foreign Princes Princes: Here alſo are read all the Letters, Diſpatches, and Expreſſes, which are addreſs'd to the Republick from other Parts. In a word, whatſoever is of more material Conſideration, is handled in this Senate.

Impartial Effendi, thou wilt not condemn me as an Infidel, or an Enemy of the Muſſulmans, in that I repreſent to thee in its true Colours, the preſent State of Venice. If we ought to give the Devil his due, as the Chriſtians ſay, In God's Name, let us not rob Men of theirs, though they be our Enemies.

Magnificent and Learned Hamet, Adieu for this Time.

Paris, 4th. of the 11th. Moon, of the Year 1680.

LETTER VI.

To Osman Adrooneth, Astrologer in Ordinary to the Sultan.

THE Inhabitants of these Western Parts are in a great and general Consternation, at the Appearance of a New Comet, or Blazing-Star. It rises much about the Time the Sun Sets, and in the same Quarter of the Heavens. The Body of it looks no bigger than a Star of the First Magnitude, from whence springs a Pyramid of Light, extending it self to the Cusp of the Mid-Heaven, where its Cone seems to terminate.

The Superstitious call it the Sword of God, because of its Form, being not much unlike an Old Two-edg'd Rapier. I am sure it does not resemble a Turkish Cymeter, for those thou knowest are Oblique in their Figure, and this is Streight.

They are full of Melancholy Presages, and the Astrologers themselves give out, That this Comet portends dreadful Calamities to Europe, which may not discover themselves, perhaps these many Yeass; Nay they affirm, That this Generation shall be quite extinct, before the Effects of this Tremendous Apparition shall seize on Earth.

I have a great Veneration for the Science of the Stars, and even for Judicial Astrology, though though I cannot pretend to any Skill in any of them. I have ſtudied them both till I was weary, being diſcouraged by the Difference of Mens Opinions, and the Uncertainty of their Concluſions in matters of ſo remote, ſublime, and myſterious a Nature. Beſides, I fainted under the Burden of ſuch vaſt Speculations, whilſt I found my ſelf ſtill wandring not only in the Blindneſs of my own proper Intellect, but alſo in the General Darkneſs of Human Reaſon.

I conſider'd the Birth-place of theſe Sciences which all will confeſs to be the Eaſt. And there I found the Chaldæans differing from the Gymnoſophiſts of India: Theſe again contradicting my Countrymen, the Arabians. To paſs from thence into Africa. I perceived the Egyptians were of one Sentiment, the Ethiopians of another, and the Moors of a Third. Neither could I diſcern any Agreement between the Greeks and Romans. As for the Jews they claſh'd with all.

Plato, Proclus, Ariſtotle, Averroes, and many other Sages, aſſert there are but Eight Spheres. Yet Hermes Trismegiſtus, with ſome of the Perſian Magi addeth a Ninth. So did Azarchel the Moor, and his Countryman Tebith. Of the ſame Opinion was Albert the Great. Whilſt there are ſome who tax theſe with making a Decimation in the Orbs, and taking a Tyth from Heaven; for they aſſert the Number of the Spheres to be Ten.

They not only thus differ from one another, but through that Inconſtancy which is inſeparable from the Minds of Mortals, they vary even from themſelves. One Day of one Opinion, the next of a contrary. So Alphonſus one while aſſerted Nine Spheres, and a few Years after retrench'd himſelf to Eight. This is a Vanity from which the greateſt and moſt Eminent Writers in the World have not been free. Indeed, this Mutability of Opinion is Natural to all Men. As if our Minds were ſubject to the Laws of Generation and Corruption, like our Bodies, or as if there were a continual Flux and Reflux of our Thoughts, as there is of our Corporeal Atoms.

Theſe Authors not only vary about the Number of the Celeſtial Orbs, but alſo concerning their Motion, eſpecially that of the Eighth, which is called the Sphere of the fixed Stars. For, the Chaldæans and Egyptians held, it had but one Motion, others affirm'd it had no more. The Talmudiſts aſſign it two, whilſt ſome modern Aſtronomers among the Chriſtians are more liberal, and allow it Three diſtinct Motions. One, of Trepidation, as they call it: And this is its own proper Courſe; which it performs, they ſay in Seven Thouſand Years. A Second of Gyration, which it derives from the Ninth Sphere, as one Wheel is rowl'd about by another. And this Circuit according to their Opinion is not finiſh'd in leſs than Forty Nine Thouſand Years. And if that be true, we muſt not expect the Diſſolution of the World before that Term is expir'd. For it wou'd be Impious to Suppoſe, That the Eternal Architect, having made this Sphere for a Circuit of ſo long a Duration, wou'd ſtop it before its Race were fully run; much leſs in the midſt of its Carieer; or by that Time it had accompliſh'd a Sixth Part of its Revolution; as the Jews and Chriſtians believe. The Third Motion of this Sphere, is called Rapid and Diurnal; for which they ſay, 'tis obliged to the Tenth Orb, or Primum Mobile.

not

Then again they differ in the Meaſure of the Time they allow for the Motion of the Fixed Stars. One will have them to ſpend a Hundred Years in Travelling One Degree. Another brings them to this Station, in Sixty Six Years. A Third, in Seventy Five; a Fourth, in Seventy Eight. The Jews, in Seventy; the Chriſtians, in Eighty; whilſt the Indians go beyond them all; aſſerting that there are Two Stars in the Eighth Sphere, Diametrically oppoſite to each other; which do not ſupply each others Place in the Zodiack, in leſs than a Hundred and Forty Four Thouſand Years. They affirm alſo, that there are many Motions of the Spheres above; which are yet unknown to Mortals.

If this be ſo, there may be, for ought we know, other Stars and Bodies alſo, to which theſe Motions may agree, though we cannot diſcern either the one or the other, becauſe of the Superlative Vaſtneſs of the Height, and the Imperfection of Human Art. Of this Opinion were Alpetrag, Phavorinus the Philosopher, and others.

By all that I have said, I do not pretend to instruct thee in Things whereof thou wert Ignorant. I know thee, by general Fame, and the Character of Men of Judgment, to be an Accomplish'd Master in this Mysterious Science. But I reflect thus on the Inconstancy and Doubtfulness of Mens Reason in these Matters, as an Introduction to the Liberty I will take, of telling thee once again my own Thoughts concerning Comets; which first suggested the Trouble I now give thee in this Letter, as I did once before, on the like Occasion.

Suffer me to be a little Prolix and Tedious; for these Speculations are Strong, and not handled with Ease; or in a few words, I wou'd fain see the Astronomer that has been in Heaven, and can give me an Account, what is the True Motion of the Planet Mars; or that has discovered the exact Ingress of the Sun into the Equinoctial Points. Let him also reveal to me the Nature of the Galaxy; and what Substances, or Qualities they are, which compose the Milky Way. These are Subjects which have puzzl'd all Antiquity: And the Wisest of these Modern Times, are as much to seek as their Fathers. O Fatal Darkness of this Mortal State! What Mists of Ignorance and Errour are our Minds envelop'd with? We are perpetually bewilder'd in a Labyrinth and Circle of Scepticisms and Ambiguities.

biguities. The Sun by Day diſcloſes to us the outward Features and Lineaments of theſe Lower Elements: The Moon and Stars are not backward to ſhew us the Face of the Heavens by Night: Unleſs ſometimes the Envious Spirits of the Air draw a Veil of thick black Clouds before the Lovely Pichine, and leave us all in Darkneſs. But Fate has hidden from us the Interiour Parts of Heaven and Earth, and all the other Beings in the Univerſe.

Among the Reſt, I cannot but conceive, we are ſtrangely miſtaken in the Nature of theſe Comets. For if they are only certain Heaps of Inflamable Matter, kindled in the Air by the Force of the Sun-beams, or by ſome other Influence of Nature, how come they to have ſo Regular and Diſtinct a Motion of their own? How come they to Riſe and Set at certain Hours every Day and Night, varying only as the Heavenly Bodies do, in appearing earlier or later, one Day than another, according to the Succeſſive Alteration of the Four Seaſons of the Year, that ſo they may paſs like them, through all the Signs of the Zodiack? If the Earth moves, and theſe Comets be in the Air, they muſt needs be carried round with the Motion of the Whole Vortex. But it is apparent to Human Sight, That they are not thus whirl'd round with the Atmoſphere, but have a diſtinct, and ſometimes a quite contrary Motion. They are Statick, Direct, and Retrograde, like the Planets; which is almoſt a Demonſtration, That their Seat is in the Heavens; at leaſt above the Interſecting Orb of the Moon. And if ſo, I ſhou'd be glad to have an Account of their Generation and Original. For, the Subſtance of the Heavens being Immutable, and not Subject to any Change or Corruption, it is Impoſſible, That any New Poſthumous Being can be generated there. There may, I believe, in every Age, be diſcloſed and uncabineted, ſome Glittering Forms in the Heavens, which before lay hid, and lock'd up in the Treaſures of the moſt High. But they are as Old as the World it ſelf. That's my Creed. Let other Men think what they pleaſe.

If I could wonder at any Thing, it would be at the miſtaken Piety of thoſe, who to avoid the Charybdis of Atheiſm, which attributes all Things to Nature or Chance; fall into the Scylla of Fanaticiſm and Religious Dotage. Whilſt they vainly aſſert, that every New Alteration in the World, is an Effect of God's Immediate Creative Power. Not a Child is conceiv'd, but God then and there creates a Soul for it. Not a Plague, Fire, Peſtilence, or any other Common Calamity happens, but they muſt diſturb the Reſt of the Eternal Deity, and make him have a particular Chief Hand in the Conſpiracy. So of Comets, they preſage Tremendous Things, as if God had immediately created them, to warn this Lower World of ſome approaching Judgments. Whereas, according to the dictates of more Impartial Reaſon, they are the pro-products of his first Fiat, when he made the Universe. Only he has reserv'd the Revelation of them, to certain Periods of Time. But, these sort of People Affront God really, for Fear of Affronting him. They injure his Goodness, to save his Omnipotence; and by a Back-blow they strike at both, in defence of his suppos'd Arbitrary-Will. Let not my Soul sit down in their Cabal; nor my Mind listen to the Secrets of their Divinity.

O Sage Osman! I believe that all things flow from God by an Emanation without Beginning, and Subsist on him by a Dependance which shall know no End. With him the Causes of all Fleeting and Decaying Things, have a permanent Stability. In him reside Immutable Springs, of whatsoever is subject to Change. In his Eternal Essence do live the Principles and Models of all Beings; but he is no daily Labourer. 'Tis a Grand Contempt of the Divine Majesty, thus to invade the Rest and Sabbatism of the Most High, who dwells for ever in Infinite and Eternal Solitude and Bliss: To make him the Drudge of his Creatures, who has Ten Thousand Thousand Myriads of Angels to Execute his Will.

Undoubtedly he has contriv'd the Universe with such Ineffable Art, That his whole Pleasure is perform'd by Second Causes. This Infinite Machine is full of Wheels, and has an Eternal Motion; whereof he is the Original Spring. If I may descend to so low a Comparison, observe but the Course of a

Miller's

Miller; when once he has turn'd the Cog of his Mill, he has no more to do, but ſtand ſtill and look on: The Work goes forward of it ſelf, without any more of his Labour, till he Stop it. So the Supreme Artiſt, when he had once ſet the Primum Mobile a going, had no more to do, but to enjoy himſelf in Eternal Beatitude.

It is an Indignity to the Omnipotent God, to ſay or think, he was not able to make a World as perfect as a Mortal Man can frame the Imagination of. Now I think 'tis very eaſie to conceive, That as a Hand-Mill, which continually requires the Attendance of ſome body to keep it in Motion, has leſs of Artifice in it, than a Water, or a Wind-mill, which go of themſelves: So a World, that muſt always have its Maker Slaving and Drudging, Toyling and Moyling at the Product of every Individual Generation and Corruption; of every New Event, or what appears to us to be ſo, is not ſo Excellent and Perfect, as one that can perform its own Task by the Neceſſary Force which one contiguous Atom has upon another; like Wheels upon Wheels.

To conclude all, Undoubtedly the Works of God are moſt perfect, and full of Wiſdom. He made all Things from Eternity, and they Obey his Law. He has appointed the Times and Seaſons of Good and Evil. The Symptoms whereof appear to Mankind in Various Manners: In Dreams and Viſions by Night; in Ominous Accidents by Day; in Prophecies, and General Whiſpers; in Apparitions, Spectres, Stres, and Monſtrous Forms; in Heaven, and all the Elements: Finally, in Comets.

But, Oh Learned Adrooneth! Does it therefore follow, that theſe Signs, theſe Apparitions, theſe Comets, &c. are freſhly created for the ſake of Mankind? Are there not various Ends and Uſes of all Things? Are there not the Fixed Stars, and the Planets, according to their different Configurations and Aſpects, Signs of Good and Evil, as well as Comets; and are not the Stars as Old as the World? Why may not the Comets be ſo too, though they are revealed at certain Stated Periods of Time?

There's one Comprehenſive Reaſon for all, in that double Query; and I'll ſay no more to the Sage Adrooneth, for whom a Word is Satis.

I pray Heaven divert from thee the Influence of Evil Stars; and that whilſt thou Contemplateſt their Order, Motion, and Efficacy, thou may'ſt not tumble into a Ditch, as did Anaximenes, and Thales the Mileſian. Aſtrologer Adieu.

Paris, 9th. of the 2d. Moon,
of the Year 1681.

LETTER

LETTER VII.

To the Venerable Mufti.

THE People of Rome having aboliſhed the Government of Kings, transferr'd the Sovereignty on Brutus and Collatinus; the Champions of their Liberty, altering both their Right and Title: For they call'd them Conſuls, not Kings: And ordain'd that their Power ſhould laſt but a Year; which being expired, new ones were elected in their Stead. And the Reaſon why they had Two, was, that if one prov'd guilty of Evil-Adminiſtration, Injuſtice or Tyranny; The other having Equal Power might curb him, and rectify the publick Affairs. They were alſo call'd Conſuls; to put them in mind that they were to do nothing Arbitrarily, but in all Things of Importance, to Conſult their Fellow-Citizens.

So great was the Joy of the Romans, upon this Recovery of their Freedom; that they could ſcarce believe it was true. But as it uſually falls out in any ſurprizing Happineſs, all ſeem'd as a Dream. And ſo inveterate was their Averſion for Kings; that they expell'd Collatinus from the City, only becauſe he was Nephew to Tarquin the Proud; whoſe Name alſo he bore. Valerius Publicola was ſubſtituted in his Stead: A Man ſingularly gularly devoted to the publick Good. He own'd himself the Creature of the People, and gave Power of Appealing from him to them. And, lest he might offend them by the Lofty Building of his House; which also standing on a Rock, seem'd strong as a Castle; he pull'd down the Upper Stories, and made it level with Ordinary Houses.

Brutus's Collegue, was no less studious, than he, to gain the Favour of the Citizens; even with the Destruction and Slaughter of his own Children. For, When he perceiv'd his Sons Conspiring to restore the Abrogated Monarchy, he brought them forth into the Forum, or Market-place; and having caus'd them to be scourg'd with Rods, he beheaded them: Thus demonstrating, That as a Parent of the People, he Adopted them in the Room of his Perfidious Children.

The Romans being from this Time made perfectly Free; first took up Arms in Defence of their New-gotten Liberty, against the Neighbouring Kings: Next, for the Bounds of their Dominions: Then for their Confederates: And last of all, for Glory and Empire: Being on every Side invaded and molested by the Adjacent People. For, they had no Territories within the Walls of their City: So that they were no sooner out of the Gates, but they were exposed to the Toscans and Latines; between whom the City was seated, as it were in the Middle. Therefore resolving to inlarge their Territories, they took one City and Province after another, till at length they became Masters of all Italy.

till

Their First Expedition was against Porsena, King of the Toscans; who took the Field with a great Army; having the Tarquins along with him, whom he undertook to re-establish in the Throne of their Fathers. He made fierce and resolute Advances, possessing himself of the Hill Janiculum, and the Avenues of the City; where he besieged them close, and pressed them with Famin. Yet, the Romans sustain'd all with Admirable Bravery: And their stout Resistance had this Effect, that at length Porsena, when he had almost vanquish'd them, made a League of Peace. He was chiefly mov'd to this by those Prodigies and Miracles of Roman Fortitude; Horatius Cocles, Mutius Scævola, and Clelia. The First of which, when he was not able alone to keep off the unequal Throng of his Enemies, every where crowding on him; at length broke down the Bridge, and swam cross the Tyber with his Weapons in Hand. The Second attempting to kill Porsena in his own Camp; When by Mistake, he had instead of the King, stabb'd his Vizir, or Secretary; and for that Fact was seized: He thrust his Right Hand, that was guilty of the Error, into the Fire: Saying with a Menacing Voice, Think not thy self the safer. O King, because thou hast escaped my Hand, since there yet remains Three Hundred Romans, who have all sworn to make the same Attempt. Porsena trembled, and was astonish'd nish'd at the Boldness of the Man; whilst Mutius stood still, undaunted, with his Hand broiling in the Fire, as a Demonstration of his invincible Constancy, and of the Truth of what he affirm'd: Thus did those Two Famous Men behave themselves. And as if a Glorious Envy had fermented the Vertue of the Female Sex: A certain Noble Virgin, call'd Clelia, who was given in Hostage to King Porsena, escap'd her Guards by Night; and mounting a Horse which she found in the Way, swam over the Tyber on him. Porsena, as if he were terrifyed at the Fortune and stupendous Resolution of the Romans; accorded them Peace: But the Latins would not let them rest so: For they also attempted to restore the Tarquins; not so much in Love to them, as out of Spight to the Inhabitants of Rome; being desirous to see that People, at least subjugated at Home, who Lorded it so Abroad. There was a Bloody Fight between 'em; and the Fame goes, That Two Gods, Castor and Pollux, were present on white Horses, as Spectators of the Combat. Wherefore, after the Romans had gotten the Victory, they built a Temple to these Warlike Deities; as a Stipend or Reward to their Champions. And thus far they fought for Liberty; which having successfully asserted and established, they were involv'd in Fresh Wars, about the Confines of their Dominion.

It would be too tedious to rehearse the various Battles and Encounters between them and the Neighbouring Nations; wherein at last

laſt they always got the Victory, and extended the Limits of their Empire far and wide. Such alſo, and ſo prodigious were the Actions, Exploits and hardy Performances of this ſtout People, that when King Pyrrhus conſider'd it, he brake forth into this Exclamation: How eaſie, were it, ſaid he, to obtain the Empire of the World, were Pyrrhus King of the Romans; or the Romans Soldiers to Pyrrhus!

Yet as faſt as this Victorious People enlarg'd their Territories Abroad, ſo did their Seditions and Tumults encreaſe at Home; raiſed by the Ambition of ſome, and the Diſcontent of others; 'till at length they had entirely ſubdued all Italy to their Obdience: In which Enterprize they ſpent Five Hundred Years, before they brought it to Perfection.

Then, like a Fire which devours all the Wood it meets in its Way, till its Fury be ſtopp'd by the Intercourſe of ſome River; ſo the Romans ceas'd not to conquer to the very Shores of Italy. But, when they conſider'd Sicily, as a moſt Rich and plentiful Iſland; only rent, as it were, by ſome Injurious Stroke of Time, or Fate, or Chance, from their Continent; they reſolved to unite theſe again by Arms and War, which cou'd not be joyn'd together by Bridges, or Peers. And a very favourable Opportunity preſented it ſelf to them for this Purpoſe; whilſt the Confederated People of Meſſina, the Chief Mart of that Iſland, complain'd of the Tyranny practiſed by the Carthaginians.

&

At that Time Rome and Carthage were Æmulous of each other: Both equally Rivals for Sicily, and the Empire of the World. Therefore under a Mask of helping their Friends and Allies, the Romans betook themſelves to the Sea; but with Real Deſign to Enrich themſelves with Booty; and adding this Iſland to their Empire: Whilſt the Carthaginians appear'd like Open Enemies and Pyrates, without any Diſguiſe. Theſe having loſt their Fleets in various Conflicts, their Fate yielding to that of Rome, the Romans made Sicily a Tributary Province, and then reduc'd Sardinia and Corſica. Thus having expell'd the Carthaginians out of all the Iſlands of the Mediterranean Sea, there remain'd Nothing for them to Conquer on that Side, but Africk it ſelf: Where alſo they Landed, and took above Three Hundred Places of Strength, in a ſhort Time. Though they were ſtoutly oppos'd, not only by Men, but alſo by Monſters. For a certain Stupendous Great Serpent, a Hundred and Twenty Foot in Length, Annoyed their Camp very much, near the River Bragada; as if this Dreadful Beaſt had come into the World on purpoſe to be the Champion of its Native Country, and Defend or Revenge Oppreſſed Africk. But Regulus, whoſe Victorious Arms, neither Men, nor Monſters, nor Fate could hitherto reſiſt; made no Stop, till he came with his Army before the Walls of Carthage it ſelf, the Root of all this War. Here Fortune began to fall off from him, and prove his Enemy: Yet ſo as only to give an Occaſion for the Roman Virtue to appear more Illuſtrious. For though by the Good Conduct of Xantippus the Lacedemonian General, Thirty Thouſand Romans were kill'd in one Fight, and Regulus himſelf taken Priſoner: Yet ſo great a Misfortune could not make him loſe himſelf, or ſink into any Paſſion beneath the Conſtancy and Fortitude of an Invincible Hero. The Carthaginians ſent him as their Embaſſadour to the Senate of Rome, to propoſe a Peace, and the Exchange of Captives. But he was of a contrary Sentiment, and diſſuaded the Senators from hearkening to any ſuch Overtures: Chuſing rather bravely to return to his Former Captivity, there to be Crucify'd; than be Inſtrumental in Word or Deed to the leaſt Diſhonour or Diſadvantage of his Country: So that though Vanquiſh'd, he yet ſeem'd to Triumph o'er his Conquerours. And his lamented Fate had this Influence on the Romans, that it made them proſecute the War with more Fierceneſs and Ardour, to Revenge the Blood of Regulus, than in Hopes of Conqueſt. So deep are the Impreſſions of Love, which a Good General Living, or Dead, makes in the Hearts of his Soldiers. Thus the War was renew'd again in Sicily, wherein the Romans came off Conquerours: And as an Evidence of the Greatneſs of their Victory, they ſhew'd an Hundred and Twenty Elephants taken from the Enemy in the Field. Which wou'd have been a Great Prey, had they been taken in Hunting; but now serv'd only as a Trophy of a more Expensive Conquest. This Victory was obtain'd in the Consulship of Metellus: Which was follow'd by a Terrible Overthrow at Sea, in that of Appius Claudius: When the Romans seem'd not so much overcome by their Enemies, as by the Prophaneness of their General, or the Divine Vengeance. For he consulting the Augurs before he began the Engagement; Chickens were let out of their Coops, to observe the wish'd-for Tripudiation of the Corn they were to feed on. But when the Oracular Birds would not taste a Grain; the General disgusted at the Fatal Omen, Commanded them to be drown'd in the Sea: Saying with an Impious Jest: Since they will not Eat, let them Drink their Fill. In the same Place was the Roman Navy Sunk and Destroy'd.

his

they

There were many such Encounters as these between them, for the space of Four and Twenty Years and upwards; even till the Consulship of Lutatius Catulus; when the Enemy seem'd not to advance with a Fleet of Ships, well Mann'd and Rigg'd with all Necessaries; but all Carthage appear'd upon the Sea, with the Woods and Forests round about it. This prov'd its Ruin. For they were too heavy for Service: Whereas the Roman Navy was Light and Expeditious, like a Moving Camp in the Sea. In a Word, they fell upon the Carthaginians so furiously, and batter'd their Vessels with such Speed, That all the Sea between Sardinia and Sicily, was cover'd cover'd with the Dismal Wrecks. And this Victory was so Great, That they had no farther Thoughts of Sailing to Africk, and Razing the Walls of their Enemies; that being counted Needless, since Carthage was now extinguished in the Sea.

After this War was finish'd, the Romans enjoy'd a Short Rest, as it were to Breath themselves. And as a Demonstration of Peace, the Temple of Janus was shut up, it having been constantly open before from the Reign of Numa Pompilius. And this Distinction was the Publick Emblem of Peace or War.

Thou wilt not have Patience to read their Wars with the Ligurians, Gauls, Illyrians, Macedonians, Syrians, Germans, Spaniards; and in Fine, with the most Potent Nation on Earth. 'Twill be as Irksome to be detain'd with a Rehearsal of their Domestick Seditions, and Changes of Government. Suffice it to say, That this People grew Worse by the Increase of their Empire: And after they had subverted Carthage, Corinth, Numantia, and other Famous Cities of Europe, Asia, and Africk: After they had subdu'd Gaul, Thrace, Cilicia, Cappadocia, Armenia, Britain, and many other most Rich and Opulent Provinces abroad; they began to make Wars among themselves; their Former Vertues turn'd into Vices: The Seditions, Conspiracies and Emulations of the Triumvirs, the Tribunes: Of Catiline, Marius, Sylla, Antony, Pompey, and a Thousand other Popular Commotions; help'd toward the Confusion of this Empire; which seem'd to be the Support of all Things.

Most Divine of the Successors of the Prophets; This Vast Empire, is now become but as a shatter'd Skeleton of Ancient Rome: And most of the Exteriour Members, are fallen to the Share of the All-Conquering Ottomans. God perpetuate the Victories of True Believers; and yet grant, that their Conquests, may not out-last their Virtues.

Paris, 8th. of the 3d. Moon,
of the Year 1681.

LET-

LETTER VIII.

To Dgnet Oglou.

I Am as waggiſh as a Janizary that has newly receiv'd his Aſpers. There's more Satyr in me at this Time than there was in Juvenal and Perſius: And yet 'tis only the Dregs of what I've vented on ſome learned Bigots here in Paris, with whom I have been drinking theſe Two or Three Hours. I tell thee plainly; I put off the Muſſulman for a while, and took my Glaſſes Frankly, or like a Nazarene.

The Diſcourſe we were upon was Aſtrology and the Nature of Comets, &c. But God tumble me headlong into the Lap of Tagot, if ever I heard ſuch Blockheads, Dunces, Fools, Sots: I know not what to call them properly. Zounds! How can Human Reaſon be ſo debauch'd? How can Man become ſuch an Inſenſible Piece of Stuff, to think as they do? They made me Bluſh for Shame, or Anger: They made me ſorry that I was a Man; to be rank'd in the ſame Liſt with 'em. However, I ſuppreſs'd my boiling Choler; I bit my Lips and Nails, and did every thing that Patience cou'd ſuggeſt: (For I uſe to be a very Boon Companion in my Wine:) But at length, as 'tis the Fate of all Diſputers, we grew too hot: There was ſuch a Tempeſt of Words and Paſſionate nate Expreſſions; that we cou'd hardly find a Grain of Senſe. At laſt we fell from Words to Blows; and I, though Old and Crazy, held up my Head as well as I cou'd.

Thou wilt believe, at this Age, I have no great Strength: But, I tell thee, my Courage is the ſame as when I was but Five and Twenty: I cannot flinch from provoking Dangers; and when I am thorowly inflam'd with Wrath, Death it ſelf appears to me in the ſame Figure which Painters give it; a mere naked Skeleton; which I have more Reaſon to pity, than fear: If I am afraid of any thing, it is, of breaking its Bones, and ſpoiling its Shape, in the Claſh of my Fury. So tender am I even of Death it ſelf; the Obdurate and Inexorable Deſtroyer of all Mankind.

One of the Company that was a Prieſt, and ſat right over-againſt me at the Table, threw his Four-Corner'd Cap at my Head, whilſt his next Neighbour check'd him for his Inſolence. But he was full of Fat, and empty of Reaſon or Civility: A great Hulking Fellow, that makes a Figure like the Statue of Pont-Ginello, at Catanea in Sicily; only he is a little Taller: But he has a ſwinging Tun of a Carcaſe.

After he had abus'd me thus; he ſwore, if he had the Chalice of the Altar in his Hand, he'd do the ſame thing: Nay, if he had the conſecrated Wine in it, he would turn the Blood of Chriſt into Poyſon, as he cou'd turn Wine into Blood, to be reveng'd of me.

There was, by good Chance, an Armenian or Two in the Company (not any of Solyman's Gang) who took him up upon his Menace. They challeng'd him severely to answer his Words before the Arch-Bishop of Paris: But the Cunning Priest had more Wit in his Anger. When he began to reflect on the bad Consequences of a Summons; he crouch'd, wheadl'd, and fawn'd like a Spaniel. So fearful are they of a Spiritual Court, which is almost as bad in France, as the Inquisition in Spain.

Then there was a Captain, an Old Miles Emeritus, a Pensioner, who having not drank such a Quantity of Wine many a Day, took my Part; because he sat on my Side of the Table (for he never saw me before in his Life Time, as I know of.) However, the Old Gentleman shew'd himself stout; and demonstrated that he wou'd stand a Push for Souls. But, there was no Body wou'd oppose him, save my self: And I did it in Verbo Clerici; not Manu or Ense Militi, God knows. I pray'd the Good Old Man to be pacifyed: I laid my Right Hand to my Breast, and heav'd both that and the other joyn'd, to Heaven. I invocated all the Patriarchs and Prophets; I bawl'd at the Saints and Angels; I summon'd God Almighty himself to appear in my Vindication. But nothing wou'd do, save right-down Fighting.

To it we went, Pell-Mel: The Fellows at the other Side of the Table were eager: Nothing thing would ſatisfie them but Blood: Their Rapiers were drawn; and they were upon their Paſs. When I ſtarted up, and cri'd out aloud; Gentlemen, 'tis the wrong Minute for you to fight in; Mars is in the 8th. Houſe, in Conjunction with Saturn, and in Quartile with the Sun; a very Malevolent Aſpect: Upon this, they grew all madder than before. Damn that Aſtrologer, ſays one; Curſe upon his Stomach, ſays another; till at laſt they all fell foul upon me; only my Side-Captain ſtood up ſtifly for me. I did what became a Man; but 'tis to his Bravery I owe my Life. For, one of the Oppoſite Sparks, made a full Paſs at my Breaſt, which the Noble Old Captain parry'd, with a ſudden Shoot of his Arm athwart, and a Dexterity which I can never admire enough.

I, that had neither Sword, nor Skill in the Science of Fencing, thought it my Part to expoſe my Body between my ſeeming Friends and Enemies, ſince all the Occaſion of this Quarrel was on my Account, as an Aſtrologer. I leap'd upon the Table, and ſeiz'd upon the Sword of my Captains Antagoniſt. I ſmil'd upon him at the ſame Time, and convinc'd him that I was not in Anger. I twiſted it out of his Hands with a complaiſant Violence: And then the Strife was appeas'd. For, 'twas not he that began the Quarrel, any more than my Old Captain; but the Prieſt was wholly in the Fault; who, ſtraggling out of his Sphere, pretended to ſet up for an Aſtrologer; and tell us Things that wou'd not ſquare with Reaſon.

My Dgnet, thou know'ſt me, and all my Inclinations: Thou art ſenſible, that I cannot ſtoop to the Magiſterial Dictates of Error, nor the Bold Impoſitions of Ignorance: Let 'em approach as near as they will to Truth on the Backſide, they are the further off from attaining it: And ſo let thou and I enjoy our ſelves in perfect Tranquility.

Paris, 19th of the 5th Moon, of the Year 1681.

LET-

LETTER IX.

To Hamet, Reis Effendi, Principal Secretary of the Ottoman Empire.

HAving in my laſt ſpoken of the preſent State of Venice; wherein I omitted Nothing that I thought worthy Obſervation: I ſhould now in Order touch upon Candia or Crete, the moſt conſiderable Iſland that the Venetians, not long ago, had under their Obedience. But ſince by the Fate of War, it is fallen into the Hands of the Victorious Oſmans; I will ſay but very little of it, and paſs to the other Republicks of Europe.

There is no Doubt, but ſince the Conqueſt of Candia by the Muſſulmans: The Imperial City abounds with Geographical Deſcriptions; Natural, Moral, and Political Obſervations on it. But, perhaps they are wanting in the Hiſtory of that Famous Iſland: In Regard the Books of the Gentiles, are not much Read by the True Believers. And 'tis from theſe only, we can Collect the Ancient Memoirs of the Nations, which were once in their own Poſſeſſion.

This Iſland was once call'd Crete, and ſaid to be the Nurſery of Jupiter, as alſo his Sepulcher. It obtain'd likewiſe the Title of Hecatompoli, catempolis, because of the Hundred Cities that were in it. And some call'd it the Island of the Archers, in Regard the Inhabitants being taught from their Infancy to handle the Scythian Bow, grew so expert in that Exercise, that they surpass'd all other Nations.

The Lacedemonians, Athenians, and other Renowned Commonwealths of Greece, receiv'd their Laws from Men Born in this Island, as Plato and Pliny testifie. And yet Epimenides, one of their own Poets, gives them a bad Character, when he says, Κρῆτες ἀεὶ ψεῦσται, κακὰ θηρία, γάστερες ἀργαί.

They were much addicted also to all kinds of Sorcery and Enchantments. A Fraudulent Race of People, Covetous, Greedy, Idle, and Ignorant of ingenious Arts and Sciences.

Yet notwithstanding this, they were so powerful of Old, That they could, as with a Bridle, Curb all Greece. During the Reign of one of their Kings, whose Name was Cydon, came up the Use of Pyrrhick Measures; which the Youth being Arm'd Cap-a-Pe, danc'd with great Labour and Sweat. And the Inhabitants have all along been so tenacious of this Custom, That it is observ'd to this Day among the Rustick Candiots, on their Holy-days. For at such Times, the Youth of the Island meet together, Arm'd with a Bow in one Hand, and a Naked Sword in the other, with a Quiver of Arrows hanging at their Backs. And thus they will Dance indefatigably in the Heat of Summer, even at Noon-day; when the Sun scorches all Things with Insupportable Fervors. In

In Proceſs of Time, this Iſland became ſubject to the Grecian Empire: And as ſuch, fell into the Hands of Baldwin, Count of Flanders and Emperour of Conſtantinople: Who gave it to the Marquis of Montferrat; by whom it was ſold to the Venetians in the Year 1194, for an Incredible Sum of Mony. And that Republick has held it ever ſince, till it was lately taken from them by the Invincible Ottomans.

It is worth Remark; That Candia, the Chief City of this Iſle (call'd Caſtro and Candax, by the Greeks) is a Place of that prodigious Strength, that it ſuſtain'd a Blockade of 22 Years; from 1645 to 1667: And after that, a Siege of 2 Years; from 1667 to 1669: In which Space of Time, 'tis thought, 600000 Muſſulmans loſt their Lives before it.

The next Republick, in Order, is that of Genoua; a City whoſe Power and Empire was far greater in former Times, than it is at preſent. For, they extended their Dominions even to the Black Sea; where Tanais that parts Europe from Aſia, pours her Waters into the Palus Mæotis. Here they poſſeſs'd the City Theodoſia, or Caffa; as 'tis called at this Day. They alſo made themſelves Maſters of Cyprus, Lesbos, Chios; with other Iſlands in the Archipelago; and even of Pera it ſelf, that Magnificent Adjunct to the Imperial City.

Yet, from the Beginning, they were Feudatories of the Roman Empire, till the Year

600 of the Christians Hejira. For then Lotharis King of the Lombards, took the City by Force, and plunder'd it. But when after some Years it had recover'd its Pristine Glory again; Charles I. and his Son Pepin, Kings of Italy, and their Successors the Kings of France, bore Rule there for almost a Hundred Years, placing Governours in the City, who bore the Title of Counts of Genoa. And when afterwards the Saracens had subdu'd Corsica; Ademarus, then Count of Genoa, Arm'd out a Fleet of Galleys, invaded the Island; and having defeated the True Believers, took Possession of it, and reduc'd it under the Jurisdiction of Genoua; whose Power at this Time, was very great by Sea.

After the Dominion of Charles the Great, his Posterity was by degrees so diminish'd, that at length it became in a manner quite Extinct; the more Potent among the Citizens took Turns to Usurp the Government, and exercise a Tyranny over the Inhabitants: Which so exasperated them, that they often submitted themselves to Foreign Princes. But finding still as great Inconveniences in this Dependance on Strangers; at last, following the Example of the Venetians, they chose to themselves a Duke, in the Year 1337. of the Christians Hejira. Him they sent with a Fleet to Conquer Cyprus: Which he accomplish'd with good Success. For, having taken the King and Queen of the Country Captives, he imprison'd them, till they agreed with him for a Yearly Tribute to be paid to the Republick of of Genoua; and then he reſtored them to their Native Poſſeſſion; reſerving only Famagusta, the Chief City of the Iſland, to himſelf.

He enter'd alſo into a War with the Venetians; but being overcome in Battel, at his Return, he was Depos'd from the Ducal Office, and thrown into Priſon; another being Choſen in his Place. This was more Fortunate than his Predeceſſor, againſt the Enemy; doing them many Injuries; but at length, was kill'd in Battel.

Then the Genoueſe Elected another Duke; who going to Conſtantinople, perform'd ſuch Eminent Services to the Emperour in his Wars, that he gave him the Iſland Mitylene; which the Genoueſe held till the Year 1354.

After this, they Created one to Rule over them under the Title of Prince, in the Year 1381. But not liking his Government, they threw themſelves upon the Protection of Charles VII. King of France; who ſent thither his Deputy. Being ſoon weary of the French Government, they joyn'd themſelves to the [illegible] of Milan; under whoſe Patronage they liv'd, till the Year 1435. and then Abdicating him, they Created a Duke of their own again. This rais'd Factions in the City; whilſt ſome adher'd to the French Intereſt, and others eſpous'd the Duke of Milan's Cauſe: At laſt they fell again under the Power of the French; whom they obey'd, till Andreas D'Oria having queſh'd the Seditions, and pacify'd the Contentions of the Freggi and Torni; Two prevailing Factions in the City, one consisting of the Nobles, the other of the Commons. He Eſtabliſh'd that Liberty in the Commonwealth of Genoua, which ſhe has enjoy'd ever ſince, till of late ſome new Troubles have been given 'em by the Kings of France and Spain.

As to the Original of the Genoueſe, it is uncertain. Strabo, and others are of Opinion That this Nation deſcended from the Greeks. Whilſt Thucydides derives them from the Sicilians. They were call'd Ligurians by the People of Rome. And Florus mentions a certain Race of Ligurians, who dwelt in the Dens and Caves of Mountains, being a very Fierce and Warlike People.

But now adays, the Genoueſe are a very Polite and Civiliz'd People; of a Lively and Subtile Wit, eſpecially in Merchandizing, by which they greatly enrich themſelves. They are alſo exceeding Induſtrious, ſhunning no Labour or Danger for the Sake of Gain. They appear Studious of thoſe Things which tend to the Good of the Commonwealth; yet are extremely Fickle and Inconſtant, given to Faction, and deſirous of Novelty: As is manifeſt by what I have before related of them. Which occaſioned a certain King of France, when one of his Lords told him, That the Genoueſe were about to throw themſelves on his Patronage, Anſwer, not without ſome Indignation, That they might go to the Devil for Protection; for I, ſays he, have nothing to do with Men, who are more unstedfast than the Waves of the Sea.

This Inconstancy never appear'd more plainly, than in the late Conspiracy of Raggi and Torne; which had like to have proved of Fatal Consequence. As to Vachero and Balbi, they were like the Dog in Æsop's Fables; who lost the Bone, to catch at its Shadow in the Water: So these Sea-Myrmidons, were not content with the Strong Party which they had made in the City, but must needs go to Corrupt the Navy too; which ruin'd all their Design: For the Plot was discovered by one of the Sea-Captains. This Commonwealth has been afflicted with many Wars and Plagues: But none of either Sort ever threatned it with so much Desolation, as the Last: The One having almost exhausted their Treasury; and the Other as near emptied the City of its Inhabitants. As for the First Misfortune, the Scarcity of Mony, they knew quickly how to remedy it; being perfect Chymists, and Masters of the Philosopher's Stone, if there be any such Thing in Nature. But whether there be or not, this is certain, That the Genoueſe are Old Doctors at garbling, transmuting, and adulterating of Metals. And the Ottoman Empire has experienc'd it; to the great Damage of our Merchants at Constantinople, Smyrna, Aleppo, and other Ports, where the Genoueſe did put off their Base Coyn, to the Value of some Millions. But this Cheat may cost them dear one time or other.

The

The Genoueſe appear at preſent more Inclinable to Merchandiſe than to War. However, it muſt be confeſs'd, that this Commonwealth has brought forth Valiant and Expert Soldiers; as is evident from the Families of the Doria's, Spinola's, and others, who have prov'd Famous Generals, and Leaders of Armies in ſeveral Parts of Europe.

Of ſuch as theſe has Genoua more Cauſe to boaſt, than of any Strong Forts, Caſtles, or fenced Cities within her Dominions in Italy. Nay, the Chief City, Genoua it ſelf, truſts more in the King of Spain's Protection, than in her own Strength. That Monarch is indebted to the Genoueſe-Merchants Eighteen Millions of Gold, beſides the Intereſt of * * * * Years. For this Bill was given in to him in the Year 1600. of the Chriſtians Hejira. By this thou may'ſt gueſs at the Riches of this Commonwealth.

As to the Manner of their Government, it differs not much from that of Venice: The Supreme Power being in the Hands of the Senate, who Elect a Duke every Two Years by Lot, out of Four Men who are propos'd as worthy of that High Office. No Man can propoſe any Thing to the Senate, but the Duke himſelf: Who lives in a Publick Palace, during the Two Years of his Government; and has a Guard of Five Hundred Germans about his Houſe and Perſon.

It wou'd be Superfluous to trouble thee with an Account of their Judicial Courts, the Manner of Electing the Senators, and other Publick Magistrates; with the rest of their peculiar Politicks. Besides, I believe thou art almost cloy'd with the Length of this Letter. Wherefore begging thee to put the best Construction on my Endeavours, I bid thee Adieu.

Paris, 17th. of the 8th. Moon, of the Year 1681.

LET-

LETTER X.

To Dgnet Oglou.

I Formerly ſent a Letter to the Sage Oſman Odroneth, Aſtrologer in Ordinary to the Grand Signior; Wherein I inform'd him of a Comet or Blazing-Star, which then newly appear'd in the Heavens. I took an Occaſion in that Diſpatch, to venture my Thoughts concerning the Nature of theſe Amazing Phænomena, which ſo aſtoniſh the Minds of Mortals, and puzzle the Ableſt Philoſophers to diſcover the Origin. From this Diſcourſe, I paſt inſenſibly into a more General One, concerning the Stars. I ſaid what I thought was proper to One of his Profeſſion; being unwilling to offend by too much Boldneſs, a Man eſteem'd the Moſt Learned and Accompliſhed in that Science, of this Age. For, though I give little Credit to Judicial Aſtrology, as 'tis practis'd now a-Days; yet it would have been an Incivility to expreſs ſo much to one that lives by it; and who, for his Eminent Skill therein, is honour'd with the Grand Signior's Friendſhip, and a Noble Penſion. But, with thee, I will take the more Freedom; in Reſpect of that intimate Familiarity that has been always between us.

That

That the Heavenly Bodies have an Influx on this Lower World; is an Article, the General Senſe of all Mankind gives Teſtimony to; whilſt every Morning we rejoyce to ſee that Glorious Orb of Light, the Sun, imprint the Eaſtern Skies and Clouds, with his Refreſhing Rays; he gilds the Frontiers of the Horizon, and decks the Tops of Mountains with a chearful Brightneſs. The Earth, the Air and Seas, participate of the Vertue of his Beams: 'Tis He gives Life to Plants and Animals: He renovates the Elements, and every Sublunary Being.

So, when he takes his Congé every Evening of our Hemiſphere; he ſtill affords us Light, though but at Second-Hand: Whilſt he in Perſon, makes his Progreſs to the Weſtern Continent, to chear and recreate by his Preſence, the Remote and Solitary Borders of America; Fair Cynthia is his Proxy here, attended on by other Planets, waiting in their Turns, and a whole Hemiſphere of Fixed Stars.

Theſe ſhine by Night, for other Ends, no doubt, than meerly to light the Shepherds as they watch their harmleſs Flocks; or ſerve as Flambeaux to the wandring Traveller: Yet this is comfortable in our Elementary Darkneſs. The Mariner rejoyces, when in the Mighty Waſte of unknown Seas, he makes a Lottery of his Fortune, and truſts his Soul and Body to a rotten Skiff; where Slavery and Freedom, Life and Death are equal Chances. When he ſtruggles with

Impetuous

Impetuous Winds, and Boisterous Waves, threatn'd on all Hands by the Bedlam Fury of the Sea: I say, he's glad at such a Time, to have the Light his Friend, though it be but the faint Glimmering of the Stars; that he may see the Perils that encompass him, and use the properest Means to avoid them. How is his Heart reviv'd, if in the dreadful Storm, he spies but one poor Chink or Cranny in the Close Gloomy Clouds, through which the Azure Sky can shew it self? And then some Prosperous Constellation to appear amidst that Checquer-Work of this Low Orb, and those Above; makes him take Courage and defy the Powers of Æolus and Neptune: He challenges the Rocks and Sands to hurt him; and mocks the Fatal Apparitions of Castor and Pollux.

Yet these and many more Inferiour Uses, were not all for which the Stars were made. They have besides, undoubtedly, some Dominion, Influence and Power on Earth; and all the Beings dwelling on it. Wherever they cast their Rays, there's some Material Emanation felt; An Efflux full of hidden Magick. They dart on Men and other Animals; on Plants and other Minerals; on every Thing that is Compounded of the Elements, and does reside within the Sphere of their Activity: Each darts, I say, its own Peculiar Force and Vertue. 'Tis probable, that every Nation, Tribe and Family, each Climate, Province, Spot and Corner of the Earth, have their Particular Stars. So have the different Species of all Sublunary Things, and every Individual Being. But how to determine their Influence particularly, by Divination, by Calculating Nativities, erecting Horoſcopes, and other Schemes of Aſtrology; to foretell Things to come; to avoid Prognoſticated Evils; and engroſs all happy Events; to predict other Mens Fates, whilſt we are ignorant of our own, &c. is a thing which appears to me beyond the Power of Human Reaſon, and a Science built on Sand.

the

For, who has numbred the Stars, or viſited the Places of their different Situation? Who has underſtood their various Qualities, Engagements, Aſteriſms, and Obligation? their Tyes to one another, and their Obedience to the Laws of the Univerſe? O that Mortal Man ſhou'd preſume to dive thus far; even, into the Heavenly Arcana, the Cabinet-Secrets of God Almighty! Will he be Wiſer than Ptolomy, Caſſander, Endoxus, Archelaus, Hoychilax, Halicarnaſſeus and many others, moſt expert Mathematicians, and Men of a profound Judgment; who have confeſs'd, that after all their Search in this Science, they find it impoſſible to make any certain Concluſion from the Configurations Above; in Regard of the Innumerable Multiplicity of Cauſes co-operating with them, to which we are wholly Strangers: beſides thoſe things which oppoſe or favour the Influence of the Stars among our ſelves, and with which we are very familiar; as

the

the Force of Blood, Cuſtoms, Traditions, Manners, Education, Prejudice, Prepoſſeſſion, Place and Time; Empire and Subjection; Diet and Diſcipline: Finally, the Freedom of Mind, or its Servitude. All which, they ſay, the Stars cannot compel, but only diſpoſe and incline.

Moreover, they who have preſcribed the Rules of Judicial Aſtrology, differ ſo extremely in one and the ſame Subject; That there is no Encouragement for a Thinking Man, to hope ever to make a True Judgment by their Rules, unleſs he be Divinely inſpir'd within, and have a certain Natural Inſtinct which ſuggeſts to him the Knowledg of Future Things. Or, he is poſſeſs'd by ſome Preſaging Dæmon; whoſe Whiſpers direct him what Judgment to chooſe, among the many that may be made upon the Sight of a Scheme, according to the Variety of Rules that have been given. And this is the Opinion of the Learned Hali, my Countryman, who has had many Followers: So that after all, this boaſted Science will rather deſerve the Name of Sortilogy, than Aſtrology; whilſt all its Dictates depend on pure Conjecture, or the Extempore Affections of the Mind; or which is worſt of all, on the Afflatus of Buſy, Intereſted Spirits, Genii, or Dæmons of the Air, who have ſome Deſign of their own to purſue, and make Men their Tools to execute it.

Undoubtedly, they both deceive others, and are deceiv'd themſelves; who practiſe this this Vain Art, for the Sake of Filthy Lucre. For, if there was any thing of Truth in it; how came they to fail ſo often, and ſo egregiouſly in their Predictions? Or, why do they always couch their Prognoſtications in ſuch Ambiguous Terms; that like the Delphick Oracle, may be taken in which Senſe you pleaſe, and applyed to any Nation, Prince, Time, or Perſon; as the Aſtrologer ſhall pleaſe to comment, after ſomething of what he has ſaid at random may have happen'd? For from that infinite Variety of Stars and Aſpects, it is very eaſie for a Bold Sophiſter in this Art, to cull out ſuch for his Turn, as ſhall be proper to convince Ignorant People, that he was in the Right when he promis'd them Long Life, Health, Honours, Riches, Children, Friends, Power, Victory, the Enjoyment of their Loves, and ſuch like; or threatned the quite contrary; even juſt as they fall out. But, if at any Time they were catch'd in an apparent Falſhood, then they either complement a Man into a good Opinion of them, by telling him, A Wiſe Man has Dominion over the Stars; or they inſult over him by a Thouſand Contempts of his ſuppos'd Folly; which, they ſay, reſiſted the Influence of the Stars, and hinder'd their good Effect. Yet, theſe Sort of People are in Chiefeſt Requeſt among the Princes and Potentates of the Earth; eſpecially in the Eaſt, where there's nothing to be done either in Peace or War, without firſt conſulting the Astrologer. Though really there is not a more unprofitable, not to say a more pestilent Race of Men in a Commonwealth.

Aſtrolo-

Cornelius Tacitus, a grave Author, complain'd of 'em in Old Time: So did Varro, with other Sincere Writers. And it was a Custom in Alexandria formerly, for Astrologers to pay a certain Tribute, which they call'd Fools-pence, because it was taken from the Gain which the Astrologers made by their own Ingenious Folly, and the Credulous Dotage of their Admirers.

My Dguet, if our Lives and Fortunes depend upon the Stars, what Reason have we to be afraid of any Thing? Why are we solicitous, and full of Needless Cares? Let us leave all Things to God: And the Heavens, which cannot err, nor transgress the Decrees of Fate; will be our Guarantees till Death. But if our Lives and Fortunes are altogether Independent of the Celestial Bodies, let us bid good-Night to Astrology, as the Vainest Ape, or Mimick of a Science, that ever Buffoon'd the World.

'Twas said of Old by the Sages of Chaldea, That God had committed the Disposal of Days to Moses, and of Hours to Jesus the Son of Mary; but, That he had reserv'd the Moments to himself, and his last Favourite. Let us therefore every Minute of our Lives wait on him, the Father of all things, with an entire Resignation.

But, there is a sort of Puny-Spirited Men, so timorous and void of True Faith, That they they will rather believe any Thing, though the most Incongruous Fictions of Hobgoblins, Ghosts, &c. than the Dictates of Solid Reason. They tremble at the Report of Things which have no Existence in Nature; and whose very Idea is full of Impossibilities and Contradictions. Yet they will stand the Brunt of Truth with Brazen Foreheads, and resist the Dint of Rational Arguments, like so many Colossus's. Hence it comes to pass, That whereas one Lie is apt to take away the Reputation of any Honest Man, so that he shall not be believ'd when he speaks true; On the contrary here in our Case, if an Astrologer in his Random-Predictions, by mere Chance hits upon remarkable Truth, it procures him Credit for all the Lies that ever he has, or can be guilty of. Impertinent and prepostrous sort of Fellows; who, whilst they pretend to know, and foretel Future Things, are ignorant of that which is Past, or Present; and when they are impudently asserting their Familiarity with the Houses of the Twelve Signs in the Zodiack, know not what is done in their own Homes, and Beds: As this Epigram says:

Astra tibi cæterea pandunt sese omnia Vati;
Omnibus & quæ sint Fata futura monent.
Omnibus at Uxor, quid se tua publicat, id ve Astra, licet videant Omnia, nulla monent.

But

But that which appears most strange is, That they ascribe the very Gift of Prophesy to the Stars; also the Origin of Religions, the Secrets of Conscience, the Power of working Miracles, and Casting out Devils; the Efficacy of Prayers, and even our Immortal Happiness or Misery after this Life. Thus they assert, That when Gemini is the Ascendant, and in Conjunction with Saturn and Mercury under Aquarius, in the Ninth House, a Prophet is Born at that Time. And therefore Jesus the Messias was endu'd with so many Matchless Gifts and Abilities, because he had Saturn in his Configuration with Gemini.

Thus they distribute the Various Sects of Religion that are on Earth, into their distinct Classes, according to the different Asterisms Above; Jupiter being suppos'd the General Patron of all Religion. Upon this Ground, they ascribe the Religion of the Jews to Jupiter and Saturn; of the Chaldeans, to Jupiter and Mars; of the Egyptians, to Jupiter and the Sun; of the Arabians, to Jupiter and Venus; of the Christians, to Jupiter and Mercury: And that Religion or Irreligion of Antichrist, which is to come, they ascribe to Jupiter and the Moon. They say also, that Moyses prescrib'd the Observation of the Sabbath, from Astrological Grounds; it being dedicated to Saturn. They ascribe the Deluge to the Influence of the Stars; and the Law given on Mount Sinai, is in their Divinity owing to the same Original. They attribute the Conception of Jesus the Son of Mary,

to

to Venus; and his ſuppoſed Death to Mars. They affirm, that the Meſſias himſelf was the greateſt Aſtrologer of his Time: That he made a particular Choice of Hours, wherein to work his Miracles, and to paſs through the Streets of Jeruſalem, without receiving Damage from the Jews. Which made him once ſay to his Diſciples, Are there not Twelve Hours in a Day? when they warn'd him not to go into the City on ſuch a Day for fear of the People.

They add, That whoſoever has Mars happily plac'd in the Ninth Houſe, at his Nativity, ſhall have Power to Expel Dæmons from the poſſeſs'd; And whoſoever has the Moon with Jupiter in Conjunction with the Dragons Head, in the Zenith, and ſhall pray to God, whatſoever he deſires ſhall be granted: And that Immortal Felicity depends on Jupiter and Saturn, if they be happily poſited in Leo. For, whoſoever has this Configuration, his Soul after Death being freed from Infinite Streights and Perils, ſhall aſcend to its Original and Native Seat, the Region of Endleſs Liberty and Bliſs.

All this may be true, for ought I know; but till I have a Demonſtration for it, I ſhall deſire to ſuſpend my Belief. In the mean while, this is my Faith, That all Things depend on Everlaſting Deſtiny. Whether the Stars be Inſtruments in Executing the Eternal Decrees or no, it matters not much. All ſublunary Beings muſt obey the Law that cannot be revoked.

Then

Then ſuffer not thy ſelf, Dear Friend, to be diſmay'd, or over-anxious at any Thing that happens in this Mortal Life: But practiſe that Ode of Horace,

Æquam memento rebus in arduis
Servare Mentem: non ſecus in bonis
Ab inſolenti temperatam
Lætitia, Moriture, &c.

Finally, My Dgnet, be mov'd at Nothing. Adieu.

Paris, 5th. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year 1681.

LET-

LETTER XI.

To Ibro Kalphaſer, Effendi, a Man of Letters at Conſtantinople.

I Congratulate the Honour thou haſt, in being made Superviſor of that Noble Work; an Univerſal Hiſtory of the World. I wiſh thee and the other Undertakers, a Whole Hegyra of Happineſs; whoſe Date may commence with the Finiſhing this Illuſtrious Volume.

The Muftı has ordered me to addreſs to thee ſuch farther Inſtructions as are neceſſary to render the Hiſtory complete; that nothing either of Subſtance or Ornament may be wanting.

I formerly ſent that Patriarch of the Faithful, a Scheme, or Model of the Whole Work, which I drew up in the Beſt Manner I cou'd for the Time that was allowed me. Now I ſend thee one more ample and correct; 'tis inclos'd in the Box which comes with this: Wherein thou wilt alſo find a large Catalogue of Hiſtorians; containing almoſt all that have written the Affairs of Kingdoms and Empires, ſince the Beginning of the World; With their particular Characters; that thou mayſt diſtinguiſh ſuch as are worthy of Credit, from the Authors of Figments. Neither art thou to wonder, that I have in these Papers, given thee Cautions how to use, even some of those whom we esteem of greatest Integrity and Reputation. For, though they scorned to broach Fables, or transmit Romances to Posterity; yet they were Flesh and Blood as well as other Men; and many times their Interest or Passions byas'd their Judgment, and drew their Pens into Cabal with a Party. Thus Herodotus himself, though otherwise a Man of approv'd Veracity; yet, when he relates the Wars of the Athenians, appears too partial to his darling Country-Men; and lets those Passages escape his Pen in their Favour, which are contradicted by Plutarch and other more disinteressed Writers, and for which he is particularly reproached by Plutarch, in a Treatise of his, entituled [Of the Malice of Herodotus.]

Therefore, in Cases of this Nature, thou art not to confide wholly in any one Author, whom thou hast Reason to suspect guilty of Fiction in History; or supinely pass thy Sentiments into those of another, without examining whether his Relations be true or false: But having so great a Throng of Testimonies, reserve the last Appeal to thy self, and let thy own Judgment be the Tribunal, where every ones Sentence is finally determin'd.

Thus much may serve for a Direction, as to the Matter of the History. What concerns the several Periods of Time, wherein Things were done; Authors cannot with such ſuch Reaſon, be ſuppos'd deſignedly Faulty, as miſtaken in their Chronology; and thoſe chiefly, who wrote in later Times; and ſeem only to have collected and tranſcribed out of others, what was for their Turn. And, thou wilt have Reaſon, to be particularly circumſpect, in what thou takeſt on the Credit of Diodorus Siculus, Pliny, Paterculus, and ſome others; who ſeem to have been too Precipitate in fixing the Terms and Periods of Time, requiſite to the Illuſtrating their Hiſtories, without making a due Compariſon of the ſeveral Epocha's in Uſe among the Precedent Hiſtorians; from whom they borrow their Light.

In Order therefore, to the rendring this Univerſal Hiſtory, the moſt correct and free from Error of any yet extant; to the Eternal Honour of the Muſſulmans, and Advantage of all Mankind: It will be neceſſary for thee to have a Right Notion of all the different Hegyra's or Computation of Years, us'd by divers Nations, from the Firſt Invention of Records to this Day. Theſe I have nam'd in ſhort, at the Tops of the Columes to which they belong, in the Scheme I have ſent in the Box. Now I will explain their Meaning to thee, and ſhew which are of moſt Import in this Work, and which not.

To begin then with that Æra which is commonly taken for a Series of the Years of the World, or a Computation from the ſuppos'd Origin of Time: Thou oughteſt to obſerve, that this is moſt diſputable and uncertain of all other Epocha's, in Regard it is impoſſible to adjuſt the different Accounts of the Jews, Greeians, Romans, Ægyptians, Arabians, Perſians, and other Nations; not to mention the almoſt Eternal Chronologies of the Chineſes and Indians, which extend many Millions of Years beyond the ſuppos'd Time of the World's Creation.

Wiſhing thee therefore, in this Point, to adhere to thoſe Epocha's which are moſt commonly receiv'd in the Eaſt, we will paſs to Noah's Flood; wherein thou muſt expect no other Light, ſave what is deriv'd from Moſes and the Hebrew Doctors. Which has occaſion'd many to confound this Deluge, with thoſe of Deucalion and Ogyges, mention'd by Ovid; and other Gentile Writers. And indeed, it may well ſtart a Scruple in a Mind not over credulous; how it came to paſs, that this Univerſal Deluge of Noah (ſuppoſing it to be ſuch) was recorded by no other Nation on Earth, ſave only by the Jews? As if it had not equally concerned all Mankind, to tranſmit to Poſterity, the exact Time of ſo General a Depopulation of our Race, made by Water. But ſo far are we from finding any ſuch Memoirs, that there are no Footſteps to be trac'd of the bare Matter of Fact; or any Mention made of a Flood, ſave thoſe of Ogyges and Deucalion. Whence proceeded this Neglect in the Writers of Aſia? What Intereſt, Prepoſſeſſion or Prejudice,

cou'd

cou'd byaſs the Phœnician Antiquaries, the Perſian Magi, the Chaldean Sages, the Indian Gymnoſophiſts, or the Bonzi's of China, from Regiſtring ſuch an Inundation, as (if the Story be true) ſwept away all the Race of Adam from the Face of the Earth, except Eight Perſons? Or, ſhall we ſuppoſe that thoſe Eight Perſons combin'd together to conceal ſo great a Cataſtrophe of Human Nature from their Poſterity, making their Children believe, that they were the Firſt Mortals that ever liv'd on Earth? If ſo, how come the Poſterity of Sem to be favour'd with the Firſt Diſcovery of the Truth? And thoſe of Japhet and Cham, to remain ignorant of their Fathers Deliverance from the All-deſtroying Deluge?

It has been uſual with the Learned Nazarenes of late, to cry down the Writings of Manethon the Ægyptian, Beroſus the Chaldæan, Philo the Jew; with Metaſthenes, Anianus, and other Authors of Antiquity; becauſe they have deliver'd Relations which thwart the Errors of theſe Modern Writers: On the ſame Score they contemn the Perſian Antiquaries and Poets, with all the Records of the Eaſt, as Fabulous and not worthy of Credit, becauſe they have been more careful than other Nations; eſpecially than thoſe in the Weſt, to conſerve the Hiſtory of the Firſt Ages of the World entire, and free from Corruption. But, with what Face will any Rational Man faſten this Calumny on Priſtine Ægypt; that ſhe was the Mother of Fables and Ignorance, which all the World knows to have been the ſole Nurſe and Seminary of Science and Truth? Could not ſhe inform her ſelf aright in the Hiſtory of the World, who firſt taught the Uſe of Letters to other Nations? Where was there any Monument of Antiquity that came not out of Ægypt? Or what Learning, that was not firſt derived from the City of the Sun? Moſes himſelf, that renowned Lawgiver of the Iſraelites, had his Education at the Feet of the Ægyptian Philoſophers; and the whole Syſtem of his Laws, is but a partial Epitome of their Statutes; which, by Adding, Diminiſhing, and Altering, he fitted to the peculiar Tradition and Cuſtoms of the Offspring of Jacob. And, why may we not ſuppoſe he did the ſame in the Hiſtorical Part of his Books? Particularly ſo far as tended to beget Faith and Reverence in his Readers, to the Sanctity of that which he celebrates under the Title of the Holy Line: In which Noah was the Janus with Two Faces; one looking backward, on the Old World; the other forward, regarding the Future Ages of the New?

I ſpeak with Freedom, and after the Manner of the Scepticks, believing that the Boldeſt Diſquiſitions, even in Things which are of Divine Aſſurance, are the beſt Means to eſtabliſh the Truth. Let it not paſs therefore, for an Argument of Infidelity or Atheiſm (which ſome are pleas'd to lay to my Charge) in that I ſtrive to recover the loſt

Antiquities

Antiquities of the World, out of the Ruins of Time and Ignorance: And, that to this End, I even call in Queſtion thoſe Records, which being father'd on Moſes, paſs for Divine Oracles; which contain Paſſages repugnant to Human Reaſon; and appear infinitely more Fabulous than thoſe, which for their Sake, are condemn'd as ſuch, by the Superſtitious Nazarenes.

In all this I have not contradicted the Alcoran, which confirms the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament; but declares at the ſame Time, that the Devil has inſerted many Errors into them: 'Tis only againſt theſe Errors I diſpute, adoring the Truth wherever I find it; though it were written in Parchment, made of the Skin of an Infidel; which thou know'ſt, is as great an Abomination as the Fleſh of a Hog.

But, to return to Noah's Flood, or that of Ogyges or Deucalion's, which thou wilt; (for as the Firſt is an Epocha of the Jews, ſo the Two Latter are remarkable Æra's to the Gentiles) thou wilt do well in uſing all Three, and leave the Scrutiny to others; for 'twill involve them in a Labyrinth of Knotty Diſputes.

The Next Epocha among the Gentiles, is taken from the Burning of Ida; whereby Men occaſionally found out the Way to melt Iron, and form it to their Neceſſary Uſes; and the next to that, is the Tranſlation of Ganymede: Then the Building of Troy: After that, the Expedition of Jaſon to get the Golden Fleece: And 45 Years after that, begins the great Epocha of the Grecians; the First Olympiad instituted by Hercules: Next succeed the Olympiads of Iphitus. I shou'd have mention'd the Jewish Epocha; which begins with their Departure out of Ægypt. But, in Regard this is only us'd by the Writers of that Nation, thou wilt not find it of any great Import. The Years of Nabonasser are of general Observation: So is the Epocha from the Building of Rome: The Æra of Alexander the Great, is used by my Country-Men, the Arabian Writers. The Capitoline Games is an Æra, mention'd by some Roman Authors, but not of General Remark.

These are all that are of any Note in Ancient History; for as to the Augustan Years, or those reckon'd from the Battle of Actium, they continued not long, and are but sparingly mention'd in History: But I had almost forgot the Calippick Periods, which must not be omitted; and therefore I have plac'd them at the Top of a Column in the Scheme: They commence from the Famous Battel between Alexander and Darius at Arbela; wherein the Persians receiv'd a Total Defeat.

As to more Modern History, thou wilt have Occasion to use the Christian Æra, the Hegyra of the Arabians, and the Persian Epocha. Thou must also observe the Difference in the Julian and Gregorian Accounts; The Epocha of Diocletian; the Spanish niſh Æra: And above all Things, both in the Epocha's of the Ancient and Modern Hiſtory; thou muſt have a Special Regard to the Different Times of Year, wherein each Diſtinct Æra begins. For, they do not all commence in One and the ſame Moon, but vary their Dates from the Beginning of the Year to the End. The Want of due Care therefore in this Point, wou'd breed a great Confuſion in an Univerſal Hiſtory; and wou'd render its Chronology Intricate and Obſcure.

Follow the moſt Ancient Authorities, and be not diſcourag'd at the Captious Remarks of Modern Writers: For they grope in the Dark; and having ſet up to themſelves certain ſuppoſititious Land-Marks, whereby to meaſure the Age of the World, they Quarrel with the Ancient Sages for ſaying, 'Tis of longer Standing. As if thoſe, who are but of Yeſterday, knew better the Extent of Time backwards, than ſuch as liv'd above Two Thouſand Years Ago. Thus they retrench the Primitive Succeſſions of the Aſſyrian Monarchy; becauſe they are dated before their Jewiſh Epocha of Noah's Flood: And in the ſame Manner they deal with the Ægyptians and Indians of the Eaſt; becauſe thoſe Kingdoms were in Being, long before the Time theſe Upſtarts have ſet for the Beginning of the World.

But, be not thou Partial to the Truth, nor Swear to the Words of such as have Narrow Conceits of God and his Works: Doubtless, he is Omnipotent and Eternal; and it is no Heresy to Affirm, That the Universe, both in Extent of Time and Place, is Adæquate to those Incomprehensible Characters of its Architect.

Paris, 14th. of the 12th. Moon,
of the Year 1681.

LETTER

LETTER XII.

To the Wiſeſt of the Wiſe, the Key of the Treaſures of Knowledge, the Venerable Mufti.

I Have obey'd the Orders of thy Sanctity, in Writing to Ibro Kalphaſer Effendi, the Student. I have diſpatch'd to him all the Neceſſary Inſtructions he ſeems to want; together with a more Ample and Accurate Scheme of the Work, to which thou haſt appointed him. When the Tranſlators ſhall have procur'd the Books I have nam'd in a Catalogue, there will be nothing more wanting, but the Compilers Care in delivering a Correct Chronology. Wherein it will be neceſſary to deviate from the Nazarene and Jewiſh Hiſtorians; who ſeem to have curtail'd the Age of the World, and repreſented it infinitely Younger than it is, in the Records of the moſt Ancient and unſuſpected Writers.

The Ground of this Errour, no Doubt, was partly the Ambition of the Jewiſh Nation, to poſſeſs a Fame of greateſt Antiquity, and to be accounted Older than other Countries; and partly the Loſs of ſuch Monuments and Records, as were Extant in other Nations before Noah's Flood.

Of all People on the Earth, the Jews ſeem to have been moſt Guilty of impoſing on the World

World an Opinion of their Antiquity, and Aggrandizing their Line above all the Race of Adam. And from them, the Errour is transmitted to the Christians; who giving a Kind of implicit and blind Faith to the Hebrew Historians, have confin'd the Age of the World within the Compass of Six Thousand Years; whereas, if other Chronologies be true, it may, for ought we know, be above Six Hundred Thousand Years Old.

The Ægyptian Chronicles give us an Account of no less than Seventeen Successive Dynasties, or Governments in that Nation, before the Jewish and Christian Epocha's of the Origin of Time. The Assyrians boast of a Race of Kings long before Noah's Flood; whose Succession continued down to the Reign of Sardanapalus, without the least Interruption or Vacancy made by any such Deluge. But the Chineses and Indians exceed all the Rest of the World in the prodigious Antiquity of their Records. And among the latter, their Brachmans assert the Age of the World to be little less than Infinite or Eternal. The Laws and Histories of this Nation, (I speak of the Gentile Indians) are Written in a Language which is now Antiquated, and has no Affinity with any other Speech in the World. And the Books that are extant in this Language assert, that it was the First and Primitive Speech of Mankind. None understand it at this Day, but the Priests; and such as they Vouchsafe to teach it to, in their Schools and Colleges. Yet this is the Language wherein are Written

the

the Hiſtories of their firſt Kings, the Original of their Government, and the Fables of the Worlds Immenſe Antiquity.

Certainly, it wou'd be a Deed worthy of thy Munificence, to procure a Tranſlation of ſome of theſe Records, that ſo we may no longer be in the Dark, as to the Hiſtory of that Renowned Nation. And I could heartily wiſh, our Chronology in this Work, might receive ſome Light from ſuch unqueſtionable Monuments.

The Chriſtians declaim againſt every Thing, that does not ſuit with their Tenets. They ſet up their private Errors as the Standard of Truth; and reject whatſoever contradicts theſe, as Fabulous and Heretical. In this they act like the Gyant; who, when his Gueſts were too ſhort for his Bed, caus'd them to be ſtretch'd out with Engines; and when they were too long, he cut off their Legs or Heads, to make 'em fit for their Lodging. So do the Nazarenes deal with Ancient Writers, and eſpecially with ſuch as extend the Age of the World beyond their Narrow Epocha; reſolving not to admit of any Chronology, which exceeds the Limits of their own. They Retrench whole Ages, and reduce the indefinite Meaſure of paſt Time to a Span. They eſteem the Indians as Fools, eaſily impos'd on by their Crafty Prieſts; and all the Records of the Eaſt paſs with them for Fables, or the Dreams of Poets. There is no Reaſon that the enlightened Muſſulmans ſhould be their Apes, and Mock at Oriental Hiſtory; ſince we are Taught from from our Cradles, That all Wisdom comes out of the East.

But they will object perhaps, How is it possible, That any Records cou'd be preserv'd, of the Times before the Flood, except such as were Sav'd in Noah's Ark; since that Universal Inundation, swept away all the Rest of Mankind; and must needs utterly Efface their Writings and Monuments? To this I Answer, That they cannot prove this Inundation to be Universal: Not ev'n out of their own Scriptures; which I have narrowly examin'd in this Point, and find the Deluge Limited to that Part of the Earth, which was Inhabited at that Time. Which Verbal Limitation Supposes, that the whole Globe was neither Inhabited, nor Drown'd; or else they must allow a Tautology in the Scriptures.

Besides, it is evident from what the Bible says, concerning Noah's Preaching an Hundred and Twenty Years before the Flood, that this was but a particular Deluge, inflicted as a Punishment on that obdurate and impenitent Nation where he liv'd, and who derided the Warnings of the Prophet. For it cannot be suppos'd, That Noah wandered up and down over the Face of the Whole Earth, to Preach every where, and warn all Mankind of the approaching Calamity. And 'twould seem Partial in God, to send him to Preach to one People only, and let the rest of the World die in Ignorance. Either therefore there were no more People in the World, than those of his own Nation; or at least, there were no more more to be drown'd. He was employ'd in Building the Ark, during the Time that he Preach'd; and the Alcoran makes mention of the Water that boil'd in Noah's Pot; which are convincing Arguments, that he went not out of his own Country; unless we will suppose he carried the Ark, and his Pot along with him; one of which is impossible, the other ridiculous; and both of them full of Absurdities.

Add to this, that it was impossible for Noah and his Three Sons, to Build an Ark so big, as to contain all the Species of Clean Beasts and Birds by Fourteens; and the Unclean by Fours; and to have Room enough to lay up Provision sufficient to Nourish his Family, with such an Infinite Number of Living Creatures: Some of which would multiply upon him every Moon; others, in a little more Time; and all of them within the Year that they were confin'd to the Ark: For so long did the Flood last.

It is evident then, that it was but a Particular Deluge; and that the Ark was made only large enough to contain the Species of Beasts and Birds peculiar to that Country. For if it were otherwise, another Difficulty will start, How all the Innumerable Kinds of Beasts could Transport themselves from the Islands, and Remote Regions, to the Ark; and from thence, back again to the Places from whence they came; after the Flood was abated, and dried up?

A great deal more might be ſaid; but this is ſufficient to render it very Probable, if not to Demonſtrate, that this was no more than a particular Deluge, by which God was reſolv'd to Exterminate the Infidels out of that Land: Even as he has inflicted Judgments as Terrible on other Nations; deſtroying them by Lightning, or Vehement Winds, or by Armies of Wild Beaſts; as the Alcoran often intimates. Other Hiſtories ſpeak of Whole Cities in Africk, with all their Inhabitants, turned into Stone, in one Nights Time, as a Puniſhment of their Wallowing in that Vice; whoſe very Imagination creates a Horrour in Chaſte Souls.

Suppoſing therefore, that only Armenia, or the Adjacent Countries, were overwhelm'd in this Deluge; it will be eaſie to ſuggeſt, that the other Nations, ſuch as Ægypt, China, and the Indies, might retain their Chronologies uncorrupt, from the Original Source of Time.

It is of great Importance to True Hiſtory, that this point ſhou'd be throughly examin'd, and the Extent of the Flood adjuſted. For, if it could be apparently made out, that Noah's Flood was but ſuch another as thoſe of Ogyges and Deucalion; all the Miſts which darken Antiquity, would Vaniſh. The whole Firmament of Chronology would become Clear and Serene; and we ſhould Walk in the Light of the Primitive Ages, without being dazl'd, or forc'd to Wink.

Methinks, I behold this Light glimmering from afar like Aurora, the Chearful Harbinger binger of Approaching Day. Methinks I see the Splendour of Historical Truth rising from the Orient, and Gilding the Tops of those Mountains; which the Ignorance and Superstition of some, the Pride and Ambition of others, have rais'd to hinder our Prospect of the far extended Ages of the Primitive World. And without Rapture or Hyperbole, I dare be bold to presage, That a little more Knowledge in the Indian Language and Histories, will bring those Things to Light, which have been hid for many Thousands of Years, from the greatest Part of Mankind.

Go on then, thou Sacred Patron of History; Go on to encourage this Unparallell'd Work! Send Messengers to the Indies; Men of Learning and Prudence: Let them Court the Brachmans with the Promises of Inestimable Rewards. Let them try to win those Renown'd Philosophers, to come with their Books to the Sanctuary of the World; that so this Universal History, may Transcend all that have been Written before it; and that the Proud Contemners of the Mussulmans, may have this Proverb Common among themselves, when they wou'd assert any Thing seriously, to say, It is as true as an Oracle, or as the Chronology of those who Believe the Alcoran. Great Light of the Faithful, Adieu.

Paris, 14th. of the 12th. Moon,
of the Year 1681.

LETTER

LETTER XIII.

To Cara Hali, Phyſician in Ordinary to the Grand Signior.

I Am now arriv'd to a Great Age, and have rubb'd through many Fatigues in my Life-Time. I have ſtood the Brunt of a Thouſand Perils, and undergone much Hardſhip. Pains and Afflictions have invaded me in Body and Soul. Labour, Perſecution and Grief, have been the Portion of my paſt Years. Now I wou'd fain Live at Eaſe, if 'twere poſſible.

Therefore I have Recourſe to thee, my Old Friend, who haſt often afforded me thy Counſel in Time of Need. I do not Addreſs for Faſhion ſake, or to diſcover the Vaſt Eſteem I have for a Phyſician, whoſe Skilful Preſcriptions have ſo often ſav'd my Life. No, No: I'm really in Want of thy Aid; and no Man but thy ſelf can Cure me.

It is not eaſie for me to define my Diſtemper, ſince 'tis Heterogeneous, and complicated of many different Maladies. However, it is fit that thou ſhouldſt be inform'd of the particular Symptoms, and the Cauſes, as far as I can gueſs at 'em: And I can do no leſs, than make thee in Part my Confeſſor.

Methinks I feel the Reverſion of my Youthful Vanities, Inherit the Entail of my paſt Plea-

Pleasures; which is certainly nothing but Pain and Torment. Those Agonies which I laugh'd at in other Men, are now fallen to my own Share. The Comedies of my Greener Years, are become the Sensible Tragedies of my Weather-beaten Age. Whilst I Sweat, Frown, and make a Thousand Grimaces at the Anguish given me by the Gout, Stone, Strangury, Cholick, Cramp, and other Acute Diseases, which Excruciate me by Turns: I think the Divine Nemesis has appointed some Devil, for an Inquisitor and Tormenter of every Bone, Vein, Artery, Nerve, Muscle, and Gut in my Body. Surely, I'm laid in the First Pickle of Nature's Wrath: I wish it may be the Last. For I do not in the least covet her Ill-Will.

Then I have my Successive Intervals of Dropsies, Asthma's, Dysenteries, Fevers, Consumptions; and God knows how many more Species of Sickness. Yet sometimes I am as seemingly well in Health, as Maroph Zuastan, the Old Aga that liv'd just by the Obelisk in the Hippodrom, who ran away from his Father in his Youth, and serv'd Seventeen Years in the Wars of Persia; liv'd till he was Eighty and Nine Years Old; yet never was let Blood, took Physick, or was Sick in all his Life.

I protest, 'tis hard for me to guess at my own Constitution, or to find out the Originals of those different Habits in my Body. Yet I have a feeling Sense of that my self, which I cannot express to another.

Some-

Sometimes I think there is some Native and Radical Venom in my Body, deriv'd from the Influence of Malignant Stars, that had the Dominion at my Birth; though how, or why it should be so, I am altogether Ignorant. Neither can any Astrologer, with all his Schemes and Heavenly Figures, convince me which of the Constellations or Planets did me the Fatal Injury. I give no Credit to their Antiquated Tales of Trines, Conjunctions, Oppositions, Quartiles, and the Rest of their Egyptian Jargon. I believe there may be something True and Sacred at the Bottom of Astrology; but 'tis cover'd with a Heap of Rubbish, Rules and Observations. And they that take most Pains, dig deepest, and make the Narrowest Search into the Ruins of that Noble Science, shall for one genuine Pearl, find a Thousand Counterfeits; for one Truth, a Thousand Errors. It fares with Astrology, as it does with Religion; which is Cantonized into Innumerable Sects and Factions; each positively asserting, that they have the only Incorrupt Laws of God: Whereas, if you make a Strict Scrutiny, you shall find a very little Sincere Piety, but Abundance of Prophaneness, Hypocrisy, and Superstition.

Well, let it be how it will, whether the Stars have any Hand in the Plot of Human Events or no; whether Saturn or Mars be Malevolent or Benign Planets, it matters not much: No more does it to hear what they prate of all the Various Aspects and Configu-

Configurations of the other Stars. This I am ſure of, That I endure a great many Pains; which, let them be deriv'd from Above or Below, are very troubleſome.

'Tis poſſible, that all, or moſt Diſtempers which afflict Human Bodies in ſo many different Kinds, may be but the Effects of One Original Indiſpoſition, or Artaxy, in our Animal Spirits; or ſome Hereditary Contagion in our Blood, or Seminal Peſts in our Humours; which Proteus-like, appears in different Forms; Maſquerading it up and down our Bodies in the Diſguiſe of Fevers, Agues, Phthiſicks, Coughs, Conſumptions, Rheumatiſms, Pleuriſies, and a Thouſand more. Or, perhaps our Vitals are not ſound: Some Fall, or Knock, or other Accident in our Infancy, might put us out of Frame: Or the Debaucheries of Youth may leave their Sting behind them, to chaſtiſe our Riper Years, and teach us Wiſdom before it is too late.

I tell thee in ſhort; all my Maladies, as I conjecture, owe their Original to an Ill-temper'd Spleen, and Vitiated Hypocondria. This, as I ſaid before, I can eaſily feel within my ſelf, but can hardly expreſs the Manner how it comes to paſs, with that Accuracy as is requiſite to make another ſenſible of it: Only in General Terms, I ſuppoſe it has made me extremely Melancholy at ſome Times; and as exceſſively Merry and Frolikſom at others; Both which Paſſions, thou know'ſt, have an ill Influence on the Heart, Midriff, Pericardium, Liver, and Lungs.

This

This I have found by frequent and long Experience, though I will not undertake to describe the Mechanick Operation of these Contiguous Vitals one upon another: Especially to thee, who art the most Accomplish'd and Curious Anatomist of this Age. Suffice it to say, that I have perceiv'd within my self, the Violent and Forcible Contraction or Dilatation, Heating or Cooling of any of these Interiour Principal Parts; to be very pernicious to my Health; having an immediate Influx on all the Rest, and so on the Blood, wherein is contain'd the very Essence of this Mortal Life.

My Dear Physician, Our Bodies are perfect Machines, and subject to the like Mischances. If but a Straw, a Pin, or any such Diminutive Triffle, get between the Wheels of a Watch, 'tis presently disordered in its Motion. The whole Frame of the Artificial Mechanism, is either at a Stand, or goes too slow, or fast; or at least, very unevenly. So the Smallest Irregular Passion, in any of the Chief Members of our Bodies, disturbs and violates the Peace of all the Rest; it spoils their Harmony, and makes them jarr; just like a Viol, when some blundering Hand has new-turn'd the Pegs, after a skilful Musician had put the Instrument in Tune.

Besides, there is a strange Chain of Consequences without. Our Passions hurt not our selves only, but others; and we receive again the Revenge of the Damage we gave.

For

For, there is an Eternal Circulation of Justice in the World. The Whole Universe is but a Piece of Clock-Work, where one Motion begets Another to Infinity, and one Stop in the Meaneſt Wheel would put all the Reſt to an equal Stand. We Mortals are Parts of this Grand Mechaniſm; and have our Particular Shares in the Diſaſters that happen to the Whole. I, for my Part, by many caſual Jolts of Misfortune; the deſigned Bruiſes of Enemies, and the corroding Teeth of Time, am almoſt worn out: If thou wilt by thy Skill reſtore me again, and put me in Frame, the Praiſe will be thy own: Otherwiſe, the Firſt Artiſt muſt even take me to Pieces, diſſolve this Uſeleſs Maſs; and when I am thus reduc'd to my Original Element, he may new-mold my Ductile Subſtance, and hammer it to what Faſhion and End he pleaſes.

Only I beg of him, rather to make me any Four-Footed Beaſt, than a Spaniard, a Dutchman, or a Jew, among Men: For theſe are the Scandals of Human Race.

Paris, 2d. of the 3d. Moon,
of the Year 1682.

LETTER XIV.

To Abdel Melec Muli Omar, President of the College of Sciences at Fez.

I Have had to do lately with Men pretending to Astrology: Persons of many Words and ostentous Expressions, but of little Sense, and less Knowledge, even in the very Science they boast of. I can compare them to none more properly, than to those Travellers, who visit Foreign Countries, that they may come home laden with Romances and Fables; with Trifling Remarks and Jejune Observations, to make a crackling Noise among the Vulgar; whilst Wise Men laugh at their Folly, in that after all their Extravagant Rambles Abroad, they are not able to give a Rational Account of any Thing to the purpose; and are perfectly Strangers to the Place of their own Nativity. So these pretended Star-Gazers, whilst they boast of being familiarly acquainted with all the Regions of the Sky; can draw Maps, Charts, and Figures of the Remote Heavens, delineate the Houses of the Zodiack, the Course of the Signs, the Governments, Laws, and Influences of the Planets and Constellations; are ignorant of their own Domestick Region, this Globe whereon they dwell. They know not the Things Things with which they are dayly converſant; much leſs can they penetrate into the Secrets of the Earth, or diſcover the Things that are under their Feet.

Wherefore turning my Back on theſe vain Scioliſts, I approach with Reverence to Thee, who art accompliſh'd in the Myſteries of thoſe Worlds Above, and this below. I have two Difficulties upon my Mind, which I beſeech thee to ſolve. The firſt is concerning the Original of the Blacks or Negroes; the other about the Flux and Reflux of the Sea.

I was in Company not long ago with an Eminent Phyſician of Paris, a Perſon of great Abilities, a Searching Spirit, and very Curious in his Natural Obſervations. Among other Subjects which we diſcours'd of, we fell at length upon the Grand Diviſion of Mankind into Blacks and Whites. Which carried us ſo far, as to enquire into the Cauſes of this Difference in their Colour; whether it proceeded from the Various Heat and Influence of the Sun, or from the Divers Qualities of the Climates wherein they live; or finally, from ſome Specifick Properties in themſelves, in the Natural Frame and Conſtitution of their Bodies.

He was of Opinion, That if Adam were White, all his Children muſt be ſo too; if Black, all his Poſterity muſt be of the ſame Colour. Therefore, by Conſequence, either the Blacks or the Whites are not the Deſcendents of Adam. This he endeavoured to prove by many plauſible Arguments; but he insisted chiefly on one Experiment he had seen made, when present at the Dissection of a dead Negro. For he affirm'd, That between the Outward and Inward Skin of the Corps, was found a Kind of Vascular Plexus, spread over the whole Body like a Web or Net, which was fill'd with a Juice as Black as Ink; from whence he concluded, the Outward Skin receiv'd its Tincture. And in regard there is no such Web or Net to be found under the Skin of a White Man, it serv'd to him as an Argument, That they were Two different Species or Races of Men, from the very First Original of Mortals; Nature having given the One Kind an Inward as well as an Outward Characteristick to distinguish them from the Other, in this diverse Organization of their Bodies.

I must confess, it has been my Opinion a long Time, That the Negroes or Blacks owe their Colour to a far higher and more ancient Original, than to the Curse which Noah pronounced on Cham and all his Posterity, as is commonly believed. And I cou'd even grant them to be of a different Race from that of Adam: For it is no new Thing with me, to conceive, That Mankind had a different Original from that which is Recorded in the Book that goes under Moses's Name. And I dare be bold to say, That that Book [of Genesis] was either not penn'd by Moses; or if it were, that it has been much corrupted in After-Times; and that at present there is not any known True Copy of it in the World.

For

For how can we Father ſo many Incongruities, as are to be found in that Book, on the Holy Prophet? Or if he were really the Author of ſuch Contradictions and Abſurdities, how can we believe him, without forfeiting our Senſe. God gave us our Reaſon to be a Lamp and a Prop, to light and ſupport us as we walk through the Dark and Uncertain Wilderneſs of this Mortal Life; not as an Ignis Fatuus to miſguide us, or a Reed of Egypt, which deceives him that leans on it, and cauſes him to fall. He has ſquar'd our Faculties to the Works of Eternity. Our Native Idea's of Things are exact and true, till adulterated by the falſe Strokes of Education, Superſtition, and Foreign Error. Thus in my Infancy, I remember, I cou'd not conceive any Limits to the Extent of Space, nor any Beginning to the Age of the World. And I have retained the ſame Notion of Infinite and Eternal Matter ever ſince, even to theſe Grey Hairs. So of the Original of Mankind, I believe not the narrow and partial Genealogies of the Jews, who only ſtrove to exalt themſelves and their own Lineage above all the Nations on Earth beſides.

For ought I know, there were as many Original Protoplaſts of Mortals, as there are different Nations, ſpeaking various Radical and Maternal Languages; obeying ſeveral Forms of Government, and practiſing diſtinct Maxims and Principles. Or, it is poſſible, the Eaſt produced One ſort of Men, the Weſt Another; whilſt the North and the South brought forth an equal Variety. Who knows the Force of the Conſtellations and Heavens Above; or the hidden Virtues which exhale from the Depths Below? Theſe may differ as the Climates do: And the firſt Indigence of the Earth, might all be mark'd with the Various Affections, Paſſions and Diſpoſitions of Her their Common Parent; even as Children are now-a-days ſtigmatiz'd with the Luſt of a teeming Mother.

Oh that it were poſſible with Theſeus to deſcend into the Bowels of this Globe, and come up alive and ſafe again! That we might dive into the Abyſſes below, and viſit the Caverns of perpetual Darkneſs! That we might creep along by the Roots of the ancient Mountains, or through the Channels of Mines, a Thouſand Miles beneath the Surface! There wou'd I ſeek for the Fountains of hidden Waters, which run to and fro in the Veins of the Earth; I wou'd find out the Subterranean Seas, Lakes, and Rivers, which feed our Upper Ocean with its Briny Floods. And perhaps there I ſhou'd diſcover the True Cauſe of the Flux and Reflux of the Sea, which has ſo puzzl'd all Philoſophy.

Tell me, Thou Sage of Sages, Can all the Fountains, Rivulets, mighty Channels, Lakes and Seas, which we ſee on the Superficies, be conſtantly ſupply'd only by Showers from Heaven, which in ſome Places fall very ſparingly or not at all? Cou'd the conſtant Regular Tides and Ebbs be ſtill maintain'd by the uncertain fickle Rains and Snows? Or is there not an Eternal Circulation of Waters thro' the various Hollowneſſes of the Earth?

In a Mine at Bern in Switzerland, about 230 Years ago, there was found a whole Ship 50 Fathom deep, with all its Tackle, and the dead Bodies of many Sea-Men: I ask, How that Ship came there?

Who can give me an Account of the many Whirl-Pools, Vorago's and Charybdis's, there are in divers Seas? There is one in the North of the World, not far from Moſcovy, Forty Miles in Compaſs, which when the Tide comes in, ſwallows up all the Sea with an inſupportable Noiſe, above that of Thunder, with Ships, Fiſh, and whatſoever elſe comes within that Fatal Stream; then at the Ebb it throws them up again with equal Fury. Doubtleſs, there are innumerable ſuch Devouring Jaws of the Earth, under the various Bottoms of the Sea. And I will never trouble my ſelf any farther for the Solution of this Grand Scruple, which coſt the Stagyrite his Life.

Venerable Sage, Tell me thy Opinion of theſe Things; for I could bring Inſtances enough to write a Volume on this Subject. But I am brief with thee, who canſt not improve by any Thing I can ſay; who write this as one that begs Inſtruction, and not to teach or inform an Oracle.

Paris, 20th. of the 5th. Moon, of the Year 1682.

LETTER XV.

To the Kaimacham.

HERE'S a Race of Infidels newly ſtarted in France; who, if they be let alone, may, for ought I know, in Time depopulate not only this Kingdom, but the whole Earth. A Society of Miſcreants, Sorcerers, Magicians, Witches, and I know not what. They ſecretly ſteal Children away from their Parents, and offer them in Sacrifice to Demons. Their Blood they ſave to compound horrible Poiſons and execrable Enchantments. The Bread of Paris and other Cities, is become like the Fruit of the Tree Zacon, which overſhadows the Center of Hell; full of deadly Venom. The Fountains of once living and refreſhing Waters, are now tainted with the Contagion of Styx, Phlegeton, and Cocytus. There is no Safety in eating or drinking. Men chuſe to periſh by Hunger or Thirſt, rather than taſte the very Fruits of the Earth. They undergo a Voluntary Famine in the midſt of Infinite Plenty. And whilſt there is an Affluence of all things, which uſe to ſupport our Mortal Life, People complain of Scarcity, and die for Want of wholeſome Food.

In the mean While, no Body can tell the meaning of it; but a diligent Enquiry is made:

made: Some are arrested on Suspicion, others are convicted by undeniable Evidence, yet will confess nothing: They prove 'em guilty in Matter of Fact, and put 'em to more than the common Tortures, but can extort not a Syllable from 'em, which shall discover their Accomplices, or reveal the bottom Secret of this Nefandous Practice.

Arise! Arise! Arise! Medea, Circe, Æsculapius, or some other Powers more expert in Nature's hidden Force: Arise, I say, and prop the fainting Reliques of Human Race. New Deaths invade the World: Men speak, seem stout; they walk the Streets, are merry, brisk and gay; and yet in the Height of Laughter, down they drop and die. This is very strange; but more so it is, that even after Death, when they are Cold, their Chaps remain still distorted in the same Comical Figure, not much unlike the Statue of the Satyr, which stands behind the Gate of the Womens Apartment in the Serail.

I have indeed read of a Fruit, which whosoever tastes, will die Laughing: And of the Torpedo, which if any Man touch, though with a Staff or Pole in his Hand, immediately it benums him, and takes away his Sense of Feeling: But I always ascribed these Stories to the Romantick Humour of Pliny, or at least, of those from whom he collected the pleasant Paragraph of his Natural History. But, now I'm convinc'd, that 'tis possible these things may be true.

In

In a Word, I tell thee plainly, that were it not for honeſt Eliachim the Jew, poor Mahmut muſt ſtarve himſelf. For, I wou'd rather die weeping and famiſhing, deploring and lamenting the Miſeries of Human Life, than paſs to Orcus in an Artificial Good Humour, only fram'd by the Force of Poyſons and Charms; but Eilachim and all the Jews are ſingular in their Diet: They take Care not to be polluted by Abominable Infidels: They will not eat the Bread of the Chriſtians, nor taſte of their Fleſh. The Law of Moſes forbids it, and they are very curious in obſerving it: They have their Corn-Merchants, Millers, Bakers, Butchers, Poulterers, and Fiſh-mongers by themſelves; Their Fruiterers alſo, and ſuch as ſerve 'em with Water, Wine, or any other Beverage: They will not eaſily be cheated of their Lives, through the Complaiſance of what they call Good Nature: Neither French nor Dutch, Italians or Spaniards, ſhall impoſe upon them: They eat and drink more nicely (I ſpeak of the better Sort) than the Infidel Kings of the Earth.

Herein lies my Safety amidſt the Common Danger: I never eat or drink of late, but at Eliachim's Houſe. For, I dare not; ſo well grounded are the Fears of Poyſon, in the Society of Nazarenes at this Time in Paris.

By the God of my Fathers, and my God, I wou'd not willingly go down to the Shades, in a Vehicle of Aia-mala, Kerim, or any other ſubtle Eaſtern Opiate. I'd rather fairly ſtand

the

the Fate of a Bullet, Dagger, Sword, or any Thing that with Candor threatens us above-board. But, to be ſneakingly undermin'd, circumvented, &c. goes againſt the Grane, by the Wounds of Mahomet, which he receiv'd before the Holy Flight.

O Ali, Ali! This Oath brings thy Fame to my Remembrance, who durſt ſtand againſt the Sword of Ali, when he was in his Wrath? Ali, the True Succeſſor of the Prophet!

Do not take me for a Kyſilbaſchi, Heretick, Infidel, &c. For, I am of an untainted Race, a True Believer, a Muſſulman in all Senſes: But I hate Phanaticiſm, and factious Bigotry: Though we hate the Perſians, and purſue 'em as Incorrigible Hereticks, may we not love and honour the Caliph whom they follow? So we are profeſs'd Enemies to the Chriſtians, and yet we reverence Jeſus the Son of Mary, the Chriſtians Meſſias.

But to return to the French, the King has erected a Kind of Inquiſition-Court, which is call'd the Chamber of Poyſons. Here all Perſons ſuſpected of theſe Diabolical Practiſes, are examin'd, and put to the Torture. Alſo Millers, Bakers, Butchers, Fruiterers, Vintners, and other Trades which ſell any thing to eat or drink, are ſworn in this Chamber, and undergo a ſevere Scrutiny. So do all Phyſicians, Druggiſts, and Apothecaries. Edicts are daily publiſh'd, whereby all Perſons pretending to a Spirit of Divination, &c. are commanded forthwith to depart the Kingdom, under the Penalty of Death. It is order'd alſo, that that whosoever has abus'd any Sentence of the Written Law, in making of Enchantments, Spells, Charms, or any Thing beside or beyond the Force of Nature, shall be severely punish'd. The same Edict forbids all Use of Poysons, unless they be such as are Ingredients of wholesome Medicines, and help to compound those Physical Preparations which are necessary to conserve the Life of Men. And that even these shall not be sold to any Person whatsoever, but only to those who by their Art and Profession are oblig'd to make use of them. Abundance of Care is taken both by the State and the Church, by Publick Magistrates and Private Persons, to discover the Authors of these Inhuman Tragedies, and to prevent the like for the Future. Every Man's Eye is upon his Neighbour, and they of the same House are jealous one of another. The Father suspects and narrowly watches the Motions of his Son, and the Mother will not trust the Daughter of her Delight. Children are wary of their Parents, and one Brother or Sister dares not eat or drink any thing prepar'd by another: Neither the Ties, nor even the Sacred Bonds of Friendship it self, are sufficient to conquer Mens Fears and Apprehensions of being poyson'd.

In the mean while, the Inhabitants have felt a terrible Blow from the French Arms. For, the King of France having receiv'd some Affront from those Corsairs, gave Orders to the Sieur Du Quesne, Lieutenant General of his Naval Forces, to go and Bombard their

City

City, which was perform'd accordingly, in the Beginning of the 9th. Moon: And that Bld Warriour threw so many Bombs into the Town, that he ruin'd a considerable Part of it, overthrew the Principal Mosque, and kill'd many Thousands of Men: Which obliged the Algerines to become humble Supplicants for Peace: And it was granted them on certain Conditions, advantagious enough for France.

This Monarch is wholly addicted to War, in which also he is no less expert than he is in Matters of State: And he loves to see his Subjects follow his Example. To this End, he has lately establish'd Two Seminaries; One in the Cittadel of Tournay; the Other in that of Metz, where a certain Number of Cadets or Younger Brothers, who can prove themselves descended of Noble Blood, are educated at the King's Charge, and taught the Method and Art of Fortifications, with other Exercises of Military Discipline.

This is a great Encouragement to the young Gentry and Nobles, and fills 'em with Glorious Emulations, every one being ambitious to excel another in these Heroick Arts. And the King will never want for able Souldiers, to serve him in any Station at Home or Abroad.

Illustrious Kaimacham, this is all the News I can at present send thee. May God protect thee and all the True Faithful from the sly Attempts of Magicians, Witches, and Poysoners

ers. As for me, I know not how long I shall escape their Snares. But I'll be as cunning as I can. Sage Minister, Adieu.

Paris, 4th. of the 7th. Moon, of the Year 1682.

LETTER XVI.

To Nathan Ben Saddi, a Jew at Vienna.

I Receiv'd a Dispatch Yesterday, sign'd with thy Name; but not writ by thy own Hand, nor in thy accustom'd Style; and yet there is no mention made of Sickness, a broken Arm, or any other Misfortune which might hinder thee from penning it thy self; which fills me with Abundance of Doubts and Scruples. If the Palsy, or any other Disease, has taken from thee the Use of thy Limbs, I hope it has not depriv'd thee of thy Reason. That Faculty wou'd have prompted thee to explain this Mysterious Way of Correspondence, by the same Hand which wrote the Letter. I know not what to think of it. 'Twas very odd, thus to leave me in the Dark, and thou canst not blame me, if in this Obscurity, I stumble upon Suspicious Thoughts. I am not Jealous of thy Fidelity; though such a Conduct as this, would make make a Man fear the worſt. But I rather apprehend the Effect of thy Credulity and Negligence. In a Word, I am afraid, leſt ſome prying buſy-Body has got a Glimpſe of our Secret Buſineſs, and mutual Intelligence, and ſo put this Trick upon me in thy Name, to ſee what Anſwer I will make; which they may think eaſie to do, by intercepting the Letters which are addreſs'd to thee by the Poſt. To prevent which, I ſend this by a Private Meſſenger. We cannot be too cautious in ſuch Caſes; where one falſe Step betrays all, and lays our Deſigns open to the World.

I conjure thee to be very plain and particular in thy next; ſatisfie me in all things. For, I am very anxious at preſent: My Mind is full of Thorns and Briars: I ſhall not write to any of the Sublime Miniſters, till I have thy Anſwer by the ſame Meſſenger I ſend. Therefore diſpatch him with Expedition.

As to Count Tecli's Buſineſs, if this Information be really thy own, and not ſent by ſome ſly Interloper; I like the Project well enough; and will communicate it to the Grand Vizir, or the Kaimachan, without taking Notice of thy Overſight in putting me to this Fright and Trouble. The Count has a good Character among the French, who are no Friends to the Houſe of Auſtria, or Ennemies to the Grand Signior. This is certain, New Spirits muſt be rais'd, in the Room of thoſe who are taken away. For, Conſpiracies of this Nature muſt not be given over, upon every Discouragement. Care must be taken, that the Hungarian Faction be constantly supply'd with fresh and active Heads, like the Hydra, as fast as the Old ones are cut off. And I know not where they cou'd have pitch'd upon a more likely Man than Count Tecli: He comes of a good Parentage, and his Ancestors were all along Patriots, and Sticklers for their Country Liberties. They ever oppos'd the Tyrannous Encroachments of the House of Austria.

up-

Carcoa's Journal relates many remarkable Passages of the Tecli's; whose Castle, he says, was the usual Rendezvouz of all the Malecontent Lords in those Parts, who were weary of the German Yoke. There they caball'd and held their Private Consults: There they hatch'd their Plots against the Emperour. I read this Journal daily, finding no small Pleasure in it, and Abundance of Profit. For, it contains Select Memoirs of divers curious Transactions and Events, that happen'd both in Publick and Private during his Residence at Vienna. And I take the greater Delight in reading him, because his Style is very short, yet comprehensive; familiar also and free, without Impertinences or Solecisms: He gives one not the Fatigue of dwelling long upon a Period, to hammer out the Sense of Attentive Study. But he couches his Words like a Train of Gunpowder, which is no sooner lighted at one End, but in an Instant the other catches the Flame: So you can hardly cast your Eyes on Three Words at the Beginning of a Paragraph or Sentence in Carcon's Journal, but you anticipate his Scope in all the Reſt. This argues a great Serenity of Spirit in the Author; and An Elegance not to be met with, but in a Mind void of Clouds. Beſides, he relates no Trivial Matters, or Tales fit only for Women and Boys: But he treats altogether of Weighty and Important Affairs; Intriegues of State; Remarkable Strokes of War; Subtle Overtures of Peace: Which he gracefully intermixes with Parallels of Hiſtory; with Characters and Deſcriptions of Countries and their Inhabitants: And, finally, with Philoſophical, Moral and Political Remarks: All very agreeable and pleaſant.

Be-

Nathan, I counſel thee to imitate his Example, and leave ſome Memorial behind thee of thy Induſtry and Vertue. To this End apply thy ſelf at Spare Hours to reading, but be ſure uſe Caution in the Choice of Books; elſe 'tis but Time miſ-ſpent. Be curious in Searching out the moſt excellent Treatiſes: For vain and trifling Subjects, are fit only for the Fire. Have a ſpecial Regard to the Credit of ſuch Hiſtorians as fall in your Way; beſtow not a Moment on thoſe that are not Authentick; leſt Old Time call thee to an Account for the Waſte. Then accuſtom thy Pen to make Epitomes, Abſtracts and Collections out of what thou readeſt, and learn to be nice and cleanly in thy Language: A ſqualid Style turns the Stomach of a Reader; whereas Polite Expreſſions, whet his Appetite, and cause him to devour whole Volumes with a Gust.

whet

After all, I bid thee farewell, and advise thee not to neglect the Grand Signior's Business, but mind the main Chance.

Paris, 5th of the 8th. Moon, of the Year 1682.

LETTER XVII.

To the Kaimacham.

I Shall now acquaint thee with an Accident, which extremely surpriz'd me, when I first heard of it, and has still left me in Confusion. About Seven Weeks are past since I receiv'd a Letter, dated as from Vienna; which Nathan Ben Saddi subscrib'd, but I presently perceiv'd it was not his own Hand-writing; which made me very uneasie and full of Careful Thoughts. For, it contain'd Matters of Importance, Secrets of the Hungarian League, with a Particular Project relating to Count Tecli, a great Lord in that Country.

I consider'd, that if the Letter were writ with Nathan's Knowledg, and by his Order; he cou'd not be so forgetful, as not to bid the Scribe, whoever he was, give me an Account of the Reasons which hindred him from Writing to me himself. For, he must needs imagine, gine, I shou'd be troubled, and in no small Astonishment, to find Matters of that dangerous Consequence, addressed to me in an unknown Hand, under his Name. Or else I thought, he took me for a Man that made no Reflections on things. I knew not well what to conclude, amidst so many probable Uncertainties.

However, I was resolv'd to act more securely, and with greater Caution on my Side, in Order to a Right Information in this Mystery. Wherefore, not daring to trust the Posts, I dispatch'd away a Private Courier to Vienna, One in whom I can confide, with ample Instructions, and a Letter to Nathan Ben Saddi: Wherein, among other Things, I desir'd him to tell me the Meaning of this Conduct.

My Messenger is honestly and safely returned again to Paris, but no Nathan Ben Saddi to be heard of. All the Account he cou'd learn of him, was, that about Eight Weeks ago he went out of his House, with a Stranger, who pretended Business with him at the Burse or Exchange: But neither he nor the Stranger have been seen or heard of since; only they said, that a Day or Two after Nathan was missing, there was the Dead Body of a Man seen floating in an Eddy of the Dannbe, hard by the Bridge; but the Face was so mangled and disfigured with Wounds and Slashes, that it was impossible for any to distinguish, or discern who it was. Yet, Nathan's Friends were apt to suspect it was he himself, and and that he had been privately murder'd, and afterwards thrown into the River.

This is the Substance of what my Messenger cou'd learn of him: And he was forc'd to use Abundance of Caution in Enquiring so far; lest by being less reserv'd, he might have brought himself into Trouble, run the Hazard of being put to the Torture, and discovering what I entrusted him with, besides other Inconveniencies.

Praise be to God, he escaped all Scrutiny, and is come back safe with my Letter. But what is become of that Jew, God knows. Perhaps some of his own Nation have made him away privately, to prevent his turning Mussulman: For, he was unsettled in his Religion; and if amidst his wavering, he seem'd to have any Particular Byas stronger than Ordinary, it was that which inclin'd him to the Faith of True Believers. And if he perish'd on this Account, we ought to esteem him as a Martyr of God and his Prophet. But, I must confess, I that well knew the Shallowness and Inconstancy of Nathan's Temper, with the Superstitious Attach which he ever had for his Rabbi's, have hardly Faith or Charity enough to believe, his Zeal for the Alcoran would carry him to Martyrdom. Neither can I forbear thinking, there is something worse in it.

But all this which seems so strange to me, may be well known to the Ministers of the August Port, by whose Order perhaps he has receiv'd a Secret Death, as a Chastisement of some Crimes they have found him guilty of;

and

and which they cou'd not inflict openly in a Country of Enemies and Infidels. Or, it may be, he has privately withdrawn himself, to prevent such a Punishment; being conscious that he deserv'd it. Be it how it pleases God, and my Superiours, I humbly crave Advice and Instructions about the Ordering my Bills and other Matters. Sage Kaimacham, Adieu.

Paris, 6th. of the 11th. Moon, of the Year 1682.

LETTER XVIII.

To Dgnet Oglou.

THIS comes to thy Hands by the same Post with one to the Kaimacham; therefore I pray thee be quick in executing the Contents of it. I have not One Friend in the Seraill whom I dare trust with such a Secret: Thou art my only Refuge at a Juncture which requires Fidelity, Prudence, and a dexterous Conduct in diving and searching into a certain Mystery, which, for ought I know, may concern my Life.

To tell thee in short, Nathan Ben Saddi, the Sultan's Agent Incognito at Vienna, a Jew by Descent and Religion, is, I fear, privately murder'd by some Order from the Divan. But, for what Reasons I know not, unless it were in Complyance with the Old Maxims of the Sublime Port, which seldom suffer any Slave to go to his Sepulchre in Peace, who has serv'd the Grand Signior many Years in any eminent Station. He has been miss'd at Vienna these Eight Weeks, and within a Day or two after his First Absence, the Body of a Dead Man was found floating on the Danube, but so disfigur'd with Wounds, as it could not possibly be known who he was; which gives me the greater Suspicion that it was he. And if so, I may expect to be serv'd so my self in a little Time. For my Turn is next.

in

Therefore, if thou hast any Love or Friendship for me, be watchful on my Behalf: Attend the Whispers of the Court, and observe the Language of those who discourse with their Fingers Ends. The Cast of the Eye many Times discovers the Secret Sentiments of the Heart: So does a Shrug of the Shoulder, a Pout of the Lip, or any other Artificial Gesture. They are all Significant and expressive of what Affections and Thoughts we harbour within. Thou know'st how to act the Mute upon Occasion, as well as any in the Serail. I conjure thee to use great Dexterity, and no less Expedition in unravelling this Secret. Feign to know something more than thou dost, that so thou may'st really learn what I wou'd have thee know concerning Nathan's Fate, and mine too, if possible. Let no cold Indifference make thee neglect this due Care of thy Friend's Interest and Life. We were born to serve one another with mutual Zeal and Fidelity. The good Offices thou doſt me, are but lent to be repay'd again with others, whenever Opportunity preſents it ſelf. But theſe Arguments are ſuperfluous; thou needeſt no Spurs to do a Generous Action. I know thou loveſt me, and wilt be active at this Juncture on my Account. In full and entire Confidence of this, I take my Repoſe under the Shadow of the Divine Mercy; begging of God, to afford thee a Shelter in Time of Peril; and that when thou and I have weather'd all the Tempeſts of this Mortal Life, we may triumphantly enter the Port of Paradiſe, and enjoy one another in Eternal Felicity.

good

Paris, 6th. of the 11th. Moon,
of the Year 1682.

FINIS.

BOOKS Written by Sir Roger L'Estrange, and Printed for J. Hindmarsh and R. Sare.

1. FAbles of Æsop and other Eminent Mythologists, with Morals and Reflections, Folio.

2. Seneca's Morals, by way of Abstract, the Fifth Edition, Octavo.

3. Select Colloquies out of Erasmus Roterodamus; pleasantly representing several Superstitious Levities that were crept into the Church of Rome, in his Days; the Second Impression corrected and amended, with the Addition of Two Colloquies to the former, Octavo.

4. Tully's Offices in Three Books, turned out of Latin into English; the Fourth Edition corrected, Twelves.

5. A Guide to Eternity, extracted out of the Writings of the Holy Fathers and Ancient Philosophers; written originally in Latin, by John Bona, and now done into English; the Third Edition.

The Genuine Epistles of the Apostolical Fathers, by William Wake, D.D.